NEWS NOTES HERE AND THERE

Condensed Items of Interest from County, State and Our Exchanges.

This is the time to look up the stove repairs you will soon need, and place an order for them with a dealer.

Whether or not the Panama canal shall be fortified, is one of the big questions for Congress to argue over. Opinions on the subject vary greatly.

The price of $225.50 per acre was paid for a Washington county farm, of 58 acres, near Cearloss, on Tuesday. Several other small farms ranging at about $130.00 per acre, have also been sold recently in that county.

The Frederick News has added a third linotype machine to its equipment, which gives it perhaps the best equipped office in the state outside of Baltimore. It is a most excellent newspaper, in every respect, as well as very able, editorially.

Some York, Pa., High School students, in initiating several new members into a debating society, smeared some coloring matter, or dye, on the faces of the candidates, which will disfigure them for life. A chemist says the liquid contained carbolic acid. One arrest has been made.

With the coming of cooler weather, the proposition to hold a big exposition, in Baltimore, in 1914, to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the "Star Spangled Banner," will take on new life. There is but little doubt that such an exposition will be held, but it may not be of an international character.

Samuel Hann, who shot William Hesson near Snyderburg on Friday, was arrested and taken before Police Justice Shriver on Monday, and waived a hearing. He was required to give bail in the sum of $500 to answer the charge at the November term of the Circuit Court. Hann is about 45 years old and has a wife and 14 children living. Hesson is about the same age and has a wife and one child.

Gov. Patterson, of Tennessee, has resigned as the nominee of his party for re-election, "for the good of his party." He says he has so many enemies as to imperil the success of his party, this year, and that it would be an "unmixed evil" for the Republicans to carry the state. His withdrawal will likely better the chances of the party, as with him in the field, there would have been two Democratic tickets.

The Tariff Board will meet in Washington on September 21, and lay the foundations for the beginning of a scientific investigation of the three most important schedules of the Payne-Aldrich law. The now famous schedule "K," the woolen schedule, which has been sharply attacked and strongly defended, will have first consideration. The cotton schedules and the metal schedule will follow in the order named.

Statements that Western banks were loaning money too freely for luxuries, particularly automobiles, have led to the gathering of some statistics in Texas. The bankers there estimate the value of all automobiles in the state at $45,000,000 which is more than one half the combined capital of all the state banks. They also estimate the annual depreciation for which there is no remedy at $15,000,000 for four times the annual fire losses of the state.

The Second district is composed of Baltimore, Harford and Carroll counties and a small portion of Baltimore city. The Anti-Saloon League has for the past two years opposed Mr. Talbot and his machine because he and his machine have lined up against the local option bill; and the league has supported for Senator Baker, who has beaten Mr. Talbot for congress in the same district, because Mr. Baker is a consistent friend of reasonable temperance legislation.—American Issue.

The one hundred and second year of St. Joseph's convent, at Emmitsburg, conducted by the Sisters of Charity, and founded by Mother Seton in 1800, has opened with a large attendance. Mount St. Mary's College also began the fall term with a large enrollment of students. Rt. Rev. O. B. Corrigan, auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore, was present at the opening exercises of the college and conferred orders upon several seminarians in the chapel at mass. All of the members in the faculty have returned.

A very general complaint comes from Harford and nearby counties over the rapid decline of locust and chestnut trees. They are affected by a deadly fungus, which seems to be unknown to the State entomologist. Railroad crosses of locust are rated as the most durable ever used and bring highest prices. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company, who some time ago engaged extensively in the locust tree business, expecting to cut their own chestnuts, are said to be suffering heavy loss from damage to these trees.

It is reliably reported that the Western Maryland Railroad Company has recently been looking into the matter of building a railroad across the Eastern Shore from a point opposite Kent Island, through Easton, Cambridge, Salisbury and Snow Hill to the seaboard in the vicinity of Chincoteague Bay. It is said that if the Western Maryland does build such a road, it will be with the intention of competing with the Pennsylvania for Eastern Shore tonnage, the bulk of which consists of vegetables and fruits, marketed mostly in the West.

Gambling Laws of the State.

Apparently, Maryland has the most sweeping laws against gambling, in all forms. According to Deputy States Attorney, Dunne, of Baltimore, public sentiment would hardly expect little games of chance played mostly for pleasure, in the quiet of one's home, to warrant conviction, but he says the law is there, for all that, and is to be constructed against, rather than for, the offender. He quotes the following laws on gambling, as they stand.

"Section 199. No person shall keep any gaming table, or any house, vessel or place, on land or water, for the purpose of gambling.

"Sec. 211. All games, devices and contrivances at which money or any other thing shall be bet or wagered shall be deemed a gaming table within the meaning of Secs. 199, 200, 201, 208-9-10."

"Sec. 212. Any person who shall play for money or any other thing the game called 'Thimbles' or what is called the 'Little Joker' or at dice, or the game commonly called 'crap,' or any other device or fraudulent trick, whatsoever, on conviction thereof, shall be imprisoned not less than six months nor more than two years in the Maryland House of Correction or fined not exceeding one hundred dollars, or both, in the discretion of the court."

"Sec. 213. The courts shall construe the preceding sections relating to gambling and betting liberally, so as to prevent the mischiefs intended to be provided against."

"Sec. 214. No person shall refuse to testify concerning any gaming or betting because his testimony would implicate himself; but when any such person is required to testify in behalf of the State, he shall not be prosecuted for any offense to which his testimony relates."

"Sec. 215. All constables and police officers are required to visit all places where they shall have reason to suspect gaming tables are kept, and to have prosecuted all persons offending against the laws prohibiting gambling."

"Sec. 209. Any owner, tenant or occupant of any building * * * who shall knowingly permit any gaming table to be kept in such house, etc., shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. Penalty, fine up to $500, one-half to informer, or jail up to one year, or both."

"Sec. 208. Any person who shall knowingly keep any gaming table or other place of gambling in this State, or shall deal at any such gaming table or other place for gambling in this State, or who shall in any manner manage such gaming table or other place for gambling in this State, or who shall have any interest in any gaming table or the profits thereof, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor. (Penalty same as in Sec. 209.)"

"Sec. 200. Every faro table, E. O. table, equality, or other kind of gaming table (billiard table excepted) at which any game or chance shall be played for money or any other thing shall be deemed a gaming table."

"Sec. 202. It shall not be lawful for any person, or any corporation within the State of Maryland, to bet, wage or gamble in any manner or by any means * * * Fine up to $1,000, or up to one year in jail, or both."

"Art. 33, Sec. 112. Any person who shall make any bet or wager upon the result of any election to take place in this State shall be liable to indictment. Penalty, $50 to $500, for the use of the school fund."

Smith—Beard.

(For the Record.)

A very pleasant event occurred, on Tuesday, Sept. 6th., 1910, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beard, of Clear Ridge, when their daughter, Miss Anna Oleya, became the bride of Mr. John Arthur Smith, of Baltimore, Md.

Promptly at 2.30 p. m. a wedding march was being carefully played by Miss Cora Beard sister of the bride, of Washington, D. C., the bridal party entered the parlor where they were met by Elder W. F. Englar, who performed the ceremony in an impressive manner. After the ceremony elaborate refreshments were served. They were the recipients of many beautiful and useful presents.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith left on an evening train for Niagara Falls; after their return they will make their home in Baltimore City.

Death of Mr. Valentine Harman.

Mr. Valentine Harman, a highly respected retired farmer and citizen of Taneytown, died at his home on George St., at an early hour on Sunday morning. He had been in more or less poor health, and with some heart trouble, for a number of years, but was not confined to bed until Saturday night when he was attacked with acute indigestion, and grew rapidly worse until death ensued. He was in his 78th year.

He leaves a widow and five children: Mrs. William Kiser, of this district; Miss Alice, at home; Mrs. Charles E. Keeler, of near Mayberry; Mrs. William Snider, of Virginia; and John A. Harman, of Union Bridge. Funeral services were held on Tuesday morning, at his late home, interment following in the Lutheran cemetery. Mr. Harman was a veteran of the Civil War.

We want a few good canvassers to solicit subscriptions to the CARROLL RECORD, especially in the middle and southern sections of this county. Those of some age and experience preferred, but almost any intelligent person, who will thoroughly canvass his or her neighborhood, may answer our purpose. The work to be done from Sept. 15 to Oct. 30. Write for our proposition.

ROAD WORK CONDEMNED.

More People Speaking Out Plainly. The Commission Called Incompetent.

If the Governor and the Road Commission read the papers, nowadays, they must realize that the public is beginning to protest, and that a storm of protest is brewing which has been strangely quiet for a long time. It begins to look like another "Ballinger" case, in which somebody is going to be asked to get out, because of incompetency. That such a popular movement as improved roads, at state expense, should fall into apparently merited disrepute, is pretty strong evidence that somebody is at fault, and that somebody is going to get the blame.

An indignation meeting of citizens of Allegany and Garrett counties was held in the Courtroom in Cumberland last Friday afternoon. The officials in charge of the State road work were vigorously denounced; and the remarks of the speakers elicited great applause.

Findley C. Hendrickson, a Cumberland attorney, presided. Speaking of the alleged bad work of the State Roads Commission in the county, he said:

"In pitiful contrast to such scientific work as that being done here by the great railroads, we are having the few thousands we have to spend on our public highways largely wasted. If a railroad manager were to waste the company's money he would be asked to resign. It is but fair and right that those who handle the tax-payers' money be held to the same accountability."

William C. Devenom, also of the Cumberland bar, said:

"The Good Roads Commission is misnamed. It should be called the Bad Roads Commission, and the adjective is equally applicable to the commission itself and to the roads which it has built, or rather, attempted to build. In my opinion the commission has shown itself to be grossly incompetent and negligent. While I think the chairman of the commission is chiefly to be held responsible for the failure of the commission, I think the Governor of this State is by no means blameless. If he were to devote more time to the performance of his duties as Executive and less to the stirring up of newspaper sensations, the people would have less to complain about the neglect of duty on the part of other public officials of the State."

Charles W. Donnelly, a Cumberland newspaper man, told of the alleged admissions made to him by Superintendent Brew, of the Construction Company, which is building the section of the road from the Six-Mile House east to Flintstone, that he did not have to build according to specifications and that Contractor McCluskey, who had the section from Cumberland to the Six-Mile House, could have gotten the same privilege for the asking. Contractor McCluskey, when asked about this, said he requested to be allowed to build as was the other contractor, but his request was refused.

Albert A. Doub, of the Cumberland bar, said the roads commission was guilty of the grossest incompetency; that it had bankrupted one firm and was now almost bankrupting another.

Clayton Parnell, of Frostburg, a member of the State Board of Education, said that at the rate the work was progressing it would take the commission 600 years to complete the job. It was evident that the people are dissatisfied with the work of the roads commission all over the State, and that up to now the results were a distinct disappointment and failure.

The Democratic county papers and county officials, throughout the state, are for the greater part loyally keeping "mum," over the question; but, on the quiet, they are displeased, and wondering how the situation will wind up. They realize that the general public is safest when not aroused, and that in the present instance it will be best for them to follow, rather than lead, public sentiment, hoping that in some way the party will escape without serious harm.

Just why the Grange and Farmers' clubs are not looking into the Road question, and stirring things up, is perhaps because they are so busy handling prosperity, that such a little thing as the expenditure of $5,000,000 does not worry them, especially "when the dirt roads are good."

The whole inwardness of the subject must come out, sooner or later, and there must be an accounting to the people, though long delayed. The whole scheme, so far, has been a disappointment, to put it mildly. Magnificent plans, high-toned roads costing $12,000 to $15,000 a mile, and "scientific" world-wide investigations at the expense of the tax-payers, are not what the people want, and they will eventually say so.

Some little work is being done in the Eastern Shore, but even there the people are wondering what they are going to get. The following communication to the last issue of the Cambridge Record, illustrates the situation:

"About two years ago there was considerable talk down here about the Good Roads that we were going to get from the part of that State Loan that was coming to Dorchester county. Every now and then we see something in the papers about the work being done on the roads up the county, but we have not heard anything lately about the work down the county. When will it be started? Why not let this work be started from Cambridge and work down as well as up? We need the Good Roads down here and we need them bad, for in the winter time we have nothing but mud. Please stir the Commission up on the matter and let us have our roads—don't build it all up the county first."

Lawyer Wm. A. Golden, of Pittsburgh, the well-known native Taneytowner, dined, drove with and sat on the platform beside ex-President Roosevelt in that city last Saturday evening, at the monster public demonstration in the latter's honor. Incidentally, the day was the 33rd anniversary of the former's admission to his profession.

Political Notes of the Week.

The Republicans were "snowed under" in Maine, on Monday, due to a factional fight and the unpopularity of the prohibition laws. The Republican administration of affairs in the state has been unpopular for several years. The Democrats elect Governor, two Congressmen, and a majority in the legislature which will mean a gain of a U. S. Senator to succeed Senator Hale, who some time ago withdrew as a candidate on account of factional differences.

This is the first time in thirty years for the Democrats to control the state. The cause of the revolution is claimed by the Republicans to be due wholly to disaffection with the state government, and because of objections to the prohibition laws, while the Democrats claim National issues—tariff and high cost of living—were responsible for the overthrow. The probability is that the former explanation is nearest true, for the Republican majorities in the state have been dwindling since 1896, when the majority was 48,246, while two years ago it was but 7,273.

In Arkansas, on Monday, the Democrats won by usual majorities, and the "initiative and referendum" amendment arrived.

In Arizona, the Democrats elected a majority of delegates to the Constitutional convention, which indicates that the new state will be Democratic—a stand-off to New Mexico, which last week elected a Republican majority.

