The postoffice department has ruled that all guessing contests such as naming the number of beans in a bottle, the number of cigars that will be made in a factory, the number of admissions that will be sold at a fair, etc., constitute a lottery and that a newspaper that contains mention of any such guessing contests cannot be circulated in the mails.

When churches or other societies give entertainments and wish to economize by not having any bills, tickets or programs printed, we are willing to donate our space, but we consider it a gross injustice to ask us to advertise these entertainments free, and then pay their money to some one who can not and does not show them any favors. We try to think it is their thoughtlessness, but whether it is, or is not, the injustice to us remains the same. Ask yourself the question, "Is it fair?" Would you like for any one to treat you that way?— Hampstead Enterprise.

Hero medals are not given to cats, but if they were, one owned by N. G. Cole, a farmer living near Franklin, Pa., would be deserving, although the medal would have to be kept by Cole's family, as the cat gave up its life to save that of the master. While Cole was sleeping under a tree a four-foot rattlesnake emerged from nearby bushes and crawled toward the man. The cat sprung at the snake and engaged the reptile in battle, receiving a death wound. A daughter of the sleeping man heard the noise and arrived on the scene in time to arouse her father, who killed the snake.

The lodges of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of Carroll county will hold a union picnic at Wildwood Park, Mount Airy, this Saturday, in which the following lodges will take part: Montgomery, Fidelity, St. Stephen's, Springfield, Prosperity and Rainbow. A num ber of bands of music will be in attendance. Suitable exercises will be held and addresses made by officers of the Grand Lodge. A numbers of members living in Baltimore will attend the picnic, among whom are Grand Master William W. Varney, Grand Secretary William A. Mr. J. Charles Roerner, the Baltimore American's able representation, arrived on the grounds early Tuesday morning and remained until the pic nic closed, Friday night. His reports, as printed in the American from day to day, showed nearly 30,000 people in attendance during the four days. He made a very favorable impression and many friends who will be glad to see him often. The paper deserves special commendation for its

The address of States Attorney Reifsnider, of Westminster, on the execution of the laws, especially those referring to hotels and saloons, was an able and instructive one, full of good advice. His exposition of the duties of constables, magistrates and the citizens generally, was sound, and if followed out must redound to the credit and honor of our county. He said that there were but seven constables in the entire county with a population of 35,000 which spoke well for the peaceful law abiding character of our people.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

Ticket Named and Strong Resolutions Adopted in a Harmonious Meeting.

One of the most harmonious party conventions ever held in this county was that of the Republicans in Odd Fellows' Hall, Westminster, on Tuesday. The convention was called to order by Walter R. Rudy, chairman of the State Central Committee of the county, who read the list of delegates elected at the recent primary, and named as temporary offi-cers William Wood, of Union Bridge, chairman; Levi D. Reid, of Taneytown, secretary.

Chairman Wood addressed the convention. He said that the conditions now prevailing in this county afford the Republican party a better opportunity of electing the whole or a part of its ticket than has before existed at any permanent, and four resolutions adopted condemning the proposed disfranchising amendment; favoring reform in the election and primary laws; favoring the adoption of some practical system or roadmaking by which the public highways will be improved in such manner as to be most beneficial to all citizens. The fourth resolution reads as follows: "Standing always for the great doctrine of local self-government, a 'government of the people, for the people, by the people," we believe in the right of the people to express their sentiments at the polls on all economic questions and that the Legislature should grant them that right whenever asked for."

Members of the State Central Committee were elected as follows: James H. Reindollar, Taneytown; Charles W. Melville, Freedom; Frank T. Shaeffer, Westminster; Walter R. Rudy, Mount Airy, and W. Y. Frizzell, of Franklin. His R. Wesley Barnes was placed in nomination, but withdrew his name.

The Lincoln Highway.

The Lincoln Memorial Highway project is not dead. As an indication of the impression which this project has made upon the public, it is interesting to note the statement by Joe Mitchell Chapple in an article in the National Magazine that, while there is a great diversity of opinion as to the form which tne proposed Lincoln Memorial—a memorial on the desirability of establishing which Congress has agreed-this highway project has met with more favor than any of the rest. "The most popular project," says Mr. Chapple, Lincoln Highway,' a great national road from Washington to Gettysburg, a distance of about seventy miles.' opposed by certain interests, the highway project was received with marked favor throughout the country, and there is excellent reason for believing that if all the forms of memorial which have been proposed were submitted to the public for a vote upon them the highway would be approved by an overwhelming majority of votes.

Congressman Lafean will use all honor-

HOW STATE ROADS ARE BUILT

How the Plans of the State Commission are Being Carried Out.

The following article, from the Centreville (Queen Annes County) Observer, will be of interest to our readers generally, as it gives the first practical sketch of the plans for road building in the state-plans which will likely be duplicated in other counties, when the work once gets fully under way. The article refers to a section of road being constructed in Queen Annes county.

"Wagons of massive steel and iron, steam rollers, traction engines, material mixers, stone, cement, civil engineers, inspectors, pay masters, timekeepers, superintendents and bosses are all evident in conglomerative profusion, with between fifty and seventy-five represent-aives of Sunny Italy, glorious in red bandannas and full of hearty Italian expletives for the hills of Queen Annes county, which they put down immediately upon arrival as "No lika, too dama hard toa grade."

But, with all the confusion and wrangle incidental with the striking of camp and commencing of work on such a large scale, affairs are rapidly assuming a normal appearance at headquarters. Houses are springing up under the supervision of efficient carpenters, wagon and carloads of material and machinery arrive almost daily, and each man falls easily into the regular routine of work which will in the end mean improved roads for rural residents of our county. When the specifications were advertised for the work in this county, N. C. Hunter, Contractor, of Washington, Pennsylvania, was the lowest bidder. He was accordingly awarded the contract. D. E. Hervey was made superintendent of the work with P. E. Burroughs as State Inspector and L. P. Shaffer, Chief Engineer. H. H. Leggit is Business Manager of the Camp and T. C. Parker, Foreman. These men comprise the real head of the work and see that the plans as prepared by the engineers are carried out to the letter. They are also men who have had long years of experience in this work and are, consequently, able to assume the responsibilities attendant with such a gigantic undertaking.

Perhaps the most complete of any ever used in this county is the machinery which will be used in the construction of the new roads. Two large traction engines, together with four massive steel cars and six large steel wheeled ones, represent the hauling apparatus of the outfit. These cars are used to convey the loads of cement and stone to the different sections where the roads are to be built.

There is also a large cement mixer and derrick engine, used for preparing the material and building bridges. A gigan-tic 20-ton steam roller will be put in commission over the road as soon as specifications is complicated as well as commenced. The road bed is made even and then dug out to a depth of eight inches-the thickness of the new road-and after being placed in as nearly an even condition as possible, the first or very rough layer of stone is applied. This is thor-oughly packed by the massive rollers and a second layer of stone of better quality placed upon it. This is twice repeated. the third layer being covered with a sort of dust composed of cement and ground stone. A sprinkler is then run over the surface and it fills up all crevices, after which several trips of the twenty tons of iron and steel roller over it soon makes many pennies as they could get money the road as hard and smooth as a piece to have changed. They had a lively of rock.

work progresses rapidly. On either side of the fourteen feet of stone road, the old road is thrown up to the same height for a distance of from four to five feet. This gives a good twenty-four foot road for the drive and more than half that width of good hard

No other three miles in Queen Annes county, perhaps, is so full of hills as this very section first alloted by the State in this county. To place these hills on a level with the surrounding country, as many have expected, would be an engineering feat of almost an impossible nature, and, in view of its unfeasibility. the State has decided that no such attempt will be made, but the hills will be very materially decreased in height by removal of several feet of earth at the summit to the foot, thereby easily lessening the height from 10 to 15 feet.

The hills will also be properly drained so as to obviate a slippery surface during winter or mud during summer. Terra cotta pipes will be run along the hill sides to dispose of the rain water that may trickle down from the roads In this way the erosion, caused by water, will be greatly alleviated.

And, while the roads are being dealt with according to law, the bridges which span the little streams have by no means been forgotten. The old wooden bridges will each and every one be replaced by substantial steel and cement ones.

The work will progress at the rate of about a mile a month, although, perhaps, a little longer time will be quired to complete the hills along the route. The stone and cement to be used arrived over the Pennsylvania railroad the early part of the week, and consignments will be received each week as

To Preserve Lee Homestead.

Americans in general and Virginians in particular are interested in the plan to preserve Stratford Hall, the ancestral home of the Lees in Westmoreland county, Virginia.

Virginia Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, has appointed a Lee birthplace memorial committee, consisting of members of the camp and three advisers—Gov. Swanson, Senator John W. Daniel and Mr. R. E. Lee, son of the great general—to raise a fund for the purchase of the homestead. Mr. F. W. Alexander, of Oak Grove, Va., is secretary of the committee, which is said to have obtained an option on the estate.

