Taneytown School Trouble Adjusted.

On the 20th and 21st of January, five boys were dismissed by the Principal, W. L. Koontz, of the Taneytown High Some of the facts reported by the Principal were misleading. The parents of three of the boys carried the matter to the School Board and reported the true conditions of the public schools of Taneytown. The School Board recognizing the presentation of conditions in our schools, reduced the suspension from May 24th to March 3rd, and at the same time said "We must sustain our teachers," and had their action, with the names of all boys dismissed, with certain conditions for their return, published in some of the county papers. After exhausting all resources with the school authorities, we employed an attorney who gave us the following law on expelling ehildren from public schools—see Acts of 1872, Chapter 377.

'The only persons having authority to suspend or expel are the District School Truestees. The act of Mr. Koontz, in the suspension of those children, is ultra vires, illegal and improper, according to law. The only right a teacher has for suspension of children from school is set forth in the following language:

The use of profane language, the use of tobacco in any form, and the carrying of firearms or other dangerous weapons are strictly forbidden; and any pupils persistently violating this rule shall be suspended by the teacher and the case shall at once be reported to the Board of District School Trustees for their action."

"The children, having been illegally suspended from school, have the right to go back and continue their school work. Our Attorney presented the law to the County Superintendent, G. F. Morelock, who submitted it to the School Board's Attorney, who advised them that the Board was wrong, and the opinion was

The spelling contest scheduled for the public schools of Taneytown district, came off at the appointed time, Monday, March 3, and was a decided success. There were fourteen contestants, and all showed evidence of excellent training and preparation for the contest.

In the written contest 50 selected words were written from dictation; of the fourteen who took part in the contest, three spelled all of the fifty words, and two spelled forty-nine of them correctly.

The wide and growing use of gasoline engines for farm purposes, makes it necessary for property owners to understand effect, if any, these engines have on their fire insurance. Agents for the sale of engines tell farmers that their particular engine is "approved" by the Fire Underwriters Association, but this "approval" does not mean that such engines the amount does not exceed $100.

Proper instalment, as a rule, means that the gasoline supply tank must be located outside of the building insured, at least 5 feet distant, and be under ground.

All engines which carry the supply of the engines, and carry Mutual insurance, should inform themselves of the rules of

SURVEYORS AT WORK

Apparently a New Line From Keymar to Union Bridge.

A great deal of interest has been aroused in a survey now quietly being made for a railroad which would connect Keymar with Union Bridge, apparently in the nature of a switch from the North-ern Central to the Tidewate Portland Cement plant, or perhaps a demonstration looking to the paralleling of the W. M. R. R., for a longer distance, by the Northern Central. The Frederick News comments as follows on the movement;

"The whole plan is one of mere speculation, however, on the part of those along the line which is being surveyed, but rumor has it that the road is planned to connect the Pennsylvania lines with the Union Bridge Cement plant. The road, as it has been surveyed, will follow the bed of Little Pipe Creek, almost the entire distance and because of this there will be no grading to be done, and the rumor is that the ties will be laid on to top of the ground and little ballasting done at the beginning.

No towns are reached by the road or spur and this also leads to the belief that it is to be used only, or at least principally, by the cement company.

It is claimed by the construction of this road that the cement plant will be given another excellent outlet for its product, and will open up to it a territory from which it is now virtually prohibited from entering because of high freight rates. It is also claimed that the cement company finds need for more raw material than can be gotten at Union Bridge, and because of this the proposed connection would prove of immense benefit.

The plans of those behind the move-ment are being carefully guarded and it has not been learned whether the Cement Company or the Northern Central Railroad is building the line. If the line is to be only a switch it is said either party building, will not be entitled to condemnation proceedings in order to secure the rights of way. A railroad which carries passengers and is for the use of the public, has this right. It is said that without much grading and without ballasting a track, crossties and rails can be put down for a comparatively small sum.

Taft Goes Out Happy.

Washington, D. C., March 3.—President Taft's last day in the White House was one of his busiest, and his genial smile worked overtime. As a working day it didn't last more than 10 hours, but it was crowded full of half-sad farewells and sincere best wishes for the fu ture. The President shook hands with several hundred citizens and Government officials; received scores of telegrams from friends all over the world; signed his name to pile after pile of pictures and lettters and held three receptions. He quitted the room he has occupied for four years in the executive offices with a smile and without even a backward glance, seeming to remember only the fair weather times he had spent there and none of the storms. He met his old-time friends of the Washington Diplomatic Corps and Supreme Court Justices, and last of all gave the first formal welcome in the White House to the President-elect and

President Wilson, in making it clear that he is opposed to the re-election of Senator Smith, has served notice that he will represent the "Progressive" element a special money order for the sum collection in his party as typified by Mr. Bryan, and that the "Conservative" element must either back down, or fight. indorsement of Marbury and Lee, not only makes the fight a clear and open one in the state, but is sufficiently significant, taken in connection with his cabinet selections, to show that the President means to play the Progressive straight, without dodging the issue.

Just what this fact will develop into, is not, as yet, thoroughly clear. It may so affect the conservatives as to bring about a party disruption equaling that of the Republican party, or the very audacity of the new administration may carry it through without the insurgency which wrecked the past administration

INAUGURATION OF PRESIDENT WILSON.

Great Crowd Witnessed the Parade and Ceremonies.

Woodrow Wilson and Thomas R. Marshall were inaugurated as President and Vice-President of the United States, on Tuesday, before one of the greatest as-semblages ever gathered in Washington semblages ever gathered in washington on a like occasion. The weather was very favorable, and helped materially to swell the crowds, and added another to the very short list of perfect inauguration days.

