The peach crop is poor in Washington county. Men that have had fine or-chards at one time claimed a half crop, but the drouth withered the peaches and nearly all fell off so that they will not get a fourth of a crop. Mexico's flood proves to be of the class of disasters that grow worse instead of better as fuller details come to light. It now appers that the dead number from 1200 to 1500, that more than 12,000 persons have been rendered homeless and that an area a quarter of a mile wide by three miles long has been devastated by the overflowing of the Santa Catarina Memories of Johnstown, Galveston and the periodical uprisings of the Mississippi ought to arouse Americans to substantial assistance.

Though every child who ever attended a public school in the United States has been taught that "Ten mills make one cent; ten cents make one dime; ten dimes make one dollar," etc.. and should, therefore know that the "penny" is unknown in our coinage system-nine out of ten persons refer to the cent as a penny; and Deputy United States Treaswrer Gibson says that nearly banker in the country, when writing for the new Lincoln head coins, referred to them as pennies. Mr. Gibson says law authorizes one-cent pieces, and not pennies." Our coin nomenclature is a curious affair. No one ever sees a mill; most persons refer to the cent as a penny; dimes are seldom mentioned; while eagles are heard of only in banks and the treasury department.

The Kansas City Times published an illustrated article a few days ago describing the glories of the Pratt County Fair. Pratt county is in the wheat belt of Kansas. It is prosperous, but not more prosperous than many other counties in the Jayhawker State. One of the most suggestive of the illustrations published by the Times depicted the farmers' automobile parade at the Pratt Fair-a douhle line of motorcars stretching far down the racetrack. There was one solitary horse in sight. "That lone horse," explained the Times, "belongs to a farmer who found that his wife and daughters had gone for a spin in the car when he got in from the field ready to go to the Kansas, it would appear, is almost in the horseless stage. It is easy to understand now why the automobile factories are doing such a tremendous business. The Western farmer finds the motorcar a necessity now, while only a few years ago he was denouncing the automobile as a luxury which only the very wealthy could enjoy.

A Case of Interest to Teachers.

The following interesting case from Carroll county, was before the State Board of Education, on Tuesday, according to the report of proceedings contained in the Baltimore Sun. The case is one of great importance to teachers, and may be made a test case to apply pretty generally to others, in which the State law and the action of the County Board seem to conflict on the salary question. The Sun says;

"A case of interest to county school teachers, which will be heard by the board on next Monday, is that Miss Hannah Shunk, principal of the New Windsor School, in Carroll county. She is a graduate of the State Normal School, where she received a first grade certificate as a school teacher. Under the State law her salary cannot be less than $450. Last year the school Board of Carroll county reduced her certificate to the second grands and find her certificate to the second grade and fixed her salary

She filed a protest against this decrease and it was said yesterday that the board would be compelled to sustain her as the school board has not the power to-reduce a teachers' certificate until five years after March 17, 1909, when a law was passed giving them this power after that time. It is believed by the mem-bers of the board that the School Commissioners did not consider this fiveyear clause when they reduced the cer-

Efforts have also been made by the School Commissioners to depose Miss Shunk. She and her friends claim that the trustees for the New Windsor School declined to recommend her dismissal and the Cmmissioners then did not appoint a board of trustees for the school. The board notified her that she had been the unique claim of having more relatives than any man living in his neighborhood. Mr. Foulk was married this Her appeal on this case is giving the board much worry.

Under the law the Commissioners should have named trustees for the school and then she should have been given 30 days notice of her dismissal, which was not done. It is expected that

Death of Mr. James C. Galt.

Mr. James C. Galt, another of our representative old citizens, died very suddenly, on Monday morning, from heart failure. Mr. Galt had been suffering from heart trouble for a number of years, but was not incapacitated from performing his customary duties, and was up and about, as usual, being stricken while walking through the garden to his barn, death immediately ensuing.

He was President of the Taneytown Savings Bank, a position which he had creditable filled for a number of years, and more remotely he had been engaged in the warebouse business with the late T. H. High is the hope my spirit fills. Each upward step helps me to rise-lifts me farther from the plain— E'en now I see the brighter skies; Nor do I scale and climb in vain.

Rising each day I clearer see, On rugged slopes, high pathways trod, On which to higher destiny There walked the fearless sons of God.

Like them, I, too, shall seek to climb,
In spite of luring things below;
Like them, I'll reach a higher clime;
Looking to God, I'll upward go;

From Europe in Four Days.

New York, September 2.-Three new ocean records fell to the Cunard liner Lusitania on her latest trip from Queenstown, which ended tonight. The Lusitania made the passage in 4 days, 11 hours and 42 minutes, thereby clipping 3 hours and 18 minutes from her fastest previous time; she maintained an average speed of 25.85 knots for the entire voyage, beating the Mauretania's record ot 25.84, and finally, by landing her passengers at the Cunard pier shortly be-fore 8 o'clock tonight, she became the first liner to dock on the fourth day out from Queenstown.

The Lusitania left Daunts Rock last Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. Her days' runs, measured from noon to noon, were as follows: Sunday, 61; Monday, Tuesday, 652; Wednesday, 651; Thursday, 647; and from noon today, 123. Total 2,784.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

A Very Interesting Letter on the Climate and General Conditions.

While still enjoying the trip to the mountains, I will write again to the RECORD but shall continue my impressions of Southern California, rather than attempt a description of the mountain trip. It seems that this would be a more appropriate time for a letter of this kind for those seeking a better climate, or an easier life and place to gain a live-lihood, usually emigrate during the month of October or November, and it is to the house seeker, rather than the pleasure-seeker, that these letters have been addressed.

To those seeking to regain their health, particularly by avoiding the rigor of the eastern winter and the heat of the summer, Southern California has much to offer. The climate, in my opinion, is its chief asset. Seldom will it get cold enough to freeze a skim of ice, or to frost the fruits, vegetables, etc., and seldom for more than one month in the year is there any rain of any consequence. The winters are especially pleasant at the foothills, or back from the ocean, but here the summers are quite

You hear California spoken of as the land of sunshine, and if you happen to spend a summer at a foothill town you will believe it. There is little dampness, or humidity, in the atmosphere, consequently you do not notice it so much when the thermometer reaches 108 degrees or even 116 or 120 degrees. If you say, "My, but isn't it hot?" You get, in effect, this reply, "Yes, this is unusually warm." Everything that is not so pleasant, is "unusual." Everyone notices that it is so excepting the residents. The easiest place for a newcomer to get settled and get a position is to strike one of these inland towns, or cities, about July 1st. All who can get the cash and the opportunity immigrate for three months about this time. You do not read of this in the pro-boom advertisements.

You can keep very pleasant at the beach towns during the summer. It is cool, a fog morning and evening during most of the summer, breaking the force of the sun's rays somewhat and a breeze from the ocean is not only pleasant but very soothing to people suffering with nervous troubles. At the foothill towns, where it is high and dry, and where the air seems to be charged with electricity, the effect on the nerves is decidedly the opposite. The writer, while never experiencing any nervous trouble, had considerable trouble at times in getting his muscles to relax sufficiently at night to get the needed rest. Again, in winter the beach air is often chilly and damp, hence the conditions for the ideal call for wintering at the inland cities, and summering at the beaches, a condition not unlike in the East. Many spend the summers in the mountains, but here the thunderstorms pre-vail and many easterners come this way to get away from the electrical storms. The beaches are most popular for those who can afford it and the demand more than doubles the house rents. The mosactive, "fussy" variety but are more sluggish and come upon you without warning you in any way, but they bite just the same. One flea can fill you full of bites in one night and unless you have had some experience in catching him, he is apt to do the same thing the second night. You are reasonably sure to get rid of him for a short time if you get a bath tub filled with water, and follow this with a change of clothing. They are afraid of water and are not bothersome in rainy weather. The flea is another California product not mentioned among the attractions. The fogs are another. As I said in the beginning, for persons not strong enough to stand the extremes of heat and cold, particularly the latter, of the East, Southern California will prove very attractive. Outside of this I believe there are just as many reasons why one should live in the east as here. Thousands of persons in good health come here simply to enjoy the climate and it always reminds me of the fellow who lies in bed until nine o'clock in the morning simply because it is pleasant, when he should be somewhere else. believe that a person in good health will be stronger and more healthy if he stays in the East. They die here, notwith-standing reports to the contrary, although one city I know of, which claims 16,000 inhabitants, supports but two undertakers with an average of between one and two funerals a week. There should be a revision, either in the population, or the insurance companies should revise their rates for California. There is another point at which most newcomers find little trouble in getting suited; that is, in the matter of religion. If there is any creed or "ism" not represented here, I have failed to note it. Congregationlists, Presbyterians, Methodist and Christian Scientists have the lead but other denominations have strong following. People attracted here are largely those not dependent in any way upon others and they like to enjoy perct freedom. These are easily here in religious as well as in other ways. There are no State Sunday laws and any restrictions placed upon you as to Sunday observance is done so by local com-munities, or cities You can continue your building or cultivating just as well on Sunday as during the week and most of them do so, particularly in the "wet" cities. Sunday is observed more after the Eastern methods in "dry" towns, which fact can be more fully appreciated in Maryland than in California.