The aim is to raise $100,000, which is

The aim is to raise $100,000, which is the estimated cost of purchasing the property and making necessary repairs.
When acquired, the property will be presented as a memorial to the great men born under its roof.

The project to buy Stratford was in-augurated by Virginia Camp, and has since been indorsed by the State camps of Maryland, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and New Jersey.

Stratford was built by Col. Thomas Lee about 1727, and it is said that Queen Caroline contributed to its cost from her private purse. It stands on the bluffs over-looking the Potomac river, about 25 miles from its mouth. As an example of Colonial Virginia architecture it is said to have few equals.

10.6.01 Lincoln Pennies Gone.

The supply of the new Lincoln pennies, bearing the three initials of the designer, has been exhausted so far as distribution at the Treasury Department is concerned. The word that they were "all gone" was issued shortly before the Treasury Building was closed Monday. Immediately the bulls of the invenile curb market outside ran up the price from three for a nickel the figure jumped to two for a nickel, a nickel apie ce, four for a quarter, and a dime apiece. Some asked as much as 25 cents each and refused to take less.

Since Secretary MacVeagh decided recently that V. D. Brenner, the designer of the new penry, had given too much prominence to his initials and ordered that the coinage should cease until the die could be recut the newsboys have swarmed about the building securing as trade outside, and every day saw more

Deaf Mutes for Census Machines.

There is an excellent opportunity for the deaf and dumb people of the United States to find employment in the Census Bureau. Secretary Nagel of the Department of Commerce and Labor gave expression to this opinion in discussing observations made by him during a tour of inspection at the Bureau.

"I am greatly interested in the welfare of the deaf, dumb and blind," said Secretary Nagel, and it occurred to me that there is a field of employment for the deaf and dumb doing census work. tabulation and puncturing machines could easily be operated by them, as there is nothing in the work which would require the use of faculties not possessed by them.

"They would, of course, need to be careful and accurate, but it has been my observation that deaf, dumb and blind people can concentrate their minds on a given task far more effectively than the ordinary individual. I am surprised that more of these afflicted persons have not endeavored to engage in this sort of work.

A large portion of the work of compiling the census which will be taken in 1910 will be done by machinery. soon as the reports of the enumerators are received at the Bureau they will be turned over to clerks operating two types of machines. One type is the tabulating machine. The other machine is used in perforating cards.

The right figure will be the number of deaths, the middle will be the number of living sisters and the left will show the numTHE CARROLL RECORD (NON-PARTISAN.)

Fools in Print.

We are not quite sure that we know how Solomon meant that a fool should be treated, as he seems to have left contradictory instructions, which perhaps represents a wise way of avoiding the acknowledgment that he did not know. So far as Solomon is concerned, a fool ought to be answered back, and he ought not to be answered back, so, there you are. There is one very satisfying thought, relative to a fool; what he says is not to be taken seriously by his apparent target, because the fool and his folly are so generally well known as to be harmless, and together produce nothing more than a smile, or a raising of the evebrows.

There are, however, "conceited" fools, and such, the wise man seems to have given instructions to squelch, "lest he be | ple. wise in his own conceit," thereby proving that the old gentleman was pretty well aware of the natural inclinations of humanity, and a supporter of the homeopathic doctrine as applied to medicine. We have recently felt somewhat inclined to act on this very principle, in a certain case which would tikely supply interesting reading to the humorously inclined; but, as there is a doubt in the case as to which sort of a fool we would be answering, we forego the pleasure.

We will say only that of all the fools we know to be entitled to distinction in their particular line of amusement, the fool who writes so-called poetry, and aims to be wise, witty and sarcastic, at the same time, is the biggest fool in the bunch. He is a "new one" even on Solomon, we imagine, and his proper treatment, we believe, would add one more conundrum to the list that he (Solomon) admitted his inability to

There is a sort of verse called "doggerel"-very properly named, because -and yellow dog, at that-than anything else. As we frequently see it, the "dog" is decidedly in evidence, snapping and snarling, but always at objects far above his reach, never burting anything, scarcely even attracting a downward glance of attention, yet, perhaps in his own conceited little brain, thinking that he is "just it." Some day that particular little animal will get in the way of an automobile, and be flattened out-we speak figuratively, of course, and not personally.

A close second to the "doggerel" fool, is the one who disports himself in the press, trying to make sensible people behieve that education-especially public school education-makes "tramps" and law-breakers in general. These gentlemen are undoubted candidates for the "bug house." They ill-conceal their all sorts of human degeneracy on "edueation," meaning public education in every word they write, and keep at their chosen missionary work with a zeal deserving a better cause. Fortunately, he is so harmless that even a muzzle is unnecessary.

Lack of Interest in Important Elections.

There are enough questions of great importance, this Fall, for a very interesting election; for a record-breaking vote and for unusual political and per sonal activity, but it is doubtful whether the people will permit themselves to be enthused. Something has come over the masses of voters very much like a mantle of disinterest; they appear to hold only a sort of half-way interest in politics and good-government, and we suspect that their other half-interest is divided between money-making, and absolute undervaluation of their own citizenship as represented by the sovereignty of the ballot.

There is scarcely anything quite as dangerous to good-government as nonvoting citizens, or those who take only a half-hearted interest in the effect that their votes have, when cast. ### Good Men Who Quibble.

Perhaps nothing so retards the progress of right, or of measures which lead to right, as mere quibbling over nonessential details. It is too frequently the case that a body of men, or community, while in the majority as to the propriety of accomplishing a certain desired end, nevertheless disagree over minor her feet and finds that her digestion is worse than its bite. earning an applause and co-operation which they despise, if the whole truth be told, but they nevertheless accept it as a means of gratifying a selfish ambition to win out, and have "their way." We admire those who are sticklers in the matter of details; it is perfectly proper to have strong convictions and to defend them; to try to carefully protect mere appearances, but, when this attimaintain.

Whenever a man says a movement "is all right-but" that man has perhaps unconsciously made an expression in favor of wrong. The main thing to consider, is, whether a question is is unquestionably right, then a few objectionable details, or consequences, are not worthy of consideration, and no truly conscientious man will extend his influence in the direction of wrong through hasty expressions criticising non-essentials.

Boys and Cigarettes.

During the session of 1908 the Canadian Parliament passed a law prohibiting the sale or gift of cigarettes to boys of 16 years of age or under. Violation of the law makes the offender liable to fine of from $10 to $100. Lads of that possession in public places are liable to penalty, and are compelled, under penalty of contempt of court for refusal, to tell where such possessions were ob-

This law became effective on July 20, 1908. Between that date and the close of the Canadian fiscal year on March 31, 1909, the sale of cigarettes declined appreciably. The figures for the period directly involved are not given, but the returns for the full fiscal year show a decline in consumption from approximately 400,000,000 cigarettes in 1908 to approximately 370,000,000 in 1909. The decrease is attributed to the restriction imposed on the sale to boys. It is as sumed that the law was even more effective than is indicated by the figures, on the ground that there had been no such law the returns would have showed an increase of about 10,000,000, instead of a decrease of about 30,000,000. The of 16 years of age and under were consumers of about 10 per cent. of the Canadian total. It is a safe guess that few of them still get an occasional

Mrs. S. D. Reck, of Gettysburg, spent Tuesday calling on friends in this place. The rain on last Sunday and Monday has brightened things up considerable and relieved us of the terrible dust.

Dr. H. J. Preston and his father, also a doctor, visited our town the beginning of the week, and it is hoped that the young doctor will decide to locate here. It is hoped that some of our older doctors, who practice in this community, will not try to discourage any one from locating in this place.

Well, the two county tickets are now nominated and the question is, what do you think of the nominations? You certainly can have a variety of opinions.

Wholesale Business Built Up In Ten Years by Two Women.

descent have built up in less than ten years an extensive wholesale business as the result of an original investment in stocks that took a capital of exactly

The stocks are not of the kind that are listed on exchanges or dealt in on the curb, but of the kind that women wear about their necks. One of the women was somewhat listlesly making a stock for her own adornment one day when she suddenly exclaimed:

"I wish I could make some money." "Why not do for pay what you are now doing for amusement?" said a friend who sat by.

The idea took. The young women material, made several stocks and had no difficulty in selling them.

That was the beginning of a business that has since occupied the whole time of both partners. For awhile one of them who drew pretty well was the designer of the firm. As business grew it was more economical to employ a well paid designer who could give his whole time to that part of the

By this time the partners had begun to employ girls to do the actual making of the stocks. At first the work was done by a few girls in Philadelphia. The number of employees in creased, and it became good business to establish branch houses, for by this time the trade of the partners was wholesale instead of retail. Houses were established in Baltimore, New York, Chicago, St. Louis, and the business went on growing.

By this time the two partners gave themselves wholly to the management of the business and the purchase of materials. They now go twice a year to Europe to study modes and buy materials, they have several well paid designers, and the persistence of the fashion of wearing stocks has kept the business constantly active and profita-

They have built for themselves a comfortable home in the upper part of Philadelphia, and they see almost every year a good deal of the European world. They had no more expectation of a business career ten years ago than a hundred thousand other girls in their native city.