More than 600,000 men, women and children were packed and jammed on both sides of Pennsylvania avenue, and between these two walls of humanity Wilson and Marshall passed, followed by the inaugural pageant, The parade was more than 10 miles long. For four hours President Wilson and Vice-President Marshall, with their friends, stood as it passed in review.

The regulation program was carried out without a hitch. President Taft, President-elect Wilson and Vice-President Marshall, drove from the White House to the Capitol at 11 o'clock, and on their arrival the former two went to the President's Chamber and the latter to the Vice-President Taft at once began the last official duties of his service. He signed scores of bills brought up from the Senate, while President-elect Wilson sat looking on—with no man knows what emotions and thoughts. The bills made a considerable pile before word was brought that the Senate had completed its labors and awaited dissolution.

The Vice-President was first sworn in, and after his speech, the inaugural ceremonies proper commenced.

Very quietly the inaugural party filed in the stand while the roar of cheering rang and rang again. Mr. Taft and Mr. Wilson took seats, with Chief Justice White of the Supreme Court upon their right and the Congressional committee upon the left. All gazed at the field of people, touched with waving hats, canes, umbrellas, handkerchiefs and banners, which stretched off in all directions, filling the streets and park.

Ranged behind Chief Justice White at the right of the two Executives were Vice-President Marshall, the former Vice-Presidents, the justices of the Supreme Court, Senators and former and members of the Senate. Next to them were members of the house and members-elect.

It was shortly after 1 o'clock when Chief Judge White lifted his great figure. He stood momentarily and then faced the President-elect. As the latter arose stillness swept over the multitude. The straining to hear became almost palpable.

Women and children madly waved 100, 000 tiny flags and red, white and blue streamers. The yells that greeted him at every foot of the way rattled like artillery and it did not end until he had passed into the White House grounds for luncheon before reviewing the parade.

Ex-President Taft left immediately after the ceremonies for Augusta, Georgia, accompanied by Mrs. Taft, where he will remain at rest and recreation a few weeks before entering upon his new duties at Yale College, as Professor of Law. A GOOD MANY Republican leaders feel that they "have not had such a good time since Granny died," as they are now entirely relieved from responsibility for National legislation, and can play the faultfinding act, which is decidedly the easiest end of the legislative game. -000-

PARCEL Post has not ruined the business of the small towns, as yet, so far as heard from. Perhaps this is another illustration that "our chief troubles are those that never happen." It is just as true to say that P. P. has not yet materially reduced the "cost of living" in the cities, so two classes of people have been fooled. -000-

A VAST NUMBER of people estimate the value of a thing by whether they like it, or not-by how it fits their personal opinions and varieties. It is a splendid trait in character for one to grow out of the left the heads of two departments dictate stage which attaches to childhood, when only the selfishness of having one's "own for his acts. #### 400 President Taft, the Victim.

President Taft's luck of having to meet during his administration, an unusual number of perplexing situations of a very critical character, pursued him to the gress should not burden themselves to consider or decide. It is said that it nd. No former President ever faced the same amount of political turmoil, nor the same amount of aggravating domestic insurgency; even the civil war found practically only two opposing sentiments to deal with, and the agitation of the whole country was due almost solely to the one great question.

President Taft is to be congratulated, rather than consoled, that the end of his responsibility has arrived, as he has had more than his share, both of troublous questions and unjust criticism, and even the political enemies of President Wilson wish him a much more calm experience, and hope that his equanimity may equal that of his predecessor.

President Taft's administration has economic one, as far as the Executive departments could control such matters, and his messages with regard to economy and the adoption of business methods were especially valuable; the very last one, advocating the budget system of departmental expenditures, being a valuable legacy to the incoming administration, and one generally admitted to be sound as a business proposition.

President Taft was also a "people's President." No man heretofore filling the position was so approachable, and none so responsive with his presence on public occasions where it would grace a worthy effort. He never saved himself, Can We Afford to Continue Building abolishing the state lottery. This is an when the interests of the public demanded his presence and participation, and this was as true after his defeat as before harshly, who were simply misled by the public sentiment which demanded a victim to bear the odium of imaginary ills, and in the eternal fitness of things which is said to ultimately prevail, there are some pretty stiff responsibilities to be properly assigned.

In fairness to the Democratic party, it fairly treated by it than by his own party. Whether this was the virtue of the one and the fault of the other, is a question which will be demonstrated within of Taft's experience.

Let Mexico Fight it Out.

"Licking Mexico" is regarded by some as a sort of holiday excursion for our army, and there are many who are criticising the administration for not going down there and "licking the greasers out of their boots," who have very little real conception of the foolishness of such talk. The chances are that as soon as our boys would cross the border, the nationals and insurrectos would "get together" and combine against the "outsider." Of course, we would lick them both in the end, but they would not stay licked, and all we would get out of it would not be worth the cost in lives and money.

The Mexicans would do their fighting in their own way, which is not the regulation way, by any means. There would be a long drawn out campaign of bushwhacking, indian fighting from the mountains, and climatic conditions and lack of transportation facilities would greatly interfere with the operations of an invading army. Moreover, it would largely be an invasion for the protection of business interests, which would not strongly appeal to the patriotic sentiment of this country.

Modern wars are such terrible experiences that they are not to be plunged into recklessly on the mere impulse of hotheads-an influence, by the way, which has already had too much rope in this country's affair, and which, if not checked, will yet involve the country in most serious consequences. A less level-headed President than Mr. Taft might easily have plunged this country into an indefensible war with Mexico, with its consequent loss of life and resources, and it is sincerely to be hoped that his successor will be as judicious.

