BRIEF NEWS NOTES OF GENERAL INTEREST.

Gleaned from the County and State and our Exchanges.

Statistician Shinn, of the Democratic National Committee, gives Wilson 441 electoral votes, as sure, and probably more. This would leave 90 votes to be divided between Taft and Roosevelt.

Mrs. Grover Cleveland has authorized the announcement of her engagement to Thomas Joseph Preston, a Professor at Wells College. No date has as yet been set for the wedding.

A rousing Taft meeting was held in Westminster, on Monday night, addresses being delivered by Gov. Goldsborough, A. G. Towers and John B. Hanna. The Opera House was packed to the doors. Music was furnished by the First Regiment Band.

In the Governor's report on state road work, he says $30,000 will be spent on the Taneytown-Westminster road, next year, the transfer of the Meadow Branch pike having been made to the state. Work will be commenced at both ends of the road.

Already it is stated that 43,000 soldiers have been killed or injured in the battle between the allied forces and the Turks. It is difficult to secure anything like exact information from the hostilities, as all telegraph lines are under government control and are strictly censored. The Turks are said to be the heaviest losers.

Wm. H. Bright, of Hampstead, has sold his interest in the Bright Publishing Co., at Hampstead, to Edward Belt, of Hampstead, who will continue publishing The Enterprise. Mr. Bright will go to Bedford, Va., his former home, and go into partnership with his brother in the wholesale cigar and tobacco business. After election day, Mr. and Mrs. Bright will make the trip to Virginia by automobile.

The Republican election supervisors in the Wilson law counties, of Maryland, are now being charged with preparing "trick" ballots, and the Democrats do not relish paying in the same coin they used so long. They now admit that while the Democratic trick ballot was not just the fair thing, the Republican trick ballot is doubly wrong. This is good moral reasoning, but from a political standpoint it is a case of the "bitter getting bit."

Through a purely innocent oversight made by the Supervisors of Election in preparing the large and cumbersome ballot to be used at the coming election, in Frederick county, a trifling technical mistake was made and to avoid any possible question as to the legality of the ballot, the Board is having them reprinted. Democrat instead of Democratic was used after the names of the candidates of that party, thus the simple omission of two letters caused the mistake.

A Democratic mass meeting was held in Westminster, on Tuesday night, addressed by Hon. J. F. C. Talbot, Charles E. Fink and Mr. Marbury, of Baltimore. The latter attacked the Roosevelt doctrine of recall of judicial decisions. Disclaiming any disposition to indulge in personal criticism, Colonel Roosevelt declared that "the truth is the Colonel's personality is of that engaging character which almost disarms personal criticism." Mr. Marbury expressed the belief that "if there could be within the realm of things possible any occurrence which would suffice to wreck the bulwarks of constitutional liberty in America it would be the election of Theodore Roosevelt to the Presidency for the third term, in view of the platform upon which he stands and the views concerning our Government to which he has committed himself."

"Lend-A-Hand" Book Club.

(For the Record.)
The "Lend-A-Hand" Book Club met at the home of Mrs. R. F. Wells, Mechanicville, Oct. 24, at 2 p. m. After the meeting was called to order and minutes of preceding meeting read and approved, the business of the evening was brought before the members. The selection of a motto for the coming year—"Each for all, and all for each"—was adopted. Books were chosen for each member, to be read and passed on to the next in the circle, inside of three weeks. What calling of authors!
There is no frigate like a book
To take us lands away,
Nor any course like a page
Of prancing poetry.
This traverse may the poorest take Without oppress of toil,
How frugal is the chariot
That bears a human soul!
A fine program was rendered. Mrs. Wells gave a graphic history of Miss Barclay, the author of "The Rosary." What clapping of hands when she told of her being the sister of Mrs. Ballington Booth, recognizing how she lives in "Lend-a-hand." How the minister's wife spoke up for "our English cousins!" Complimentary to Dr. R. F. Wells, the president of the club, Mrs. J. C. Wailes, read the Rubiyat of Doc Sifer, by James Whitcomb Riley. Mrs. George Rice gave a song, "October," in excellent style, followed by Mrs. Lester Patterson singing the sweet and much loved "Holy City." After refreshments daintily served, the Club adjourned, to meet on Nov. 21, at 2 p. m., at the home of Mrs. J. C. Wailes, Plum Tree Farm.
The members are: Mrs. J. C. Wailes, Pres.; Mrs. Geo. Knox, Vice Pres.; Mrs. Geo. Rice, Treas.; Mrs. Martha Zentz, Sec.; Mrs. Geo. Benson, Mrs. Lester Patterson, Mrs. Marjorie Palmer, Mrs. R. F. Wells, Mrs. Jesse Patterson, Mrs. Emmitt Prugh; J. C. Wailes and Dr. R. F. Wells, honorary members.

Death of William A. Cunningham.

Westminster, Md., Oct. 30.—Wm. A. Cunningham, aged 83 years old, a retired banker and father of John A. Cunningham, the Republican candidate last year, for State Comptroller, died at his home, in Westminster, this morning. He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Mary Horn, of Baltimore; one daughter, Mrs. George D. Funderberg, of Los Angeles, Cal., and two sons, Frank E. Cunningham, of Washington; J. H. Cunningham, of Westminster. Members of Maryland Commandery, Knights Templar, of Baltimore, will attend the funeral Friday morning, at 10.30 o'clock.

Mr. Cunningham was a native of Baltimore, where he resided until he was past 30 years of age. With his family, he came to Westminster a short time before the beginning of the war. After coming to this county Mr. Cunningham devoted a portion of his time to conducting a small farm near this city and engaged in other business enterprises until 1865, when he was selected by the incorporators of the First National Bank as cashier of that institution and to inaugurate its business. This he did so well that the bank was a pronounced success from its beginning and under his management its stock in a few years increased in value 100 per cent. above par.

After serving the institution for 10 or 12 years, he resigned and for some time engaged in other business. Then he was selected to revive the Farmers and Mechanics' National Bank, of this city, which, by heavy losses, had well nigh collapsed. Under his management and later that of his son, John H. Cunningham, who succeeded him as cashier, this bank has become one of the strongest financial institutions in this county. Since resigning the cashiership, some years ago, Mr. Cunningham lived a comparatively retired life. In the meantime he inaugurated the work of national banks at Centerville, Denton and Salisbury and instructed their officers in their duties.

The Automobile Race "Called Off."

The automobile race from Emmitsburg to Frederick, scheduled for today, has been "called off," due to interference by the Chairman of the Good Roads Commission. From our point of view, this is right. The sooner it is made clear that our public roads are not intended for race tracks, the better, and we commend Chairman Weller for his sensible decision in the matter. The principle involved is, that our public roads are for the legitimate use of the general public, for various every day uses, and are not specially for the benefit of racing parties. This event would have set a very wrong precedent, which would have led to future like events.

Had His "Fingers Crossed"

The Sun, of Thursday, contained a picture of Roosevelt's right hand showing the first two "fingers crossed," and below it the public statement made by him, on the night after his second election, which the people accepted at the time as meant to be true, and which statement was reaffirmed by him on Dec. 11, 1907, when he said, "I have not changed and shall not change the decision thus announced."

The exact wording of his since broken declaration, was as follows:

"I am deeply sensible of the honor done me by the American people in thus expressing their confidence in what I have done and what I have tried to do. I appreciate to the full the solemn responsibility this confidence imposes upon me and I shall do all that in my power lies not to forfeit it. On the 4th of March next I shall have served three and a half years, and this three and a half years constitute my first term. The wise custom which limits the President to two terms regards the substance and not the form, and under no circumstances will I be a candidate for or accept another nomination."

Dairy Herds Must be Registered.

All dairy herds in the State of Maryland must be registered with the Live Stock Sanitary Board, and the board through its representatives is required to make an inspection of all herds at least once a year. The law says, "It shall be the duty of all dairymen, or herdsmen or private individuals supplying milk to cities, towns, villages, to register their herds or cattle with the Live Stock Sanitary Board; in violation of which the parties offending shall be fined not less than one dollar nor more than $20 for each offense."

INSTRUCTIONS TO VOTERS FOR MARKING BALLOTS.

Do not attempt to Vote until You are Familiar with the Ballot.

Two X marks will be required, this year, to mark a ballot—one for Presidential electors and one for member of Congress. This year, for the first time, the Republican electors appear at the top left hand corner of the ballot.

The ballot is arranged in three columns. In the first column are the Republican, Democratic and Prohibition electors, in the order named. In the second column, the Socialist, Progressive and Labor electors; and in the third column, the blank space, the first square being for the Prohibition candidate Basil W. Bowman; the second for Martin O. Huttman, Socialist; the third for Laban Sparks, Republican; the fourth for J. F. C. Talbot, Democrat; and the fifth square blank.

In voting for the Republican candidates, therefore, an X mark is necessary in the first square at the top of the first group of electors in the first column on the left opposite the names of Taft and Sherman; and an X mark in the third column on the right, in the third square opposite the name of Laban Sparks.

In voting for the Democratic candidates, an X mark is necessary in the first square of the second group of electors in the first column on the left opposite the names of Wilson and Marshall; and an X mark in the third column on the right in the fourth square opposite the name of J. F. C. Talbot.

In voting for the Progressive electors, an X mark is necessary in the second, or middle column, in the first square of the second group of electors, opposite the names of Roosevelt and Johnson.

As there is no Progressive candidate for Congress, such voters can take their choice, most no doubt preferring Mr. Sparks.

The same method applies to Prohibition, Socialist and Labor voters, making their X marks in the designated squares of each party, opposite the name of Presidential candidate.

These instructions apply to the sample ballots, as published, and will likely apply to the ballots to be voted, but this sentence, printed at the top of the sample ballots, seems to indicate that the official ballots may be different—"The list of nominations is arranged, as far as practicable, in the order and form in which they are to be printed upon the ballot."

Do not make an X mark after the names of the electors, but only in the square after the names of candidates for President and Vice-President.

Each square in which the X mark is to appear, is preceded by the word REPUBLICAN or DEMOCRATIC, etc.

There is little cause for any voter who can read and see, to spoil a ballot, or mark it in such a way that it will be "rejected," but it will be best for voters to familiarize themselves with the appearance of the ballot before attempting to mark it. Taneytown district voters are at full liberty to call at the RECORD office, before voting, where any desired information will be given, no matter which party the voter desires to support.

The "Go" Habit, and "Letting George Do It."

The American Economist publishes an article on the "high cost of living," charging much of it to the "go habit," and to "letting George do it." There is no dodging the facts, as stated; and while it may suit us best to blame "the tariff," and not ourselves, we are living more expensively than ever, from choice, and we all know it. The Economist says:

"There is one element of life causing the great increased cost of living, viz.: the Go Habit, acquired by people living in and near large towns. It is a case of go, go, go, morning, noon and night. It is to the theatre; go to the picture shows; go to the resorts; go to the restaurants; go to card parties; go to the opera; go to picnics, go shopping, and if there is no particular place to visit, they go downtown. And every time they go it is an outlay of from ten cents to ten dollars."

Another item connected with the high cost of living is the weekly and monthly installment payments on articles, such as unnecessary furniture, pianos, phonographs, lace curtains, pictures, velvet carpets and weekly life insurance premiums.

Another idea leading to the increased cost of living is the habit formed by so many of "letting George do it." Our fathers blacked their own shoes; we let "George do it," at ten cents per polish. Our fathers repaired many little "breaks" around the house. Now we let "George do it," at from 50 cents to $5. Our mothers did their own baking, repaired and kept in condition the clothing of the family; were satisfied to live within the family income. Now "George's" wife, sister, mother-in-law, niece, or other relatives "do it," at from $1.50 to $3 per day. The habit has created a generation, many of whom are ashamed to be seen doing the same work their mothers did."

Millions for the Campaign.

Washington, Oct. 26.—More than $3,000,000 has been spent to elect the next President of the United States. These figures include only the known expenses, such as the cost of the pre-convention campaigns and the pre-election fight between Taft, Wilson and Roosevelt up to 15 days before the election, figures for the Prohibitionists and Socialists, not being available. The figures on the "high cost of politics" so far are as follows:

Democratic National Committee.....	$825,188
Progressive National Committee.....	262,756
Republican National Committee.....	553,311
Roosevelt's pre-convention expense.....	657,777
La Follette pre-convention expense.....	490,927
Wilson pre-convention expense.....	208,183
Harmon pre-convention expense.....	146,000
Underwood pre-convention expense.....	82,000
Clark pre-convention expense.....	51,000
Totals.....	$3,152,042

Mr. Anderson Says No.

W. H. Anderson, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, positively refuses to meet Mr. Chafin, the Prohibition candidate for president, under any circumstances.

Emory C. Ebaugh, chairman of the Prohibition party in Carroll county, has guaranteed on behalf of the Prohibition party in the county the sum of $1,000 with which to meet a like guarantee by Mr. Anderson. This proposition was forwarded to Mr. Anderson, who is now in Conlinville, Ill. Yesterday Mr. Anderson's declination was received at the headquarters of the Anti-Saloon League in this city. He says:

"The letter of Mr. Emory C. Ebaugh, chairman of the Prohibition party in Carroll county, stating that the Prohibitionists of Carroll county will guarantee $1,000 for a debate between Mr. Chafin and myself, was called to my attention upon arrival here from points farther West.

"The $1,000 has no bearing upon my acceptance of Mr. Chafin's suggestion, but was mentioned merely to emphasize the looseness of his talk."

I am ready to meet and contend with the representatives of the liquor interests at any time, but I positively refuse to waste any ammunition upon those who ought to be our natural friends. It may be that some of Mr. Chafin's admirers in Maryland will accuse me of being afraid. Well, so be it, and I trust I shall always have a wholesome fear of making a fool of myself. The spectacle of temperance people fighting each other would be neither edifying nor profitable.

I have been since informed (I think reliably) that Mr. Chafin's attack was contrary to the advice of the national representatives of the party and in violation of his agreement with them. Unless we so far lose our heads as to recklessly question the good faith and reflect upon the intelligence of the rank and file of the Prohibition party, Mr. Chafin and the professional politicians of the party in Maryland will drive away from them and into more active co-operation with the league all the adherents of the party except the hopeless irreconcilables whose hostility is a greater asset than their professed loyalty."