In New Jersey, the Republicans nominated Franklin Murphy, of Newark, for Senator, in a three cornered contest; E. W. Stokes running second, and Congressman Fowler, insurgent, last.

In South Carolina, Blaise, the gubernatorial candidate representing Local Option, won over Featherstone representing Prohibition.

In Washington, Pointdexter, insurgent, won the nomination for Senator, over Ashton, regular, by a large majority.

Governor Patterson, of Tennessee, who was nominated by the Democrats for re-election, has resigned, on account of serious disaffection in the party over his administration. His resignation was expected to hold in line the bolting independents, but at their convention, on Wednesday, they endorsed the candidacy of Capt. Ben W. Hooper, Republican nominee for Governor, and further cut loose by declining to consider harmony resolutions. This possible break in the solid South extends only to the Governorship. What the regulars will do now is problematical, but another candidate, more popular, will likely be nominated.

Speaker Joseph G. Cannon was renominated for Congress, in his Illinois district, on Thursday. Congressman Boutell, of Illinois, one of the most able stand-patters, was defeated for renomination. In several districts in the state, the fight between candidates is very close.

The New Jersey State Democratic Convention, after a turbulent session, nominated Dr. Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton University, as their candidate for Governor.

Orphans' Court Proceedings.

TUESDAY, Sept. 13th, 1910.—The last will and testament of Jacob Sharrer of Joseph, late of Carroll county, deceased, admitted to probate, and letters testamentary thereon granted unto Daniel D. Sharrer and John Milton Reifsnider.

Casper Millinder, administrator of Sarah J. Millinder, deceased, returned inventory of personal property and received order to sell same.

Thomas J. Coonan, admr. w. a. of David N. Henning, deceased, returned inventories of personal property and money, and received order to sell personal property.

William L. Babylon, administrator of Charles R. Babylon, deceased, returned report of sale of personal property.

Susan R. Murray and Charles W. Murray, administrators of Charles M. Murray, deceased, returned additional inventory of personal property and inventory of debts, and received order to sell stock.

Harry F. Richards, executor of George C. Richards, deceased, settled his first and final account.

Letters of administration on the estate of Mary E. Brown, deceased, granted unto William H. Brown, who returned inventory of money and settled his first and final account.

Amanda J. Hering, executrix of Francis L. Hering, deceased, returned inventory of debts and settled her first and final account.

WEDNESDAY, Sept. 14th, 1910.—Wesley M. Geiman, acting executor of Abraham I. Geiman, deceased, returned inventories of personal property and money and received orders to sell personal property and stock.

Taft for Party Harmony.

Beverly, Mass., September 15.—No difference between so-called "progressives" and "regulars" will be recognized by President Taft hereafter, but all party leaders will be treated alike as Republicans in the matter of federal support. The President's views to this effect are given in a letter from Secretary Norton to a Republican leader of Iowa, whose name is not disclosed.

In the letter Secretary Norton stated that while important Republican legislation pending in Congress was opposed by certain Republican leaders, the President felt that his duty required him to withhold federal patronage from senators and representatives who seemed to occupy a position hostile to efforts to fulfill the pledges of the party platform.

That attitude on the part of the President ended, however, with the more recent primary elections and nominating conventions in which the people have declared themselves, and the President now looks upon "Progressives" and "Regulars" alike as Republicans and as such entitled to his support and of the party and the fall elections, Secretary Norton's letter says, must settle the question whether the differences of the last session of Congress shall be perpetuated or forgotten.

MARYLAND CAMPAIGN.

Both Parties Meet and Prepare for the Contest of Ballots.

At a conference of the Democratic Congressional candidates, in Baltimore, on Wednesday, each declared that the paramount issue of the campaign must be tariff revision downward and attacks upon the Republican administration for failing to redeem its auto-election promises to revise the tariff downward.

It was the first time that the six Democratic standard-bearers in this campaign have met. For nearly an hour they discussed the various issues and each gave his views to reduce the cost of living. It was decided to appoint Congressmen J. F. C. Talbot and J. Harry Covington, the only two Democrats nominated to succeed themselves, as a committee to draft a tentative platform.

It is the purpose of the candidates to issue a pointed and concise declaration. The tariff plank will lead, and the candidates will declare that if they are elected they will take an irrevocable stand for a revision of the tariff, so as to reduce the cost of living. The errors and defaults of the Republican party in its management of the affairs of the country and its maladministration of the Government will be given. The class legislation which has been passed by a Republican Congress will also be attacked, and the Republican will also assail for its invasion of the Constitution and the rights of the States. The extravagance of the past and present Republican administrations will be attacked.

General Vandiver and the candidates believe that the Democratic party will sweep the State this year, and they look for a solid Democratic delegation in the next House of Representatives from Maryland. Each candidate reported conditions exceptionally good in his district and each expressed himself as being confident of being elected.

The six Maryland Republicans for Congress, with Chairman John B. Hanna, of the State Central Committee, presiding, met on Thursday in Mr. Hanna's office, discussed the general issues to arise in the coming campaign, and appointed a subcommittee to draft a platform and then adjourned to be called together again about 10 days hence by Chairman Hanna. The committee appointed to draft the platform consists of Messrs. Parran, Mullikin and Warner.

In the general discussion bearing on the platform, the fact was clearly developed and demonstrated that all the candidates are a unit in upholding and applauding the administration of President Taft, and in the forthcoming platform there will be a ringing endorsement of his policies and administration. Attention was called to the resolutions adopted by the State Central Committee at its April meeting and its hearing on the present national administration. The resolutions in question were:

The Republican State Central Committee of Maryland hereby records its unqualified endorsement of the administration of President Taft. The record of achievement for the first year of his administration in both constructive legislation and administration reforms and economies, fully justifies the confidence reposed in him by the American people.

We recommend the splendid record made by the Republicans in the General Assembly of Maryland, and condemn the gross partisanship and wasteful extravagance of the Democratic majority. There was also a discussion of state issues and of the advisability of bringing them generally to the front in the campaign. It was unanimously agreed among the candidates that the platform will be broad and that each candidate shall have sufficient latitude in which to declare his individual views, which, however, are not to conflict with the general tenor of the resolutions.

Different Forms of Oaths.

The ceremony of taking the oath has been known since earliest history. The only changes in form in which have come in thousands of years have been due to the introduction of the Bible and the cross by Christian nations.

As administered in most of the English law courts, the form of the oath is practically the same as that in the United States, though rather more monious. In France it is more the simplest. A crucifix above the judge's seat is supposed to obviate the necessity of the witness handling either the cross or the Bible.

"You swear to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth?" asks the judge. And the witness, raising his right hand, answers: "I swear it."

In Austria, a Christian witness is sworn before a crucifix placed between two lighted candles. Holding up his right hand, the witness says: "I swear by God, the Almighty and All Wise, that I will speak the pure and full truth in answer to anything I may be asked by the court."

If the witness is of the Jewish race, he uses the same words, but places his hand on a Bible opened at the page on which appears the third commandment, and the crucifix is removed.

In a Belgian court, the witness says: "I will speak the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help me God and all the saints." No Bible is required in the administering of his oath. The Italian witness generally takes the oath in a dramatic manner. Resting his hand on an open Bible, he exclaims: "I will swear to tell the truth."

More ceremony attends the administering of an oath in a Spanish court. The witness kneels on his right knee and places his right hand on the sacred book. The judge then asks: "Will you swear to God and then by those holy gospels to speak the truth to all you may be asked?" The witness replies: "Yes, I swear it," to which the judge rejoins: "Then if thus you do, God will reward you, and if not will require of you."

A Big "Wet, or Dry" Fight.

The chief fight for county option, this year, is in Nebraska. It is the single issue upon which the struggle for the Governorship is being fought, the chief question in the Senatorial battle and a more vibrant proposition than the tariff or the high cost of living. In no state in the Union are the great national questions of the day so far forgotten and ignored as here, where a United States Senator, as well as six Congressmen, will be chosen practically by the "wet" and "dry" vote. The man who can guess the number of "wet" Republicans who will vote for the Democratic candidates and the number of "dry" Democrats who will support the Republican nominees can, with absolute accuracy, name the next Governor, the Senator and the six Congressmen to be elected in November from this State.

Dahlman, the Democratic candidate for Governor, is running on a "wet" platform, while Aldrich, the Republican candidate, is "dry." It is conceded that Dahlman has the best chance of winning, but that much depends on what course Mr. Bryan may take in the campaign. He was defeated in the state convention on the county option issue, following which, the Republicans adopted it, but since that time Mr. Bryan has been keeping quiet.

The situation is peculiar in that neither candidate would have been nominated, had the primary election laws restricted as to voting to members of each party, as is the law in Maryland. Dahlman owes his nomination to the votes of "wet" Republicans, and Aldrich his nomination to the votes of "dry" Democrats. The situation, as it stands, will not represent a victory to either party, but the result will nevertheless have considerable national significance, growing out of a hot fight over a purely state issue. As about half of the voters in the state are of foreign extraction, and as this vote is strongly Republican, and about 90 per cent. "wet," the Democrats seem sure to carry the state.

No Gambling and Liquors at the Hagerstown Fair.

Hagerstown, Sept. 14.—The Hagerstown Fair Board held a meeting yesterday afternoon and discussed the character of entertainment to be placed on the Midway at the fair in October. It was decided that only clean sideshows would be granted concessions. It was also decided to curtail and more strictly define the space to be set aside for the Midway. The board ordered that the outdoor space north of the dining room should not again be used for the sale of intoxicants. The space will be converted into a soft drink and lunch booth. No wheels of fortune or gambling devices will be allowed on the fair grounds.

One of the large buildings will be put in order for lecturing and butter-making demonstrations. A hospital tent will be on the grounds. Fire apparatus and experienced firemen will be placed on the grounds to be ready for fire accidents.

Cook Discovered Near Pole.

London, Sept. 15.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the discredited Arctic explorer, is now en route to Etah, on the northwest coast of Greenland, to recover records which he alleges he left there on his return from the North Pole, according to the Copenhagen correspondent of the Central News.

Dr. Cook is aboard the yacht Beauty, belonging to Mr. John R. Bradley, who backed him in his last Polar hunt. News of Dr. Cook was brought to Copenhagen by a ship that sighted the Beauty and learned of the doctor's mission from the explorer himself.

Dr. Cook is after records which he says will prove his claim to being the discoverer of the North Pole.

The vessel bringing the news of Dr. Cook also brought letters from officials of Greenland, stating that all the Eskimos who were associated with him on his last Polar trip are convinced he reached the Pole.

The Goat was the Goat.

Washington, September 14.—This tale of a goat is arranged chronologically:

A woman in Detroit wanted a new hat and drew a $10 bill out of a bank.

A gust of wind whisked it out of her hand.

A small boy driving a nanny goat to a cart happened by and the $10 fluttered under nanny's nose.

Nanny gobbled the bill. The woman accused the boy of stealing it.

By the time a policeman arrived the goat had swallowed it.

The boy proved his innocence and recovered the bill by killing nanny.

The Treasury Department has issued a new bill but cannot issue a new goat.

During August, for the first time in the history of the Post Office Department, the city of Chicago surpassed the city of New York in the gross amount of postal receipts. For some time the middle Western city has been crowding the Eastern metropolis. Finally, last month, its postal revenues aggregated $1,666,484, while, for the same period, the postal revenues of the New York city were $55,699 less than Chicago. The percentage of increase in the revenues at New York was 11.64 compared with the corresponding month of last year, against 18.16 at Chicago. Post office officials figure that the increased revenues at Chicago are due to the very large mail order business by the merchants there.

Claude Wilbur Franklin, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Franklin, of Westminster, died at the home of his parents, on Sept. 11, aged 2 years, 3 months and 20 days. He is survived by his parents and one sister, and his grand-parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Grossnickle, of near Union Bridge. The funeral services were held in the Sams Creek church of the Brethren, from the text II Samuel 12: 15-21, by Elder W. E. Roop. Interment in adjoining cemetery.

WHAT DIFFERENCE does it make to 999 out of every 1000 newspaper readers whether Miss Katherine Elkins marries the Duke Abruzzi, or not? This yarn has been trotted out periodically, in the newspapers, for the past two years, until it is worse than stale tawdler. Soon it will be as old as the reported finding of "Charlie Ross."

SO FAR AS HEARD from, Frederick county has not yet publicly raised its voice in protest against the influence of Judge Motter in the primary contest for Congress. Either Frederick-countians must be perfectly satisfied with the result, or there must have been less judicial participation than some of our state papers imagine. If the Judge does not drive a willing team, he must have them mightily well trained.

PERHAPS THE refusal of Col. Roosevelt to dine with Senator Lorimer, was to square-up the refusal of the Mayor of Milwaukee to meet the Col? If the Rooseveltian standard for honored guests is applied to public functions generally, we are of the opinion that celebrity attractions will be very frequently absent. Even the "Holier than thou" edict, which has much to commend it, is nevertheless a pretty dangerous power to handle in arranging political etiquette.

THOSE WHO ARE DEEP in politics, claim that Roosevelt's tour has strengthened, rather than weakened, Republican prospects for carrying Congress. They argue that the "insurgents" now feel better, and are more apt to stay in the Republican party than bolt and start a new party; that they now have hopes of dominating the party, and at the same time holding the organization in the ascendancy in National politics; that the differences are not so great that the election of a Republican majority would not guarantee a strongly united party, with changed policies, for the Presidential Campaign of 1912, etc. The Democrats, however, do not see the situation this way, but claim that this is "their year"—that their prospects were never better for victory.

Road Information Wanted.

One of the most remarkable situations in the political history of Maryland, and one which shows at the same time the lack of interest people often take in very important matters of legislation, is that which attaches to the history of the new road law, and the accomplishments under it after two years trial. Not only has comparatively little actual work been done, but what has been done has been of an extremely expensive character, and not, in our opinion, the practical and serviceable kind which the majority of country tax-payers were led to believe would be the result.