A Waynesboro, Pa., paper, this week, heads an article, "Quincy man has Mumps in the West." That may be a good place to have them, but we have some doubts—the location is indefinite.

(To be Continued Next Week.)

The great question now is—Will the oyster crop be affected by the drought?

Entertainment at New Windsor College.

(For the RECORD.) 'The Bachelor Maids' Reunion,'' an entertainment in one scene, which was Dr. Cook, an American, plants given in the New Windsor College Hall, last Thursday and Friday evenings, for the benefit of the college campaign was a success in every particular. The net profits amounted to $150. The house was well filled at each performance, and the applause with which the performers and their various "stunts" were greeted clearly showed an appreciative audience responding to the merit of an excellent interpretation. As the rendition was about as near perfect as it is possible to give it, and many who were present thought it could not have been done better by professionals, it is, therefore impossible to mention all who merit recognition. It seems fitting, however, to call special attention to the excellent tone given the play by Mrs. Robert Hamill's impersonation of Penelope Armstrong, President of "The Bachelor Maids' Association." It was due largely to her efforts that the play was given a tone far above what plays of this character usually assume. Mrs. Hamill was supported by excellent talent, all of which supported by excellent talent, all of which following the "cue" she had given, lifted their parts above that of merely "amusing" to the richest and choicest of "humor."

Eliza Darling, through her pitiful appeals to Dr. Herman to be allowed to go into the "Formagraph" again, and Pansy Graves sorrowful tale of blasted hopes, elicited a true feeling of sympathy from elicited a true feeling of sympathy from the audience. Hannah Maria Foreman's lecture on "Woman's Rights" was of forensic style and clearly illustrated what we may expect to hear when women take the "stump." Mrs. Flannigan was a typical Irish landlady, impetuous, ambitious and yet condescending when called to order. Her outbursts of enthusiasm during the lecture on woman's rights portrayed a characteristic with which woman suffragists are to-day somewhat puzzled as to how to deal. Nothing seemed more natural than the excitement caused by Mrs. Flannigan chasing a mouse across the stage, and the tainting of Mebitable Goodheart after learning the cause of the excitement was the interest. On the second evening when Dr. Herman appeared with long hair and high hat, Mrs. Flannigan snatched his hat from his head and off with the hat came a wig revealing the Dr. Bald-head. This, of course, was an astonishing revelation to the "spinsters," but after the doctor had quickly restored his wig the incident was forgotten through interest in his methods of transforming spinsters into young girls. One by one, by use of a mystical powder and the aid of a machine called a "Forma-graph," the doctor transformed the old maids, or "spinsters" as they called themselves, into beautiful young girls or young women. The choice as to what they all wished to be differed very materially and it is quite probable that many in real life cherish wishes similar to those displayed in this impersonation.

to those displayed in this impersonation.

A great deal could be said about the interesting costumes, the splendid impersonation of individual characteristics but the great lesson of the play itself, which was so clearly brought out by the continuity of thought kept up through the excellent interpretation of the various characters, overshadowed the indivuality and made it a compact vision teaching one great truth i. e. that it is hope that leads one on to wish and to do.
"Hope springs eternal in the human breast,
Man never is, but, always, to be blest."

The Lincoln Memorial Road.

That the Lincoln Memorial Way from Washington to Gettysburg is not a dead project is shown in the annual report of the Gettysburg National Park Commis-An Associated Press dispatch from Washington gives the following summary of the report:

The number of visitors to the Gettysburg National Park during the fiscal year 1909 was greatly in excess of that of previous years. This is shown by the annual report of the park commission made public today.

John P. Nicholson, Charles A. Richardson and L. L. Lomax, the park commissioners, conclude their report by referring to the proposition to establish a national roadway from Washington, D. C., to the park, to be known as the 'Lincoln Memorial Way,' suggesting that a prospect of additional access and interest is thereby opened which will probably materialize in the future.-Gettysburg Times.

Three Billion Postal Cards.

Washington, Aug. 31.—The contract for supplying 3,487,000,000 postal cards to the Postoffice Department during the four years beginning January 1, 1910, was awarded today by Postmaster General Hitchcock to the Government Printing Office, which submitted the lowest bid, $934,717.95. There were two other bidders, one being the Oxford Paper Company, of Rumford Falls, Maine, which has furnished postal cards to the Government for the past four years. selecting a stock of lighter, but finer quality, the Postoffice Department expects to provide for the public a better card at less expense to the Government. The saving will be effected in the reduced "traveling expenses" of the postal card because of lighter weight on the various journeys it makes from the time it leaves the manufacturer until it reaches the "ultimate consumer."

The cards will be furnished in three styles. Of the regular  $3\frac{1}{4}$  by  $5\frac{1}{2}$  size, 3,400,0000,000 will be supplied. There will be 77,000,000 of the double, or reply, postals, and 10,000,000 cards of a corresponding to the standard index card. This latter card is expected to prove of great convenience and value to business men.

Since postal cards were first introduced in this country in 1873 the number used has increased from 31,000,000 in that year to 950,049,020 in 1909. There has been a great gain this year even over last year, the department requiring

the Stars and Stripes on the Coveted Spot.

Dr. Frederick D. Cook, who left New York on a voyage to the North Pole, July 4, 1907, is returning and claims that he discovered the Pole April 21, 1908. He has issued to the press a story of the discovery, which scientists are disposed to accept, but each statement will be carefully examined by mathematicians and others, and if there is any false claim, it will likely be discovered.

As the story is copyrighted, we are not permitted to publish it, at present, but will do so, later. As the story goes, there is no land there—nothing but ice, and a desolate prospect in every direction -no life of any kind, a place of complete loneliness.

The discovery is not likely to be of any practical benefit whatever, except that it will no doubt reduce the number of future explorations, and the waste of life that the lime with the lowest selling and money. As one of the world's greatest events, the discovery is likely to fall

How to Apply Lime.

Going on the assumption that progressive Jersey farmers and truckers are open for suggestions in ways of increasing the productiveness of their land, Dr. Edward B. Voothees, head of the New Jersey agricultural experiment station, in a pamphlet he has just issued, recommends the yearly application of lime.

It is shown that through a lack of lime the growth of crops has become less satisfactory, clover has failed to be productive in many instances, and even oats and corn have not given profitable

"Farmers are puzzled at times," he goes on, "as to the best way of supply ing the needed lime. They have offered to them various kinds of burned and crushed limestone, burned or crushed oyster shells, by products from factories and gas plants containing quantities.

