At a meeting of the Lutheran Ministers' Association on Monday morning at the Bible House, on East Fayette street, Baltimore, a resolution was adopted expressing hearty interest in and sympathy with the Anti-Saloon League bill now pending in the Legislature. An eastbound freight train, containing 35 cars, was wrecked on Monday, at Maria Furnace, one mile west of Fairfield, on the Baltimore and Harrisburg division of the Western Maryland Railroad. The wreck was caused by the rails spreading. Fifteen cars loaded with coal were derailed and piled up in a heap. Wrecking crews were dispatched from Hagerstown and Hanover and cleared the tracks.

Spelling bees will be conducted throughout York county, Pa., during the next scholastic year, so that the pupils of the public schools may become more proficient in orthography. County Superintendent C. W. Stine has prepared a book of 5,000 practical words which will be used in these contests. Plans are being considered to hold one of these spelling bees during the annual convention of the York County School Directors' Association. Prizes will be awarded the successful contestants.

The Waynesboro Herald, says; "The Rev. Dr. S. W. Owen, pastor of St. John's Lutheran church, Hagerstown, is one of the latest recruits to the rank of automobilists. A handsome car was delivered to Dr. Owen, Thursday. Robert Knodle delivered the car and after driving around the city a little Dr. Owen took the wheel. Although the year 1909 was a period of partial recovery from the strenuous times following the panic of 1907, the Pennsylvania Railroad made gross earn-ings which were surpassed in only one year that of 1907, and it shows a net income which was only surpassed in the year 1906. After meeting all charges the company had available $35,159,087, of which only about 54% was required to pay dividends. Deducting the amount appropriated to provide for sinking funds and to retire the principal of car trusts, there was left $31,205,952 available for dividends, a sum which is equal to nearly 10% upon the amount of stock outstanding last year. By this splendid showing the management fulfills all that may reasonably be expected of it by the

Dr. Bateman Finds North Pole.

(Editor Carroll Record.) Startling News! I have discovered the North Pole up here in the extreme northern part of New York, and I am sorry Dr. Cook missed it, for if he had just come here he would have had it. Our thermometer, this morning, registered 22 degrees below zero, which is considered here not so bad. It ranges anywhere from 15 below to 35 and 40 below zero, and one morning two years ago it went

Mrs. Apple.

My! this is cold enough, and sometimes I felt like saying, as the Psalmist—"Oh! that I had the wings of a bird, for then would I fly away,"—a little nearer to the South Pole. But don't say a word; the weather is charming in the satisfactorily for the strikers. It is claim summer and the country beautiful, and many places of interest near-by.

It is the enchanted ground in the summer, but "who can stand before His cold" in winter, without a heavy overcoat made of coon skins? It is a strange Congressman Longworth, of Ohio, the son-in-law of Ex-president Roosevelt, will likely be the Republican conditions. Bear. But you ask, produce your records, your credentials that you have been at the North Pole that we may examine them?

Now, I have not lost them, as Dr. Cook claims he did, for the many tons of coal and other fuel used in the furnace, to fight Jack Frost, are my evidences, and they cannot be lost. Notwithstanding all this, the atmosphere is very dry, and the cold is not so hard to endure, when one is well protected with heavy clothing, as you would suppose.

The coldest day we have had, so far, was about a week ago, when the thermometer indicated 35 below zero. This is all the North Pole I want, so let me plant the "Stars and Stripes," the sym-bol and standard of our liberties; and before another winter, we may be a lit-tle further away from the North Pole.

LOCAL OPTION DEFEATED

Wide Bill was Lost in the House.

The state wide Local Option bill was reported in the House, on Wednesday, ccording to program. The report was without recommendation, four members being for, and four against the measure, with one member non-committal. The first motion, to strike out the enacting clause, carried 50 to 48, which was followed by a motion to reconsider and lay that on the table, which carried by a vote of 51 to 47.

The closeness of the vote was expected, but it was apparently sure that the bill would pass by a few votes. Mr. Anderson charges that there was treachery, somewhere, and that something was done the right before which expended. done the night before which caused a few members to break their promises.

The addresses against the bill were bitter, and Superintendent Anderson was personally scored in an extremely aggressive manner. A clash occurred between the Speaker and several of the floor leaders who attempted to have Messrs Anderson and Mills ordered off the floor, although they were present with the permission of the Speaker.

The only member who took active part for the bill was Mr. Ford, of Somerset, who defended it in a temperate and strongly worded speech. The chief opponents of the bill were Messrs Benson, Girdwood, Dawkins, Fox, Carr and Marriott, all from Baltimore and Baltimore county. Members from the city and county are directly responsible for killing the bill. The debate lasted three hours.

Messrs Snader, Hesson and Hill, of the Carroll County delegation, voted for the bill, while Mr. Stoner voted against

The fight for Local Option is not yet ended, and an effort will likely be made to have the bill presented as a local bill applying to each county. Mr. Anderson made the following statement on the re-

"We had a majority of the votes until last night or this morning. The public can surmise the cause for the change as well as we can. Several men who in the most positive and unequivocal manner assured friends of the local option bill that they would support it, went wrong.

We will announce a definite policy at the Lyric meeting on Sunday, if not before. This policy is already fully worked out, but will be officially adopted by the headquarters' committee to-morrow morning. We are going to test the good faith of the gentlemen who opposed the bill. They stated that they will give the bill. They stated that they will give the bill for any community which wants it. We believe that the majority of those most actively opposed to the bill have no honest intention of doing anything of the sort. We are going to "call" their bluff and test their sincerity and intend to put the whole legislature on record.'

Proposed Indian Statue in N. Y.

A bill introduced in both Houses of By a Majority of Two, the State Wide Bill was Lost in Congress providing for a colossal statue of the North American Indian to be placed in New York Harbor will be replaced in New York Harbor will be reported in the House on March 1. This measure was introduced by Representative Joseph A. Goulden and Senator Chauncey M. Depew, of New York, and provides that there shall be erected without expense to the United States Government, by Rodman Wanamaker, of New York City, and others, on a United States reservation in the Harbor of New York, a memorial to the memory of the North American Indian. It is further provided that a Commission consisting of the Chairman of the Committee on Library, of the Senate, the Chairman of the Committee on Library, of the House, and the Secretaries of State, War, Navy, and Interior, the Attorney General and Robert C. Ogden, of New York, shall be created with full authority to select the site in the Harbor of New York and a suitable design, and to contract for and superintend the construction of the me-

This Bill is the result of a suggestion made by Mr. Rodman Wanamaker, at a celebrated dinner given last May at Sherry's, New York, in honor of Col. Cody, the tamous Indian scout. The idea of erecting a statue of an Indian, with arms outstretched in welcome at the gateway of the New World met with such instant enthusiasm, that there is little doubt, but that the measure will meet with unanimous support. While the ways and means of providing money to finance the enterprise have not yet been decided upon, it is expected that the statue will be a National Monument to perpetuate the memory of the First American, and an opportunity will be given to every one who desires to contribute; it is estimated that one penny from every man, woman, and child in the United States will furnish ample means for its erection.

Already various tribes of the Order of Red Men throughout the United States have taken steps to contribute their share to the general fund. It is planned that each of the five hundred thousand members of the Order of Red Men represented in the four thousand tribes in the United States shall contribute two cents each, which would amount to $10,-000. A pile of copper cents amounting to $10,000 is far more imposing than a single check for that amount donated by some one individual to whom it would mean so little.