Hon. Jos. A. Goulden's Address.

(The first and main portion of this address appeared in last week's issue.)

A bill now pending in Congress, known as the Davis bill, will do very much in the right direction if we can get it enacted into law; it provides assistance by the government for the teaching of farming and home making and domestic science in the agricultural schools and high schools in country districts, for allied subjects in the city high schools, and for teaching of agricultural and in-dustrial subjects whenever possible; also for the instruction of teachers; and in general for the furtherance of instruc-tion in farming. This will do much good, and help on the good cause; but, as Prof. Bailey points out, such secondary or high schools would not graduate enough pupils in a hundred years to thoroughly replenish our country dis-tricts and keep the farms from being deserted. We must get down further and reach a greater number of people. We must in the end have instruction elementary schools, and I want to urge this upon you most strongly. In this way, and this way only, can we properly equip our children and make them remain on the farms.

Agricultural education will accomplish three main purposes: It will inculcate a love for the country and farm life; it will make practical farmers and house-keepers of our children; and it will enable them to make a good living on the farms and lay up a competence for age or misfortune or accident. For years the teaching of patriotism was looked upon as an impossible fad in our schools; it was stated that beyond the study of history there were no methods by which patriotism could be instilled. But when once a few enthusiasts were aroused on the subject, ways were found, by means of songs, recitations, the daily raising and saluting of the flag, military drills, and in many other such ways, taking little time, yet doing a vast amount of good; and not only was patriotism taught in the abstract, but a genuine love of country instilled in the hearts of the children. We would not today be told that the teaching of patriotism was a fad; the waving of the flag over eyery school house would be a sufficient answer. But there are other

During our recent war with Spain, the Grand Army had recruiting stations in all the larger cities, and from personal knowledge of the New York stations I can say that a vast majority of the young recruits were foreign born or children of foreign born parents, who had imbibed a love of country in the public schools, and who flocked to the defense of their new found country in its time of danger. I could have blushed at the small percentage of my native countrymen who offered their lives for their country, even though the event proved that the enlistments were not necessary; but I was more than com-pensated when I reflected that this eautiful love of country exhibited by these young men was the result of patriotic teaching which I labored so hard to introduce into the New York schools years before.

And if we can thus teach love of country, why not love of the land itself, of its productiveness, of its ability to give us a good living and a provision for If agricultural teaching can do nothing else it will at least instill a love for the land, and any effort expended for it will not be in vain. This subjects instructive and interesting, they pended for it will not be in vain. This teaching could be started in the very first year of school life by means of nature studies, plant life, and natural

At the proper time more practical work could be introduced, perhaps not until the grammar grades, or in the erly entitled. secondary or high schools; in the city In this way schools manual training, as it is called, is started early and kept up until the end of the grammar grades. In our country schools this manual training with perhaps a little more time devoted to it, could be wholly given over to agricultural training; actual experiment work could be taken up, planting done, and some attention paid to the matters of soil, fertilizers, and choice of crops All of this would equip the boys for farm work and enable them to leave school with a fairly good working knowledge of their trade or profession of farming. The girls would have their time given over to domestic industries. sewing, cooking, and other such subjects, just as they are taught in the city schools, with lessons in tree and flower culture, gardening, fruit culture, and kindred subjects. This would be accomplishing what I consider the second purpose of agricultural education: that is, practical training.

The children should then be sent to the regular agricultural schools or colleges or experiment stations, in order that the special or scientific agricultural education might be completed. Here the entire time should be given up to farm training and domestic culture or home making. The boys should receive instruction on the various kinds of farming, with all the knowledge now imparted in these institutions, even to farm engineering, the location of fields, drains, houses and barns, the building of fences, and all the outward or material side of the profession.

The exact course of studies, from the first grade to the last moment in college or experiment station, is a matter for the professional educators to settle; and to them also we must leave the matters of methods, school room helps, text books, lecture courses, and every other educational means. What we must insist upon now is that the system of education shall begin at the earliest possible moment, and continue so long as possible; and that it shall inculcate a love for the country, give a practical knowledge of farming, and show how the farm can he to workedon business and economic lines as to produce the maximum of cost and labor. Whatever may be the means, it is the end that we must insist upon for the love of our farms and the salvation of country life.

The real serious objection to such a complete and thorough agricultural educational system, is the fact that the country communities cannot afford the expense of it; as the farms and the country districts are losing their population, their revenues decrease correspondingly They now find it difficult to pay for even limited education possible in the country schools; the teachers are mere beginners, and are often in need of education themselves, rather than able to impart it; and such a scheme of educa-tion as I have outlined may be called a dream, but one that it is possible to

Because of this stringency of finance in country districts, we realize all the

which is to start government funds along these lines; the various communities would receive aid from the general treasury, in co-operation with state and county appropriations. There are many other plans mooted for the solving of this financial problem, and some are now being successfully tried. Prof. Hays, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, is an enthusiastic advocate of the consolidate rural school system, now being widely used in Ohio, Indiana, Florida, and other states. It has so many advantages that I quote a brief description of it from a recent letter of his to me:

"By consolidating the one-room district schools in a territory five miles square, more or less, there can be a school of 120 to 150 pupils, one fifth of whom are in a brief high school course of, say, two years. In this high school course considerable agriculture and home economics can be successfully introduced and the graduates of these schools can take the last two high school years in city high schools, in preparatory courses in our smaller colleges, in academies, and, best of all, in large agricultural high schools, such as the two in Minn-esota, one in Nebraska, eleven in Georgia, nine in Alabama, and the six and lour provided for respectively in Oklahoma and Arkansas. Agriculture can also be placed in the village schools, often con-solidating the nearby rural schools by hauling in by team."

This consolidated rural school system would also solve the question of teachers; it would enable the consolidate district to pay better compensation to a smaller number of teachers, who would be induced by the pay to take up the work in the country. The agricultural colleges and normal schools could easily produce the teachers, and the compen sation would do the rest. We would thus secure good efficient schools, and a large part of the problem would be

The Maryland State Grange is much interested in this matter, and its Committee on Education, of which the Char-man is Prof. Dick J. Crosby, Specialist in Agricultural Education of the Department of Agriculture in Washingthn, lately presented a very able report to the State Commission on Education. This report makes a number of recommendations for the revising of the state laws, and provides for a large extension of agricultural teaching in all schools, ele mentary and secondary; it also covers the matter of text books, and recommends the endorsement of the pending Davis bill in Congress. This report was adopted by the Grange and will undoubtedly be included in the report of the Education Commission to the Gov-ernor. The efforts of the Grange should be ably seconded, and in this way active encouragement given to the establishment of agricultural education in the rural schools of the state.

Members of the various granges, and farmers clubs by systematically visiting the various schools in their respective neighborhoods, say once a week, and talking to the pupils for ten or fifteen minutes, could do much to help on this good work. During every Friday morning of the term thirty minutes could be set aside for special exercises, and the subjects of farming and country life be treated intelligently by the teacher, members of the local school board, grangers, and others who might be invited. Recitations and essays bearing on these themes should be on the programme, by should be added to the list for examination by the school authorities, preparatory to granting licenses to teach. Competent lecturers could be secured for the teachers institutes, and thus give Agriculture the position to which it is prop

In this way much good could be accomplished, to the benefit of the country, and the prosperity of the nation.

WINDOW LIBRARY.

A Hall Bedroom Fitted Up as a Cozy Study.

A bachelor maid who is fond of books has fitted up a very satisfactory little library in her hall bedroom. She lives in a wide, old fashioned boarding house, and the one window in the bedroom, which faces southwest, has a very deep recess and is curtained by a dark buff shade. She had three stout boards cut to fit this window and covered them with inexpensive chintz in a bright but serviceable pattern. One board was laid upon the floor in the window recess, and the other two were fastened on screw held brackets at the proper height to make the second shelf and the top of the window bookcase. A rod running across the recess directly under the uppermost board held a curtain-suspended on upholstery rings-of the same chintz as that covering the boards. This curtain hid the books from dust and from the gaze of any one entering the rooms. The two deep shelves accommodated the small library, including the reference books of the bachelor maid. On top of the improvised bookcase were set a lap writing pad, box of paper, inkstand, pen tray, stamp box and a small glass jar holding pens, pencils and erasing knife. Against the side of the window frame was fastened with small brass headed nails one of the spiral card and letter racks made of silver wire, procurable for about 10 cents. The rack was trimmed with bows to match the chintz, and, with a small pocket dictionary and morocco covered address book hanging from its lowest ring by baby ribbon of the same shade, it was not only useful, but ornamental. On the opposite side of the window recess an artistic advertising calendar was suspended.

