NEWS NOTES HERE AND THERE

Condensed Items of Interest from County, State and Our Exchanges.

It is now thought probable that Congress may adjourn next week. The only hitch will be the Arizona and New Mexico statehood bill.

It is pretty generally reported, that King Alfonso, of Spain, is suffering with tuberculosis of the throat, and that his ailment is incurable.

The cotton crop of 1909, which was the smallest for six years, nevertheless sold for nearly 20 per cent more than the crop of 1908, its value being about 812 millions of dollars.

Dr. Wm. A. Granville, a teacher of mathematics at Yale University, was elected President of Gettysburg College, on Tuesday, by the Board of Trustees. Dr. Granville is a Lutheran, but not a minister, and is said to be a man of exceptionally fine ability. ceptionally fine ability.

The Vitagraph Company has paid $150,000 for the privilege of taking a moving picture of the coming Jeffries-Johnson prize fight. Each of the principals, and the manager, gets $50,000. The purchasers, of course, will reproduce the fight all over the world, and make a big fortune out of it.

Major Charles A. Damuth, one of the best known residents of Thurmont, died at his late home on Sunday, June 12, in the 69th year of his age. He was born and spent his entire life in the general vicinity of Thurmont. By occupation he was a farmer, but for several years past has lived a retired life. past has lived a retired life.

The record of rainfall for the month so far is over 5 inches, while the normal precipitation for the entire month is only 3.20 inches. Last June's record was 4.38 inches, and it equaled this month for a continuous performance of rain, 11 days having been anything but clear. The last half of the mouth, though, was hot and dry.

Three big church reunions will be held this summer during the month of July at Pen-Mar. The Reformed church reunion will be held July 14, the Lutheran reunion will take place July 21 and the Presbyterian reunion will be held Heretofore the reunion dates homa. were subject to change, but at a recent meeting of railroad officials and a joint committee from the three churches selected the permanent dates.

Charles Ankeney, of Clearspring, "raised" one of the largest barns ever erected in Washington county. The new barn is 120 feet long and 50 feet shelter 25 horses, 75 cattle, 100 sheep and has a capacity of 300 tons of hay and 3,000 bushels of wheat in the straw. A total of 175 men assisted in putting up the framework. Farmers from all served by Mrs. Ankeney, assisted by 25 more of its previous movements. of her neighbors.

An army of 80,000 bees, near Washington, disturbed in their hives by a pair of horses made wild by a couple of bees, which had been stinging them, which then ran in among the hives, upsetting them, caused the death of the horses. The negro driver was terribly stung, but lives. His face is swollen to twice its natural size and both eyes are When the bees began to pour out of their hives he ran, but was pursued by hundreds of the honey gatherers. The bees belonged to Dr. Reginald Munson, whose home is on the Virginia side of Potomac River opposite the National Capital.

A vein of gold ore assaying at about $73 a ton has been discovered upon a tract of land on the South Mountains Adams Co. Pa., by the Eagle Metallic Copper Mining company. The discovery was made by chance on the property owned by the Company near Jack's Hollow and is in rock of a volcanic formation. The vein follows a dyke between two slopes and is said to be about 60 feet deep. The men sent by the company to make investigations report enough ore to keep the place in operation for at least two years with other deposits probably after that. The mining company is composed of Allentown men and capitalized at $500,000.

Chocolate candies and confections are likely to be made after this with mushy exteriors, in place of the hard and brilliant coating that has been applied in the past, This is the last word given out by the candy manufacturers, who say that consumers may blame the Government if they get sticky and soiled fingers from handling choclates. The Federal Bureau has been sending out notices for several days past warning manufacturers that neither shellac nor any other gum shall be used to coat candies. The manufacturers had known of objections to the use of shellac, because a hearing on the subject was given to them recently by the bureau, but they have been surprised to learn that all other gums are to be prohibited.

Church Notices.

There will be services in the Church of God, Uniontown, Sunday, at 10,15 a.m., con-acted by Mr. Jesse P. Garner. Sunday shool at 9 a.m.

The 4th anniversary of the present pastor will be celebrated at Baust church, this Sunday, at 10.30 a.m. Y. P. S. services at 7.45 p. m. MARTIN SCHWEITZER, Pastor.

Children's-day services will be beld in the Keysville church, next Tuesday evening; if weather is unfavorable, then on Thursday evening.

A Terrific Thunder-storm.

A very beavy thunder-storm, the centre of which seemed to be the immediate vicinity of Taneytown, passed over this end of the county on Thursday evening, lasting about an hour, or from about 6 until after 7 o'clock. Two gusts met and seemed to fight it out with each other, peal following peal of heavy thunder, ac-companied with sharp lightning, combining to make a demonstration not heard in this neighborhood for many years. Rain fell heavily for about two hours, adding to the general disturbance, and doing considerable damage to corn fields, but fortunately there was not much wind and the wheat fields were not seriously hurt.

One of the gable ends of the dwelling owned by Mrs. Motter, tenanted by Simon Frealing and family, was shattered and some of the plastering of the house torn off; a chimney top on the new dwelling of P. B. Englar was struck, but the house was not expected. but the house was not otherwise damaged. A number of instances of slight shock from lightning have been reported, but strange to say the total damage, considering the severity of the gust, was

At Keymar, the home of Charles E. Valentine was struck, causing considerable injury to the bath room. This was the second lightning damage to this property this season. At the livery stable of John Forrest, a man is reported to have been severely shocked while put-ting away a team that had just come in. The rain in the vicinity of Middleburg, and especially about Crouse's mill, is said to have been the heaviest ever known of, and great damage was done to corn fields. The culverts and small bridges were pretty generally lifted, along both Middleburg and Bruceville roads leading to Taneytown.

Death of Mr. Emanuel Overholtzer.

Mr. Emanuel Overholtzer, an aged citizen of this district, who was paralyzed some time since, died last Friday evening. Funeral services were held on Monday morning at the Lutheran church. Mr. Overholtzer was in his 84th.

In addition to his widow, who was Miss Sarah S. Jacobs, he leaves three brothers: Jeremiah of Pennsylvania, Samuel and William in Iowa. Eleven children also survive. George and Jeremiah, of Taneytown district, Samuel, of Middleburg district, William H., of Kansas, and John in South Dakota; Mrs. Cornelius Stover, Mrs. Frank Crouse and Mrs. Jacob Fringer, of Taneytown vicinity, Mrs. John Albaugh, of New Midway, Mrs. John Eyler, cf York Road, and Mrs. G. ### Another Mad Dog Killed.

A strange dog bit a dog and a hog owned by Mr. Noah Baumgardner, of this district, on Tuesday. The animal was pursued and killed near the Bethel church, and the head sent to the Pasnew barn is 120 feet long and 50 feet teur institute, Baltimore, by Dr. Seiss, wide, contains five stables and will for examination. On Wednesday he received a telegram that the animal was undoubtedly mad. This was a very quick transaction by all parties concerned. It would seem to be a wise precaution, to kill, on sight, all strange dogs. We are informed that Mr. Baumgardner has killed the animals bitten, and that Mr. Sell will pen up his dog

Card of Thanks.

The family of Mr. Emanuel Overholtzer exends its sincere thanks to many kind friends nd neighbors for their help during his sickness, and following his death.

Col. Roosevelt kept up his record for strenuosity by going into the stoke hold of the steamer bringing him home, and shoveling coal under the boilers, much to the delight of the grimy stokers.

MARYLAND PRESS ASSOCIATION

Will hold Annual Outing on a Steamboat trip, Baltimore to Washington.

The new Maryland Press Association, of which, Col. Wm. S. Powell, of Ellicott City, is President, and W. S. McCombs, of Havre de Grace, is Secretary, will hold its first annual outing and second semi-annual business meeting, on the steamer "Three Rivers," leaving Baltimore at 5 p. m., on Monday, July 18, for Washington, arriving there on Wednesday morning at 7 o'clock. A side trip to Mt. Verror on the steamer. trip to Mt. Vernon, on the steamer "McAllister," and a tour of the city, will complete the attractions, after which the return to Baltimore will be by rail, on Wednesday night or Thursday.

The business sessions will be held on the boat and while in Washington the Association will be entertained by the Washington Press Association, and the Board of Trade. The editors have the authority to invite their wives and a limited number of non-members to accompany them.

The Association is largely a fraternal and social institution, and is made up of perhaps nine-tenths of all the editors of the state, without regard to political affiliation. The need has been felt, for years, for an Association of this kind, in order, to being teather this kind, in order to bring together this class of men representative of the best interests of every section of the state, in order that they may fraternize, compare notes and experiences, and still further elevate the standard of Maryland journalism, as it relates especially to the county

A large attendance of the members and their friends, on this occasion, is essential to the future success and statewide benefit of the Association, and consequently to the benefit of the hundreds of thousands of county newspaper readers. There is no more sincere and hard-working class of men in the state of Maryland than its county editors, and none that compares with them in the amount of good they do to their respective localities, and to the citizenship and material progress and development of the interests of the state in

County Commissioners Office.

The County Commissioners, on Monday, awarded the contract for the Alloways bridge to the York Bridge Co., for $785.00 for the iron work, for 60-ft span; the mason work was awarded to Jos. D. Whimert at $4.30 per square yard, and the filling to the same at 45¢ square

9-Chas. E. Stem. 10—Wilson L. Crouse. 11-John E. Buckey. 12-George P. Buckey. 13-Charles E. Smith.