Mr. Chafin has already fixed it so that no man in Maryland can vote for him without lining up with the liquor interests against the Anti-Saloon League, and we have not the slightest intention of helping him out of the pit which he has dug with malice aforethought.

Roosevelt Aiding Wilson.

In a letter this week, President Taft says he has absolutely dependable information that "none of the third party leaders believe it has the slightest chance of success, and that they realize that a vote for it means a vote for the Democratic candidates."

He says "they are, most of them, so filled with hatred for the Republican party because it refused to accept their dictation that they are willing to bring disaster upon the whole country simply to gratify their revenge."

These leaders have simply taken advantage of the various disaffected elements in the party, the "sore" monopolies that have been prosecuted, the radical "progressives" who could not take the full step toward Socialism, and combined them with those willing to support "Onward, Christian Soldiers" back of Col. Roosevelt's disappointed ambition and his "robbery" scheme which he had provided for use in case he failed, at Chicago, to secure the nomination, and with this army are making Wilson's election sure.

The President still hopes for a late change of sentiment toward the Republican candidates and platform, and there is a strong hope on the part of Republican leaders that when election day comes, those who claim to be Republicans will decline to aid in the defeat of the party; but the strong undercurrent of opinion, not for publication, is to the effect that Col. Roosevelt will accomplish his purpose—the defeat of Taft.

Dasheens, a Potato Substitute.

Washington, Oct. 30.—The Department of Agriculture has ready for distribution through Representatives in Congress one thousand bushels of seed dasheens, the semi-tropical tuber which, it is expected, will take the place of Irish potatoes in the Southern States. This is the first season in which such a distribution will be made.

The new potato substitute, which has a hairy coat and has been grown with much success in Florida, comes from Central and South America, and will grow in the moist, warm regions of the South, which are fatal to the Irish potato. It has been tried at the banquets of the National Geographic Society and pronounced decidedly good. It can be boiled or baked, or cooked in any other way a potato can be used. The taste is farther from meaty than a potato. Some who have eaten the dasheen say there is a suggestion of roasted chestnut about it, and others that it tastes as though a very slight addition of gravy had been made to a potato.

Tests have shown that a crop of 400 to 450 bushels an acre can be raised.

JAMES S. SHERMAN VICE-PRESIDENT DEAD.

Succumbs after an Illness Extending Over Several Years.

Vice-President James Schoolcraft Sherman died at his home in Utica, N. Y., on Wednesday night, of Bright's disease. For the past week, the papers had been filled with alarming reports as to the condition of the Vice-President, but it was thought that the end would not come so soon.

Mr. Sherman had been ill for the past four years, but he was a cheerful and energetic worker, and fought off an illness that would have shown more plainly in most men. As an adviser and parliamentarian he held high rank, and was one of the best posted men in the country on political matters.

His renomination for Vice-President was a mistake, but as he seemed eager to take part in the campaign, and hoped for physical improvement, President Taft was generous enough not to offer objections. But, more recent political conditions have demonstrated that the success of the Republican candidates would have been very greatly increased had the President's running mate been a vigorous western man with a strong personal following.

President Taft was informed of the death of the Vice-President just as he had finished a plea for a greater navy, at a dinner at Brooklyn celebrating the launching of the battleship New York. He remained seated quietly, concealing any emotions which he might have had, until Commander Greaves and Congressman Calder had finished their speeches. He then rose and said:

"My friends, Three years ago you met on an occasion like this to celebrate the launching of the Florida and you were honored by the presence of the Vice-President of the United States—Vice-President Sherman. It is a very sad duty for me to announce that word has just come that the Vice-President is dead."

"Those who knew him loved him. Those who knew the services he rendered to his country respected him. I venture to ask that this assemblage adjourn in honor of his memory and that no further proceedings be taken."

The funeral will be held on Saturday afternoon, in the First Presbyterian church, and will be attended by President Taft, his cabinet, senators and representatives of foreign governments. The services will be simple but impressive, as the family does not desire a military or any other great display.

New York, Oct. 31.—At National Republican Headquarters today members of the inner councils said that Vice President Sherman's successor on the ticket would be a man of "Progressive tendencies."

The following four names were prominently mentioned: Gov. Hadley, of Missouri; Senator Borah, of Idaho; Senator Cummins, of Iowa; Former Postmaster General Wamamaker. Others suggested are: Senator La Follette, Senator Root, Senator Lodge, Senator Burton, ex-Vice President Fairbanks and Gov. Goldsborough, of Maryland.

Chairman Hilles, of the Republican National Committee, said today that the National Committee would be called to meet in Chicago one week after election, on Nov. 12, to select a successor to Mr. Sherman on the national ticket. The power to make a selection is vested in the National Committee, under party rules, but six days' notice must be given to that committee. Of course, any action will depend upon success next Tuesday. The matter is entirely in the hands of the National Committee. In case of a deadlock in the Electoral College the election would go to the House, and then, in the event of a deadlock there, which seems likely, it would go to the Senate. It would devolve upon the Senate to elect one of the vice presidential candidates to the presidency. It is well known that the election in that event would turn upon the votes of the Progressive senators, which makes necessary the selection of a man of Progressive tendencies as Sherman's successor.

Turkey Believed to be Defeated.

London, Nov. 1.—Nazim Pasha, the Turkish Minister of War and chief in command in Thrace, has been either shot or taken prisoner, according to a dispatch from Sofia to the Post.

A four days' battle in Thrace has ended in the triumph of the Bulgarian commander-in-chief, General Savoff, whose skillful strategy has probably brought to a close one of the shortest and most remarkable wars on record.

A great Turkish Army, estimated at more than 200,000 men, has been defeated and is in retreat. Constantinople is believed to be at the mercy of the victorious Bulgarian Army, and a council, sitting at the Porte, is discussing the advisability of suing for peace.

Such is the news which comes from Constantinople.

It is only a fortnight since Turkey declared war. The initial week of the campaign closed with the dramatic fall of Kirk-Kilisseh, fully revealing for the first time the disorganization, bad moral and inefficient commissariat of the Turkish Army. Today that army is defeated, routed within 50 miles from Constantinople and possibly its retreat within the capital's line of defenses is cut off.

Only the briefest and vaguest accounts of the great battle have yet been received, for the war has been especially remarkable in that not a single war correspondent has been allowed at the front except in the case of the little Montenegrin campaign against Scutari.

Pennsylvania Railroad officials stopped a Roosevelt meeting in the shops in Philadelphia at noon one day last week, where their workmen were listening to the speakers, and also conducted an anti-Roosevelt campaign by distributing literature in the shops.

Woman's Missionary Meeting.

The Woman's Missionary Societies of the Maryland and Virginia Eldership met at Carrollton, on Oct. 19, and elected the following officers: Pres., Mrs. L. F. Murray; Vice Pres., Miss Janet Barriack; Rec. Sec., Miss Arminia Murray; Cor. Sec., Mrs. F. I. M. Thomas, the last named being elected as a delegate to the General Missionary Society, which meets in Harrisburg, Pa., May, 1913.

MARRIED.

BLOCHER—FISSEL.—In Reading, Pa., on Oct. 17, 1912, Mr. Thaddeus B. Blocher and Miss Anna F. Fissel, both of Littlestown, Pa.

COVER—HERSHEY.—On Oct. 22, 1912, Howard Cover, of Highspire, Pa., and Miss Viola Gertrude Hershey, of Littlestown, Pa., two of the outgoing missionaries of the Church of God to India, were quietly married at the bride's home, and on Oct. 31st, in company with Rev. Aaron Myers, they sailed for their future field of self-sacrificing duty in far-away India. May they have a safe trip across the seas, and may Heaven's richest blessings attend them.

LAU—BASEHOAR.—A very beautiful but informal wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Basehoar, of Littlestown, on Monday evening, Oct. 28, when their older daughter, Miss Bernice Pauline, was united in marriage to Rev. Irvin Martin Lau, of the same place. Promptly at 6 o'clock, the bridal procession entered the west parlor from the stairway covering the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march which was beautifully rendered by Miss Edna B. Mehring, of Taneytown, cousin of the bride.

The groom was attended by his brother, Eli Lau, of East Berlin, acting as best man, started the bridal procession, after which followed the bride's maids, Misses Ethel Basehoar and Sara Lau, sisters of the bride and groom, Master Clyde E. Basehoar, brother of the bride, followed as ring bearer, after which the bride with her father entered the parlor. Rev. J. J. Hill, pastor of the bride, Dr. B. D. Lau, of Hanover, and Rev. Lau, of Manchester, unless of the groom, performed the ceremony. The double ring ceremony was used, after which a wedding dinner was served.

The bride was attired in a gown of white satin trimmed with pearls and rose buds draped with crystal chiffon cloth, carrying a shower bouquet of bride roses. The parlor in which the wedding took place was very prettily decorated in evergreen and autumn. The dining room in which the dinner was served was artistically draped in autumn and cut flowers. The bride was the recipient of some beautiful presents, among which was a piano from her parents and the furnishings for their home. Only the immediate families were present.

Rev. and Mrs. Lau left in an automobile on a short wedding trip, after which they will reside on West King St., at the St. John's Lutheran Parsonage.

THE PAPERS SAY, "All that Roosevelt needs, is rest." Well, he will get plenty of it after next Tuesday, if he doesn't kill himself before that time, in which case, we decline to make any predictions, but would be charitable enough to hope for the best.

POLITICAL ROOSTERS will be in season,
next week, especially in the "way back" country press, where readers are still supposed need pictures to convey important truths, and where mere type fails to convey the abundance of the joy of "ye country editor."

SOME VOTERS are actually under the impression that the votes for Taft and Roosevelt can be "put together," in case neither wins, to beat Wilson. Not a bit of it.
Their electoral votes might, but the votes divided between the two, in the contest for electoral votes, are divided for good.
It is hardly conceivable that anybody can be so mistaken as to how votes count, but we have heard of Republicans who seem to think they have a double chance —Roosevelt first, then Taft.

AN AUTOMOBILE race, this Friday, from Emmitsburg to Frederick, "in the interest of good roads," is such a new scheme as to require explanation. In what way will the "race" promote good roads?
Perhaps if there are smashups, which might not have occurred if the road had been better, they will be used as arguments to make safe auto race courses out of our state roads? Then the question will arise, is the state supposed to build race courses, or simply good roads?

Loss of Confidence Produces Panics.

There is a very short step between easy financial sailing, and panic, and that step is called "confidence." The business of the whole world, and all small sections of it, is conducted largely on some form of credit. Anything which destroys confidence in the safety of credit, and calls for forced settlements, brings on a financial panic. The country may be in as good a condition—or better—than it has been, but whenever spot cash is called for, good times are turned at once into hard times, simply because future prospects can not be depended on to meet obligations.

Banks have money to loan; business men will take time notes; book accounts can be easily negotiated, as long as confidence in purchasers and deals remains unshaken. How confidence is lost, and credit undermined, may be brought about by a number of conditions. Sometimes a mere scare in some great money centre, will produce the condition; any organized closing down of manufacturing enterprises will do it; continued short crops has the same effect, and it may easily be brought about by a combination of small causes.

Panics originate in much the same indefinite way as what we term the "market price," originates. They are not always easily explainable, and professionals give different causes. There never was a season of "hard times" following a big reduction in tariff duties, that has been accepted by low tariff advocates as due to the tariff reductions. Sometimes mere timidity on the part of some financial institution of wide reputation, may cause smaller concerns to take notice, and create the wrong conclusion that there are breakers ahead, and the tendency is for the conclusion to grow like a snow ball rolled down hill.

The result of a National election, especially when former policies are apt to be changed, usually calls for precautionary measures by big financial interests, which may develop suddenly in a panic.
If there is sufficient well founded public confidence, the evil may be counteracted and be of short duration; but, if the first fear is accelerated, rather than quieted—if it becomes widespread and general—years may be required to elapse before confidence is again the basis of business transactions.

It really matters very little whether conditions actually justify a panic, or not. Fear will bring it about as easily as fact. Mere suspicion is often a formidable power, when once aroused—whether it be in relation to our business affairs, or to our private life—and it often requires a long time to thoroughly dis-prove the falsity of it. This is why "big business" dislikes frequent Presidential campaigns, and the possible disarrange-ment of tariffs and business policies, for confidence is such a skittish thing that when it is once settled, it is best to leave it so.

A Forecast of the Election.

From a careful survey of the political situation, and after giving conflicting claims due consideration, the Record can see only the sure election of Wilson and Marshall. The indications are that they will secure the largest electoral vote ever cast for any candidates, and yet it is almost equally probable that they will not have a majority of the popular vote. We do not regard Gov. Wilson a strong candidate for President; he does not appear to have a strong personal following and against a united Republican party he would likely be defeated, but he will be the beneficiary of the Republican split—
of an election as a gift.

The only element of uncertainty worth considering, is the Democratic vote which may go to Roosevelt, in connection with the protective tariff Democratic vote. We do not regard Gov. Wilson a strong candidate for President; he does not appear
to have a strong personal following
and against a united Republican party he
would likely be defeated, but he will be
the beneficiary of the Republican split—
of an election as a gift.

As the situation clears up, it seems to be demonstrated that the origin of President Taft's weakness, which made possible the split at the Chicago convention, was a long ago arranged fight against him, backed largely by the trusts that have been prosecuted under his administration. His carrying out, in a determined way, the anti-trust laws, coupled with the ambition of Roosevelt—which lent itself eagerly to the disaffection of the trusts, on the one hand, and to rabid progressivism, on the other—easily made it possible to work up a party split sufficient to give Gov. Wilson a walk-over.

Whether Roosevelt, or Taft, secures the most votes, cuts no figure, whatever, in the final count. Neither does it matter which gets the most electoral votes. Likely in some states the one will poll the most votes, and in some states the other, but in nearly all states the one will prevent the other from winning, and by dividing the Republican vote, give the plurality to Wilson, even in states with normally large Republican majorities.

