The hot weather, which in many sections has dried up the pastures, has had the effect of producing a milk famine in some of the large cities. Unless relief comes soon, the situation will become serious.

Prof. C. Dorsey Waters, the well known band leader, of Baltimore, died on Tuesday morning, of Bright's disease.

publican National Committee, has been instructed by both Mr. Taft and Chairnan Hitchcock to publish all the campaign contributions received, no matter what their source. This will do away with all the terrible stories about money raised for campaign purposes, and is the most straightforward course that could possibly be pursued. Mr. Bryan has announced that democratic contributions will also be published.

prolific this year. They are being shipped in large quantities and are bringing $2.50 to $3.25 a barrel. This is regarded as a good price to the growers and one which will yield them a satisfactory profit in view of the large yield promsed. The value of this entire crop cannot be definitely estimated, as no accurate statistics are kept of the growth, which is widely scattered to all parts of the country. That it will reach several million dollars however for the Maryland and Virginia sections is the conservative estimates of those most familiar with the trade.

101 101 101 The National Drainage Association has opened offices in the Dupont Building, in Wilmington, Delaware, and will enter npon a vigorous campaign looking to the drainage, by Government aid, of the 80,000,000 acres of swamp and overflowed lands within the United States. In order to facilitate the collection of necessary data and statistics, the Association requests that all owners of such lands, no matter how large or small their holdings, send their names, address, number of acres of such land owned, to the Association at the above The receipt of this data will greatly aid in the early prosecution of this work, and will be of great advantage not only to the country at large, but especially to individual owners of swamp and overflowed lands.

Indications are multiplying in all branches of trade that a return of normal brain and trade that a return of normal brain and trade that a return of the re mal business conditions is rapidly approaching. Railroad managers especcially report a decided improvement and a sharp demand for cars for the transportation of all classes of articles with the possible exception of steel and iron. A prominent railway official says that this branch of business continued far below normal, and no doubt largely resulted from the fact that the railway companies themselves were not buying material. This state of affairs, however, he added, could not possibly continue much longer and the railroads would shortly be compelled to go into market, and when they did so the demand would be sudden as well as heavy.

an extent that the wise and liberal provisions of the laws have been enormously taken advantage of to promote the private business of periodicals—advertising—rather than news and other legitimate reading matter features. It is also necessary to consider, in this connection, that the Government carries second-class mail matter (newspapers and periodicals) at a loss. It is estimated that it costs the government fully four cents per pound for carrying it, while it receives but one cent per pound for all going outside of the county of publication, carring all going within the state, or within a specified territory. Rains Predicted for this Section.

Washington, July 15.—The Weather Bureau today issued a special forecast predicting rain in the corn and wheat belt and in the Ohio valley eastward. The forecast follows:

A barometric depression that now covers the Rocky mountain districts will move over the plains flats on Thursday, cross the central valleys and lake region on Friday and Saturday and reach Atlantic States on Saturday night or Sunday preceded by rising temperature, attended by local rains and thunder-storms and followed by two or three days of fair and cooler weather.

This depression will cause rain in the corn and wheat belt, and also rather copious rains in the Ohio valley and the Middle Atlantic and New England States.

Sunday Observance in Illinois, as Compared With Maryland.

As an appendix to his letter of last week, Mr. J. Harvey Sites, of Freeport, Ill., sends us the following:

"A young man told me his boss wanted him to pitch pea vines, on Sunday. People go fishing here on Sunday the same as on week days. Baseball is also a common Sunday ampsement, and I a common Sunday amusement, and I have personally seen lots of money bet on the games. Any number of people pay their money, on Sunday, for ad-mission, and do betting besides, who, if on the inside of church doors would kick hard, if orbot to give the control of t

cratic stronghold, present three candidates for the congressional nomination.

Heretofore no eagerness was manifested by anyone to accept a nomination, much less to make a contest for the honor.

The reason for this disinclination was obvious. So heavily Democratic is the district that Republican defeat was regarded as certain. Even in 1896 and in 1900, when the district went against Bryan and his running mate, there was no scramble for a place on the Republican ticket. This year, however, the outlook is so bright that the convention which will meet at Towson on August 5 will be obliged to make a selection.

The candidates presented by their respective constituencies are Robert Garrett, of Baltimore county; E. M. Allen, Jr., of Harford county, and Dr. Baughman, of Carroil county.

Mr. Garrett is not making any fight

Mr. Garrett is not making any fight for the nomination. He is now out of the city. Should the convention decide to again make him the Republican standto again make him the Republican standard-bearer he will accept, just as he did two and four years ago, when the odds were heavily against him. The Baltimore county delegates intend to present his name and they have reason to believe he will receive the support of the city wards. If he does his nomination is assured, for Baltimore county and Baltimore city have enough votes to name more city have enough votes to name the candidate.

it is only in the event of a deadlock or a compromise that he could obtain the nomination. The indications are that either Mr. Garrett or Mr. Allen will be chosen, with the chances at this time favoring the former. If Mr. Garrett is chosen he intends to make a vigorous fight against Mr. Talbott, the Democratic nominee. Two years ago the two city wards gave Mr. Garrett nearly 800 majority, while Democratic Harford gave him nearly 100, Carroll giving Mr. Talbott a few over a hundred. But for Ealtimore county Mr. Talbott would have made a mighty poor showing. As it was, he got less than 1,200 majority.

After an all night session, Wm. Jennings Bryan was nominated by the Denver convention at 5.40 a.m., eastern time, last Friday. The convention, after adjourning at daylight with the nomination of Mr. Bryan, resumed its session at 1 p. m. Thursday, with a powerful undercurrent already in motion toward the nomination of John W. The names of Judge Gray, of Delaware, and of John Mitchell, of Illinois, were not presented, owing to the explicit requests of these gentlemen not to have their names go before the Convention.

For a time it looked as though a ballot would be required. But the steady line of States which joined in seconding Kern's nomination soon made it apparent that the chances of all other candidates had been extinguished. Mr. Towne in person was the first candidate to recognize the decisive nature of the Kern movement, and, in a ringing speech, he withdrew his name from con-

Mr. Allen, of Harford, is making a quiet but effective campaign in his own behalf, and it is understood to have the support of leading Republicans in other districts. He will undoubtedly have his own county, and depends upon a break in Carroll and elsewhere to win out.

The friends of Dr. Baughman, of Carroll, are more active in his behalf than is he himself. That he can have the votes of Carroll goes without saying, but it is only in the event of a deadlock or a compromise that he could obtain the nomination. THE CAMPAIGN song writer now has a job again; another evidence of the return of prosperity to laboring men.

and niceties. For instance, there is a difference between "Peerless" and "Imperial," notwithstanding their synonymous jingle. Bryan is called a "peerless" leader against "imperialism," althrogh one definition to the latter word is "supreme authority."

A READER of the RECORD calls the Washington Gettysburg Boulevard project an "Arabian Nights" story. Maybe so. Had the wonders of the present age, been written as they are, and circulated in 1704 when the "Arabian Nights" first came out, it is questionable which would have been considered the biggest lies.