400 Mr. Taft's Last Vetoes.

President Taft was no doubt fully honest, and perhaps constitutionally right, in his veto of the educational test bill, and the liquor shipment bill, but we are decidedly of the opinion that it would have been more to his personal credit had he left Congress and the Supreme Court finally decide on both of these very important questions, and assume full responsi-

We recognize, of course, that Mr. Taft, his vetoes, but this does not excuse him Attorney-general Wickersham gave the opinion, but it is Mr. Taft who must bear the odium of the veto. It is the very fact that the Constitution appears, at times, to stand in the way of the execution of each other for the recent record-breaking acts of justice, and the futherance of morality and order, that constitutions have fallen into disrepute, and Mr. Taft, guilty. The Democratic House can not in a better light with posterity had he not

> In our very inexpert opinion, the veto power should rarely be used on constitutional grounds to stop a clearly moral and humane law, but such questions should be passed up to the Supreme Court. Mr. Taft, however, expressly disagrees with this conclusion, in the following language;

"It is said that this is a question with whether this proposed act violates the I dissent utterly from this Constitution. proposition. The oath which the chief executive takes and which each member of Congress takes, does not bind him any less sacredly to observe the Constitution than the oaths which the justices of the Supreme Court take. It is questionable whether the doubtful constitutionality of a bill ought not to furnish a greater reason for voting against the bill, or vetoing it, than for the court to hold it to be in-

"The custom of legislators and executives having any legislative function, to remit to the court's entire and ultimate responsibility as to the constitutionality of the measure which they take part in passing, is an abuse which tends to put the court constantly in opposition to the egislature and the executive and indeed been signalized as a business-like and economic one, as far as the Executive deand the executives had attempted to do their duty, this burden of popular disapproval would have been lifted from the ourts, or at least considerably lessened. reassuring; their chief noteworthy feature is their excessive cost; but we are hoping for better results from those now getting ready for a year's work. We give below, an article by Frank E. Williams, editor of the Cecil Whig, for what it may be worth. Mr. Williams may be says is plain, and easily controvertible if is somewhat abridged:

"Walter B. Miller, a member of the State Roads Commission of Maryland, appeared before the Delaware Legislature, ently, in behalf of the DuPont boule vard through that State. In the course of his argument and as an intended strengthening thereof, Mr. Miller said: "A movement is under way in Maryland whereby a system of roads, 1200 miles in length, will be built to connect every county seat with Baltimore.'' Had that atement come from the average man, it night be allowed to pass unnoticed. Coming, however, from a member of the State Roads Commission, one is constrained to ask Mr. Miller, in the name of the Maryland tax-payers, just what Twelve hundred miles of road, at $10,000 per mile, would cost the State the neat little sum of $12,000,000. As a matter of fact the roads thus far built have been costing more than $10,000 per mile. But let it go at $10,000 per mile. Does any man in his senses imagine that this State can put the sum of $12,000,000 into a "movement," that would bring so small a return to the whole people of the

1. Let me mention the matter of the tax rate involved in the project. You can tax the heart out of industry. can discourage business enterprise by burdening it with excessive taxation. The cople of Baltimore city are feeling the force of this statement, very keenly at the present time, and many of the city's wisest and ablest financiers are not a little disturbed by the mounting tax rate in this State. It has more than doubled in the last four years. It will take another jump next year. And what then? Why, then, the people of the State, burdened beyond endurance by excessive taxation, are going to rise in protest—aye, are going to utter a thundering order to "stop." I hear the mutterings of this oncoming order from every quarter of the State, and from nowhere more than from your

and from nowhere more than from your own people of Baltimore.

"Don't the people want the good roads then?" Of course, they want them. There are a great many things we want in this world that are totally beyond our reach. We will shortly have spent some $9,000,000 for road work in this State, and the tax rate will be trebled. Is it thinkable that the people will approve the expenditure of $12,000,000 with the consequent proportional increase in the consequent proportional increase in the tax rates for a mileage of improved roads that is only a fractional part of the total road mileage of the State

What next? Well, after you have pushed the tax rate to a point beyond endurance the people will call a halt. And where are we as a State? Why, we are saddled with millions of dollars of debt, with an excessively high tax rate and with nothing to show for it in the way of roads for the people. Let me illustrate that statement. In my county (Cecil) there are, in round numbers, 600 miles of public road. Out of $9,000,000 of State road leave we will build in that f State road loans we will build in that county from 12 to 15 miles of road, and no more. That is, about one mile in 40 is an "improved road." Can this be no more. That is, about one mile in 40 is an "improved road." Can this be called roads for the people? There are a good many correlated questions that arise here which I shall not stop to discuss. I am simply trying to call attention just now to the fact that the excession in the control of sive tax rate entailed by the building and maintenance of these roads is going to shortly put a necessary stop to the work and leave the people unserved by better consider or decide. It is said that it highways, though excessively burdened by burdened by taxation. Not only so it is going to leave them so burdened by taxation and expensive maintenance of the roads, as that they will have little heart or means or the moderate and needful care of the dirt roads which will be the roads still used by nine-tenths of the county people.

want to further urge the point that the people must take this matter into their very careful and well-informed consideration. The gentlemen who kindly burden thesmelves with the management of our political affairs are entirely too nuch consumed with that exacting occupation to find time for the consideration of this proposition, despite the fact that is the biggest problem with which the State has ever grappled. One is astonished at the ignorance and indifference as to this matter by the great majority of the men who affect leadership of our public affairs. They are content to dismiss it all with the simple assumption that the people want good roads and ought to have them. But we are past that point in dealing with this problem. We come to the place where it is needful to ask whether in the light of present developments we can afford to have them, and if so, how we can afford it. #### Mother of Mother's Day.

