At the annual dinner of the University Club, of Washington, on Saturday, at which President Taft was present as a member, Col. George Harvey, of New York, referred to the President as "the worst licked, the least sore, and the best liked of all our Presidents."

--Another W. M. R. R. wreck occurred on Sunday morning, between Cumberland and Elkins, which resulted in the death of David Stewart, freight conductor, and serious injury to two brakemen. A passenger train crashed into the rear, of a freight train which was standing on the main track awaiting another crew. An operator is said to have failed to deliver orders to the passenger train.

Both the Republicans and Progressives held well attended meetings in Baltimore, on Wednesday night, both presumably in honor of Abraham Lincoln, and both claiming that if he was alive today he would indorse their position on political questions. Senators Borah, McCumber and Jackson addressed the Republicans; and Senator Pointdexter, ex-Senator Wellington and Chas. J. Bonaparte, the Progressives.

---Unhappy Mexico is now having a real revolution, a large portion of the army having revolted, accomplishing the re-lease of former President Diaz from prison, who is now heading the rebellious forces. The city of Mexico has been the scene of slaughter, this week. Several American war vessels have been sent to both coasts, and troops have been ordered in readiness to intervene, should Congress decide on invading the country to protect American interests.

Ninety new claims arising from the Titanic disaster, aggregating $2,127,273, were filed in the Admiralty Court during the extended term for filing claims, which expired on Tuesday. With the claims filed until January 15 the total has reached 369 separate demands for damages vitin a total amount of more than $8,000, 000 involved. How much of this money may be recovered will depend upon the outcome of the limitation proceedings brought by the White Star Line which are pending before the Admiralty Court. ---

One of the clubs in the National base ball League this year has a total abstinence clause in the contract that all the players must sign. Hitherto "moderate drinking" by a professional athlete has not been considered inconsistent with his keeping "fit," but evidently the profesthe high standard of the amateur. And in the more serious business of life, where competition is even keener than in ath letics, it is becoming harder and harder for the drinking man to get or keep employment. Efficiency is the thing that counts, and drinking reduces it.

---A general attack on "Democratic extravagance" and a heated debate over the activities of the House Money Trust Committee was precipitated in the House by a resolution appropriating $35, 000 to defray further expenses of the money trust investigation. The resolution, which made the total expenditures for the investigation $60,000, was passed after a lengthy argument by a vote of 129 to 114, many Democrats voting with the Republicans against it. Minority leader Mann upbraided the Democrats vigorously, asserting that "the control of legislation was in the hands of a disorganized mob," and that the appropria-tions for the session were reaching a record high point. Representative Fitz-gerald, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, agreed with Mr. Mann, and declared that the appropriations this year would far exceed those of any session in the history of Congress, "so much so, that any talk of revising the tariff down-ward will be a hollow mockery."

Stable Burned in Taneytown.

An alarm of fire was sounded about 9 o'clock, Wednesday morning, which created a big excitement until the Fire Company had the blaze under control, which was not until the stable belonging to Edward Kemper, on York St., was practically destroyed. The fire started in a small stack of fodder near the stable, and was carried into the building by a favorable breeze. The fire is thought to have originated from the burning of a lot of waste paper in the school yard, which immediately adjoins the stable, and an-

The fire was a stubborn one, due to a large amount of hay overhead, the smoke from which was very dense. As the stable was only a few feet from the public school building, and not over twenty-five feet from a lot of small frame buildings, the Fire Company is entitled to the credit of saving, in all probability, a large amount of property, as there was a pretty stiff breeze. The members of the Fire Company worked valiantly, and some of them were pretty well soaked with water, to their physical discomfort, as well as to their physical discomfort, as well as damage to their clothing.

Mr. Kemper, who was away from home at the time, estimates his loss at several hundred dollars above the amount of insurance, which was in the Hanover of

The fire demonstrates several dangers; the stacking of hay, straw or fodder, in open, the burning of waste paper near buildings, also the piling up of boxes, crates and inflammable material where it is liable to be set on fire from flying sparks, or from cigarette or cigar stubs.

In the Sunday School.

Some quiet but efficient work is being done in the way of teacher-training in some of the schools of Carroll county. Perhaps mention of it may incite to activity in other schools.

Rev. W. F. Hersh, of Westminster, has a class of fifteen. They are also studying Oliver's text-book, and are now working on their first examination. Can there not be an increased interest in this important department of Sunday school work, among all the schools of the

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE OF CARROLL COUNTY MAN.

Seven Days in a Well of 85 feet Deep Without Food or Water.

The following news account, from an Oregon paper, refers to Robert Koontz, son of Abram J. Koontz, of Taneytown district, who with a brother is homesteading in Oregon. He and another home-steader named Carroll were engaged in digging a well, and were down about 85 ft. when they struck rock, which necessitated blasting with dynamite.

On the morning of Dec. 17 they were using a windlass to raise and lower themselves from the well. Koontz descended into the well first, taking with him the dynamite and Carroll was to have followed. But when Carroll had lowered himself ten feet, a bolt in the windlass came out and dropped him the other 75 feet, breaking both his legs. The fall also pulled all the rope down into the well with him, leaving them without means of getting out. Koontz decided to try to get out by sticking his feet and hands into the wall of the well, which was between four and five feet wide, having only a small grub stick with which to make pur-chases for hands and feet. He succeeded in raising himself about 60 feet when the dirt gave way and he fell back into the

He was unconscious for a considerable time. It may have been several days, for the boys were in the well without food or water six days and five nights.

On the sixth day Koontz tried again to climb out of the well by same method as he had used before and this time got within ten feet of the top. Here he realized that he could go no farther because his strength was giving out and the soil was send and world give way when soil was sandy and would give way when he tried to make hand or footholds.

He was about to give up when he heard the noise of a wagon passing on the road nearby and began hallowing, finally attracting the driver's attention who immediately began an investigation and found Koontz just in time to same his Koontz collapsed immediately after he was taken out of the well.

The rescuer was a rancher named Soloman, who lived near. He had difficulty in getting help to bring Carroll up from the bottom because the country thereabout is very sparsely settled and there was nothing at hand to work with as the rope was still in the bottom of the well.

After assistance had been secured and Carroll had been raised, both boys were taken to Solomon's ranch, about a mile and a half distant. The nearest telephone and a han distant. The hearest detephone being at the P ranch, seven miles away, it was 7 o'clock at night before word was received in Burns.

Dr. Harrison found the men in very serious condition. Koontz was badly bruised all over his body, with a deep while Carroll had the small bone right leg broken and his left ankle and big bone in his left leg broken. Further both legs were frozen due to exposure during his removal from the well to Solo-

Koontz has since recovered, barring scars and bruises, while Carroll had both feet amputated. They fell into the well on Dec. 17, and did not receive medical aid, food or water, until Dec. 24, just one

-----Single Term Plan to be Dropped.

It is said to be evident that the Single Term bill for President of the U. S. will be shelved by the House, as a political move, though an effort will be made to bring it forward before the close of the session. A resolution was passed, on Tuesday, setting forth that owing to the state of public business, it would be in-advisable to pass the bill at this session. It is thought that both Gov. Wilson

Jesse P. Garner's class of five at Union-town, are studying the last section of reference to the question, before the resolution was introduced, and that neither are favorable to eliminating Wilson and Roosevelt as future possibilities.