Several other railroads have gone into the business of tree raising and those which are most provident in this respect will have in their forests a store of wealth that will give them a great advantage over their treeless competitors. Most lines pass through land of little commercial value that might as well be growing tie timber as growing weeds and brush or a scant supply of grass. If all the important railroad lines should embark in the business of tree raising the Governments, National and State,

----To Increase Trade.

It is very unfortunate that the retailer, speaking generally, does not appreciate the value of local advertising. It would seem as though ambition should dictate to many merchants such a result is easily attained. The way to do it is quite simple

It is well known that women are the best buyers and, as a rule, the goods they buy are the most profitable. To attract them your store must be magnetic-i. e., clean, neat, stocks well arranged and the goods appealing to them prominently displayed.

Doing this is properly classed as advertising, but it must be backed by intelligent, well informed and courteous clerks to make the sales. After having accomplished this reform then, by all means, contract for a regular space, in your local papers and place your adadvertisement in advance. Arrange the copy for frequent changes, make the matter and makeup attractive, and be sure to refer to the seasonable goods at the proper time.

If such a simple course is followed the result will be a pleasant surprise to any merchant who has not been a believer that he does not have to cut prices to make sales. There is an easier way to make business and keep profits in these times. The rule is as simple as can be-It must be confessed by anyone who advertise and support your announce-

EVAPORATING FRUIT.

Surplus Fruit May Thus Be Disposed of Readily and at a Profit.

The demand for fruits in various forms is increasing. Like the cereal fad, it may sometimes assume the proportions of a cult. There is in every orchard much good fruit that is lost because it cannot be kept for the market, but if carefully evaporated by one of the scientific processes it will keep for some time and then may be disposed of at a profit. The process must be a good one, however. The American Agriculturist tells how to put up evaporator and plan is shown herewith," says the magazine. "The space is divided into a furnace room 14 by 16 feet and a somewhat smaller workroom, in which the apples are pared. An upright bleacher, which also serves as an elevator for raising the fruit to the second floor, is placed in this room. "The second room is divided in a similar way. The kiln has the same dimensions as the furnace room, with a capacity of 75 to 100 bushels of unpared fruit at each filling. The workroom on this floor contains the slicer and the upper portion of the bleacher. The dried fruit as it is taken from the kiln can also be held here temporarily if desired.

Such a building may be so constructed that it will be useful for many other purposes during the course of the year than that for which it is primarily intended. In constructing kilns the same general principles are extensive establishment having several kilns. The most satisfactory kiln, all things considered, is about twenty feet square. This is a convenient size to fill, so far as the preparation of the fruit is concerned. The heat can be well regulated, made sufficiently intense for the purpose desired and evenly distributed so that the fruit will dry uniformly, and for various minor reasons a kiln of this size is a desirable unit in the construction of evaporators of this

"A kiln consists essentially of a floor made of slats and placed over a furnace room or over a system of steam pipes. The floor is usually built from to twelve feet above the floor of the furnace room. Provision should be made for regulating the heat by means of small openings at the base of the walls communicating with the outside. These can be opened or closed as desired. The inflow of cold air can thus be regulated. Such control is especially desirable in windy weather "If the evaporator is a frame building, the walls of the furnace room may well be plastered or covered with the intense heat walls, at least the portion below the generated. If the kiln door, are double, with an air space between the two sides, the insulation will be more perfect than if they are solid or of only a single thickness, thus best conserving the heat and increasing the efficiency of the plant. The height of the walls of the kiln above the drying door should be sufficient to permit an attendant to work on the floor conveniently and with comfort.

Some means for the escape of the air laden with moisture from the fruit is necessary. This may be provided for by means of an opening in the roof, or a cupola-like ventilator may be built, the sides of which should consist of slate placed so they overlap one another as in an ordinary window blind. The kiln floor is constructed of strips especially designed for the purpose. Such floors are generally made of poplar or basswood strips threeeighths of an inch thick, one inch wide on the top surface and one-half inch wide on the under side In laying the floor these strips are placed one-eighth to one-fourth inch apart on the upper surface. This makes the space between them wider on the under side than on the upper, as shown. thus allowing the small particles of fruit which work down between them to drop through without clogging the intervening spaces."

THE UP TO DATE FARMER.

How He Makes Agriculture a Paying Business.

The up to date farmer knows the value of being up to date. He knows that new discoveries in the various sciences related to agriculture reveal new relations and suggest better methods. He knows that many of the theories held and many of the methods practiced years ago, and some even now. are worthless. He knows that one farmer cannot make as many experiments as can a thousand men.

He reads books on farming and does not scoff at the book farmer, nor does he refuse to listen to the college professors, for, while he has great respect for the students of agriculture, yet he knows that the time has not come and never can come when agriculture shall be reduced to a rigid science, which shall be governed by a code of rules and laws, as are such sciences as chemistry, physics and the like.

The up to date farmer has the latest improved farming implements and to save horsepower and to do most efficient work always keeps them in perfect order. He does not use a plow that will not scour nor one that is dull nor one whose adjustment is such that three horses must work hard to do the work which two could easily do with a plow properly adjusted. He understands the application of force to all his farm machinery so that the greatest amount of work is accomplished with the least expenditure of power. When his farm implements are not in use he keeps them well housed if it is profitable to do so. A hundred dollar wagon shed into which a twenty-five "A conveniently arranged one kiln dollar farm wagon is backed by hand every time the team is unhitched is not profitable

The up to date farmer pays his debts. Not the least important of these is the one he owes to the soil. He knows that each crop which the soil yields takes from it something of its fertility and that unless this fertility is returned to the soil it can soon yield only a diminished crop. So he is very careful year by year to pay back to his land that fertility which the crop has taken from it. He knows many ways of doing this, and the one which he will adopt will depend upon the neighborhood. He knows that he can run a dairy, and when he sells a ton of butter, worth perhaps $500, it will impoverish his farm no more than to sell five or six hundred pounds of straw worth about

He will keep his hired help all the year, and year after year, for the longer they are in his employ the more valufollowed, whether the evaporator is a able they are to him and the more he small one with only a single kiln or an can afford to pay them. He will buy more food than he sells, will raise all the feed he can for his stock and will not hesitate to buy more when needed. If he is wise in the management of the fertilizers from his barns and feed lots and wise in their distribution upon his meadows and pastures and wise in sowing clovers for his corn land and among the grasses of his farm he will in time greatly increase its fertility.-Farm and Fireside.

An Unappreciated Plant.

Chives is a vegetable not widely known in this country. It is native along the northern borders of the United States as well as in some parts of Europe, where it is popular. The plant belongs to the onion family, and its leaves are used for seasoning in soups, salads, etc., and are preferred to onions by many persons because they are much milder and more tender. Europeans use chives for seasoning scrambled eggs and similar dishes.

The culture of chives is simple. The immediate welfare as the question plant will grow in any ordinary garden soil. It is usually propagated by division of the roots, because it does not seed readily. The roots or clumps of roots may be purchased at moderate prices. The clumps should be planted in beds about nine inches apart in rows which are two feet apart. The planting may be done in either spring or autumn. The chives may also be planted in the border of the vegetable garden and makes an excellent perma- against loss. nent border. As a border plant the clumps should be planted about six inches apart. The leaves will grow thickly and form a dense green mat.