Just how much of the $5,000,000 has been spent, is not a matter of public knowledge, but it is rumored to be in the neighborhood of $1,250,000. Little patches of new road—which, if reports be correct, are too fine to stand hard usage—have been constructed in some counties, but nothing like a system of through roads, anywhere, is in sight or under way, to our knowledge. The operations of the Commission have been strangely kept quiet, so far as official public statements are concerned; and the cost of administration, especially, as well as that interest and enthusiasm which a Commission of this sort is naturally supposed to be possessed of, are matters which have not, to any wide extent, been made items of public information.

Surely, the public has been long-suffering and kind. Even if the $5,000,000 could be spent without an increased tax-rate, it is nevertheless the peoples money—money which, if not so spent, would have made it possible to lower taxes. Therefore, the expenditure of this big sum is a matter for the public to be fully informed of, and not a surplus which a Commission can spend without its being anybody's business, or without anybody caring.

As the charges are beginning to be made openly that the road fund is being used to build up a Crothers machine in the state, we think it will soon be up to the Governor and his Commission to take the public into their confidence, by making all expenditures public, and demonstrating that the law has not been, and will not be, an expensive experiment, and a failure, so far as lasting practical public good is concerned. Even if the work so far done, the money so far spent, and future plans, are all defensible and wise, it is but fair that the public should know all about it. This is not an occasion for high-toned secretiveness and a "public be damned" course.

"Harvest Home."

The "Harvest Home" season, now about to be observed in many of our churches, should appeal with special force to the liberality of Carroll County farmers, for surely they have been over-abundantly blessed with the fruits of the field, and in all forms of material prosperity. While agricultural pursuits throughout the country have been generally profitable for a number of years, this section of Maryland stands at the forefront as having received an abundant share, this year, no matter what other section comparison is made with.

Even those who are lukewarm, or even skeptical, over religious matters, and who are disinclined to think that the Divine Ruler is entitled to much thanks for their plenty, must nevertheless feel like being liberal to some good cause, if they have a spark of genuine liberality in their make-up, and should not let this season pass by without making Pastors, and the good causes they represent, happy, by donating a portion of their abundance.

It is actually a shame, that in such a prosperous section as ours, any branch, or need, of any of our churches, should go unsupplied with the necessary money to relieve it. With hundreds of prosperous church members, yet starved and hard-up church treasuries, there is something sadly wrong, and it is not with the latter. Our people need a shaking up—an awakening—a full realization that if they continue to neglect to contribute to the visible representatives of the Giver of all the blessings they receive, they are justly entitled to have a smaller measure of blessings given them.

Listen to the appeals being made! Not only farmers, but everybody enjoying the benefits of living in this God-favored country and time! Give the churches the glad "Harvest Home" they are asking for, and need!

The Easiest Job?

We have been asked—what is the easiest job connected with publishing a newspaper? We don't know. It depends on the man. With some, it is writing editorials, with others it is getting local news, or using the scissors. There are not many easy things about the job, if one is conscientious, and particular that every department should be the best possible.

But, we do know the hardest thing about the job, and that is, to make it pay. That is harder even than to please everybody, because no sane editor ever thinks of trying to do that. If there is any business on the face of the earth that gives twice as much value as it gets in return, it is the worth while country newspaper.

The easy job must be on the outside of the newspaper office. To use the office when you want to, and cut it at other times, also because you want to, must be easy. To give it your little jobs, and send away the big ones, is also easy. To ask it to say all the nice things about you, but "keep mum" about the other kind, is certainly very easy. No, we don't know the "easiest" job, but perhaps, on the whole, it is "sizing up" human nature.

"Agin the Government."

Republican insurgency, once strongly equipped with leadership, easily enlisted thousands who know, or care, little or nothing about the questions originating the movement. It was simply the old feeling of "agin the organization," which is often unjustifiably wrong in its expression, and which can usually be depended on to bob up, under favorable conditions. The chief reason, it is said, why foreigners are usually Democrats, is because, on coming to this country they find the National government to be Republican, and, as they were "agin the government" at home, so they are here.

In most states, especially where one party has been long in power, there is always a strong following which imagines—when it does not know positively—that the "organization" is corrupt because it has been so long in power. The latter is held—ignorantly, perhaps—to be responsible for the former. So, whether for state, or National, reasons, or both, the present "insurgency" campaign was well chosen, as to time, irrespective of whether or not it rested on sounder foundations, for it has brought to its support the "agin the government" following, which compels more leaders to fall in line, whether so disposed or not.

Discontent and jealousy, suspicion and demagoguery, ignorance, and the desire for turning things upside down just to show that it can be done, often combine to wreck the plans and policies of the wisest men. We do not presume to assert that insurgency was primarily due, in the present case, to such a combination, but its great extent and voting strength has come from it. The ball has been started, honestly enough, perhaps, but it has accumulated a circumference that those on the inside may some day find inconvenient to dispose of, and are sure to find equally as hard to please and satisfy, should they come into power sufficiently to try to satisfy anybody.

Radicalism in Politics.

Theodore Roosevelt has come squarely out for radicalism in politics. He has split with the administration, and has outlined the platform of a progressive party. He spoke his mind in the town where John Brown, old "Osawatimie Brown," stood himself against the Missouri raiders in 1856. He discussed railroad corporations, tariff, the income tax and publicity of campaign funds. He is in accord with the insurgent or progressive wing of the Republican party. Some people think that we are on the eve of a tremendous political upheaval. There are many wrongs to be righted, but it is well to go slow in all matters pertaining to corporate interests and the tariff. Capital quickly hides when conditions are adverse. Business is affected by radicalism in politics. Manufacturers are growing uneasy. Speaking of legislation against corporate interests, a writer in the Manufacturers Record says:

"Give it to them, is the cry, seemingly to forget that nine-tenths of all the business done in the United States is done through corporations. Laws have been enacted in our own State very antagonistic to the corporations. For instance, an additional tax of 50 per cent was enacted in the last Legislature against corporations, and the taxes on railroads have been very materially increased all along the line. At the present time our Chamber of Commerce, of which we are proud, and ought to be, is working hard to prevent the railroads increasing their freight rates, notwithstanding the fact that during the last few months nearly all of the railroads in our country have increased the wages of their employees, and their taxes have been increased in some places nearly 100 per cent. More stringent laws have been enacted, and to meet them it is absolutely necessary to receive more money from some source or else pay no dividends. The Legislature has absolutely prevented their making money on the passenger traffic, and the only possible way for them to do it is on their freight traffic."

If the attack on the railroads and other corporations continue we shall have a panic. Let our legislators think twice before they disrupt business interests.

There is much that is good in the progressive wing of the Republican party, and many of the measures advocated are founded on justice and the rights of man, but extreme radicalism never did pay. The tariff question can only be decided by experts. In cases where corporations are able to sell goods cheaper in foreign lands than in our own country, then it is time to reduce the tariff on such goods. The cornering of the necessities of life is a great evil, which needs remedying.

But go slow, gentlemen. As Davy Crockett said, "Be sure you are right; then go ahead."—Frederick News.

Give More Than You Get.

As the vacations close and the Summer slack season changes to regular Fall work, there are a good many men, and, in this day of women wage-earners and business women, a number of women also, who are disappointed that the expected advance in pay has not come or the higher and better work that seemed near, for which they hoped, has not become a reality.

The temptation comes to slack a bit, but the man or woman who in the end moves forward is the man or woman who, after disappointment, goes on, giving more than he gets. This is the rule of all exchange, of all barter and of all barter and sale. He who sells cheap sells long. He who gives more than can be got elsewhere sells easily. The man who gives more in work—more than can be bought at the market standard—than can ordinarily be bought for the wages he receives, and who, therefore, gives more than he gets, always keeps his place, is never dropped in hard time and when the time comes rises in salary and place. The man who does only what he is paid for in time does nothing for which any man wishes to pay him.—Phila. Press.

Liquor Drinking Decreasing.

The beer and whiskey interests are trying hard to squeeze some comfort out of the preliminary report of the commissioner of internal revenue for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1910. Because this report shows an increased withdrawal from bond of 12,007,611 gallons of distilled spirits and an increase in the amount of revenue paid for beer over 1909, there is a great effort made to grow hilarious and to declare the former decrease was due to hard times and not to the spread of prohibitory laws or to the widening of "dry" territory. The liquor journals will make much of these figures, and so will those daily papers which lend or sell themselves to the liquor interests.

Let us look at the figures of the internal revenue commissioner, analyze them and compare them with the figures of other years. Of course, the figures of the commissioner are compared with that of 1909.

In 1909 the withdrawals of whiskey from bond aggregated 116,650,165 gallons. In 1910 the withdrawals were 128,675,776 gallons. According to the commissioner's figures revenue was paid on 59,485,117 barrels of beer in 1910 against 56,303,497 barrels in 1909, an increase of 3,181,620 barrels, or 98,630,220 gallons.

You say that looks bad. You say you thought there would be a decrease. If you are weak-kneed, you say it does not pay to fight the traffic and you throw up your hands and become a croaker. But if you are intelligent and are of an inquiring disposition, you will investigate, and when you do, you will find this alleged increase is no increase at all and that instead of being discouraged there are reasons to be encouraged.

Let us make some comparisons. Here are the figures for the years 1907, 1908, 1909 and 1910, these figures covering withdrawals of distilled spirits from bond and beer on which revenue tax was paid:

1907.....	2,019,691,111	gallons.
1908.....	2,006,233,408	"
1909.....	1,935,544,113	"
1910.....	2,046,181,943	"

Do these figures prove that the people of this country are drinking more liquor? Not at all.

Bear in mind that withdrawals from bond and payment of revenue tax does not mean that all these intoxicants have been sold and consumed. Because of a desire to make a good showing in the report of the internal revenue commissioner, dealers loaded up heavily and millions of gallons of spirits withdrawn from bond and of beer on which the tax has been paid has not been consumed. There is a difference between withdrawals for consumption and actual consumption.

Another thing. A large amount of whiskey and beer included in the report was shipped abroad. Producers are pushing their export trade and all exports are a part of the aggregate as shown by the report.

President Gilmore, of the Model License League, predicted there would be an increase in withdrawals, or consumption, as he calls it, this year over last. He is not a good prophet. The consumption, using his term, per capita is less than last year and shows a big slump compared with recent years. Here are the figures:

Year.	Per capita.
1907.....	23.54
1908.....	23.02
1909.....	21.86
1910.....	21.4

If the per capita for 1910 was as great as for 1907, the figures of the internal revenue commissioner would have been increased by 180,000,000 gallons. The per capita consumption slumps as the population increases. Is there anything in these figures to discourage temperance people? Is there anything in them to encourage the liquor interests?

But this is not all. The average yearly increase in beer and whiskey for eight years preceding 1908 was over 96,000,000 gallons. Even though the aggregate for 1910 equals that of 1907, there remains the loss of that average yearly increase for three years, which is 288,000,000 gallons, which, added to the actual decrease in 1908-1909, makes a total loss for the three years of approximately 375,000,000 gallons.

So what have the liquor men to brag about for the past three years? They have fallen short hundreds of millions of gallons in consumption, while there has been a steady decrease in the use of intoxicants per capita. Even the influx of 1,000,000 foreigners a year with their almost universal drink habit fails to bring the per capita use up to what it was a few years ago, or even to what it was last year.

It is a safe guess the liquor interests will not attempt to prove an increase in consumption by districts. They will content themselves yelling that in spite of local option and prohibition the consumption for 1910 shows an increase, but there will be no effort on their part to show any increase in local option districts, for the very good reason they cannot do it.

The increase has been in the great liquor centers, where those elements congregate which are prone to indulge and where the brewery interests are in fierce competition with each other. There will be found, when the commissioner's figures are analyzed, that there has been a tremendous slump in consumption in saloonless territory. If this were not true, why would the liquor men fight the spread of local option and prohibition?

On the whole, it is encouraging to the opponent of the saloon to know the per capita decrease continues and that there is a shortage for the past three years of 375,000,000 gallons over the consumption in the years prior to 1908.—American Issue.

SOMETHING NEW IN SILOS.

Solution of Problem Found by Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station.

Cheaper than wood, as durable as concrete—that is the essence of the new Iowa silo devised by the Iowa experiment station. Two years ago the station set out to solve the silo problem. The result was a silo made of hollow tile blocks, hard burned. Thirteen of these silos were in practical operation on Iowa farms last winter. In no case was an unfavorable report made. It was found that the silage kept fully as well as in stave or concrete silos. There was no more freezing than in stave silos and less than in single walled concrete silos.

The material from which the hollow tiles are made has been used for years in brick construction. It has proved to be very durable. There is no reason why a silo made from such material should not last for generations. This will do away with the principal objection of the stave silo—lack of durability. Another objection to the stave silo is that it blows down easily when empty and also dries out badly. None of these objections applies to the Iowa silo.

THE IOWA SILO.

[From the Iowa experiment station, Ames, Ia.]

Concrete is an excellent material for silo building. About the only serious difficulty is that expensive forms and skilled labor must be used. No forms are required for the Iowa silo. Any mason familiar with brickwork can put up one by following directions. Owing to the air space in the walls of the Iowa silo, there is less freezing than in a single walled concrete silo. A double walled concrete silo is most effective in keeping out frost, but the cost is so great as to prohibit its general use.

The material for making hollow tile blocks is found all over the country. They are comparatively light, so as to require a minimum freight charge when shipped. Many of the leading tile manufacturers are arranging to make these blocks especially for silo construction. Others will do so upon demand.

Directions for building these silos have been put out in bulletin form and may be obtained free by addressing Bulletin Editor, Ames, Ia., and asking for a copy of bulletin 117.