Mother's day will be celebrated this year on Sunday May 11th. Following is a little account of it and its originator, taken from the March Woman's. Home Companion:

"The second Sunday in May 'Mothers' Day' will be celebrated for the fourth time, and the white carnation, symbolizing the purity of mother love, will be worn by thousands in the United States and Great Britain. Six years ago, while Miss Anna Jarvis was commemorating the death of her own mother on the second Sunday in May, it occurred to her that the day, falling as it does in a season of blue sky and blossoms, might well be set aside as an annual festival upon which due tribute of affection and remembrance should be rendered to all mothers. Though naturally a modest and retiring little person, Miss Jarvis pleaded her cause so eloquently with leading clergymen, financiers, and public officials that on May 10, 1910, Mothers' Day was celebrated, not only in Philadelphia, her home city, but also in many other places throughout the Union, Special commemorative services were held in the Philadelphia churches, and Miss Jarvis personally arranged for the conveyance of the old and infirm to their houses of worship. Besides devoting much time to correspondence, Miss Jarvis has made several trips abroad spreading the cult of Mothers' Day in Europe.

BREEDING THE BELGIAN HARE. The English poultryman generally has a rabbitry beside his henhouse Great Britain and Ireland raise 30,000,-000 bunnies annually, importing as high as 83,000,000 rabbit skins a year to make over into "ermine," "arctic fox" and "black lynx" furs to fool my lady.

Thirty million bunnies mean 150,000,-000 pounds of good, cheap meat. Then, think of the warm furs those bunnies furnish. Time for us beef trust victims to raise rabbits. Time for us wool trust victims to raise rabbit robes. Here's a chance for our turkey pessimists to make easy money.

Every farm ought to have a bunch of Belgian hares busy on the job. A shed with a yard or a medium sized fenced run with boxes or hutches for does with young is sufficient.

When grass is plentiful little else is required except for does with litters and young stock.

Greens, such as turnips, beets, mangels, spinach, rape leaves, kale and cabbage, are excellent, but cabbage is best and may be fed exclusively. Green food must be clean and not wet, shriveled nor decayed when fed.

When off pasture or in winter feed twice a day one meal of grain, one of greens and keep before them hay, a piece of rock salt and give fresh water three times except when juicy greens are plentiful.

VENT GLEET.

Vent gleet is an offensive, contagious disease that originates in the cloaca and before discovery generally spreads to the fowl's oviduct, rectum and vent. The mucous membrane becomes hot. red and swollen. There is a thin, vel lowish, very offensive discharge which clings to the feathers around the vent, blocks the passage and causes sores and deep ulcers on the outer skin.

Like roup, vent gleet has its own peculiar, very disagreeable odor. The excrement swarms with microbes, and the disease quickly spreads from fowl to fowl. Disinfection is necessary. The victim should be quarantined and quick treatment given, for the disease is often fatal, and when treatment is delayed or the fowl recovers itself it is generally afterward worthless as a breeder.

The affected parts should be thoroughly cleansed in real warm water strong with bicarbonate of soda and held in the hot solution for ten minutes daily while swelling and inflammation are extreme. An injection of a 1 per cent solution of carbolic acid should be given, and a wad of cotton wet in this solution should be inserted several times a day.

The external sores should be well dusted with boracic acid.

To stop discharge we have found nothing better than five grain capsules of venetian red, four to the dose, as often as conditions indicate.

Bread soaked in milk spiced with a little cinnnamon is good diet.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

When a lantern is taken into a poultry house at night the hens think it's sunrise and come down off the roost. A small electric flash light is better, as there is no danger of fire. The quick flash bewilders the chickens. You are through your errand before they can jump down and thus spend the night on the cold floor.

A farm journal advises its readers to buy dead horses and grind them up for their hens. Such a practice would soon destroy an egg seller's business reputation, and any one doing such a stunt should be reported to the board of health

If your hens loaf in a corner during cold weather you should get them hungry and then make them scratch their grain out of litter. We have never seen a hen lay well in winter that did not exercise well. While the production of eggs is vastly increasing, the appreciation of eggs as an article of diet is much higher and, with the increase in population and meat prices, the demand for eggs is really greater than the supply. Millions of people are now solving this egg problem by filling the family egg basket from a back lot flock.

Both the hen and rooster have a reverence for the egg. When they degenerate into egg fiends it is nearly always because some human teaches them the trick. Too few nests, too small a nest, high nests, open top nests, absence of shell making material are mainly responsible for egg eating.

There is an old saying that the tail can't wag the dog. This is rather reversed in the case of some of our Leghorns bred for show, for some of the roosters, especially, are about all tail. This means less eggs, less vitality and less fertility. An order for day old incubator chicks was shipped from Bloomington, Ill., to Saskatchewan, Canada, and, though five days in transit, were in fine shape on arrival. They ship better than eggs for hatching.

The usefulness of many a good breeder, as well as his beauty, is often destroyed by freezing of the comb and wattles. Move the rooster into the middle of the roosting flock at night or sleep him in a cozy covered box.

Two Shamokin (Pa.) neighbors had a scrap over a hen that would fly over the fence. The owner, a woman, claimed her neighbor killed the hen and had him haled before court, where he was found not guilty, and the trial cost the county just $400. Next!