The idea of this statue originated with Mr. Rodman Wanamaker, of Philadel-phia, during an expedition made by him in 1908, for the purpose of studying the Indian on his own ground. His first impulse was to present the statue to the country, but the consensus of opinion is that it should be a national gift, and that every child in the country should be allowed to contribute one penny in memory of a race that is fast becoming

Will Forestry Pay?

With the increasing cost of building material and timber of all kinds, the question is often asked wby not grow timber for profit? The fact that it takes many years to grow a timber crop deters most people from undertaking it. Conditions today are more favorable for the adoption of forestry methods than ever before. There are large areas everywhere that are better suited to timber growing than for any other purpose and such lands will eventually be managed for timber production. It is a crop that requires a minimum amount of labor and good prices assured. In most cases the land is already fully stocked with young growth which, with a little care, can be developed into valuable forests.

The writer recently examined a volunteer growth of vellow locust, 18 years old, on a mountain side in Garret county. A majority of the trees were big enough to make two fence posts each. The stand had been thinned at the proper time and would produce on the average 1.500 posts per acre. 'On a mountain farm of 350 acres in Washington County, about 150 acres had grown up in locust the trees being about 6 years old. question asked by the owner was, this stand of locust net me at the end of the next 15 years more than clearing up the land and renting it for farming purposes?" By comparing the rate of growth of the trees and the probable return in 15 years as compared with the net rental for the same amount of cleared land, the balance was decidedly in favor of growing locust fence posts in preference to corn, and the land-owner has decided to let the locust grow.

While locust is probably the best tree for fence post production, there are number of other trees that will produce equal financial returns for other purposes, such as chestnut, for poles: llow poplar, loblolly pine and red oak for saw timber. Of course a longer time will be required to grow telephone poles grow fence posts and a still longer time to grow saw logs, but the value of the product is likely to increase, to a certain limit, in proportion to the age of the crop or even at a greater rate. If practical forestry will pay under presnt conditions, surely the profits to be derived from future timber crops with the certain advance of prices makes it a good proposition.

WORK OF THE LEGISLATURE.

Legislative Session too Short---Which?

The municipal woman's suffrage bill was favorably reported in the House, on Tuesday, but immediately it was "indefinitely postponed" by a vote of 67 to 24. A number of addresses were made, for and against the bill, and notwithstanding the presence of a large number of the fair sex in the galleries, the bill went down to defeat through the perversity of ungallant men. Messrs Hesson, Stoner and Snader, of Carroll, voted to post-pone, while Mr. Hill voted for the ladies. Senator Price, chairman of the Finance Committee of the Senate, and Chairman Carville D. Benson, of the House Ways and Means Committee, announce that hearings granted delegations in the interest of appropriations will cease after Thursday of next week. These two committees have an immense amount of work to do after the claims of institutions are presented, and the closing weeks of the session will be busy weeks for all the members, especially for the chairman. Mr. Hesson has introduced a bill which repeals the law, as it applies to Carroll County, which prevents magistrates from writing wills, mortgages, deeds, etc. This law was passed at the last session, entirely in the interest of attorneys. A bill for the general repeal of the law throughot the state, was deteated by a close margin.

There are indications that important legislation will be pushed rapidly from now on, without much debate. The main thing is for the big Democratic majority to reach decisions, as the Republicans cut too small a figure to accomplish anything, and when party conclusions are reached, the minority will not be given much consideration. Votexpected to follow rapidly after committee reports; in other words, legislation will be "railroaded" through.

The state wide Local Option bill defeated, on Wednesday, by a vote of 50 to 48, a tuller account of which appears in another column. An examination of the books of the secretary of the Senate and the chief clerk of the House on Wednesday showed that there are a large number of bills be-fore the committees. Some of these bills have been under consideration for several weeks, and as the session is nearing a close it is believed that they should be reported upon. In the Senate 284 bills have been introduced and of this number 201 are in committees. In the House 468 bills have been introduced and 339 are in committees. One of the most important measures, to Baltimore city, before the legislature, is a bill to repeal the monopolistic provisions by which the Consolidated Gas Company controls the cost of gas in the city. The press of the city is strongly in favor of repeal, as well as the Governor, who thinks repeal, followed, by the pas-sage of the public utilities bill, would be best for the city, as well as carry out the promise made in the Democratic platform. The Gas Company has a strong lobby at work to prevent the repeal of present favorable legislation.

A bill reducing the liquor license fee in Baltimore, from $1000. to $750., was defeated in the House, on Thursday There is another bill before the legislature, in the interest of liquor men, to reduce the Club license, in Baltimore, from $1000. to $250. Under existing law, Club license is $1000., the same as saloons, after May 1, this year.

A bill compelling railroad companies to advertise their timetables in the newspapers will be introduced in the House of Delegates, Mr. Ausherman, of Frederick county. The bill affects the entire State, and provides that the advertise-ments shall be printed in one paper in any county or town where only published and in two where two or more are published.

Pinchot Affirms; Wilson Denies.

Washington, March 1.-Gifford Pinchot testified before the Ballinger-Pinchot tury date. Others had been minted just joint investigating committee of the Senate and House to-day that he had the consent of James Wilson, secretary of Agriculture, and his suporior officer, write his letter to Senator Dolliver. This the letter that resulted in Pinchot's dismissal by President Taft from the forestry service on the ground of insubordination.

Secretary Wilson, who is said to have voted in a Cabinet meeting for Pinchot's dismissal, sat only a few feet from the former forester when he made this statement. Later the veteran Cabinet member took the witness chair and, angry clear through, declared that he never had authorized the sending of the letter.

It was the most dramatic incident that has occurred in the Ballinger-Pinchot investigation. The aged secretary fairly shouted his denial and brought his fist down on the table with a bang. The secretary, it is true, was obliged to qualify his denial. He had, he admitted, given Mr. Pinchot permission to write to Senator Dolliver, giving him departmental information, but he never intended the authorization to cover a letter which would "insult the President of the United States." Secretary Wilson made a poor witness. He seemed to be very much worked up over the incident, and on several occasions lost his patience and got mixed up in his answers. The comparatively recent order issued by the President forbidding subordinates in the departments from giving out any information without the express authorization of the department heads was the and politics, of every periodical published in the United States, with name tary and Mr. Pinchot. It was under the operation of this order the President Taft dismissed the forester, and Mr. Pinchot only a few weeks before her death she In many ways, it is a cyclopedia of facts and statistics relative to every state, der and that the President's action was portions that were falling into ruin and

At the Mercy of the Japs.

Leslie M. Shaw, former secretary of Leslie M. Shaw, former secretary of the treasury, denies that he had predicted war with Japan in his speech at Morristown, N. J., which is said to have occasioned comment in Tokio. "I did cite certain well-known facts, the logic of which spell war," said Mr. Shaw. Continuing he said:

"I cited the fact that we sent 16 war-ships to the Pacific Ocean to demonstrate our prowess, and hired 27 ships built of foreign material, in foreign yards and floating foreign flags, to carry the necessary supplies, and stated what all men know, that one hostile shot from the meanest country that owns a gun would have sent every one of those home, for no country would consent to have its flag mixed up in our contentions. We are at peace with the world, and yet during 1909 the War Department hired over 40 foreign ships to do its work. We send food to the soldiers in the Philippine Islands in Japanese bottoms ippine Islands in Japanese bottoms.