Many Democrats regard Colonel Roose velt as a big asset to the party. They recall that Governor Wilson was elected November by a minority vote as a result of the break in the ranks of the op position. They do not believe that the two Republican factions will ever come together, and that in 1916 there will again be three candidates in the field. In these circumstances, they figure that the Democratic candidate could not lose. It was decided, therefore, that as there was no crying demand for the reform that all the resolutions should be pigeon-

Frederick Liquor Men to Fight.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 9.—Prominent property owners have retained counsel and notified local daily newspapers of their intention to sue for damages in the event their names are published as in-dorsers of applications for liquor licenses. Liquor dealers have also retained attor-neys to enjoin the Anti-Saloon League, as well as the newspapers, from advertising the names of those who indorse their applications. A bitter fight over the league's plan to make it difficult for dealers to secure licenses next May is be-lieved to be foreshadowed by these moves. Some time ago the league published warnings of its intention to advertise the names of those who indorse liquor license applications. Under the local license law every applicant must secure the signatures of nine freeholders, including a majority of the residents of the immediate vicinity of the place for which a license is sought. During the past several years a small percentage of the signers has been women, and their action has been criticised by the league.

Owing to the criticism saloonkeepers have experienced more difficulty in obtaining signatures, several applications having been rejected because some of the signers have not been considered by the court as meeting the requirements of the law. This year, for the first time, the league has given notice that the names of signers will be published, and this has had the effect of causing persons who have heretofore signed to hesitate about indorsing applications. Attorneys differ as to the basis of action against the newspapers. Those representing the property owners say the publication of names of signers by the league is intended as a boycott and intimidation. Others, representing saloonkeepers, say their manner of procedure will be to en-join the league, as well as the newspapers, from carrying out the plan of publication. Rev. Alonzo Winters, pastor of the First Baptist Church and president of the league said today that every signer's name will be published, as promised. The threat on the part of the liquor interests, he said, was nothing more than a bluff and would not deter the league in the performance of a public duty. Other members of the league spoke along simi-

> --In Favor of Dr. Kalbach.

Binding instructions to the jury of the York County Circuit Court to find in favor of the defendant were given by Judge Ross January 28, in the case of Thomas McCoy vs. Dr. A. M. Kalbach, of Lancaster, Pa., and J. G. Stauffer, of York, Pa. The court's decision was reached after all the evidence on behalf of both parties had been produced, and for the reason that the court was convinced from all the evidence that Dr. Kalbach had probable cause for the bringing of the presecution against McCoy, for the malicious bringing of which for the malicious McCoy is suing him. The action was one for damages for malicious prosecution, it being alleged he owned the team and believed that McCoy was trying to get away with it when he drove it to York, his home. McCoy claimed to own the team, alleging that he had bought it from Kalbach. McCoy, on a warrant issued by Alderman Amig on information furnished by J. G Stauffer, of York, Pa., to whom Dr. Kalbach had telephoned was arrested about two miles south of York after midnight on October 7, 1908. He was taken to jail, where he remained for four hours until he procured bail. At the hearing before the magistrate he was discharged, at the instance of Dr. Kalbach's counsel, because the crime, if any, had been committed in Maryland. He was later tried in Maryland and found not guilty.

Establishment of Farm Bureaus.

We have received a circular, and letter, from Hon. Jos. A. Goulden, with reference to the establishment of Farm Bureaus in New York, along the line of the Lackawanna Railroad, which appear to have been of great benefit to the sections reached. Col. Goulden says in his letter:

"The enclosed explains itself. I have gone into the matter with the localities named and find the establishment of these bureaus, or experiment stations, to be of great value to the farmers. At Binghamton, it is claimed that in two years, the productions of the soil have been largely increased to the advantage of the D. L. & W. R. R. Co., and the benefit of the farmers. I imagine that the Penna. R. R. Co. could be induced to help along this cause in Carroll county, in towns adjacent to their line. It entails a cost of $2,500 (or somewhat less,) one-third borne by the Government, one third by the railroad company and the other third by the people in the locality where the bureau is located.

I am confident that it would be highly beneficial to progressive Taneytown and miles. The business men of the town should lead in this matter as it will be of benefit to them."—J. A. G.

While the details of the plan are not given, we assume that they are somewhat along the line of the Experiment farm in each county, as proposed by Gov. Golds-borough, but that the Bureau is scientifically advisory, rather than practically demonstrative, though it may mean both. It seems to stand for the location of an expert agriculturist at a given point, devoting his time exclusively, to the improvement of farms within his reach-a sort of "farm doctor.

INTER-STATE LIQUOR BILL PASSES CONGRESS.

Great Victory for Anti-Liquor Sentiment of the Country.

The House, on Saturday, passed the Webb Liquor Bill, which prevents the shipment of liquors into prohibition territory, when intended to be received and sold in violation of the law of the state into which the shipment is made. The Webb bill is practically identical with the Kenyon-Sheppard bill, the one origi-nating in the House and the other in the Only one test vote was taken on the ill. Then Senators Smith and Jackson, of Maryland, lined up with the friends of the anti-saloon measure. All other votes were viva voce. The motion to substitute the Webb bill for the amended Kenyon-Sheppard bill was done by a viva voce vote and the final passage of the Webb bill was also by an unrecorded vote.

Webb bill was also by an unrecorded vote. Senators Smith and Jackson, however, advised their friends early in the day that they intended to vote for the passage of the Anti-Saloon League measure when it came to a vote, and on the one test recorded vote they did so.

The report has gained currency that President Taft may veto the bill on constitutional grounds, as some of the great-est constitutional lawyers hold that the passage of the bill by Congress will mean its defeat in the Supreme Court.

The anti-saloon forces may muster twothirds majority in the House, but they are not confident of such a vote in the Senate. Should President Taft veto the bill the prohibition question will be injected into the Wilson administration and its ardent advocates, in all probability, will make an effort to bring it up during the extraordinary session, not-withstanding the wishes of the leaders.

President Tatt would be wise if he would approve the bill. Public sentiment is clearly represented in the action of Congress, and his dissent would represent an individual assertion of authority not justified by the course of events. the bill meets final defeat, it will be decidedly more to the credit of President Taft, as one of his last official acts, to let the defeat come—if it must come—from the Supreme Court.

The bill passed by the Senate is the culmination of a long struggle by the dry States to prevent shipments of intoxicants accept their horders. The division cants across their borders. The division in the Senate on the question was not on party lines. Senators Pomerene and Paynter contended that the bill was unconstitutional. Senators Root and Sutherland shared this view.

Senator Root said he hoped that public sentiment would continue to grow until a way would be found for dealing satisfactorily with the whole liquor problem, but he insisted that although Congress probably had the power to exclude all intoxicating liquors from interstate com-merce it could not declare the shipment McCoy arrested for larceny of a team of six mules, which McCoy had driven from Capoutown. Maryland, to York, in

The House, on Tuesday, repassed the bill as it passed the Senate, thereby removing any parliamentary doubt as the status of it. Should the bill be signed, a test case will be immediately sent up to the Supreme Court.

There are indications already that prohibition leaders and members of the Anti-Saloon League flushed with the easy victory won when the bill went through the House by so large a majority will next try to have Congress adopt a resolution submitting to the states for ratification a proposed constitutional amendment to prohibit the manufacture of liquor in the United States or its importation into this country.

Princeton, N. J., February 10.—Mrs. Frances Folsom Cleveland and Prof. Thomas J. Preston, Jr., were married at 10.30 this morning by Rev. Dr. John Grier Hibben, president of Princeton University, at Prospect, the Hibben residence. The utmost simplicity was observed in the ceremony, the Protestant Episcopal service being used. On account of the recent illness of Professor Preston, the wedding was private and no announcement cards were sent out.

The bride wore a white silk gown and carried a bouquet of white Killarney roses. The main drawing-room at Pros pect, where the ceremony was performed, was prettily decorated with palms.

According to an article in the Frederick Times, while a complete transfer of New Windsor College property has not yet been made by Dr. Fraser to the trustees of the College, a formal announcement has been made that the college will remain at New Windsor, and that extensive improvements will be made, in the way of a new building, and the interior remodeling of the present buildings.

This announcement apparently sets at rest rumors, regarding the removal of Blue Ridge College to another location. It is stated that a committee of the Trustees has been appointed to confer with the faculty as to the proposed improvements, and that they will be made during the vacation season this year.