The Cankerworm Again.

The worm which devastated elm trees and apple trees in Connecticut is the cankerworm, the same pest that visited trees ten years ago. The worm does its work very rapidly, but, unlike the elm tree beetle, does not have a long life and consequently the trees can put forth new foliage, though at some sacrifice of vitality. On the apple trees it can be destroyed by arsenical spraying, but the trees must be treated when the worm is very young if the work is to be effective. The banding of the trunks of the trees with vermicides is the most effective method of prevention. The reports from the state received at the Connecticut agricultural experiment station indicate a very great variation in the number of pests, some towns suffering very seriously and others being quite free from the visitation.

In Regard to the Great Profit in Lime to the Farmer.

The LeGore Combination of Lime is said by practical farmers to pay at the following rate. One ton of lime, before it is worn out, will bring to life or release plant food enough to produce:

1 ton of wheat worth $ 20.00 21 tons corn 50.00 4 tons of hay

Cost of 1 ton of lime about 4.00

This will leave as a profit to farmer $106.00 How can the farmers afford to put off liming and expect to make up the great loss in their future crops? The LeGore Combination of Lime is gnaranteed to show paying results for twenty years. If the farmers lime for grass, wheat and corn, they will grow good crops and lay the foundation for permanent improve-ment. The farmer makes more clear money by the use of one ton of lime than the manufacturer does from the sale of 100 tons. Putting off liming is like putting off doing what is right-the longer you wait the harder it will go. It does not pay to put out any crop without liming if the field has not had any lime for 4 or 5 years.

If the farmers wish to grow abundant crops of wheat, grass and corn profitably, they must use a good combination of the salts of lime.

Orders should be given to the warehouse people early, or send direct to

A HELP TO ALL FARMERS.

The Grange a Benefit to Nonmembers as Well as Members of the Order.

[Special Correspondence.] "Is the grange a benefit to farmers who are not members of the Order?" The grange is an organization whose chief aim is to work for the improvement of conditions which will benefit its members and in so doing must be a benefit to those outside of the Order It is a benefit financially from the fact that the grange as a body is able to purchase various articles at cheaper rates, and this naturally creates competition in prices which benefits others. The discussions on the various topics in which farmers are interested which are brought up in the meetings help to enlighten and educate us, and in that as in all other lines of education the better informed we are the better able are we to help those with whom we come in contact, so in our intercourse with others they would reap some of the benefits thus derived.

When the grange brings its influence to bear upon the making or defeating of a law or laws which would benefit its members it cannot be otherwise than a benefit to farmers outside of the Order. As every one needs soille recreation and entertainment, so the grange is a benefit to outsiders socially by furnishing some entertainments to which they are made welcome. The words, acts and deeds of all men and all nations have an influence for good or ill upon those with whom they mingle. So it must be with all organizations. They cannot be so exclusive that their influence will not reach beyond their own members, and with that fact ever before us the grange should try to maintain a high standard of usefulness in the community where

In accordance with the instructions from the last state grange a committee consisting of State Master Hill, State Lecturer Dorsett and others went to Washington last month for the purpose of laying before the members of congress and department officials the desires of the Pennsylvania state grange with reference to legislation for better protection of the dairy interests. The department of agriculture of Pennsylvania was also represented by a committee. They had a spirited and interesting hearing for an hour and a half before the house committee on agriculture, after which they waited on Senators Knox and Penrose, both of whom assured the committee of their willingness and desire to do what they could to protect the interests of legitimate dairying. Later they called upon Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, Secretary of Treasury Cortelyou, Commissioner of Internal Revenue Capers and Dr. Wiley, chief chemist. From these gentlemen they secured much valuable information. members of the committee exhibited to the internal revenue officials a number of samples of butter as yellow as June butter, but which had paid but onefourth of a cent taxes. These officials alluded to the difficulties they experience in collecting the proper amount of taxes and in suppressing violations of the law. The fact was unearthed that the government does not have revenue collectors stationed at the licensed oleo manufactories. This matter was also brought to the attention of the congressmen, and it is not improbable that congress will take steps to remedy this defect in the laws.

Dancing at Grange Meetings.

New York paper has recently called attention to that which it believed to be a fact and which was not -namely, that State Master Stetson of Maine had issued a ban against dancing in grange halls, which seemed to forbid dancing at any and all times whether preceding, during or after the session of the grange and, indeed, on every other evening in the week. Mr. Stetson's attention being called to the statement in the paper, he denied he had promulgated any such order. He said he was following the rulings of his predecessors, which allowed no dancing during the grange session. Mr. Stetson says that he does not own the grange halls, and he does not claim the right to say what they shall be used for the other five nights in the week.

Political Discussion.

It is a mistaken idea of some that it is improper to discuss political matters in a grange meeting. Nothing could be more inconsistent. On the other hand, it is our duty to take up any and all questions that concern our welfare, not as partisans, but in a fair, candid and intelligent manner. and thus arrive at conclusions that will be for the best interest of agriculture and for the greatest good to the greatest number.-W. H. Vary.

The Wide Field.

The grange is not a one idea organization. Its fields of usefulness are as many, as wide and as diversified as ere the fields, orchards and gardens of our farms. Keep them all well tilled.

We have heard of granges where several candidates for membership are balloted on all at one time. That is absolutely unconstitutional and should never be done.

MILK POWDER.

Great Trade Can Be Built Up For Product, It Is Believed.

The Creamery Journal of London predicts a bright future for the milk powder trade. It says: Now that practical processes have been invented for the conversion of milk into powder the question of the possibilities of such a business demands the attention of all creamery proprietors and managers. The great difficulty in most manufacturing businesses is the proper utilization of byproducts Now, separated milk in creameries is practically a waste material. It fetches on the aver age a price of a penny per gallon. It can only be sold in the immediate neighborhood of the creameries, as carriage to a distance is not possible at such a price.

The process referred to gets rid of practically the whole of the water contained in the milk, and the residue of milk powder amounts to only about onetenth of the weight of the milk. Even were it possible to send the separated milk economically to a distance the heavy cost of the packages required would be a very serious drag on the business. But the milk powder way ba forwarded in any ordinary light commercial package that can stand the strain of a railway journey.

For wholesale purposes it may be packed in bags, like flour, at practically no cost whatever. The trade being a perfectly practical one, the next question is, What are the possibilities of finding a successful market for the product? And it seems to us that if milk powder is properly placed on the market it will find innumerable profitable outlets. It will be used in enormous quantities by biscuit manufacturers and by bakers and confectioners to a large extent in the manufacture of milk bread, cakes and pastry of various sorts. As it will keep for any length of time, it will obviously be invaluable on board ship.

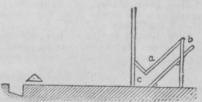

DOCTORING CATTLE.