The buff window shade was supplemented by a bonne femme curtain of silkateen harmonizing with the color scheme of the shelves and chintz and insuring privacy when the bachelor maid was making use of her window library.

of a little exercise no better game than servations of every extraordinarily this can be chosen. When the chairs large meteor coming within their range are placed in order round the room the first player commences by saying, "My master bids you do as I do," at the same time working away with the right hand as if hammering at his knees. The second player then asks, "What does he bid moldo?" The second player, working in the same manner, must turn to his lefthanded neighbor and carry on the same conversation, and so on until every one is working away with the right hand.

The second time of going round the order is to work with two, then both hands must work; then with three. when both hands and one leg must work; then with four, when both hands and both legs must work; lastly, with five, when both legs, both arms and the head must be kept going. Should any of the players fail in keeping in constant motion a forfeit may be claimed.

Jealousy Among Monkeys.

Jealous monkeys can be very cruel indeed. On a ship returning from a tour in tropical lands a certain monkey became a great friend of the stewardess. One day a timid little monkey ventured close enough to receive some food from the cook's hand. This trifling attention enraged the first monkey, which coaxed the little thing to its side, and then, before the stewardess knew what was contemplated, the jealous monkey had grasped the other by the neck and thrown it overboard Of another monkey the same person tells that while the cook was absent from the kitchen for a short while the monkey slipped a kitten, of which it had long been jealous, into the soup

Rule For "ei" and "ie."

There have been times, no doubt when many of the boys and girls have been puzzled about the proper use o ei and ie in such words as receive and believe, which have the long e sound nor need they feel ashamed to ac knowledge it, for many "grownups" confess to the same weakness. There is a very simple rule, however, easily borne in mind, that will help you for ever to overcome this doubt. Foolscap Paper.

Doubtless many boys and girls who have had occasion to write upon fools cap at school have wondered why this quality of paper is thus called. The watermark gives the explanation, and a watermark, as every one knows, is the maker's trademark visible in the paper when a sheet is held up to the light. The watermark of foolscap is supposed to be a figure of Britannia supporting a cap of liberty on a pole The resemblance of the cap of liberty to a dunce's cap led to the common use of the name which the brand of paper now bears.-Chicago News.

Fishes of the Sea.

The players sit in a circle, except one, who represents the sea. Each player takes the name of a fish. The sea walks slowly outside the ring, calling her companions, one by one, by their fish names. Each one, on hear ing her name called, rises and follows the sea. When all have thus left their seats the sea begins to run about, exclaiming, "The sea is troubled, the sea is troubled," then suddenly seats her self. The others follow her example as quickly as possible, and the one left without a seat becomes the sea.

SHIPS AND METEORS.

A Possible Solution of Mysterious Disappearances at Sea.

Scientists abroad are urging captains of the world's merchant marine and For all those children who are fond sailors in general to make exact ofof vision and record what they may observe.

There is no doubt, the men of science point out, that meteors, to a far greater extent than we until now have realized, are responsible for those incomprehensible disappearances of ships in calm weather and smooth sea. We know that meteors are more frequent at certain times of the year than at others. In all probability also certain regions of the oceans are more open to meteors than are other tracts.

Conspicuous among the more recent meetings of ships and meteors is that of the English steamer Cambrian. On the way from London to Boston the ship, in the forty-second degree of north latitude, on the 16th of August last, only by a few feet escaped destruction by a meteor as huge as a four story house, says the Chicago Tribune. The meteor kell into the sea not over eighty feet away, and in spite of its 6,000 tons capacity the ship was lifted many feet high in the air by the agitated waters. The terror stricken crew came out of it unharmed, how-

The English sail ship Eclipse was not so lucky about half a year ago. In the Pacific ocean, the vessel steering for the Hawaiian Islands, an immense meteor struck and crushed the foremast and the bow part of the ship. The crew entered into a desperate but futile contest with the water streaming into the hold, but had to abandon the ship and take to the boats. After two weeks of terrible suffering they reached one of the Hawaiian Islands, 900 sea miles from the scene of the disaster. Several men died of starvation on the water.

A Norwegian newspaper reports an accident which shows that ships on inland lakes are no safer than are ocean travelers.

The steamer was in the middle of Lake Theiemarken and the time about midnight. As the meteor came from behind, the captain and the pilot on the bridge observed nothing before they were enveloped in the most dazzling white light. Almost in the same moment they heard a crash like that of a gigantic explosion. The sound was so loud, piercing and nerve racking that the strongest thunderclap in their recollection was nothing in comparison.

When the dense clouds of steam | 21-3-9-1y from the water, made boiling, scattered it was detected that the meteor had struck the smokestack of the ship and cut off two feet of it at the top. The foremast was struck and cut off in the middle. With the same ease the redhot meteor had melted and burned its way through smokestack and mast.-New York World.

Florida's Seventy Foot Bainboo. Possibly the tallest bamboo in America grows in Arcadia, Fla., and is about seventy feet high. The clump has a spread of fifty feet, and the diameter at the ground is twelve feet. The specimen is only eight years old. This is the common bamboo of India, probably brought to south Florida from the West Indies. In Jamaica it has become naturalized and is popularly supposed to be indigenous. This bamboo makes an astonishing growth during our rainy season, the canes often attaining their full height in six weeks, after which they begin to put on leaves. The canes are from four to five inches in diameter at their base. Unfortunately this species cannot stand low temperatures, and the specimen in Arcadia has frequently been damaged by cold. - Garden Magazine.

Worthy of a Place In History. All St. Petersburg, except the police authorities, is enjoying a good laugh. The objects of their mirth are the daring thieves who added an unrehearsed item to the proceedings when the czar inaugurated the monument to Alexander III. Immediately after the ceremony, while over a thousand policemen were keeping the streets clear, a number of workmen, with twenty carts, came along and rolled up and took away 4,000 yards of carpet belonging to the czar. Later on, when inquiries were made, it turned out that the workmen were bogus and that they had got clear away with their booty. A magnificent coup of this kind is worthy of a place in history .- Modern Society.

Animals "Plumb Locoed."

If one were to ask a Western stockman what, in his opinion, was the greatest obstacle to success in his business he would unhesitatingly answer "loco," and would go on to tell of his own experiences, or those of his friends, in which not only had there been serious losses, but even bankruptcy. Over and over again have men gone out of business because of these weeds, considering themselves lucky if they could manage to sell out to some "tenderfoot" before the hour of total loss had arrived.

In a single season, in some districts, as many as 50 to 75 per. cent. of the horses have died, and many of those that survive are worse than useless. Cattle become emaciated, acquire a solitary habit, and soon leave their bones to be bleached by the brilliant sun of the plains. It is a pitiable sight to see one of these sick steers standing alone with lowered head and staring eyes, the picture of dejection, remaining almost motionless hour after hour and even day after day, without even ambition enough to go to water. Eventually it falls to rise no more, expiring after a few feeble kicks. If one of these steers is approached it may not move until one is close to it, when, instead of attempting to run away, it may charge upon man or horse with lowered and shaking head. After two or three lunges it may be overcome with weakness and fall, perhaps not to rise again.

Horses are still more erratic in their movements. When suddenly startled they rear, the legs flying out in an aimless way as though they were hung on universal joints and all the possibilities of movement were being exercised at one time. Frequently the animal will fall over backward; if it is strong enough to rise again it may walk off with a peculiar stilted motion, "walking high," as the term is among the stockmen. In going over a slight obstruction it may leap high in the air, and in going through a door, if it will go through the door at all, it is apt to crouch as though it feared the door were not high enough. If driven, the horse may occasionally shy violently; it cannot be backed or led and, when started forward, has a tendency to continue in a straight line at the same gait until it meets with some stacle. The cowboy says he is "plumb locoed." using the Spanish word meaning crazy, and perhaps no better term could be used. Sheep, too, fall victims to the same disease, although their actions are not spectacular. It is impossible to tell how heavy are the annual losses from this cause, but the figure expressing them must be not thousands, but hundreds of thousands of dollars .-From "Checking the Ravages of American Review of Reviews for August.

Damage by Woodpeckers.

Considerable damage is being done to telephone, telegraph and electric light poles by members of the woodpecker family. These birds originally built their homes in the dead or dying trunks best known to themselves, have come to the conclusion that the peeled pole offers better conditions for a home.

They have become so ravenous of late that their depredations are attracting considerable attention among those who are compelled to use quantities of wooden poles. Their activities spread over a wide portion of the United States, notably in the South, Southwest and Central West. Cedar poles seem to be the ones prost frequently attacked. The birds bore into them at any height from the ground, and the boles which they make are often two or three inches in diameter and four or five inches deep. Such an amount of wood drilled from a stick of timber which is carrying a load of wires naturally weakens the strength of the line.

It would, of course, not be a difficult matter to exterminate these birds. However, this is not desirable, as they are among the most beneficial forms of bird life native to this country, because they destroy large numbers of insects which seriously damage forest and food crops. It seems, therefore, that methods should be undertaken to compel the birds to rerather than to exterminate them.

Frequent inquiries have been made by the Forest Service in this connection, but the only information to date which the Government has been able to obtain is that on a causual inspection of treated and untreated pole lines in Louisiana. In that region it was found that poles which had been impregnated with creosote oil were not attacked by the birds, take. Sold by all dealers.

whereas untreated poles under the same conditions were very severely injured.