A good feed of onions is fine for the flock occasionally, as onions are good worm killers and good for liver trouble, some flocks being predisposed to the latter ailment. They should be fed raw and not too generously at first, especially where flocks do not have plen ty of greens. As they are apt to flavor the egg, feed them when bens are not

Tramps, Hoboes and Yeggs.

The hobo may be safely termed the railroad enigma. The husky and philosophic wanderers have cost the railroads many thousands of dollars, and the "problem of the hobo" remains unsolved. It seems as impossible for the railroads to shake off the free riders as it is for a canine to rid himself of his hide. The only system which the tramps do not atempt to beat is the Pennsylvania. This is because of its very efficient police sys-tem. The other railroads are not so particular in their battle against the boes. The hobo is distinctly an American creation. No other nation has produced his equal in craftiness, cussedness, humor, and mendacity. Many of his kind were born tired and wouldn't work if they had a chance; others are afflicted with wanderlust; some are forced into idleness by fear of the law; others are discharged employees who cannot secure new work.

These make up the great Brotherhood of the Bo, the United Sons of Rest. There is a difference between a tramp and a hobo, although one word is frequently used to mean the other. A tramp is a man who wanders the country on foot; a hobo is one who carries a gun and beats the railroads. Notwithstanding the beats the railroads. Notwithstanding the definition given by many eminent authorities, the word "hobo" is derived from two words—"Hello, brother!" Among their own kind, hoboes are classified as "mush fakirs," "pikers," "garden stiffs," "gay cats," "blanket tramps," and "scenery tramps." To the police they are all "yeggs."

One not familiar with the vernacular of these men might listen for hours to

of these men might listen for hours to their conversation and then not under-stand a word. Their greatest boast is that they never pay railroad fare, and they will exhibit with pride their ''mileage books," showing carefully recorded data of the number of miles they have journeyed free. Anti-Liquor Bill Passed over Taft's Veto.

The Senate, on Friday, and the House, on Saturday, passed the Webb bill regulating inter-state shipments of liquor, over President Taft's veto. The vote of the former was 64 to 23, and in the latter 244 to 95, and the bill now becomes a law without Executive approval. #### The Doctor's Prescription.

In the Woman's Home Companion appears a story in which is related an account of a prescription given to an exceedingly stingy farmer by a doctor. The farmer took the prescription to the druggist. The druggist told the farmer that he could not fill the prescription and said to the farmer, "If you will read it yourself you will see why." whereupon the farmer adjusted his glasses and read to his astonishment:

"One hired girl to be taken as soon as you can get her and kept constantly on hand thereafter.

"A few new dresses that the wives of your hired men wouldn't be ashamed to wear and a new hat and wrap to replace those you bought her last-thirteen years ago.

BRIDGING DEATH VALLEY.

Civilization's Efforts to Subdue That Defiant Region.

Of all earth's waste places the desert is the most impressive and the most abhorrent. It was almost impossible at times to secure laborers on the San Pedro railway route that skirts Death valley through southern Nevada and California. The loneliness struck a chill into the hearts of diggers and track layers.

For many years Death valley has made good its name and taken ghastly toll of those who ventured on its trackless stretches. Arid, its only vegetation the gnarled and twisted cactus, it covers many thousands of square miles of absolute waste. But civilization is breaking in upon this defiant region. Irrigation is reforming it, Railways are sundering its insular unity. Wagon roads, too, are penetrating it here and there. Daring prospectors are threading it with narrow trails, and now the automobile drivers propose to run a highway through the arid dust from marge to marge.

Recently representatives of the Automobile Club of Southern California started from Los Angeles to begin the work of mapping and placing signs across 1,500 miles of desert road in Death valley and the surrounding territory. In addition to the task of mapping the roads, the water holes will be charted, and the heavy steel signs are to give road directions and the location of water supplies. Seven routes in all are to be charted, which means the covering of 1,500 miles of desert sign posting through the most arid region of America.

It means, too, that the last uncharted and uncultivated section of our nation is to be reclaimed and made accessible. -Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A HELP TO VESSELS AT SEA.

Wireless Signals Keep Mariners In Touch With Greenwich Time.

On New Year's eve the naval wireless telegraph station at Arlington, Va., sent out at midnight, as from the seventy-fifth meridian, a time signal powerful enough, it was hoped, to reach every vessel in the north Atlantic that was equipped with wireless apparatus, as well as every vessel in the Carib-

In October last, at a conference held in Paris, representatives of fourteen European powers and of the United States and Brazil decided that stations should be established in various parts of the world from which day and night time signals could be sent. The situations of nine stations have already been determined, and at least two of those chosen for Europe-the Eiffel tower in Paris, and a station at Norddeich, in Germany-are now sending signals every morning and every evening. The advantages of thus making use of the wonderful science of radiotelegraphy can hardly be overstated. The system will be of the greatest service to shipmasters, for the safety of a vessel at sea is dependent in large measure upon the accuracy of its chronometers. No timepiece is or ever can be absolutely accurate. The most that we can hope for is that those which are carried at sea shall be as accurate as possible, and that the rate of their variation shall be known. But if we an give each vessel the exact Greenwich time every day we shall eliminate all the uncertainty that is now due to defects in the chronometer.-Youth's Companion.

Rose to the Occasion.