When thousands of dollars are spent to build pike roads it is folly not to spend a few dollars for care and repair. Do it now!

FALL BERRY PRUNING.

Cutting Away of Surplus Wood Gives Added Strength to Roots.

With the current and gooseberry I recommend fall rather than spring pruning. I commence as soon as the leaves have partially fallen, trimming out all drooping branches to encourage an upright growth, all dead and dying wood and all sprouts except two or three of the strongest for renewing the fruiting wood.

In removing the sprouts I prefer pulling them rather than cutting them off close to the ground, and where they do not come off easily with a good, vigorous pull I remove the soil at the base of the sprout and cut it off as low as possible. After the bush is trimmed and all grass, roots and weeds removed, mound up a little, covering all exposed rootlets. This operation serves as a fall hoeing and is much easier done than in the spring, when the grass and weeds have more strongly fastened their roots in the ground. This pruning away of all surplus wood and sprouts in the fall gives added strength to the roots for sustaining and stimulating that part of the bush remaining.—Wyman Elliott, Minnesota.

Canvas Caps For Hay.

If you have much hay to handle, provide yourself with a supply of hay caps made of canvas and use them in covering the hay during the curing process. This will enable you to put the hay in the barn in perfect keeping condition and will more than save you the price of the hay caps.—Farm Progress.

ANT PROOF HIVE STANDS.

Concrete Bases Which Balk the Efforts of the Apiarists' Pests.

Every beekeeper has more or less trouble with ants that gain entrance to the hives. They are not only a nuisance, but a cause of loss as well, says Farm and Fireside.

At the request of a beekeeper the stand illustrated in Fig. 1, which gave excellent satisfaction, was designed. The hive is placed in the center of it, entirely surrounded by a groove or channel in the concrete, which may be filled with oil or water, thus making it an impossible barrier to ants and small vermin, while the part on which the hive rests is made large enough so that the bees have ample room to alight and enter the hive without coming in contact with the protective composition in the channel.

The entire stand is made of concrete in an easily prepared homemade mold, which enables them to be built at a cost of less than 10 cents each, which is as low as any good stand may be built. Furthermore, the concrete stand is everlasting and ornamental.

To make the mold a board is prepared for the bottom or pallet as large as the entire stand is to be. Upon this a three-fourth inch strip is nailed so that it reaches entirely around the edge of the pallet one inch in from the outside edge, as shown in Fig. 2. This molds the channel or groove in the top of the stand for the oil or water. Four boards are now prepared long enough to reach entirely around the outside edge of the pallet. These are seven inches high, which makes the stand six inches high when a board one inch thick is used for pallet.

These four boards are cut out in the center by sawing into them three inches at a point six inches from each end and breaking out this piece to make them the form illustrated, which permits the legs to be easily molded. These boards when finished are hinged together at three corners, and the fourth corner fastens with a hook and eyelet, so that when the work is molded the form may be unhooked at one corner and folded back from the work.

The concrete is filled into form and tamped down solid up to the top edge of the cut out part of the side molds. Then a form is made by nailing two seven inch boards together at right angles. These are three inches wide and are laid on the concrete already placed at each corner, so that a square form is made there, into which the concrete is tamped, thus molding the legs to the stand, as illustrated in Fig. 1.

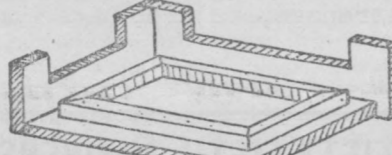

Fig. 2

A number of these stands can be molded in a day, it being possible to provide several pallets and use one set of outside and leg forms on all of them.

For the Farmer With Brains.

Every lost bolt should be replaced at once. Manufacturers don't put useless bolts in machines just for the fun of it.

At the Minnesota experiment station wheat grown continuously on one plot since 1894 has averaged 18.6 bushels since 1900, and wheat on ground of the same kind and treated the same, but in a three year rotation, has averaged 20.6 bushels.

Beautiful home grounds are an investment just as good fences, drainage, etc., are. They add to the value of the farm and to the happiness of the family.

The Wisconsin experiment station has found one acre of rape when combined with grain equal to 2,767 pounds of corn and shorts.

When your wife asks you to help pick small fruit for canning don't growl about it. You will be cheerful enough about eating it next winter.

Placing a small heap of rich stable manure around the base of each tree in the orchard will prove to be a little time most profitably spent.

Some refuse straw scattered among the small fruit bushes will work wonders as a fertilizer and in keeping down the unsightly and unprofitable weed pests.

Drainage must deal with the maximum, not the minimum nor the average quantity of water. Tile that are too small fail in wet seasons, the time you need them most.

The barn set on a concrete foundation looks substantial, and it is so and will last longer than the one set on wooden posts or blocks.

Gasoline Hay Stacker.

A new wrinkle in farm machinery is a gasoline hay stacker, which takes the place of the old horse on the sweep. The gasoline in a tank is half buried in the ground at some distance from the engine to avoid danger of explosion.

THE SMART CAPER.

Wear a Breakfast Cap and Look Dainty.

THE NEW BREAKFAST CAP.

Old time fashions are being revived in all departments of dress, and the latest new old fashion to appear is the breakfast cap. Some girls prefer to call them colonial caps, for they were worn by the ladies of the Revolution, who looked charming in the dainty lace headgear. Every one is familiar with the pictures of Martha Washington in her mob cap. Well, you can make your new breakfast headpiece just like hers if you want to or you can copy the peasant headress of Holland, which is a delightful model.

All kinds of odds and ends of lace and muslin are brought into commission for these caps, and it is only the work of a few minutes to make a lovely creation all lace, frills and flowing ribbons. The illustration will give a good idea of a modish cap.

And, by the way, these caps are being presented to summer brides and to young mothers and debutantes.

The Bathing Suit.

The better the material the more durable the bathing suit or beach gown. Clothes for the seashore, whether for the actual sea dip or for the merest dandy sunbath on the beach, are subjected to the most strenuous fading process and therefore demand the best in fabric and dye.

The costume pictured is both practical and pretty.

Arranging Flowers.

No trouble is too great to the genuine lover of flowers when arranging them. The utmost pains will be taken to choose the most suitable glass or jar receptacle. A large bunch of sweet peas looks well if placed on an old china mug or bowl. Roses are equally effective if set in specimen glasses or carelessly grouped in a porcelain bowl.

Lilies of the valley are a host in themselves. Poppies seem to require clay pottery or the bottle green vases that are so general nowadays. Forget-me-nots look well in small, low glasses. Mignonette is best in a bowl by itself, as it is said to kill flowers that are put with it. The old fashioned clove carnation looks well with a spray of white jasmine. Scarlet geranium should always have a spray of its own leaves.

Maidenhair fern, so lovely as foliage, is properly associated with hot-house blossoms, but orchids should be excepted from this suggestion. They are best as nature intended them to be. Indeed, it is always more artistic to give each flower its own foliage.

Pongee Petticoats.

Paris says the pongee petticoat is new. It is made of the natural colored silk, with a scant ruffle, and is very closely fitted over the hips. Its only trimming is an insertion along the ruffle's edge of coffee colored linen lace or a few rows of ecru colored soutache braid.

By using a pattern for the home-made petticoat there is no reason why it cannot be made to look quite as well as those made by the skirt expert.

Fooling Her Husband.

That there are more ways than one of "killing a cat" is a well known fact, but the newest of ways has been evolved from the fertile brain of a Germantown woman who is blessed with a stingy husband. This husband is generous enough in one sense of the word. His wife may have the best attire the stores afford charged to his account, but she may handle no money. Women, in this man's opinion, know nothing of the value of a dollar. On leaving for his office in the morning he kisses her goodbye and thrusts a quarter's worth of trolley tickets into her hand.

Now mildly goes shopping, buys a few necessities and a fifty dollar wrap for which she has no use whatever. Next day she returns the latter, receives a credit slip for $50 and betakes herself to the handkerchief counter, where she spends 50 cents, receiving $49.50 change. Placing some small change in her purse and stowing the roll of greenbacks in what she considers a safer receptacle, she leaves the shop feeling that she has made the best of a bad bargain.—Philadelphia Record.

A Bald Fact.

It is common to deplore the lack of humor in a person. Yet the very want of wit may save a certain amount of embarrassment, as was the case on a certain occasion with President Johnson. "He was one day," says a writer in Harper's Magazine, "visiting my mother, and a friend, Mrs. Knox, a widow, came in. She had known Mr. Johnson some years before, when he was a member of the legislature, but they had not met since then."

"After mutual recognition Mr. Johnson said: 'How is Mr. Knox? I have not seen him lately.'"

"He has been dead six years," said Mrs. Knox.

"I thought I hadn't seen him on the street," said Mr. Johnson.

"When Mrs. Knox left my mother said, laughing, 'That was a funny mistake of yours about Mr. Knox.'"

"What mistake did I make?" said Johnson. "I said I hadn't seen him on the street, and I hadn't."

Owning Your Home.

"I have always felt that upon properly appointed and becoming dwellings depends more than anything else the improvement of mankind," said Benjamin Disraeli (Earl of Beaconsfield). To sit in the evening in your comfortable armchair; to look around you and know that everything you see there is your very own and that you have obtained it all so that you practically do not feel the cost; to know also that if you, the breadwinner, were suddenly called away your home would still be your wife's or your family's—that is one of the pleasures of life, indeed. It is a pleasure which gives you new heart in your work in the world. It sends you out every morning determined to get on and to earn more money, and because of that very determination you do become worth more money.—New York Press.

A Handy Snuffbox.

A curious story is told as to how the Rothschilds supported Carafa, the composer. The latter was far from rich. His principal income was derived from a snuffbox. And this was the way of it: The snuffbox was given to the author of "La Prison d'Edimbourg" by Baron James de Rothschild as a token of esteem. Carafa sold it twenty-four hours later for 75 napoleons to the same jeweler from whom it had been bought. This became known to Rothschild, who gave it again to the musician on the following year. The next day it returned to the jeweler's. The traffic continued till the death of the banker and longer still, for his sons kept up the tradition, to the great satisfaction of Carafa.

Little Else.

A London attorney named Else, rather diminutive in his stature and not particularly respectable in his character, once met Jekyll. "Sir," said he, "I hear you have called me a pettifogging scoundrel. Have you done so, sir?"

"Sir," said Jekyll, with a look of contempt, "I never said you were a pettifogger or a scoundrel, but I said you were 'little Else.'"—Westminster Gazette.

They Felt Hungry.

She—Well, Clarence, dear, the situation is not quite as rosy as it is pictured to us before marriage, is it? He—Well, not all together so, love. She—I wish—er—I wish— He—What do you wish, dearest? She—I wish we had the rice and the old shoes they threw at us when we were married.

He Lumpd It.

"My coffee is not quite sweet enough," remarked he.

"Well, if you don't like it, I suppose you'll have to lump it," said she, with a smile, passing the loaf sugar his way.

Fixed For the Future.

Friend—Haven't you named the baby yet?

Proud Mother—No; we must be very careful to give him a nice name, because there will be so many named after him when he is president.

What Did He Mean?

Mrs. H.—I see there's a man in France who has murdered three of his wives in succession. I'd like to see the man who would murder me.

Mr. H.—So would I, my dear.

Base envy withers at another's joy and hates the excellence it cannot reach.—Thomson.

Union Bridge.

The Tidewater Co. is now grading a track south of Sam's Creek, which is on the line that was surveyed for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, when that enterprise was started many years ago. The Ellicott family, then very prominent in Maryland, possessed sufficient influence to divert the road from that line to one that had been surveyed past their mills, at what is now Ellicott City. Prominent engineers of that day said that the line that came down Sam's Creek was preferable to the one chosen, but as is usual in all public transactions, self interest landed the prize.

Blue Ridge College News.

The formal opening of the 12th annual session of Blue Ridge College, occurred on Tuesday, Sept. 6, 1910. Prof. W. B. Yount, Ph. D. M. A., who for the last eighteen years has been president of Bridgewater College, delivered the opening address, his subject being "Education for Leadership." The large and appreciative audience was plainly moved by the commonsense plea for practical and higher education. His suggestion for our motto was: "Industry the Means; Plenty the Results." Prof. Yount came not only to deliver the opening address, but is staying right with us as a member of the faculty. He has been elected Dean of the College and has charge of the department of Ancient Classics. Prof. Wine, with a short, pointed address, opened the session.

A large number of students have been enrolled and others are constantly arriving. The latest arrivals are Misses Blanche Foutz, Lemasters, Pa.; Thelma Littlefield, Middleburg, Md.; Messrs. Oscar Rebok, Waynesboro, Pa.; Bruce Huff, Ringgold, Md.; Joseph Foutz, Lemasters, Pa.; Harvard Kuhn, Milnor, Pa.; Calvin Eicholtz, Thurmont, Md., and Mr. Bloser, Indiana.

Base ball, basket ball, lawn tennis, track work, and other field sports are receiving much attention. Last Saturday, in a base ball game, the College boys defeated the Academy, the score being 11 to 9. Prof. Westcott, B. A. M. A., late of Brown and Yale Universities, has charge of and is directing the coaching of our rising athletes.

TO ALL INTELLIGENT FARMERS.

Gentlemen:-

As the Fall season approaches, your thoughts turn quite naturally to the attention which your fruit trees require. The spraying of the trees is an admitted necessity.

Heretofore, we have not handled the Lime and Sulphur Spraying Solution generally used. We can now supply it to you at 25 cents per gallon.

We sell the Myers Bucket Spray Pump--conceded to be the best--at $2.60, which is a very low price on the same. The extension rods can be had for 50c.

By good fortune, we are able to offer to the sportsman, a splendid bargain in a good Single Breech-loading Shot Gun at $4.50.