14—George A. Brown. The levy for 1910 was made, the taxrate being fixed at 60% for county taxes. The state tax-rate for this year is 16%, the combined rate being 76¢, the same as last year.

The tax-rate for the county is divided, as follows; for current expenses, 20%; for schools, 12¢; court, magistrates and officers salaries, 7¢; almshouse and pensioners, 9¢; public roads, 12¢. The income from bonds, mortgages, etc., to be used for miscellaneous purposes.

The Commissioners have been notified that the supplies for the assessors will be sent to the various counties by Tuesday, the 21st., after which the new assessment of property will take place, in accordance with the act of the legisla-

Crops and the Weather.

Six of Maryland's twenty-three counties report serious damage to crops as a result of the unseasonable weather and xcessive rain of the last few weeks. This is a sufficient commentary upon the really baneful conditions, which continue without indications of improvement. The rainfall around Baltimore during the twelve days of the present month has exceeded by nearly half an inch the total fall for the entire thirty days of last June, which was itself somewhat oversupplied with rain.

Corn and wheat are suffering considerably from the weather, and small fruits are likely to be ruined if present conditions continue. The asparagus season has been largely curtailed and strawberries have been injured.

Unseasonable weather, often marked by frost in late summer, has distinguished those years in which Halley's comet has appeared. Scientists have not yet definitely settled whether cometary influence affects the weather, but it is conceivable that the passage of the earth and its fickle atmosphere through the highly rarefied gaseous tail of the comet may have been at least partly responsible for recent conditions, and that the influence has not yet departed. -Balt. Thurmont claims to be "the best lighted, best paved and best painted" town in Maryland. That's a pretty strong blast, and perhaps needs confirmation. The town has been behind the times for so long that a little recent "fixin up" has made it pea-cockish.

For the RECORD. We are enjoying the services in the annual meeting of the Church of the Brethren. The attendance has been in excess of that in any previous convention at Winona Lake. As this is a favorite place for the holding of great religious conferences, this statement is still more remarkable. In fact it is probably true that the attendance on Sunday was not less than 60,000. Many train loads have gone but the numbers show very little

In the public discussions, in the preaching of the gospel and in the congregational singing, the earnest and devoted spirit of this great Christian brotherhood has been apparent. It has been a delightful occasion.

As the crowds were so large I had difficulty in finding the representatives from Maryland, but I did have the privilege of meeting three or four delegates from New Windsor and Union Bridge, and of talking over some of the matters of interest in Carroll County. And the opinion was expressed to me that the CARROLL RECORD is one of the cleanest, best and most reliable newspapers circulating in the State of Maryland. Its high character and right stand on temperance and other public questions, is greatly appreciated.

Among the delegates at Winona Lake, from Carroll County are, C. D. Bon-sack and wife, W. I. T. Hoover and wife, D. E. Englar and wife, P. J. Duvall and wife, S. P. Early and wife, Mary Boatler, Lewis Green and A. P.

Those of us who knew Winona some years ago, are astonished at the improve-ments here. There is promise of a very large attendance and a prosperous year. I have endeavored to send some information to all my friends and wish to suggest that if any one wishes a copy of the Year Book and will let me know I shall be glad to see... wishes. I am yours. HERMAN A. GOFF. shall be glad to send it with very best

The conference decided to let the sisters of the church break bread and pass the communion cup, at the lovefeasts, as well as the brethren. Heretofore it has been the custom for the minister officiating at the communion to break the bread and pass the communion cup.

The dress question which was in the hands of a committee was not settled but passed to a new committee who will report at the conference which will be held next June.

The missionary meeting was a feature of the conference. There were seven returned missionaries and two prospective missionaries in attendance. The collection taken at this meeting amounted to At the Park, Sunday, the attendance was estimated at from 25,000 to 35,000. The immense gathering was well handled and the majority seem to be so well pleased with Winona that there is talk of making the park a permanent meeting place of the church. This cannot be done for three years, because the rule is to select points in the middle states for two annual meetings and then one in the far West and one in the extreme East. Next year the conference is to be held at St. Joseph, Mo.

Automobile and Cow Case

Poughkeepsie. N. Y., June 14.—A novel question of law will test the acumen next month of whatever 12 men sit on the case of Harry Gray against James Dunbar, both residents of Pine Plains.

Mr. Gray demands $250 for the death of a favorite cow killed recently by an automobile belonging to Mr. Dunbar, and Mr. Dunbar wants $10 damages for injuries done to his automobile by the cow, alleging that the cow jumped at his automobile and bent a mudguard and broke a lamp.

Question for the jury: Is an animal with four legs, one in each corner, of the kind described in defendant's counter claim herein as a cow, where malice is not alleged and where there is nothas a cow in defendant's counter claim herein, and where there is nothing in controversion of such said description in plaintiff's reply herein chargeable with knowledge in the absence of any proof that the animal so described could have had or was permitted to obtain or did so obtain or can be assumed to have obtained such knowledge of, any wilful intent to commit any injury or damage that might accure to a machine or mechanism of the kind described as an automobile herein, or, of the effects that might follow an assault or trespass by such an animal herein before described on or against such a machine or mechanism in damages in the sum demanded in defendant's counter claim herein; and whether, if it has been proven to the satisfaction of the jury that the defendant was running his automobile a direction contrary to said cow, said cow being lawfully on a public road as pleaded defendant was guilty of contributory negligence?

Odd Fellows' Reunion, August 4th.

The date for the Odd Fellows' reunion at Pen-Mar has been fixed for Thursday, August 4th., which will be a week later than the last of the church reunions, The grand masters of Pennsylvania and Maryland will be invited to be present and make addresses. Rev. Dr. B. H. Hart, of Harrisburg, past grand master, is expected there. The railroad companies will be asked to run special trains on that day.

The reunion is to be on a large scale. and an effort will be made to have representatives present from all the lodges between Baltimore and Cumberland and Harrisburg and Winchester. Everything is to be on an elaborate scale and the committee believes this is justified by the interest shown by many of the lodges. Baltimore lodges have arranged for five reunions this summer and the chairman of the executive comreunion.

Annual Meeting, Church of the Brethren. FOR A RURAL PARCELS POST.

Congress May Pass Measure of Vast Importance to Rural Sections.

Several years ago, the RECORD advanced the idea of a local parcels post, confined to the Rural Delivery service, by the means of which, at present un-mailable packages could be carried within the limits of the Rural Delivery service at very low rates, and yet bring in a large revenue to the Postoffice Department; also, that it was the height of business folly to ask the same rate for carrying a package a mile or two across the country, that is charged to carry the same package to San Francisco.

Congress is at last getting interested in the question, not with standing the opposi-tion of large city stores and express companies, and it seems probable that legislation favorable to the project may be forthcoming. There are now three parcels post measures before the House, all of them applying to the rural service alone. Even though the most comprehensive of the three, that proposed by Representative Crumpacker, of Indiana, should become a law, the dwellers in cities and towns could neither send nor receive parcels such as those that could be sent and received by persons on the rural free delivery routes.

Every bill that has been presented aims to meet the opposition of the country storekeeper, who contends that the establishment of a general parcels post would put him out of business and send his trade to the large stores in the cities. In each measure the provision is explicitly made that the delivery must not be by train, that it must originate upon a rural free delivery route, its distributing postoffice or village located upon such route, and must be made always by the rural carrier.

All of the propositions seek to raise the limit of weight on single mailed packages from four pounds, the present limit, to eleven pounds. The Crumpacker measure extends this limit in certain cases to twenty-five pounds. The rate specified is five cents for the first pound and two cents for each additional pound.

Although this plan seems to decidedly favor country, or rural, sections, and is perhaps a bit narrow, it is nevertheless both feasible and defensible, and should be tried out. Afterwards, perhaps the system could be gradually extended, even to international limits, providing the influence of the Railroad and Express ompanies can be overcome, as it is this influence alone which now keeps mail rates on merchandise at 16¢ a pound, even for a haul of a mile or two.

LeGore Bridge for Sale.

The LeGore bridge, near Woodsboro, which has been much talked about in recent years, in connection with a proposed dam which would supply a vast power for electric service, has been of-fered for sale to the Commissioners of Frederick county, according to the following item from the Frederick Examiner, of this week:

the Legislature of 1904, erected a large stone arch bridge across the Monocacy The First and Fifth Regiments, Troop river, at or near the iron bridge, at a point commonly known as Stump's Hill, near LeGore, has offered to sell the bridge and the roadbeds leading to it to the County Commissioners, for the sum of $197,298,07. The price includes the erection of the bridge and the interest on the money since its completion. The Board has taken no action in the mat-

Big Distillery Collapses.

With a roar that could be heard for miles around, half of the big 10-tier steel warehouse of the Gwynnbrook Distilling Company, at Gwynnbrook, near is not alleged and where there is nothing to show that said animal described about 10.30 o'clock Sunday night, carrying 8,000 barrels of whisky down with the debris and sending rivers of Maryland rye gushing down the hill to the rivulet which touching the towns which dot the Western Maryland Railroad, flows finally into the Patapsco River. It is thought that the recent heavy rains caused the collapse of the building and caused the estimated loss of $10,000 worth of bonded whisky and a loss of from $6,000 to $8,000 on the building. It fortunate that no one was in building when the crash came, the watchman, Thomas Watts, having gone to his home nearby, and the engineer, Thomas Neff, having retired for the night.