Drenching Is Dangerous and Often Proves Fatal, Says a Veterinarian. Dr. David Roberts, Wisconsin state veterinarian, gives this advice: Perhaps the best way of demonstrat ing the danger of drenching cattle is to advise the reader to throw back his head as far as possible and attempt to swallow. This you will find to be a difficult task, and you will find it more difficult and almost impossible to swallow with the mouth open. It is for this reason that drenching cattle is a dangerous practice. If a cow's head be raised as high as possible and her mouth kept open by the drenching bottle or horn a portion of the liquid is very apt to pass down the windpipe into the lungs, sometimes causing instant death by smothering, at other times causing death to follow in a few days from congestion or inflammation of the lungs. Give all cattle their medicine hypodermically or in feed. If they refuse feed give it dry on the tongue. The proper method of giving a cow medicine is to stand on the right side of the cow, placing the left arm around the nose and at the same time opening her mouth, and with a spoon in the right hand place the medicine, which should be in a powdered form, back on the tongue. She can then swallow

A New York dairyman has a hay and grain rack for cows which, he says, is a great help when these two feeds are given at the same time. The hav is put in space a, and then the grain is poured in at b, and the cow eats it at

SECTION OF COW STALL.

The part of the rack holding the hay may be made of slats and will thus be easier to keep clean. Both of these racks are kept in place by 2 by 3 strips running lengthwise of the man-

Handling the Boar.

The boar should have plenty of exercise. This is productive of well developed muscles and general thrift. Soundness of reproductive organs will usually follow. During the breeding season it will not be possible for him to get the same amount of exercise. and accordingly care must be taken that his energies are not wasted by unnecessary service. Careful feeding will do much to counteract this. It must always be remembered that the drains on a boar at this time are severe, especially if fifty or sixty sows are served. This will require ample feed, with as much exercise as possible and careful treatment. A fully matured boar should not serve more than two sows daily, preferably one in the morning and one in the afternoon. In this way he can serve fifty or sixty in a season without difficulty.-George M.

The Only One of Its Kind. The Shawnee Alfalfa club is the only one of its kind on earth, according to the Kansas Farmer. It holds monthly meetings on the afternoon of the last Saturday in each month and discusses appropriate topics-as, for instance, "Alfalfa Pests."

Feet of the Colts.

Keep the feet of colts even or unsoundness may result. Do not allow the toes to grow too long. Ringbones are often caused by long toes. Keep the colts' stalls well littered. One slip on a wet floor may ruin a valuable colt.

Big Timber-land Deal in West Virginia.

What is said to be the largest single sale of timber-land in the history of West Virginia has been made by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company to a corporation which will at once begin development. The purchasing company has mills at Ridgeway and at Camden-onthe-Gauley, within reach of the tract. The combined capacity of its mills is 350,000 feet a day. Two million dollars is the reported price paid for 200,000 acres of hardwood, chiefly virgin forest, activities and the control of the containing yellow poplar, cherry, oak maple, birch, ash, and many other valuable woods.

The land lies in a mountainous region drained by northeastern tributaries of the Great Kanawha which empties into the Ohio about 300 miles from Pittsburg. It is one of the largest and most valuable bodies of hardwood timber remaining in the Appalachian region. Many of the mountain ranges which cross the tract, are from 3,000 to 4,000 feet high, and covered to their summits with rich forests.

North of this tract, but drained by the same streams, lies another holding of 129,000 acres, recently secured by a pulp company. This is covered with spruce and hemlock, with many patches of hardwoods. Development of the property, it is said, will begin in the immediate future. The two bodies of land, lying in the same region, aggregate more than 500 source miles of since the property of than 500 square miles of primeval forest about to be turned into marketable pro-

The stripping of the forest cover from a region so large and so mountainous will be watched with interest by those who study the effect of the soil cover on stream flow. The rainfall over the region We must be brief, this week, as there is very heavy—more than four feet an-Snow six feet deep on the timbered mountains, while not usual, is an occasional occurrence. Fire is sure to follow the usual methods of lumbering, and unless this region is more fortunate than most lumbered tracts in that part of the Appalachian plateau, many of the summits and sides of the mountains will be laid bare down to the soil and rooks. The rainfall and melted snow, which are now retarded by the forests, will then pour down the naked slopes and cause destructive floods in the lower streams, and low water will follow.

West Virginia is one of the states which has taken no measures to protect its val-leys from floods by preserving the forests on the mountains. Its woods are being cut and burned more rapidly perhaps than those of any other state, and this in face of the fact, that it is by nature a forest state, with soils and situations suited to almost all eastern timber trees. It might perpetuate its forests and have woods of immense value, always. A lit-tle protection against fire, the leaving of small trees to form the future forest, and provision for reproduction by means of seed trees, are simple measures, but they would mean all the difference between wasted hillsides and well stocked forests, ripe for the axe. A few years would bring handsome returns from the invest-

TIPS ON CARE OF FLOWERS.

How to Keep Them Fresh, as Told by a Florist.

"Very few persons understand the art of keeping flowers," said a St. Louis florist, "and yet by a little attention flowers may be kept fresh for three or four times as long as people expect them to stay in good condition. "The matter is simple enough. It is merely a question of temperature and moisture. Roses, for example, are grown at a high temperature in the greenhouses and are then generally spoiled by ill treatment after they have been cut. Grown in a temperature of 65 to 75 degrees, they are placed in an icebox, where the temperature stands at about 40. Then when sold they are taken into a dining or ball room, where the temperature is 75 or 80. Of course they wilt in a few hours, sometimes in a few minutes. Nothing else could be expected. "They could, however, be kept in proper condition for a week by placing them in water and standing the vase in the coolest part of the living room Every day half an inch of stems should be cut off in order to present a fresh suction surface to the water. If this precaution is neglected the stem becomes clogged with a glutinous matter something like the gum that exudes from peach and cherry trees, the water in the vase, however pure, cannot be drawn up, and the leaves and flowers wither for lack of

"In cutting off the stems a knife should always be used, never a pair of scissors. The reason is plain enough. The knife makes a smooth cut, leaving the cells of the wood open and unobstructed. The scissor blades, no matter how sharp they are, always compress the woody fibers at the end of the stem and leave them so tightly pressed together that it is almost im possible for sufficient moisture to find its way through to support the leaves and blossoms."

How to Check a Nosebleed. When the nose is bleeding, never hold it over a basin or hold the head down in any way. This only causes further rush of blood to the broken tissues in the nose. The head should be held up and back, the flow being caught in handkerchiefs or cloths. One of the most effective and simple means of checking a nosebleed is to press on the upper lip. Near the undersurface of the lip runs the artery that supplies the interior nasal passages where the ruptures occur. If this is pressed, the flow of blood is mechanically checked, thus allowing the blood around the broken tissues to congeal and seal up the opening. If merely pressing the finger does not succeed, place a wad of paper under the lip and fold the lip over it, holding it down tight. Again, if this does not succeed and a drug store is near, get some adrenalin, saturate a piece of cotton with it and apply to the interior of the nose from where the blood

The American Flag.

(For the RECORD.)

(For the RECORD.)

"Keep your eyes on the Flag,boys; its azure—
True blue—is the color of heaven.
Each star in its field is a treasure
By freedom from tyranny riven.
'T is red with the blood of God's heroes,
Who died for the weal of God's men;
'T is white with its justice to cheer us—
Keep your eyes on it, boys, to defend."
—Felix Brunot.