MYSTERY SOLVED

"Well," said the superintendent, "did you catch him?"

"No. We went to his house, and he wasn't there. Then we followed him down the valley, for if he had gone up it would have led him back to the mines. Meanwhile we had posted men on the hilltops on either side and knew that he didn't get out that way."

"H'm! Keep up your efforts to find him. Search every bit of territory where he may possibly be."

Tom Murphy had been murdered down in the mine in a pocket where he had been alone with Jim Dugan. Dugan had succeeded in getting out, passing men who had not yet heard of the murder.

Dugan was not found, and after several days' search it was believed that he had got out of the valley. His wife declared that she knew no more of his whereabouts than those who were hunting him. The matter was left with the police.

A month after the Murphy murder, as a gang of men were quitting work, Hans Schmitt remained behind, and, going to a heap of coal near by, he began to turn over loose pieces with his pick. As soon as his companions had gone up in the cage he suddenly stopped, listened, and hearing the sound of a single pick, went toward the worker. Presently, putting out his light, Schmitt moved more stealthily, pausing now and again to listen, starting at some sound in a distant part of the mine and, when assured that there was no one near, moving on again. At last, coming near the place, a sort of pocket, where a man was working alone, Schmitt stole up behind him, raised his pick and was about to bring it down on the skull of the victim when suddenly a hand grasped the pick from behind. At the same moment a voice cried:

"Jacob!"

The workman turned, the light in his hand revealing Hans Schmitt standing with his upraised pick. A moment later the man behind, moving from the shadow cast by the would be murderer, was also recognized.

"Carl Foegel," exclaimed the workman, "what does this mean?"

"That had I not been on the watch and saved you you would have been murdered."

Schmitt, loosening his hold on his pick, made a move to get away, but Foegel caught him around the waist, and Jacob Schuster pinioned his arms. In this condition they dragged him to the foot of the cage and gave the signal for it to ascend. In ten minutes more they had their captive between them in the office of the superintendent.

"Had it not been for Foegel," said Schuster, "this man, Hans Schmitt, would have murdered me. I was doing some extra work alone. Schmitt crept up behind me and raised his pick to strike when Foegel held it."

"How did you happen to be there?" asked the superintendent of Foegel.

"Before I tell my story," said Foegel, "I would like to have Schmitt's room searched."

The superintendent ordered the search made, and in a few minutes the searchers returned with some money and a watch that had belonged to the murdered Murphy.

"How is this?" said the superintendent, surprised. "This man was not suspected of killing Murphy. Jim Dugan did that job and proved that he had done it by running away."

"Shall I tell my story?" said Foegel.

"Yes; proceed."

"On the evening of Murphy's murder I was working with my gang when I felt thirsty, and, going for some water, I saw a man ahead of me skulking along as though bent on some villainy. I kept back, following him to where Murphy was working, and saw him raise his pick and strike Murphy. For a moment I was paralyzed and gave him time to rob the body. I then rushed forward, but not before the murderer had gone. I lifted Murphy up and saw that he was dead. It then occurred to me that if found there with the body I would be suspected of the murder, especially as I could not identify the real murderer, so I got out. As I was leaving I was seen by a man who was passing the place."

The superintendent looked dazed. "My good man," he said, "how long since you began to work here?"

"Since the day after the murder."

"Take him away," said the superintendent. "He's gone daft."

"One moment," continued Foegel. "I have been watching many men, including Hans Schmitt, and today when the men quit work and he did not go with them I believed he was bent on mischief. I stayed behind, followed him and this time prevented a murder."

"But the Murphy case?"

"After Murphy was murdered I went to my home, shaved off my red beard, changed my hair to black with some hair dye belonging to my wife and put on old clothes that I hadn't worn for a year. I then came to you and engaged to work under the assumed name of Carl Foegel."

"You are?"

"Jim Dugan."

"Well, upon my word!" exclaimed the astonished superintendent. "Why did you run away?"

"To prevent being hanged for a murder I did not commit. I returned to the mine to discover the murderer, and there he is."

There was rejoicing that night at the cabin of Jim Dugan when he returned to his wife and children, vindicated by his own wit and daring.

HE CAUGHT THE HOUSE.

Congressman Weeks' Story of His First Speech in Congress.

In an interesting interview Congressman Weeks related his experience on first entering congress. He said he soon realized that a member who was thoroughly familiar with even one subject could maintain the attention of his audience better than a congressman who could talk fairly well on almost any subject. A measure came up involving the custom of "hazing" at Annapolis, and as he was a graduate he was urged to say something in behalf of the bill.

"You may not have as good a chance for five years to speak on a subject which you so thoroughly understand," said his colleague.

He asked the speaker for an opportunity to state his views in five minutes.

"When I rose to make my little speech," said Mr. Weeks, "the members were in the usual state of disorder, talking, writing, lounging or coming in or going out. 'Mr. Speaker,' I said as loudly as I could, with the idea of making my voice heard above the din, 'I am a graduate of the Naval Academy at Annapolis.' Before I got any further, to my surprise, the noise ceased. Men stopped and looked at me with attention, as though saying to themselves: 'Here is a man who knows whereof he speaks. We will listen to what information he may be able to give.' Since then," continued Mr. Weeks, "I have found that exact knowledge on any subject under discussion will always gain the attention of the house of representatives."

Representative Weeks still retains the square shoulders and military bearing and aspect of a naval officer. He stands six feet high and weighs 230 pounds, but walks as briskly as if he were a young man. Born in New Hampshire, he is accounted one of the strong men in the New England delegation of hard workers and knows how to make barren soil yield crops.—National Magazine.

Turkey Eggs as Food.

The turkey egg has an Elysian flavor. It is infinitely removed in excellence from that of the duck or guinea fowl, and the eggs of those birds are better, in our opinion, than are those of the chicken. We do not attempt to convey any notion of the turkey egg's deliciousness, because it cannot be conveyed in words. What is intended to be stressed is that there is one of the most perfect foods that men can have, and yet not one man in fifty and not one woman in five hundred knows anything about it. It is useless to talk about women and foods; they know nothing about good things; twenty generations of candy eating have depraved and destroyed their gustatory nerves, and they are judges only of sweetmeats and ices. It suffices to say, and to say it plainly, that there are few delicacies in this land of neglected or abandoned delicacies that equal the eggs of the turkey.—Columbia State.

Wanted It Clean.

A Sunday passenger on a Staten Island ferryboat studied out a complaint sufficiently important to make the commissioner of docks and his assistants take notice. She hunted up a deck hand and directed his attention to the life preservers stored in the deck ceiling.

"Just look at these things," she said. "What's the matter with 'em?" he asked.

"Matter?" said she. "They're dirty. They ought to be washed. If a woman with a nice summer dress on had to put one of those dusty things on over it it would never be fit to wear again."

—New York Sun.

An Autograph Fiend.

W. Reginald Bray of London, who styles himself "the autograph king of England," proudly boasts that he has 5,000 signatures of great and near-great people, the list including the queen of Roumania, the pope, ex-President Roosevelt, Admiral Togo, Mr. Asquith, Mr. Balfour, Lord Roberts, Sir Hector Macdonald, Sir Henry Irving, Dr. Jameson and Lord Salisbury. "One of the features of my collection," he says, "is that no influence has been used to obtain a single autograph. Every one has been gained by perseverance and the originality of my requests."

Work In the Canal Zone.

"Five o'clock in the afternoon is quitting time in Culebra cut," the Canal Record, published in the Canal Zone, says. "The shovels cease to dig, spoil trains lie up for night, and the men who have been working since 7 o'clock in the morning start up the steep banks for their homes in the villages along the edge of the canal or gather in little groups to wait for the labor trains. Yet the work does not entirely cease, because quitting time for the 6,000 day workers marks the beginning of labor for the 400 or more men who work in the cut at night."

Zebu Meat.

French colonial authorities are reported to be inaugurating a serious attempt to introduce the zebu of Madagascar in the French market as a substitute for beef. The first batch of a dozen carcasses sold in Paris fetched the prices of the highest grades of cattle. Herds of zebus, otherwise known as Indian oxen, which have been threatened with extermination, are now being rapidly restored, and probably more than 4,000,000 head roam the plateaus of Madagascar. The meat of the zebu is said to be savory and nutritious and is equal to beef.

Plant Tennessee Trees.

Buy your trees direct from a responsible nursery and be sure of getting just what you order, and incidentally save more than half what a traveling man would charge.

Our nursery has earned an enviable reputation for fair dealing and our method of packing insures trees reaching you in fine condition.

Prof. G. M. Bentley, our State Entomologist and quite an authority on nursery stock, in his last annual report says:

We believe greater success in orcharding would result from planting Tennessee-grown trees. The variety of stock grown is very general, that suitable both for Northern and Southern trade. Northern nurserymen contract with Tennessee growers especially for apple trees, knowing that due to the long growing season here, stock of two year's growth will equal that of three years in the colder climate. In this and many other features Tennessee holds great advantages and to-day ranks first as the leading nursery state in the South.

ADVICE TO SUMMER GIRLS.

She was pretty as a picture, with her cheeks of russet tan.

And her bathing suit was something good to see.

So she took a swimming lesson from a handsome college man.

Such a very handsome college man was he.

Round her head her hair was matted in the fashionable way.

And she wore a bun to elevate the crown.

And she wore a lot of curls, as all maidens do today.

The most expensive curls that come in brown.

In the water they went splashing just as gayly as could be.

And the spinners on the porches wore a frown.

For they never thought they'd ever live such awful sights to see—

That young man should be driven out of town.

But alas for that young maiden, and alas for that young man.

A saucy wave came dashing o'er the foam.

And it swept away her tresses as a wave of water can.

Swept away her hairpins also and her comb.

The lake was strewn with ringlets; to the west there sailed her bun.

Here and there a switch was bobbing in the distance you could see her store curls dapping in the sun.

Those most expensive curls that come in brown.

And a sadder little maiden never hurried to the shore.

When she realized her wealth of hair was gone.

The moral of this story—must I really tell it o'er?

Is not to go in swimming with your phonies on.

—Detroit Free Press.

An Equal Amount.

"And how," asked the fond father when his son had returned home after his first year in college, "do you like the president of the Institution?"

"I've never seen him."

"What! You have never seen him?"

"That's strange. I shall have to look into this matter. I sent you to that college because I had faith in the president of it—because he has the reputation of being one of the ablest educators in this country. I shall insist on knowing why you have never seen him."

"The whole matter is easily explained. He's been so busy raising equal amounts that he couldn't devote any time to the running of the college."

"Raising equal amounts?"

"Yes. Every few days some millionaire offers to give the institution several hundred thousand dollars if an equal amount can be raised from others. You haven't any idea how busy a man is likely to be kept raising the equal amounts."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Having Her Way.

"So you are going to housekeeping as soon as you're married? I thought you had made up your mind to board."

"Yes, but George is equally determined to have a house of our own."

"And so you are going to keep house in order to please George?"

"No, I'm going to keep house so that George will be glad to board."—Ideas.

SEPTEMBER.

September, ninth child of the year.
Of rivals thou hast naught to fear:
Dressed in sapphire, crowned in gold:
Your gems of wealth each day unfold.
Far removed from May and June;
From apple blossoms and roses' bloom.
July's scorching, withering rays
Resent the richness of thy days.
August's lamp burns on thy shrine,
Borrowing fire from gems—all thine.
The maple leaves are bending low;
Their veins with rubies are aglow:
Their boughs have caught the sweet refrain:
A symphony for Autumn's reign.
The sunbeams deck the shapely knoll;
Luring artists in their stroll.
On its crest burn smoldering fires,
In its heart hide amber dyes.
The goldenrod is caught with fire,
And tossing racemes of yellow flower;
Waving wild its golden plume,
Bending low with wealth of bloom.
Brown-eyed sunflowers hail the morn,
In stature vying with the corn;
Strong of stem, with heart-shaped leaf:
Hiding fruit within their sheath.
With icy fringe and silvery sheen,
The asters bow with stately mien:
They flaunt their varied colored hues
Of royal purple and opal blues.
Pink asters wear the roses' blush.
The yellow bells about the brush:
The virgin white shed modest tears
For those which lived in other years.
September's glory came to share
A pure white flower in your parterre:
An emerald gown with jeweled lace,
And a filmy canopy hides her grace:
Her million stars gleam with delight,
Sweet clematis, thou bride in white!
Lacing the trellis, her tendrils fall;
To slumbering flowers they gently call:
They kiss the crown of the magnonette,
And deck the grass of the violet.
The gentian winks with pure delight
At mornings' dew and frosts of night;
Unfurling a fringe of vestal blue
With touches of cerulean hue:
Thy quiet life and long delay
Comes after blossoms fade away,
When Summer's mystic ways have flown,
Blue gentian, thou must bloom alone.

HELEN ROOT LILLY.

LETTER FROM GERMANY.

Dr. S. G. A. Brown.

Leaving Munich we passed through a rather uninteresting country to Nuremberg. All through Germany thus far, we found a number of young forests principally spruce and pine, an evidence that the empire believes in forest preservation. Another matter which surprised us was that there was very little wheat grown thus far. We saw an acre of it here and there, also a little rye and oats and some potatoes. The principal harvest is hay. Thousands and thousands of acres of it are being harvested. Help seems plentiful, but we are sorry to say it is principally women. There are no fences on the farms. We do not remember having seen two live hogs in all Germany, thus far. Oxen are used freely as a substitute for horses, some of them wearing collars and hames, instead of the time-honored yoke. The roads are splendid and at many of the cross-roads, here, as well as in Italy and Switzerland, are erected crucifixes, which, to our dull minds, seem extremely inappropriate. We recall one of these shrines on the Simphon Pass, containing an image of the Virgin Mary, with a French inscription written below, somewhat as follows: "He who pauses here and says his Ave Maria three times before this shrine will be absolved from all sin for three hundred days by the POPE OF ROME." We are especially sorry to say that we have found the Germans selfish and less congenial than their Swiss neighbors or the people of sunny Italy.