"I called attention to the fact that Japan can (I did not say she will, but she can) put 200,000 soldiers in Hawaii in 30 days without firing a shot, and being at war we could not send 100,000 over there to contest the territory in two years. We have no ships with which to do it and in the event of war we could neither hire nor buy.

"Japan can land a fleet at Seattle any foggy day without so much as causing the barking of a dog and she can march her troops down the coast and take every excuse for fortifications which we have on the coast without serious opposition. Not one of the forts is protected from the rear and cannon that are mounted to defend against attack by sea cannot be turned around in fifteen minutes to resist an attack from the land.

"I also cited the fact that if every powder mill in the United States was to make powder 24 hours per day for 30 days, the product would last our present navy two hours, so that in case of war if every powder mill was to quit making sporting powder and blasting powder and work 24 hours per day for the government we could fight two hours every month. "These are not state secreis. Everybody knows them except ourselves. And still we go on building battleships. In this we do well, but battleships without colliers and transports are absolutely worthless. In case of war we could not get our Atlantic fleet to San Francisco. No vessel in the fleet can carry enough coal to take it there, and we have no colliers and could then hire none. I did not predict what we would wake up to in case of war.

Lived in Poverty Surrounded by Wealth.

Burlington, N. J., March 2.
Search through the home of Miss Elizabeth A. Hays for more of the gold which was left by that wealthy spinster, who died Monday night, was continued to-day by Reginald Branch, executor of the estate.

the estate.

Miss Hays lived in an old-fashioned farm house on the River road, near here, and at the time of her death was eighty-six years old. She had always professed berself too poor to employ a housekeeper or a companion. Although Miss Hays died suddenly she left a will, but how this disposes of ne estate has not yet been divulged Yesterday, when Mr. Branch went to the Hays home to find what his client had left, he found the dwelling to be a treasure house. From a little pasteboard box, tucked away in a closet, tumbled nearly $800 in gold pieces. An old family Bible was interleaved with $20 notes. In bed clothing, in mattresses, table bags, purses and boxes, gold was found. Besides about $1,000 in cash, which was plucked from various hiding places,$18, 000 worth of gilt-edged mortgages, were discovered.

"And yesterday," said Mr. Branch, "we made only a beginning. To-day we expect to find much more treaspre. I believe Miss Hay's fortune will approximate $50,000.

Some of the coins found in the Hays home were very old, bearing a 17th cenafter the Civil War, while still others were not more than a few years old. It is said that the house contains considerable ancient silver plate. In every room there is the rarest of furniture, and stored away in the attic the playthings of rats and covered with dust, there were six mahogany spinning wheels. Miss Havs was a member of one of the oldest Burlington county families. She was an aunt of the late Sheriff Nathan Hays, who was postmaster at Burlington at the time of his death a few years ago. Like many of the old residents of this section, Miss Hays had little faith in banks, but none of her relatives or friends ever imagined she had stored up the savings of a lifetime in her own

One of the first persons to visit the farm house today was Schnyler Rainer, the farmer of Florence township who lack of faith in banks resulted in the robbery of his home last fall. Rainer, who lives about three miles from the Havs farm, was a cousin and one of the few living relatives of Miss Hays.

Rainer said that he always knew Miss Haves was well-to-do, but had never said anything about it, as he considered it nobody's business.

"I suppose she was worth $100,000 or so," Rainer said. "I never asked her about it. She owns five or six houses in Burlington and about five farms. I guess they'll find she also is the owner of the Dutch Neck shad fishery and farm. I don't know how many mort-gages she had."

Moving Time.

In the country, "moving time" comes but once a year-April 1-and that once is too often when it becomes a habit, or as an indication of restlessness, or shiftlessness. Necessarily, there must be movings, especially in sections where the tenant system is in vogue, and to some about due to natural causes; but, it is perhaps a good sign of contentment and prosperity when neigborhood changes

Another Term for Taft.

The Republican organization was never more busily engaged in the game of national politics than now. It wishes to win the Congressional elections this coming fall, and it also wishes to win in the Presidential elections of 1912. Further than that, it wishes to make a success of the Taft administration, and to make nominated but also re-elected. All the tendencies of our political life now call for a two-term incumbency. President Cleveland intended to be a one-term President, but conditions made his renomination inevitable. Mr. Harrison. like Mr. Cleveland, was renominated for a second term, though, also like Mr. Cleveland, he was defeated in the election. Mr. McKinley was renominated under conditions that made opposition impossible. In Roosevelt's first year of the Presidency, and even in his second and third years, the elements of opposition to his nomination in 1904 were so powerful that the chances seemed quite. in favor of the coalition of leaders and interests determined to eliminate the Rough Rider from politics. It is unnecessary to recall the changed political conditions that cleared the way, in the winter of 1903-4, and made Mr. Roosevelt's renomination an easy certainty. The business of paving the way for Mr. Taft's renomination is going forward quite as actively, -now that he has been in office exactly one year, as the same sort of business went on at the same stage of Mr. Roosevelt's Presidency, and in various earlier administrations. State by State all over the country the situation has been studied with careful forecast; and nothing is allowed to pass unheeded or uninfluenced. Old-line politicians are taking lessons. - American Review of Reviews for March.

GASOLINE PLOW HORSE.

Farmer Also Does Harrowing With Homemade Tractor.

Harry B. Kean of Ontario county, N. Y., has made a gasoline plow and harrow by mounting a motor on some old binder trucks. He says of it:

"The cut shows the tractor at work drawing harrows in the orchard. It weighs 3,815 pounds. It is equipped with a ten horsepower double cylinder motor of the two cycle type. It draws the two three-horse spring tooth harrows when set about as deep in the ground as they will go at the speed of one and one-half miles per hour, covering about two acres per hour. As we have quite a good deal of fruit on our farms, the principal work of the tractor has been just as shown in the picture, excepting that part of the time the harrow used is a four horse double action disk, heavily weighted with large stone. We find the machine very advantageous for this work, as it goes steadily and does not work to one side or the other, so that you can keep the drags right to within two or three inches of the trees without the danger of barking them.

"We use the machine also in a great many other kinds of work. It hauls a two bottom gang plow (fourteen inch bottoms) seven inches deep at the same speed, and with the steering arrangement we have I think we can turn around on as narrow a headland as the horses can-can turn it in a circle a very little larger in diameter than its length. We grind our own feed, using the engine to run the mill. Our mill is not large, but with this amount of power we grind thirty bushels per hour. The tractor is very handy for pulling out brush and young saplings in old fence rows; also for dragging off bowlders, as it is so much stronger than a team of horses. It is also the best wire fence stretcher we have ever used. You can draw the wire up to any tension you choose and set the brake and the wire is held till stapled. "We have never kept accurate account of the fuel used when plowing or dragging with the engine, but I believe it averages about $1.50 worth per day, which we do not consider much Jailbird Brought Seed From Bermuda when it is taking the place of two teams of horses. From the use we have had of the machine we do not now feel as though we could possibly get along without it. I believe motive power in the future is going to revolutionize farming operations as greatly as it has the road travel in the past few years."