In arriving at definite conclusions, the honest figurer who does not let his wishes prejudice his judgment, must concede, first of all, that Gov. Wilson will carry all the states carried by Bryan in 1908, with the electoral vote now belonging to each as follows:

Alabama	12
Arkansas	9
Colorado	6
Florida	6
Georgia	14
Kentucky	13
Louisiana	10
Maryland	8
Mississippi	10
Nebraska	8
Nevada	3
North Carolina	12
Oklahoma	10
South Carolina	9
Tennessee	12
Texas	20
Virginia	12
Total	174

As 266 votes will elect, Gov. Wilson will need 92 in addition to the above.
Naturally, New Jersey and Indiana, the homes of the Democratic candidates, will support for President, the sons they have already supported as Governor. If there is no miscalculation here, then we can safely advance another step;

Bryan States	174
Indiana	15
New Jersey	14
Total	203

Still 63 short. In the above figuring, practically no account has been taken of the war in the Republican camp. We think it reasonably safe to conclude that Wilson and Marshall, on their own merits, will win these 203 votes, especially as they have the active support of Mr. Bryan and there is no sound argument on which to safely discount very largely the party strength of the present candidates.

Now, we must take into consideration the division of the Republican vote between Taft and Roosevelt, and in order to do this intelligently let us look at the votes of a few states in 1908. For instance—

Taft.	Bryan, Elec'r
Delaware	25,007 22,072 3
Missouri	347,203 346,574 18
Montana	32,333 29,326 4
West Virginia	137,869 111,418 8
Wyoming	20,846 14,916 3
Total	36

Here are five states with comparatively small majorities—so small that they will not bear much Republican division. It is hardly probable that either Taft or Roosevelt will hold the Republican vote in either, solidly enough to overcome the Democratic vote.

states for Wilson, with their 42 votes, or a total of 245, leaves him still short 21 votes.

Wilson's chances seem best in all of the following states;

Massachusetts	18
Ohio	24
Illinois	29
Maine	6

Total.....77
but we do not count them as sure.

We will not go further with our figuring, but will present the vote of the remainder of the states, according to the figures of 1908, and our readers can do their own calculating;

Taft.	Bryan, Elec'r
California	214,398 127,492 13
Connecticut	112,815 68,255 7
Idaho	52,621 36,162 4
Illinois	629,932 450,810 29
Iowa	275,210 200,771 13
Kansas	197,216 161,209 10
Maine	66,987 35,403 6
Massachusetts	265,966 155,543 18
Michigan	333,313 174,313 15
Minnesota	195,843 109,401 12
New Hampshire	53,144 33,655 4
New York	870,070 667,468 45
North Dakota	57,680 32,855 5
Ohio	572,312 362,721 25
Oregon	62,530 38,049 2
Pennsylvania	745,779 448,785 33
Rhode Island	43,942 24,706 5
South Dakota	67,466 40,266 5
Utah	61,105 42,601 4
Vermont	39,558 11,500 4
Washington	106,062 58,691 7
Wisconsin	347,747 166,632 13
Total	286

Here are enough votes to elect the Republican candidates—if they can get them.
With Mr. Roosevelt out of the count, Taft would stand an excellent chance of winning all of these states; but with both fighting for them, and with the chance that the Republican vote may be nearly equally divided between the two, it is not at all impossible that Mr. Bryan's predication that Wilson will get all of the electoral votes, may come true.

Notwithstanding the optimistic claim of President Taft, that almost at the last hour the tide will turn strongly to him, the chance is so slim as to appear hopeless. The country is so generally prosperous, at present, that fear for the business future of the country is not strong enough to solidify widespread sentiment back of the present administration. As we see the situation, the present fight of the Republicans is largely for the purpose of saving the old party, as an organization.

"Biddy, the Hen."

The following, from the Christian Herald, is a bit of misinformation which no doubt a good many readers will accept as unquestioned fact, especially considering the good standing of the paper publishing it, under the above heading.

"The lost egg—more plainly, the bad egg—costs the family circle of the United States over $66,000,000 annually. This loss is by no means the fault of Biddy, the hen, who does her thrifty part to solve the "high cost of living," laying yearly over $400,000,000 worth of eggs.
Not a bad one does she lay. How then do we, her beneficiaries, manage to deposit ourselves of two in every twelve of her gifts?

Biddy's product is kept by the farmer a week or two or more before it gets to the country store, where it abides another several weeks before shipment to the city commission merchant. From the retailer, in due or undue season, Biddy's eggs reach the consumer's pantry or ice-box,
and thence appear by relays on his table.
Now, here is a problem of delays which Biddy cannot solve, and it is up to us, mere mortals, to do it. Everybody can help a little, and everybody who helps a little is doing a public service—helping to feed our big family."

The statement that eggs suffer a delay of two periods of perhaps several weeks, from hen to city dealer, is so ridiculously absurd that to the average country resident, it hardly needs denying. The actual fact is, that most eggs are on their way to the city from a few days to a week, after "Biddy" produces them. At the price of eggs usually prevailing, neither farmer nor country store cares to run the risk of having such valuable articles lying around any length of time.

When "Biddy's" product gets to the city, the length of time that may elapse before it gets on the table, is another matter. We are not defending the "cold storage" man. We do protest, however, against the intimation that farmers and country store-keepers let their valuable lie around for any number of "several weeks"—they are better business men than that. Besides, most of the eggs in this neck o' woods, never get inside of a store, but are "gathered up" and shipped by dealers direct to the city.

Seth Low, on Referendum and Recall.

The best brief statement of reasons against the progressive ideas—initiative, referendum and recall—that we have read anywhere, are by Hon. Seth Low, of New York, in the Outlook. His article is more at length, but the following paragraphs practically cover the questions without waste of words:

"As to the proposals of the Progressive party to establish, wherever it can, the initiative, the compulsory referendum, and the recall, including the recall of judges and of judicial decisions, I am entirely and whole-heartedly in sympathy with the Republican party in antagonizing these proposals upon their merits. In taking this position, I will not admit for a moment that I am less a believer in the right of the people to rule than the most ardent Progressive. On the contrary, I maintain that it is precisely because I believe in popular rule that I am obliged to antagonize every one of these proposals.

The most conspicuous object-lesson involving these devices, with the exception of the recall of judicial decisions, which is still untried, is furnished by Oregon; and any reading of the practical results in Oregon leads me to believe that they have not worked well there. I believe that in a state like the state of New York, for example, they would work even worse. In a legislature all parts of a state are represented, and no bill can be enacted without the vote of more than a majority, not of the representatives voting, but of all the representatives elected to the legislature. Under the Oregon system, groups substantially as small as one-third of the voters taking part in the election have enacted legislation.

This is neither popular rule nor government by majorities. It is a rule by groups; and when a group rules it is thinking, not of the general interest, but of its own interest as a group. Under such a system voting is massed, and in a state like the state of New York, where the majority of the population lives in cities, it would practically eliminate the dwellers in the country from any substantial influence upon legislation. The system of direct legislation destroys party responsibility for legislation, and in this respect also its tendency is unfortunate.
Political parties, more than any other single agency, divide society perpendicularly. The effect of direct legislation is to divide the population into groups, with more or less common interests within the group and with interests as against other groups antagonistic. I believe it to be the part of statesmanship to maintain unweakened the force of party responsibility, because that always and everywhere unites our citizenship in a common bond.

I am ready always to join with Progressives, or any one else, in trying to limit and prevent the abuses incident to party organization; but, despite all such abuses, I believe that responsible party organizations afford one of the strongest safeguards that we have for the perpetuity and happiness of the Republic. I do not say that the Progressive party may not look forward to becoming a party as strong and effective as the old parties which it seeks to displace; but what I do say is that its proposals on behalf of direct legislation are entirely inconsistent with any such result."

How it Feels to Come Out From Under an Anaesthetic.

In the November Woman's Home Companion a woman, describing her experiences in a hospital, where she was operated on, says in part:

"There is absolutely no apparent lapse between the final point before losing consciousness and the first point of returning consciousness. In my case there was a two-hours' interval. Those two hours do not exist. They are not a blank; they simply are not. One instant I was floating off in black, roaring space, the very next instant floating back through alternate humming black tunnels and milky white silences, with a great luminous truth penetrating every fiber of my being. I came back to consciousness aware of hugging to my heart a great certainty which I must on no account allow to escape me. Then I became aware of a wonderful being bending august eyes upon me, and touching my head and wrist with healing touch.

This Olympian creature gradually resolved herself into my nurse, and I did not at first know whether my great and joyous news came to me from her, or whether I was imparting it to her, as being the first person I was encountering to whom I could convey the glad tidings;
but as consciousness grew and grew and grew I found myself in my bed, with the peaceful clear creamy walls of the little hospital room about me, and my beautiful nurse bending over me, and I heard myself sobbing out ecstatically the broken words over and over, unable to let go of them long enough to stop myself, afraid to stop myself lest they should leave me:

"Everything is God, and God is love;
and love is everything, and everything is God," and on and on. What words to come bearing back from oblivion! I feel I must blush to repeat them to you, they must seem to you so trite; but I felt I had never understood them before.

"The operation, and all connected with it, was intensely interesting; for it is in such circumstances that you discover the truth about things that seem terrible. You think you are about to be subjected to torture, and you find yourself undergoing a great and beautiful spiritual experience; you unmask buga-boos, and find them innocent, smiling cherubs; you think you have to leap over a wide chasm with a snaky green torrent roaring deep down below, and you find yourself instead treading a pleasant, flower-starred meadow. And it is all in the attitude and in the frame of mind.
It all lies with you."

CAPONIZING TOOLS, PAST AND PRESENT.

An old book called "Ortus Sanitatis the Garden of Health," published in Germany in 1485, declares when capons reach three years of age their liver contains a crystal jewel, which when worn by a lady makes her especially pleasing in the eyes of her beloved.

We imagine capons were very popular at that time and milady was so anxious for the gem that she didn't trust Bridget to dress the fowl.

But "Ornamental and Domestic Poultry," published in this country in 1857, gives capons a knock.

It says: "Capon, in point of fact, are getting out of date and are taking rank with oxen roasted and other barbarisms of the middle ages. They are very expensive, but not unjustly so when it is to be remembered that two or three chickens may have been sacrificed before ten capons have been nursed into convalescence."

Such a tremendous loss would make any one grouchy and pessimistic, and 2, comparison of the crude instruments of 1857 with the fine practical set of 1912 shows the chief reason.

Caponizers have operated on a hundred birds straight without a loss, and 1 to 2 per cent is about the average.

Moreover there is no convalescence, the birds starting right in to put on fancy flesh. We never found that fabled crystal in the capon's liver, but we find good money in them, and a great essential to success is an up to date set of instruments.

DON'TS.

Don't be wasteful. Feed no more than is necessary. Have no feed scattered round for rats and sparrows to feast on.

Don't mortgage your property to buy an automobile. It's nice to take a jolly joy ride; but, oh, you bankrupt backslide!

Don't nurse a grouch. Help wife nurse the twins when they are yappy and be a happy pappy.

Don't get awfully enthusiastic over poultry in the spring and then be downed by lazy prostration in the summer and be knocked clear out by poultry pessimism in the fall.

Don't put much confidence in the fellow who is expert at making promises. Promises easy to make are easy to break.

Don't keep the dog tied up in the heat. Dogs are often driven mad by cruelty, as are men.

Don't believe all you hear nor tell all you believe. "With malice toward none, but charity for all," let us keep our tongues tied, like the horse in the stall.

GROUCHY BILL'S CONVERSION.

Bill Smith got awful angry at his wife for swatting flies.

The hanging of a screen door was a job that he despised, and that swat, swat, swat, if a fly got in the door.

Made Bill so very angry that he often ripped and swore.

"Oh, well," said Mrs. William Smith, "just take the screens all down! I'm tired of your grouchiness and everlasting frown. But if the flies come swarming in and plague you till you're ill, Remember that you let them in. So keep your big mouth still."

Bill took the screens all out at once. This fly scare was a fake.

He'd show his wife this swatting flies was all a fool mistake.

But when he got the screen door off the flies swarmed in so thick

That William soon began to see he wasn't quite so sick.

They dropped into his coffee, they crawled across the meat.

They floundered in the butter and dropped germs from their feet.

And then a fly hyena bit Bill on his bald head.

And Bill got typhoid fever and lay three months in bed.

Well, yes, Bill got converted from his bald top to his feet.

And even goes round swatting flies upon the public street.

And you had better swat the fly or you'll be hit; that's what!

But, say, a fly's on my bald head! Bang! That blame fly is not!

KEEP A STRICT RECORD AND ACCOUNT.

While visiting a great dairy farm we noticed each cow's milk was weighed and her individual record kept, the Babcock test for butter fat was applied to each cow's product, and thus all nonpayers were detected and rejected. Farmer, go thou and do likewise if you expect your dairy to pay.

Next day we were guest at a poultry farm where 900 Leghorn hens were kept, and when we asked for the month's egg record our host said he didn't bother keeping records. He did not even keep a record of outlay and inlay, did not, of course, know what profit he made nor if the profit on his investment and work was equal to as much as he would make on the same capital and labor at something else. Of course such mismanagers eventually fail unless they are billion aires.

The owner of a flock, large or small, should keep an account with his hens.

A record should be kept of all expenses, his own labor included, a record of all eggs laid, sold and used, all fowls sold and used, and he should get the laying record of his hens by trap nest or otherwise, so that drones could be eliminated and only the best layers bred from, etc.

There are many items to be recorded, and where one starts at the outset to do this he seldom gets into the hole, for no leak has the chance to become a deluge, for a simple change of method and the leak is stopped.

A philosopher advises, "Know thyself."

That is well. Better conduct your affairs in a businesslike manner, so you will know where you are at also.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

Restaurants are serving many roast ducks to their patrons, the juicy flappers being very popular. Hotels and cafes are good private trade for ducks and broilers and often take them when ordinary market shows no demand or kicks at the price for real early stock.