The first intimation that the building was unstable came at 9 o'clock, when the watchman, who was in his house nearby, heard a rumbling sound. He immediately rushed to the engineer's cottage, which was nearby, and awakening him, returned to the warehouse. As he approached, there was a crash, and the right corner of the building collapsed with a roar. A half hour later, another portion of the building fell, and the two men, powerless to be of any assistance, watched and waited until 10.30 o'clock, when the largest portion of the building crashed in. In the warehouse were stored 20,000 barrels of whisky, and 8,000 barrels of this went to the ground with the wrecked building. There were loud reports as these barrels were crushed open, as heavy girders or timbers fell upon them, and streams of the red liquor went flowing down the hill on which the warehouse is situated into the stream which flows through the valley below.

Across the valley, perhaps a mile and a half, in the little Methodist Episcopal Church, near Stevens Station, Mr. Wm. Anderson, superintendent of the Anti-saloon League, was delivering an address denouncing the whisky traffic when the first collapse occurred. A faint roar was heard in the church at the time, but thinking it was a clap of thunder, mittee of the associated lodges of that city has announced that one of these will be combined with the Pen-Mar Monday morning of the wrecking of so much rye.

Governor Opposes Prize Fight.

The Governor of California has been Ine Governor of California has been stirred by outside protests to stop the Jeffries-Johnson prize fight, and has taken action toward that end. He has ordered the Attorney General to invoke the aid of the Courts to prevent the match, and that in the event of a restraining order not being issued, to arrest the principals and those interested in the fight, and prosecute them.

The letter order declares that the Supreme Court of California has never defined a prize fight and suggests that an opportunity be given it to do so. This is taken by those interested to indicate the Governor's intention to press his opposition to the end. While the status of the fight is in an unsettled. of the fight is in an unsettled condition the sporting fraternity is much cast down, and it is generally believed that the death knell of prize fighting in California, the "mecca of prize fighters," according to the Governor's letter, has been sounded.

The promoters will anxiously await developments, and in case California is positively closed against them, they will try to pull off the fight in Nevada or

Maryland Troops at Gettysburg.

Adjutant General Henry M. Warfield has received a circular order from the War Department which states that the army and militia maneuvers to be participated in by troops from the Maryland National Guard this summer will be held on rented ground about a mile and a half from Gettysburg. It will be east of the York pike and Western Maryland "Mr. James W. LeGore, of LeGore, the York pike and Western Maryland this county, who by the authority of Railroad, and the railroad company will

Weather Forecasts for Farmers.

Washington, June 14.—It is now proposed that farmers all over the country be given the benefit of the Weather Bureau predictions just as the people in the cities get the forecasts. Representative McHenry of Pennsylvania is the patron of the plan.

According to a bill which Mr. Mc-Henry has introduced in the House, the rural free-delivery wagons are to carry flag signals similar to the signals hoisted on buildings and elsewhere in the populous centers for the guidance of those interested in the weather.
In his bill the Pennsylvanian provides that "the rural deliveryman shall carry a flag signal of convenient and suitable size, to be determined by the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, indicating the weather predictions as reported by the United States Weather Bureau for the period in advance of the current trip." It is provided, however, that the report of the period shall have been re-ceived in sufficient time so as not to retard the departure of the mail on schedule time. It will be necessary under the plan proposed for the Weather Bureau to telegraph the weather prediction each morning to each postoffice in the country which sends out rural mail deliverymen. The mail man thereupon fixes to his wagon the flag indicating the expected state of the weather, and as he rides by the farmers and others along his route can know with Weather Bureau certainty what the weather will be for the next 24 hours.

All arrangements have been completed for New York's welcome to Roosevelt, to-day, Saturday; 25,000 men will be in the street parade.

A YEAR WITHOUT a Summer would be a curiosity, but so far, 1910 is reaching for that distinction, and nobody is pleased with the effort. Perhaps when Roosevelt gets back the temperature will warm up a bit.

IF THE REPUBLICAN platform pledge, advocating statehood to Arizona and New Mexico, is carried out at this session of Congress, carrying with it the practical assurance of four new Democratic Senators, it will represent a heroic effort to be virtuous not common to politics.

THE COST OF ROADS under the State Road Commission, is difficult to get at. They appear to be costing, on the average, between $8,000 and $9,000 a mile, but this seems to represent amounts paid to contractors, without taking account of the cost of the Commission itself. For instance, if Engineer Crosby gets $6,000 a year, and other expenses are in proportion, will not the actual cost per mile be considerably higher than the figures named? We hope that Carroll county will get its proportionate slice of the first millions, for roadmaking, at the present cost, will not be kept up long.

The Taft-Harrison Episode.

Whether or not President Tatt made a mistake in refusing to receive Representative Harrison, of New York, who had in a speech in the House apparently cast reflections on the personal honesty of the President, will no doubt be a question over which individuals will disagree. Without doubt, Presidential policies and plans, as well as his official acts, are proper subjects for legitimate criticism; but, there is a wide difference between legitimate criticism, and attacking one's honesty of purpose-the difference between justifiable personal liberty, and unjustifiable personal impudence.

Members of Congress are not immune from charges of absclute impertinence. Their speeches are often clothed in the language which is little better than pure livel and black-guardism, delivered with an assumption of official right which does not in reality exist. Even assuming that the President is not, by his position, ated under the new State Banking Deremoved from such intemperate attacks, the offender nevertheless merits pubilc condemnation on general principles, and corporated, will have to indicate the there does not seem any impropriety in latter fact. the President himself inflicting it when he has the opportunity.

In other words, while there may be such a broad code of ethics which permits a Congressman to call the President dishonest, or a liar, that code should also be broad enough to permit the President to refuse to have any personal friendly, or official, relationship, thereafter, with his traducer. We do not conceive that any situation exists which of necessity compels the President to be friendly with those who presume to attack him, personally, for such persons have voluntarily, and from choice, debarred themselves from any such consideration, between gentlemen, whether as public officials or as private citizens. If the President is merely a man, for man for purposes of defense. If Representative Harrison will officially disavow any intention of personally reflecting on the character of the President, such disavowal will likely be accepted by the any other member; but until this bas cent. been done, we strongly incline to the opinion that the President is right in his refusal to see him.

We do not think it comports with the dignity of the President of the United States to meet his traducers, hypocritically, on an equality with his friends. There may be an official politeness which requires such dissimulation from the President, but we doubt it, and think Most people, nowadays, whether in that this will be majority public opinion with reference to the incident in question.

Can't Be Statistically Broke.

The Treasury Department has issued another one of its delightful little estimates of the amount of money every citizen would have if the whole amount in circulation were evenly divided.

For purely statistical purposes everyone of us has $34.59 in his pocket at the present moment. And that's not all of it either. Each one of us has exactly 14 cents more than he had last month.

The usual way for a man to determine how much money he has in his pocket is to turn it inside out and count the change. But that method is often unsatisfactory. The sum total is sometimes quite depress-

The Treasury way is better. It invariably gives a fairly reputable result. Take the total amount in circulation and divide it by the population and you always come out with $30 or $35, even though the money is strictly hypothetical.

It may be said that, after all, the individual may not have $34.59; that the disillusionment when he reaches down and finds a deficit may cause him to become gloomier than eyer, and that the Treasury per capita figures may thus do harm instead of good.

Nonsense! Everydody knows by this time that he has this money for purely statistical purposes. Also that the first quality required in money of this sort is that it is unspendable. If he could spend statistical money, where would the sta-

NEW AMERICAN INDUSTRY.

Widespread and Rapidly Growing Interest In Pheasant Rearing.

In an interesting bulletin on "Pheasant Raising In the United States." issued by the department of agriculture, it is stated that within recent years a new industry, the rearing of pheasants, has begun to engage attention in the United States, and propagating ventures, ranging from the single pen with one or two pairs of birds to the pheasantry of many acres and thousands of birds, are scattered throughout the country.

The English ringneck pheasant (Phasianus colchicus x torquatus), a hybrid between the English and ringneck pheasants, has been brought from Europe in large numbers. It is generally correctly named, but is sometimes designated as English pheasant. ringneck pheasant and even Mongolian pheasant. It often has more or less of the blood of the versicolor pheasant of Japan (Phasianus versicolor. In England both the English pheasant and the English ringneck are referred to as the common pheasant.

It is the Mongolian pheasant (Phasia nus mongolicus), which has a more or less complete white ring about the neck, but in other respects resembles the English pheasant more than it does the ringneck and is rarest of the four kinds in American preserves and aviaries. It is a native of the region about Lake Balkash, central Asia.

A pheasantry may be started with mature birds or with eggs. The latter to be hatched by barnyard fowls. Many are tempted to begin with eggs because of smaller cost, but the uncertainties attendant on hatching the eggs and raising the young are such that it is probably cheaper to secure full grown birds at the outset. If eggs are to be tried they should be ordered in January or February, to be delivered in April or May. They should be placed under the hen as soon as pos-

Pheasants may be obtained from reputable dealers or they may be imported from Europe or Asia. If stock be imported trouble may be saved by securing it through experienced and reliable bird importers who are familiar with the business. A pen should be provided and supplied with food and water. On the arrival of the birds the crate should be placed in the pen.