Some limes can be bought for half the price of others, yet we know price is not necessarily the cheapest, nor that with the highest selling price the

"In reclaimed swamps of very acid clay soils it may be necessary to apply three or four tons, at times even more, of water-slacked or air-slacked lime to make the land fit for the vigorous growth of cultivated crops. "Under such circumstances it will always be wise to add enough lime in the first place to correct the existing acidity. In other soils the amounts required are much smaller. In beavy clay soils, not markedly acid, 2,000 to 3,000 pounds of water-slacked lime applied once in five years will prove sufficient. Similarly 1,500 to 2,000 pounds may be recommended for loam soils, and 1,000 to 1,500 pounds for light sandy soils. Where air slacked lime, crushed limestone or oyster shells are used the quantities may be safely increased by one-quarter or one-third, and where alfalfa is to be es-advantage of the smaller and more frequent applications lie in the fact that the soil is not allowed to come so markedly deficient in lime, as it sometimes becomes in five or six years under intilizer drill without involving much ad-

"Finally it may be urged again that the farmer will find it profitable to ap-ply generous quantities of lime to his land; that he will find the cheapest source of supply in materials containing the largest amount of actual lime (or of actual lime and magnesia) for the given price; that he should apply his lime in a fine state of division, and that, when the land is no longer markedly acid, small applications at frequent intervals will give more satisfactory returns than large applications at longer intervals,'

Never A Cheap Cow.

"The strange tatality which seems to follow valuable things mixed up in railroad mishaps, is something marvelous," said Chief Clerk John G. Krener, of the Western Maryland Railroad, a few days ago, when the subject of the claims pre sented to railroad companies in general was broached. "I have hundreds of claims of various kinds brought to my notice," he continued, "and yet among them all there was never a cheap cow killed by a locomotive, never a cheap dog escaped from a baggage car, never was there a real common dress suit case lost from a baggage car or a $2 trunk thrown off at the wrong station.

"I never knew of a pair of trousers worth less than $9 being torn on a broken seat or a dress costing less than $25 being ruined on the paint of a station somewhere. It is wonderful. All the cows we have ever killed on our tracks are purebred Jerseys, or Alderneys. worth, I forget how many hundreds dollars. The cheapest of dogs that ever got away was estimated at $100, by its owner; the lowest price dress-suit case I can remember was worth $10, and the cheapest trunk, if I recollect right cost something like $28 when it was new. No railroad man ever heard of a $10 cow being killed, a $2 dog being lost, a $1.50 paper leatherette suit case being mislaid and a $3 trunk getting lost.

'In many instances we have recovered the missing baggage and the owners look pretty sheepish when they faced us and a miserable old bag or trunk worth about 50 cents, after they had given us the usual big value bluff. We made one fellow prove he only gave $15 for a cow that he wanted us to give him $75 for. Any number of others have been exposed trying to bilk us. We are not such easy marks as some folks believe us and they realize it after they try to do us out of about four or five times what they are

The Coming Campaign,

There will be more questions than usual, this year, for votes to consider, especially those who indulge in the crime (?) of "cutting" their tickets, or who take the liberty of voting the other ticket, when they feel like doing so. It is not our duty to point out all the differences between parties and platforms, even if qualified to do so, nor do we at this time mean to more than call attention to the first fact stated, and to urge our readers to take ample time to study the general situation.

Later on, we shall touch on some of do so without partisanship, as nearly as such a course is possible-a course practically impossible, according to the minds of strictly biased people-because right, but the duty, of a newspaper. We will not aim to direct, nor to influence, so much as to enlighten, and open the way for the formation of individual and unprejudiced personal conclusions.

We do not belittle the strength and propriety of party ties. We think that our very best men are strong party men, for the reason that they are men who take keen interest in political affairs. True, some are simply "blind leaders of the blind," who vote the ticket "straight" at all times; but, such are not the best party men, nor are they the best citizens in other respects, and it is useless to waste time trying to tell them anything. But, men who know politics can be reached by facts and arguments, and there is a very large class to be wakened up to the fact that they are full Ameripart as such, and it is to these that we will have something to say.

We make this broad general appeal at DEMOCRATIC this time. Let every voter take the time and interest to post himself thoroughly. Read the papers-hoth sides-ask questions, try to brush aside personal and selfish motives, and get at the truth; then act honestly, as a man and patriotic REPUBLICAN citizen, when the time comes to mark your ballot. Mark it so that you can have full respect for yourself.

The independent paper nowadays is the paper that commands confidence, because it is realized that a paper to be worthy of confiednce must be to a large least, not very many of them do. The was possible.

FIGHTING FROST IN ORCHARDS

Devices In Use by Fruit Growers In Colorado.

Frost season comes twice a year. The first is over; the last is in the future. But it is never too late to prepare for the next season. Early in the spring of the current year several Colorado fruit growers equipped their orchards with the so called California oil orchard heaters. One man who tried the pots bought enough equipment to protect ten acres. He was new at the work and did not have proper oil, so a portion of the time he was obliged to burn kerosene. But in spite of the fact that the thermometer fell to 23 for three or four nights in succession ne was able to save the entire crop of apples on the protected area, while the fruit on the rest of his orchard which was not so protected was entirely lost. The expense for equipment and labor in this case was about $1,000, but it resulted in an $8,000 crop. This was certainly cheap insurance, and the pots are ready for future use. In another orchard the owner succeeded in saving an enormous crop of fruit, while just across a barbed wire fence in adjoining orchards the crop was an entire loss.

Since then a number of forms of heaters, both coal and oil, have been invented, and many people have equipped themselves with these appliances. The oil heaters, which were first used, are about the size and form of a ten pound lard pail made of light sheet iron. If the burning surface is much larger the heat produced is too great and the beneficial results are lost. These heaters will burn from three to five hours without refilling. In planning to protect the orchard in this way Colorado growers are using 100 of the oil pots per acre. It probably will not be necessary to use this entire number except in exceptional cases, but should that occasion arise they think it is a better plan to be ready. But for light frosts perhaps half of this number will be lighted at first; then as they burn out the other portion may be used. In this way the work of refilling can be accomplished without difficulty.

Common forms of crude petroleum are not satisfactory, for the reason that when the oil and pots become hot the oil boils over, causing much waste and loss of heat. Growers find. however, that what is known as gas oil is fairly free from this trouble, and it is the form they are now using in Colorado. It has also been demonstrated that coal pots will answer the purpose just as well as oil, but whether they will be as efficient in practice remains as yet to be seen. Colorado coal is semi-hard, lights almost as easily as wood and is therefore quite different from anything that is found in the east.

Of course the conditions of climate in Colorado are very different from those found in the east, and it may be that the western methods must be modified, but there would seem to be no reason why something of this kind might not be devised which would be practical in protecting truck crops. small fruits and even large orchards if it were thought advisable. The illustrations are so simple as to require no explanation.

Culture of Chives.

The culture of this plant is simple. as it will grow in any ordinary garden soil. It is usually propagated by division of the roots, because it does not seed readily. The roots or clumps of roots may be purchased at moderate prices. The clumps should be planted in beds about nine inches apart in rows which are two feet apart. The planting may be done in either spring or autumn. The chives may also be planted in the border of the vegetable garden and make an excellent border. As a border plant the clumps should be planted about six inches apart. The leaves will grow thickly and form a dense green mat.

ROOT OF ALL GROWTH.

What the Middle West Knows About the "Dry" Process.

"Dry farming" is a misnamed science. It is a recent discovery and is being taught to the new settlers in the middle west and in Colorado. To those who know nothing of it the idea may be described as farming by conserving natural moisture. The new settlers learned that there were copious rains in the fall, heavy snows in winter and rains in the spring again. If this moisture, which ran off into swollen streams with the coming of spring. could be conserved to the growing crops the desert might yet be rejuvenated, and so they set to work.

The great farms were plowed ten and twelve inches deep. They were harrowed fine in the fall, and the rain was allowed to settle in the subsoil. In the spring they were cultivated again, these 10,000 acre farms, and they were left standing to absorb moisture for a year, with constant cultivating to help the moisture retention.

The second fall the seed was put in. and the new rains and snow and thaws brought out the spring wheat thicker and greener than ever. But what of the blistering suns of sumthe sun from drying out his subsoil. and underneath the moisture nour- crosswise of the back. This latter is the tops were dry.

The experiment succeeded, and the country had been proved "good for something anyhow."