Home Pasteurization of Milk.

Milk is most conveniently pasteurized in the bottles in which it is delivered. To do this use a small pail with a perforated false bottom. An inverted pie tin with a few holes punched in it will answer this purpose. This will raise the bottles from the bottom of the pail, thus allowing a free circulation of water and preventing bumping of the bottles. Punch a hole through the cap of one of the bottles and insert a thermometer. The ordinary floating type of thermometer is likely to be inaccurate, and if possible a good thermometer with the scale etched on the glass should be used. Set the bottles of milk in the pail and fill the pail with water nearly to the level of the milk. Put the pail on the stove or over a gas flame and heat it until the thermometer in the milk shows not less than 150 degrees or more than 155 degrees F. The bottles should then be removed from the water and allowed to stand from twenty to thirty minutes. The temperature will fall slowly, but may be held more uniformly by covering the bottles with a towel. The punctured cap should be replaced with a new one or the bettle should be covered with an inverted cap. After the milk has been held as directed it should be cooled. To avoid danger of breaking the bottle the water should be warm at first. Replace the warm water slowly with cold water. After cooling, milk should in all cases be held at the lowest available

LAND HUNGER IN CITIES.

Increasing Desire to Get Out on the Farm and What Causes It.

The American people have always had land hunger. They have it yet, and the people of the cities have it in more acute form than ever before. Several things have conspired to develop the "back to the land" idea in our city population. The first is the increased cost of living in cities. The most economical and prudent man who works for wages in a great city today cannot save much money even if he is well paid. Thousands who make what would have been called high wages ten or twenty years ago have little more than enough to pay their current expenses. Other thousands are barely existing without the possibility of becoming independent of the uncertainty of employment and the certainty of the collector's calls.

The panic of 1907, which took employment from many people without reducing their living expenses to any great extent, caused thousands tothink seriously of getting into some business in which "the bite to eat and the dud to wear" will not depend wholly on matters beyond their control, such as panics, rents and prices.

Another cause of the present land hunger in cities is the reading of articles and advertisements in the daily papers. Never before were afloat so many wonderful tales of success in farming-success achieved without experience and without capital, independence acquired in a short time, prosperity on a few acres following close after the lack of it in the city. Not all this literature is false, but much bears with it evidence of embellishment, and some tells of achievements that are clearly impossible. Of course the advertisements calculated to interest the city man in land turn toward him the bright side of the picture. It is their purpose to interest him to the extent of selling land to him, and, whether such advertising appears in type or in the form of 'exhibits, it does not and cannot be expected to show him anything but the attractive side of life on the land.

It is a good thing for the public to become deeply interested in farming, to study it and learn more about it. Anything that makes men do this will at last result in a better understanding between the city and the country people of this great nation. But it is deplorable that in all this there must be so much misrepresentation, such inflated expectations and at last so many losses and disappointments, for many who attempt to gain independence without sufficient capital, without knowledge and without experience must be disappointed even if they do their level best. 't would be so in any business.

True friends of city people will caution them against rashly investing all they have in something they know nothing about, will show them the necessity of study and counsel them against rash steps. The savings of many of these land hungry city people have come hard, and they should not be lured into investments that mean and Startled Pennsylvania.

Now that so much controversy is under way concerning the wonder berry it is interesting to read the reception accorded the first tomato grown in the United States, for both belong to the same family, solanaceae.

In reality the wonder berry is simply a hybrid but edible nightshade. The crossing of two species gave a flavor superior to either of the parents, and when eaten raw the taste is much that of a tomato and fully as good. It is not at all bitter when ripe, yet in its greener stage it is not so bitter as a green tomato. The only way in which the two fruits cannot compare is in the matter of size.

The story is told that a good many years ago a man recently arrived from the Bermuda islands was committed to a Pennsylvania jail. He had with him a few seeds, which he planted in the jail yard, but before the plants came to maturity he was discharged. The plants bore strange fruit, which, as it ripened, changed from green to red and was greatly admired.

The matron of the jail, sure that it was poisonous, cautioned all the inmates against eating the fruit, but as she desired to save specimens of it she planted some of the seeds the following spring, and just as the fruit was well ripened the man from Bermuda revisited the jail and asked to see the plant. He called for pepper, salt and vinegar and to the astonishment and horror of the spectators ate the fruit with a relish. Having finished, he told them that this strange fruit was a tomato, or, translated into English, a love apple, and that it was wholesome and nutritious. The seeds were therefore carefully preserved and distributed among friends and neighbors, who cultivated the plant as a curiosity, but it was years before prejudice gave way to appetite and this now most popular vegetable came into general use. Even row many people remember it as an ornamental rather than a useful plant. Probably more tomatoes are canned than any other fruit or vegetable, as they can be served in so many ways, eaten raw, with salt, pepper and vinegar or with a salad dressing, or plainly stewed in sauces, soups, preserves and pickles. The tomato is ever ready for an emergency, and the provident housekeeper is sure to have it in reserve. At first it was a small fruit somewhat bitter in flavor. Who knows but the wonder berry, now in a crude state. may be improved in both size and flavor and in far less time than the tomato? Give it a chance.

The Sugar Trust Indictments. The coming trial of the sugar trust officials, recently indicted by a federal grand jury sitting in New York, promises some interesting developments. The indictments were the result of an investigation by the grand jury of a $1,250,000 loan which the American Sugar Refining company, generally known as the sugar trust, made on Dec. 30, 1903, to Adolph Segal of Philadelphia as a part of a plan whereby control of Segal's Pennsylvania Sugar Refining company was obtained.

The corporation and eight individuals, including the president of the company, were indicted. The trial will probably take place in the fall.

The indictment charges the individual defendants with a conspiracy to violate the Sherman anti-trust act by restraining trade and commerce among the states.

Washington B. Thomas, the president of the American Sugar Refining company, succeeded the late Henry O. Havemeyer as head of the trust on the death of the latter. For years previously he had been a director of the company and influential in its affairs. Mr. Thomas is a New Englander by birth and resides in Boston. The indictment consists of fourteen counts, and the penalty prescribed for each offense is a fine of $5,000 or one year in prison, or both.

The Real Work.

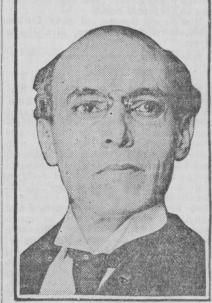

Some people have an idea that a humorist must be bubbling over with fun all the time, which idea is incorrect, of course, because a humorist cannot afford to crack jokes or tell funny stories when he needs the money they might bring to him when sold. Instead of appearing funny, therefore, he is a lugubrious sort of wretch with big ears.

However, sometimes a humorous re mark will fall from his lips, but he always sells it later op, if he's lucky. John Kendrick Bangs was greeted by a gushing young lady not long ago. "Oh, I'm so glad to meet you," she told him. "I have wanted to ask you if it is hard work to write jokes?"

"Hard work to write them?" he murmured. "Not at all. The real hard work comes when one tries to think them into being."