MONGOLIAN PHEASANT

[Part of tail does not show in picture.] an opening should be made in the erate (preferably in the evening) sufficient to allow the birds to escape one at a time, and the attendant should withdraw, leaving the birds to find their way out alone. For the first few days they should be disturbed as little as possible.

The prices of pheasants vary with the season. They are lowest at the close of the breeding season and increase gradually until the next. They vary also according to the dealer. But so many things are to be considered, such as purity of stock, freedom from disease, care in shipment and other details, that the lowest prices do not always mean the cheapest birds. English ringneck pheasants are least expensive-about $5 a pair.

Any well drained ground is suitable for pheasant pens, but a gentle slope of sandy loam, comparatively cool in in midsummer, furnishes ideal conditions. Clay is the poorest soil for the purpose, as it is likely to foster diseases. The pens should be provided with plenty of both sunshine and shade. They should be constructed of chicken wire, like ordinary poultry runs. Each pen should cover at least 100 square feet, more if possible. Contracted quarters induce disease and afford their timid occupants too little protection from alarms. The pen should be from six to eight feet high and should be inclosed above with wire If the pheasants are likely to be disturbed much, cord netting should be stretched six inches or more below the juring themselves by flying violently against the top, as they are apt to do when frightened.

It is of course feasible to keep pheasants in a pen open at the top by pinioning them or clipping their wings, but pinioning, besides disfiguring pheasants, disables them permanently. Birds that are to be liberated should never be pinioned, as it makes them useless for sport and a ready prey to natura! enemies. Clipping is objectionable owing to the necessity for frequent repetitions. Pheasants are timid, and the less they are disturbed the better, especially when breeding.

The pens and sheds should be kept scrupulously clean. There is no more fruitful source of disease among pheas ants than uncleanliness. Nevertheless chips and twigs may be scattered about to attract insects, and boughs for shelter should not be omitted. Each pen should be thoroughly spaded and limed every two or three years. Cover should be provided for the birds. The pens may be sown with clover, timothy and other grass early enough to furnish ample cover by the time the birds are turned in. Small evergreens may be grown inside with decided advantage. Careful protection must be provided against various enemies. The bulletin gives many details of interest and importance to persons intending to rear

POULTRY AND FRUIT.

One Man Found the Combination a Good Paying Proposition.

By the natural association of ideas one thinks of some opposite or related thing when another is mentioned. Thus white suggests black, the sun the moon, summer suggests winter, clouds suggest rain, and growing fruit suggests poultry as a natural and inevitable combination necessary for suc-

Years ago one man started in to grow fruits. The trees thrived, fruit set plentifully, but there were worms in the peaches, plums fell off, apples dropped, grapes were denuded of leaves, and bugs of various sorts worked in the strawberries and blackber-

Professional horticulturists advised spraying with some of the many fungicides and poisons. But his small amount of fruit would not justify the cost of a practical spraying outfit, and the hand power sprayer was a back breaker, besides proving costly and in-

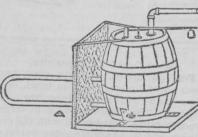

As the damage to his fruits came principally from insects, he determined to get after them. In one corner of the grounds was a sweet pea trench with plants perfect in leaf and bloom that grew and blossomed profusely. Every other trench of sweet peas in the neighborhood was riddled and ruined by grasshoppers. An old hen with a flock of chicks fist size tethered near the thrifty trench of peas suggested the poultry and fruit combination. If they kept the bugs from the peas enough of them would keep down the insects in the fruit yard.

A strong argument for the fruit and poultry combination is immediate returns. Under the most favorable conditions you must wait for from two to five years for a good crop. Strawberries alone pay well the first year. Grapes, blackberries and raspberries vield well the second year the third and fourth. Peaches and plums should begin to yield well in three or four years and apples in from five to seven. But the hen pays the next day after her purchase-pays in eggs, pays a few weeks later in chickens and pays all the time in the destruction of insects.

If the poultry investment is made as it should be, when the trees are planted, the results are much better. But an old orchard may be cleaned up and greatly benefited by cultivation, giving the poultry a chance to get the grubs that develop later into injurious insects or feed on tree roots. The hen in her capacity to do good by destruction of insects and to grow into money in eggs and meat has the greatest possibilities in the way of a money maker of anything on the farm. Without counting the benefits, only figuring net cash returns, the United States census of 1900 shows that poultry brought in 400 per cent per annum. Their worth to the farm because of insects and weed seeds destroyed is equal to another 400 per cent. The health and pleasure made possible by fruit on the farm table the year round are fully another 400 per cent. No other combination on the farm can come within hailing distance of this combination.

Handy Little Farm Boiler. Here is a handy portable boiler for light uses on the farm, says the American Agriculturist. It consists of a beer keg screwed to a wooden base, a loop

BEER KEG BOILER.

[From the American Agriculturist.] of three-quarter inch iron pipe about three feet long to extend into the kitchen or other fire, a screen of asbestus to protect the keg from the heat, a safety valve and a three-quarter or one inch discharge pipe leading to a one-quarter horsepower engine. The boiler is capable of running a onequarter horsepower engine for turning a grindstone, a churn and other light machines. It thus can be made to save little drudgeries where larger engines top wire to prevent the birds from in and boilers would be too costly.

A Smart Motor Bonnet.

It is possible for a woman to look bonnets has been a difficult one for the milliners to solve, and as a rule some one of the requisites has been sacrificed to the others. But this season the woman motorist should have little trouble in finding satisfactory head-

The hat from which the sketch on this page was made was an imported model in dull blue straw. Around the crown were draped folds of chiffon in the same tone about two inches in width. The folds of chiffon extended almost to the edge of the narrow turndown brim.

Directly in front was placed a bouquet of dull red roses and small dull blue flowers. A veil of blue chiffon hung from the edge of the brim. This shape is an excellent model for motoring, taking a veil well, being easily kept on the head and not heavy enough to be uncomfortable.

Stiff Sailor Hats Are Worn. There is a wide popularity for sailor hats. Now, nothing could really be more simple than these. If any man in the family jeers at the absurd and silly headgear that every woman has brought home since Easter all one has to do is to bring a sailor hat into view. These are the sailor hats of other days. The only thing that can be called new about them is the size of the crown. Instead of showing the hair they hide it. This is in keeping with other hats; otherwise the popular hat for everyday wear is the simple sailor of simpler days than these.

The sailor of 1910 has a moderate brim. It is by no means a "Merry Widow" size. The crown, which is large enough to let the hat come down over the head, is low and flat. The straw that is used to make it is rough and scalloped.

The pattern is large or small, and the whole affair is quite stiff in its lines. It will not bend even if it breaks. The chrysanthemum straw is tried in some of the sailors in a moderate way, but it is a bit too large even then for the taste of the average

The fashionable color is a faint yellow, what one usually calls straw color. It has a close running mate in black, and after these two favorites come several tones of blue, of burnt straw and of dull green. Of these three the best is blue, and in the blue the best is of bright, dark tone that will go with almost any gown.

"Is my hat on straight?" is no longer the interrogation of the eternal feminine-for now the tilt is the thing. The hats are worn far down on the head; they droop at the right, and the proper tilt over that eye is the delicate question.

There is danger of a ridiculous extreme in this tilt, and there is the possibility of a most fetching piquancy. A hat must be placed upon the head before the mirror and experimented with until the correct adjustment becomes second nature; then one can wear the tilted brim with the saving grace of knowing that the best has been made of the new line.

Smartness In Linen Suits. A trio of smart linen suits recently exhibited deserve special mention. One was of chalk white linen of a heavy make and bordered with a cotton galloon in a conventional design of shamrocks in black on a tilleul ground. The second suit, also in white, had the little short coat effectively lined with printed linen in an imitation of old Persian embroidery, a blending of dull pale blues, mauves and browns. The third suit was of tomato red of the shade verging toward Indian, and this had a Napoleon collar of dull black silk and was lined with black and white spotted cotton.

It Keeps Hat From Wabbling. The woman whose hair is thin or who does not dress it in such a way as to support her hat is seldom able to keep it from wabbling about like a ship without a rudder. A good plan is to stuff some tissue paper inside the crown beneath the lining. This seems

The Ham Fair at Paris.

A feature of Parisian life is the ham fair which is held on the Boulevard Richard Le Noir. The name of this fair is wholly misleading, for as far as I have ever seen hams are the very last thing any one ever buys there. Old brass and copper curios, quaint jewelry, rare china, lace, tapestries and books are what most people go out to seek, and a sight not to be easily forgotten is the long, wide boulevard lined with ramshackle stalls taden with every possible kind of lumber and presided over by the most rapacious of brocanteurs. Out of piles of valueless lumber Americans and English diligently seek for their pet kind of curios, and there is not an artist in Paris who cannot point to some bit of furniture in his or her studio and say with pride, "I got that for 5 francs at the ham fair." No one ever pays more than 5 francs, I notice, but, alas, every year these five franc bargains are becoming more rare, and even as housekeeping in Paris grows more and more costly so does the furnishing of one's house to keep .- London Queen.

Only a Question of Possibility. Among the customers of a tea store opened in the northwest part of the city the other night was a man who, after buying a pound of coffee, handed a counterfeit half dollar to the shop-

"This money is counterfeit; I'm sorry, sir," said the shopkeeper.

"Yes; I know it," replied the customer, grinning. "Got it here one day last week, and I've been saving it for you." Then, noting the smile upon the shopkeeper's face, the customer said, evidently offended, "Perhaps you doubt my word?"