This mode of scientific conservation of the moisture has been the root of all growth. Through it alfalfa, with its stout roots digging far down to the subterranean springs, has been made possible. Through it the first sugar beets were grown.

These are, to be sure, vastly separable products, having to do with distinct industries. Alfalfa means cattle, and sugar beets mean sugar mills and towns. Alfalfa came first. Then corn came, and then the cattle were introduced anew Now all through these regions are great ranches where hand fed and fattened cattle are produced-not the gaunt range steers of Texas, but fat cattle, ready for the market and commanding top prices.

Painting Farm Implements.

The farmer who takes proper care of his implements not only houses them and keeps them in good adjustment, but he paints them occasionally. Paint closes all cracks and keeps out the moisture. It not only preserves the wood, but the iron parts are benefited as well. It also gives the tools a much better appearance. Before applying new paint remove all old paint that is likely to scale off and see that all parts are thoroughly clean and dry.

Birds Which Destroy Chinch Bugs. The birds which are the most beneficial in destroying chinch bugs are quail, prairie chicken, meadow lark, red wing blackbird and catbird. It has come to be the belief of most entomologists and botanists that little width the animal can have should be help can be expected from the parasitic fungi in holding this insect pest in check.

Chickens a Money Bringer.

The chicken is universal, a money bringer of more or less amount upon every farm, and no other staple is se. A farm may have no grain to sell, but it is sure to sell in the year some chickens and eggs. There are no farms where there are no chickens and money return from them. The universality of the chicken on farms gives the business, incidental as it is in each particular case, the first place as a money getter. The sum of infinite small units against the finite and limited larger ones gives the excess to the poultry returns in Missouri.

Odd again is it that this industry, so large and vast, is conducted so easily and quietly. There is no sweat, no strain, no worry over chickens. The industry seems to care for itself and cares extremely well. Men of the farms look slightingly upon it as a woman's affair, unworthy of a grown man's serious attention, and it is attended to almost exclusively by the women and children, while the money Jeturn is woman's money to spend as she sees fit, independent of that for and, fourth, constantly stroke up the support and maintenance furnished as | fleece while trimming. duty calls by the lord and master from sources under his direction, man's treatment. #### SHEEP IN THE PRIZE RING.

A cause for failure by amateur showmen in the prize ring is their lack of understanding how to trim their animals. The sheep should be stood on slightly rising ground, the head turned uphill and the animal kept in shape by an assistant, writes Edward N. Wentworth, Iowa Agricultural college, in the Breeder's Gazette, Chicago. The back and underline should be straight and level and the four legs should stand squarely under the animal. This is absolutely necessary, for if not when the man trims the back and then straightens the sheep up he will find the back slanting off on one side or the other.

The fleece is first combed out with an ordinary wool card in order to separate such fibers as may have cotted and also to straighten up the uneven growth. Dirt and other foreign material are partially removed by this process. The fuzz thus produced is moistened with a damp brush and rubbed so that all uneven ends are sticking up. The shepherd then trims mer? The new farmer prepared for the back square, making it as broad them by blanketing his land to keep as possible from side to side and straight and strong in its contour. In For this purpose a dust mulch was doing this he holds his shears flat to spread over all the sowed land. in another direction gives a jagged appearance. While trimming he continually rubs the fleece up with his brush or the flat of his shears, so that the uneven tags may be exposed and cut

After the back is worked to the man's satisfaction he goes to the sides, trimming either straight up or down and only as far up or down as he can make a flat surface. This in a wether gives a square block to the body and that neatness of middle that delights both the judge's and the butcher's eye. The rump is carried back nearly rectangularly, the dock squared to show width and plumpness and the leg of mutton made flat behind and on the sides to increase its apparent meatiness. The animal in a general way then approaches the ideal block.

However, the head, forequarters and a space between back and side yet remain. The belly is only touched to remove low hanging tags, and the next operation is to round in the space on the body yet untouched. As little as possible is removed here, as the most maintained. The shoulder vein, brisket and neck are left plump and full, only the outer fibers being evened, and where increased width is desired the brisket is slightly flattened.

The trimming of the head is determined by the breed, but all are square between the ears to show all the width possible. The cheeks and forehead of the Shropshire should be round and full, almost robinlike in aspect. The short, broad Southdown head results from a process of blocking out and trimming as resorted to in the body. The Oxford and Hampshire are flattened on the cheeks, the latter to the greater degree, in order to give a sharp, alert face, and the cap above the eyes is struck up round and full.

Various practices are followed to hide defects. Some of the commonest of these are the trimming of the shoulder as far forward as possible to hide a long neck, washing out and fluffing the fleece of the thigh to increase the contour of the leg of mutton and card ing the fleece of fore flank to hide a flat rib.

There are four cardinal rules that apply to trimming Down breeds: First. keep the animal standing squarely; second, hold the shears flat: third, al ways cut at right angles to the backbone except in the hind quarters. where one trims either up or down, Bloat In Cattle.

Writing of bloat in cattle, William H. Underwood says: Where the slightest danger is apprehended it is always well to keep an eye on cattle that have been turned on to clover pastures. As to remedies, there is but one sure one after the animal shows distress, and that is the use of the trocar and cannuia. The trocar is simply a sharp pointed awl and the cannula a little thimble or sheath, open at both ends, which is put on the end of the awl. This is driven in with the awl and remains when the trocar is removed, allowing the gas to escape. After the animal is relieved this can be removed.

Every farmer should have this little tool ready when wanted. If, however, it is not available, the incision can be made with a clean knife, putting in a goose or turkey quill with both ends fad for the summer bungalow. This open and holding it there till the gas escapes.

While Mr. Abraham Hesson had been helpless for some time, his sudden death, on last Thursday, was a great shock to all. His general health was good, and up until the time of his death he enjoyed a good appetite and was apparently as well as usual. ## SAVED BY A CONVICT.

While Mark Mold, convict, still waited on deck for the officers to stow him in the dark hold with his fellows a boat from the Liverpool dock came alongside with several passengers, among them a handsom lady of thirty, Mrs. Howland, wife of Colonel Howland, quartered with his regiment near Port Jackson, Australia, where she was going to join him, and her little daughter Grace, a beautiful child of six years.

As Mrs. Howland was assisted up the gangplank she noticed Mark Mold and so forth. Then the truth was and shuddered.

"You need not be afraid, ma'am." said the captain. "The criminals will be kept in the hold chained. They can do you no harm."

"Can you not send them away from here? I wish you would."

"I regret that I cannot, as I have agreed to take them."

As day after day passed the bright little cherub Grace spread light and joy throughout the vessel.

Soon she noticed on deck the convict. Mark Mold, who, having been taken ill in the confined air below, had been relieved of his chains and led up to breathe the fresh air. A pleased look crossed his haggard face as he inhaled the pure breeze and looked out on the broad, blue, rolling ocean.

"Won't you have some? Here, take it. You may have it all," fell a childish voice on his ear, and, looking down, he saw Grace at his knee holding up her cake.

He seemed about to put his hand on her head when Mrs. Howland gently but quickly drew the child away. The man showed no emotion at this action of the lady. "You must never go near that bad man again," said Mrs. Howland. Just as she spoke a heavy squall struck the ship, hurling her down and almost on her beam ends and driving her through the water with everything humming.

Suddenly there was a wild shriek from Mrs. Howland as little Grace, who had attempted to run into the cabin, was literally blown to leeward into the sea.

"My child! O God, save my child!" screamed the distracted mother, whose voice, however, was nearly drowned by the booming thunder of wind and ocean, the rattling of canvas, the slatting of sheets and ropes and the swashing, hissing noise of the sweeping

The sailors looked with appalled faces on the form of Grace as she was borne along by the merciless waves. Not one of them dared to venture over board in that tempest, and, as to lowering a boat, it was simply impossible, as no boat could live in such a storm. 'Save her! Will no one save my child?" screamed Mrs. Howland, confronting the seamen with clasped hands and frenzied, beseeching eyes.