Little turkeys with blackhead often linger a long time, and feeding them tonics simply prolongs the agony. A study of the affected organs soon informs the doctor how hopeless is treatment of such a case, and he kills the next victim to down the count down.

The fact that people have money to burn is shown by calls for broiler turkeys two pounds weight. Little turkeys at this weight are about over feathering, a danger period, and the raiser who sells them at that age must be hard up for cash in view of the big profit grown turkeys will bring, for turks this year will be highest ever.

A farmer's wife who lost all her turkey poult but one threw up her hands in disgust and next spring will go in for geese. Last year she raised 90 per cent of turkeys hatched, but a change from adult stock to a young tom and pullets ended her success.

Cutting up chickens ready to fry and displaying them in that style uncovered in open market is a practice that should be frowned down by customers. Such dressed poultry is not only exposed to flies and dust, but to the easy entrance of innumerable bacteria.

Those people who talk so knowingly of hatching wild turkeys and quail and pheasants by artificial means and turning them loose to grow up with the country are generally treed when you ask what these wild fowls would feed on. Their natural habitat, their natural feeding grounds, have been about destroyed by the greed of man and the devouring forest fire. There aren't enough eggs of these species laid in a season in Pennsylvania to fill a good sized incubator.

The superintendent of a state hospital has petitioned the Illinois legislature for money to erect a poultry plant and claims that the insane are much interested and successful in poultry work. Of course this is no reflection on our readers.

The best way to sell is to go direct to the consumer. No huckster, storekeeper, middleman or cold storage company has a chance to butt in and profit and product are in the hands where they properly belong.

Anty Drudge Tells How to Economize on Coal.

Mrs. Thrifty—"My husband is in the coal business and it doesn't cost anything for fuel to boil the clothes."

Anty Drudge—"Your husband doesn't get his coal for nothing, does he? Besides it costs just half the wear of your clothes when you boil them, as they wear out just twice as fast. Use Fels-Naptha soap in cool or lukewarm water if you want to save time, bother and your husband's coal."

John D. Rockefeller says "it is not what we earn but what we save that makes wealth."

In washing clothes with Fels-Naptha in cool or lukewarm water, either in summer or winter, you save:—

Fuel—No necessity for hot fire or boiling water.

Clothes—Your clothes last twice as long when washed with Fels-Naptha, because they are not weakened by boiling, nor worn out by hard rubbing.

Doctor's Bills—You don't risk your health by bending over steaming suds or a hot fire and then going into the cool outer air.

Time—The Fels-Naptha way of washing takes less than half as long as the old washboiler way.

Labor—Fels-Naptha takes three-fourths the work and all the drudgery out of washday.

If these savings are worth while to you, follow directions for using Fels-Naptha printed on the red and green wrapper.

SUBSTITUTE FOR MEAT

DAINTY MEALS THAT MAY BE ECONOMICALLY PREPARED.

Much Depends on the Proper Furnishing of the Table—Balanced Vegetable Ration Not Hard to Put Together.

Now that the price of meat is so high many are looking about for means to do without it, trying to discover something to take its place. Of course, vegetarianism at once presents itself as a solution of the difficulty, but most people recoil in horror from vegetarianism. They conceive it as boiled cabbage, corn, potatoes, coarse bread, beets, etc. These are the articles of diet they see in imagination upon the table as soon as meat is withheld. But it need not be so. It is possible to devise tempting and tasty dishes for a luncheon or a formal dinner from which meat is altogether excluded. Coarse vegetables, such as those mentioned, need never be served; indeed, many vegetarians hardly ever touch them. Let us think, then, what we shall eat and how to make the table look appetizing.

In the first place, the table may be made to look charming if it is tastefully laid with fine linen, spotless glass, polished silver and dainty china. The dishes which are brought on to the table should contain food dressed and arranged artistically.

It is possible to arrange dishes so that no one knows exactly what he is eating, but thinks it delicious. Instead of giving one vegetable, give several at once, mixed together thoroughly, and covered with dressing or sauce, to make it appear still more appetizing. In arranging these combinations, vegetables or fruits which blend together well must be introduced; also due allowance must be made for the various combinations and proportions of the foods—that is, acids, proteids, carbohydrates, etc., must be balanced as nearly as possible.

Salads of all kinds are beneficial, and fruits are also very good during the hot weather. A delicious fruit salad may be made by mixing together, in a large bowl, chopped oranges, pears, plums, grapes, peaches, apricots, etc., dates, figs and nuts, and pouring this into another bowl, lined with lettuce leaves. Honey should be poured over this and whipped cream placed on top. This, with a couple of delicious and sustaining meal.

The following is a delightful salad: Scoop out the insides of several tomatoes. Cut up three or four anchovies into small fragments. Cut up also the centers of the tomatoes. Mix together with a little finely chopped cabbage, green pepper and a flavor of onion. Replace in the empty tomatoes and serve on lettuce leaves.

Cream cheese will be found a valuable addition to many salads. Nuts also may be used freely, both for purposes of decoration and to increase the food value of the salad, since nuts contain the same muscle forming elements as meat. By trying a number of experiments in the combinations of foods in this way a number of tasty and nutritious dishes easily may be devised.

Jam Rules.

Do not allow tin, iron or pewter to touch the jam, as any of these are liable to spoil the color.

Everything employed in the jam making must be scrupulously clean.

The sugar must be of the best.

The fruit must be gathered on a dry day, any that is imperfect or damaged being discarded. It should be just ripe.

The jam should be boiled until on dropping a little on a plate it jellies. Jam should be boiled fast to preserve the color of the fruit, and kept well stirred.

All scum must be carefully removed as it rises.

To Cleanse Fine Lace.

Here is a recipe for cleansing laces which an old lacemaker who has woven many a gossamer web for the great connoisseur and lover of laces, Mme. Modjeska, gave to her pupil and patron: Spread the lace out on paper. Cover with calcined magnesia, place another paper over it and put away between the leaves of a book for two or three days. Then all it needs is a skilful little shake to scatter the powder, and its delicate threads are as fresh and clean as when first woven.

Renovating Shades.

One renovates her window shades that have become cracked and broken by laying them flat on the floor and painting them with ordinary oil paint bought at any hardware store in small cans.

One side is painted and let to dry thoroughly before the other side is touched. This treatment preserves the shades and makes them last for many years.

Oxford Salad.

Small leaves of lettuce, three to each guest. On each a slice of orange, cut not too thin. On each slice of orange place a strip of canned red sweet pepper. Over all pour a dressing made of the juice from ends of oranges, a little of the pepper liquor and plenty of salt. Very pretty and so good.

Egg Lemonade.

Beat two eggs until light, add two level tablespoons of sugar, the juice of half a lemon and three-quarters cup of cold water. Beat well and strain.

CHEESE AN ECONOMICAL FOOD

Really Better for the Health of the Family Than the Very Much More Costly Meat.

While so much is being said and written about the high cost of food stuffs, it is well to remember that the housekeeper who has the most knowledge of the materials with which she works and the most skill in applying her knowledge, is the one who can make the money at her disposal go the farthest.

The cheaper cuts of meat are as nutritious, and when well cooked, are as palatable, as the more expensive cuts. If she wishes to use something in place of meat, she has fish—fresh and cured—milk, eggs, beans, peas, and similar legumes, nuts if they are relished, and last, but very important from the standpoint of its food value, palatability, and the great number of ways in which it can be used—cheese.

The way in which these substitutes for meat can be served are numerous and varied. Individual taste and food habits are to be considered, but, in general, it is true that the relish with which other dishes are accepted in place of meat depends upon the ingenuity and skill of the cook. It seems a foundation principle that as meat is a savory dish, any acceptable substitute for it must be savory or must be made so by suitable seasoning and proper cooking.

Those who wish to make substitution of these foods for meat often desire to know how much of each is necessary in order to replace a given amount of meat. If we consider only the proteins of the meat, the following general statement may be made: Two and one-half quarts of milk, 1-1/2 pounds fresh lean fish, three-fourths pound dried fish, two-thirds pound ordinary cheese, somewhat less than a pound of mixed nuts, nine eggs, one-half pound shelled peanuts, or two-thirds pint dry beans, peas, cowpeas or lentils is equal to a pound of beef of average composition.

It will be seen that two-thirds of a pound of cheese contains as large an amount of what laymen call "the muscle-forming" materials as one pound of beef of average composition. According to abundant analyses, cheese compares even more favorably with meat if its fuel value instead of its percentage of protein is taken into consideration, for one-half of a pound of ordinary cheese yields as much energy as a pound of beef of average composition.

Shirtwaist Cabinets.

Shirtwaist boxes, which were primarily invented to help the woman of little space in keeping her room in order, have reached quite a definite place in home furnishing. Original they were but boxes, cretonne covered, but now, though made in the same manner, they have small stands, of white wood, some finished with a top glass over cretonne matching the box coverings; the boxes have also little glass knobs so that they may be pulled in and out of the stands in the same manner as bureau drawers. Some of the cases are made in the replica of a dressing case and have a small swinging mirror; their cost is about the same as a little white painted bureau would be.

Peach Leather.

This is a famous southern dainty and much used for school children's lunch basket. Take a peck of ripe freestone peaches, peel and pit them, mash and press the pulp through a coarse sieve. To four quarts of the pulp allow one pint of sugar, brown if you can get it. Mix well, cook about two minutes, stirring all the time, then spread on plates and in the sun. If the weather is hot, three days will be enough. When the paste on the edges looks like leather and cleaves from the plate readily if a knife is passed around the edge, it is done. Dust with white sugar, then roll up. If stored in a dry place it will keep for several months.

Rochester Jelly Cake.

One and one-half cups sugar, one-half cup butter creamed together, three-quarters cup milk, half teaspoon soda dissolved in it, two heaping cups flour with one teaspoon cream tartar, salt and flavor. Put half this mixture in shallow pan to bake and to remainder add one tablespoon molasses, one-half cup raisins or currants, and a little cinnamon, clove and allspice and a generous tablespoon of flour. Bake in pan same size as used for the light part. Spread jelly between the layers of cake while hot.

Roman Cream.

Did you ever make this cream? Take 1-1/2 pints of milk, one-eighth of a box of gelatin, yolks of three eggs, four tablespoons of sugar, vanilla flavoring. Dissolve the gelatin in the milk, then set in hot water. Beat the eggs and sugar together, add to the other mixture and cook until it thickens, being careful not to boil it too long. When taken from the stove stir in the beaten whites of the eggs. Serve with cream.

Making Bread Crumbs.

A quick way of making bread crumbs is to put the crumbs from a stale loaf into a muslin bag, tie it at the top, then rub gently between the hands for a few minutes. The crumbs will be fine enough for any purpose.

Fish in Cornmeal.

Take any fish that you wish to fry and roll it in yellow cornmeal. Fry in the usual way. In frying this way egg is not necessary. Be sure and have your fish dry before rolling in the cornmeal.

THE VOUGH PIANO IS THE LEADER

People can talk about which plan is the best, but anyone who wishes to know the truth about the matter, has only to compare the VOUGH, part for part, with the leading makes of the century. We are always glad to have anyone make these comparisons, as the wonderful strides of progress made in the construction of the VOUGH Pianos

Is A Revelation To All who investigate. The best Piano to be had today, if actual construction and results are judged, is the VOUGH Piano. You can see and examine these Pianos at

The play entitled, "Bachelor Girls of 1912" given in the town hall, on Tuesday night, by home talent, was a brilliant success, both in performance and financially. The hall lacked capacity to accommodate all who applied for admission. The Union Bridge Band attended and freely contributed their most popular music for the entertainment of the pleasure seekers.

The reopening exercises at the M. E. church, next Sunday, will probably attract a large audience. The church has been greatly improved and beautified by the work expended upon it. The ministers who are on the program for addresses are among the most eminent and eloquent belonging to the Baltimore Conference.

W. W. Fogle, who has worked many years in the blacksmith department of the W. M. R. Shops, on last Monday, transferred his labor to the blacksmith shop at the Cement Works.

James Seabrook does not improve as satisfactorily as could be wished, but gradually building up may be more permanent than quick results.

Roy Keefer received a telegram on Wednesday telling of the death of his uncle, Samuel Shank, on Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 29, 1912, of typhoid fever at his home in North Baltimore, Ohio. Mr. Shank was born near Union Bridge and moved to North Baltimore where he has been engaged in the coach manufacturing business, a number of years in partnership with Milton Sponsler, another man born near Union Bridge. He has been prominent in the business affairs of his adopted town, having been a member of the School Board many years and also a member of the Town Council. He was an active member of the United Brethren Church. He leaves besides his wife, three sons, Charles, Irvin and Ralph Shank, all of North Baltimore; also three sisters, Mrs. J. P. Perry, of Orwell, Ohio; Mrs. Frank Keefer and Mrs. J. H. Williams, near Union Bridge, and a stepmother, Mrs. Hester Shank. His age was 59 years. Funeral on Thursday afternoon, at North Baltimore.

Germon and family, went down the old Liberty road to Baltimore, left his passengers at their destination, returned on the old pike to Westminster, stopped there a half hour and drove into Union Bridge at 1 o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

Oct. 31, Hallowe'en, the night when many people delight in showing the evil that is in them instead of the good.

Here is a woman who speaks from personal knowledge and long experience, viz., Mrs. P. H. Brogan, of Wilson, Pa., who says, "I know from experience that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is far superior to any other. For cough there is nothing that excels it." For sale by all dealers.

LINWOOD.

One of our young men, John S. Messler, has left the ranks of his associates and become a benedict. He was married in Waynesboro, Pa., on Oct. 26th., to Miss Margaret Etzler, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Etzler, by Rev. Witter, of the Brethren church. After a short trip, they returned to the groom's home, and are now busy fixing up their future home. They will occupy the house lately purchased by E. Mrs. Clara E. Englar is having her tenant house repaired; it was once the property of Sam King, who occupied it during the life of the late Jacob Shriner.

Mrs. Margaret Englar, of New Windsor, spent several days with her daughter, Mrs. Clara E. Englar.