The new building, it is said, will be

The County Experiment Farm.

Gov. Goldsborough's idea that there should be a state agricultural experiment farm in every county in Maryland, is neither visionary nor impracticable; indeed, we consider it the best suggestion that has been made for many a day, especially as it might possibly be undertaken in connection with the "county home"-or "alms house" farm-on some equitable division of expense and profit. Even if it might be considered inexpedient to use the county home farm for this purpose, the state can well afford to own and operate an experiment farm in every county in the state. It will pay.

The single farm, at College Park, with its somewhat complicated status, has done incalculable good with but limited opportunities, and in an out-of-the-way section of the state. The general advance opinion is, that the remedy will prove ineffectual, but if it is, it will be so known.

The I. O. G. T. of Mt. Airy, this county, has given notice that it will hereafter publish the names of liquor license signers, for Mt. Airy and vicinity. The Westminster Times in commenting on the proposition, says:

The Income Tax

More than enough states have now voted in favor of the amendment to perthe United States. This matter has been before the public for many years and has been a subject of active interest ever since the last income tax law enacted by Congress was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of the United States. Of course, this means, not that we are to have an income tax law, but only that the constitutional restriction against such law is now removed. Nevertheless, the sentiment of the country seems to be so strongly in favor of an income tax law of doubt that one will be enacted at the next session of Congress

Congress should not practically deprive the states of a source of revenue of which many have availed themselves. There is also doubt about the propriety of permitting the United States to tax incomes derived from the bonds of the states and of their local sub-divisions and there are serious objections to the tax on the ground of its inquisitorial nature and of the necessary invasion of the privacy of the citizen by the government, consequent upon any efficient enforcement of the income

The experience of our sister commontax has not been assuring. The meagerlous. Citizens known to be of great are absurdly small, while other people, usually those less able to bear the burden, honestly return the full amount of their incomes, these, however, constituting an exceedingly small minority.

If the State of Virginia should insist ipon methods that would secure full and the old commonwealth that the law would be repealed at the next session of the Grand Assembly.

Now the army whole fabric of his government seems about to fall to pieces. It takes a strong man to govern Mexico, and that man has evidently not yet come to the front.

The present crisis may have serious international results. We have nothing to do with Mexico's revolutions as long as they do not affect our rights or the rights of our citizens. But continued political anarchy does affect the rights and lives of all foreigners in that country, and it grave question will be presented for the consideration of the authorities at Washington. - Balt. ---The 17th. Amendment.

Ratifications to the amendment to the rect election of United States Senators are being reported from many parts of the country. Few ratifying states have taken the trouble to send formal notice to Congress or to the State Department, but from press reports it appears reasonably certain that at least seventeen states have now approved the Seventeenth Amendment. In the list are Massachusetts and New York, in the East; North Carolina and Texas, in the South; West Virginia, Michigan, Ohio, Iowa and Minnesota, in the Middle West, and California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, Idaho, Colorado, Arizona and New Mexco, in the Far West.

The only states in which ratification has been refused are Utah and Georgia. The latter state not only declined to consubmission was not regular. In Utah the can makes on the British market. Whether Arkansas, Tennessee and Virginia will join them or not is uncertain, but they will probably not be in a hurry to ratify. Vermont, Rhode Island and mit Congress to enact an income tax law | Connecticut are not expected to favor the to make it a part of the Constitution of direct method of election, and with Utah the states above named would be able to prevent ratification.

However, since the Democratic party is thoroughly committed to the change and Democratic strength in the legislatures of all the states is exceptional this year, the amendment seems certain to make rapid headway. Opposition to it is less widespread than was the opposition to the income tax amendment, but the peculiar conditions in the Far South which make direct election subject to the federal government that there is little | federal regulation unpalatable are difficult to overcome. The income tax amendment got stronger the longer it was before Like every other question, this one has the legislatures. The hardest fight on two sides. There are grave reasons why the Seventeenth Amendment will come after it has been ratified by thirty-two or thirty-three states. - N. Y. Tribune. -

OH, YOU SWEET, SWEET MARIAR! Mariar had the greatest hen

To lay, lay, lay!
She wouldn't lay off laying eggs
Upon the Sabbath day.

But this hen, too, flew o'er the wall— She was an awful flier— And when she dug the gardens up She raised the neighbor's ire.

And so the women came across To lay the law down hot; If she didn't kill that hen at once They'd do it on the spot.

Mariar heard them with a smile. No, never sassed them back. She took the ax right then and there
And gave that hen a whack.

Then, kissing all their wrath away, She cooed in dulcet tones, "Come over, now, tomorrow, dears, And help to pick her bones.'

Thus threatened war did not occur.

Mariar beat The Hague.
So, neighbor, go and do likewise
If your hen is a plague.

EARLY DAYS OF YALE

WHEN THE FAMOUS COLLEGE WAS IN ITS INFANCY.

Wonderful Changes Have Been Made, as the World Moved On-Athletic Field a Thing Unknown to the Founders.

On Saturday, November, 23, at New Haven, the Yale and Harvard football gladiators matched their wits and stamina in a struggle for victory before forty thousand persons of both sexes waving flags and shouting at the top of their lungs. It is a pity that Dr. David F. Atwater of Springfield, the oldest living graduate of Yale, class of 1839, could not see the performance, for there was nothing like it in his days at college. The spectacle would be too strenuous for the old gentleman, however, and as for getting to the field of battle and returning safely to his home without physical hurt or mental collapse, it is not to be thought of as feasible at his age. Football as a visual diversion is a game for youth and for vigorous middle life.

When Dr. Atwater was at New Haven the students were not athletic. What they spent on college sports would scarcely have filled a blind man's cup with coppers. The doctor remembers a gymnasium, but it was very small, the apparatus was meager, and the students made little use of it. One does not have to go further back than the late seventies at Harvard to remember that the gymnasium of that comparatively modern day was a circular brick building not much larger than a prosperous farmer's smokehouse; ridiculously primitive and inadequate was the equipment according to latter day notions, and the superintendent was a stout gray little man who could spar and fence a bit, but that was about all.

To return to Yale in 1834-39, physical prowess seems to have been demanded only when "town" and "gown' fought together, and brute strength was then more in evidence than skill in boxing and wrestling. The college leader in such affrays was known as Major Bully, the biggest and sturdiest man in his class, according to Dr. Atwater. Yale men were much given to debating and literary expression. "Linonia," "Brothers in Unity" and "Calliope," were some of the societies equipped with libraries and bristling with logicians, the rivalry between these organizations being intense. Amusements of any kind were limited and from our point of view they were tame enough. The New Haven & Hartford railroad had not been built when freshman Atwater entered college; so there was no running down to New York to see the sights and to dissipate. The stage coach and the canal to Northampton afforded the only means of transportation. Professor Benjamin Silliman was arguing that it would never be possible to build steamships powerful enough to cross the Atlantic.

The college buildings then consisted of a row of brick dormitories, a plain chapel, an atheneum and lyceum building in which the recitations were held; round them all ran the old wooden "Yale fence." Entrance examinations were oral and exclusively classical. Flint and tinder supplied ignition; imported friction matches, few in number, were regarded as dangerous. Dr. Atwater remembers a tremendous demonstration of livery stable men against the projected New Haven & Hartford railroad because it would injure their business. Such was Yale in the old days in the memory of an alumnus still living.-New York Sun.

Possum Paradise.

Loris is the native heath of the opossum. Nowhere else does he abound so plentifully or thrive so well. It is here that the Georgia people get their fine specimens when they wish to entertain President Taft at a possum dinner. Folks come from North Carolina here to hunt them, and our market supplies Delmonico's and St. Regis and many other famous caravansaries.