They looked at each other, and not one moved, for all felt that certain death awaited the man who should plunge into that wrathful ocean, but Mark Mold plunged overboard, and the mother clung to a backstay, eagerly watching for his reappearance; but, seeing nothing of him, she bowed her | dex."-Chicago Post. head on the rail, moaning and raving like a maniac.

ship farther and farther from the place where the man and child had gone overboard. The seamen exchanged ominous glances and shook their heads.

Soon the squall swept far away to leeward, the ship righted and the sun gleamed from a clear sky upon a clearing sea.

From the captain, who, having now brought his ship to, with main topsail aback, had run aloft, a wild cry went ringing to the heavens, sending an electric thrill of joy to the hearts of all on deck.

"I see something two miles off the lee quarter. God grant it be the man and child!"

His boat was soon down with good earsmen in it, with Mrs. Howland, full of wild, anxious hope, in the stern sheets. Nearer to that distant speck drew the boat.

"There he is!" cried the watchful eaptain at last. "I think-I believebut am not certain - he - yes, yes, thank God-hooray, hooray-he has the Almost exhausted to unconsciousmess. Mark Mold lay in the bottom of the boat, scarcely hearing the mother. hardly feeling the pressure of her lips upon his hands, when at length she turned to him, warmly expressing her gratitude. On arriving at Fort Jackson Mrs. Howland related to her husband, the colonel, the gallant conduct of Mark Mold, who thereafter was constantly befriended during his hard prison life by the grateful officer. This kind treatment, the first he had ever received from a human being since he became an outlaw, had a softening effect on Mark's character, and he conducted himself so well that the colonel at length succeeded in obtain-Ing for him a commutation of his penalty, which had been for twenty years.

A Tiger in Wales.

Some years ago it was reported that a tiger had escaped from a traveling menagerie at Brecon, in Wales. Mangled sheep were said to mark its course across country to Llandrindod Wells, some farmers lost their dogs and on market days at Builth, Brecon, Penybont and Llanmarrach the wild beast was the center of rumor. Country schools were closed because parents feared to let heir children go along the roads, and bands of armed men sought to hunt the tiger down.

This state of terror lasted a week, though no person was found who had actually seen the tiger, but only people who "had heard that some one else," hunted down and the origin of the whole affair discovered at the remote hamlet of Eberedw. One night the schoolmaster there, in dismissing the children, playfully had warned them not to loiter in going home lest a tiger should get them.

The scared children accepted the warning as real and hastened home with stories of a savage beast lurking behind hedges or growling in ravines. And so the story grew, as stories do under the culture of imagination.

The Turtle's Cunning.

Although not credited with any high degree of intelligence, the turtle when about to deposit its eggs exhibits considerable cunning. It scoops out a hole, as if to prepare a repository for its eggs, but in order to delude the birds and other enemies the turtle throws the sand again into the hole, leaving the surface rough, and waddles off to another spot, where it repeats the process. Sometimes this is done three times, and eventually the eggs are laid in an excavation within a few yards of the sham nest, the surface being smoothed and flattened down. When hunting for the eggs the Queensland blacks probe the sand in the vicinity of one of the sham nests and are usually successful.-London

The Sailor's Hands. A visitor who prides himself on his knowledge of nautical affairs was chating with a friend outside the Flatiron building. "See that man coming?" he asked. "Can you tell what he is by the way he walks?"

"Why, no," replied the New Yorker who was with him. "He's a sailorman of some sort Look at his hands. No landsman ever walked that way. A sailor always walks with the palms of his hands turned behind him and the backs turned forward, the way he is walking. Look at that landsman over there He swings his arms with the palms of the hands turned toward his body and the backs out. You can always detect a man who is accustomed to the sea that way."

"What's the explanation?" inquired the other.

"Why, there isn't any that I know. It may be because the sailor gets the habit of balancing himself in rough weather by the use of his arms, but I don't believe that's the reason. It's just one of those things you can't account for .- New York Press.

The Spinning Machine of a Spider. The spinning machine is situated under the hinder part of the spider's body. It takes the form of a slight depression, which a close inspection shows to consist of six small bodies resembling tubes. Four of these contain an immense number of minute openings, as many as a thousand can be counted in each, and from every one of these openings a viscous fluid issues, which hardens on exposure to the atmosphere. The whole 4,000 threads are united into one line, which is sometimes so fine that 4.000.000 twisted together would not have a combined diameter greater than that of an ordinary hair from the human head. It is impossible to conceive the excessive slenderness of one of the 4,000 threads which compose such a line. The bare statement that each one has a thickness only one sixteen thousand millionth of that of a human hair does not in any way convey the impression of its wonderful fineness The mind can no more grasp the meaning of such figures than it can understand the immense distance of which astronomers talk so glibly.

Kelvin as Damocles. A characteristic always of Lord Kelvin was his absolute faith in figures, and this ruling passion once led to his experiment as a Damocles. When he once solved a problem in mathematics, he was willing to stake upon its correctness not only his reputation, but, if necessary, his life. Taking an immense heavy cannon ball, he calculated with the utmost accuracy the size of the smallest wire which would bear the weight of the load of iron. He then procured a length of wire of just the requisite strength and to prove the truth of his figuring had the cannon ball suspended over his lecturing platform at the very spot where it would mained there for weeks.

"The Last Ditch."

A dignified origin can be given to the expression "To die in the last ditch." On the death of De Witt the Prince of Orange was made head of the Dutch republic. Despite his youth asplayed the courage and tenacity of his race. "Do you not see your country is lost?" asked the Duke of Buckingham, who had been sent to negotiate at The Hague. "There is a sure way never to see it lost," replied William, "and that is to die in the last ditch."

He Got Married.

Our cook, said the family man, had a beau who called on her often, but finally his visits ceased. I asked her one day what had become of her former attentive beau, and she said be had got married.

"Since he got married." said she, "he don't come around any more." "Married." said I, surprised. "Why, I thought he would marry you!"

"So he did." said the cook.-Browning's Magazine.

Always Picking.

An amusing story is told of the answer given by a London waif to a Salvation Army captain. I pick hops in the autumn, I pick pockets in the winter, and oakum for the rest of the year."

Walking. The ordinary man who is employed indoors throughout the day does not walk enough. He needs the fresh air and sunshine of the outdoors, and, no matter how tired be may be, a short time in the open air will rest him. If he has no opportunity to walk during the evening, he ought to do it in the morning. There is no better tonic than a two mile walk before going to Some business men who live some distance from their offices or stores walk down regularly every morning and are greatly benefited No matter how sluggish they may feel on arising, the morning walk puts them in good trim for the day's work. Exercise in the open air starts the blood to circulating in every artery and vein in the entire system, opens up the pores of the skin, so that the waste matter in the body may be set free, limbers up the joints and muscles and puts one in shape for the duties of the day.-St. Joseph Gazette.

The Meredith Cocoanut.

George Meredith may not have been an altogether familiar author to the ordinary reader who craves for quick sensation. He never came down to the simplicity of Sherlock Holmes or Captain Kettle. Meredith required an acute and trained intellect before he could be appreciated. It was once mentioned, in referring to the difficulty which some people experience in reading Meredith's novels, that the Meredith "cocoanut" was very bard, but that the milk when reached proved to be very sweet. This joke got into the papers.

Two days afterward a well known firm of fruiterers had an inquiry after these cocoanuts from a country customer! The letter was to the effect that, having read somewhere that Meredith's cocoanuts have had a large sale lately and that the milk was fashionable, the writer would like to have a few to try.-London Tatler.

Night came, ere we reached Temora, a queenly mansion seated upon the mountain top, majestic trees holding dignified court around it. #### Camping Out.

Were one to inquire into the relation of nature study to the increasing number of people who "camp out," it would be hard to say which is cause and which effect, but it is certain that the two have developed simultaneously within comparatively few years.

It was not very long ago that camping out was regarded as a mysterious division in which the male members of the family found a quite inexplicable pleasure. Then mother and the girls tried it for a season, and since then they have understood. Today, if one turns the advertising pages of the magazines in spring and early summer, one finds long lists of summer camps for boys and summer camps for girls, and all of them classed under the heading, "educational institutions."