Alfred Englar has interested himself in having the Wolfe graveyard cleaned off, grass seed sown and wall repaired, and we are told it presents a very creditable appearance. Through the contributions of some of the heirs, of those that rest there, they will have a sufficient fund to keep it in order. He found 165 marked graves and with a few exceptions, the stones were easily straightened having been put in the ground in the rough state.

J. W. Copeland, of Dayton, Ohio, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for his boy who had a cold, and before the bottle was all used the boy's cold was gone. Is that not better than to pay a five dollar doctor's bill? For sale by all dealers.

BLUE RIDGE COLLEGE.

The entertainment by the Raweis was very well rendered before a large audience on Saturday evening. Those who heard it expressed opinions very favorable in its behalf. The story of New Zealand life was simply and interestingly given. It is of interest to note the rapid progress of civilization of that Pacific island in the short period of sixty years.

Since that evening a number of season tickets have been called for, meaning that still fewer unreserved seats remain. To insure yourself of a seat for the remaining five numbers, order a ticket at once. The next one, the Hartford—a male quartet is dated for December 14. Mr. Raweis and his family remained with us on Sunday, and he preached in the evening. He related an old story simply and beautifully with expressive language. The pastors of the churches in town willed their usual evening services in order that their people might hear Mr. Raweis; so a large crowd was present.

Good Things for the Thanksgiving Dinner.

Fannie Merritt Farmer, cookery editor of the Woman's Home Companion, writes on "Good Things for Thanksgiving" in the November number of that periodical. She publishes twelve recipes. Following are three of them:

Oyster Soup.—Put one quart of oysters in a colander and pour over one-half cupful of cold water. Pick over and chop oysters, put in a saucepan, add cold water drained from oysters and enough more water to make one quart of liquid in all. Brown three tablespoonsful of butter, add three and one-half tablespoonsful of flour, and continue the browning; then pour on gradually, while stirring constantly, the oyster liquor. Bring to the boiling-point, and let simmer one-half hour. Strain, and add one cupful of cream, one-half teaspoonful of salt, and one-eighth teaspoonful of paprika.

Brown or Giblet Gravy.—Pour off all liquid in the pan in which the turkey has been roasted. From the liquid, skim off six tablespoonsful of fat, and return to roasting-pan. Place on top of range, add six tablespoonsful of flour, and stir until well blended; then cook, stirring constantly until well browned. Pour on gradually while stirring constantly, three cupfuls of stock, bring to the boiling-point, and let boil five minutes. Season with salt, and strain. To obtain the stock, cover giblets, neck, and tips of wings with five cupfuls of cold water, bring slowly to the boiling-point, and let simmer until reduced to three cupfuls. If a giblet gravy is desired, the giblets, one or two tablespoonsful of butter may be added bit by bit.

Thanksgiving Pudding.—Finely chop beef suet; there should be one cupful. Add one cupful of molasses and one cupful of sour milk. Mix and sift two and one-fourth cupfuls of flour, one and one-half teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful of clove, and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Combine mixtures, add when well blended add one and one-fourth cupfuls of raisins, seeded and added to the three-fourths cupful of currants, dredging into with one-half cupful of flour. Turn into a buttered mold, cover, and steam four hours.

Newlywed Marketer.

She was apt to forget things, says The Kansas City Times, and so she was afraid she would forget to order the chickens in time. All day, to guard against it, she would keep repeating to herself "Chickens-grocer-chickens-grocer." Finally at the time she was accustomed to call the grocer she went to the 'phone and asked: "Have you any nice young grocers?"

"Why, yes ma'am said a surprised voice at the other end of the line. "This is Mrs. Jones talking," she went on, "and I want you to send me a couple dressed."

"Send you a couple dressed?" gasped the grocer.

"Well, no; you had better send them undressed, and when my husband comes home he will wring their necks and the cook can dress them."

Result of Investigation.

A little six-year-old came to her grandfather with a trouble weighing on her mind.

"Aunt says the moon is made of green cheese, and I don't believe it?"

"Why not?"

"Because I have been looking in the Bible and found out that the moon is not made of green cheese, for the moon was made before the cows."

HERE IS THE ANSWER

To those who said they would wait and see how our proposition turned out this year.

Our party has now returned from the famous

YAKIMA VALLEY, WASHINGTON.

They have seen for themselves the marvelous conditions existing there.

The party consisted of Mr. Ferdinand D. Schaeffer, of Westminster, Dr. Jacob H. Sherman, wife and daughter, of Manchester, and Mr. Charles E. Fink.

Dr. Sherman is a successful practicing physician and farmer, and is a director in the Manchester Bank.

Mr. Schaeffer is a retired farmer and capitalist, and is a director in the First National Bank of Westminster.

All of these gentlemen are well and favorably known in Carroll County, and their report on a proposition of this kind should absolutely satisfy anyone.

These gentlemen spent two weeks in the famous YAKIMA VALLEY, and have seen and investigated every feature of it.

They are not only satisfied but are most enthusiastic, and have shown their faith in that wonderful country by purchasing some of this land which is divided up into ten acre tracts.

Last spring we sold to different parties one hundred acres of this land, which, with our own sixty acres, was then planted with apple trees and potatoes. These parties will now receive about one hundred dollars per acre for their half of the potato crop.

JUST THINK OF IT!

Each of these people will get approximately One Thousand Dollars from the ten acres of land they have owned only three months!

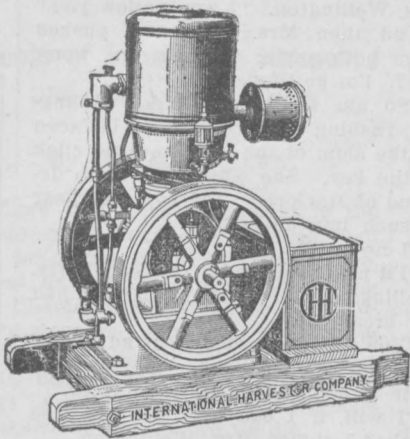

Why not profit by their experience?

We have more of this land to sell. It will be planted with apple trees and potatoes next spring and you will get your first crop returns next fall. But the price of this land takes two upward jumps between now and next spring. Hence you should buy now and avoid the regrets you will have later on if you do not. The payments are easy, as only one-fourth is required down and the balance in one, two and three years, and the potato crop and fruit will practically take care of these payments; and remember, that if at the end of the fourth year you are dissatisfied, for any reason, you can get back your money and 10% interest per year on it (40%).

PROCESSION TO KALI TEMPLE, EAST (INDIA) EPISODE, PAGEANT OF DARKNESS AND LIGHT.

FOUR QUARTERS OF EARTH ARE TO MEET

Pageant of Darkness and Light, at
"The World in Baltimore," Will Surpass in Excellence All
Those of the Past.

A great revival of interest in pageantry has sprung up in this country and abroad during the last few years. We have had historical pageants, many patriotic and semi-political pageants in various cities and towns; but none of these will approach either in operatic splendor or in unity of story the Pageant of Darkness and Light to be given at Lyric theatre in Baltimore from October 25 to November 30, in connection with "The World in Baltimore" Missionary Exposition.

The scene shifts to Africa, at a spot where Livingstone, the famous missionary explorer, is resting from his journeyings. Here Stanley, who has been searching for him, finds him lost in thought and begs him to return to England, but Livingstone determines not to go until his work is done. At this news his men break into a song of thanksgiving. From the forests of Africa, the scene changes to the streets of a city in India. A funeral procession is seen, leading a young widow to the funeral pyre. Just as the pyre is about to be lighted, however, an English official comes in with a proclamation against the barbarous custom of burning widows and the missionaries break into a jubilant chant. The most dramatic scene of all is a coral beach in Hawaii, where the

KALI TEMPLE, INDIA SCENE, "THE WORLD IN BALTIMORE."

It is no mere string of scenes, passed like a bewildering panorama before the spectators, while the orchestra plays snatches of Beethoven, Grieg and Bantock. Instead, it was built around a set motive, and drew its scenes from incidents of missionary history. The excellent libretto by John Oxenham, although short, contains some lyrics of great rhythmic beauty. The first scene is an Indian camp in the northwest. The chief of the tribe and his wife are in distress over the loss of their little daughter, who has strayed away. A band of Esquimaux come to trade with the Indians and the medicine men of the latter incite the braves to kill the visitors. Just then a missionary brings the chief's little daughter into camp and, having gained the chief's good will, preaches to the people his message of light.

The music for these episodes was written by Hamish MacCunn. It is naturally full of wild, foreign dances and dirges. There are gloomy Indian chants and bloodthirsty war songs; missionary choruses of jubilee and hymns of praise; fanatical invocations of medicine men and native priests; and many solos of every description. The Indian goddess, Kali, to whom many temples have been erected in India, and who wears a necklace of human skulls, is one of the unique exhibitions at "The World in Baltimore," October 25th to November 30th.

THE world has recently been shocked at the revelation of atrocities in the Congo region. The Central African exhibit at "The World in Baltimore," showing native industries, idols and idol-houses, and the home of missionaries and natives, will give Americans an intimate knowledge of the conditions under which these atrocities are practiced.

An old-fashioned prairie schooner will be shown at "The World in Baltimore," October 25 to November 30.

TEA HOUSE IN JAPAN SCENE, "THE WORLD IN BALTIMORE."

A STRIKING feature of "The World in Baltimore" is the collection of idols. Tall totem poles from Alaska, little squatting men carved in Africa, weird and grotesque carved figures from the South Sea Islands, and many others will be shown at "The World in Baltimore."

THE hut of the tropical Indian of South America by some peculiar coincidence has the same form as the icy igloo of the Esquimo. Both will be shown at "The World in Baltimore."

Prayer in a Buddhist temple may be seen at "The World in Baltimore."

SPECIAL DAYS AT EXPOSITION

Large Number of Functions to Mark "World in Baltimore."

"The World in Baltimore" Missionary Exposition, to be held in Baltimore from October 25th to November 30th, will be marked by the observance of a large number of "special days," or days devoted to some town or organization or church or branch of work. Many excursions will be run to take people to Baltimore from adjacent territory, and of course special arrangements will be made to accommodate the visitors. Thus far the following days have been set:
October 25.—Opening Day.
October 30.—German Evangelical Day.
October 31.—Methodist Day.
November 4.—Masonic Day.
November 7.—Reformed Church.
November 12.—Presbyterian Day.
November 13.—Washington Day.
November 14.—Lutheran Day.
November 18.—Baptist Day.
November 19.—Episcopal Day.
Programs for these special days are being worked over with greatest care, and something distinctive is being provided for each one. Ambassador Bryce's address will be a feature of the Opening Day, when Gov. Gold-borough, and Bishops Cranston and Murray will also speak. Other days will be arranged for before the opening of the Exposition.

GORGEOUS NEW SCENERY.
Much of the scenery for "The World in Baltimore," to be given October 25 to November 30, has been newly painted for the Baltimore Exposition, and all the rest has been retouched. The work has been done by the best New York artists, and the result is a truly gorgeous setting for the great pageant.

AMBASSADOR BRYCE TO MAKE PRINCIPAL ADDRESS

An announcement of greatest interest is that Right Honorable James Bryce, the British Ambassador to the United States, has accepted the invitation to deliver the principal address at the opening function of the Missionary Exposition, "The World in Baltimore," the afternoon of October 25th, in the Lyric theatre.

Dispensary Scene, "The World in Baltimore."

Among the other speakers for the day will be Bishop S. Earle Cranston, of the Methodist church; Bishop Murray, of the Episcopal Diocese of Maryland, and Governor Goldsborough.

A MEDICAL mission in actual operation will be one of the many interesting features at "The World in Baltimore."

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Fresh Trouble Daily.

The following morning the daylight creeping into section number one found Ira and Anne staring at each other. Ira was tousled and Anne was unkempt, but her blush still gave her cheek at least an Indian summer glow.

After a violent effort to reach the space between her shoulder blades, she was compelled to appeal to her new master to act as her new maid.

"Oh, Mr. Lathrop," she stammered—"Ira," she corrected, "won't you please hook me up?" she pleaded.

Ira beamed with a second childhood boyishness: "I'll do my best, my little outsum-tootsums, it's the first time I ever tried it."

"Oh, I'm so glad," Anne sighed, "it's the first time I ever was hooked up by a gentleman."

He gurgled with joy and, forgetting the poverty of space, tried to reach her lips to kiss her. He almost broke her neck and bumped his head so hard that instead of saying, as he intended, "My darling," he said, "Oh, hell!"

"Ira!" she gasped. But he, with all the proprietorship he had assumed, answered cheerily: "You'll have to get used to it, ducky darling. I could never learn not to swear." He proved the fact again and again by the remarks he addressed to certain refractory hooks. He apologized, but she felt more like apologizing for herself.

"Oh, Ira," she said, "I'm so ashamed to have you see me like this—the first morning."

"Well, you haven't got anything on me—I'm not shaved."

"You don't have to tell me that," she said, rubbing her smarting cheek. Then she bumped her head and gasped: "Oh—what you said."

This made them feel so much at home that she attained the heights of frankness and honesty by reaching in her handbag for a knob of supplementary hair, which she affixed dextrously to what was home-grown. Ira, instead of looking shocked, loved her for her honesty, and grinned:

"Now, that's where you have got something on me. Say, we're like a couple of sardines trying to make love in a tin can."

"It's cozy though," she said, and then vanished through the curtains and shyly ran the gauntlet of amused glances and over-cordial "Good mornings" till she hid her blushes behind the door of the women's room and turned the key. If she had thought of it she would have said, "God bless the man that invented doors—and the other angel that invented locks."

The passengers this morning were all a little briskeer than usual. It was the last day aboard for everybody and they showed a certain extra animation, like the inmates of an ocean liner when land has been sighted.

Ashton was shoving when Ira swayed into the men's room. Without pausing to note whom he was addressing, Ashton said out:

"Good morning. Did you rest well?"

"What?" Ira roared.

"Oh, excuse me!" said Ashton, hastily, devoting himself to a gash his razor had made in his cheek—even in that cheek of his.

Ira scrubbed out the basin, filled it and tried to dive into it, slapping the cold water in double handfuls over his glowing face and puffing through it like a porpoise.