"Oh, not at all, sir; not at all. I couldn't doubt the word of so truthful a man. I was simply smiling because I wondered how it was possible for you to have got the money here. This place was opened only night before

Thereupon the customer departed hastily after producing a good coin and slipping the counterfeit into his own pocket.-Philadelphia Times.

Lancashire Humor.

There was a Lancashire collier who went out on Sunday with his wheelbarrow because, as he said, "I've lost mi dog, an' a felly looks sich a foo' gooin' a-walkin' bi hisself."

Then there was the workingmen's club committee which wanted to indorse the accounts "audited and found correct and tuppence over" and the customer who, on being told that the price of candles had gone up owing to the war, asked whether they were "feightin' bi candle leet."

Also one recalls the laggard Lancashire lover who, when asked for a kiss, said he was "gooin' to do it in a bit," and the old ladies who praised a certain Darwin clergyman as "a grand burier," and of the orator who translated "Dieu et mon droit" into "Evil be to him what evil thinks!"-"Lancashire Life and Character," by Frank Orme-

Japan's Giant Wrestlers.

Japanese wrestlers are not to be confused with Japanese exponents of jiu jitsu. The wrestlers belong to the older school, in which weight is a paramount quality. It is a remarkable thing that a race which is on the average four or five inches under the European standard in point of height should have produced a special cult of wrestlers who are giants in stature and strength. The leading wrestlers of Tokyo or Osaka or Hiogo are all men at least six feet in height and weighing perhaps 300 pounds. They are a race apart. Wrestling is an occupation which has been handed Jown from father to son for many generations. And the explanation of their prowess is that they have always been meat eaters, while the rest of Japan, either from choice or necessity, have been in the main vegetarians.

Diamonds Under Water.

An imitation diamond is never so brilliant as a genuine stone. If your eye is not experienced enough to detect the difference, a very simple test is to place the stone under water. The imitation stone is practically extinguished, while a genuine diamond sparkles even under water and is distinctly visible. When possible, place a genuine stone beside the possible imitation under water, and the contrast will be apparent to the least experienced eyes.

Consistent Theory. "Don't you believe the husband is the head of the house and should have the final say?"

"Certainly I do." "Then why don't you come out in the open and say so?" "Because my wife won't let me."-Exchange.

Well Trained.

Mrs. Boggs-Mr. Meekman is a splendid example of what a man ought to be. Mr. Boggs-Not at all. He's a splendid example of what a wife, two sisters, a grownup daughter and a mother-in-law think a man ought to be.

"Aw, come on!" the little boy was heard to remark. "Be a sport. I'll bet yer any amount o' money up to 5 cents."-Harper's.

Most Perfect Single Ladder Made.

The Extension Ladder can be extended any number of steps at a time, to twice its length. Can be telescoped to one-half its length. Every Ladder comes apart, giving two distinct Ladders. The weak point in all Ladders is where the two sections join, when extended. In the Center-Rail Ladder this weakness is overcome by the steel center plate reinforcing the center rail when ladder is extended. No other Extension Ladder can show this reserve strength.

Two Queer Restaurants.

The two queerest restaurants in Paris are known as the Cafe of Death and the Cafe Inferno. In the former waiters dressed in skeleton attire respond to your order and in a quietude that is sepulchral rattle their dry bones as they pass on their way to cater to your desires.

But in the Cafe Inferno all is gayety and wild abandon, everything being clothed in red fire and brilliancy of hue. Waiters in red tights and devil ornaments, including the tail and the cloven hoofs, cavort around the place bringing you absinth on red or scarlet trays, though every colored liquid known to the inquisitive palate of the French people is on tap in the Cafe Inferno.

At one end of the cafe is a small stage, and here by a series of ingenious devices the guests are shown various methods by which offenders of his Satanic majesty may be tured. Special pain producers and shriekers work behind the wings, and so unpleasant does the sound vibration sometimes become to the more sensitive and nervous that they are compelled to seek the air.-Detroit Free

The Grit of an Armless Man.

David Moylan of Cleveland, O., is probably the only armless lawyer in the United States. He lost his right arm when engaged in railroad work in 1896. This discouraged him somewhat, but he still stuck to railroad work, and in 1904 he lost his other arm. Then he made up his mind that he would be a lawyer. He learned to write, holding his pen in his teeth, and generally was so persistent in his refusal to accept defeat that he passed the bar examination some time ago, seventh in a class of 200. Owing to the fact that he had never attended high school he was forced, through a provision in the Ohio law, to complete the full four year high school course before he could secure his degree in law. This he did during his three years' law course, and now he has his shingle to testify to his grit.-Argonaut.

Swimming In the Navy.

A man now on a cruising ship on the Asiatic station says that during his short term of service at a training station he was never asked if he could swim. They had a fine swimming pool there, but whenever the swimming call was sounded it was such a lark for the good swimmers to plunge and frolic that there was no room for the timid nonswimmers. Our correspondent cannot swim and wonders what would become of him were he to fall overboard. Our answer is that there would be several sturdy bluejackets after him with their boots on almost before he himself touched the water. But, on the other hand, it is gratifying to note the interest now being taken in the fact that so many naval men cannot swim, and that swimming shall be made compulsory seems an event of the very near future.-Blue Jacket.

A Lake Minnetonka Fish Story.

John Shafer, Jr., deputy in the office of County Surveyor Frank Haycock of Hennepin county, says that fish if they had been told that their actions have butted and rubbed up against the piles of the bridge at Orono, Lake Minnetonka, until that aged edifice has become weakened, necessitating its

"Yes, sir," said Shafer, "those fish kept on butting up against that pier until the wood was almost worn away. In order to get there we had to pound the water around the place to keep the finny things away until we could finish our inspection. Why, those fish are so numerous at Minnetonka this year that they get pushed through the narrow passage so swift that they simply wear out the wood."-St. Paul Dis-

His One Doubt.

A young woman who recently returned from a trip to Florida brought with her as a souvenir a small cocoanut shell on which a human face had been roughly carved with a few strokes of a knife. This carving was said to ,have been the work of a Seminole Indian, and on this representation the young woman had bought the shell, but she was beset later by some doubts as to the authenticity of the claim. She therefore asked a well known collector of Indian curl ; if he thought the carving really had been made by a Seminole Indian. He examined carefully the faintly outlined face and handed the shell back to her with the verdict: "Very likely it was. My only reason for questioning it would be that I am not sure if a Seminole would do that much work."-New York Press.

A Wide Seat.

When Mr. Taft was following college baseball more closely than he has a chance to do now he set out one afternoon for a game between Yale and Princeton with two tickets in his pocket. He was in the habit of buying two seats so that he would have plenty of room. When he got to the grand stand he forked out the two tickets. The usher took in at a glance what they were for and led the way to the seats.

When he reached them he paused. "What's the trouble, young man?"

said Mr. Taft. "Sorry, sir," said the usher, "but if you sit in these two seats you're going to have some difficulty. Do you see? They're on opposite sides of the aisle." -New York Sun.

A BRAVE GIRL.

Her Terrible Experience While on a Smuggling Expedition.

This tale of heroism displayed by a young woman engaged in smuggling contraband goods over the Swiss-Italian border comes from Geneva: "Mlle. Poretti, aged eighteen, and her brother, aged twenty-three, left Swiss territory to cross the Baldisco pass carrying contraband goods into Italy. On the summit they were overtaken by a violent snowstorm and were soon in deep snow. The Porettis roped themselves, the young man leading. They lost their way, and while attempting to find the path Poretti fell through the snow into a crevasse into which he nearly dragged his sister. The girl, however, planted her ice ax in the snow and withstood the shock.

"Early the next morning several smugglers crossing the pass from Swiss territory into Italian found the young girl near the ordinary route taken by smugglers and recognized her at once, as she belonged to a smuggler's family and lived at Chiavenna. The smugglers at once drew up the brother, but found that he had died during the thirteen hours his sister had held him by the rope. He had received severe injuries in the head, and his body was frozen.

"The smugglers carried down the brave girl, who was almost unconscious, as well as the dead body of her brother, and notified the Poretti family at Chiavenna. On reaching the valley the girl had recovered sufficiently from her terrible experience to explain that she and her brother had spoken for several hours after the accident and at last he had said that he felt nothing and wanted to sleep

"A warm night followed the snowstorm, or two dead bodies would have been found. Under the great strain the rope had cut through the girl's clothes and her waist was bleeding when she was rescued."-Chicago

MISERY AIDING MISERY.

The Helping Hand Among the Beach Combers of Marseilles.

Harry A. Franck in "A Vagabond Journey Around the World" writes of the trying times when he was a beach comber in Marseilles: "Long, hungry days passed, days in which I could scarcely withstand the temptation to carry my kodak to the mont de piete (pawnshop) just off the sailors' square. Among the beach combers there were daily some who gained a few francs by an odd job, by the sale of an extra garment or by 'grafting.' pure and simple. When his hand closed on a bit of money the stranded fellow may have been weak with fasting, yet this first thought was not to gorge himself, but to share his fortune with his companions under hatches. In those bleak November days many a man ranked a 'worthless outcast' by his more fortunate fellow beings toiled all day at the coal wharfs of Marseilles and tramped back, cold and hungry, to the Place Victor Gelu to divide his earnings with other famished miserables whom he had not known a week before.