Whether or not creosote will prevent such attack is not definitely known, but the Service is investigating this problem, and should this oil prove a preventative, it will fulfil a two-fold purpose. It will protect the poles from decay and destruction from animal life. In southern Indiana, some members of a traction company thought that they could prevent further destruction of their poles by filling the holes in the wood with stones. The birds, however, simply drilled around the stones and made the conditions much worse. This apparently does not seem to be a means of preventing their depredations.

Why Women Do Not Marry.

Leaving entirely out of the question the substantial improvements demanded by the suffragists, and those ill-balanced children of their old age called suffragists, there are certain more intimate disadvantages pertaining to the immemorial status of woman, which, unconsciously or otherwise, influence the thousands of girls that deliberately enter upon the independent life before man shall have a chance to marry, desert, the woman never lived who was born without the instinct for romantic love, and its less romantic sequels, marriage and maternity, says Gertrude in The Delineator for August. Being the only hope of the race until science learns to manufacture estimable Frankensteins, prone to the disease of love as to the microbous afflictions of childhood; but the sharpened intellects of the modern female teach her to observe not only that indulgence in the primitive blessings is often productive of a tame happiness at best, but that it is mere chance if she does not waste several years of her active wouth waiting for some man to exert his inalienable right to woo and propose.

A man may trample down barriers, make opportunities, persist, overwhelm, but a woman, with double the fascination and intelligence, must either stoop to contemptible scheming or proudly bide her time, as likely as not to miss her one chance of happiness because circumstances do not give her the opportunity to reveal herself to the kindred spirit.

It she can not pursue a man as a man pursues a woman when he wants her; she has not the supreme attractions which bring a man to a woman's feet with a flash of the eye, she can at least avoid the mean subterfuges of the busband-hunters, and lead a life in which man as a love-factor is practically eliminated. She can also enjoy much the same privileges as men, until, perhaps who knows?-one day she may meet in this larger, fuller life a congenial, many-sided creature who wants something more than a reproduction of his grandmother.

New Paving Material.

A recent French invention in paving consists of embedding in concrete fine the contents drop out. or limbs of trees, but for some reason iron shavings, or iron excelsior. The metalic shavings ordinarily come in and sewed it to the bottom. You see I sheets or masses, which can be broken apart with difficulty owing to the intertwining of the filaments and which are somewhat elastic.

In constructing paving blocks a mould is filled with these iron shavings and the interstices filled with cement grout sutficiently fluid to penetrate the entire pounding a separate Conditioner for each kind of animal success is assured, mass. The blocks thus formed are said to possess great strength and resistance to abrasion and also (what seems less guarantee by S. C. Reaver, Taneytown, and Geo. W. Yeiser, Union Mills. credible) elasticity under blows or jar

According to Cement Age tests made of such blocks are said to have shown a resistance to compression of about 150,-000 pounds a square inch and a tensile strength four times that of neat cement. One advantage claimed for this paving is that joints may be almost eliminated, thus doing away with the points where greatest destruction generally occurs. Nothing is said of the opinion which would probably be entertained of this pavement by a contractor who might be required to cut a trench through it. The cost of construction is said to be the same as that of ordinary macadam, is served with pepper and salt, but this with him; forgiving it sets you above vert to their former habit of boring but this would depend largely upon the custom has never become popular with cost of iron shavings.

For Housekeepers to Try.

If you want to put up beets for winter use try this way. Cook and slice the beets, as if preparing them for the table and then put them in a stone jar. Have ready a solution of sugar, water and cider vinegar, in the proportion of one teacupful of sugar, two of water and one of vinegar thoroughly mixed and pour enough of this over the beets to cover them well, then cover the jar closely and keep in a cool, dark place. Try canning green beans in this way. Cook until they are tender, adding enough salt to season them well, then put in glass jars and seal the same as if canning fruit.

If lard has become a little strong, it can be freshened considerably by heating the lard and slicing in three or four Irish potatoes and cooking until the slices are well browned.

Powdered borax is a valuable aid to the housekeeper, and borax is one of the most indispensable articles in household use and is one of the least expensive, and it is especially useful in the laundry and kitchen. By allowing a little of the powder to boil in the coffee or teapot twice a week for 15 minutes they will be purified and sweetened, and a little used in the water for rinsing the dishes after washing them will make them shining clean, and silver can be kept bright and shining by washing in hot water in which a tablespoonful of the powder is dissolved. Table napkins and tray cloths have just the right degree of stiffness when they are rinsed through borax water instead of starch water, and it gives them just the right neglect or bore them. It is possible that gloss, and a little in the wash water softens it and whitens the fabric. If the dish washer will allow her stove to cool off every morning while she is attending to the dishes, and will wipe it off with a. cloth wrung out of the soapy water just used, she will not have to polish it so often, and bits of cloth used to wipe all every sort of woman, when young, is as grease spots from the stove and floor

The Button Bag.

"I wouldn't be without it!" said a woman as she lifted a gray cretonne bag from a hook by her bureau; opened it out on the bed, and without fishing among countless buttons, easily found the special button needed for her husband's coat.

"This bag was given to me years ago and has been the greatest convenience. You see the way the cord is put in allows me to open it flat enough to get at the buttons readily yet without spilling.

"Tell you the dimensions? Certainly. Cut a circle of cretonne or whatever material you like-14 inches in diameter and line it with a plain colored silk or cotton goods. If you wish, a layer of cotton batting can be slipped between, but this is not necessary if the materials

"Sew around the inner edge of the circle small brass rings, about an inch and a half apart. Through these rings run heavy covered cord the same color as the lining. This can be bought, but if the right shade cannot be found, it can easily be made by sewing bias strips of the lining turning it and stuffing with a thick white cord.

"The cord is cut in two pieces, 113 inches long, run in opposite directions. This draws easily and when open makes a circle 11 or 12 inches in diameter, thus giving the bag a broad opening but preventing the sides from falling so flat that

"I made that small flat pincushion keep it stuck full of needles threaded in different colored silks and cottons to be ready for use at a minute's notice."

Ways of Serving Melons.

There is no more pleasing addition to the Summer dietary than the melon, for although ranked low in the fruit scald. owing to its lack of nutritive value, it more than atones for this by its rare refreshing qualities, containing, as it does, ninety-five per cent of water. While the majority of tastes prefer the melon au naturel, some like the addition of a little salt or powered sugar, so it is customary to serve both with it. On the Continent this fruit follows the soup at dinner, and us. Some epicures prefer a little strained honey poured into the melon just before serving, thereby contending that its luscious flavor is greatly improved.

Care should be exercised in the selection of melons. Blisters or scales on the rind indicate that the fruit is in an unripe condition. If the muskmelon is without water and sweetened, it is pleasant to odor it is not good. When ripe it is sweet McKinney's, Drug Store, Taneytown, NORVALP. SHOEMAKER DAN'LJ. ### Disposing of Steamship Ashes.

The newest liners now dispose of their ashes by forcing them through the bottom of the hull by means of compressed rich salad dressing.-The Delineator for air. The old method of hoisting them and dumping them overboard was disagreeable to the passengers, and an attempted improvement by which they were mixed with water and pumped overboard was equally so when the wind was in the wrong quarter.

In the new "expeller" a hopper receives the ashes and clinkers and delivers them into a crusher, which breaks up the large pieces. Below this is a drum revolving in a watertight casing and open as it turns first to the crusher chamber and then to the discharge pipe below. In order to counteract the upward pressure of the water compressed air at about seventy pounds to the square inch is delivered to the interior of the ash filled drum just before its opening comes opposite that in the discharge pipe. Thus the ashes are expelled with such force that they are swept clear of the bottom of the vessel. This expeller will get rid of the ashes and clinkers from forty-eight furnaces under forced draught, amounting to eight or ten tons an hour. - Exchange.

Ripples-A Mother Goose Game.