New Chaplain of the Senate. The Rev. Ulysses Grant Baker Pierce, who succeeded the late Dr. Edward Everett Hale as chaplain of the United States senate, is pastor of All Souls' Unitarian church, Washington, where President Taft worships. inent for six generations. The new senate chaplain is forty-four years old and was educated at Hillside college, Michigan. He received the degree of bachelor of divinity in 1890 and then took a postgraduate course at Harvard. He was ordained to the Unitarian ministry in 1891 and from 1893 to 1896 was pastor of the Unitarian church at Pomona, Cal. His next pastorate was at Ithaca, N. Y., where he remained until called to All Souls', Washington, in 1901. Dr. Pierce is a member of the Cosmos club and the author of "The Soul of the Bible."

The Leather of the Egyptians.

The ancient Egyptians were skilled in the art of tanning leather and manufactured it in various ways and for various purposes besides that of furnishing covering for the feet. Indeed, it is to those builders of the pyramids that we are indebted for the first artistic forms of footwear, and, so far as can be ascertained from history and the researches of archaeologists, the Egyptians were the first shoemakers who were worthy of that name. It is a fact, too, that tanners of today employ very much the same methods as did the ancients. About the same materials are used, and the processes are almost precisely similar to those in vogue hundreds of years ago. It is true that tanners of the present day have found a means of greatly shortening the time required to convert a hide into leather and that steam power and modern machinery have done much to expedite and improve the processes of finishing the leather; but, after all, the principals of tanning remain the same as they have been from the first .-London Globe.

Just Like Eve's Apple.

A fruit supposed to bear the mark of Eve's teeth is one of the many botanical curiosities of Ceylon. The tree on which it grows is known by the significant name of "the forbidden fruit," or "Eve's apple tree." The blossom has a very pleasant scent, but the really remarkable feature of the tree, the one to which it owes its name, is the fruit. It is beautiful and hangs from the tree in a peculiar manner. Orange on the outside and deep crimson within, each fruit has the appearance of having had a piece bitten out of it. This fact, together with its poisonous quality, led the Mohammedans to represent it as the forbidden fruit of the garden of Eden and to warn men against its noxious properties. The mark upon the fruit is attributed to Eve. Why the bite of Adam did not also leave its mark is not known, but as only one piece seems to be missing its loss is ascribed to the woman.

Constable Had the Evidence.

One of Philadelphia's leading corporation lawvers was visiting in New England, and, returning home, he told how he had been arrested there. He had not had a vacation for some years, and, getting into the country, he proceeded to be a boy again.

He struck a piece of country road and ran along for a half mile. He found a fence and vaulted it. He saw a tree and climbed it. Finally he returned to the village. Just as he struck the town a hand was laid on his shoulder, and a man said in a gruff

Ministers Aboard Ship.

On quality for quality basis, the mail order house cannot compare with the dealer. To illustrate this, they will describe a harness as solid nickel plated mounting. The phrase is true, but the deception is that solid nickel plating is on iron and will rust in less than 10 days' use, and the leather is hemlock stock, instead of oak. Remember, solid nickel will never rust or get brassy. If you don't wish to buy of me, come in and I will show you the difference, and you will be wise wherever you do buy.

A Penny Saved Is A Penny Earned

A DOLLAR SPENT AT HOME Is a Dollar That May Come Back to Your Purse His Perfect English.

"Did you ever notice anything peculiar in Professor W.'s speech?" inquired a friend of the professor's.

"Why, no; I don't think I did." "Weil, he would never be guilty of saying what you said just now."

"He wouldn't? What did I say?" "You said 'I don't think I did.' " "Is there anything out of the way about that?" "Yes. You didn't say what you meant at all. You didn't mean that you didn't think, but that you thought you didn't. Professor W. is so careful that he says exactly what he weans and nothing else. You do not mean that you do not think when you say that, but that you do think that such and such is not. Nearly everybody does that, so it sounds queer when people speak as the professor does and say 'I think I don't' instead of 'I don't think I do,' as the average individual would say. Another of the professor's idiosyncrasies is to say 'I'll not' where you or I would say 'I won't.' All those little ways sound queer, but they're absolutely correct and irreproachable. The professor uses more perfect English than any one else I know."-New York Press.

Bribery In English Elections.

Bribery is a term which every candidate for a seat in the imperial assembly dreads, for the law visits offenders against it with very heavy punishment, and more than one politician has realized that the game is not worth the candle. The would be M. P. must be very careful not to give, lend or promise money or money's worth to induce an elector to vote for him or abstain from voting for an opponent. Neither must he pay the day's wages of any voter or give him money for railway fares or loss of time. If he does and is elected the candidate loses his seat, and both he and the recipient of his ill advised gift are liable to twelve months' imprisonment or a fine not exceeding £200. Even treating the wives or relatives of electors may constitute an offense, and the quantity is immaterial if the intention is corrupt.

The withdrawal of custom from a tradesman, if done with a view to affecting the man's vote. constitutes undue influence, for which the punishment is the same as in the case of bribery.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Australian Stock Whip.

The stock whip in the skillful hands of the Australian is not only an article of the greatest utility, but also a formidable weapon. Owing to its great length-the lash varies from twelve to thirty feet-and the shortness of the butt, which measures only eighteer inches, it is an extremely difficult and awkward thing to wield, and the beginner is apt to hurt himself if he does not exercise care when practicing. A well trained stockman, however, can hit a cent every time at ten paces distance and with the dreaded lash in his hand, cracking like pistol shots, can keep a mob of wild cattle in check. If used with full force it will cut through skin and flesh like a knife, says the Wide World Magazine, but unless a beast shows distinct vice the stockman uses it more for the purpose of instilling fear than of causing pain. It can also be used as a bolas, a Patagonian form of the lasso, and an adept can catch and hold a beast by causing the lash to curl around its legs.

Luck of Peacock Feathers. The peacock's feathers superstition is nothing like so common as it used to be. Perhaps Whistler's celebrated peacock room helped to break it down. At any rate, peacock's feathers are ordinary enough articles of decoration in many happy and placid homes. There are shops in London that keep large stocks of them, and you may buy these bringers of misfortune at a shilling a bundle. Did the superstition originate because of the reported pride of the peacock on the "pride shall have a fall" theory, or is it that the "eye" of the feather is supposed to see undesirable happenings which somehow get published upon the housetops? One rather feels that the beautiful tail was nature's compensation to the bird for giving it the most abominable of all voices.-London Chronicle.

WRITING FOR THE PRESS.

PART IV.

Relating to Death.

Nothing is harder to write about than death. There is the fear that the language may seem cold, unsympathetic, even flippant. Instinctively the writer seeks more formal, dignified words and phrases than the ordinary happenings of life require, and in doing this he often gets beyond the borders of good taste, though writing with the best of intentions. Let him remember that in language as in everything else relating to death, the simplest is the wisest. For instance, let him avoid both noun and verb 'decease,' and above all, not refer to 'the deceased' or 'the defunct.' Do not say, 'he departed this life,' 'he passed out of existence,' 'he paid the debt of Nature,' 'he was gathered to his fathers.' 'his spirit quitted its earthly habitation, winged its way to eternity, shook offits burden.' In point of brevity, good taste, and solemnity, 'he died' is far preferable. Likewise 'death' is better than 'demise' or 'dissolution.'