Olde Nurnberg appears to be aged indeed. It is as little like Munich as Cairo is like New York. It is one of the quaintest old towns in all Germany. There are probably 350,000 people there. Some of the old walls are still standing, and four of the great round towers still remain. Most of its buildings have stone balconies, high gables and many curious carvings. For instance, one very long building is only one story high, but it has such a high pointed roof, that it contains six stories above the square, all receiving light from many dormer windows. There are many old, quaint bridges over the river which winds through the town. One of these is known as the hangman's bridge, as it was the custom formerly to hang criminals here. There are also many fine churches. The graves of Albert Durer and Hans Sachs the poet-cobbler are in St. Johns church yard. St. Sebald's church has richly painted windows and a splendid shrine of the saint. The Schone Brunner, or beautiful fountain is splendid indeed, and stands in the common mart, where people sell and trade. The town is filled with beer-gardens, where men and women congregate, especially in the evening, to drink their beer and pass the time in idle chatting.

"Full fall! why this is as it should be; here is my true realm, amidst bright eyes and faces, Happy as fair! Here sorrow cannot reach."

But one of the most interesting places

was the old castle that has stood sentinel on its rocky height for more than eight centuries. It contains many curious things, among others, paintings, wood-carvings and antique furniture. The German Emperor and Empress occupied it for a time five years ago. Parts of rooms were roped off, probably that our unhallowed feet might not touch the spot where he had stood. We wonder if Alice Roosevelt would have jumped the rope, had she visited here. We were shown a well 336 feet deep, which required a glassful of water poured down from above, six seconds to reach the bottom. There are two underground passages to the well through which prisoners used to come for water as they were not permitted to see daylight. In the dungeon we were shown all kinds of instruments of torture, most of them so fiendish and cruel that we shall not attempt to describe them here. The castle was strongly fortified and surrounded by a deep moat. One gets a fine view of this quaint, beautiful city from the parapets of this place. We would gladly have spent a month in this quaint, delightful, mediaeval town, had our time permitted.

We had but a few hours at Wurzburg, between trains, as our next chief stop was Heidelberg. Wurzburg is famous for its wines which come from the hilly slopes surrounding the town. Shortly after leaving the city one enters the valley of the Neckar, following the windings of this stream to Heidelberg. The country is extremely picturesque, tunnel succeeds tunnel, and the peasants seem to be expected in landscape gardening.

Heidelberg, the university city, contains about 55,000 inhabitants. It is situated on the Neckar river, backed by mountains, and is probably the most beautiful city in the Rhenish Palatinate. There are about 15,000 Catholics here, the majority of the people being adherents of the Lutheran faith. The Reformation found followers early in Heidelberg. Here Luther held his famous disputation, and here Frederick III. established the Reformed doctrine and during his reign the celebrated Heidelberg Catechism was published. The chief attraction at Heidelberg is the Castle. The grounds around it are charming although the Castle itself is in ruins. Within its cellar is a huge tun or barrel said to hold 236,000 quarts of wine. There is the usual well and moat which are parts of every ancient castle. From the ruined tower one has a fine view of the city and surrounding country. There are some very old buildings here, dating back over 500 years. One of the most interesting places to us, however, was the University. The Medical Department, besides its College, has the following buildings: Anatomy building, Physiological institute, Eye hospital, Ear, Nose and Throat hospital, Insane hospital, Hygienic institute, Lying-in hospital, Surgical hospital, Nervous institute, Cancer hospital and Zander's institute. The operating rooms of the eye and women's hospitals, especially, we noticed were glass on three sides, with glass roofs, admitting plenty of light. There are small convalescent houses, which look more like Solariums, connected with the surgical hospital, where patients may bask in the sun or stroll about the large verandas. The nervous institute has a fine garden in front of it, provided with seats in shady places. All the buildings are well equipped and clinical material is abundant, patients coming from the countries round about. But perhaps you may tire of this.

The University in all its branches, has about 4,000 students. These students are quite jealous of their honor, and should one offend another, he may be challenged to fight a duel with swords. On the opposite side of the river is the Hirschgasse, a building in which these duels have been fought ever since the sixteenth century. Nearly every day has its duel. We were unfortunate in not witnessing one of these fights, but we saw the room, the blood, the cotton and the bandages of an affray which had just terminated before our arrival. We also saw what we believed to be the hero, the victim, their seconds and the physician drive away in a carriage. Fully one-third of the students you meet have sabre cuts across one or the other cheek. It is a time-honored custom. On the tables in the rooms are carved the names of many heroes, among which we noticed that of Bismarck.

In a beautiful park adjoining the town, excellent band concerts are given nearly every evening. Here the students may be seen strutting in their several class uniforms, many with swords by their sides. Heidelberg is indeed a most interesting city, and it is no wonder that Scheffel wrote:

"If worldly cares torment me,
And life seems dull and stale,
I'll spur my horse and gallop
Out to the Neckar vale."

Don't Break Down.

Severe strains on the vital organs, like strains on machinery, cause break-downs. You can't over-tax stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels or nerves without serious danger to yourself. If you are weak or run-down, or under strain of any kind, take Electric Bitters the matchless, tonic medicine. Mrs. J. E. Van de Sande, of Kirkland, Ill., writes: "That I did not break down, while enduring a most severe strain, for three months, is due wholly to Electric Bitters." Use them and enjoy health and strength. Satisfaction positively guaranteed. 50c. at R. S. McKinney's drug store, Taneytown, Md.

The Dressing-Case Problem.

I must tell all my brothers how my wife and I have solved the problem which so bothers those who dwell where there is but little closet-room. With one dressing case between us, there was not room for all our things; as to the closets, they were crammed full, and even under the bed there were many hat boxes. So I purchased another dressing case with my tobacco coupons, getting a very pretty one for 1,000,500 coupons.

I then took all my clothes, which had been crowding my wife's in her dressing case, and arranged them in my own. In the top drawer I put my handkerchiefs, collars and ties, and all those other little articles of finery which every man loves so much. In the second drawer I placed my shirts and underwear, and devoted the lower drawer to my trousers, neatly folded, and my hosiery. My wife was delighted, as it gave her her own dresser all to herself, and relieved the closet somewhat.

But in a day or so the new plan proved to have a few defects, so, at my wife's suggestion, I emptied one of the upper drawers in my dresser, putting its contents into the other, and allowed my wife to use the now vacant receptacle for a few of her jabots, scarfs, etc. The second day it was decided that my shirts and trousers could occupy the same drawer, the lowest one; so this was fixed, and into the second drawer my wife moved a few of her petticoats, and such things.

Soon, finding that I was still using too much space, I permitted her to put my collars and such effects into the lowest drawer with my trousers, etc., thus giving her both of the upper drawers and the next, and still leaving me plenty of room in the one bottom drawer.

Since then, however, I have found that I do not require so much space for my few things, so have taken them out of the bottom drawer and packed them into a hatbox, which I keep under the bed, thereby giving my wife all the drawers in my dressing case. I find the present arrangement very satisfactory, as all I have to do now is to empty the hatbox on the bed when I want anything in it, and then, when I have made my selection, sweep the other articles back into place.

In this way I have solved the dressing-case problem, and everything is quite pleasant in our home.—Delineator.

A Man of Iron Nerve.

Indomitable will and tremendous energy are never found where stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels are out of order. If you want these qualities and the success they bring, use Dr. King's New Life Pills, the matchless regulators, for keen brain and strong body. 25c. at R. S. McKinney's drug store, Taneytown, Md.

Points on Pigeons.

If you want to make pocket-money by selling squabs be sure to buy good stock, pure homers in pairs, ready mated. Pigeons are very faithful, remaining paired for years. If accident separates them, it is often impossible to get either to accept strange mates that season. Avoid having odd birds; it causes fights and destroys the nesting.

If you should have to pair birds yourself, put them into a two-compartment cage. If you haven't one, make a division with wire netting through the middle of a case three feet long, with a netting door to cover the whole front. Put a bird in each compartment, and when they kiss and coo through the netting they can be put together for two or three days, after which it will be safe to put them in the breeding house. They will soon commence to build their nest by carrying a few bits of hay, or whatever the nesting material may be, into one of the earthenware or wooden nests.

The hen bird lays two eggs, with one day between. Sixteen to eighteen days are required to hatch. Both the old birds have the power to create a digested food, almost a liquid, called by fanciers "pigeons' milk," with which they feed the young for four or five days. Then they are gradually accustomed to eat grain and grit.

About the fifteenth day the nest in the second compartment is built, and again the mother bird lays two eggs and proceeds to incubate them, leaving the first pair of babies principally to the care of the father bird, until, at the end of thirty days, you relieve him by taking them for market.

This double family continues all through the year with good homers, well cared for, except when they are molting. Red wheat and cracked corn, mixed, is the best food to keep permanently before pigeons. Two or three times a week give them a treat of Canada peas, hemp-seed, state bread, and Kaffir corn.—The Delineator for August.

To Clean Parasols.

Do not remove the cover from the frame to launder your parasol. Instead, open it out and wash the covering thoroughly, using brush, cool water and some good white soap. After rinsing, set it in the sun to dry, if the material is white; in the shade, if the material will fade. The wire frame will not rust, and your parasol will be found beautifully clean and dainty. It is well to wash it again in this manner in the fall, and not put it away in a soiled condition. Wrap in tissue paper, then in newspaper.—From Woman's Home Companion for August.

Do Something.

Young man, do not stand yawning and lounging on the threshold of a glorious future that is brim full of golden opportunities and mines of untold wealth in its hidden recesses, awaiting for development by an application of your mind and muscle, but pull off your coat, up with your sleeves, spit on your hands, take hold and arouse your energy from its slothful state and lazy inclination and win what wealth the world will yield you. The coming years are big with possibilities and as chuckful of glorious prospects as the milky way is strewn with stars, or the sunny lands with roses.

The way is open for every one, and you are invited to step in, take your place, act your part, assume some responsibility, make your mark, and raise such a dust in the atmosphere about you, your slow-going companions will lose sight of you and go about mourning as one dead to them. There is much you can do and a great deal you cannot do, but don't get discouraged, for courage is the favorite of fortune.

You may not be able to write a beautiful poem, a touching sonnet, or die of starvation; but you can, if needs be, go to work humbly as a porter, buy a whisk broom, wear people's clothes out with it, and in five years you can go to Europe in your own special car. As the strawberry said to the box, "There is always room on the top."

Faith in Medicine is Part.

It is not too much to say that the medical profession to-day no longer believes that any drug (with a few exceptions, like quinine in malaria, mercury and the antitoxins) will cure a disease as such. All that it will do is to modify conditions as to help the body in its fight against disease.

We are no longer content, in the biting phrase of Voltaire, to "pour drugs of which we know little into bodies of which we know less." What will help one patient may harm another, and what may be beneficial in the early stage of a disease will be useless or even injurious in a later stage.

In the language of Captain Cuttle, the effect of a drug, like "the bearin' of an observation," "depends on the application on it." It is neither rational nor safe blindly to swallow down a drug which is highly recommended in a certain disease and except it to "do the rest." There is no such thing as a universal cure for a disease, nor even a remedy which can be relied upon as "a good thing to take" at any and all stages of it.—Dr. Woods Hutchinson in The Delineator for September.

Fix Up the Place.

If there is any one time during the summer when the farmer has some leisure to attend to the things that speak for looks more than for direct results in the way of gain it is now, when harvest is over and the corn no longer needs working. It is pre-eminently the time to attend to repairs and those things which render his abode more pleasant in his eyes and those of passers-by. It is not the time for planting, but on the contrary it is considered the best time for checking the growth of weeds, briars and bushes, which spring up so rapidly in fence corners and other waste places and do so much to render a country home unsightly. There is no way in which a farmer can add more to the value of his place in proportion to the time and money expended than by repairing his fences and gates and cleaning out his fence rows. It means pleasure for himself and his family, pleasure for the neighbors and better value for his acres and better credit at the bank.

A Relaxation Cocktail.

Americans have acquired the bad habit of taking a cocktail as a preface to meals. They feel it to be an appetizer and general bracer.

Instead of this pernicious practice, which is bad for digestion, and in woman especially is to be deplored, far better take a few minutes' complete rest before each meal.

Call this your relaxation cocktail. To compound it is needed a comfortable couch, an easy chair or hammock, combined with utter relaxation of every tense muscle in the body.

Just loaf for ten minutes before meals and ten minutes after them, and you will not suffer from indigestion. The premeal rest is particularly important, as the physical organs used in the process of digestion need to be rested and refreshed before beginning their work.

A woman who was accustomed to rushing directly to her meals directly from the office was obliged to consult a specialist for bad dyspepsia. His first question was: "Do you eat when you are tired?"

"Look here, waiter," said Mr. Grouch, scowling deeply over his plate. "I ordered turtle soup. There isn't even a morsel of turtle in this." "Of course not," returned the waiter. "Shakespeare said there was nothing in a name. If you ordered cottage pudding would you expect a cottage in it? Any tea, sir?"

For the Children

Strange Friendship of a Dog and a Lion.

A curious friendship between a lion and a dog has attracted wide attention in England, where they are being exhibited. The dog is a fine specimen of his kind and performs many clever tricks. He seems much attached to his fierce companion, and they frequently have a game of romps. This is all the more remarkable, as dog and lion rarely make friends.

The most wonderful fact concerning this strange pair is that Leo, as the lion is named, has a decidedly vicious temper when with other animals and has killed several that were caged with him before the advent of his present canine companion. The two live together in amity, sharing the food thrown to them and sleeping side by side in a corner of their cage.