Let the party be seated in a circle and any one may begin by announcing the title of some well known verse "Mother Goose" or anything else, so that it is likely to be familiar to every one in the company. Then the next player on the left says the first word of the verse and the next the second and so on, running quickly around and around the circle until the quotation is finished. Then the next player may announce another selection, to be repeated in the same way. The success and fun of the performance lie in the rapidity with which the words follow each other. There should be no pause or hesitation, but the verse should go on as quickly and smoothly as if one person were reading the whole sentence. The effect is very odd as the verse goes rippling around

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson IX. - Third Quarter, For Aug. 29, 1909.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, I Cor. xiii, 1-13. Cor. xiii, 13-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.] We have been reading in the Acts of people in many places who, having heard of the living and true God and of His Son Jesus Christ our Lord, who gave Himself for our sins that He might purify unto Himself a peculiar people zealous of good works, a people to represent Him here a little while and then share His kingdom and glory forever, truly received Him and were willing to endure anything for His sake if only they could win others to Him. Paul tells us in this epistle that he would endure anything rather than hinder the gospel of Christ and that his aim was by all means to save some (chapter ix, 12, 22). Believers are sanctified in Christ, Jesus, called saints, called unto the fellowship of Jesus Christ our Lord to be laborers together with God, blood bought temples of the Holy Spirit who worketh in each one as He pleases, dividing to each His gifts severally as He will (chapters i, 2, 9; iii, 9; vi, 19, 20; xii, 4-11). If we had the choice of gifts one might prefer wisdom, another knowledge, another faith, another gifts of healing, another tongues, etc., but here Paul says by the Spirit that, while it is well to covet the best gifts, there is a more excellent way, the way of love, and that is our lesson today. To know and believe the love which God hath to us and to live in that love as manifested in Jesus Christ should constrain us to such yieldedness and restful confidence in Him that His choice for us as to place or manner of service will be always most satisfactory to us. Esther might have asked and received many things from the king's chamberlain when her turn came to appear before the king; but, being in herself. fair of form and good of countenance, she asked nothing but what the keeper appointed (Est. ii, 7, margin, 15). our aim is to please our King and be beautiful to Him we will be quite satisfied with all His appointments for us.

Strangely, we have come to a time when the matter of speaking in tongues is very much on some minds, but a study of chapter xiv teaches us that it is better to utter words easy to be understood, even five such words, than ten thousand words which no one can understand (xiv, 9, 19). No name of God or of Christ is found in our lesson chapter; but, as one has said, a photograph of a dear friend does not require the friend's name on it to enable us to recognize it, and we have here a most beautiful word picture of the Lord Jesus, for in no one else was such love ever seen. It seems unnecessary to say that the word "charity" should be "love" as it is in the revised version, and it is evidently the love of John iii, 16; I John iii, 16; iv, 9-11.

The love of God is the greatest thing love of mortals is but the faintest re flection of the infinite love of God The first three verses of our lesson are most startling when we consider how much eloquence and oratory and knowledge and a kind of faith and giving of money and self sacrifice may all go for nothing-just wood, hay and stubble to be burned. When we think of the speaking and singing that abound simply for the money that is in them, and the many other things sim-Ply to obtain praise from men or from a sense of duty, and that nothing counts in God's sight that is not from love to Him, is it not all most heart searching? Then see in verses 4 to 7 the quality of this love. It is kind even to those who make it suffer, never jealous or envious or self assertive or proud, never seeks anything for itself, is never provoked, never thinks or speaks evil of any one, rejoices only in what is true and goes on bearing, believing, hoping and being all things for love's sake. It was truly never so seen but in Christ Himself, and yet He desires to reproduce that life in His redeemed ones (II Cor. iv, 10, 11; Gal. ii, 20) and will if we are only willing to die to city. self and let Him rule in our hearts. It means such a handing over of ourselves to Him that we have no say in anything any more, but that we just live in that good and acceptable and perfect will of God. This age in which we now live, with its teaching and tongues and knowledge, shall give place to a better age in which love shall be more fully seen on earth. There is nothing perfect now on our part. Everything is only in part, as far as our knowledge of God and manifestation of the life of Jesus are concerned, but then we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is. Even our bodies shall be like His, immor(al, incorruptible (xv, 50-53; Phil. iii, 20, 21). While we shall not be truly of age and enjoy eternal life fully till the resurrection of our bodies, for which even such as Abraham and others still wait (Heb. xi, 39, 40), we should live more than we do in the power of the age to come and not talk and act so much like babes who live only on milk (chapter iii, 1-4). God's child in this world is not what he will be, has not what he will have and sees not what he will see, but while here may receive fully and in childlike simplicity the revelation of God, exercising simple faith in what God says.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 29, 1909.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Home missions; our cosmopolitan population.—Luke xiii, 22-30.

One of the great factors in home mission work today is that of the population of our great cities, many of whom have no abiding place, but wander about from place to place, and hundreds of thousands of whom are Memory Verse, 8-Golden Text, 1 strangers from strange lands and consequently unfamiliar with our national customs and institutions and religion. The supreme court of the United States has decided that Christianity is our national religion, yet they know little or nothing about it, and many of them care less. Yet there need be no despair and no fear concerning the large number of immigrants in our large cities. Many classes of them are of course undesirable-illiterate, anarchistic and irreligious. But the public schools will take care of the illiteracy. In the section of our cities where these foreigners segregate the children attend the public schools. They are taught, of course, in the English language, and it is remarkable what progress they make both in education and in patterning after American customs and habits. Take the Italians, whom so many people dread. In Philadelphia one section of the city contains 90,000 Italians. The changes made in the young people and children in a few years must be seen to be fully comprehended. They are a handsome race, with their dark skin and intensely black eyes, and when properly cleaned and nicely dressed they are a class of young people of whom any nation might be proud. But they are apt to learn, and in two or three generations, through intermarrying, which is sure to increase, as it has already begun, we shall not be able to recognize them as immigrants from southern Italy. Many of the boys and girls and young men and women are employed in large department stores and in various kinds of factories. Their fathers may be "dagos" and their mothers keepers of small shops, but the children will never be. Education in the public schools and association with American children will change all this in one gener-

> The undesirable populations if they attempt or do wrong will be cared for by the police departments of our great But, after all, they are not, in general, classes of criminals. Many of them must have their beer and other drinks, but they usually get them Saturday nights and take them to their homes, where they have what they call "a good time." In drink they may be quarrelsome, but only among themselves. Few Americans if they attend to their own business will be disturbed by foreigners. Though they may look rough, usually as a result of the kind of work they do, they are remarkably inoffensive. They respect womanhood. They work steadily at the hardest kind of work-build our railroads, mine our coal and other ores. The Italians are exceedingly jealous and hesitate not a minute to kill any one who interferes with their love affairs or casts any reflection upon their daughters or wives. There is no menace to the nation even in the millions of foreigners within our boundaries. They will soon learn to love Old Glory and shout as the rest of us, though we, too, are of foreign descent unless we are Indiaus.

When it comes to their religion the church must take care of that. Christ preached in the streets of towns and cities, and we must do likewise. They will not come to us, so we must go to them, and that means to begin in the streets or in temporary places amid them. Street preaching is more popular today. We are all getting used to it, and it may have been providentially arranged for such a time as this and such a work. Our Italian mission was established in a large city of our land by street preaching. Then followed a tent, next a tabernacle of iron, and today they worship in a fine stone church building capable of seating 1,700 people. A daily kindergarten is provided for and carried on. The church has fully 500 active members and a great following. Another work was begun among foreigners by the formation of a Sunday class for them. Today a mission has been organized, and preparations are being made for the erection of a church building. "All things are possible with God." Get in religious touch with the foreigners about you, whether they be one or two families in a small hamlet or hundreds of thousands in a large

OVERCOMING HER PREJUDICE.

The Wooing of a Big Man and a Mite of a Woman.

By OLIVE ADAMS.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.] He had always declared that he would not marry a small woman. No diminutive creature of scanty stature could ever grace his home. She, on her part, had been quite sure that she disliked big men. No weighty giant, towering far above her, could ever capture and hold her heart. Yet fate threw them together, and neither one felt comfortable. They seemed strangely antagonistic one to the other, and yet there was something in their innermost selves that was kin. He, busy day after day in his law office, found his thoughts and fancies continually, unaccountably, straying to the memory of her delicate head and yet more delicate fingers.

She, painting away, as always, wondered why the recollection of his big frame and strong featured face should haunt her. She, half indignant, tried to conquer the persistent recollection by working harder than ever.

He, in a way wiser, yielded to his strange fancies and paid her a studio call. Her greeting was cordial, but they were long silent.

At last he invited her to take a walk. The dusk was falling. The avenue gleamed with myriad lights, presenting an alluring vista. For nearly an hour they walked, she taking hasty steps to each of the long, swinging strides into which he had naturally and unconsciously fallen. By and by, unreasonably irritated, she came to a sudden

"There can't be much sympathy between our natures," she said sharply. They say that people who can't keep

AGAINST THE DARK WINDOW. step comfortably are out of tune somehow. We're not even walking in the same key."

"Let's try again," he laughed, with gay good bumor, "I'll accommodate my steps to yours politely, as I should have done long ago. See how nicely I can do it."

He minced along with determinati keeping time with her tripping steps. The effect was so ridiculous that she yielded to impulsive laughter. "No, no," she cried, still smiling,

'we won't try your plan any longer. Let's be natural and 'gang our ain gait' in peace."

"The truest friendships are built on that plan." he answered with meaning, but she was silent.

As for the man, he no longer desired to conquer the new, strange fancies. They had become too sweet. She was wondering why his quiet glance could cause her heart to dance.

But the walk was pleasant, and other walks followed. They spent one long, perfect autumn Sunday in the country, walking through the golden hours and fields together. Night found them a long way from the city. far too distant to walk home again, They waited at a little wayside station for the train that should bear them thither. Both were silent, wrapped in the dreamy, trancelike happiness that is too eloquent for speech. Presently, however, she broke the soft silence with her thrilling laugh.