James Otis, one of the best known and most prolific writers for boys, died the other day, a white haired man. His real name was James Otis Kaler. In his youth he went to Boston and asked for work on the Boston Journal. The managing editor, thinking to get rid of him in the least painful manner, told him to go out and see if he could write anything new about Boston common. If he could he should have a job. In a little while the young man came in with an interesting article about the initials that idlers had carved on the seats. There began his career as a writer. In letters meaningless to others he had found the word opportunity.-Youth's Companion.

A Flame For a Trumpet. If a vibrating tuning fork be placed in a flame the sound is markedly reenforced. Starting with this fact, an English scientist has devised a new form of phonograph, in which the flame takes the place of the trumpet ordinarily used. The sounds thus re enforced are easily heard throughout a large room. The explanation of the action of the flame is that the sound waves falling upon it change its combustion from a continuous to an inter mittent form, the burning gas being thus thrown into a series of waves that are more powerful than the original sound waves, re-enforce them and thus magnify the sound.-St. Louis Re public.

A Tale of Sven Hedin. An English visitor was very much as tonished at the size and number of the bowls of studs in the bedroom of Dr Sven Hedin. The explanation was as simple as the idea was great. When ever the great traveler sees a man in the street selling cheap collar studs at a penny the dozen he invests his loose coppers in these volatile articles and deposits his purchase in the bowls on his dressing room tables. When, in the frigid atmosphere of an arctic bedroom, the collar stud escapes to some hidden retreat you have only to dip a careless finger into the flowing bowl and begin the day's work in the right key.-Glasgow News.

EXPLAINED.

The Poor Man Couldn't Understand Why He Felt So Dizzy.

The subject of this sketch is a well known Clevelander. The other night he lingered at certain cafes until he couldn't bear the idea of taking a car home. So he hired a taxicab. And such was the luxurious comfort of the interior of that taxi that, having given the driver directions, he immediately sank into a heavenly slumber.

It might have been five minutes or five hours later that he was awakened by the taxi chauffeur, who was shaking him roughly by the shoulder.

"Whassematter?" he demanded sleepily.

"Here's your house, sir," said the driver. "Drive around the block till I finish my nap. "I've done that fifteen times already." "Oh, you have? I wondered what it was that was making me so darn' dizzy. Drive around fifteen times in the other direction." - Cleveland Plain Dealer.

It was out in Elizabeth township. The tramp sidled up the walk after looked around carefully. He knocked, and the lady of the house came out and looked him over.

"Madam, I'm traveling around the world."

"Um." "Walking around the world on a wager.'

CHAPTER XVIII.

It's All My Fault.

I didn't go to the drawing room again. I went into my own room and sat in the dark, and tried to be furiously angry, and only succeeded in feeling queer and tingly. One thing was absolutely certain: Not the same man, but two different men had kissed me on the stairs to the roof. It sounds rather horrid and discriminating, but there was all the difference in the

But then-who had? And for whom had Mr. Harbison been waiting on the roof? "Did you know that I nearly choked you to death a few minutes ago?" Then he rather expected to finish somebody in that way! Who? Jim, probably. It was strange, too, but suddenly I realized that no matter how many suspicious things I mustered up against him-and there were plenty-down in my heart I didn't believe him guilty of anything, except this last and unforgivable offense. Whoever was trying to leave the house had taken the necklace, that seemed clear, unless Max was still foolishly trying to break quarantine and create one of the sensations he so dearly loves. This was a new idea, and some things upheld it, but Max had been playing bridge when I was kissed on the stairs, and there was still left that ridiculous incident of the comfort.

Bella came up after I had gone to bed, and turned on the light to brush her hair.

"If I don't leave this mausoleum soon, I'll be carried out," she declared. "You in bed, Lollie Mercer and Dal flirting, Anne hysterical, and Jim making his will in the den! You will have to take Aunt Selina tonight, Kit: I'm all in."

"If you'll put her to bed, I'll keep her there," I conceded, after some

"You're a dear." Bella came back from the door. "Look here, Kit, you know Jim pretty well. Don't you think he looks ill? Thinner?" "He's a wreck," I said soberly.

"You have a lot to answer for. Bella." Bella went over to the cheval glass and looked in it. "I avoid him all I can," she said, posing. "He's awfully funny; he's so afraid I'll think he's serious about you. He can't realize that for me he simply doesn't exist."

Well, I took Aunt Selina, and about two o'clock, while I was in my first sleep, I woke to find her standing beside me, tugging at my arm. "There's somebody in the house," she whispered. "Thieves!" "If they're in they'll not get out tonight," I said.

"I tell you, I saw a man skulking on the stairs," she insisted.

I got up ungraciously enough, and put on my dressing- gown. Aunt Selina, who had her hair in crimps, tied a veil over her head, and together we went to the head of the stairs. Aunt Selina leaned far over and peered

"He's in the library," she whispered. "I can see a light."

The lust of battle was in Aunt Selina's eye. She girded her robe about her and began to descend the stairs cautiously. We went through the hall and stopped at the library door. It was empty, but from the den beyond came a hum of voices and the cheerful glow of firelight. I realized the situation then, but it was too late. 'Then why did you kiss her in the dining room?" Bella was saying in her clear, high tones. "You did, didn't

"It was only her hand," Jim, desperately explaining. "I've got to pay her some attention, under the circumstances. And I give you my word, I was thinking of you when I did it." The wretch! Aunt Selina drew her breath in sud-

"I am thinking of marrying Reggie Wolfe." This was Bella, of course. "He wants me to. He's a dear boy." "If you do, I will kill him."