The Diving Bell.

How many of you children know who first invented the diving bell? It was not a man or a woman, but a little spider that built its home under the water long before man thought of the diving bell, says the Chicago News. The spider's house, made of the finest spun silk, is, strange to say, though under water, filled with air. To keep his house from ascending to the surface the spider fastens it with silken cords to the grass in the pond or brook or wherever the house may be. If he did not it would rise like a balloon, float from its moorings and leave the spider family homeless.

These spiders, called naiads by naturalists, show a large degree of intelligence and are clever hydraulic engineers. They swim easily, and under water they look like round, moving pearls, a layer of air concealed under the skin giving them this strange appearance. They rise to the top of the water to inhale a bubble of air, swim with it to the bottom and when building their bell houses completely fill them with air by this process.

Telling Fortunes.

Have you a game of dominoes? If so you can have lots of fun when your friends come to see you. Shuffle the dominoes well and lay them face down on a smooth table. Tell your friends to turn the dominoes, and the following are what the points denote:

Double six denote receipt of money; will be very rich.

Six-five denotes success and pleasure.

Six-four early marriage; happiness.

Six-three affection, constancy.

Six-two industrious, economical.

Six-one twice married.

Six-blank sorrow, trouble.

Five-double very lucky.

Five-four will marry poor.

Five-three eventual wealth.

Five-two love.

Five-one engagement; invitations.

If you know these you can regulate your answers accordingly, no matter what points turn up, and much fun can be had.

Shearing Sheep.

In spring and fall sheep shearing is an important operation, and the shearers are an important individual. In England very frequently his craft runs right through the family—first the father, then the sons and then their sons. When shearing is done there it is done by specialists, but they are not confined to one family. These men take the animals, tie their legs together, throw them on their backs and soon the shears are at work. An adept shearers will take off the fleece in one smooth piece, and these pieces are rolled into neat bundles to facilitate the counting. When an accidental cut is made in the sheep's flesh time mixed with lard is applied at once to prevent an attack by flies.

Riddles.

When is the best time to get a fresh egg at sea? When the ship lays to.

Why is a thief called a jailbird? Because he's been a robin.

How can a leopard change his spots? By going from one spot to another.

What are the most uncomfortable ships? Hardships.

Why is a watch a difficult thing to steal? Because it must be taken off its guard.

When does a farmer change the color of his horses? When he opens the field gate and turns them in to graze (grays).

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson XIII.—Third Quarter, For Sept. 25, 1910.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Gal. v, 15-26. Memory Verses, 22, 23—Golden Text, Gal. v, 25—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

What is the use of all our Bible study if it does not assure to us at least three things—salvation and the assurance of it, a daily life to glorify God, a consuming desire to give the gospel to all that Jesus may come again and set up His kingdom. If we take the beginning and end of this epistle we learn that the Lord Jesus Christ gave Himself for our sins that He might deliver us from this present evil world; that in the power of His cross, we being crucified to the world and the world to us, we might live as new creatures (i, 4; vi, 14, 15).

The epistle then covers specially the second of the three things just mentioned, the daily life to God's glory (i, 24). It must be the Son of God revealed in us, not I, but Christ living in me, and never weary in well doing (i, 10; ii, 20; vi, 9). This life will not be manifest unless we are clear upon the first topic above mentioned, the assurance of our salvation, wholly upon the ground of Christ's having been made a curse for us and that we by faith in Him are considered as having been crucified with Him and thus redeemed from the curse of the law.

In Romans we learn that we have no righteousness, in I Corinthians that we have no wisdom and in II Corinthians that we have no strength, but that in Christ and in Him alone we have all three, righteousness, wisdom and strength, and all wholly of grace, without any desert on our part or by any works of ours whatever. Now, these Galatians were being taught by false teachers that grace was not sufficient, but that there must be a certain keeping of the law. And Paul tells them that this is not the gospel which he preached to them, but another gospel, a perversion of the gospel of Christ, and that those who give heed to it are fallen from grace; not lost, but losing the joy of that salvation which is wholly of grace (i, 6-9; v, 4).

In Christ not only is there deliverance from the curse of the law, but a freedom in His service which is impossible to those who are working for salvation instead of working because they have salvation as the free gift of God. Oh, how great is the love of Him who gave Himself for our sins! We should meditate upon it and upon Him until we are consumed by it and by it constrained to live wholly for Him. Who shall accomplish this in us? Even the Spirit who is mentioned in the few verses of our lesson seven times. The disciples under the teaching of Christ for two or three years never became what He intended they should be until at Pentecost they were filled with the Spirit. Then we see such a change that even their enemies were compelled to acknowledge that they had been with Jesus. Notice, then, in our lesson that we are to walk in the Spirit, be led of the Spirit and live in the Spirit (16, 18, 25) and manifest the fruit of the Spirit, which is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance. Each of the eight may be said to be a manifestation of the first, for love covers all, love is the fulfilling of the law (verse 14; Rom. xiii, 10). Some one has said that joy is love exulting, peace is love in repose, and so with all the others, each being some manifestation of love. Love is love, and love is kind (I John iv, 8, 10; I Cor. xiii, 4). If love always ruled us, how manifest the life of Jesus would be and how greatly God would be glorified in us! When we remember that the Spirit who dwelleth in us as the children of God yearneth for us even unto jealous envy (Jas. iv, 5, R. V., margin), desireth us far more than we desire Him, what can be the hindrance to the manifestation of this love except the power of the flesh described in our lesson, which remains in every believer and is so directly opposite to all that is of the Spirit? While the work of fruit of the Spirit is summed up in nine all inclusive words, note the seventeen words which describe the works of the flesh, with the concluding expression "and such like," as if they were too numerous to mention.

In I Cor. vi, 9, 10, there are ten forms of flesh manifestation mentioned with the same conclusion as here, "Shall not inherit the Kingdom of God," but with the comforting assurance that even such had been washed, sanctified, justified, in the name of the Lord Jesus and by the Spirit of God. If the devil can work such beastly works in a human being, how much more can the Spirit of God work His beautiful works if He is allowed to do so. Hear Paul's cry in Rom. vii, 24: "O wretched man that I am! Who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" or as in the margin, "this body of death." But hear his exultant cry in the next verse, "I thank God, through Jesus Christ our Lord." Then in Rom. vi we see how he dwells upon our being crucified with Christ, buried with Him, risen with Him and that now we are to reckon ourselves dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God, through Jesus Christ our Lord, yielding ourselves unto God as those who are alive from the dead, in the freedom from condemnation and assurance of no separation of Rom. viii we may let the Spirit of Him who raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in us and manifest the life of Jesus in these mortal bodies.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Sept. 25, 1910.

Topic.—My denomination at work for my country.—Ps. lxxxix, 1-18. Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

There is little doubt that every one of the great Christian denominations is doing something for our country or working along some lines of home missionary work. The probability also is that the majority of them are doing the same kind of work. One great evil in the great west at least has resulted from the haphazard and unsystematic manner in which the mission work was begun. There was no co-operation among the denominations, and the result was that in small towns varying from 1,000 up in population contained from six to eight or ten churches, all of them having only a name to live. If some arrangements had been made by which the country had been divided there would have been one or two strong Christian churches in each one of these places, and not a large number, almost on the point of starvation, and the ministers' lives worn out by having four or five churches under their care and preaching in each one once or twice in four or five weeks. Too late the great mistake has been seen, but it is hard to change present church arrangements, and the struggle goes on by pastors and churches for a mere existence. This is the saddest feature of our denominational work, especially in the western part of our country.

The Christian denominations of our land will never be organically united. Such a hope is as impossible as the realization of a future Utopia on earth. But experience has taught the church that it must unite in co-operation and fellowship, and especially in the missionary cause, if it is to be done in a sensible, businesslike and economical way. Such union is becoming closer and closer every day. It is manifested especially in home mission fields. In our newer fields—Alaska, Cuba and Porto Rico, where all may go—these lands are apportioned to the different denominations. For instance, the Presbyterian church, because first on the ground, has received as her allotment the southwestern part of Alaska and the upper part of the Yukon valley. So that, instead of there being a number of churches at points like Eagles and Point Barrow, there is in each but one—a Presbyterian. In other portions there are only Methodists or Episcopalians, and, by the way, Point Barrow is the farthest northern missionary point in the world. The only white people it contains are the faithful missionaries, the Rev. Dr. Campbell and his wife. A year or so ago their church and other buildings were burned down. But they still stood "fast as good soldiers of Christ."

They usually get mail once a year, but sometimes but once in two years! Such examples of obedience to Christ's great command should spur us with a greatly increased interest in and labor for this cause.

The methods of work used by each denomination should be studied by the societies belonging to it. It will be a most interesting study from the beginning to the present day. The methods of all are preaching, evangelistic work, the distribution of Bibles and tracts and the education of the children, spiritually, morally, mentally and industrially. But we should know our workers, where they are located and the story of our school work. The methods may be the same, but there is great variety in using them.

Tribute to American C. E. Work.
Hon. Charles W. Fairbanks, ex-vice president of the United States, held the attention of a large audience of Endeavorers and friends in the Christian church of Indianapolis, Ind., in an address on "The Progress of the World's Society of Christian Endeavor and the Civilizing Power of Christianity as I saw it on My Trip Around the World."

The occasion was a Christian Endeavor rally day, and it was great. Mr. Fairbanks spoke with sympathy and power, and his address sparkled with many a gem of truth.

We quote a few sentences:
"Wherever I found American missionaries I found them with an American flag in one hand and a Bible in the other. Close up the churches of our country and it will at once begin a retrograde movement. The ministry is the highest calling any man can engage in. I always honor the ministry. I had only a limited conception of the work of missions and what was being done in the foreign fields until I saw with my own eyes and felt in my own heart the great things which are being accomplished there. Among all the nations of the earth America leads in Christian Endeavor work."—W. Wells Stoddard in Christian Endeavor World.

Let Your Light Shine.
Don't hide your light under a bushel. Let it shine. Give wise publicity to your efforts for the young people. Get the pastor and Sunday school superintendent to speak often and heartily of the society and commend it and its work to the young people. It is not enough in these days of counter worldly attractions simply to permit Christian Endeavor to exist. The negative attitude does not do its best work. Christian Endeavor must have the positive, enthusiastic support of the leaders of the church.—William Shaw, General Secretary.

AN INFERNAL MACHINE.

How It Was Prevented From Blowing Up a Ship.

By SALLIE MENDEM.
[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

A party of travelers was assembled on the upper deck of the ocean liner Eric, four days out from Southampton, England, bound for New York. Walter Ricker had met and traveled with Miss Eugenia Floyd. They had become engaged and were returning to their homes to secure their parents' sanction to their union.

The ocean during the voyage had run smooth, but the course of true love had not. An Englishman permitted the fact to leak out that he was the eldest son of an earl and was going to America in search of a wife paid considerable attention to Miss Floyd, much to the annoyance of Mr. Ricker. The name under which this scion of British nobility traveled was plain John Mervale. He wore a checkered suit with golf cap to match and was the best shuttleboard player on the ship.

Mr. Mervale had settled himself into a steamer chair beside that of Miss Floyd, while Mr. Ricker was chatting or trying to chat with other young ladies of the party. His attention was not given to the young ladies, but to the compliments the Britisher was paying his fiancée and the pleasure with which she received them.

Now comes a deck steward with a wireless telegram in his hand, which he delivers to Mr. Mervale. The gentleman reads it, starts, and his hand trembles. He rises at once, seeks the captain of the ship and hands him the message, signed by the Southampton superintendent of police:

"One of your pieces of baggage was left on the dock. There is every reason to believe that an infernal machine with your name and address on it was shipped in its stead by anarchists with the intention of blowing up the ship."

The captain turned pale. "Where is your baggage?" he asked Mr. Mervale.

"Part in the baggage room and part in my stateroom."

"Can this thing be in your stateroom?"

"No."

"Very well. We must get out what you have in the baggage room immediately."

The captain, attended by Mr. Mervale, went down on to the main deck and, entering the baggage room, ordered all the Britisher's luggage pulled out. There was a suspicious looking box about which the latter seemed very uncertain. He said that his mother had done his packing and he was not sure whether this box belonged to him or not. One of the men present put his ear to the box and distinctly heard the ticking of machinery. This was enough. The captain ordered the box thrown overboard.

"One moment," said Mr. Mervale. "I'm not sure but that's a clock in there my mother asked me to take over and give to her sister, my aunt, who is living in America."

"We can't take any risk," said the captain. "Heave the box overboard." "But, captain," persisted the Englishman, "if that box is really mine it contains several articles of great value. My mother spoke to me about it, but till this moment it had escaped my mind."

"The ship and cargo are worth too much money to take any risk, and the lives of the passengers certainly cannot be jeopardized."

"Nevertheless I protest against my property being jettisoned, and I am not sure but this box is mine and contains family heirlooms of great value sent by my mother to relatives in America. I think it quite probable that some one on the dock heard the ticking of the clock and informed the superintendent of police that the box was an infernal machine, hence the telegram. Suppose we open the box and find out."

"Not on your life!" said the captain.

"Very well. I have another plan to propose. Lower one of the lifeboats, place the box in it and tow the boat with a line long enough to be perfectly safe."

As these words were spoken the box was being carried out and in another moment was resting on the rail ready to go overboard. Mr. Mervale made so strong a protest that the captain hesitated. Mr. Mervale declared that if the box contained his property he would hold the captain responsible for its destruction. The captain, influenced by this argument, changed his mind and ordered a boat lowered. The box was put in the bottom of the boat, which was towed at the end of a 200 foot line.