Meanwhile the heavy-eyed Fosdick was slinking through the dining-car, regarded with amazement by Dr. Temple and his wife, who were already up and breakfasting.

"What's the matter with the bridal couples on this train, anyway?" said Dr. Temple.

"I can't imagine," said his wife, "we old couples are the only normal ones."

"Some more coffee, please, mother," he said.

"But your nerves," she protested.

"It's my vacation," he insisted.

Mrs. Temple stared at him and shook her head: "I wonder what mischief you'll be up to today? You've already been smoking, gambling, drinking—have you been swearing, yet?"

"Not yet," the old cregyman smiled, "I've been saving that up for a good occasion. Perhaps it will rise before the day's over."

And his wife choked on her tea at the wonderful train-change that had come over the best man in Ypsilanti.

By this time Fosdick had reached the stateroom from which he had been banished again at the Nevada state-line. He knocked cautiously. From within came an anxious voice:

"Who's there?"

"Whom did you expect?"

Mrs. Fosdick popped her head out like a Jill in the box. "Oh, it's you, Arthur. Kiss me good morning."

He glanced round stealthily and obeyed instructions: "I guess it's safe—my darling."

"Did you sleep, dovie?" she yawned. "Not a wink. They took off the Portland car at Granger and I had to sleep in one of the chairs in the observation room."

Mrs. Fosdick shook her head at him in mournful sympathy, and asked:

"What state are we in now?"

"A dreadful state—Nevada."

"Just what are we in Nevada?"

"I'm a bigamist, and you've never been married at all."

"Oh, these awful divorce laws!" she moaned, then left the general for the particular: "Won't you come in and hook me up?"

Fosdick looked shocked: "I don't dare compromise you."

"Will you take breakfast with me—in the dining-car?" she pleaded.

"Do we dare?"

"We might call it luncheon," she suggested.

He seized the chance: "All right, I'll go ahead and order, and you stroll in and I'll offer you the seat opposite me."

"But can't you hook me up?"

He was adamant: "Not till we get to California. Do you think I want to compromise my own wife? Shh! Somebody's coming!" And he darted off to the vestibule just as Mrs. Jimmie Wellington issued from number ten with hair askew, eyes only half open, and waist only half shut at the back. She made a quick spurt to the women's room, found it locked, stamped her foot, swore under her breath, and leaned against the wall of the car to wait.

About the same time, the man who was still her husband according to the law, rolled out of berth number two. There was an amazing clarity to his vision. He lurched as he made his way to the men's room, but it was plainly the train's swerve and not an inner lurch that twisted the forthright of his progress.

He squeezed into the men's room like a whole crowd at once, and sang out, "Good morning, all!" with a wonderful heartiness. Then he paused over a wash basin, rubbed his hands gleefully and proclaimed, like another Chantecler advertising a new day:

"Well—I'm sober again!"

"Three cheers for you," said his rival in radiance, bridegroom Lathrop.

"How does it feel?" demanded Ashton, smiling so broadly that he encountered the lather on his brush.

While he sputtered Wellington was flipping water over his hot head and incidentally over Ashton.

"I feel," he chorled, "I feel like the first little robin redbreast of the merry springtime. Tweet! Tweet!"

When the excitement over his redemption had somewhat calmed, Ashton reopened the old topic of conversation:

"Well, I see they had another scrap last night."

"They—who?" said Ira, through his flying toothbrush.

"The Mallorys. Once more he occupied number three and she number seven."

"Well, well, I can't understand these modern marriages," said Little Jimmie, with a side glance at Ira. Ira suddenly remembered the plight of the Mallorys and was tempted to defend them, but he saw the young lieutenant himself just entering the washroom. This was more than Wellington saw, for he went on talking from behind a towel:

"Well, if I were a bridegroom and had a bride like that, it would take more than a quarrel to send me to another berth."

The others made gestures which he could not see. His enlightenment came when Mallory snapped the towel from his hands and glared into his face with all the righteous wrath of a man hearing his domestic affairs publicly discussed.

"Were you alluding to me, Mr. Wellington?" he demanded, hotly.

Little Jimmie almost perished with apoplexy: "You, you?" he mumbled. "Why, of course not. You're not the only bridegroom on the train."

Mallory tossed him the towel again: "You meant Mr. Lathrop then?"

"Me! Not much!" roared the indignant Lathrop.

Mallory returned to Wellington with a fiercer: "Whom, then?"

He was in a dangerous mood, and Ashton came to the rescue: "Oh, don't mind Wellington. He's not sober yet."

This inspired suggestion came like a life-buoy to the hard-pressed Wellington. He seized it and spoke thickly: "Don't mind me—I'm not sober yet."

"Well, it's a good thing you're not," was Mallory's final growl as he began his own toilet.

The porter's bell began to ring furiously, with a touch they had already come to recognize as the Englishman's. The porter had learned to recognize it, too, and he always took double the necessary time to answer it. He was sauntering down the aisle at his most leisurely gait when Wedgewood's rumbled mane shot out from the curtains like a lion's from a jungle, and he belowed: "Pawtah! Pawtah!"

"Still on the train," said the porter.

"You may give me my portman-teau."

"Yassah." He dragged it from the upper berth, and set it inside Wedgewood's berth without special care as to its destination. "Does you desire anything else, sir?"

"Yes, your absence," said Wedgewood.

"The same to you and many of them," the porter muttered to himself, and added to Marjorie, who was just starting down the aisle: "I'll certainly be interested in that man gittin' where he's goin' to git to."

Nothing that she carried Snoozleums, he said: "We're comin' into a station right soon." Without further discussion she handed him the dog, and he hobbled away.

When she reached the women's door, she found Mrs. Wellington waiting with increasing exasperation: "Come, join the line at the box office," she said.

"Good morning. Who's in there?" said Marjorie, and Mrs. Wellington, not noting that Mrs. Whitcomb had come out of her berth and fallen into line, answered sharply:

"I don't know. She's been there forever. I'm sure it's that cat of a Mrs. Whitcomb."

"Good morning, Mrs. Mallory," snapped Mrs. Whitcomb.

Mrs. Wellington was rather proud that the random shot landed, but Marjorie felt most uneasy between the two tigresses: "Good morning, Mrs. Whitcomb," she said. There was a disagreeable silence, broken finally by Mrs. Wellington's: "Oh, Mrs. Mallory, would you be angelic enough to hook my gown?"

"Of course I will," said Marjorie. "May I hook you?" said Mrs. Whitcomb.

"You're awfully kind," said Marjorie, presenting her shoulders to Mrs. Whitcomb, who asked with malicious sweetness: "Why didn't your husband do this for you this morning?"

"I-I don't remember," Marjorie stammered, and Mrs. Wellington tossed over-shoulder an apothegm: "He's no husband till he's hook-broken."

Just then Mrs. Fosdick came out of her stateroom. Seeing Mrs. Whitcomb's waist agape, she went at it with a brief, "Good morning, everybody. Permit me."

Mrs. Wellington twisted her head to say "Good morning" and to ask, "Are you hooked, Mrs. Fosdick?"

"Not yet," pouted Mrs. Fosdick. "Turn round and back up," said Mrs. Wellington. After some maneuvering, the women formed a complete circle, and fingers plied hooks and eyes in a veritable Ladies' Mutual Aid Society.

By now, Wedgewood was ready to appear in a bathrobe about as gaudy as the royal standard of Great Britain. He stalked down the aisle, and answered the male chorus's cheery "Good morning" with a ramlike "Baw."

Ira Lathrop felt amiable even toward the foreigner, and he observed: "Glorious morning this morning."

"I dare say," growled Wedgewood. "I don't go in much for mawnings—especially when I have no tub."

Wellington felt called upon to squelch him: "You Englishmen never had a real tub till we Americans sold 'em to you."

"I dare say," said Wedgewood indifferently. "You sell 'em. We use 'em. But, do you know, I've just thought out a ripping idea. I shall have my cold bath this mawning after all."

"What are you going to do?" growled Lathrop. "Crawl in the ice-water tank?"

"Oh, dear, no. I shouldn't be let," and he produced from his pocket a rubber hose. "I simply affix this little tube to one end of the spigot and wave the sprinkler hiah over my—er—my person."

Lathrop stared at him pityingly, and demanded: "What happens to the water, then?"

"What do I care?" said Wedgewood. "You durned fool, you'd flood the car."

Wedgewood's high hopes withered. "I hadn't thought of that," he sighed. "I suppose I must continue just as I am till I reach San Francisco. The first thing I shall order tonight will be four cold tubs and a lemon squash."

While the men continued to make themselves presentable in a huddle, the hook-and-eye society at the other end of the car finished with the four waists, and Mrs. Fosdick hurried away to keep her tryst in the dining-car. The three remaining relapsed into dreary attitudes. Mrs. Wellington shook the knob of the forbidding door, and turned to complain: "What in heaven's name ails the creature in there. She must have fallen out of the window."

"It's outrageous," said Marjorie, "the way women violate women's rights."

Mrs. Whitcomb saw an opportunity to insert a stiletto. She observed to Marjorie, with an innocent air: "Why, Mrs. Mallory, I've even known women to lock themselves in there and smoke!"

While Mrs. Wellington was rummaging her brain for a fitting retort, the door opened, and out stepped Miss Gattie, as was.

She blushed furiously at sight of the committee waiting to greet her, but they repented their criticisms and tried to make up for them by the excessive warmth with which they all exclaimed at once: "Good morning, Mrs. Lathrop!"

"Good morning, who?" said Anne, then blushed yet redder: "Oh, I can't seem to get used to that name! I hope I haven't kept you waiting?"

"Oh, not at all!" the women insisted, and Anne fled to number six, remembered that this was no longer her home, and moved on to number one. Here the porter was just finishing his restoring tasks, and laying aside with some diffidence two garments which Anne hastily stuffed into her own valise.

Meanwhile Marjorie was pushing Mrs. Wellington ahead:

"You go first, Mrs. Wellington."

"You go first. I have no husband waiting for me," said Mrs. Wellington.

"Oh, I insist," said Marjorie. "I couldn't think of it," persisted Mrs. Wellington. "I won't allow you."

And then Mrs. Whitcomb pushed them both aside: "Pardon me, won't you? I'm getting off at Reno."

"So am I," gasped Mrs. Wellington, rushing forward, only to be faced by the slam of the door and the click of the key. She whirled back to demand of Marjorie: "Did you ever hear of such impudence?"

"I never did."

"I'll never be ready for Reno," Mrs. Wellington waited, "and I haven't had my breakfast."

"You'd better order it in advance," said Marjorie. "It takes that chef an hour to boil an egg three minutes."

"I will, if I can ever get my face washed," sighed Mrs. Wellington.

And now Mrs. Anne Lathrop, after much hesitation, called timidly, "Porter—porter—please!"

"Yes—miss—missus!" he amended. "Will you call my—" she gulped—"my husband?"

"Yes, ma'am," the porter chuckled, and putting his grinning head in at the men's door, he bowed to Ira and said: "Excuse me, but you are sent for by the lady in number one."

Ashton slapped him on the back and roared: "Oh, you married man!"

"Well," said Ira, in self-defense, "I don't hear anybody sending for you." Wedgewood grinned at Ashton. "I rather fancy he had you theah, old top, eh, what?"

Ira appeared at number one, and bending over his treasure-trove, spoke in a voice that was pure saccharine: "Are you ready for breakfast, dear?"

"Yes, Ira."

"Come along to the dining-car."

"It's cosier here," she said. "Couldn't we have it served here?"

"But it'll get all cold, and I'm hungry," pouted the old bachelor, to whom breakfast was a sacred institution.

"All right, Ira," said Anne, glad to be meek; "come along," and she rose. Ira hesitated. "Still, if you'd rather, we'll eat here." He sat down.

"Oh, not at all," said Anne; "we'll go where you want to go."

"But I want to do what you want to do."

"So do I—we'll go," said Anne. "We'll stay."

"No, I insist on the dining-car."

"Oh, all right, have your own way," said Ira, as if he were being bullied, and liked it. Anne smiled at the contrariness of men, and Ira smiled at the contrariness of women, and when they reached the vestibule they kissed each other in mutual forgiveness.

As Wedgewood stropped an old-fashioned razor, he said to Ashton, who was putting up his safety equipment: "I say, old party, are those safety razors safe? Can't you really cut yourself?"

"Cut everything but hair," said Ashton, pointing to his wounded chin.

Mallory put out his hand: "Would you be kind enough to lend me your razor again this morning?"

"Sure thing," said Ashton. "You'll find your blade in the box there."

Mallory then negotiated the loan of one more fresh shirt from the Englishman, and a clean collar from Ashton. He rejoiced that the end of the day would bring him in touch with his own baggage. Four days of foraging on the country was enough for this soldier.

Also he felt, now that he and Marjorie had lived thus long, they could survive somehow till evening brought them to San Francisco, where there were hundreds of ministers. And then the conductor must ruin his early morning optimism, though he made his appearance in the washroom with genial good mornings for all.

Mallory acknowledged the greeting, and asked offhandedly: "By the way, how's she running?"

The conductor answered even more offhandedly: "About two hours late—and losin'."

Mallory was transfixed with a new fear: "Good Lord, my transport sails at sunrise."

"Oh, we ought to make Frisco by midnight, anyway."

"Midnight, and sail at daylight!"

"Unless we lose a little more time."

Mallory realized that every new day managed to create its own anxieties. With the regularity of a milkman, each morning left a fresh crisis on his doorstep.

AUSTRIA'S HEIR HAS A "WHITE ELEPHANT"

Archduke Francis Ferdinand, who will succeed to the imperial throne of Austria at the death of the Emperor Francis Joseph, has a white elephant on his hands in the shape of one of the most magnificent dwellings on earth—the Villa d'Este at Tivoli, 25 miles from Rome. It costs him $50,000 a year to keep it up, and he has been unable either to let or sell it or give it away.

Although a rich man he can ill bear this useless drain on his resources, for almost all his money is spent in backing the Austrian newspapers which voice his ideas, and in training up Austria in the way he wants it to go. Last year he tried to present it to the Austrian nation, but the ministry were not prepared to sanction an annual outlay of $50,000. This year he decided to start an artists' home there. The Artists' association declared that they had no money to maintain the costly pile, and so it still goes begging. His bitter antagonism to Italy and everything Italian prevents him from using it himself.