Every American boy and girl should know all about our flag, and it is no credit to our public schools that they

The fact that they do not also know the main points about our three immortal American documents,—the Bill of Rights, the Declaration of Independence, and the Constitution of the United States,—serves to show that we are not educating our young people to become intelligent as well as loyal and patriotic

There is a good deal of interesting history connected with the American flag. A few years ago the most of this was collected into a neat little pamphlet by Rev. A. N. Whitmarsh, of Pittsburg, Pa. This pamphlet has been quite extensively sold, and certainly ought to be in the hands of every public school teacher in the country.

No one can fail to be impressed with the fashion of our flag. Its design is said by some to have been suggested by General Washington. Others, however, contend that he at first favored another design. In a little pamphlet, compiled some years ago by two or three members of congress, it is stated that the flag was designed by Mrs. John Ross, and after-ward re-drawn by George Washington "to a proportion more to his liking". Also that, while drawing it, the general sat in the back parlor of Mrs. Ross's little house and wrote "upon a small rosewood table". Certain it is that the first American flag was made by Mrs. Betsy Ross, of Philadelphia. And her descendants claim that she herself designed it and submitted it to the flag committee of the Continental Congress, by whom it was at once accepted. To Gen. Washington and the committee of congress who came to inspect her handiwork she explained that the flag consisted of thirteen stripes, alternate red and white, one for each of the colonies, and of thirteen white stars in a clear sky, each star representing a state. To the galaxy one more star was to be added for each new state admitted, but the number of the stripes was to remain the

The workmanship on this original flag was highly praised by Washington. Mrs. Ross had sewed every stitch of it herself. The cutting out and sewing of the stars on both sides of the blue field was an especially difficult task, but so neatly and skilfully was the work done that, when the flag was finished, there wasn't a wrinkle or a "pull" anywhere in it. Indeed, so satisfactory was it in both deand finish that it was accepted as the flag of the new-born nation without a dissenting vote, and was straightway flung to the breeze from the flag staff on Independence Hall.

The stars and stripes became the flag of the United States on June 14, 1777. The following is the record in the Journal of the Continental Congress, relating to its

'The American congress, in session at Philadelphia, established by its resolu-s tion of June 14, 1777, a national flag for the United States as follows:

"Resolved, That the flag of the United State be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white, and "That the Union be thirteen stars white in a blue field, representing a new constellation."

The national flag continued to have thirteen stars and thirteen stripes until January 13, 1795, when congress voted that—"after May 1, 1795, the flag of the United States be fifteen stripes alternate red and white, and that the Union be fifteen stars white in a blue field

Twenty-three years later, April 4, 1818, congress adopted the following resolution: "Be it enacted that from and after the Fourth of July next the flag of the United States be thirteen horizontal stripes, alternate red and white, and that the Union be twenty stars, white, in a blue field.

"And that on the admission of a new state into the Union one star be added to the flag, and that such addition shall take place on the Fourth of July next succeeding each admission."

So the matter stands today.

It is interesting to note in passing that the stars on the flag have five points, while those on our coins have six. Furthermore, that they were first arranged in a circle, afterwards in the form of a large star, and now in parallel lines.

Artists tell us that our flag is becoming over-burdened with stars. We know that our government officials are considerably puzzled about placing the new As there are still several states in embryo they will probably continue to be puzzled, unless the suggestion made by the War and Navy Departments several times since the Civil War-to return to the old flag with thirteen starsbe adopted. This could be done, and without prejudice to flags with a star tor decorative uses. Certainly all objections to this proposal of the original flag for government purposes seem to be offset, apart from sentiment, by the consideration that every time a state is admitted into the Union an entire change of flags must be made on all government buildings, and wherever official fiags are used.

The first time the flag was ever displayed in battle was in August, 1777, at Ft. Stanwix, now Rome, Oneida county,

The first time it was ever carried in battle was in September, 1777, on the Brandywine near Philadelphia.

The first ship that ever bore American colors was the Ranger, commanded by John Paul Jones. Jones was bound for with a French admiral in Quiberon bay, on the coast of Brittany, he saluted his —or a sheet of boiler iron comes forth flag. The Frenchman returned the salute gun for gun. This was the first sa-lute ever paid to the flag by a foreign power, and was given on St. Valentine's Day, February 14, 1778.

Of the hundred and more flags that represent nations on land and sea, "Old Glory" is conceded to be the handsomest; and no other is so universally admired and respected. It is welcomed in every part of the world, is heartily saluted by every other nation, and is cheered by the people in every clime. It not only represents this great nation, but it is the banner of human freedom. It stands for free thought free speech, a free press, and free men.

No wonder it is loved and respected the world over.

Following the close of the Civil War, there was a wonderful demand for the stars and stripes. Gen. Benjamin F. Butler was one of the first to go into the manufacture of flags on an extensive scale. He owned, or held controlling interests in, several cotton mills not far from Boston. Into these he introduced special machinery for turning out flags and bunting by the bolt. His enterprise and success naturally led other mills to embark in the business, until today the manufacture of "the star-spangled banis one of our most extensive and prosperous industries. No less than 5,-000,000 flags, ranging in price from 1c to $100 or more, are made and sold annually

And now for a moment let us recur to the maker of our flag.

In 1777 an order was drawn on the Continental Congress to pay Betsy Ross £14 12s 2d for flags furnished to the fleet in the Delaware river.

Betsy Ross afterward married John Claypoole, and her grave may be seen in Mt. Moriah cemetery, Philadelpdia On the plain headstone is the following

----Grandpapa's Story.

(For the RECORD.)
"Tell us a story, please, grandpapa, do,
'Bout some big lions, like those in the zoo;
Are they so fierce that they'd eat little boys!
They look as harmless as statues or toys."

I'll tell a story, my dear little boys, If you're attentive and don't make a noise 'Bout some big lions confined in a den— I don't know how many—probably ten".

Thousands of years ago there lived a man Near to the city of Jerusalem, Who to his Heavenly Father did pray, And a decree of a King disobey.

Wicked, idolatrous and jealous men Cast this good man into a lion's den; God, whom he worshiped and ever obeyed Gave strength and courage, he was not afraid.

Fierce though the lions and raving for food, Harmed they not him who in their midst stood. Gentle as lambkins they by at his feet, Seemingly well pleased this good man to meet.

Through the long night angels guarded this man. And in the morning the King in haste ran Unto the den, crying lamentably, Has thy God from lions delivered thee?"

Forever live, thou, O King," did he cry, Beasts have not harmed me, for innocent Am before God, and no hurt have I done Unto thee, O King; and his favor won."

Then was the King glad, exceedingly so, And he commanded his servants to go Take the man out, and the idolatrous men, Who had accused him, cast into the den.

Then the fierce lions, now thirsty for gore. Break all the bones and the flesh badly tore off the poor children, the women and men, Ere they reached bottom, in the lion's den.

Lions are fierce and not harmless as toys, And will eat big people and little boys; God will protect us if we Him obey, And to Him fervently pray every day.

Now, my dear children, when you've learned the fame
Of this good man, come tell me his name;
Then will I go with you down to the zoo,
Lions to see and the big tigers, too.