"More than one man sold the only shirt he owned to feed a new arrival who was an absolute stranger to all. These men won no praise for their benefactions. They expected would have opened their eys in wonder were worthy of praise. The stranded band grew to be a corporate body. By a job here and there I contributed my share to the common fund, and between us we fought off gaunt starva-

"In a dirty alley just off the place was an inn kept by a Greek in which one could sleep on the floor at 3 sous or in a cot at 6, and every evening a band of ragged mortals might have been seen dividing the earnings of some of them into three sou lots as they made their way toward 'L'Auberge chez le Grec.' Whistler Let Them Wait. Whistler's laxity in the matter of engagements was notorious. No one ever knew if he were coming or not to affairs. But his point of view is explained in his answer to a friend of his who knew that he had an engagement to dine with some swells in a distant part of London and who felt that it was most impolitic for Whistler to offend them. It was growing late, madly, intently.

"My dear fellow," he said to him at last, "it is frightfully late, and you have to dine with Lady Such-a-one. Don't you think you'd better stop?"

LETTER FROM SINGAPORE.

Once more we have crossed the equator and retraced our steps to Singapore. This English city of 85,000 inhabitants lies about sixty miles north of the equator, being a little less than one degree of latitude; consequently it is very hot there, the nights being about as warm as the days. The sun rises and sets about 6 o'clock the year round. There is no wet or dry season but it rains nearly every day. The day we were there we were favored with a forenoon as hot as we cared for while the afternoon entertained us with a tropical downpour of rain, consequently vegetation here may be seen in its height of luxuriant growth. Singapore is on a wee island of its own, but close to the Johore shore and almost in touch with Sumatra opposite, being separated by the Straits of Malacca. It was taken possession of by the English under Sir Stamford Raffles in 1819, at which time it was but a jungle waste with 300 naked savages as inhabitants. In 1867 it became the seat of government when the Straits Settlements were made a crown colony under Sir Harry St. George Ord. Sir Harry was known as the "terror of broke up their nefarious raids and men? brought them into submission.

Singapore is the rendezvous and coaling station of the British East India Co., and its commercial interests are very large. At the end of the railroad journey, a steamer took us quickly across the Straits of Johore to the village of Johore Bharu itself. The Sultan of Johore is an able and progressive young man who is rapidly developing his sultanate along agricultural and industrial lines that promise much for the future. At present, however, the Sultan maintains his palace and state almost wholly from the proceeds of "gambling farm" in the village proper. The right to keep a gambling place is farmed out to the highest bidder. Gamblers having been driven out of Singapore, congregate here. The Chinese are most inveterate gamblers. It is one of their strongest national habits. The tables of Johore are filled with them. One sees the perfect porker face here. There is also a Chinese theatre in the town, which is largely patronized. The Sultan's palace is in a beautiful tropical grove surrounded on three sides with a profusion of shrubbery and flowers. Situated as it is on an embankment it commands a fine view of the Straits of Johore. Nearby is the

Over-Exposure in the Sun.

Some years ago when journeying in Egypt and Palestine, the writer heard the Arabs and dragomen frequently allude to the reckless way in which the American tourists exposed themselves to the midday rays of the burning sun. Some of these tourists found by experience that it was a dangerous thing to do.

People have walked up to realization that sunlight kills the germs of tuberculosis and is an invaluable agent in the maintenance and promotion of good health. But some people do not realize that there are dangers from our sum-

The natives of hot countries have long ago found this out and governed their habits accordingly remaining quietly in the shade during the hours of burning heat. Many people seem prone to think that the heavier the coat of tan they wear on their return from their vacation the thicker are the layers of good health that they have accumulated. They forget that the darkening of the skin caused by sunlight is a definite effort on the part of Nature to protect underlying important organs from the destructive chemical action of the sun's rays. mosque with its four towering minarets

Before nature supplies this pigment which deposited in the skin protects the individual from solar actinism, the effects are strikingly destructive. The cuticle loses its vitality and is shed. If the exposure to sunlight has been continued for sometime all the effects of burn are produced. In sensitive people as the result of the paralyzing effect of the sun's rays, the small nerves that supply the capillaries go out of commission, the circulation is seriously disturbed, leakage of serum from the blood takes place, and there is a large amount of edema. Most people have had experiences that have brought home these effects to them so poignantly that they are not likely to be forgotten nor to be misunderstood. In spite of these warnings, however, many people think that it is the right thing to go without any covering for the head and with large portions of the body exposed. Children are encouraged to wander without hats, and the youth of the country, of both sexes, is supposed to be laying up for itself stores of vitality while exposing itself freely to

It must not be forgotten, however, that in the very hot countries-and none of them are much hotter than our own when we have our genuine torrid weather-people maintain their health by hiding from the sun entirely during three or four hours at least in the hottest part of the day, and whenever they go out into the sun they carefully cover their heads with many folds of woolen cloth. Turbans, after all, are the result of the experience of the people in eastern tropical climates that they are much better for having their heads covered.

Major Woodruff, United States army, whose experiences in the Philippines set him to studying the effects of light, has especially warned against the exposure of the head to sunlight. The skull and the scalp present but very slight obstacles are missing, they do not repine. John points. and Lieutenant Shackleton to the passage of dangerously destructive rays of sunlight.

The lighter the color of the hair the truer is this, and very thin hair or shingled hair makes an exposure of the head particularly dangerous. There is short improves its growth and prevents baldness, (a tradition the foolishness of which can be seen from the fact that it is women who almost never have their hair cut who are also never bald,) that is responsible for many men having their hair trimmed very close for the summer vacation. This is extremely dangerous.

Modern Courtship via the Souvenir Postal Card Route.

George Fitch contributes a highly amusing sketch to the June American Magazine, which bears the title, "Upon the Threatened Extinction of the Art of Letter-Writing. Mr. Fitch says that the postal card has become a great boon to the man of few ideas and torpid vocabulary, and that now the bashful lovers can take refuge behind this novel and interesting scheme of expressing themselves. "It takes very little strain on the imagination," says Mr. Fitch, "to is a fact, that the last of the terrestial continents to be explored is the stable a good number from which to courtship clear to the floral bell in the bride's parlor." He continues:

However, not knowing what they sends Mary souvenir cards of the train on which he returned, the main street of the town, the river bank, the postoffice, the office in which he works and an ornamental affair which reads:"This would be a good town if it had you," and a tradition that cutting the hair very Mary, after a little hunting, discovers the following modest answer:

Some three years before the Franco-German war broke out Count Seckendorff accompanied King William I. on his visit to Napoleon III. and was present at the celebrated dejeuner given in the Pavilion de Diane at Fontainebleau. King William, who was sitting next the empress, was asked by her to pass the salt, and in comply ing with this request be threw a little salt over his shoulder. Upon the empress exclaiming, "Why do you do that?" the king explained that in his country it was the custom to do so when passing the salt to ward off bad luck and any chance of a quarrel. The empress in a prettily turned speech at once replied. "But surely there is no danger of anything interfering with our friendship." ### Why Not Pass the Plate?

They ought to pass the plate at church weddings. It comes natural to do it in church, and to do so would add a pretty and useful employment to the duties of the ushers, who always have a little spare time before the bride arrives. And, really, getting married is more expensive than ever. and, though wedding presents are excellent in their way, what the young people usually need the most is cash Instead of the list of gifts which the newspapers sometimes print we should "The collection yielded $4,000. 000." That would be nice. It is much easier to store and care for money than plate and glass! And money always fits and there is no such thing as an embarrassing duplication of dollars.

Lesson XIII.—Second Quarter. For June 26, 1910.

THE INTERNATIONAL SER!ES.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. xiii, 24-30, 36-43-Memory Verses, 37, 38-Golden Text, Matt. xiii, 43-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

In the second phase of this present age, the mysteries of the kingdom set forth in the parable of the tares of the field, our Lord so plainly states that both will grow together until the harvest, and that the harvest is the end of the age, that it is impossible to understand how any one believing His word ean look for a kingdom during this age in which the will of God shall be done on earth as it is done in heaven. The expression "the end of the world" (verses 39, 40, 49; xxiv, 3; xxviii, 20) is literally "the end of the age" or "the consummation of the age" and is translated by the latter phrase in the Rev. Ver. The end of the planet on which we live is nowhere foretold, but even Peter, who describes in strong language the purification which will take place, says, "Nevertheless we, according to His promise, look for new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness." He also tells us that as the world in Noah's day perished by water the present world is reserved unto fire (II Pet. iii, 5-7, 13).

In this parable the good seed is not the word of God, but those in whom the seed of the word has found good soil and whom our Lord calls "the children of the kingdom." In I Cor. iii, 9, they are called "God's tillage." In John xii, 24, our Lord taught that if we would bear fruit we must be content to fall into the ground and die. It is for Him to say where we are to be planted, for the field is His, although at present occupied by an enemy. The sower of the good seed is the Son of Man; the other sower is the enemy, the devil, and he sows his own children, professedly religious people like Cain (John viii, 44; I John iii, 10-12). Outwardly they look like wheat and no doubt think that they are wheat, but the story of Cain shows where they stand and why he and Abel both came to worship God, but only Abel came in God's appointed way, revealed to Adam the way of sacrifice (Gen. iii, 21). Cain brought the best he had, but there was no confession of guilt, no sacrifice, no shedding of blood. The multitude of such today are tares, not wheat; children of the wicked one, not the children of God. Their end is the furnace of fire where there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth. The language is fearful, but it is never used in reference to the openly wicked, only in reference to those who profess to be what they are not, the deceived ones of the devil (Matt viii, 12; xiii, 42, 50; xxii, 13; xxiv, 51; xxv, 30; Luke xiii, 28). See also what is written of those who hear the gospel, but obey it not, in II Thess. i, 7-9; John iii, 18, 36.