As the canvasback duck and the diamondback terrapin are to Baltimore, so is the possum to Loris. The Maryland duck feeds on wild celery, which grows on the flats of the headwaters of the Chesapeake bay. It is this that gives them their fine flavor, just as peanuts and acorns flavor the razorback hog and produce the Smithfield

The Loris possum feeds on chickens, nice young fat chickens, such as only Loris has, and many of them are from the postmaster's private crop.-Loris News.

Beauty of Youth.

What an unbearable world it would be if we were all sent into it full grown. Just think of it! What a grand institution youth is, and not only our youth, but the youth of everything-the young leaves, the tiny blossoms, the inimitable green of the growing grass, the merry foals, and calves and lambs in the field, the downy little ducklings and the neat little chicks; what an enormous source of pleasure would be absent without all these. We all keep one special corner of our hearts for what is small, and young-the very softest corner. Even the most pompous and pragmatical of men forgives many things injurious to dignity on the part of a playful puppy or a graceful little kitten. How humanizing the effect of the brute creation is on us we have mare prroperly appreciated.

The Tidewater Portland Cement Company is getting whacks right and left, fore and aft. Well, it richly deserves the blows it is receiving. The idea that a company of men can organize and go into a neighborhood, purchase property and start business which will as conducted quickly become a nuisance to the surrounding country, and then when complaint is made can tell the objectors that if conditions do not suit them they have the option to move elsewhere, for they are here to make money out of their investment regardless of consequences to others, cannot be entertained. Crystals of Vitality Save Lives. About ten years ago a Japanese researcher, Takamine, in the laboratory of Columbia university, made the discovery that a certain substance, secreted by a gland of the ox or sheep, when injected into the blood of other animals, had the power of greatly increasing their blood pressure and consequently their vitality. He called this substance adrenalin and succeeded in refining it to light yellow crystals. When the suprarenal glands which secrete this substance were removed by an operation from the living animals, they invariably died, showing that it was necessary to the life of the animals. However, only small quantities are needed by the animal, and hence but little is secreted by the glands, and then only in very weak condition, being mixed with other substances. The crystals are pure and have extremely great power. One part of the adrenalin dissolved in 100,000 parts of water is strong and capable of performing miracles. In fact, one-half thimbleful, or about that much, has been used in hospitals all over the country, time and time again, to enable a man to pass a crisis when his natural strength would have failed him. Hundreds of men and women can thank adrenalin for their lives.

Makes for Smooth Existence. There is a good deal said about the loss of individuality, a loss when real which we all deplore, but a man is more likely to keep his individuality, with his life, if he follows in his motor the formulated lines of traffic rather than meet another man in his motor on the wrong side of the road. If both men happened to be in a civic parade there would be no loss of individuality to the man who kept his place behind instead of driving out from his place in order to get farther ahead of the man behind him, or in order to slip in ahead of the one ahead of him. Keeping in line means a simple thing often, but it is one of the trifles that make for a perfectly smooth existence. There are seeming restrictions in to understand the gains when complimaking ourselves the happiest and girls."-Topeka Capital.

WANDERER FOUND THAT GIRLS DIDN'T STAY GIRLS.

Lamentable Fact That Time Does Unkind Things to the Sweet High School Graduate Had to Be Admitted.

"I got an invitation the other day," said Abe Peters, "to attend the commencement exercises of the high school in the little old town where I used to live. It sort of brought back old memories. I recollect a commencement exercise that I attended in that town when I was in the gosling age. I should say about sixteen or seventeen. There were seve eral girls that were doing the graduating act, but there was one in particular that I thought was altogether the nicest thing in the way of girl that ever wore dress goods. "She read an essay on the subject, Beyond are Alps Lies Italy.' She was really in dead earnest about it, too, having practiced on that essay for three weeks before the commencement night, and she had it down fine. Maybe she didn't write all of it. Maybe she didn't really compose much of it, but she had practiced on it till she believed it. She told that crowd how everybody had Alps to climb and how they could scale the snowy heights by effort and perseverance, and how, beyond lay the fruitful valleys of the Italy of success. Oh, she was a peach, all right. I felt at that time that without her life to me wouldn't be worth living. But somehow or other the dreams of my youth didn't come true.

"I wandered off west and she married a country doctor. I didn't see her for more than twenty years. Then I happened to be back at the old town and concluded I would look up the girl who climbed the Alps that night in the long ago. Well, I found her. She would weigh, I should say at a rough guess, in the neighborhood of 175 pounds and had a double chin. Her waist line was, I should say, more than forty inches. She was gray headed and a grandmother, and so short-winded that he couldn't have climbed an Alp that was over ten feet. We sat there and talked and lied to each other. I told her how young she looked and how she hadn't changed a bit and that I would have known her anywhere, and she, like a dear good soul, lied back to me and told me that I looked almost as young as I did that night of the commencement. Both of us knew that we were lying to each other, but it was the only thing to do. "I met another of the girls who sat life that hamper, but there are a great on the stage that night and read an many others that forward. It is easy essay on some subject or other. I don't remember just what it was. Well, the ground hog saw his shadow and now the weather is ugly.

CHAPTER XIV.

"arrill Co.

Almost, But Not Quite. Dal had been acting strangely all day. Once, early in the evening, when I had doubled no trump, he led me a club without apology, and later on, during his dummy, I saw him writing our names on the back of an envelope, and putting numbers after them. At my earliest opportunity I went to

"There is something the matter with Dal, Max," I volunteered. "He has been acting strangely all day, and just now he was making out a listnames and numbers."

"You're to blame for that, Kit," Max said seriously. "You put washing soda instead of baking soda in those biscuits today, and he thinks he is a steam laundry. Those are laundry lists he's making out. He asked me a little while ago if I wanted a domestic finish.

Yes, I had put washing soda in the biscuits. The book said soda, and how is one to know which is meant? "I do not think you are calculated for a domestic finish,"I said, coldly, as I turned away. "In any case I disclaim any such responsibility. Butthere is something on Dal's mind."

Max came after me. "Don't be cross, Kit. You haven't said a nice word to me today, and you go around bristling with your chin up and two red spots on your cheeks-like whatere-her-name-was with the snakes instead of hair. I don't know why I'm so crazy about you; I always meant to love a girl with a nice disposition."

I left him then. Dal had gone into the reception room and closed the doors. And because he had been acting so strangely, and partly to escape from Max, whose eyes looked threatening, I followed him. Just as I epened the door quietly and looked in, Dallas switched off the lights, and I could hear him groping his way across the room. Then somebody-not Dal -spoke from the corner, cautiously.

"Is that you, Mr. Brown, sir?" was Flannigan. "Yes. Is everything here?"

"All but the powder, sir. Don't step too close. They're spread all over

"Have you taken the curtains down?"

"Yes, sir." "Matches?"

"Here, sir."

"Light one, will you, Flannigan? I want to see the time

The flare showed Dallas and Flan nigan bent over the timepiece. And it showed something else. The rug had been turned back from the windows which opened on the street, and the curtains had been removed. On the bare hardwood floor just beneath the windows was an aray of pans of various sizes, dish pans, cake tins, and a metal foot tub. The pans were raised from the floor on bricks, and seemed to be full of paper. All the chairs and tables were pushed back against the wall and the bric-a-brac was stacked on the mantel.

"Half an hour yet," Dal said, closing his watch. "Plenty of time, and remember the signal, four short and two long." "Four short and two long-all right,

"And-Flannigan, here's something for you, on account.' "Thank you, sir."

Dal turned to go out, tripped over the rug, said something, and passed me without an idea of my presence. A moment later Flannigan went out, and I was left, huddled against the wall, and alone.