The Sword Turned into a Plow Share.

"Peace hath her victories no less than were piled with huge cannon, ammunition, rifles, boxes of bayonets, and gun carriages. Ambrose Ghenroe, and the writer, Sergeants in command of a detachment, with 100 men, cut a way through the tangled debris on the precipitous slope of Maryland Heights, attached chains to the huge Rodman and Parrott rifles weighing 6 and 7 tons each, and dragged them to the overlanging cliffs, where, remounted, they soon opened their great mouths, and helped clear the way into

Many of them go to the locomotive works, are cut up, and turned into the jaws of red hot yawning abysses, from black to red, from red to a white molten mass-are run out on trolleys, and poured into graves of sand, and left to cool. Iron fingers take up these hardly cold masses, rush them to the fiery ordeal, from whence again huge books overhead carry them to the Titan trip hammers-and sparks fly like meteors from the firmament, as the machine drops again and

Richard Binder, 35 South Thirteenth Street, who is a recognized authority on matters of hair-dressing, was asked to give his opinion on this report. While he said that it is true that large quantities of Chinese hair are being imported, he smiled and was inclined to be a little skeptical as to the statement that it was largely obtained from executed criminals. Mr. Binder said:

The two best sources of supply for European hair are France and Germany. For two reasons hair from these countries has recently been very scarce. The German Reichstag has passed a law forbidding the selling of their hair by the peasants, which is fairly well inforced, and in France the closing of the monasteries has cut off another source. It has been the custom of women entering the monasteries to sell their hair before so doing.

Caucasian hair has doubled in value in two years. The demand is also rapidly increasing. American women do not care for their hair as well as those of Europe, and consequently require more false pieces. All this has led to the importation of much Chinese hair. It is, to the bleaching and dyeing operations and soon fades.

What Sensible Parents Do.

Some years ago, a man with a family of six boys, varying in age from nine years to twenty-one, thought he saw signs of an unsuitable friendship in the manner and behavior of his eldest son. Without hesitation he faced the problem and discussed the method of procedure with his wife.

'From the moment I realized this new danger," said this man years afterward to a friend, "there was never a week passed but our house was brightened by the presence of some girl friends and relatives, any one of whom would have made an admirable daughter-in-law.

'It cost us a little trouble and money, but my wife and I both realized that it was the most important part of our life's duty at that time. In a few weeks the unsuitable friendship was dropped, and war." In 1862 the long platforms at camden Station, for blocks in extent, had become engaged to a girl who has had become engaged to a girl who has since proved herself to be all that we could wish, and later on all my sons made marriages that I can only regard with the utmost and intensest satisfac-

But the father or mother who forgets this important duty of helping in the selection of their children's life partner neglecting one of life's greatest responsibilities.

In mixed families, where there are girls and boys, the difficulty is never such a great one, but where the family consists of all daughters or all sons, or where there is a strong preponderance of either one sex or the other, then the parents' duty is something that must not be shirked.

How to Preserve Eggs.

Dissolve four ounces of beeswax in eight ounces of warm olive oil. Dip the tips of the fingers into the solution and anoint the eggs all over. The oil will be absorbed and the shell and pores filled up with the wax. Pack in bran or sawdust and put away in a cool place. Eggs treated in this way will keep two years.

When the desired temperature has been reached, remove the jar from the water bath and stand it on a wooden table. In moving it, be careful not to agitate the liquid. If you notice the liquid you will see that it gives off vapor in abundance. In a short time the saucer will become cool enough the condense the vapor, and clouds will begin to form near it.

Then from the clouds fine drops of rain will fall into the liquid. This miniature rainfall will last for nearly half an hour.

A NATIONAL RELIC.

History of Old Liberty Bell That Rang For Independence.

Everybody knows, of course, that the old Liberty bell is the bell that was rung when the Declaration of Independence was signed, July 4, 1776, at Philadelphia, and that it is now kept in however, of very inferior quality, owing | Independence hall, in that city, as our most precious national relie, says the Chicago News. But there are facts about it that everybody does not know.

The original bell was cast in London in 1752, by order of the Pennsylvania assembly, for use in its statehouse. It was shipped to Philadelphia in 1753, but it cracked without apparent cause when it was rung to test its tone. Of course it was necessary to recast it, and this was done in Philadelphia. In June, 1753, it was again hung in the belfry of the statehouse, where it was used as was intended.

On July 4, 1776, when the Continental congress signed and issued the Deciaration of Independence, it was rung to announce that event, and it is said that the old bellman was so carried away by patriotic enthusiasm that he continued ringing it for two hours. This part of the story is probably an exaggera-

Hide the Thimble.

A game which never fails to delight the children is the game of hide the thimble. This game needs no preparation and is easily explained to the children, a good many of whom probably already know it.

The thimble is given to one child, and the rest are to leave the room. When no one is in the room she hides the thimble in a vase, behind a picture, on the window sill, behind the curtain or any place which suggests itself to her as a good hiding place.

The other children are called back into the room and begin the search. The child may give hints as to where the thimble is by telling the children as they come near to the hiding place that they are getting "warm" and farther away the "colder" they get. This prevents the game from becoming tedious. The child who finds the thimble is then the "hider," and the game is continued.

ETIQUETTE POINTS.

How a Woman Should Receive an Introduction.

A woman's manner of receiving an introduction to a man is what makes an impression on him, and the most desirable effect is gained by the woman's cordial and gracious greeting.

When a strange man is brought to a woman it is the woman who speaks first, and precisely the form of her words depends upon revious conditions. If she has never heard of him before and he comes to her literally a stranger she may simply say "How do you do?" She does not rise from her seat, neither does she offer her hand, unless the man extends his. He should not do this, but sometimes he does, and to ignore it is the height of rude-

If the woman has heard of the man before he is presented and he knows of her through mutual friends, her greeting is more personal. She may say "This is a pleasure" or "How do you do? I have heard of you so much that I am particularly glad to meet you." This idea of extreme cordiality may be carried so far as for a woman to say, "Mr. So-and-so does not need to be presented, for I know him so well by reputation that I feel as though he were an old friend."

The man's answer is naturally of the same kind, and the conversation begins with interest, according as the two persons know something of each other or are total strangers.

At leaving the woman again may express her feeling in a measure. If she has known nothing of the man previously and has not found him especially interesting it is not necessary that she should say anything more than "Good afternoon" or "Good evening." It is courteous to say, "I am glad to have met you," but that depends upon how she feels. If, on the contrary, she has found him really agreeable and enjoyed her talk she may say so frankly in this way: "It has been nice to meet you" or "I have enjoyed so much meeting you. I hope I may run across you again." The man must take his cue from the wo-

The matter of shaking hands should rest entirely with the woman, and it is no longer perfunctory. For her to offer her hand suggests a certain friendliness, and if she wishes to im ply such interest it is perfectly proper for her to do so. In this way, while she does not shake hands on meeting the man, she may, if she has liked him give hers when they separate.

A woman never rises to meet a man, nor does she go to him. He must go

DELIGHTS OF STUPIDITY.