From the time when the devil deceived Eve by making her believe that he world do better for her than God, up to the very end of this age when he will persuade people that to make a living they must join the union of this or that nature, or, in other words, receive the mark of the beast (Rev. xiii, 17), he has been a most persistent deceiver, destroyer, liar, murderer. See in Rev. xiv, 9-11; xv, 2-4, the doom of all who worship the beast and the bliss of all who prefer death to the prosperity of the devil. Jas. i, 12; Rev. ii, 10, are good words of strong consolation. We must not think of the taking away of the church as the end of the age, for following that great event for which the righteous wait or should be waiting, the coming of the Lord to the air for His saints (I Thess, iv. 16-18; I Cor. xv, 51-53; Tit, ii, 13; I Cor. i, 7; I Thess. i, 10), the man of sin shall be revealed, the antichrist, with his companion the false prophet, and the age will run on for some years during the time of the great tribulation, the time of Jacob's trouble, when the sealed ones of Israel shall be preserved and a great multitude of redeemed gathered from all nations. Then at the crisis of iniquity, when the devil shall have done his worst, the Lord Jesus shall come with all His saints for the overthrow of all His exemies, the conversion of Israel and the establishment of His kingdom. It is then that, according to verse 43 of our chapter, "the righteous shall shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father." Compare Dan. xii, 1-3; Zech. xiv, 4-9; I Thess. iii, 13; II Thess. i, 10. Then shall the devil be shut up in the pit for 1,000 years, while his companions the beast and the false prophet shall go to the lake of fire (Rev. xix and xx). How fearful will be the ending of this evil age when the Lord cometh out of His place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity, but what a comfort to know that His people shall be hidden safely during the time of the indignation (Isa. xxvi, 19-21). When we attempt to consider the suffering of our Lord Jesus Christ as the sinner's substitute, the indescribable agonies of Gethsemane and Calvary, we get some faint idea of God's hatred of sin, the nature of sin and of the wrath of God. If we are not truly children of God redeemed by that precious blood, the wrath of God will be our portion, no matter what our religious profession may be, for it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul, and without the shedding of blood there is no remission (Lev. xvii, 11; Heb. ix, 22).

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning June 26, 1910. Topic.—Money, men and prayers, the three great missionary needs.—Il Cor. vvii, 1-9; Matt. ix, 35-33.

The evangelization of the world for Christ is a gigantic undertaking, and as the work successfully increases the demands and needs become increasing ly great. From a human standpoint their needs are well divided into three -money, men and prayers.

1. The need of money should at once be perceptible to all. To send multitudes to all parts of the world to "preach the gospel to every creature" requires money, and an immense amount of money. No commercial enterprise in the world has such a tremendous burden upon it, and yet we know that billions of dollars are spent by business concerns. A popular woman's magazine which has spent thousands of dollars in advertising claims to have 1,000,000 subscribers. But what is 1,000,000 in comparison with 16,000.000,000 people? Yet this is the mission of Christianity -to evangelize "every creature." The need of meney is a gigantic need, yet many think not. Spirituality is their nobby, but it may sadly be said that those who talk so spiritually about missions have usually left their pocketbooks at home when the collection plate is passed. This is absolute evidence of their cant and hypocrisy. The Christian who emphasizes the great spiritual needs of the world and talks in language that seems to come directly from heaven and deprecates the mere mention of money is a hypocrite pure and simple. Better say not a word, but from a sincere heart give according to one's ability to help dispel the spiritual darkness than follow the course above described. The spiritual part belongs unto God. The presence of the spirit will always be present with every missionary in his work, but before he can work and be blessed he must be sent and supported, and that work God has placed upon us. The Macedonians in gifts to foreigners should put the most of us to shame. They gave (1) without being asked, (2) out of deep poverty, (3) beyond their means, (4) praying that their gifts be received. Are any of us following such a course in giving to missions? If not we should at least be inspired by them to do better than we are do-

2. Men. All the money in the world will not evangelize the world without men-missionaries. In His day Christ said, "The harvest is great, but the laborers are few." In comparison with the number to be reached today it is still true that the harvest is great and the laborers are few. Yet the church finds as many today as its money will allow. If billions were given instead of millions or thousands the men and women, too, could probably be found. But men cannot walk to China or live on nothing or build churches out of air. To get the best (and only such should be sent) our boards and committees need again increased financial aid.

3. Prayers. Christ declared that for the needy harvest the disciples should pray to God for more laborers for the harvest. True laborers must be called of God. He calls them as a result of prayer. But has the praying for ministers and missionaries increased or decreased? It has undoubtedly decreased. In numbers the students of our theological seminaries have been declining for years. Many reasons have been suggested for this unusual condition. But perhaps, after all, the greatest is the lack of prayer for laborers. The desire of almost every Christian home in the past was for at least one minister in the home. Prayers were offered to this effect. Mothers prayed in secret and openly with their boys upon this subject and early consecrated them to God for the ministry if God would call them. The result was not one son, but often three to six, entered the ministry. Have we quit praying and consecrating our sons to the ministry? If so, let us begin again, and once more our seminaries may equal their increased ca-

A Christian Endeavor society has recently been organized in the United Presbyterian mission at Alexandria, Egypt. The start was made with a membership of twenty-five, but a good many more attend the meetings who have not yet signed the pledge. The membership represents five or six na tionalities from the east and west, drawn together to praise and to pray to the same Lord. Miss Grace Saxes, a well known American Bible teacher. who has been staying in Alexandria for several weeks, has led two of the prayer meetings and has been a blessing to all. Christian Endeavor is far different in this country from what it is in America or England, but our motive and our aim are the same. We have a vast Moslem population on the one hand and on the other a large European population, a great part of which is entirely given up to the things of the world. "Who is sufficient for these things?" Our sufficiency is of God.-V. L. Bigwood of Alexandria, Egypt, in Christian Endeavor World.

HOW HER

Also Her Husband, Who Proved an Important Element.

By ANNA BENTLEY. [Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

May 10. We have all received a dreadful shock. When uncle's valet went to his master's room this morning he found uncle on the floor dead. Poor, dear old man, to die all alone, without any wife or child to soothe his going! If he had only let me live with him I might at least have been within call at the moment when he was stricken. But, no: though I offered repeatedly to be a daughter to him, he steadily refused, persisting in living alone with no one but servants in the house. But uncle was very eccentric.

I supposed there was no doubt that uncle died of some heart trouble or apoplexy, or something like that, but they say now that the doctors declare there are no evidences whatever of disease-that he was in perfect health. It is suspected that he was murdered. But how could that be since no wound has been found on his body? Oh, dear! I am so frightened! I am uncle's nearest relative-indeed, his only relative so far as is known-and unless he has left his wealth to charities I shall inherit it. I do hope nothing will come of this theory that he has been made away with. Suspicion will fall upon me, for it is quite likely that I shall fall heir to all of his estate, which, they say, will turn out to be worth millions.

I can't wait to see the morning paper, and yet I dread to look at it for fear it will contain some terrible development.

Great heavens! "Arnold Maxwell came to his death through an insidious poison!"

Who could have had an interest in murdering him? No one but me. I shall be charged with the crime. In any event, I shall be suspected. Oh, how many horrors accompany wealth!

May 12. Every one is talking about uncle's taking off. The papers are full of it. The police, they say, have been very active, but do not claim as yet to have got any clew. One account says that both servants-there are but two-have been under close surveillance ever since that dreadful night, though they have both proved that they were at a servants' ball from 10 o'clock till 3 in the morning, while the doctors say uncle died between 11 and 1. I wonder how they know that. Oh, how I wish they would find the poisoner!

This morning I saw the first newspaper mention of myself in connection with uncle's death: "No will has yet been found, but it is understood that Miss Clementine Deane, a daughter of the deceased's late wife, has long been the heir expectant. But Miss Deane, not being a blood relative of the murdered man, cannot inherit under the common law."

What a relief! I cannot inherit unless by a will. And yet what a singular position in which to be placed! If a will is found making me an heiress I shall doubtless have to answer to a charge of murdering the man who loved me well enough to leave me his property. God grant that no will may be found, or, if one is found, may some one other than I be the beneficiary! I would rather work and starve than go through the ordeal of being mistaken for a murderess. Think of the long wait in jail for a trial, my portrait everywhere staring me in the face, gaped at in a crowded court-

May 20. For a week I have been dreading an arrest. I fancy every one with whom I come in contact is a detective watching me. I am getting thin and have lost all my color. I must divert my mind and look less worried or it will be assumed that my crime is preying upon me. I will try to read. Perhaps a sensational novel would draw my thoughts from this frightful sensation of my own.

room. My God, I shall go mad!

I have been to the library and brought home a book. How kind that knew that I was dreading a terrible misfortune. When he was telling me about the singular things he finds between the leaves of books returned to the library I forgot my trouble. He says he finds everything from a love letter to a hairpin. How careless we women are! Men seldom leave things between the pages of books, but men don't read as many books as women.

May 21.