"What is it, little comrade?" for so he had elected to call her.

"We haven't quarreled once today over keeping step," she said, still smiling. "I wonder what has come over us."

"Love," was his unexpected answer. But she shrank farther away in the sheltering darkness, and his heart felt a strange chill. The next moment the train rushed noisily down upon them, and in the crowded, uncomfortable day coach they occupied they were again silent. She sat so still beside him that he fancied she was asleep, and her head, on a level with his shoulder, leaned against the red plush seat back. Her pure, clear profile was outlined against the dark window. He watched her you. with the hungriness of suddenly recognized worship. He did not know that she, wide awake in all but outer seeing, gloried in his glance. She would not, could not, give up her profession for marriage, but still how good it would seem to rest in his love. And then suddenly there was a wild shriek from the engine, a jarring collision, a horrible, grinding stop and an utter desolation of blackness. knew that something awful had happened, that she was losing control of her senses, but this was all. When she opened her eyes the black sky, star studded, impenetrable, was above her. The man of whom had been her last conscious thought came between the sky and her puzzled gaze. Then she saw the long train, dim. shadow-like, uncertain, stretched out darkly before her. She knew that lights flashed about, voices cried, moans shook the silence. And then, with a sharp twinge of suffering, she knew that the wreck had caused her to be injured—that she could not rise. Perhaps—horrible thought!—her spine had been seriously disabled and she would never rise again.

"My darling!" said a voice softly, a voice she knew well, yet had never heard with this strange, wonderful intonation.

A wave of ineffable gladness met and conquered the rising tide of distress conquered the rising tide of distress and agony. Again she swooned. This time the hospital had been reached before she came to fore she came to.

For weeks she lay there helpless, facing the terrible uncertainty in regard to her future. There were times when it was feared that her days of activity were over. Through it all he was her her wavering hopes rested.

To the lonely woman with no living relative his tender, gentle companionship was sweet beyond expression. She was still determined-more than ever determined now that possible invalidism lay before her-never to marry, but she would not allow herself to realize how and where she was drifting. To have realized and acknowledged the truth would have meant his banishment, speedy and unrelenting, and she simply could not bring herself to face this new and pain filled life without his continual solacing presence. Fate, smiling, took the case in lame," Marcia told him joyously one day after long months of waiting. "But I shall be even smaller than ever, they tell me."

He, who had come outwardly scathless through the ordeal, smiled as he bent over her.

"Dear love," was his tense whisper, "you will be just as high as my heart."

It was a frail bride, pale, slender, leaning hard upon the arm of her husband lover, who stood at the altar a few weeks later-a bride who looked especially small and diminutive beside the big man who had just thankfully claimed her. And into the eyes of this bride, joyously happy in her complete surrender, crept a whimsical gleam as she realized this fact.

MacDowell's "Wild Rose."

In a biography of Edward MacDowell by Lawrence Gilman the writer quotes some of the famous musician's witticisms. On one occasion he had been told of a performance of his composition. "To a Wild Rose," played by a high school girl on a high school piano at a high school graduation festivity. "Well," MacDowell remarked. "I suppose she pulled it up by the

Some one sent him at about this time, relates Mr. Humiston, a program of an organ recital at which this same "Wild Rose" was to be played.

"He was not pleased with the idea, thinking doubtless of a style of performance which plays Schumann's Traumere, on the great organ diapasons. He remarked simply that it reminded him of a hippopotamus wearing a clover leaf in his mouth."

A member of one of his classes at Columbia, finding more unoccupied space on the page of his book after finishing the exercise, filled up the vacancy with rests. When his book was returned the page was covered with corrections-all except these bars of rests, which were inclosed in a red line and marked:

"This is the only correct passage in the exercise."

Grandmother's Two Fads. "My grandmother," said the man who was raised on the farm, "was a woman of great determination. One day she was showing grandfather and me how to seize hornets and smash in their skulls between the thumb and forefinger before they could sting-a little trick in which the old lady took great pride. She picked the yellow buzzer off the window shade; the usual faint crushing sound was heard, and the old lady smilingly held the dead body up for our approval. We showed proper admiration for the feat, but still regretfully preferred to slap the little flends with a board. Not till several days afterward did we notice the swollen finger and discover that the hornet, by some sort of devilish ingenuity, had managed to sting grandmother.

"She also used to cut up with a hoe all the snakes she could find and feed them to the chickens. Snake meat, especially milk snakes, gave the chicken a peculiarly fine flavor, she asserted. No one could contradict this theory, as the fine flavor was there every Thanksgiving day to prove it."-New York Sun.

Animals "Plumb Locoed."

If one were to ask a Western stockman what, in his opinion, was the greatest obstacle to success in his business he would unhesitatingly answer "loco," and would go on to tell of his own experiences, or those of his friends, in which not only had there been serious losses, but even bankruptcy. Over and over again have men gone out of business because of these weeds, considering themselves lucky if they could manage to sell out to some "tenderfoot" before the hour of total loss had arrived.

In a single season, in some districts, as many as 50 to 75 per. cent. of the horses have died, and many of those that survive are worse than useless. Cattle become emaciated, acquire a solitary habit, and soon leave their bones to be bleached by the brilliant sun of the plains. It is a pitiable sight to see one of these sick steers standing alone with lowered head and staring eyes, the picture of dejection, remaining almost motionless hour after hour and even day after day, without even ambition enough to go to water. Eventually it falls to rise no more, expiring after a few feeble kicks. If one of these steers is approached it may not move until one is close to it, when, instead of attempting to run away, it may charge upon man or horse with lowered and shaking head. After two or three lunges it may be overcome with weakness and fall, perhaps not to rise again.

Horses are still more erratic in their movements. When suddenly startled they rear, the legs flying out in an aimless way as though they were hung on universal joints and all the possibilities of movement were being exercised at one time. Frequently the animal will fall over backward; if it is strong enough to rise again it may walk off with a peculiar stilted motion, "walking high," as the term is among the stockmen. In going over a slight obstruction it may leap high in the air, and in going through a door, if it will go through the door at all, it is apt to crouch as though it feared the door were not high enough. If driven, the horse may occasionally shy violently; it cannot be backed or led and, when started forward, has a tendency to continue in a straight line at the same gait until it meets with some stacle. The cowboy says he is "plumb locoed," using the Spanish word meaning crazy, and perhaps no better term could be used. Sheep, too, fall victims to the same disease, although their actions are not spectacular. It is impossible to tell how heavy are the annual losses from this cause, but the figure expressing them must be not thousands, but hundreds of thousands of dollars.-From "Checking the Ravages of 'Loco,' "by C. Dwight Marsh, in the out of bed, and when I did I could not American Review of Reviews for August.

Damage by Woodpeckers.

Considerable damage is being done to telephone, telegraph and electric light poles by members of the woodpecker family. These birds originally built their homes in the dead or dying trunks or limbs of trees, but for some reason best known to themselves, have come to the conclusion that the peeled pole offers better conditions for a home.

They have become so ravenous of late that their depredations are attracting considerable attention among those who are compelled to use quantities of wooden poles. Their activities spread over a wide portion of the United States, notably in the South, Southwest and Central West. Cedar poles seem to be the ones most frequently attacked. The birds bore into them at any height from the ground, and the boles which they make are often two or three inches in diameter and four or five inches deep. Such an amount of wood drilled from a stick of timber which is carrying a load of wires naturally weakens the strength of the line.

It would, of course, not be a difficult matter to exterminate these birds. However, this is not desirable, as they are among the most beneficial forms of bird life native to this country, because they destroy large numbers of insects which seriously damage forest and food crops. It seems, therefore, that methods should be undertaken to compel the birds to rerather than to exterminate them.

Frequent inquiries have been made by the Forest Service in this connection, but the only information to date which the Government has been able to obtain is that on a causual inspection of treated and untreated pole lines in Louisiana. In that region it was found that poles which had been impregnated with creosote oil were not attacked by the birds, take. Sold by all dealers.

whereas untreated poles under the same conditions were very severely injured.

Whether or not creosote will prevent such attack is not definitely known, but the Service is investigating this problem, and should this oil prove a preventative, it will fulfil a two-fold purpose. It will protect the poles from decay and destruction from animal life. In southern Indiana, some members of a traction company thought that they could prevent further destruction of their poles by filling the holes in the wood with stones. The birds, however, simply drilled around the stones and made the conditions much worse. This apparently does not seem to be a means of preventing their depredations.

Why Women Do Not Marry.