The matter was not permitted to get out among the passengers till after the infernal machine was in tow, and then it was no longer possible to keep it secret. People gathered on the stern clamoring to know why the boat with its contents was being put out, and when it was at a safe distance those who knew admitted that there was a box in the boat which might contain an explosive. Immediately the news spread that anarchists had endeavored to blow up the ship and it had been saved only by a wireless telegram from the chief of the Southampton police.

Mr. Mervale, who had received the telegram and among whose baggage the anarchists had placed the explosive, at once became the most important man aboard, not excepting the captain. Passengers crowded around him to learn every detail. He endeavored to calm them, telling them that he believed a mistake had been made and that the box simply contained a clock and other family heirlooms.

As distinguished men find their value enhanced by always keeping themselves before the public, so Mr. Mervale gained with Miss Floyd by his prominence, even if it were only on account of having had among his baggage that which might blow the ship and passengers sky high. Somehow Ricker, who had seemed to her quite a man when pulling her in a boat on Lake Como, now appeared equally lame in comparison with this earl's son, who had become the center of attraction for the whole ship. The former gradually gave way to the latter, and Miss Floyd, instead of walking the deck or sitting in a steamer chair all day in company with Mr. Ricker, merely began these sociabilities with him and continued them with Mr. Mervale.

Meanwhile the infernal machine bobbed up and down on the waves. Knots of passengers constantly loitering on the stern looked at it and swapped opinions whether in case of an explosion it was far enough from the ship to avert any damage. Then came the approach to port, the handing around of custom house blanks on which to make declarations of dutiable baggage, the filling in of articles purchased abroad and handing them to the purser. Mr. Mervale said that if the box being towed was what he supposed it was the duty on the articles it contained was considerable. The question as to whether it was a box of heirlooms or an infernal machine must be settled by the custom officers. He rather thought they would pass it free of duty.

The evening before reaching port Miss Floyd was sitting with Mr. Mervale on the upper deck, where they were not so liable to interruption as they would be lower down. He was telling her of the family home of his father, the earl, and his mother, the countess. Then he told her how they had sent him to America, where rich wives were to be had by British noblemen for the asking, that he might marry a wealthy American girl and build up the family estates when he came into the title. But he had been captured before his arrival. He had not sooner seen Miss Floyd than he had succumbed to her, rich or poor.

Miss Floyd told him that, as to means, she would have on the death of her father a large inheritance. But a complication had arisen in the matter of Walter Ricker. There was an engagement that had not been approved by her parents and might not be approved by them. She would be pleased to have Mr. Mervale call on her in New York. That was all a young lady who had recently accepted one man could say to another whom she wished to replace the first.

But she said nothing of this to Ricker.

Miss Floyd was taking home a number of valuables that were dutiable. Her father was ready to pay the duty on them, but there is a fascination in "beating" the government on customs that attacks even young girls. Mr. Mervale told her that he had a way of getting goods through the custom house and if she would bring them up to him he would smuggle them into port and send them to her immediately afterward. She brought him up several thousand dollars' worth of goods, then bade him good night, showing by a slight pressure of the hand that he might hope.

Soon after the parting between Mr. Mervale and Miss Floyd Fire Island light was sighted, and in the morning the Eric was steaming up New York bay.

But where was the boat containing the infernal machine? And where was Mr. Mervale? The former was not in tow, and the latter was not on the ship.

No one ever found out how the "earl's son" got the box which, besides a clock, contained $100,000 worth of diamonds ashore. He doubtless took Miss Floyd's valuables in the same boat and smuggled them in, as he had promised, but Miss Floyd never saw them or him again.

Wind Storm Insurance

Is becoming almost as general as Fire Insurance. Why? Because losses are numerous, and unpreventable. Care, and personal efforts often prevent fires, but no human agency can prevent storms.

Brief Items of Local News of Special Interest to Our Home Readers.

Miss Mary Yount, of Philadelphia, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Charles Kephart.

Mr. Granville Shunk has been spending the week in town on a visit to his sister, Mrs. John H. Diffendal.

Mr. John H. Harman has sold his farm, on the Emmitsburg road, to Mr. Jesse Reifsnider, 93 acres for $5500.

Mr. Carroll C. Hess, assistant postmaster, enjoyed a vacation last week, spending a portion of the time in Washington, D. C.

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Cunningham and Mrs. Mary L. Motter, are on a trip to Portland, Maine, but will soon return to Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Reindollar, Miss Josephine and Mr. Eugene, are at Atlantic City, where the Millers' convention is in session.

Mr. Samuel Currans, though D. W. Garner, real estate agent, has sold his small property, of 9 acres, to Noah S. Cutsail, for $1175.00.

On Sunday last, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Weishaar entertained, at dinner Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Crabbs, Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Crabbs and family, and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Crabbs, all of Mt. Union.

The corn packing business for the season is about over, except a few late fields which will come in next week. Mr. Martin has packed about 5000 cases, so far, but hopes to run up to between six and seven thousand.

Concrete sidewalks and slate roofs are in the same class, and will gradually replace brick and shingles, as repairs demand. Taneytown has such excellent brick sidewalks that perhaps concrete will appear here less rapidly than in some other less well paved towns.

Mr. Carl S. Davidson, son of McC. Davidson, of Hanover, who for some months past has been associated with Mr. E. C. Crum, in the firm of Crum & Davidson, civil engineers, Frederick, left this week for Lexington, Va., where he will take up a special engineering course at Washington and Lee University.

A Baltimore subscriber writes, "My candid opinion is that the CARROLL RECORD compares favorably with not only any weekly I ever read, but with the best dailies. Two features I admire especially; it is independent, and absolutely clean. It gives all news of general interest, and is well printed. In fact, take it all together, your paper is one of which you and your community should be proud."

Haven't you had a prosperous year? Haven't you had good crops and prices; good business and plenty of work? Don't you think that you ought to express your thanks, in some worthy way? Can't you afford to be liberal to a good cause that needs your help? Then, make the "Harvest Home" service of your church a happy one to your pastor, as well as to all the causes it represents. You will feel better for it if you do your full duty—at least once in a lifetime.

The present Board of Town Commissioners, which has done absolutely nothing this whole year in the way of public improvements, could do no more popular thing than cover the gutter at the end of Middle St. A broad concrete culvert, raised somewhat, with a smooth bottom for flushing, would perhaps be the best plan. As it is, it is a distinct eyesore and nuisance. The fact is, the gutters on both sides of the street from the square to railroad, ought to be relaid so as to carry off the amount of ill-smelling sewage that is turned into them.

There is a rumor afloat that our evening mail and passenger connection with Westminster and Baltimore may be broken off by making the schedule of the present 4:32 p. m. train about three hours later. This would be a serious blow to some of our most important business interests, and we trust there is no likelihood of such a change being made. Taneytown, for years, has been compelled to get its chief morning mail, by carrier, from Middleburg; and this rumored change would break off all W. M. connections for our most important outgoing mail of the day, as well as break a much used passenger connection; in fact, the only connection of any importance that we now have.

Peaches are so plentiful in the mountain section, and prices so low, that growers are putting forth little effort to save the fruit. A party in Waynesboro, who visited the orchard of J. H. Ledy, one of the largest fruit growers in the Cumberland Valley, said that there were hundreds of baskets of the finest kind of peaches lying upon the ground, and the owner was willing to take almost any price offered. He said that owing to the high rate charged for transportation to market and the commission charged for the selling, nothing was left for the shipper. In Taneytown, peaches are nevertheless selling at from 75¢ to $1.00 per half-bushel basket, due to the expense of getting them here, and profit in handling. High cost of living seems to prevail, in spite of conditions which ought to make things cheap.

A concert will be given by the Band, at the Square, this Saturday evening at 6.30 o'clock.

Mr. Hezekiah Hawk has sold his 96 acre farm, near Bridgeport, to Mr. Walter Brower.

Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Hildebrink and Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Essig, visited Baltimore, this week.

Monthly congregational missionary services will be held in the Reformed church, this Sunday evening.

Miss Alice Insley, of Bath, Pa., and Miss Bess Worman, of Allentown, Pa., are the guests of Mrs. Seth Russell Downie.

Mr. R. B. Everhart has purchased, from Jas. H. Reindollar, the vacant lot adjoining Dr. C. E. Roop's, and will erect on it a dwelling and bakery.

There will be service in the Taneytown Presbyterian Church, at 8 o'clock, Sabbath evening. Subject of sermon: "Personal Power in the Program of Progress."

The offering, on Sabbath morning, at the Piney Creek Presbyterian Church, will be devoted to the aid of disabled ministers and the widows and orphans of deceased ministers. The sermon will deal with the question: "Am I Glad When Church-time Comes? Why?"

Registration This Year.

On account of the fact that election day this year comes on the very latest day possible under the calendar, the days of Registration will also be later than usual. The following are the days of registration: Tuesday, October 4th. Tuesday, October 11th. Revision day will be on Tuesday, October 18th, but on this day no new names can be placed on the books. Persons who have moved into this county, or who have moved from one district in the county to another district must appear at the registration office in his present district and get registered on one of the two days if he expects to vote this year. Where he has moved from one district to another it is necessary to get a transfer certificate from his last voting district and take it in person to his present voting district and get registered.

IT SAVES YOU MONEY.

The special half price sale of Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia by R. S. McKinney means the saving of a few dollars on every family's yearly bill for medicines.

Mr. R. S. McKinney has so much faith in the superior merit of this medicine that he says: "If Dr. Howard's specific does not cure you, come back to my store and I will return your money."

This remedy is not an ordinary medicine. It is the favorite formula of a well known physician, and has the endorsement of hundreds of physicians of eminence in their profession, who prescribe it in all cases of constipation, dyspepsia or liver trouble, knowing from experience that it will make a complete and lasting cure.

A Wedding Reception.

(For the Record.) On Saturday evening Sept. 10 a reception was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Shirk, in honor of Mr. E. Scott Koons and bride, who had but recently returned from their wedding trip to Philadelphia and Atlantic City. After congratulations the guests were entertained with music on the Piano, accompanied by the violin, until all were invited to the dining room where ice cream, cake, bananas, watermelon, cantaloupe etc., were served in abundance.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. John Shirk, Mr. and Mrs. E. Scott Koons, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Koons, Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Koons, Mr. and Mrs. George M. Crumbacker, Mr. and Mrs. W. Grant Bohn, Mr. and Mrs. Elam Sprengle, of Waynesboro, Pa., Misses Lizzie Birely, Belle Myers, Susie Birely, Edna Birely and Ruth Koons, Messrs. Clayton Koons, Samuel L. Johnson, Chas. Foreman, Howard Myers, Kurtz Birely, Russell and Frank Bohn, Ralph and Bruce Shirk.

Pop's Discipline

"Pop, you must take this child in hand. I have had about all that I can stand. She has no notion of minding me; it is time you took her across your knee."

"Send her to me," said pop, with a frown. "It won't take me long to toise her down."

But how could he punish her, tell me, do, when she looked at him with her eyes of blue? Looked at him in the same glad way, that her mother did in that faroff day, when she was his sweet heart and he her beau. How could he strike her, I'd like to know?

But still, he took her upon his knee, and at once was lost in a reverie, that carried him back to a shady street and a little maid whom he used to meet; a blue-eyed maid whose counterpart now sat on his knee with a beating heart, waiting for him to forget those days, and punish her for her wilful ways.

Mom peeped in through in half-closed door. They were playing jacks on the parlor floor, playing jacks and quarrelling, too, just as two children are apt to do. She frowned, it was more than half care, "I will have to punish them both, I guess."—Chicago Record Herald.

It Saved His Leg.

"All thought I'd lose my leg," writes J. A. Swensen, of Watertown, Wis. "Ten years of eczema, that 15 doctors could not cure, had at last laid me up. Then Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured it, sound and well." Infallible for Skin Eruptions, Eczema, Salt Rheum, Boils, Fever Sores, Burns, Scalds, Cuts and Piles. 25c at R. S. McKinney's drug store, Taneytown, Md.

A Social Surprise.

(For the Record.)

A pleasant surprise social was given at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer C. Shorb, September 12., it being in honor of Mrs. Shorb's birthday. At about 8.30 o'clock the guests began to arrive and Mr. Jacob Fringer with his graphophone, who entertained the old folks with some of his choice selections, while the young folks enjoyed themselves in conversation.

At about eleven o'clock all were invited to the dining room to partake of the many delicacies of the season, to which all did ample justice after thanking the host and hostess for their kind hospitality and wishing Mrs. Shorb many more such birthday all returned to their homes feeling they spent a good time.

Those present were Mr. Elmer Shorb and wife, Geo. W. Hape and wife, Augustus Lambert and wife, Charles Foreman and wife, Wm. P. Johnson and wife, Claid Biddinger and wife, Chas. Crabbs, Harry Keefer, of Baltimore, Grant Bohn and wife, Jacob Fringer, Carl Johnson, Carl Crabbs, Harry Fringer, Charley Foreman, Clyde Johnson, Russell Bohn, Frank Bohn, Eugene Foreman, Paul Johnson, Paul Shorb, Misses Ruth Koons, Lelah Hape, Susie Lambert, Carrie Foreman, Mary Crabbs, Thelma Lambert, and Elsie Foreman.

What Worried Him.

A peculiar instance of connubial affection occurred sometime ago in Vermont. An aged couple, who through half a century of married life had wrangled with each other, were in all probability soon to be separated. The husband was taken ill and was believed to be near his end. The old wife came to his bedside and after carefully examining and taking stock of his condition exclaimed: "W'y, daddy, your feet are cold, your hands are cold and your nose is cold."

"W'al, let 'em be cold." "W'y, daddy, you're goin' to die." "W'al, I guess I know what I'm about." "Daddy, w'at's to becom of me if you die?" "I dunno, and I don't care. W'at I want to know is, W'at's to becom of me?"—Boston Globe.