'Funeral from the late residence' is a common phrase that grates on the ear of every person of good taste. The funeral may be the ceremonies or the procession, and of course it is only in reference to the procession that the word 'from' can be used with propriety, and that is not what is meant. 'Late' is a useless word, so that the better phrasing would be, 'Funeral at the residence.' Likewise 'funeral' alone is better than 'funeral over the remains.' 'Cortege' is a French word meaning 'procession, retinue, train of attendants,' and is not appropriately used in describing funerals. The word 'obsequies' should be reserved for imposing funeral rites.

A dead body is a 'corpse,' but that word is too suggestive of the morgue and the dissecting-room; it is a 'carcass,' but usage restricts that word to beasts. 'Remains' is a word to be avoided and 'relics' is archaic. 'Body' is much the 'Coffin' is a simpler and better word than 'casket.' Say 'crape,' and not, 'sable insignia of death.' A 'cerement' is a cloth that has been dipped in melted wax, in which bodies are wrapped when embalmed. A 'cenotaph' is an empty tomb or monument erected to the memory of one buried elsewhere. A 'catafalque' is a temporary structure like a tomb or A 'mausoleum' is a magnificent tomb. A 'mortuary' is a burial-place. 'Cemetery' has come into common use for 'grave-yard,' but the old term, still common in rural districts, has too many solemn associations to be discarded. 'Morgue' is more clearly acceptable, a substitute for 'dead-house' or 'charnelhouse,' terms no longer in oral use. 'Burial' is preferable to 'interment.'

late' before the name of a dead man; surely it is superfluous to speak of 'the widow of the late John Smith' or 'the will of the late Henry Brown.'

Whether when a husband dies, he leaves a wife or a widow, is a subject of controversy, but as everybody says that the wife who dies leaves a husband, not a widower, it would seem that consistency favors the form, 'leaves a wife.' 'Suicide' must never be used as a verb. 'mortal, deadly,' it is absurd to couple with it 'serious,' or similar words. 'Met with a serious and fatal accident' is part of a sentence not rarely seen. 'Sad and all domestic economy, whether they fatal' is another deplorable phrase.

In writing for newspaper publication, it is desirable that these facts should be given: Name; Place; age; Cause; Time; Personality, character, standing in the community; Names of children, brothers, and place of funeral; Place of burial; Officiating clergymen.

stances, is in the worst of taste. The body of a person found drowned should tion, the result of using certain condicorpse ever be called a 'stiff.'

---The Passing of the Squeak.

Most every man and woman remem-What became of the squeak?" a shoe out of a book about the oxygen and that same ship afterward sent the ball two years." R. S. McKinney, druggist, salesman was asked. "The soles of hydrogen?

THE CARROLL RECORD most shoes are made from two pieces of heavy leather," he replied. "Manufacturers learned that by putting a piece of canvas or a fibre of some sort between these pieces, the squeak would be eliminated. They did this and that's why shoes don't squeak now." - Boston Transcript.

> In our over-noisy days it is well the shoe squeak has disappeared. But there was a time when it seemed a religious necessity. Those who remember the days when the Sunday boots of calf skin were an institution in the country at least have a lively recollection of the importance of a squeaking boot.

The good old elders, deacons and preachers insisted upon having a squeak in their footgear, as it sounds was notice of their presence and silence became awesome within the church portals. The noble old preacher walking down the aisle would have, to the imaginations of the elder days, seemed lacking in something from his dignity without the squeak. The noise of his footfall, as with slow solemn tread he moved to the pulpit and deliberately mounted its steps, appeared to the listeners as part of the ritual.

To the former generations there would have seemed something missing from the make-up of the elders if they had no squeak in their shoes as they solemnly took up the collection. Occasionally there might be one late coming to church or stayed outside too long talking crops or politics to his neighbors. But if he was tardy in entering the church everybody knew of his presence by the squeak of his boot as he marched slowly to his pew. The boys and girls of those days respected the squeak. It had a sort of religious significance to them in being part of the symbols of authority of those who ministered in any way to the spiritual wants of the congregation. It was the blood. They work wonders for not the mere squeak of a mouse, but a long drawn out sort of penetrating sonorousness that seemed to have a special dignity of its own. Some of the young folks no doubt imagined the squeak of town, Md. the Sunday boot had a special solemn tone and was used only for church

It was a squeak not heard in everyday life. The poor did not possess it, as the Sabbath boot cost too much, and the unconverted did not want it, lest they be looked upon as sheep in wolves' clothing. The squeak we allude to was the special property or insignia to the preacher, elder, deacon or the largest contributor to the church—the solid man of the congregation.

Truly, the older men of the day can remember that if at any time in their youth the worthies of the church had If you have a dear desire for a splendid gone down the aisles in rubber shoes or squeakless footgear the audience would have felt as if something had dropped from the ritual or church service and

'The defining of the normal waistline is now a feature of the new fashions. "The sleeves which were in our new gowns last spring, will only be presentable this year after remodeling. Sleeves are growing shorter and the tendencies are all toward the banishing of the long sleeve for warm weather. For general every-day wear, many modified bishop sleeves will be worn, these, of course, in the long length. But the majority of the new sleeves end just below the elbow where they are finished with a fascinating little undersleeve, frequently in the form of a very small, filmy puff. Sleeves with a cap effect are smart in style and they vary greatly in length, some are not more than two inches long sleeves. Sometimes it protudes only for a couple of inches below the upper colored sleeve, both of which are finished with nothing more elaborate than a halfinch hem or a little bias self-facing. The majority of the sleeves are extremely plain and inconspicuous.

"Perhaps that is the reason why the new bracelets, many of them in antique design, are so very elaborate, making a striking contrast to the plain sleeves.'

Too Many Doctors.

Chicago, February, 28.-"The United States supports too many physicians. While Europe maintains the proportion of one physician to every 1,500 inhabitants, the United States has a physician for every 568. This overproduction is due to our too numerous low-grade medical schools and to the laxity of our laws governing them."

Henry S. Pritchett, of New York, president of the Carnegie Foundation of the Advancement of Teaching, made this assertion in an address today before the council on medical education of the American Medical Association.

We have in this country," he continued, "about 150 medical schools, or more than are to be found in the whole of Europe. Each of our schools in the last 10 years has graduated so many physicians and surgeons that the overproduction has become enormous. We have twice as many physicians per 100,-000 of population as England, four times as many as France and five times as Germany.

"Our low-grade medical schools sanctioned by our laws is largely responsible. It is admitted that the training of doctors from the low-grade schools is poor, but it is constantly asserted that these doctors are needed for the rural regions. Our investigations show that more expensively trained doctors go into the country just as the poorly trained doctors do."

