Our Dark Sunday Nights.

We know that it is an easy matter to often criticised without just cause. Con sidering that these gentlemen serve with-out pay, and that no matter how intellidanger of making enemies, which may perhaps mean loss in their business, good citizens should think twice before passing harsh judgment on things done, or left undone, by our officials.

We have thought twice, and fully twice nore, on the question of our street lighting, and have tried to be fair and forgiving. We have wondered why, many times, that the hints and complaints, which have appeared frequently in the RECORD in favor of lighting the lamps on Sunday evenings when it is cloudy, Adbirdes J. The Governor had intended to reduce the total appropriation for the Maryland Agricultural College by $30,000, but changed his mind when convinced by President Sylvester and Speaker Ray that an appropriation was necessary to secure $20,000 from the national government for the experimental station. The reduction was only $20,000. The appropriation of $16,000 for the years 1909 and 1910 to the medical colleges of Baltimore was reduced by onehalf. That is, the sum of $16,000 is available for 1909, but not for 1910. In addition to wiping out items in the general appropriation bills the Governor also laid aside, to be vetoed later, several bills carrying appropriations.

Treating Fence Posts.

The Maryland Experiment Station has ust made arrangements with the United States Forest Service to erect a timber preserving plant at the Station, near college Park, for treating fence posts to increase their durability. That the treating of fence posts with creosote or other preservations is a practical thing has been proven beyond a doubt, but in order that the farmers of Maryland may have a practical demonstration of the process used, and the results to be obtained, this plant has been installed at the State Experiment Station.

The different common woods like pine. gum, birch, sycamore, poplar, hickory, maple, ash, beech, pin oak, black oak, etc., will be treated and set in a line of fence with some of our more durable woods, without treatment, such as locust, cedar or chestnut. It has demonstrated elsewhere that a treated pine, or pin oak post, will last as long as an untreated locust, cedar or chestnut post. School Books and Disease. Infinitesimal are the chances of the transmission of infectious diseases through the common use of school books by children, says Health Commissioner Bosley, of Baltimore. "School books are poor carriers of germs, and, in my opinon, there is almost no chance of disease

If even the terrible price of human carelessness was paid by a warning disaster, it would not be so bad, but people read and comment on the horrors, yet take very little account of them in the way of making local application of the warnings they convey. The saving of a little effort, or trouble, or money, or the fear of the loss of a few friends, or perhaps the thought that "somebody else" ought to take action, leaves the "didn't know it was loaded" danger right in our midst, ready to go off whenever proper conditions conspire to Baltimore Not Happy.

Not for a long time has there been so much dissatisfaction expressed by prominent Baltimore democrats, as has been heard since the adjournment of the legislature. Indeed, the talk has practically been revolutionary and threatening, but it may end at that, especially as the chance to "get even" is two years in the future. The Sun, especially, has been very caustic in its charges of unfulfilled party pledges, but the Sun is nothing if not a dictator as to what constitutes proper political conduct, and its conclusions—in its own estimation—are always such as to leave no room for any others being anyway near right

It does seem true, however, that the Sun and the big fellows of the city must bear the brunt of shaping policies, solidifying factions and in general making party success sure at the polls, but when it comes to getting the proper returns for their efforts, they come in after the county politicians have taken first pick . It must be somewhat humilitating, to say the least, to have party loyalty classed as the real thing, before election, but to have advice-and even threats-commiseratingly smiled at, afterwards.

Then, there is the old song and dance about the city paying two-thirds of the taxes of the state, a tune which we think has been greatly overworked, simply because if it were not for the state and its large patronage, the city would not enjoy the prosperity on which it pays taxes. As a rule, no individual, nor community of individuals, has a proper right to complain of the amount of taxes paid, for where heavy taxes are paid is usually the right place to go to find where tax-dodging is the most practiced; in other words, the small and general taxpayers are usually the ones who, under the laws, pay most fully on their real worth. Baltimore will never earn much real sympathy from the public-political or otherwise-on account of its tax payments, and it is a very small whistle to blow. If we remember correctly, Baltimore opposed the bill for the general reassessment of property in the state, which would seem to mean that the city preferred to continue the present basis, rather than take chances of having a

But, it is a question whether a good many Baltimore democrats will not retain, for two years, some of their present memories, and if they do they may conclude to take changes with the present voting basis, and let the dream of a sure voting basis, and let the dream of a sure "one party" state through the means of a disfranchising law, vanish again. As the "Wilsonizing" process has been carried to the extreme of safety, with Baltimore a rebellious uncertainty, and with a Goyernor who at least talks fair, the Smith-Gorman leadership which managed things to suit themselves at the last legislature, may find the next not last legislature, may find the next not stoop; but the humblest may woo the such an easy proposition.