It was puzzling enough. "Four long and two short!" "All but the powder!" Not that I believed for a moment what Max had said, and anyhow Flannigan was the sanest person I ever saw in my life. But it all seemed a part of the mystery that had been hanging over us for several days. I felt my way across the room and knelt by the pans. Yes, they were there, full of paper and mounted on bricks. It had not been a delusion. And then I straightened on my knees suddenly, for an automobile passing under the window had sounded four short honks and two long ones. The signal was followed instantly by a crash. The foot bath had fallen from its supports, and lay, quivering and vibrating with horrid noises at my feet. The next moment Mr. Harbison had thrown open the door and leaped into the room. Who's there?" he demanded. Against the light I could see him reaching for his hip pocket, and the rest crowding up around him.

'It's only me," I quavered, "that is, I. The dish pan upset."

'Dish pan!" Bella said from back in the crowd. "Kit, of course!" Jim forced his way through then and turned on the lights. I have no doubt I looked very strange kneeling there on the bare floor, with a row of pans mounted on bricks behind me, and 'the furniture all piled on itself in a back corner. "Kit! What in the world-" Jim began, and stopped. He stared from me to the pans, to the windows, to the bric-a-brac on the mantel, and back

I sat stonily silent. Why should I explain? Whenever I got into a foolish position, and tried to explain, and tell how it happened, and who was really to blame, they always brought it back to me somehow. So I sat there on the floor and let them stare. And finally Lollie Mercer got her breath and said: "How perfectly lovely; it's a charade!"

And Anne guessed "kitchen" at once. "Kit, you know, and the pans and-all that," she said, vaguely. At that they all took to guessing! And I sat still, until Mr. Harbison saw the storm in my eyes and came over to

"Have you hurt your ankle?" he said in an undertone. "Let me help you up."

"I am not hurt," I said, coldly, "and even if I were, it would be unnecessary to trouble you."

"I cannot help being troubled," he returned, just as evenly. "You see, 'it makes me ill for days if my car runs over a dog.'

Luckily, at that moment Dal came in. He pushed his way through the crowd without a word, shut off the lights, crashed through the pans and slammed the shutters close. Then he turned and addressed the rest.

"Of all the lunatics-!" he began, only there was more to it than that. 'A fellow goes to all kinds of trouble to put an end to this miserable situation, and the entire household turns out and sets to work to frustrate the whole scheme. You like to stay here, don't you, like chickens in a coop? Where's Flannigan?'

Nobody understood Dal's wrath then, but it seems he meant to arrange the plot himself, and when it was ripe, and the hour nearly come, he intended to wager that he could break the quarantine, and to take any odds he could get that he would free the entire party in half an hour. As for the plan itself, it was idiotically simple; we were perfectly delighted when we heard it. It was so simple and yet so comprehensive. We didn't see how it could fail. Both the Mercer girls kissed Dal on the strength of it, and Anne was furious. Jim was so much pleased, for some reason or other, and Mr. Harbison looked thoughtful rather than merry. Aunt Selina had gone to

The idea, of course, was to start an embryo fire just inside the windows, in the pans, to feed it with the orange fire powder that is used on the Fourth of July, and when we had thrown open the windows and yelled "fire" and all the guards and reporters had rushed to the front of the house, to escape quietly by a rear door from the basement kitchen, get into machines Dal had in waiting, and lose ourse ves as quickly as we could. You can see how simple it was. Everyone rushed madly for motor coats and veils, and Dal shuffled the numbers so the people going the same direction would have the same machine. We called to each other as we dressed about Marmaroneck or Lakewood or wherever we happened to have relatives. Everybody knew everybody else, and his friends. The Mercer girls were going to cruise until the trouble blew over, the Browns were going to Pinehurst, and Jim was going to Africa to hunt, if he could get out of the harbor.

Only the Harbison man seemed to have no plans; quite suddenly with the world so near again, the world of country houses and steam yachts and all the rest of it, he ceased to be one of us. It was not his world at all. He stood back and watched the kaleidoscope of our coats and veils, half-quizzically, but with something in his face that I had not seen there before. If he had not been so self-reliant and big, I would have said he was lonely. Not that he was pathetic in any sense of the word. Of course, he avoided me, which was natural and exactly what I wished. Belle never was far from him, and at the last she loaded him with her jewel case and a muff and traveling bag and asked him to her cousins' on Long Island. I felt sure he was going to decline, when he glanced across at me. "Do go," I said, very politely. "They are charming people." And he accepted at once!

It was a transparent plot on Bella's part: Two elderly ladies, house miles from anywhere, long evenings in the music room with an open fire and Bella at the harp playing the two songs she knows.

When we were ready and gathered in the kitchen, in the darkness, of course, Dal went up on the roof and signaled with a lantern to the cars on the drive. Then he went downstairs, took a last look at the drawing-room, fired the papers, shook the powder, opened the windows and yelled "fire!"

Of course, huddled in the kitchen, we had heard little or nothing. But we plainly heard Dal on the first floor and Flannigan on the second yelling "fire," and the patter of feet as the guards ran to the front of the house. And at that instant we remembered Aunt Selina!

That was the cause of the whole trouble. I don't know why they turned on me; she wasn't my aunt. But by the time they had got her out of bed, and had wrapped her in an eiderdown comfort, and stuck slippers on her feet and a motor veil on her head, the glare at the front of the house was beginning to die away. She didn't understand at all, and we had no time to go back and get her "plate," whatever that may be, but Jim took her by the arm and hurried her along, and the rest, who had waited, and were in awful tempers, stood aside and let them out first.

The door to the area steps was open, and by the street lights we could see a fence and a gate, which opened on a side street. Jim and Aunt Selina ran straight for the gate; the wind blowing Aunt Selina's comfort like a sail. Then, with our feet, so to speak, on the first rung of the ladder of liberty, it slipped. A half dozen guards and reporters came around the house and drove us back like sheep into a slaughter pen. It was the most humiliating moment of my life.

Dal had been for fighting a way through, and just for a minute I think I went Berserk myself. But Max spied one of the reporters setting up a flash-light as we stood, undecided, at the top of the steps, and after that there was nothing to do but retreat. We backed slowly, to show them we were not afraid. And when we were all in the kitchen again, and had turned on the lights and Bella was crying with her head against Mr. Harbison's arm, Dal said, cheerfully:

"Well, it has done some good, any how. We have lost Aunt Selina." And we all shook hands on it, although we were sorry about Jim. And Dal said we would have some champagne and drink to Aunt Selina's comfort, and we could have her teeth fumigated and send them to her. Somebody said "Poor old Jim," and at that Bella looked up.

She stared around the group, and then she went quite pale.

"Jim!" she gasped. "Do you mean -that Jim is-out there, too?"

"Jim and Aunt Selina!" I said as calmly as I could for joy. You see how it simplified the situation for me. "By this time they are a mile away, and going!"

Everybody shook hands again except Bella. She had dropped into a chair, and sat biting her lip and breathing hard, and she would not join in any of the hilarity at getting rid of Aunt Selina. Finally she got up and knocked over her chair.

"You are a lot of cowards," she stormed. "You deserted them out there, left them. Heaven knows where they are—a defenseless old woman, and-and a man who did not even have an overcoat. And it is snowing!'

"Never mind," Dal said, reassuring-"He can borrow Aunt Selina's comfort. Make the old lady discard from weakness. Anyhow, Bella, if I know anything of human nature, the old lady will make it hot enough for him. Poor old Jim!

Then they shook hands again, and with that there came a terrible banging at the door, which we had locked. "Open the door!" some one commanded. It was one of the guards. "Open it yourself!" Dallas called, moving a kitchen table to re-enforce

"Open that door or we will break it in!"

Dallas put his hands in his pockets, seated himself on the table, and whistled cheerfully. We could hear them conferring outside, and they made another appeal, which was re-Suddenly Bella came over and confronted Dallas

"They have brought them back!" she said dramatically. "They are out there now; I distinctly heard Jim's voice. Open that door, Dallas!" "Oh, don't let them in!" I wailed. It was quite involuntary, but the disappointment was too awful. "Dallas, don't open that door!" Dal swung his feet and smiled from Bella to me.