The villa, together with the numerous Este millions, came to the archduke through his kinsman, Francis V., last duke of Modena, who died childless in 1875. Este is the proudest, oldest line in Europe, and from it came Henry the Lion and the Brunswickian, Hanoverian and British dynasties.

Painters and poets have raved over the fantastic beauty of this miraculous, towering structure that nobody wants. It is a Renaissance palace, built in 1549 by Pierro Ligo. Its flights of steps, its terraces, grottos, basins and cascades, above all its gardens are famous; and the palace itself embodies the fantastical architecture of the sixteenth century, which loved steep and piled-up masses, and dizzy perspective. Shelley called it "Intoxicating." Caruncle declared it the earthy Paradise.

Francis Ferdinand is the most voluminous of present day royal authors and made his debut in literature 20 years ago. He has written several historical works and has also published two volumes of verses. He is also a contributor to technical publications and has written many articles on engineering and kindred subjects.

MRS. CLEVELAND ATTENDS
DOLLY MADISON PARTY

An interesting spring event was the breakfast given by several prominent women at Washington on May 20. Like the Jefferson day banquet given annually on the birthday anniversary of Thomas Jefferson, the breakfast on May 20 was to honor the patron saint chosen by the women who gave the entertainment, Mrs. James Madison.

the one woman of all who have presided in the home of presidents who has been handed down to fame under the abbreviated Christian name. One of the women most prominent at the gathering was Mrs. Grover Cleveland, widow of the late president.

The beloved "Dolly" during her long life was said to be the most popular woman in the country. Washington was in its beginning when she first became identified with it, and that she could take the threads of its scattered existence and from them weave the fabric upon which rests the social life which it knows today is evidence of her extraordinary personality.

For nearly sixteen years she dominated the social life of the white house, first as the wife of the secretary of state during the administration of Mr. Jefferson, who was a widow, and later during Mr. Madison's administration. She handed out the prizes at dancing school commencements, advised the daughters of Mr. Jefferson in questions of social and domestic import, made smooth the paths of luckless diplomats assigned by their governments to the wastes and wilds of the Washington of that day, with a carriage full of state papers turned her back gracefully on an invading army, took snuff with Henry Clay of Kentucky and was ever the adorable Dolly.

Out-of-Date Aeroplanes.

European aviation experts now declare that the aeroplanes that are more than a few months old—those that may have survived half a dozen flights—are no longer serviceable, when compared with newer types of the same makes. It has happened to these airships as to the war vessels of a few years ago, they have become passe, superseded by improved types. It has also been noted that James Valentine, an English aviator, has had an experience which may account for some of the recent fatalities in aviation. Mr. Valentine says he was flying alone at a height of about 1,500 feet when he lost consciousness and had no recollection of what followed until he found himself within a hundred feet of the ground, where he fortunately landed without hurt. He ascribes his loss of consciousness to the cold air, after having been in the warmer climate of north Africa.

The Coughs of Children

They may not cough today, but what about tomorrow? Better be prepared for it when it comes. Ask your doctor about keeping Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house.

Then when the hard cold or cough first appears you have a doctor's medicine at hand. This cough medicine is especially good for children.

No anodynes. No alcohol.

Many a child is called dull and stupid when the whole trouble is due to a lazy liver. We firmly believe your own doctor will tell you that an occasional dose of Ayer's Pills, sugar-coated, will do such children a great deal of good. Ask him.

Method of Carrying Cold Meats When Traveling Is Worth Keeping in the Memory—Variation on the Sandwich.

The needs of travelers, people at picnics, or out door parties, church suppers, etc., have been provided for by the makers of cook books for several centuries back. Recently in a splendid and sensible old book, published in 1730, is found an idea in reference to a nice means of carrying cold meats when traveling that is worth remembering.

If, instead of the loaves mentioned, small rolls were used, the inside buttered before they were filled with a dainty minced meat, we should have a variation of the sandwich. The following is the recipe in question:

"Traveling Loaves—Take chickens, or pullets, pheasants, or partridges, or rabbits, and a neck of mutton or lamb, and roast it off cold, and cut your fowl in joints and your mutton into cutlets; take large French loaves of three pence apiece, or other bread; cut a hole in the top and scoop out the most part of the crumbs. You may put fowl into one loaf, mutton or lamb into another, a salad mogundy into another, and sliced ham and tongue into another, putting a little salt in a paper with your fresh meat, and as you travel you may eat anywhere on the road in your coach . . . without staying by the way."

The author of this recipe had served as cook for lords on "splendid embassies," for earls and barons, and for great generals sent into Spain and elsewhere to command. He thus had ample experience in preparing food for traveling expeditions.

The next recipe is somewhat rambling. It was written out for a certain pastor's wife when her husband changed from one charge to another. She vouches for the excellence of the meat so prepared in a large quantity.

"Pressed Fresh Meat—Take the lower end of the shin for the sake of the jelly and the lower part of the round for the solid meat. Boil the two together slowly until the meat drops off the bone. Then chop the meat, but not very fine, and add salt and pepper and powdered sage, seasoning to taste. Add the liquor left in the kettle to the chopped meat and stir well; then pack the meat in small bread pans to cool. It will harden and be solid without any weight upon it to press it. For a large quantity you will need the entire shin if you are to have plenty of liquor to add to the meat, say a quart or three pints, according to the amount of meat. You may think this amount will make it too soft, but it will not. The fat may need to be skimmed from the liquor if much rises."

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson VI.—Fourth Quarter, For Nov. 10, 1912.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Hos. vii.—Memory Verse, 2.—Golden Text, Isa. v, 11 (R.
V.).—Commentary Prepared by Rev.
D. M. Stearns.

I am in doubt about this chapter being the one assigned for the world's temperance Sunday, but it is the one on the printed slip of lessons for the year, and we will find a profitable study by taking some statements from the whole book, which we must consider in order to understand this chapter. There being no memory verse, I have suggested verse 2, because our great failure as well as theirs is that we do not consider Isa. i, 3; v, 12; xlv, 19; Mark vi, 52. As to our own doings, they are the great hindrance and keep so many from turning to God (Hos. v, 4, and margin). As to the king, made glad by lies and wickedness, joining hands with scorners and giving himself bottles of wine (verses 3-7). Ahaz would fill the bill perfectly (II Chron. xxviii, 1-4, 19). Pride, drunkenness, rebellion against God, giving strength to strangers and unconscious but manifest physical failure (verses 9, 10, 13, 14) are some characteristics of the drunkard set forth in these verses.

In verses 11, 16, we see reliance upon human help instead of upon God, and we are reminded of the many cures for drunkenness tried in homes for inebriates, when there is only one that can really deliver. He is always ready to have mercy and may be heard saying to the drunkard and to every sinner, "Thou hast destroyed thyself, but in Me is thine help" (vi, 6; xlii, 9). Israel, here called Ephraim, is spoken of in many ways and by many figures regarding their turning away from the Lord, and these words are true also of all sinners: "Destroyed for lack of knowledge, forgotten the law of God, left off to take heed to the Lord, have sown the wind and shall reap the whirlwind, have plowed wickedness and shall reap iniquity" (iv, 6, 10; viii, 7, x, 13). The cry of the Lord to the wandering ones to return to Him is heard in such words as these: "Return unto the Lord thy God, for thou hast fallen by thine iniquity. Take with you words and turn to the Lord.  I will heal their backsliding; I will love them freely" (xv, 1, 2, 4).

Two remarkable figures describing the professed people of God in their wanderings from Him are, "A cake not turned," "An empty vine bringing forth fruit unto himself" (vii, 8; x, 1), suggesting the life that is right outwardly, but wrong on the other side, and also the life which seeks only its own happiness. Drunkards, opium fiends and such like are, of all people, apt to be the most selfish and unreasonable and rebellious, counting all others foolish and mad, joined to their idols, and desiring to be let alone (ix, 7; iv, 16). Yet for even such there is deliverance if they will only turn to the Lord. Prophecy has become to me a fascinating study since I began to receive it as a light shining in a dark place—the words of the Holy Spirit by holy men, that we might know what God is doing and is going to do, written for our learning that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope (II Pet. i, 19-21; Amos iii, 7; Rom. xv, 4); since I have also found that He, Jesus Christ Himself, and His people Israel are the center of all the prophecy and that everywhere His and their glorious future is predicted as bringing blessing to the whole world (Acts x, 43; Rev. xix, 10; Isa. ix, 1-3; Isai. 1-3). In all prophecy He tells Israel plainly their sins, rebukes them, pleads with them, chastens them, but always tells of a glorious future, when they shall see evil no more, after they shall have truly repented and received their Messiah.

We might not have thought that Hos. xi, 1, had any reference to Christ. "When Israel was a child, then I loved him and called my Son out of Egypt," if we had not read it in Matt. ii, 15. But everywhere there are such plain or hidden references to Him. See His and their glorious resurrection in chapter vi, 2, 3: "After two days will He revive us. In the third day He will raise us up, and we shall live in His sight.  His going forth is prepared as the morning."

In the revised version that last clause is "sure as the morning." Rotherham translates it, "Like the dawn is His coming forth assured." And another translates it, "His coming is as certain as the dawn." It is perfectly in accordance with Hab. ii, 3; Heb. x, 37. "Though it tarry, wait for it, because it will surely come, it will not tarry." "For yet a little while, and He that shall come will come and will not tarry." In the context of these two and in two other places we have the four times repeated saying, "The just shall live by faith" (Hab. ii, 4; Rom. i, 17; Gal. iii, 11; Heb. x, 38). May we follow on diligently to know the Lord until we see Him face to face.

The words in Hos. xiii, 14, concerning death and the grave take us to Isa. xxv, 8, 9, and on to I Cor. xv, 26, 54, 55; Rev. xxi, 4, when the last enemy, death, shall be destroyed and from such words as these I feel authorized to say that God hates death. What more important word could we have for our sons than Hos. xii, 6: "Turn thou to thy God. Keep mercy and judgment and wait on thy God continually." The message is not Hosea's, but the word of the Lord by Hosea, who was contemporary with Isaiah (Hos. i, 1, 2).

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week
Beginning Nov. 10, 1912.

Topic.—Temperance progress over the world.—Mal. iii, 13-18; iv, 1-6. (World's temperance Sunday.) Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The temperance cause should enlist and is enlisting the interest of nearly every nation in the world. There is probably no nation in the world's history that has not been cursed by some form of intoxication. Every nation has its national beverage, the excessive use of which causes drunkenness, with all its accompanying miseries and horrors. Canon Farrar long since denounced intemperance as "the national sin of England." It has been asserted that "the drink traffic is the national peril of France." Opium is the greatest curse of China, and the terrible effects of strong drink and of drugs in the United States are absolutely appalling. It is little wonder, therefore, that the world should be interested in destroying such evils and that there should be movements in almost every land to curb intemperance and to advance the cause of sobriety.

The religious world is making temperance progress. Christianity has always opposed the curse of strong drink, and the great historic movements against intemperance have had their inspiration in religion. Every Christian church throughout the world is essentially a temperance organization in that it opposes intemperance and advocates sobriety, and through its efforts thousands and thousands have been saved from forming the drink habit, and thousands of others who have formed the habit have been reclaimed. The temperance work of the church is more successful today than ever before. Its efforts have enlisted the support of other powerful agencies. The great Christian denominations have their organized temperance work, and Christian people by their money and influence are doing much to advance the temperance cause.

In the political world temperance progress is being made. In spite of the evil effects of intemperance political action until recently, so far as this gigantic curse was concerned, amounted to practically nothing. But the reverse is true today. The state has at last been aroused to its duties. Rulers of kingdoms are denouncing drunkenness and urging temperance. Emperor William has denounced beer drinking in Germany. The king of Denmark favors national prohibition. China is calling upon England to stop the importation of opium from India. The government of Italy is investigating the liquor traffic and its results in that country. Sweden has voted for prohibition. Influential nations in confederation must soon stop the importation of rum into parts of Africa. The greatest progress from a political standpoint is being made in the United States. Over one-half the geographic area of the United States is now under prohibition through state wide laws or local option. Nine states in the Union have state wide prohibition laws, and the number will speedily be increased. The teaching in the public schools of the physical effects of intemperance is a powerful influence for good upon the rising generations. The saloon influence in politics is declining, and when the saloon goes, as it must, the cause of temperance in our land will have won its greatest victory, and the dawning of a bright day will be assured.

In the industrial world temperance progress is being made. The great industries of our land, especially the railroads, are demanding that their employees be not addicted to the use of alcoholic drink. A disastrous wreck last summer, supposed to be caused by the drunkenness of a railroad engineer, has caused some railroad lines, notably the Pennsylvania, to take a most advanced step upon this subject. Hitherto employees were prohibited from drinking while on duty. The rule now is that they must not indulge in strong drink either on duty or off duty—in short, that they must be total abstainers. The Pullman company has recently decided not to serve liquors on its cars east of Pittsburgh. Progress is certainly being made, and, while the struggle may yet be long, final victory is assured.

Rev. A. A. FARMVILLE AFFAIRS.

Events of Importance Happened and Were Duly Noted.

By DONALD ALLEN.

There was more excitement in the sleepy old village of Farmville than had been known for 20 years before. Event had followed event until Deacon Chambers had stood on the post-office steps and wiped the sweat from his brow and said:

"By heck, if this thing keeps up we shall have a railroad and dry goods drummer in here before we die!"

The events were of importance enough to be recorded in chronological order:

First, the widow Bevin sued Elder Jarvis for breach-of-promise and was given a verdict of one hundred dollars. That was ten dollars a year for the ten years he had been courting her.

Secondly, close on the heels of the widow's suit had come a gale of wind that had twisted the spire of the Baptist church until it resembled a gigantic corkscrew. Some of the congregation were in favor of a new spire at once, and others argued that time should be given Providence to twist it back at its own expense.