The Country Town the Hope of the Nation.

There are many country merchants who see their trade gradually slipping away from them-leaving the country town and going to the great cities by the channel of the mail order trade.

There are many country editors who see the prosperity of their towns depleted and circulation and advertising ncome reduced for the same reason. There are very few, however, who realize that their problem is a national

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 12, 1908. By REV. S. H. DOYLE. Topic.—Temperance meeting. Lessons from the life of John B. Gough.—II Sam.

John Bartholomew Gough, one of the world's greatest temperance orators, was born at Sandgate, Kent county, England, Aug. 22, 1817. His father was a soldier and had served in Text of the Lesson, John xi, 1-57. take it to look at sometimes, but my the peninsular war, for which he received a pension. His mother was a village schoolmistress. When but twelve years of age Gough came to America, where he first worked on a farm in [Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.] Oneida county, N. Y. In 1831 he went to New York city and was employed in the binding department of the Methodist Book Concern. He was a member of the Methodist church. He lost this position through dissipated habits, and his means of livelihood came from singing comic songs and dancing in low grogshops. He was married in 1839, but his habits became worse. Through drink and delirium tremens he was reduced to poverty and probably through them caused the death of his wife and child. Through the influence of a Quaker he was led to attend temperance meetings and signed the pledge. He soon afterward decided to give his life to the temperance cause. He once relapsed into drink, but recovered himself, and in America and England he was a most powerful advocate of temperance. He afterward wrote books and acquired a moderate fortune through his lectures. He died at Frankford, Pa., Feb. 18, 1886, after having spent forty years in the tem-

1. Gough's life, first of all, stands before us as an awful warning against the drink habit. It is true that he reformed and was used mightily of God for good, but where he reformed many never do. He was a man of strong will and character, and hence could do what many others could not, and, though reformed, he paid for every drop of alcohol that he drank. He was subject to delirium tremens. He lost the wife that he loved so dearly and his only child through the drink habit and spent years of his life in debauchery and in sin that must afterward almost have crushed the great, generous nature which he possessed. He once said, "If all the money spent in the temperance cause saved but one boy if it were my boy." This was his estimate of intemperance.

Sour Stomach

No appetite, loss of strength, nervous ness, headache, constipation, bad breath general debility, sour risings, and catarrh of the stomach are all due to indigestion. Kodol cures indigestion. This new discovery represents the natural juices of digestion as they exist in a healthy stomach, combined with the greatest known tonic and reconstructive properties. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure does not only cure indigestion and dyspepsia, but this famous remedy cures all stomach troubles by cleansing, purifying, sweetening and strengthening the mucous membranes lining the stomach. WHAT IS SUCCESS.

While on the path of life we tread,
These words we often hear
"What is success," and if you please,
"What is its value here"?

We ponder o'er these simple words, For simple they appear And then, though not in flattering words, We tell their meaning, clear. Is it success as some may claim, When on a battlefield To drive the enemy back and forth. With cannon, spear and shield?

The world would say it is success, For its an evident fact They drove the enemy off the field, Pray, what else do they lack?

'Tis true it was a glorious deed, When they caused the foe to flee, But if honor was their only aim, Alas! poor creatures for thee.

Amusements to be a Matter of Conscience.

New York, April 6.—The New York conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church held an important session today, at which several matters of moment to the denomination were debated and acted upon. One subject which has created much comment— the resolution recommending to the General Conference that Paragraph 248 of the Church Discipline, which advises against dancing, card-playing, theatre-going, etc., be eliminated—was adopted by an almost unanimous vote. Much to the genand a vote called for. Only a few delegates voted against the resolution.