"Think what a solution it is to all our difficulties," he said, easily. "Without Aunt Selina I could be happy here indefinitely."

There was more knocking, and somebody—Max, I think—said to let them in, that it was a fool thing anyhow, and that he wanted to go to bed and forget it; his feet were cold. And just then there was a crash, and part of one of the windows fell in. The next blow from outside brought the rest of the glass, and-somebody was coming through, feet first. It was

He did not speak to any of us, but turned and helped in a bundle of red and yellow silk comfort that proved to be Aunt Selina, also feet first. had a glimpse of a half-dozen heads outside, guards and reporters. Then Jim jerked the shade down and unswathed Aunt Selina's legs so that she could walk, offered his arm, and stalked past us and upstairs, without word!

None of us spoke. We turned out the lights and went upstairs and took off our wraps and went to bed. It had been almost a fiasco.

Man's Dual Nature,

The professorial mind for all its acuteness is liable to occasional lapses, like less highly trained intellects. One amusing case in point is reported in the Philadelphia Public Ledger:

A certain professor was struggling to make the point that both parents have an equal influence upon a child.

"For," he continued gravely, "a man is as much the son of his father as he explain. I remember that she wanted to | is the daughter of his mother."

EASY TO GET RICHES MRS. HIGHBROW SPEAKS OUT

SIMPLY MATTER OF SLEEPING WHILE MONEY ACCUMULATES.

Some Difficulties in the Way, But as a Matter of Theory the Thing Is About as Simple as Can Be Made.

We have heard much of "get rich quick" schemes, but few of us have found them to be of practical value. They are fine ideas, but they do not work. Now, a nice "get rich slow" scheme ought to succeed. A few days ago a man gave a certain city a thousand dollars and told that city not to use it for 250 years. At the end of that time it will be something more than nineteen million dollars if the man who told the story figured it right. There could not be an easier way to be a millionaire than that. Just hang around 250 years and the money is yours.

Of course none of us could possibly wait so long for so much money unless we were asleep, and that is just the point. Somebody ought to fix up an easy sort of a near poison which would put us to sleep and the thing would be done. That should not be difficult. Such a thing must have been done at one time, because we all know that a whole kingdom was asleep for ever so long, and might still be asleep if a foolish youth had not wakened Beauty, and nobody else would stay asleep after Beauty was awake. And even in our own time, or at least much closer to it, there was Rip Van Winkle, who slept for 20 years. If he had not been so shiftless, and had put a little money in the bank before he went to sleep he might have been comfortable for the rest of his life.

And so, if everybody who had a thousand dollars would put it in the bank and take some sleep generator he could wake up in 250 years or 200 years or a hundred years, according to how rich he wanted to be, and would be a millionaire. Even if a person did not have a thousand dollars to begin with he could in the end have a few millions. Of course if everybody was going to be rich it might not be so much fun, but we would get used to it after a while. There would not be any trouble about getting somebody to stay awake and take care of the banks, for a great many people have entirely too much money already and a great many more would not take chances of losing what they had even for $20,000,000.

There is just one serious drawback to the scheme, and that may make it impossible. What are we going to do about the cost of living? Two hundred and fifty years is a long time and the cost of living would grow so much in that time that $19,000,000 would look like 19 cents instead of like a thousand dollars. And no power on earth can ever put the cost of living to sleep.—New York Times.

Only Have to Have Money. New York, the modern Babylon, is a Democratic Babylon. Its luxury and its voluptuousness center in and are to be found only in the huge hotels and magnificent cafes that have, in the space of a score of years, transformed metropolitan life. In this democratic babylon no question is asked, whether a man is wealthy or has power. Whosoever will may come, be he possessed only of enough money to pay for one night's entertainment—and the necessary tips for the waiter. Students of society may well take into account, in summing up the conditions of modern American life, this phase of New York, for it must be remembered that the patrons of these luxurious hostelries and restaurants are not only New Yorkers. but that they are everybody, from everywhere, who can raise the price for an annual visit to the metropolis. -Washington (D. C.) Times.

In Praise of the Kimono. Among the details of the wardrobe which have apparently, though transported from afar, come to stay with us for good, there may be noted the kimono, thin and light and graceful. In silk it rolls conveniently into little or no space, and so it is most convenient when traveling, for it can find a little corner in the dressing case.

On arrival at a hotel or a friend's louse, it can be shaken out, and one slips into it from the street gown to make a comfortable toilet without the trouble of getting the big trunk open, as one would have to do with a heavy dressing gown of the ordinary variety packed away. Even if one cannot aford a silk kimono, there are tidy substitutes in flowered muslin with dressng jackets to match.

Her Little Dissertation on Music Is Something to Be Read and Enjoyed.

"Yes, yes, indeed! I simply adore music!" Mrs. Wood B. Highbrow clasped her hands with enthusiasm. "You know my beloved Shakespeare says 'If music be the food of love, play on'-he doesn't say on what, but I'm sure he meant the piano-and he adds. The man that hath no music in himself or is not moved by conflict of sweet sounds, is fit for trees and stratagems, he spoils!' How true it is; and the same might be said of a woman.

"Oh, yes, Gwendolyn is very musical. She studies at the conservatorythere is such an air of culture about such an institution, you know. Wood wanted her to take lessons at home until she is older, and offered to move the piano into our own conservatory, as we have to keep it heated, anyway, for the plants.

"Poor Wood! he is so practical-a regular pomme-de-terre! He thinks that, what with pianolas and victrolas and violas, there is so much music turned out by machinery nowadays that it hardly pays to do it by hand, anyway. Perhaps he is not altogether wrong-unless one has talent, and Gw.endolyn certainly has!

"You should hear her play Ruben's Melody in F!' Then she can rattle off any cantata that John Sebastian Cabot ever wrote-or was at Wolffang Armageddon Mozart? I de clare, I always get those antique composers mixed. Well, at any rate, it was the wonderful organist who, if he couldn't reach all the notes he wanted with his fingers, used his nose to help out.

"Yes, yes, indeed! Gwendolyn is so talented that her teacher says when she grows up she is sure to be a dilettante!"

Goats Used as Fire Preventers. California forest fire fighters have nit on a practical idea to prevent the spread of conflagrations. In their primeval forests when a fire has once started it is liable to devastate enormous tracts of country, and so the fire fighters make huge clearings-or breaks, as they are locally termedon the possible line of fires. These breaks, which are fifty feet wide or so, according to the height of the forests, are, however, rapidly filled with new vegetation, and so to keep it from destroying the usefulness of the fire breaks, thousands of goats are being pastured free of charge by the government in order to keep down the growth of weeds and brush. Goats will perform this service while picking up a living, thus saving the forest service much money every year, which would otherwise go to gangs of men armed with hoes and other weed exterminators. Such small growths are a serious menace in case of forest fires, as during the dry season they will carry the flames right across the barrier designed to check them, and then no one knows what

Wife Worth Having. Herr Blumenthal, a director of the essing theater in Berlin great misgivings regarding the success of his new piece, "Zum Weissen

Rosse. "If I had only 20 marks for every thousand it will bring you I should be quite content," said his wife. "All right, you shall have them," replied Herr Blumenthal. "Zum Weissen Rosse" ("White Horse Inn") met with an immediate success. Every night the Frau Director went to the cashier and levied her 20 marks per thousand.

On one occasion, after the piece had been running some months, bad weather caused a falling off in the receipts below the thousand marks, and consequently Frau Blumenthal was not entitled to her 20 marks. "How much have you taken?" she asked the cashier. "Only 967 marks," was the reply. "Well, give me a seat at three marks, then," said Frau Blumenthal, laying down the coin. "Now you have a 100 marks, give me my 20." She got them!--Tit-Bits.

Ideal School Described.