The will has been found. I am heiress to a great fortune. I have been congratulated. I hinted to one of my congratulators that I shall be suspected of having poisoned uncle. He replied that I would at least have "millions for defense." But that would not remove the charge, the trial and the stain to follow. The same person bade me not worry. He says that detectives have been watching my every act since the crime was committed and they have admitted to not getting a single item of evidence against me. I knew it. That woman who insisted on coming in to make a dress for me for a song was one of them. That man I saw at so many places, in the shops, on the street, everywhere, was another. I am not reassured by the person who has comforted me, but I have finished my book and will go for another. I long to talk to my friend the librarian about what is on my mind. He has become my only confidant.

I am electrified by a spark of hope. This morning I received a letter addressed in a strange hand. I studied the superscription a long while, but I could not make out from whom it could be. It was postmarked as sent from this town. Finally it occurred to me to open it. I suppose I would have done so before had my mind not been so tortured by the frightful specter that has been hanging over me. What was my surprise to see at the bottom of the letter, "Your friend The Librarian."

This is what he says:

This is what he says:

After talking with you yesterday I went home and, taking up a newspaper, read a detailed report of the doctors who were deputed to analyze the poison found in the case of your late uncle. Suddenly my fingers released their grip on the paper, and it fell to the floor. An idea had flashed upon me. What a singular faculty is memory, and how marvelously it is awakened! I remembered a wet, dismannight a month ago when I was sitting at my desk in the library. A young man, a might a month ago when I was sitting at my desk in the library. A young man, a stranger to me, came in and asked for a rare work of a foreign author. Since it had never been called for before I should not have remembered it except for its rarity. I went to the shelf, where I found it covered with dust, took it down and gave it to the stranger. and gave it to the stranger.
It was a treatise on poisons

A group of events recorded in my brain had led me to this remembrance. My chats with you as to your uncle's death, all I have heard about it and lastly this report of the doctors—might not that book contain mention of the poison reported by them as having been used to kill your uncless and might pot this in some way contain mention.

them as having been used to kill your un-cle, and might not this in some way con-nect this stranger with the murder? I hurried to the library, found the book, which had been returned, and opened it. You remember that the first day you came here I told you how many articles are left carelessly between the leaves of returned books. Well, the book I opened contained an instance of this kind. On running over the leaves looking for mencontained an instance of this kind. On running over the leaves looking for mention of the poison named by the doctors I found lying between two pages devoted to a description of it and its effects a soiled piece of paper. On it was a note written in a peculiar hand referring to the chapter and page on which this poison that killed your uncle was described. But one thing more remained for me to do to establish my find as a bit of evido to establish my find as a bit of evidence. I referred to the record of the book's withdrawal and found the name of the person who had withdrawn it, or at least the name he had given. I also found that the book had not been taken out that the book had not been taken out since he had taken it.

The volume, the bit of paper—evidently slipped in between the pages for a place mark and forgotten—and the record concerning its withdrawal are now all in the hands of the police. I write this to you before going to bed that with the morning light you may have a hope of being relieved of that unspoken suspicion that you cannot but feel overshadows you cannot but feel overshadows you.

Isn't it delightful? If it really turns out that this man who seems to have been so interested in this especial poison killed uncle I shall be vindicated

But it may turn out that he wished the poison for another purpose. They may never find him. If not, at any rate this bit of evidence proves his existence and diverts suspicion from

The young man who took the book on poisons from the library has been arrested. The police have been a long while about it and would not have succeeded in finding him had it not been for the handwriting on his slip used for a bookmark. The way it came about was this: Uncle has a nephew, a real nephew, his own sister's son. I have never before heard of him. He is a physician. He put in a claim as next of kin for uncle's estate. As soon as the police heard of this they secured a specimen of his handwriting. It turned out to be the same queer hand as that found in the

Sept. 18. The second part of the horror attending uncle's death is ended, thank heaven. Yesterday the murderer received his punishment. I did not know it till it was all over. It is all so dreadful! I don't wish another fortune to come to me in such an awful

It is my wedding day. And whom am I to marry? Why, the man who removed the cloud that hung over me at the time of uncle's death. Isn't it natural that I should appreciate such an act even if it came unintended? But he sympathized with me from the first. And when he made the discovery that vindicated me he could scarcely contain himself for joy.

And so ends the episode of the coming of my fortune. We are to go abroad, my husband having received a commission to examine libraries there and purchase a new lot of books for the library here. There has been a gift for this purpose. Who librarian was to me! I wonder if he knows who is the giver? I do.

New Perfection Oil Cook-stove

is the latest practical, scientific cook-stove. It will cook the most elaborate dinner without heating the kitchen.

Boils, bakes, or roasts better than any range. Ready in a second. Extinguished in a second. Fitted with Cabinet Top, with collapsible rests, tower rack, and every up-to-date feature imaginable. You want it, because it will cook any dinner and not heat the room. No heat, no smell, no smoke, no coal to bring in, no ashes to carry out. It does away with the drudgery of cooking, and makes it a pleasure. Women with the light touch for pastry especially appreciate it, because they can immediately have a quick fire, simply by turning a handle. No half-hour preparation. It not only is less trouble than coal, but it costs less. Absolutely no smell, no smoke; and it doesn't heat the kitchen.

The nickel finish, with the turquoise blue of the enameled chimneys, makes the stove ornamental and attractive. Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

Thought He Was On a Clothes Line.

Two telephone girls were talking over the wire one afternoon. The subect of the conversation was a lawn party, which was to take place the next day. Both were discussing what they should wear, and after five minutes had come to no decision. In the midst of this important conversation a masculine voice interrupted; asking humbly what number he had. The lack of reply did not squelch the inquirer, for he asked again for the number. One of the girls became indignant and

Gapes in Chickens.

A prominent Clarion county farmer wrote to Prof. H. A. Surface, State Zo ologist, Pennsylvania, saying: to save. Can you tell me what to do for them, and also advise a remedy for lice on little chicks?

The reply of Prof. Surface was as fol-

"Replying to your inquiry concerning gapes in chickens, I can say that this disease is due to little worms in the windpipe, which come from the chicks eating earth-worms. If they are never allowed on the ground where there are earth-worms, they will not get the gapes. For example, if you can keep them on the barn floor, or on soil well covered with lime or ashes, they will be free from this disease; but, of course, they do much better if allowed to run out, especially during nice weather.
"Within the earth worm the little gape worm is encysted, just as the parasitic worm causing the human disease known as Trichinosis is encysted in the flesh of gape worm remain the earth worm until eaten by a fowl or chick, when it velops into the gape worm, causing the disease which indicates its presence. 'A successful physician has recommended to me to destroy the pest by putting the chicks into a box and dropping a few drops of carbolic acid on bricks, closing the box, and letting the chicks breathe the fumes for a few min-Repeat treatment once or twice. There is, of course, danger of overdoing this by making the tumes too strong, if one is not careful. "One simple remedy which I have seen successfully used this Spring is common kerosene or lamp oil applied by dipping the tip of a feather into it, and inserting it into the windpipe of the chick. The shank of the feather should be stripped of its side barbs and only the tip remain to act as a soft feather brush. By opening the mouth of the chick and pulling the tongue slightly, the opening in the windpipe can be seen, and the feather can be inserted. This apparently does not cause much pain, and the operation is soon finished. It appears that one touch of the oil against the gape worm is enough to kill it, even though it is not removed with the feather at the time of treatment. I saw a large number of chicks so treated this Spring and every one recovered after treatment. This appears to me to be more certain, and even more humane, than to attempt to remove with a horse hair loop, which commonly used, inserted in the windpipe. "For lice on little chicks I recommend a drop of grease on the head and under the wing. Fresh lard, without salt, is the best. Do not use much, only a slight drop or touch is enough, and put a little under the wings of the mother hen."

Can You Do This One?

"Sitting in a hotel at Mankato a few nights ago," said a traveler, "a half-dozen guests engaged in a heated argument over about as trivial a question as have ever heard. One of them started it by putting this problem:

"A train one mile long passes a way station, and a conductor swings on to the caboose as it goes by. He walks to the front end of the train and gets off at station three miles down the road. How far did the conductor ride and how far did he walk?

"Well, sir, it was amusing to hear those arguments. One man insisted that the conductor traveled four miles-rode three on the train and walked one. Another disputed this as impossible because the towns were only three miles apart, and if he had ridden three and walked one he would have landed a mile beyond the station. A third argued that he rode two miles and walked one, although admitting that the conductor was on a train which had traveled three The discussion lasted until nearly midnight, and the problem was not settled satisfactorily when the tion adjourned."--Exchange. when the conven-

Pottery and Secrecy.

In the royal manufactory of pottery at Meissen, Saxony, the work was formerly carried on with the utmost secrecy to prevent the processes from becoming known elsewhere. The establishment was a complete fortress. the portcullis of which was not raised day or night, no stranger being permitted to enter for any purpose whatever. Every workman, even the chief inspector, was sworn to silence. This injunction was formally repeated every month to the superior officers employed, while the workmen had constantly before their eyes in large letters the warning motto, "Be Secret Unto Death." It was well known that any person divulging the process would be imprisoned for life in the castle of Koenigstein. Even the king himself when he took strangers of distinction to visit the works was enjoined to secrecy. One of the foremen, however, escaped and assisted in establishing a manufactory in Vienna, from which the sacrata spread all over Germany.