Knowledge Has "Downed" Us Since the Day of Eve.

Knowledge is no help to courage Fools rush in where angels fear to tread, and how useful these fools are sometimes every general knows. It is said that the British army was beaten three times during the day of Waterloo, only it did not know it. Napoleon raged at its stupidity. Education cultivates the imagination, which is the greatest foe of courage. When in the dead of night you hear a noise in the front parlor you remember all the stories you have read of worthy householders being shot by herce bur glars. You wonder how it feels to be hit on the head with a jimmy, and you take a long time finding your slippers. Ignorance would have saved you from these fancies, and you would have gone downstairs without a tremor and found it was only the cat.

It was the acquisition of knowledge that lost our first parents the garden of Eden. If they had only been content with their ignorance we might all be living there now instead of only getting an occasional week's end.

Text of the Lesson, I Sam. xii, 1-5, 13-25-Memory Verses, 23, 24-Golden Text, I Sam. xii, 24—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.] As in the gospel of John, we had to keep before us the great truth that the gospel was written in order that people might receive Jesus Christ as the Son of God and thus have life through Him. So in all the Israel story we must see a people whom God redeemed to Himself to make Him a name in the eyes of all nations-a people in themselves utterly sinful and yet for whom He wrought as He never had done for any other nation. As we think of their perverseness and His long suffering and unchanging love and then think of ourselves, so much like Israel, and consider how great things He has done for us (verse 24), we must cry out, "Oh, magnify the Lord with me and let us exalt His name together" (Ps. xxxiv, 3). Why did He choose Israel, the fewest of all people, to be a special people unto Himself above all people on the earth? The answer given is, "Because the Lord loved you" (Deut. vii, 6-8). In all that He did for them He wrought not for their sakes, but for His holy name's sake, that they and others through them might know the Lord (Ezek. xxxvi, 22, 32, 38; xxxvii, 28). His great desire for our oneness with Him now that we may live in Him and He in us is that the world may believe and know Him in whom alone is life eternal (John xvii, 21, 23).

Saul had returned to his home, to his father's flock and herds, and one day tidings came that the Ammonites were threatening Jabesh-gilead. The Spirit of God came upon Saul. At his call all Israel gathered to him as one man, and the enemy was scattered. for the Lord wrought salvation in Israel. Then Samuel gathered the people to Gilgal (which signifies reproach rolled away, Josh. v, 9), and they renewed the kingdom, making Saul king there before the Lord (see chapter xi). Samuel then rehearsed matters to them, reminding them of all the righteous acts of the Lord toward them and their fathers and that though the Lord was their king they had rejected Him with them and granted them a king, as they had desired, and he now stood before them, having just been honored of God to defeat their enemies, the Ammonites. Samuel appeals to them earnestly to turn now to the Lord and serve Him in truth with all the heart, considering all that He had done for them, assuring them that notwithstanding all their sin the Lord will not forsake them for His great name's sake if they will only truly serve

The same Jehovah is today seeking was Samuel. See his association with xv. 1. From verse 13 of our lesson learn that, since God granted such people their desire, how much more will abstainers. He fulfill the desire of them that fear Him (Ps. cxlv, 19). The words in verse 13, "Behold the King, * * * behold the Lord," make us think of the day when the Lord stood before Pilate as a man. as a malefactor, as one to whose charge they laid things He knew not. and Pilate said, "Behold your King." and they cried, "We have no king but Caesar." The same people were rejecting the same Jehovah and are rejecting Him still. Comparing verses 14, 20, 24, we learn that when we fear and grace of God. You may be so conthe Lord we need fear no one else. and from Isa. li, 12, 13, we learn that if we fear men we are forgetting God. The command is ever upon us to be obedient and to continue following the Lord our God. It is the word in John at you behind your back-yea, if the i and xxi and elsewhere. See Isa. i, 19; Hos. vi, 3; Josh. xiv, 8, 9, 14. Following Him means seeing "Jesus only" and running with patience looking unto Him (Mark ix, 8; Heb. xii, 1, 2). He is the God who alone can send thunder and lightning and rain as He pleases. He thundereth marvelously with His voice and directeth the lightning and doeth great things which we cannot comprehend (Job. xxxvii, 1-5). He made heaven and earth, and there is nothing too wonderful for Him (Jer. xxxii, 17). When they asked Samuel to pray for them he said: "God forbid that I should sin against the Lord in ceasing to pray for you (verse 19). Samuel saying "I will teach you the good and the right way" (verse 23) reminds us of the words of Ps. xxxii, 8; Isa, xlviii, 17, and many more. We are also reminded of the prayer in Ps. xxvil, 11, and if Israel had only been sincere in their request for prayer in Jer. xlii, 2, 3, it would have been a splendid request, but see their deceit and self will in Jer. xliii, 2. Those are searching words, "If I regard iniquity in my heart the Lord will not hear me" (Ps. lxvi, 18). The words in verse 22, "The Lord will not forsake His people," remind us of Heb. xiii, 5, "He hath said, I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the West Beginning July 19, 1908.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE. Topic.—Temperance meeting. How a promote total abstinence.—Gal. v, 16-24.

The temperance question is one of the uppermost problems occupying the minds of thinking men today. sue between temperance and intemper-Ance is becoming more direct every day. The fight is on, and the prospect for success along temperance lines was never more promising than today. Over one-half of the United States is already under some kind of prohibition law, and there is no question that many other states will in time give the people a local option law, carrying with it the right of the majority to decide for or against the liquor traffic. Every one who favors this principle has cause for gratitude and hope and may even dream of the day in the no distant future when the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage will be abolished in our entire land. If such a day should ever come (and let us pray and work for it) a long stride will be made toward total abstinence. This will be particularly so among the young. In spite of the best laws the poor unfortunate men who have formed the strong drink habit may find some way of obtaining it in some form. But the young at least will have a much better chance of growing up total abstainers. The open saloon is the supreme place of temptation. Close it and the temptation to become a moderate or intemperate drinker will largely be done away with.

But, while doing all we can through the law, the usual methods of promoting total abstinence should be emphasized, only with greater force.

First.-Public opinion must be aroused and kept aroused. The advocates of the saloon are ever busy. They plead their business interest. But what right has any man to engage in a business that makes many others unfit to attend their business, and as a consequence their wives and children suffer? They harp on the money that they pay for licenses and the revenue that goes from them to the government. They have even been so bold as to declare that the United States government would become bankrupt without the income received from the liquor traffic. All such arguments are nonsense and so understood by thinking people. But so many people let others do their thinking for them that they really believe what is said. Such false claims should be answered by reasonable arguments and the facts in the case. Every one who will visit a prison will find that the large majoriother nations. The Lord had borne the intemperance. Paupers, insane persons, orphans and most of those who have to be supported by the state are products of the same traffic. Put the saloon and liquor business off, the earth and governments and states would be financially benefited rather than weakened. The people must be made to see these things, and when they do they will rise and drive this curse of all curses from the earth. Second.-The homes, the church and the Sunday school must continue their good work. The public schools should be included in this list. Training in tothose who will worship Him in spirit tal abstinence should begin in the home and in truth and serve Him as the both by precept and example. Pity the drunkard. Do not make his lot harder by censure and upbraiding. Once he was as bright and hopeful as you, but, alas, in some way he was led astray. Deal with him as you would be dealt with if you should be led into his footsteps. But, above all, be a total abstainer yourself, and do all you can to make others so. You will be tempted. No one escapes under present conditions. You will be no exception. But stand firm by the power stituted that one glass of any kind of liquor may fire your brain and lead you rapidly to the doom of the drunkard. SEEKING

By MILDRED COLEMAN.