Leaving entirely out of the question the substantial improvements demanded by the suffragists, and those ill-balanced children of their old age called suffragists, there are certain more intimate disadvantages pertaining to the immemorial status of woman, which, unconsciously or otherwise, influence the thousands of girls that deliberately enter upon the independent life before man shall have a chance to marry, desert, neglect or bore them. It is possible that the woman never lived who was born without the instinct for romantic love, and its less romantic sequels, marriage and maternity, says Gertrude in The Deineator for August. Being the only hope of the race until science learns to manufacture estimable Frankensteins, every sort of woman, when young, is as prone to the disease of love as to the microbous afflictions of childhood; but the sharpened intellects of the modern female teach her to observe not only that indulgence in the primitive blessings is often productive of a tame happiness at best, but that it is mere chance if she does not waste several years of her active youth waiting for some man to exert his inalienable right to woo and propose. A man may trample down barriers, make opportunities, persist, overwhelm, but a woman, with double the fascination and intelligence, must either stoop to contemptible scheming or proudly bide her time, as likely as not to miss her one chance of happiness because circumstances do not give her the opportunity to reveal herself to the kindred spirit.

It she can not pursue a man as a man pursues a woman when he wants her; if she has not the supreme attractions which bring a man to a woman's feet with a flash of the eye, she can at least avoid the mean subterfuges of the busband-hunters, and lead a life in which man as a love-factor is practically eliminated. She can also enjoy much the same privileges as men, until, perhaps -who knows?-one day she may meet in this larger, fuller life a congenial, many-sided creature who wants something more than a reproduction of his grandmother.

For Housekeepers to Try.

If you want to put up beets for winter use try this way. Cook and slice the beets, as if preparing them for the table and then put them in a stone jar. Have ready a solution of sugar, water and cider vinegar, in the proportion of one teacupful of sugar, two of water and one of vinegar thoroughly mixed and pour enough of this over the beets to cover them well, then cover the jar closely and keep in a cool, dark place. Try canning green beans' in this way. Cook until they are tender, adding enough salt to season them well, then put in glass jars and seal the same as if canning fruit.

If lard has become a little strong, it can be freshened considerably by heating the lard and slicing in three or four Irish potatoes and cooking until the slices are well browned. Powdered borax is a valuable aid to the housekeeper, and borax is one of the most indispensable articles in household use and is one of the least expensive, and it is especially useful in the laundry and kitchen. By allowing a little of the powder to boil in the coffee or teapot twice a week for 15 minutes they will be purified and sweetened, and a little used in the water for rinsing the dishes after washing them will make them shining clean, and silver can be kept bright and shining by washing in hot water in which a tablespoonful of the powder is dissolved. Table napkins and tray cloths have just the right degree of stiffness when they are rinsed through borax water instead of starch water, and it gives them just the right gloss, and a little in the wash water softens it and whitens the fabric. If the dish washer will allow her stove to cool off every morning while she is attending to the dishes, and will wipe it off with a. cloth wrung out of the soapy water just used, she will not have to polish it so often, and bits of cloth used to wipe all grease spots from the stove and floor will save work.

The Button Bag.

"I wouldn't be without it!" said a woman as she lifted a gray cretonne bag from a hook by her bureau; opened it out on the bed, and without fishing among countless buttons, easily found the special button needed for her husband's coat.

"This bag was given to me years ago and has been the greatest convenience. You see the way the cord is put in allows me to open it flat enough to get at the buttons readily yet without spilling.

"Tell you the dimensions? Certainly. Cut a circle of cretonne or whatever material you like-14 inches in diameter and line it with a plain colored silk or cotton goods. If you wish, a layer of cotton batting can be slipped between, but this is not necessary if the materials are firm.

"Sew around the inner edge of the circle small brass rings, about an inch No matter how long you have suffered, and a half apart. Through these rings run heavy covered cord the same color as the lining. This can be bought, but if the right shade cannot be found, it can easily be made by sewing bias strips of the lining turning it and stuffing with a thick white cord.

"The cord is cut in two pieces, 111 inches long, run in opposite directions. This draws easily and when open makes a circle 11 or 12 inches in diameter, thus giving the bag a broad opening but pre-A recent French invention in paving venting the sides from falling so flat that

Ways of Serving Melons.

There is no more pleasing addition to the Summer dietary than the melon, for although ranked low in the fruit scald, owing to its lack of nutritive value, it more than atones for this by its rare refreshing qualities, containing, as it does, ninety-five per cent of water. While the majority of tastes prefer the melon au salt or powered sugar, so it is customary to serve both with it. On the Continent The cost of construction is said to be this fruit follows the soup at dinner, and is served with pepper and salt, but this us. Some epicures prefer a little strained honey poured into the melon just before serving, thereby contending that its luscious flavor is greatly improved.

The colors of watermelon are so rich and harmonious that it needs very little garnish to make it attractive. A few grape leaves arranged around it make it sufficiently decorative.

The muskmelon, if small, may be cut into halves; larger ones should be quartered. For luncheon, melons may be served on nasturtium or crisp lettuce leaves and, if desired, with small white and red radishes arranged around.

Disposing of Steamship Ashes.

The newest liners now dispose of their ashes by forcing them through the bottom of the hull by means of compressed air. The old method of hoisting them and dumping them overboard was disagreeable to the passengers, and an attempted improvement by which they were mixed with water and pumped overboard was equally so when the wind was in the wrong quarter.

In the new "expeller" a hopper receives the ashes and clinkers and delivers them into a crusher, which breaks up the large pieces. Below this is a drum revolving in a watertight casing and open as it turns first to the crusher chamber and then to the discharge pipe below. In order to counteract the upward pressure of the water compressed air at about seventy pounds to the square inch is delivered to the interior of the ash filled drum just before its opening comes opposite that in the discharge pipe.

Thus the ashes are expelled with such force that they are swept clear of the bottom of the vessel. This expeller will get rid of the ashes and clinkers from forty-eight furnaces under forced draught, amounting to eight or ten tons an hour. - Exchange

Punctured Precedents.

A colored porter the other day found a grip containing $2,750, et cetera, that had been carelessly left on a New York steamboat. Despite the fact that this was in Tammany Town, the find was turned in at headquarters. The story was already worth a headline. Upon examination, in addition to the legal tender, the grip was found to contain two diamond rings, a flask of whisky, a box of cigarettes, the New Testament, several pictures of actresses, two gold watches, a daguerreotype, a deck of playing cards, and some ultrashim-mery lingerie. Here were matters of sufficient interest to banish even the ennui in the office of a transportation

Upon the third day therefore a maiden, prim and demure, tripped into the office and identified the grip as her own. She knew exactly the "necessities" she had taken on her little excursion. She gave her name in three parts, stated that she was unmarried, and from Philadelphia. A state of coma is reported to have settled down over the office after the maiden had tipped the honest porter a crisp hundred-dollar William. When honest porters appear in New York; when the necessities of maidens are these; when such maidens come from Philadelphia; when a woman gives a liberal tip—indeed, the world is coming to a condition that is something new under the sun! After a great deal of effort and correspondence Robt. S. McKinney the popular druggist, has succeeded in getting the Dr. Howard Co., to make a special half-price introductory offer on the regular fifty cent size of their celebrated specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia.

This medicine is a recent discovery for the cure of all diseases of the stomach and bowels. It not only gives quick relief, but it makes permanent cures.

Dr. Howard's specific has been so remarkably successful in curing constipation, dyspepsia and all liver troubles, that Robt. S. McKinnev is willing to return the price paid in every case where Admission, 25c. it does not give relief.

So great is the demand for this specific that Robt. S. McKinney has been able to For the Benefit of New Windsor secure only a limited supply, and every one who is troubled with dyspepsia, constipation or liver trouble should call upon him at once.

A Trip on Conditions.

In speaking of "graft" which travellers on Pullmans are subject to at the hands of porters, that man who cut a two dollar bill in two and handed one part to his wife and the other to the negro servant, as his wife started on a long journey, came near solving the problem of getting the worth of the tip "If the negro is attentive and corteous throughout the trip," explained the man, "my wife will give him her half of the bill in Chicago. If he's slow way, but there's some satisfaction in knowing that the servant has a real incentive to good service.

Fairfield's Advice About Stock.

"We are in receipt of the new book "Fairfield Advice About Stock," just issued by the Fairfield Mfg. Co., whose advertisements of their separate preparations for farm animals appear regularly in this paper. It is claimed that this book is the most modern, scientific and common-sense treatise on the care of stock and poultry ever issued. Readers of the CARROLL RECORD may prove this assertion for themselves by obtaining a copy of the book free of charge from the merchant who handles the Fairfield Blood Tonics in this town. Read Fairfield's advertisements on other pages for the merchant's name.

E. H. ELfason, Gen. Manager.

The Owl In History.

The owl was in former times generally regarded as an omen of misfortune or death, but as the Egyptians represented Minerva under the form of an owl the Athenians, who were under the care of this goddess, looked upon the appearance of the owl as a favorable omen. It therefore formed upon the ancient coins referred to the symbol of Athens and her foreign possessions. The Chinese and the Tartars have also held the owl in high esteem. The first named used to wear owl's feathers in their caps, and some Tartar tribes still worship idols made

Single Piece Pillowshams. The long sham, whether made of handkerchiefs and put together with bands of insertion or of a single oplong piece of linen, are less trouble to keep in position on the pillows than the old fashioned shams in two pieces.