Aside from the mere pleasure of a sojourn in camp, there are material benefits which last the whole year through, and are making important contributions to health and national character.

Camp life means reducing one's needs to their lowest terms. It conduces to simplicity of dress, food, recreation and social intercourse. #### Rules of Color Harmony.

Much sound advice on the buying of rugs is contained in an article in the Woman's Home Companion for September. In regard to color it says: "A floor should be the lowest or darkest tone in a room, then the walls, and the ceiling or highest. This is the natural way and the safest to follow as a general rule. It gives a feeling of firmness and solidity to the floor, whereas, if the order is reversed, and the floor is lighter than the ceiling, one feels that the ceiling is coming down on one's head and that dodging is the only way to escape a blow. The floor should support the walls in color as well as in fact, but care must be taken not to make the mistake of thinking that strength of color is obtrusiveness of color. Strength of color in the right place will make the scheme of decoration a successful and satisfying one, but obtrusiveness of color will make a hopeless failure of it.

"The chief color of the rug should be the chief color of the walls-not necessarily the same tone, but harmonizing tones of the same shade. If the walls are a soft yellow, a rug with different shades of brown, and to give the needed note of contrast, dull soft red and blues, would look well in the room. This kind of rug would also go well with green or blue walls. The proportion of the different colors in a rug may make or mar it for one's special use. In choosing a rug it is best to have a feeling of one predominant color, with the other colors adding the snap that contrast gives, and forming a harmonious and delightful

Faith and Doubt.

Faith in your opinions is a good thing,

Were you ever absolutely certain of the result of an election prophesying a tidal wave for "our party"—honestly advising your friends to put up all their loose change, and then the next morning awoke to know that your basis for belief was built on east wind?

Did you ever size up a young fellow who wanted work, or who was in your employ, and foretell that there was nothing in him; that he would always be a counter-jumper and then in a few years have to eat your words?

Were you ever an editor and turned down a manuscript as rot, rubbish, drivel and diluted idiocy, and then see this same MS. published by your rival and accepted by the public, and the author whom you declared couldn't write worth shucks, setting you a pace ou could not follow?

Have you ever, as a business man, had a certain scheme presented, and did you reject it as foolish and fanciful, and later behold it make a million dollars for your enemy?

Have you ever fought valiantly for a creed or a platform, and then in a few years conclude, on your own accord, that you were on the wrong track and turn around and denounce the thing you once upheld?

Were you ever a plaintiff in a lawsuit, and, on the case going to the jury, say, with a chuckle, "The opposition hasn't a leg upon which to stand," and a little later hear the foreman calmly remark 'We, the jury, find for the defendant.'

Well, if so, and you have thus learned in vain.—Selected.

THE SILLY SEASON.

Mothers Worried About Daughters Meeting the Wrong Men.

More than one young woman's mother is making herself unnecessarily miserable this summer for fear the cherished daughter will want to marry the wrong sort of man. Her worry is as useless as it is out of place, if she could but realize it, for in a way no one is more competent to make the decision than the two young people involved.

This is, of course, a modern view and one that presupposes no such involved requirements as were wont to be laid down in the days when parents, on the assumption of the infallibility of their own wisdom, arranged matches according to their own ideas. Such times are happily nearly extinct in this country, for the young American woman feels it her inalienable right to take a portion of her destiny into her own hands.

Mothers have one right that none but writers of melodrama will deny thein-that is, to insist on a daughter's waiting until she is old enough to marry. The maturity not of years, but of experience, is a safeguard without which few can risk that decision which is to the woman the destiny of the best two-thirds of her lifetime.

She must know herself, and she must know men. She must have some groundwork of comparison, some definite standard, on which to base her judgment, for every quality is relative. and the man who may seem to the seventeen-year-old a marvel of cleverness may bore her at twenty-three. Nor does the seventeen-year-old yet know her own tastes and temperament sufficiently to know whether any given person is congenial.

Till she has attained her full growth -mental, physical and spiritual-and come to realize her own needs, how can she tell anything about who can fulfill those needs?

Statistics show that twenty-five years ago girls married at the average teed by R. age of nineteen. Owing possibly to Taneytown, Md. the complexity of present day conditions this average has risen to about twenty-four years, and it ought to be even higher for the college girl, who practically stops living the life of experience during those years that she devotes to her books. There is also the question of what one owes the nation, though this fortunately coincides with some of the qualities on which personal happiness depends. I refer to health and strength, for the fine physical specimen can make a way against all odds, besides having the one heritage that money cannot buy to hand down to the children.

Incidentally, as the scientists are every day pointing out to us, good health has a good deal to do with good brains and disposition. The value o this one vital qualification every mother owes it to her daughter to impress upon her, and if it were oftener done it is safe to say that there would be a very great deal less misery of all sorts.

"Can be depended upon" is an expression we all like to hear, and when it used in connection with Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy means that it never fails to cure to dilute faith in your own infallibility with a little doubt you have not lived diarrhoea, dysentery or bowel complaints. Kindergarten handkerchiefs are a summer novelty for the children. The little squares are stamped with scenes from kindergarten games, such as a group of children playing "ring around a rosy" or "the pigeon" or model lessons in the well known kindergarten subjects-sewing, weaving, representations of first, second, third and fourth gifts, etc.

There is a new material for table covers and sofa cushions which looks cool and comfortable for the summer house or porch. It is woven after the fashion and in the design of the old time rag carpets and comes in green and white, tan and white, blue and white and brown with little touches of orange and black. In effect it is somewhat like very heavy burlap, and it has the merit of being washable.

In Mrs. Taft's tally of miles she easily outstrips the wives of all other American presidents since that historic day when Liberty bell rang out its famous message from the town of Independence hall, says Human Life. She has seen moonlight nights on the broad waters of the Pacific from the bridge of that monster ship, the Minnesota; she has watched the dirt fly at the big ditch down in the Panama country, and she has risked her life on the Transsiberia railway in that 6,000 mile dash across the gigantic width of Asia which the czar planned as a spectacular affair to catch the world's attention. She has fished in the royal lake at Ashiba, where the Taft party was quartered in one of the mikado's palaces during its Japanese visit; she has danced the queer native rigodon in the Philippines: over the snows of St. Petersburg she has had, fur bundled, sleigh rides such as only Russia knows, and to beguile transatlantic hours she has played shuffleboard with that gold braided gentleman, the captain, whose word is law on the liner.

On practically all of the missions as a popular peace envoy Mrs. Taft has accompanied her husband. In the matter of distance this would mean more miles than one would care to figure, for no American outside of the navy has ever covered so much of the earth's surface in behalf of the government as the new president.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL,

Lesson XI. - Third Quarter, For Sept. 12, 1909.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Acts xxi, 14-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

the disciples there, men, women and children, accompanied Paul's party out of the city down to the shore, and all kneeled down on the shore and those who may have been looking on! There are always some watching us who draw their own inferences from our conduct as to whether we are worldly or other worldly, whether we are for the most part in communion with earth or heaven. Some who bear the name of Christ have been known to shrink from praying before others or even asking a blessing on their food. What can He think of those who are thus ashamed of Him? (Matt. x, 33.)

As at Miletus, so here at Tyre we have another painful separation when Paul and his companions set sail and the friends from Tyre return to their homes, but we trust that all hearts were more than ever turned to Him who is our continual habitation (Ps. lxxi, 3) and from whose presence some day we shall go no more out. One day at Ptolemais, where they also found brethren, and then to Caesarea, where they tarried many days in the home of Philip the evangelist, who had four daughters, virgins, who did prophesy. We recall that Philip was greatly used of God in Samaria and then to lead the Ethiopian treasurer to Christ, after which he preached in all the cities from Azotus to Caesarea (Acts viii, 40), but that seems to be the last we have heard of him till now. God gave to the churches apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors and teachers for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ (Eph. iv, 11, 12), and were it not that Philip is still called the evangelist we might think that he had become pastor of the church at Caesarea and that Cornelius and his household were members of that church. There are so many things we are not told and we are curious enough to want to know, but we must wait to find out why we hear nothing more of Philip's active ministry and to learn what he was doing at Caesarea. Then these daughters of his-in what sense did they prophesy?