In the third place, Aunt Hannah Doty, who laid claim to being a seventh daughter of a seventh daughter, predicted that the judgment day was only thirty days off. No one put entire faith in her prediction, but a Bible man had come along and sold 28 of the good books in one day, and each book was conspicuously displayed on the parlor center table.

Fourthly, Mr. Gerald Walters, a young man, had come down from the city for the fall shooting, and was stopping at the tavern. There was nothing but a few stray chipmunks to shoot, but Mr. Walters wasn't making any fuss about it. He was the first fall shooter that had ever appeared in the village.

Fifthly, Mr. Walters hadn't been shooting at chipmunks but four days when Miss Kitty Dorland came down from the city to stay with her grandparents for a few days. There was wondering and guessing over her, and for several nights after her arrival

He Couldn't Gain a Foot.

many of the householders did not go to bed until the unholy hour of 9:30. It was generally considered that feverish heat had been reached, and that the excitement must now gradually subside. They were all wrong.

Sixthly, bills were posted for a circus to show at Farmville. It was the usual Mammoth Aggregation, but it had one feature never shown before in any circus on the face of the globe. It had a wild man from Africa who lived on raw meat and bananas, and who had to be kept chained in a cage.

The name of the wild man was "Zam." He consumed sixteen pounds of raw meat daily, and on top of that, three times a week, he devoured a bunch of bananas.

He was the strongest man, wild or tame, this world ever saw.

He could kill an elephant at one blow. He could run down the ostrich or tear a lion limb from limb. At a certain point in the performance he would be taken from his cage by three men and paraded around the ring.

For three or four days previous to the circus all work in and around Farmville was stopped, and for the first time in twenty years staid old citizens forgot to shut the hen house door or feed the pig at sundown. On the morning of the great day itself the strain was so intense that Deacon Chambers was impelled to say from the postoffice steps:

"I guess the outside world will know where Farmville is after this! I've al-lus told you fellers that we'd have our boom when the sign come right, and here she are!"

It wasn't much of a circus, even for a village. There was an aged elephant, a wreck of a camel and a giraffe whose neck reached out for anything eatable, while the tumbling and riding could have been beaten by a lot of farmers' boys. The wild man was the draw. He was in his cage in the procession all right and now and then he beat his breast and called out.

But things had happened the day before that the public hadn't caught on to. In driving across the country the wild man who could run down an ostrich had said to his employer:

"I've got to have my back salary tomorrow or I quit!"

"I'll give you ten of it, if we have luck," was the reply.

"I want every stiver of it!"

"What's biting you?"

"I'm not playing wild man for my health!"

"You know you can't strike another job if you leave me, while I can get a dozen fellows to fill your place."

That was about all, except that "Zam" planned a plan to be carried out at Farmville, and it was carried out. He went ahead and ate his raw meat and bananas and shouted all right, but when he was taken out of his cage to be paraded he whispered to his employer:

"Do I get the back salary?"

"Go on with you!"

"Do I get it?"

"Nix!"

Then occurred a thing that never happened on this green earth before and will never happen again. "Zam" threw off his yoke of slavery then and there. He yelled. He whooped. He cast away his chains, and after seizing Aunt Hannah Doty by the body and throwing her across the sawdust ring he made a break for the tent entrance and went running down the highway. No more raw meat and bananas! No more "greatest exhibition on earth," for the Ringtailed Circus.

But what has all this to do with Miss Kitty Dorland and Mr. Gerald Walters? Simply that Mr. Walters didn't know that Miss Kitty was within a hundred miles of him, and vice versa.

Simply that Mr. Walters was at the circus and Miss Kitty wasn't. Simply that Mr. Walters came very near being rough-housed instead of Aunt Hannah. Simply that when "Zam" left the tent Mr. Walters was at his heels, and Miss Kitty was walking in her grandfather's daisy covered meadow a mile away.

Mr. Walters was a good sprinter, and he put forth every effort to over-haul the dangerous menace striving to escape from bondage and become a terror to a peaceful community. He couldn't gain a foot, but he was game to hang to the trail as long as he could.

The wild man took the middle of the highway and held it until he came opposite the meadow. Miss Kitty was sitting under a tree, weaving a wreath for somebody's brow. "Zam" wanted to get to the woods to shake off pursuit, and he must pass her within a few feet. She saw him—she shrieked—she sprang up—she saw Mr. Walters lumbering along, and then she fainted and keeled over. Something told her that it was a wild man from Africa, and that he intended to make cat's meat of her, and it was quite sensible of her to faint. She fainted so quickly that she didn't hear him call to her:

"Don't be scared, Missy! I'm only a man in disguise!"

And she was dead to the world as he checked his pace long enough to add: "I don't blame her a darned bit! Hope it will cost old Ringtail ten bones extra!"

"Zam" got into the woods and pursuit was off. Mr. Walters, puffing and blowing, came up to find a good looking girl huddled among the daisies, and he ran to a brook and got water in his hat and sopped her face, making the usual mess of it. By and by Miss Kitty found herself sitting up and saying:

"Oh, that horrid thing!"

"But it's gone."

"And you were so brave! Please take me home."

At a slow walk, and leaning heavily on his arm, grandpa's was reached. It was reached again that evening, and the next day and the next. In fact Mr. Walters felt it his duty to pay a call at least once a day until sure that the wild man had returned to his mother in Michigan. And all this resulted in Deacon Chambers speaking from the postoffice steps for the third time and saying:

"Darn my hat, but what do you fellows think now?"

"What is it?"

"That chipmunk killer and the gal that fainted away are sittin' up nights together, and if that don't mean love and marriage I'll saw the horns off my best cow!"

Quick Answer.

Barbara's mother wished to teach the little girl the precious lesson of self-control, so she allowed her to eat two chocolate creams, then she put a third one on the table and said, "Now, Bab, this is yours, too, but I want you to save it. While I am out of the room you say, 'Good St. Joseph, help me!'"

When the lady returned there was no chocolate cream in sight. Barbara, however, offered an explanation without being asked.

"Oh, mother," she cried dramatically, "I said, 'Good St. Joseph, help me!' and he said, 'Help yourself, little girl, just help yourself.' So of course I did."

New Theory Regarding Cocoanuts.

The Fort Scott Tribune tells of a small boy in that town who was reading a book and between every line he would ask a question. After he had got through asking, "Why is a cow?" the father got disgusted and said: "Now, Frank, I will let you ask me just one more question, then you will have to be still." In a few minutes Frank looked up and asked, "Papa, do cocoanuts grow?" "Why, certainly, my son," returned the man. The boy looked puzzled for some time and then he returned, "Why, I thought monkeys laid them."

The Love Letters of a Confederate General

WE begin in the November issue a series of real love-letters written over fifty years ago by one of our national heroes to his sweetheart during the period of '61 to '65. This great general will go down to posterity as having accomplished one of the most brilliant feats of arms in the history of the world. He was as great a lover as he was a general, therefore these letters combine authentic history and exquisite romance. They sound a human note that no other work of literature has done in a decade; it is war, it is romance, it is history, it is literature. You simply can't afford to miss this wonderful series—an inside story of the Civil War now published for the first time and containing all the freshness of a contemporary happening. These letters will grip you hard, and hold your interest from first to last. Fill out the coupon and send it now before you forget it.

ENTERTAINMENTS FOR FARMERS.

Free entertainments are given to rural communities in some counties in Alabama as part of a campaign to induce the people to stay on the land instead of abandoning their farms for city life. This information has been received by the United States bureau of education from E. M. Shackelford, principal of the state normal school at Troy, Pike county, Alabama, who is at the head of the movement. Mr. Shackelford writes:

"In my opinion, the exodus of the younger generation from the country to the town is at present the most serious menace to our general welfare. Good roads, motor cars, the telephone and rural mail delivery are improving rural conditions greatly, but rural social life does not yet afford the opportunities for the commerce of ideas that an active, reading, thinking public demands. Hence the tendency to congregate in the centers of population, and hence this effort of ours to afford a few social opportunities through a course of free entertainments."

The entertainments consist mainly of lectures, "lantern shows," and selections on the Victrola. Some of the lectures are given at night, and some in the afternoon. Occasionally dinner is provided at the school and an all-day session is held.

While this movement was started by the Troy State Normal school, the co-operation of the Alabama state health and medical departments and the various state institutions has been enlisted for supplying speakers, entertainment clubs and other attractions. Most of the entertainers give their services without charge, and transportation is furnished by the owners of automobiles. Friends of the new movement anticipate that it will be a powerful factor wherever introduced in adding to the pleasures of rural life by furnishing additional opportunities to the country folk for recreation, culture and social intercourse.

Practical if Not Poetic.

W. N. Howells, at a luncheon at Kitter Point, said of a certain popular novelist:

"There is about as much poetry in his as there is in McMaisters."

McMaisters, you know, was walking with a beautiful girl in a wild New England wood.

"What is your favorite flower, Mr. McMaisters?" the girl asked softly.

"McMaisters thought a moment, then cleared his throat and answered: 'Well, I believe I like the whole wheat flour that the Star'—"

TIME "VIA WIRELESS."

The new wireless station at Arlington which will be completed in about a month will act as a clock regulator for thousands of jewelers all over the country.

The right time as recorded at the naval observatory will be flashed all along the coast and as far west as the system will reach. The towers are expected to communicate with vessels three thousand miles at sea, but the exact distance they will command over land has not been calculated to a nicety. It is believed that messages will be recorded at least 1,500 miles inland.

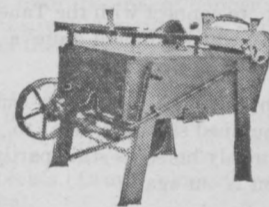

Many large jewelry stores have notified the navy department that they intend to install wireless receivers so they can get the right time regularly "via wireless."

TO MODIFY BROOK TROUT.

Uncle Sam is going to try to produce a trout that can live and prosper in the warm water of the sluggish streams of the southern states. An experimental fish station will be established near Washington for that purpose. Congress has provided the money for the work.

The fighting brook trout is to be modified, domesticated and made to furnish more food and less sport for the human family. The experts of the bureau of fisheries hope to succeed in getting a trout that will fill the bill, but they recall the fact that many years ago fifty million Pacific coast salmon were planted in the Mississippi river and perished.

ROAD EXPERTS NEEDED.

A practical effort to bring the supply of expert highway engineers to the point where they will be numerous enough to meet the demand for their services is to be made at the American Road Congress, to be held on the Million-Dollar Pier, in Atlantic City, September 30 to October 5. At the present time, with the people of the United States spending more than $200,000,000 a year for the improvement of highways, the demand for expert highway engineers exceeds the supply. There is to be a conference of educational institutions at the American Road Congress, to be directed by the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education, and through this conference efforts are to be made to induce the leading universities to establish specific and practical courses for the instruction of highway engineers.

At the present time there are about 12 universities devoting some attention to highway engineering. The instruction in this branch of engineering, however, is, in most cases, merely a part of the general training of engineers, so that there will be a sufficient number of trained men to handle the great problem that has been thrust upon the United States by the widespread agitation for a better system of public highways that will reduce the cost of hauling crops and permit shipments by farmers at all seasons of the year.

Prof. Henry H. Norris of Cornell university is secretary of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education, which is composed of officials of the leading educational institutions having engineering departments. Professor Norris has just sent letters to all the institutions which are represented in their society asking them to appoint delegates to represent them at the convention, which will be part of the American Road Congress at Atlantic City. Prof. William T. Magruder, of the Ohio state university, is president of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education, while the vice-presidents are Prof. L. S. Marks of Harvard and Prof. F. W. Sperr of the Michigan College of Mines. They believe that if the universities will supply well-equipped engineers it will be a long step towards doing away with the careless supervision of the construction and maintenance of public roads, that now results in the loss of a large percent of the money invested in roads.

The Boston Male Quartet appeared, on Wednesday evening, in the first number of our entertainment course. Owing to the fact that two of the members were afflicted with colds, their vocal numbers lacked brilliancy and power, but were rendered with harmony, and to the pretty general satisfaction of a fine audience. Mr. Stowell's violin performance was especially fine, and on the whole the gentlemen acquitted themselves well, as all around musicians, though it was apparent that they were handicapped through not feeling in good trim, physically.

A meeting in the interest of the Progressive candidates, has been billed for Taneytown, this Friday night.

Mrs. Edgar McCauley and Miss Gaynell Young, of Baltimore, visited at the home of J. N. O. Smith, near town, this week.

Down in Dixie will be presented at the Opera House, Thursday, Nov. 7, by a first-class company. There is pathos and a few tears, with plenty of good clean fun. It is a play as pure in tone as "Show Acres" and the "Old Homestead." There will be a Band parade at noon. Reserved seats now on sale at McKinney's. (Advertisement.)

There is no "peanut gallery" in the Opera House. A great many were annoyed, on Wednesday night, by the crushing of peanut shells during the program, an indulgence, by the way, which is against the rules of the Opera House. Those who feasted on "goobers" on this occasion will perhaps save themselves embarrassment, hereafter, if they will either postpone their feast, or have it before coming.

The news, on election night, will be handled in an orderly way by the C. & P. This service will be kept up until a very late (or early) hour, and will represent "the latest" received at Westminster. Nothing will be gained by trying to get more news.

Ate Knives and Spikes.

Pittsfield, Mass., Oct. 28.—Surgeons in the House of Mercy Hospital today took 132 nails of various sizes, two keys, a buttonhook and a piece of iron from the stomach of Luke Parsons, the "human ostrich." Parsons was preparing for his annual Thanksgiving feast, and while in training was troubled with what he termed a slight attack of indigestion. The surgeons diagnosed his case as peritonitis and performed an operation. A sharp nail had punctured the abdomen and had caused the trouble.

Parsons has rallied and may live. If he does it will be a long time before he can again, if ever, make a feast on nails and keys.

Parsons, who is forty years old, accidentally swallowed some shiny nails ten years ago and has had a craving for metal ever since. Knives, spikes and can openers were regarded by him as special delicacies.

The surgeons found a spike over three inches long, which showed signs of having been partly digested. This, they assert, shows the power of the man's digestive organs.