"I am so very lonely," Bella sighed. We could hear the creak of Jim's shirt bosom that showed that he had sighed also. Aunt Selina had gripped me by the arm, and I could hear her breathing hard beside me. "It's only Jim," I whispered.

don't want to hear any more." But she clutched me firmly, and the next thing we heard was another creak, and louder and-"Get up! Get up off your knees this instant!" Bella was saying frantically. "Some one might come in." "Don't send me away," Jim said in a smothered voice. Every one in the house is asleep, and "I love you,

Aunt Selina swallowed hard in the

You have no right to make love to me," Bella. "It's-it's highly improper, under the circumstances."

And then Jim: "You swallow a camel and stick at a gnat. Why did you meet me here, if you didn't expect me to make love to you? I've stood for a lot, Bella, but this foolishness will have to end. Either you love me—or you don't. I'm desperate." He drew a long, forlorn breath.
"Poor old Jim!" This was Bella. A pause. Then-"Let my hand alone!"

Also Bella. "It is my hand!"-Jim's most fatuous tone. "There is where you wore my ring. There's the mark still." Sounds of Jim kissing Bella's ring finger. "What did you do with it? Throw it away?" More sounds.

Aunt Selina crossed the library swiftly, and again I followed. Bella looking at the logs, in the most exquisite negligee of pink chiffon and ribbon. Jim was on his knees, staring at her adoringly, and holding both her hands.

"I'll tell you a secret," Bella was saying, looking as coy as she knew how-which was considerable. I still wear it, on a chain around my neck'

On a chain around her neck! Bella, who is decolette whenever it is allowable, and more than is proper!

That was the limit of Aunt Selina's endurance. Still holding me, she stepped through the doorway and into the firelight, a fearful figure.

Jim saw her first. He went quite white and struggled to get up, smiling a sickly smile. Bella, after her first surprise, was superbly indifferent. She glanced at us, raised her eyebrows, and then looked at the clock

"More victims of insomnia!" she said. "Won't you come in? Jim, pull up a chair by the fire for your aunt." Aunt Selina opened her mouth twice, like a fish, before she could speak. Then-"James, I demand that that woman leave the house!" she said hoarsely.

Bella leaned back and yawned. "James, shall I go?" she asked

'Nonsense," Jim said, pulling himself together as best he could. "Look here. Aunt Selina, you know she can't go out, and what's more, I-don't want her to go.'

"You-what?" Aunt Selina screeched, taking a step forward. "You have the audacity to say such a thing to Bella leaned over and gave the fire log a punch.

"I was just saying that he shouldn't say such things to me, either," she remarked pleasantly. "I'm afraid you'll take cold, Miss Caruthers. Wouldn't you like a hot sherry flip?" Aunt Selina gasped. Then she sat down heavily on one of the carved teakwood chairs.

"He said he loved you; I heard him," she said weakly. "He-he was going to put his arm around you!"

"Habit!" Jim put in, trying to smile. "You see, Aunt Selina, it's—well, it's a habit I got into some time ago, and I-lay arm does it without my thinking about it.'

"Habit!" Aunt Selina repeated, her voice thick with passion. Then she turned to me. "Go to your room at once!" she said in her most awful "Go to your room and leave this—this shocking affair to me."

But if she had reached her limit, so had I. If Jim chose to ruin himself, it was not my fault. Any one with mon sense would have known at least to close the door before he went down on his knees, no matter to whom. So when Aunt Selina turned on me and pointed in the direction of the staircase, I did not move.

"I am perfectly wide awake," I said coldly. "I shall go to bed when I am entirely ready, and not before. And as for Jim's conduct, I do not know much about the conventions in such cases, but if he wishes to embrace Miss Knowles, and she wants him to, the situation is interesting, but hardly novel."

Aunt Selina rose slowly and drew the folds of her dressing gown around her, away from the contamination of

"Do you know what you are saying?" she demanded hoarsely.

"I do." I was quite white and stiff from my knees up, but below I was wavery. I glanced at Jim for moral support, but he was looking idolatrously at Bella. As for her, quite suddenly she had dropped her mask of indifference. Her face was strained and anxious, and there were deep circles I had not seen before, under her eyes. And it was Bella who finalally threw herself into the breachthe family breach.

"It is all my fault, Miss Caruthers," she said, stepping between Aunt Selina and myself. "I have been a blind and wicked woman, and I have almost wrecked two lives."

Two! What of mine? "You see," she struggled on, against the glint in Aunt Selina's eyes. "I-I did not realize how much I cared, until it was too late. I did so many things that were cruel and wrong-oh, Jim, Jim!!" She turned and buried her head on his shoulder and cried; real tears. I could hardly believe that it was Bella. And Jim put both his arms around her and almost cried, too, and looked nauseatingly happy with the eye he turned to Bella, and scared to death out of the one he kept on Aunt Selina. She turned on me, as of course I knew she would.

"That," she said, pointing at Jim and Bella, "that shameful picture is due to your own indifference. I am not blind: I have seen how you rejected all his loving advances." Bella drew away from Jim, but he jerked her back. "If anything in the world would reconcile me to divorce, it is this unbelievable situation. James. are you shameless?"

But James was and didn't care who knew it. And as there was nothing else to do, and no one else to do it, I stood very straight against the doorframe, and told the whole miserable story from the very beginning. I told how Dal and Jim had persuaded me, and how I had weakened and found it was too late, and how Bella had come in that night, when she had no business to come, and had sat down in the basement kitchen on my hands and almost turned me into a raving maniac. As I went on I became fluent: My sense of injury grew on me. I made it perfectly clear that I hated them all, and that when people got divorces they ought to know their own minds and stay divorced. And at that a great light broke on Aunt Sewas sitting in a low chair by the fire, lina, who hadn't understood until that minute.