Concerning it all it comes to me continually that there is only One with whom we have to do, and if we are filling the place He assigns us, be its service small or great, that is all He requires of us, whether other people know much or little or anything about it. He appoints to every one his work and says "occupy till I come" (Mark xiii, 34; Luke xix, 13). He knows in what part of His field His plants will thrive best and bear the fruit that He desires, so it is ours to quietly abide in Him and see no one but Jesus only. We may imagine what a time of prayer and praise and study of the word these days in Caesarea were and how they would listen to Paul declaring what things God had wrought by his ministry (verse 19), for as he afterward did at Jerusalem he probably did here also and elsewhere. While at Caesarea a prophet from Judea named Agabus by a striking object lesson foretold that at Jerusalem Paul would be arrested and imprisoned, upon which the disciples there as well as Paul's own companions besought him not to go to Jerusalem. Paul's reply to them all was that he was ready, not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus (verse 13). Compare his word to the Ephesian elders at Miletus in chapter xx. 24. Both of these are splendid utterances of a whole hearted servant of Christ who would not by any persuasion of friends be turned aside from what he believed to be the Lord's way for him. When they saw that he would not be persuaded they simply ceased urging him and said. "The will of the Lord be done" (verse 14). Being joined by several of the disciples from Caesarea and by an old disciple from Cyprus named Mnason, who was to lodge them, they in due time reached Jerusalem and were gladly received by the brethren. Thus ended the third missionary jour-

Concerning the will of the Lord to which they desired to submit when they found that they could not persuade Paul not to go to Jerusalem, there can be nothing greater or higher and when His will shall be done on earth as in heaven that will be the kingdom of God on this earth. Our Lord Jesus could say, "I delight to do Thy will, O my God;" "My meat is to do the will of Him that sent me and to finish His work" (Ps. xl, 8; John iv, 34). In proportion as His will is done in us now, that good and acceptable and perfect will of God (Rom. xii, 1, 2), we have just that much of the kingdom in us, a foretaste of eternal May we ever say from the heart cheerfully; "Thy will be done." Is it possible for us to think that we are in the will of God when we are simply working out our own will? It is to be feared so. I could believe that Paul was right in resisting all the entreaties of his fellow believers and fellow laborers unto the kingdom and determining to go to Jerusalem at any cost were it not that the Spirit said to Paul that he should not go (verses 4, 11). The disciples said to Paul through the Spirit that he should not go.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Sept. 12, 1909.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE. Topic. - Temperance in all things.-I

The word "temperance" is usually limited to sobriety-temperance in alcoholic drinks. But it has a much broader meaning than that. Temperance is moderation. It is antagonistic Text of the Lesson, Acts xxi, 1-17. to anything that flavors of excess. Memory Verses, 13, 14-Golden Text, Therefore it not only applies to sobriety, but to every phase of life where harm may come through excess, no [Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.] matter how harmless, yea, even bene-When the time came to leave Tyre | ficial, the thing may be if used in moderation.

Paul here speaks of the necessity of "temperance in all things" in living a successful Christian life that will prayed. What an object lesson for result in the salvation of the soul. He speaks of the Christian life as a fight or a contest and also a race, in each of which temperance and moderation are an absolute necessity. No runner could have been successful in the Olympic games unless he had prepared himself for the race, especially by exercising temperance in everything that would hinder him in doing his very best. Moderation must be the watchword of him who would win the crown of victory. Besides moderation in eating and drinking, he would need even to be moderate in training. Excessive training has lost many a race and many a fight. The same thing is true of the Christian life. Intemperance in anything that hinders Christian growth must be avoided if the Christian attains the best possible results and makes salvation doubly sure.

The doctrine of "temperance in all things" needs to be emphasized today. perhaps as in few other ages. The tendency of our generation is toward intemperance. The business man lacks moderation in his labors to make his business a success. The man who desires to make a fortune must do it in a day, and rushes into ventures that become a burden and a worry to him. Intemperance in speech is a common weakness because of the undermining of the nervous system in the incessant rush of life in one form or another. Many lack moderation in their actions. losing entire control of themselves at the least opportunity. The results are weakened bodies, enfeebled nerves and mental power and the incapability of reaching a high spiritual standard. Excessive eating of a "Sunday dinner" has taken the spiritual appetite from thousands of Christians and unfitted them for religious exercises during any time later in the day. To be "temperate in all things" may require divine grace and the exercise of all our will power, but we should attain to it. Contestants in Paul's day did it to obtain a laurel wreath, a corruptible crown; much more should we be will ing to do it, since in our case victory means an incorruptible crown-eternal life that never fades away.

"You Let Me Slip."

I have frequently heard the objection to Christian Endeavor that it is doing little or no positive good work. Your young people," we are told. "hold their meetings, socials by preference, and that is the end of it. There is no manliness in Christian Endeavor, nothing to attract and hold the young man.

One might, if one chose, point out not a little positive good work done along social and civic lines by Endeavorers, about which critics seem to be strangely ignorant; but at present I wish to emphasize the fact that a large part of the power of Christian Endeavor is expended in preventing the necessity of helping people in later life by making them good citizens and good Christians from the start. An important part of the work of Christian Endeavor is preventive. It is more farreaching and effectual than the rescue of dilapidated units, however fine that may be, for the salvation of the boy or the girl means the making of a man or a woman and the happiness of a family. The church needs to hold her own in the struggle, and there is no organization better fitted than the Christian Endeavor society to help her to do so. It takes hold where the Sunday school often loses its grip. Wise leaders therefore will seek to strengthen Christian Endeavor and enable it to accomplish a maximum of good.

Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman says that at a conference of ministers in Philadelphia one man remarked that the people of the slums are the lost sheep of our own households. A minister sprang to his feet and said, "It isn't Two or three others, among them Dr. Chapman, said, "We'll find out." Here is the doctor's testimony: The vilest man I ever have seen in this city of Philadelphia, when I told him that I was the minister of Bethany church, stood on his feet and clinched his fist and shook it in my face and said:

"Bethany! I sat in your church, and no-body ever spoke to me!"

body ever spoke to me!"

The vilest woman I have ever seen in my life I saw at 2 o'clock in the morning in the slums of Philadelphia, and when I said, "I am from Bethany school." she burst into tears and said: "Bethany! My mother carried me there in her arms. I was in Miss Brown's class. I sat as a girl wrill it was sixten years of age girl until i was sixteen years of age three seats 1 om the front in the benches on the left. And," she said, "I am here here!" And she seemed to lose all her passion and pathos, and, brushing away her tears, she said, "You let me slip."

If Christian Endeavor can stop that gap even partially, if it can prevent the church from letting any of its young people slip, who dares say that it is not accomplishing a positive good work? It is a work that can never be tabulated. Only eternity can reveal it.-Ripple in Christian Endeavor World.

The Meeting Between Charles Barton and John Quill.

By CLARA A. CRADY. [Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

Charles Barton separated himself from the train with which he had been associated for the greater part of thirty-six hours and drew in a great breath of Lynnville's exhilarating air. Then he set out with long, swinging strides to mount the hill beyond which lay the village proper.

So much information he had deigned to accept from the loquacious station master, but to the latter's plainly expressed curiosity as to whom he sought in the village Barton had turned a deaf ear. He was aware of the fact that news acquired wings in small places, and it was part of his plan to take John Quill by surprise. Taking. as he was, advantage of an unexpected business trip east to meet face to face his hitherto unseen correspondent, he had no doubt as to the success of his plan.

That John was only nineteen and an orphan Barton knew, but he had respected the younger man's reticence concerning himself to such an extent that he had never tried to force his ral curiosity, came running out on her confidence further. The ubiquitous Say watch for the weekly letter which be- bit," he pleaded. came an established custom, but only he himself knew how far the simple faith, the unconscious hero worship. that breathed in every line of John Quill's letters were responsible for Barton's escape from the many temptations that surround a young man alone in a western town.