"Look out!" warned Letty. "It's the worst sort of luck to spin a chair around like that."

Travis, who had been twirling a light chair, hastily set it down on all four legs. This was not that he feared the hoodoo, but the consternaton on Letty's face indicated her discomfort. And to make Letty unhappy was furthest from his thoughts.

"Don't set it down!" shrieked Letty. "You must turn the chair the other way until you wind the bad luck door.

Dutifully Travis "wound up" his evil fortune and turned to the girl.

"Look here, Letty," he pleaded; "let's forget signs for a minute and get down to something more interesting than superstitions. You told me last Friday that I might have my answer

Letty's face colored softly.

Friday!" she asserted solemnly. "So it seems," agreed Travis, "as it has kept me in suspense since then. You know that I love you, dear, and that it has always been my great wish to win you for my wife. Is the answer 'Yes.' Letty?"

Travis, looking into the half veiled eyes, could read therein the struggle the girl was having with her own heart and then the gradual submission of her shyness to her love. He could almost see the formation of the word that would bring to him the happiness he sought when with a little cry of terror Letty sprang to her feet, her eyes dilated with tears and her hand pressed against the heart that beat so

"Can't you hear it, Jim?" she cried. "Hear what?" Travis strained his ears for some sound. Yet nothing

"I'M GOING TO MAKE ONE LAST EFFORT." save the faint flare of brass instruments could he hear.

"It's a funeral," explained Letty. "a military funeral, and they are playing a dead march.'

"You would scarcely expect them to play a waltz," reminded Travis. "Dead marches are written for funerals, you

"But think of the omen," persisted Letty. "Jim, if I should say 'Yes' one of us would die before the wedding." "It's awfully kind of you to save my life," said Travis, with a smile that found no reflection in his heart. "It's really good of you, Letty, but I'm perfectly willing to take chances." "I am not," was the answer in deadened tones. "Don't you realize what a bad omen it is, Jim?" "It certainly is a bad omen if it means that you will not marry me just because a funeral procession happens to be passing down the next street." agreed Travis.

He did not argue. Letty was adorable, but she was wedded to a belief in signs, and it now looked as if his avowal of love had been rendered fruitless by the funeral procession at the very instant when he had read his triumph in her eyes. Letty loved him -that he knew-but it was useless to argue when she was so obsessed by the fear of the omen. It was two weeks before Travis renewed his suit. In the interval he had come and gone, as usual. He and Letty had been to the theater and driving, but not a word had Travis breathed of the subject that was nearest to his heart.

your superstitions. Won't you reconsider, dear?"

Letty's face matched the tints of the pink and white apple blossoms she had pinned in her blouse as with half averted head she sought to combat her superstitious fears.

From the next room came the rasping sounds of a phonograph, and the record was "When We Are Married." It had been Letty's favorite in the old days, and her eyes brightened as the familiar strains were borne in upon her consciousness.

When to this was added a second sign as an itinerant band struck up the wedding march from "Lohengrin" her dosbts were fully dispelled. With a little cry of gladnes; she held out her hands to Travis, who caught them

A few minutes later a determined tapping at the door roused them from their dream of bliss. Letty's brother, Bob, stuck his tousled head inside the

"I say, Mr. Travis," he began diffidently, "you couldn't let me have that quarter now, could you? The boys are going down to the store to get the baseball uniforms, and if I had that quarter I could go with them."

"Mr. Travis does not owe you a quarter," said Letty sharply. "If you want money ask mother for it."

"Sure, he owes me a quarter," maintained Bob stoutly. "I was comin' "It's such bad luck to propose on down the street, an' he told me if I'd put that old record in the phonograph an' start it up pretty soon after he came in he'd give me a quarter. He was talkin' to the bandman on the

"The bandman? And he told you to do that?" asked Lettra with interest.

Bob nodded as he received a coin from Travis, and then he vanished from the room.

"Since you must have a sign I made my own," explained Travis, anxiously searching her face.

"And I'm glad you did." said Letty simply, her face still aglow with hap-

Making Himself Secure. After the funeral of an old woman in a remote Yorkshire hamlet her sons and daughters made a vigorous search for her will, but without success, although they knew that she had prepared one shortly before her death.

"What's ta done wi' it, Jock?" the eldest son asked the youngest, who, being unmarried and a great dunce, had always hung on to his mother's apron strings. "Tha's been in t' house all this time, wi' nobody to watch thee, an' it looks a bit fishy. Hast ta burnt

Jock violently refuted the charge. "Why, Ah nobbut 'ad it in my 'ands once," he declared.

"Ah, then, tha admits there wor a will?" cried the eldest brother trium-

"Of coorse there wor!" Jock frankly confessed. "She gave it to me t' day afore she died, but Ah couldn't read a word of it, so Ah took it art an' buried it to keep it safe. Ah'm not going to let any brothers an' sisters get ahead o' me. When Ah've learnt to read for me sen Ah shall dig that will up, but not a day earlier!"

And they had to "have the law on him" before he would divulge the hiding place of the document.

In Praise of Tea. Kienlung, the Chinese poet, was a prolific writer, and of all his poems his immortal "Praise of Tea" is most widely remembered. Written in exquisite characters, it decorates half the old cups, plates and fans of his period. Thus it runs:

"Place upon a gentle fire the tripod whose color and form tell of a far antiquity and fill it with water of molten snow. Let it seethe till it would be hot enough to whiten fish or to redden a crab. Then pour it into a cup upon the tender leaves of a selected tea tree. Let it rest till the mists which freely rise have formed themselves into thicker clouds and until these have gradually ceased to weigh upon the surface and at last float away in vapor, then deliberately sip the delicious liquor. It will drive away all the causes of disquietude that come to trouble us. You may taste and you may feel, but never can you express in words or song that sweet tranquillity we draw from the essence thus prepared."

Mast Bread.

In Saxon and mediaeval times, even after the introduction of wheat and other cereals, there can be little doubt that acorns were regularly used by the poorer peasants for the purposes of making bread, and not only in sea sons of scarcity, but as a general article of food. Oak trees were then chiefly valued because of the acorns which they produced.

In Anglo-Saxon records for the year 1116, which is described as "a very calamitous year, the crops being spoiled by the heavy rains, which came on just before August and lasted till Candlemas," it is expressly mentioned as an aggravation of the "heavy time" that "mast was also so scarce this year that none was to be heard of in all E. A. C. Buckey. E. O. Cash.

this land or in Wales." The days of mast bread are happily gone forever, and even barley bread, in common use during severe winters into the room the fragrance of the not so many years ago, has now everywhere given place to that of "the finest wheat flour."-London Spectator.