M. Augustin Rey, a Parisian architect, has described his ideal school in a recent paper. He said that the beneficial effects of the violet rays were so well known that it was criminal to build in such a way that they could not penetrate to every part of a room; it was doubly important that this should be possible in schoolrooms. If there was a choice between heat, ventilation, and sunshine we should see that we had the sunshine first. His building was so arranged that the classes should meet in the east rooms in the afternoon after the morning sun had thoroughly disinfected them and in the west in the morning, since the afternoon sun would have disinfected the western rooms on the previous day. There should be plenty of ground and plenty of sand about school houses. It is better to economize in decorations than in sunlight and ventilation. He said that while this was his ideal school, he preferred the open air school.

Lesson VIII .- First Quarter, For Feb. 23, 1913.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Gen. xiii, 1-12. Memory Verse, 8-Golden Text, Prov. x, 22-Commentary Prepared by Rev.

Abram's going down to Egypt was certainly a mistake on his part, for there was no altar to the Lord there nor any new revelation from the Lord, and Abram dishonored the Lord by fear and deceit and brought upon himself the rebuke of a man of the world. a heathen king. By all our conduct we are either honoring or dishonoring the Lord, magnifying Him or magnifying ourselves, and we would do well to test everything by this test. He is able to take care of His own people and His own work under all circum stances, and all He asks of us is a whole heart for Him such an abiding in and separation unto Him that He shall not be hindered in working out His good pleasure.

When at any time we wander away from the Lord the only thing to do is to return as quickly as possible, for He is ever calling the wanderer to return, as in Isa. Iv, 7; Jer. iii, 14, 22; Hos. xiv, 1, 2, and the word of encouragement awaits both the unsaved and the saved, "Him that cometh to Me I will in nowise cast out" (John vi, 37). It is good to see Abram back at the place of the altar between Bethel and Hai and to hear him calling on the name of the Lord (verses 3, 4) and to know that the Lord has abundantly pardoned him according to His word.

It may seem strange to some to see Abram very rich in cattle, in silver his wanderings from the Lord, but let such consider their own mercies and say if they have not been dealt with in loving kindness beyond all their deserts. Sometimes the Lord would draw great mercies, and we have all and always reason to say, "It is of the Lord's mercies that we are not consumed, be- are a necessity. Christianity found cause His compassions fail not" (Lam.

Lot also was rich in flocks and herds, and his herdmen and those of Abram in heathen life than the methods of could not agree. So to prevent strife | healing. Medical science was practical-Abram told Lot to take his choice of territory and that he would take that | Christian missionaries began their which Lot did not desire. Thus magnanimous could this great man afford to be because he was the friend of God and the Lord was his portion. Being a witness for God before the Canaanites and Perizzites who dwelt in the land, he could not tolerate strife, for "the servant of the Lord must not strive" (II Tim. ii, 24).

Meekness, lowliness and submission are always becoming in a child of God, but never strife, not even to maintain our so called rights. We are exhorted to take wrong and suffer ourselves to be defrauded rather than strive before unbelievers (1 Cor. vi, 6. 7).

his eyes," but it was only to behold the low and fruitful valley of the Jordan. He did not behold the Lord nor consider His will in the matter. It was a case of self only.

It was good for Lot to be with Abram, but not so good for Abram to have Lot with him. Separation from Lot was really to Abram's advantage and evidently pleasing to the Lord, for the Lord had another message for Abram as soon as Lot was separated from him (14-17). There was a renewed assurance that the Lord would give him the whole land and the promise that his seed would be as the dust of the earth (verse 16.)

In verse 18 see this friend of God dwelling with. Him at Hebron, which signifies fellowship, away above the sinners of Sodom and in communion with God with his altar unto the Lord. This prepares us for the record in chapter xiv of the capture and captivity of Lot and his goods by the four kings, while Abram, living above and away from all the turmoil, is able to go with his 318 trained servants and rescue Lot and his people and all his goods. While mixed up with the world we cannot expect to have victory over it, and it is only as we dwell at He bron in fellowship with God that we can hope to rescue others from the god of this world. First we see Lot pitch ing his tent toward Sodom, and then we see him dwelling in Sodom (xiii, 12: xiv, 12). Later we shall find him a ruler in Sodom, sitting in the gategetting on in the world.

In the end of chapter xiv we have a wonderful record of a most remarkable man, a king and a priest, type of the Lord Jesus Christ when He shall be a priest upon His throne, a priest forever after the order of Melchizedek (Zech vi, 13; Ps. cx, 4). Here we have for the first time the title "the Most High God, possessor of heaven and earth. and because Abram was blessed by Him he was able to turn his back upon the tempting offer of the king of Sodom concerning the goods. If the church today knew the Most High God and His blessing she would never be guilty of seeking the goods of Sodom to help her carry on her work. There is nothing so grand as to know God and find our all in Clin County of the carry of the goods of Sodom to help her carry on her work. There is nothing so grand as to know God and find our grand gran our all in flim.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 23, 1913.

Topic.—Mission work at home and abroad.—II. Medical missions.—Matt. x, 7-11. Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, Both by example and precept Christ indorsed medical missions. He Himself healed men. He proved His deity by His miraculous works, and His miracles of healing far surpass in number any other manifestations of His supernatural power. Moreover, in His commission to His apostles when He sent them upon their first missionary journey He commanded them to heal the sick and gave them the power to do so. In this commission two things were uppermost-first, they were to preach and, second, to heal. "As ye go preach, saying the kingdom of heaven is at hand. Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, cast out devils." The days of miraculous healing may be over so far as the disciples of Christ having the power to heal directly, and yet there still rests upon the church the duty of praying for the sick and of using all the powers of advanced medical science to aid and to cure those who are ill.

The superiority of Christianity to other religions is seen in the fact that it pays proper attention to the entire man. It not only emphasizes the value of the soul and the necessity of its salvation, but also the importance of the mind and of the body; hence we should not only be interested in evangelical missionary work, but also in educational missions and in medical missions. This has always been the attitude of the Christian church. It took the Christian church four centuries to build its first hospital, but it has continued its work ever since and has especially been faithful and successful in You had better take the shoes back using medical missions in foreign misand in gold (verse 2) notwithstanding sionary endeavors. At home it has erected hospitals and dispensaries and cared for the ill and unfortunate who | She's lyin' dead at home now-died cannot afford to care for themselves. "Boys," continued the drummer, evangelize the world.

> Medical missions in heathen lands medical science very little advanced in the lands to which it carried the gospel. Perhaps there is nothing cruder ly unknown in heathendom when work. The methods used usually injured the patients treated more than they benefited them.

This condition made it absolutely necessary for Christian missionaries to correct estimates of whatever influpay attention to medical science. Even before distinctive medical missionaries went to foreign fields those engaged in evangelical missionary efforts did what they could to "heal the sick." This necessity still exists, as is evidenced by the thousands of cases treated by Christian physicians and in missionary hospitals

Medical missions provide a great opportunity for advancing evangelical missions. Souls are saved through at-Without regard to the character of tention given to the bodies of men. Medical missions make it possible to gain the confidence of foreign peoples. They are naturally suspicious and prejudiced, but when they see the beneficent results of physical healing suspicion and prejudice largely pass away. They readily realize that the medical work is beneficial and are therefore the more easily persuaded that the truths of the gospel are also helpful. Through medical work the hearts of people are reached, their confidence is won, and it becomes an easy matter to present Christ as a

WHY A DRUMMER SWORE OFF

Pathetic Spectacle of Father Trying to Pawn His Baby's Shoes Was Too Much for Him.

"No, I won't drink with you today, boys," said a drummer to his companions, as they settled down in a smoking car and passed the bottle. "The fact is, boys, I have quit drinking; I've sworn off.'