He had reached the end of the village before his eyes found the little brown cottage, with its big honeysuckle on each side of the gate and its square porch overgrown with the same vine. Everything looked as John had once described it to be.

He knocked firmly on the front door of the cottage. It was quickly opened. and Barton found himself gazing into the prettiest face he had ever seen.

He asked. "Is this where John Quill lives? I'm Charles Barton," offering his card. She put out her hand somewhat hesitatingly, he thought, and the bit of pasteboard fluttered to their feet. With a muttered apology, he stooped to pick it up. When his eyes again sought the girl's face there was a confusion in it which the slight accident hardly warranted.

"I'd like to see your brother," he suggested politely.

He was not prepared for the sudden terror which flashed into her face, and. with a view to putting her at her ease. he continued smilingly: "You see, I'm taking the relationship for granted. The likeness to a picture of himself, which John once sent me, is too great to admit of a doubt."

The girl flushed and at the same time looked relieved. "Yes," she breathed softly, "I'm his sister. And I'm sorry, but my-John is away at present.'

Barton's face fell. "I, too, am sorry," he said simply and lingered. The girl eyed him doubtfully. She seemed to be undecided, but finally asked slowly. "Will you come in?"

But he had seen the effort which the words cost her, so he prevaricated slightly "No, thanks. I have my train to make. When will your brother be back?" is a quick after thought. "I could stop off again if"-"He will not be back for some time." she interposed hurriedly. "Do not ask me where he is," appealingly, "for I cannot tell you." A suspicion was dawning in Barton's mind. "Excuse me." he begged gently. "Perhaps your brother is in some difficulty, some trouble, and I could help bim." "No, no; you cannot help him-I Magazine.

"There's something wrong there," he reflected as he retraced his steps toward the station. "Why didn't the boy tell me in his last letter that he was going away? Is it possible that the young cub has managed to disgrace himself and left his sweet little sister to bear the burden? But, oh! I'm sure he's not that kind. A few inquiries in the village might-but Charles Barton is no spy. I'll let the matter drop for a few days; then I'll try again to gain the shrinking confidence of John Quill's sister. And woe to those who are at the bottom of the trouble!"

But when, four days later, he mounted the hill that led to the village he was forced to confess that the interest which he felt in John Quill's sister far exceeded any he had ever entertained exceeded any he had ever entertained in respect to the youth. The girl's sweet face was ever before him.

As he entered the village he came face to face with the girl of his thoughts. She was coming out of a big house, and she carried a huge bundle-sewing, he rightly judged as he hastened to relieve her of it. The radiant blush with which she thanked him Barton took as a favorable sign.

"I've come back," he said eagerly. "I'm so glad-I mean," as she detected the look that leaped into his eyes, "I'm glad of this chance to confess in person something that has been worrying me greatly. I was going to write"- She was interrupted by the postmistress, who, taking advantage of her position to gratify a very natuporch.

"Hey!" she shouted. "Here's a letter for you," frantically waving the missive in question. Barton stepped forward to take it, and in doing so his eyes inadvertently fell on the superscription. He read no farther than the name, but there was a question in his eyes when they met hers. She answered it bravely.

"Yes, it is mine. My name is Jonquil March. There never was a John Quill." She was walking faster, and her face was very red.

"Why did you do it?" he asked sim-

"Because my life here was so desperately lonely after mother, who was all I had, died. Oh, I don't suppose that you'll understand! But I've always longed for the great west, where I was born, but which I scarcely remember. At first it was a desire to know it better that made me drift into the correspondence, and I continued with it because I came to enjoy it for its own sake," she concluded with unconscious abandon.

"But the photograph?" Barton groped.

"It was taken after some theatricals several years ago," she explained. "She," pointing back toward the postoffice, "never suspected, because I used to do newspaper corresponding under "Do you know why I came back?" he

"No," Jonquil's tongue faltered, but

The response had been prompt and her eyes told a different story. "Because I love you," he declared ious questions that Barton, in order to | masterfully, "and because I want to do justice to his native state, had marry you and take you with me to It was strange how soon he came to that you love me, too, if only a little

> "But the trick," she temporized. "How can you forgive"-

"Bless the trick" interrupted Barton joyously. "Why fight with it when it has been the means of bringing me a wife?"

Cause of Misery.

Here is an observation from Carlyle: 'All misery is faculty misdirectedstrength that has not yet found its way." This is undoubtedly true. All suffering and failing can be traced back to one getting out of the true path. It may not sometimes be one's fault. Ignorance or environment may intervene and lead us astray. But all progress consists in one finding the true way of one's strength; to see that the faculty is rightly directed.

Finding this path is the end of knowledge and civilization. This means doing the right thing, physically, mentally, morally; obeying God's lawthat's it; that is all there is to it. That is what keeps the strength and faculty intact and makes life worth living. The perfect mortal is the one whose faculty is rightly directed and whose strength has found its way. It is that that makes the true, manly, useful, happy life; that makes the life last longer and keeps it sweet and wholesome while it lasts.-Ohio State Jour-

"Through Fire and Water." A glance into the past is furnished by the words: "I would go through fire and water to serve you." The old trials by ordeal, once the custom in England, are here referred to, when the ordeals both by fire and water could be performed by deputy. Often this was the service of friendship, but just as often done for a certain sum. In the one ordeal the person passed through a place where red hot plowshares were set up at irregular intervals, the man or woman being blindfolded and barefooted. In the other the person, bound hand and foot, was thrown into the water; if he swam safely to dry land he was innocent. His death was proof of his guilt. The phrase, however, may have an indirect reference to the thought in Isaiah "When thou passest through the water I will be with thee; when thou walkest through the fire thou shalt not be burned." An Apt Simile. Some men have a career like a gol: ball. They are helped out of one hole only to get into another.-Lippincott's

Useful Diversions. There is an affection in every employment, and it gives the spirit energy and keeps the mind intent upon its work or study. This, if it be not relaxed, becomes dull, and its earnestness flags-as salt that has lost its savor, so that it has no pungency or relish; or as a bended bow, which, unless it be unbent, loses the power that it derives from its elasticity. Just so the mind, kept from day to day in the same ideas, without variety. So the eyes, when they look only at one object or continually upon one color. For, to look continually at a thing which is black, or continually at red or at white, destroys the sight. Thus if one looks continually at the snow the sight is destroyed, but it is enlivened if he looks in succession or at the same time upon many colors. Every form delights by its varietiesas a garland of roses of different colors arranged in beautiful order. Hence it is that the rainbow is more charming than the light itself .- Emanuel Swe-

The King of Rome.

To teach his son obedience to nursery rules Napoleon gave strict orders that he never be admitted to his apartments if he came thither alone. One morning the little king of Rome came trotting along the corridor and, looking up at the tall officer on guard, imperiously ordered: "Open the door for me. I want to see papa."

The officer, true to his instructions, answered gently, but firmly, "Sire, I cannot open the door to your majestv.'

"Why not?" demanded the little autocrat. "I am the little king." At the gentle reminder, "But your majesty is all alone," the golden haired cherub seemed somewhat nonplused, but, his governess appearing a moment later, he seized her hand and, thus protected, stamped his tiny foot and cried: "Open the door! Outrages of the Telephone.

That the telephone has blessed many a man, saved many lives and helped pile up fortunes is true, but has it not cursed some women, ruined more lives and hastened domestic misfortune? It has. Has it not become the favorite pastime of the women with nothing to do? It has. Does it not accelerate gossip and aid the flirt and the wayward constantly? It does. Self indulgent women waste their husbands' money by ordering food over the too handy telephone rather than bother to dress for the street, thereby losing both their wholesome morning exercise and their chance thriftily to secure the best there is for the price at market or at stores from which the family larder is supplied. The time wasted by women in foolish phoning can never be offset by time gained by forehanded men in business, for what shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world if his "world" is lost through folly?