Dr. Johnson had some ideas on education, especially on that diversion known as "learning a piece by heart." She said it was a knife. 'No, my dear, it was not so." "My Aunt Polly said it was a knife.' "Why, Aunt Polly's knife may do, but it was a dagger, my dear." He then asked her the meaning of "bane" and "antidote," which she was unable to give. Mrs. Gastrel said, "You cannot expect so young a child to know the meaning of such words." He then said. "My dear, how many pence are there in sixpence?" "I cannot tell, sir." was the half terrified reply. On and others reach half-way down the this, addressing himself to Mrs. Gasarm. Lesson XI .- First Quarter, For March 13, 1910.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. viii, 23-34. Memory Verses, 24-26-Golden Text, Matt. viii, 27—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Such marvelous power over the human body would lead many to desire to be with Him. But He must have a tried people, followers who are prepared to deny self in every form, willing to renounce earthly comforts and even to hold the dearest earthly relatives in a secondary place (verses 18-22, with x, 37-39; xvi, 24, 25). Oh, it means so much to be a whole hearted follower of Jesus! When we consider the cost of power in His name it is not to be wondered at that there is so little of it manifest, for few are willing to take the place of such utter self renunciation. The cost

Having given commandment to cross the sea, He entered into a ship with His disciples (18, 23). He would escape from the multitudes for a little season. He was weary, for His body was mortal, like ours, but without sin. As they sailed he fell asleep, and, although there came a great tempest, threatening to swamp their boat, He continued to sleep. How weary in body He must have been! How peaceful in the midst of a great storm! The disciples were filled with fear and awoke Him with the question, "Master, carest Thou not that we perish?" I wonder if they had a thought of the possibility of His perishing, too, for they did not seem to know Him very well as yet. He arose and rebuked the winds and the sea. Mark says that He said unto the sea: "Peace, be still. And the wind ceased, and there was a great calm." Then they marveled at Him, saying, "What manner of man is this that even the winds and the sea obey Him?" Their question reminds us of David's question when the Lord told him of His son, who would reign forever, "Is this the manner of man, O Lord God?" (II Sam. vii, 19.) His stilling the tempest reminds us of Ps. cvii. 29, "He maketh the storm a calm, so that the waves thereof are still." It is the same person of whom we read in each case. His goings forth have been from everlasting (Mic. v. 2).

It was His word which created all things and later brought order and beauty and fruitfulness out of chaos, as in the record of Gen. i. Oh, for such an acquaintance with Him as would manifest something of His power in us that others might want to know Him too! There is never a storm that His word cannot displace by a great calm. "See that ye be not troubled." "My place I give unto you." "Be still and know that I am God." Not in verse 26 His "O ye of little faith," and compare the other three times when He said the same words (vi. 30: xiv. 31: xvi. 8). Contrast His mmendation of "great faith" in viii, 10: xv, 28, and remember that "without faith it is impossible to please God" (Heb. xi, 6). Having crossed over, He is met by two demon possessed men who had their dwelling among the tombs, men whom no one could tame nor bind, for, though they had oft been bound, no chains could hold them. They were so exceedingly fierce that no one could pass by where they were. That word fierce is used in II Tim. iii, 1, and is translated "perilous" and is applied to the times in which we are living, the last days. With the combines in commerce, the conflict between labor and capital, the delusions in the pulpit and out of it, the times are certainly demon possessed, but the consummation will not be till the church is taken away and the devil shall manifest great wrath, knowing that his time is short (Rev. xii, 12). These demons knew Jesus and knew that there was torment awaiting them and that Jesus had power to send them to their place, so they besought Him that He would not send them to the abyss or bottomless pit (Luke viii, 31, R. V.), but that He would suffer them to enter into a herd of swine some distance away. Having received permission, they enter into the swine, and the whole herd run into the sea and perish. This loss of property and manifestation of His power so stirred the Gadarenes that they be sought Him to leave their coast, and He did so. The man who was healed is found sitting at the feet of Jesus clothed and in his right mind and desiring to abide with Jesus. But his request is not granted, for he is told to return to his own house and show how great things God had done for him (Luke viii, 35, 38, 39). The man went his way and published throughout the whole city how great things Jesus had done unto him. Even the keepers of the swine seemed to have no difficulty in telling their story about the loss of their property. But where do you find people now in the ordinary walks of life who have anything to tell about Him who has power to cast out demons, cleanse lepers, heal sicknesses, save from the power of sin and fill with a joy and peace with are not of this world? How much of the power of the age to come is seen in everyday life about us? Let your own heart tell, dear fellow believers, if this Jesus is so much to you that you are full to overflowing with a desire to talk of Him and of His wondrous salvation and to let Him live His life in younot a world conformed life, but another worldly life, manifesting Jesus and CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning March 13, 1910.

Topic.—Patient fulthfulness that wins the crown.—Rev. ii, 1-10, 18, 19, Comment by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

into seven parts, each one of which is subdivided seven times. The first general division is that of the churches, [Copyright, 1910, by American Press Assoof which there are seven, and each one is described just as they were in John's time, and yet typical of the churches in all ages. Most churches today can find in one of them a description of itself. In this review of seven typical churches Christ finds none altogether good and none altogether bad. He praises the good, denounces the evil and gives warnings against the continuance of the evil. The letters are addressed to the "angels," or pastors, of the churches, showing the high estimation of the pastoral office that Christ Himself possessed, a position which certain classes of people, who are trying almost constantly to belittle the Christian ministry, might well observe and find in it a profitable example.

The circumstances in which the churches of John's day found themselves no doubt led Christ in writing to them to emphasize "patient faithfulness" or faithfulness in connection with a spirit of patience. It may be easy to be faithful under difficult circumstances if we could only give way to our impatience amid the difficulties. But to be both faithful and patient under sore distress is a united virtue, well deserving the Saviour's commendation. They lived in troublous religious times. These churches were largely made up of gentiles, who found it hard to give up the faith and forms of long years of training. Then there were some Jews in them, who practically still cling to the Jewish religion. False teachers and false doctrines rapidly arose. Outside persecutions made a Christian's life an uncertain quantity. Martyrdom was of frequent occurrence. To be faithful and to be patient at the same time must have sorely tried the souls of men. Yet they were faithful and especially patient. Christ frequently says, "I know thy patience." The early Christians were not all saints, but they did possess an abundance of patience. which is worthy our emulation today. Patience is not the overcrowning virtue of the present age, but when we think of the patient faithfulness of these early Christians, who endured even martyrdom without a murmur, and the example of Him who, though "led like a lamb to the slaughter, yet opened no His mouth," we should learn to exercise to a far greater extent than we do patience in our faith-

Christ places a high reward upon patient faithfulness. To the church of Smyrna, which He declared must pass through many tribulations and trials. He also said, "Fear thou none of these things which thou shalt suffer; behold the devil shall cast some of you into prison that ye may be tried, and ye shall have tribulations ten days (a short time; be thou faithful unto death (not only until the end of life, but in death, if it should be martyrdom), and I will give thee a crown of life," or eternal life as a crown. What a precious promise for patient faithfulness! Eternal life as a crown! The same promise holds good to us. The Christian life today is not a pathway of perfect peace. There are still trials and tribulations to be endured and things to suffer, but if we, too, are faithful and patient in our faithfulness there is laid up a crown of eternal life for us-Christ's reward for fidelity amid trials and tribulations. Let us see that none of us lose that crown which Christ has prepared for

A Heartening Word. A Minnesota pastor says: I glory in Christian Endeavor work, upon which

God has set His seal. I remember when a lad of fifteen in my English home yielding my heart to people of our church and community for whom no special effort of any kind, aside from the Sunday school, was being made.

Within three weeks I had banded six of my comrades into a young people's society. The number grew with every weekly meeting. There were conversions, and in time we heard of the American organization known as the Christian Endeavor and at once added the name Christian Endeavor to that of our society.