"What's the matter with you, old boy?" sang out one . "If you've quit drinking something's up. What is it?" "Well, boys, I will tell you. Yesterday I was in Chicago. Down on Clark street a customer of mine keeps a pawnshop, in connection with other business. I called on him, and while I was there a young man, not more than twenty-five, wearing threadbare clothes and looking as hard as if he hadn't seen a sober day for a month, came in with a little package in his hand. He unwrapped it and handed the article to the pawnbroker, saying, 'Give me ten cents.' And, boys, what do you suppose it was? A pair of baby's shoes-little things with the buttons only a trifle soiled, as if they had been worn only once or twice. 'Where did you get these?' asked the pawnbroker. 'Got 'em home,' replied the man, who had an intelligent look and the manner of a gentleman, despite his sad condition. 'My wife bought 'em for our baby. Give me ten cents for 'em-I want a drink.' to your wife; the baby will need them,' said the pawnbroker. 'No, s—she won't, because she's dead. last night.' As he said this, the poor fellow broke down, bowed his head on the showcase and cried like a You may laugh if you please, but I-I have a baby at home, and I swear I'll never take another drink."

EFFECTS OF BEER DRINKING

Shortens One's Life From 40 to 60 Per Cent., According to Figuring of Insurance Companies.

The life insurance companies make a business of estimating men's lives, and can only make money by making ences life. Now they expect a man, otherwise healthy, who is addicted to beer drinking, will have his life short. ened from 40 to 60 per cent. For instance if he is twenty years old and does not drink beer he may reasonably expect to live until he is 61. If he is a beer drinker he will probably not live to be over 35. If he is 30 years old when he begins to drink beer he will probably drop off someliving to 64 as he should. There is no sentiment, prejudice or assertion about these figures. They are simply cold-blooded business facts, derived from experience, and the companies invest their money on them just the same as a man pays so many dollars for so many feet of ground or bushels of wheat.-Dr. S. S. Thorn, Toledo, Ohio, in U.S. Senate Document.

Making the Best of Life. It is not by regretting what is irreparable that true work is to be done, but by making the best of what we are. It is not by complaining that we have not the right tools, but by us ing well the tools we have. What we are and where we are is God's providential arrangement-God's doing though it may be man's misdoing Life is a series of mistakes, and he is not the best Christian who makes the fewest false steps. He is the best who wins the most splendid victories by the retrieval of mistakes.—Rev F. W. Robertson.

Agency of Misery. I have no sympathy with the statement so often made that the manufacture and sale of liquor has contributed to the industrial development of the nation. On the contrary, I believe that liquor has contributed more to the moral, intellectual and material deterioration of the people, and has brought more misery to defenseless women and children, than any other agency in the history of mankind .-John Mitchell.

Cause and Effect. There are certain causes with certain effects. Remove one and the other disappears. Scatter typhoid fever germs in the water supply of a city and an epidemic follows. License saloons, tolerate the use of alcohol as a beverage and the results are positive and traceable.-T. D. Crothers, Dynamite Under Saloon.

It would be like dynamite under the saloon if, just where he is, the minister would begin active work against it; if, just where he is, the teacher would instruct his pupils; if, just where he is, the voter would dedicate Humbly subscribe ourselves by and his ballot to this movement; and so on, through the shining ranks of the great powers that make for righteousness, from father and mother to kindergarten toddlers, if each were each day doing what each could, just where he is.-Frances E. Willard.

Desert Into a Sea.

The De Lesseps project for flooding a portion of the Sahara has been revived. In the extreme south of Tunisia is a tract of land, some of which is hundreds of feet below the sea level. A string of "schotts," or small salt lakes, occupies a portion of the depressed area, which is barred from the Mediterranean only by a few miles of sand flats, never 100 feet above the level of the sea.

Manifestly the flooding of such an area so placed is an easy task for modern engineering. The question is whether the project will pay. In addition to the first canal, several shorter canals would have to be dug to conduct the water to isolated portions of the depressed region. The extent of country which might be flooded has been estimated variously from 6,000 to more

Just what good will come of the Chicago Journal.

The strangest excuse for "extemporaneous speaking" is given in a story told by Dr. George L. Perin of the Franklin Square House. While traveling he formed the acquaintance of a clergyman who was fond of "talking shop." "Never prepare your sermon in advance," counseled the cleric. "Why?" asked Dr. Perin. "Well, if you put it into writing the devil can look over your shoulder and will then go and nullify in the hearts of your people every word you have uttered. As for me, I never put pen to paper. I just make for the pulpit, and the devil himself doesn't know what I'm going to say!"-Boston Traveler.

Put Petitions In Golf Holes. The amir of Afghanistan has taken up golf keenly and has had good links laid out in the neighborhood of Kabul. The natives were much puzzled by the well kept greens; but, recognizing the game as a royal one, they put the holes to a practical purpose. They got into the habit of placing petitions in would reach the amir when he was putting next day. But his majesty's temper apparently was not improved by the royal game. He resented this attempt to take advantage of his recreations and ordered that all such petitions be burned unread .- London Mail.

Paris Pawnshop For Autos. The Mont de Piete, the great pawnshop of Paris, is taking thought for those of its patrons who may be automobilists or aviators. Its authorities are now negotiating for the acquisition of an immense garage, capable of holding 2,000 cars, so that people who pawn their automobiles may be able to leave them there and thus avoid the present expense of at least 6 francs a day, which pawning an automobile has hitherto meant. Space will also be provided for aeroplanes.-New York Sun.

Two Narrow Escapes.

Not since a baby fell out of a New York city elevated car window and landed uninjured in an astonished citizen's arms has a more curious accident happened than one that occurred recently on a Ninth avenue elevated train. A violent lurch at a curve pitched a trainman from the car to the street below, but he alighted on an upholstered couch that happened to be on the sidewalk. SENORA PEZET, WIFE OF PERUVIAN MINISTER

The Minister from Peru and his charming wife and son have received a cordial welcome coming to Washington. Mr. Pezet was first secretary of the Peruvian legation for five years and left Washington in 1900 to become minister to the republic of Central America. He did not sever his ties of friendship but through all these years has kept up a brisk correspondence with many Washingtonians. When his only son, called George Washington Pezet, because he was born on February 22, and because his parents are fervent admirers of the great neighbor to the north and its founder, was of college age he was placed at Harvard, where two years ago he graduated with high honors. Young Mr. Pezet has since resided in Boston intending to take up literature as a profession. "I return to Washington," remarked Senora Pezet, "as one comes back to a dearly loved spot filled with pleasant memories. I find the city changed but not sufficiently so to make me feel strange except in a few locations. In a way I feel as though I left only a few months ago and I take up the thread of affairs with zeal and energy engendered by a complete rest. My home city is Lima, one of the oldest cities of the New World and one of the most fascinating. Less than fifty years after Columbus discovered this vast empire for Spain, the first stone of the Cathedral of Lima was laid by Pizarro, in January,

Senor and Senora Pezet two years ago celebrated the silver anniversary of their wedding, but to see the senora suggests that she has discovered Ponce de Leon's spring of eternal youth. Being a perfect blonde, with deep blue eyes and fair skin, an unusual type for a Spanish-American, though often seen in Spain, she looks as though she were entering her twen-

Senora Pezet is the daughter of the late Jose Maria Corbacho of Lima, a prominent citizen and one who held many offices of trust. She bears the pretty name of Coraline, shortened into Cora. She was educated at home by governesses after the way of the Latins, who never send their children away from home until they are well grown and her marriage to the minister, who was the son of a neighbor, occurred before she reached the dignity of attending a boarding school. She spent a few months, however, with the madams of the Sacred Heart and since coming to this country, she frequently visits establishments of that order near Philadelphia and New York.

Senor and Senora Pezet have fond hopes of their son, George Washington Pezet, who has already developed a remarkable talent for the drama. He writes entirely in English. He is a tall, slender youth bearing a mark. ed resemblance to his mother.