From that society preachers of the gospel have come. The society is now twenty-one years old, but is ever green and strong. It has been my plan as a pastor in this country to give a Sabbath evening to the installation of the new Christian Endeavor officers in the presence of the whole church and congregation, knowing full well the increased interest that this will arouse on the part of the church in Christian Endeavor

I once had an elder (I am a Presbyterian) who was very skeptical about giving a whole valuable Sunday evening to such a procedure, but after the meeting he said: "It was grand. That was good for the church to witness."

I have but recently come to the north country, the woodland. This kind of work is missionary in deed as well as in name, and for that reason I chose There is no society here now; there never has been, but if it is God's will there soon will be.-Christian Endeavor World.

THE SUFFRAGETTE.

An Event That Took Away Her Interest In the Cause. The book of Revelation is divided

By KATHLEEN J. M'CURDY.

She was standing on the curb selling pamphlets, while beside her a box was used to display a large handbill on which was printed "Votes For Women!" If it be asserted that only the angular old maids or fat married women are to be found in the ranks of the suffragettes this young lady proved the contrary. She was very pretty.

At any rate, Peter Thompson stopped to look at her and by way of an excuse to speak to her bought a pamphlet. "Read it," she said, "and you will be with us."

"I'm with you already," Thompson

"Then help us." "I meant that I was with you person-

At this the girl looked a trifle displeased. "There are certain qualities," Thompson added, "that are required in those who are given citizenship. One of these"

"I am quite sure women possess those qualities," snapped the girl. "What qualities?"

"Those to which you refer." "I haven't yet named them."

"Well, do so."

"Women are not good listeners." "I deny the fact."

By this time several people had stopped to listen, and Thompson, not caring to amuse a crowd, passed on. He had no opinions as to whether women are entitled to the suffrage or not. The subject did not interest him. But one thing did interest him very much—the pretty suffragette. He was a philosophic chap, always looking for reasons for things, and a problem occupied his thoughts from the moment he saw the suffragette-namely, what there was about her that caused her to remain a fixture in his mind.

While Thompson was walking along, thinking about the suffragette and why she had lodged herself within that combination of matter and forces which he considered himself to be and to which had been given the name of for women.' Thompson, he passed a woman wheeling a baby carriage. A little boy aged about fifteen months sitting in the carriage looked up at him and smiled. Thompson was fond of children. He put out his hand, which was clutched by the tiny pink tipped fingers, the boy's eyes being fixed on Thompson as though he had found his first and best

"What a beautiful boy!" he exclaimed.

The mother looked happy, as mothers do when they hear their children praised.

A sudden idea struck the philoso-

"Madam," pursued Thompson mus-God and yearning for the other young ingly, his eyes still on the boy, who continued to clutch his hand, "I wish I suppose it is my duty to inform her the loan of your child for awhile. I will pay you a big interest.'

The mother looked surprised. To shorten the story, Thompson bargained with the woman that she should wheel her boy up in front of his suffragette, ask her to watch him while she went into a store, then disappear, not to return. Thompson agreed that no harm should come to the child, that he should not be lost to his mother and when returned the borrower would put a snug sum in a savings bank to start a fund for the boy's benefit. The terms were accepted, the child was left with the suffragette, who agreed to look after him, the mother disappeared, and Thompson surveyed the scene from a dis-

Then Thompson left his point of observation and, approaching the suffragette, remarked what a pretty boy she had with her. This led her to tell him that she feared the mother had the girl, firing up. "Poor, dear little fellow! Mamma will come back soon, precious! Don't cry any more. That's place was partly supplied by another.

"If his mother doesn't return," said Thompson, "I don't see but you'll have to take him home with you "I will," said the girl & Thompson walked away. Another hour passed, during which the suffragette neglected to sell pamphlets, devoting herself to the child. Thompson after awhile returned and, expressing surprise that the woman had not come back, told the girl that if she would take the boy home with her he would do the work of hunting for the mother.

She accepted the proposition, and he walked beside her, carrying her unsold pamphlets and her poster, while she wheeled the child. On arriving at her home he found that she belonged to an eminently respectable family, everything about the house bespeaking refinement of the occupants. She told him that she worked with the suffragettes simply because her heart was in their cause, "and," she added, "it gives me something to interest myself in so that I'm not dependant upon balls, parties and dress to occupy my mind. She asked Thompson to come in. He said he hadn't time just then, but would call just as soon as he had secured any information concerning the child and would keep her advised of his efforts to find his mother.

"I suppose," he said, "I shall see you every day at your accustomed place selling pamphlets. "Certainly," she replied. "I shall not neglect my work."

But when Thompson passed her stand again and again the next day he saw nothing of her. He reported the present home of the child to the mother and left a check for a substantial amount with her as earnest of his honest intentions. Then he went to call on the suffragette to tell her that he had learned nothing as to the identity of the mother since the desertion of the child, which was perfectly Miss Edith Coleman, the suffragette, did not seem to worry much over his ill success. She told Thompson that the boy was the dearest little fellow in the world, and she was in no hurry to part with him. Thompson remarked that it was unfortunate that she should be kept away from her legitimate work, to which she replied that administering to a child whose inhuman mother had left him was just as important as the cause of votes for women. Thompson looked surprised. but said nothing.

The next day, however, he called and said that his sister had offered to take charge of the deserted boy in order that Miss Coleman might pursue her greater work.

"Please tell your sister to mind her own bus-I mean that the precious darling has fallen to me, and I shall keep him till he is claimed by his own

Then Thompson went to the headquarters of the suffragettes and by diplomacy secured the sending of a note to Miss Coleman assigning her a very important duty that would take up all her time for a week. He called at the headquarters the next day and learned that Miss Coleman had peremptorily declined to serve.

Thompson continued reporting no progress, meanwhile keeping the foundling's mother content by an occasional check. Miss Coleman appeared more and more pleased at his coming and always had the child beautifully dressed and his hair curled when he came. One day Thompson announced that he had found a clew to the identity of the child's mother. Miss Coleman turned pale.

"You will now be able to return to your valuable work in securing votes

"I don't wish to return to that work. and I don't know if I shall give my precious up any way.

"But supposing that his mother claims him. You wouldn't refuse to restore him to his natural parent, would you?"

"You mean his unnatural parent." "The law would compel you."

"I would contest the case." "And you really feel that to give him up would be a privation.'

"I couldn't endure it." "Well, then, I suppose for your sake I'd better not try to find his mother." "Don't!"

"I'm sorry I wasn't aware before how attached you have become to the child. I know who his mother is, and that you have her boy."

Miss Coleman looked aghast. "Is there any way." she asked, "by which I can keep him in spite of her?" "Would that be justice?"

"Justice! Humbug! What do I care about justice if it takes my darling

Thompson burst into a laugh. "What are you laughing at?" she asked, irritated.

"You remember that I demonstrated that there were faculties you did not possess which I consider important for citizenship.

"Well, what's that got to do with "And now you have confessed a third. You care nothing for justice."

"That's a man's view of it." "To tell the truth, I don't think that you are fitted for a reformer. There

"What's that?"

"You would make a splendid wife and mother."

He was looking straight into her eyes when he said this, and she knew left the boy and did not intend to re- what he meant. She waited for what was to come DAYTON, McCALL AND Then he told her the whole story. When he had finished it was agreed "I shall do no such thing!" replied that the child's mother should come for him. The ex-suffragette was still loath to part with her boy, but his She was engaged to marry Thompson.