In view of her principles, she might have been expected to turn on Jim and Bella, and disinherit them, and cast them out, figuratively, with the flaming sword of her tongue. But she did not! She turned on me in the most terrible way, and asked me how I dared to come between husband and Kit," she said. "It is so unprofitable." wife, because divorce or no divorce, whom God hath joined together, and so on. And when Jim picked up his courage in both hands and tried to interfere, she pushed him back with one hand while she pointed the other at me and called me a Jezebel.

CHAPTER XIX.

The Harbison Man.

She talked for an hour, having got between me and the door, and she scolded Jim and Bella thoroughly. But they did not hear it, being occupied with each other, sitting side by side meekly on the divan with Jim holding Bella's hand under a cushion. She said they would have to be very good to make up for all the deception. but it was perfectly clear that it was a relief to her to find that I didn't belong to her permanently, and as I have said before, she was crazy about Bella.

I sat back in a chair and grew comfortably drowsy in the monotony of her voice. It was a name that brought me to myself with a jerk.

"Mr. Harbison!" Aunt Selina was "Then bring him down at saying.

"It's Only Jim," I Whispered.

once, James. I want no more deception. There is no use cleaning a house and leaving a dirty corner."

"It will not be necessary for me to stay and see it swept," I said, mustering the rags she had left of my selfrespect, and trying to pass her. But she planted herself squarely before me.

"You can not stir up a dust like this, young woman, and leave other people to sneeze in it," she said grimly. And I stayed.

I sat, very small, on a chair in a corner. I felt like Jezebel, or whatever her name was, and now the Harbison man was coming, and he was going to see me stripped of my pretensions to domesticity and of a husband who neglected me. He was going to see me branded a living lie. and he would hate me because I had put him in a ridiculous position. He was just the sort to resent being ri-

Jim brought him down in a dressing-gown and a state of bewilderment. It was plain that the memory of the afternoon still rankled, for he was very short with Jim and inclined to resent the whole thing. The clock in tne hall chimed half after three as they came down the stairs, and I heard Mr. Harbison stumble over something in the darkness and say that if it was a joke, he wasn't in the humor for it. To which Jim retorted that it wasn't anything resembling a joke, and for heaven's sake not to walk on his feet: He couldn't get around the furniture any faster.

At the door of the den Mr. Harbison stopped, blinking in the light. Then, when he saw us, he tried to back himself and his dishabille out into the obscurity of the library. But Aunt Selina was to quick for him.

"Come in," she called, "I want you, young man. It seems that there are only two fools in the house, and you are one.

He straightened at that and looked bewildered, but he tried to smile.

"I thought I was the only one," he said. "Is it possible that there is an-"I am the other," she announced. I think she expected him to say "Impossible," but, whatever he was, he was never banal. "Is that so?" he asked politely, trying to be interested and to understand at the same time. He had not seen me. He was gazing fixedly at Bella, languishing on the divan and watching him with lowered lids, and he had given Jim a side glance of contempt. But now he saw me and he Max put in, but Bella created a di-his face. He kept his eyes on mine, and I knew that he was mutely asking forgiveness. But the thought of what was coming paralyzed me My eyes were glued to his as they had been that first evening when he had called me "Mrs. Wilson," and after an instant he looked away, and his face was set and hard.

"It seems that we have all been playing a little comedy, Mr. Harbsson," Aunt Selina began, nasally sar-"Or, rather, you and I have been the audience. The rest have

"I-I don't think I understand." he said slowly. "I have seen very little comedy.

"It was not well planned," Aunt Selina retorted tartly. "The idea was good, but the young person who was playing the part of Mrs. Wilsonoveracted.'

"Oh, come, Aunt Selina," Jim protested, "Kit was coaxed and cajoled into this thing. Give me fits if you like; I deserve all I get. But let Kit alone-she did it for me."

Bella looked over at me and smiled

"I would stop doing things for Jim, But Mr. Harbison harked back to Aunt Selina's speech.

"Playing the part of Mrs. Wilson!" he repeated "Do you mean—?"

"Exactly. Playing the part. She is not Mrs. Wilson. It seems that that honor belonged at one time to Miss Knowles. I believe such things are not unknown in New York, only why in the name of sense does a man want to divorce a woman and then meet her at two o'clock in the morning to kiss the place where his own wedding ring used to rest?"

Jim fidgeted. Bella was having spasms of mirth to herself, but the Harbison man did not smile. He stood for a moment looking at the fire: Then he thrust his hands deep into the pockets of his dressing-gown and stalked over to me. He did not care that the others were watching and listening.

"Is it true?" he demanded, staring down at me. "You are not Mrs. Wilson? You are not married at all? All that about being neglected—and loathing him, and all that on the roof-there was no foundation of truth?"

I could only shake my head without looking up. There was no defense to make. Oh, I deserved the scorn in his voice.

"They-they persuaded you, I suppose, and it was to help somebody? It was not a practical joke?" "No." I rallied a little spirit at that. It had been anything but a He drew a long breath.

"I think I understand," he said slowly, "but-you could have saved me something. I must have given you all a great deal of amusement." "Oh, no," I protested. "I-I want to tell you-But he deliberately left me and went over to the door. There he turned and looked down at Aunt Selina. He was a little white, but there was no passion in his face.

"Thank you for telling me all this, Miss Caruthers," he said easily. "Now that you and I know, I'm afraid the others will miss their little diversion. Good night!

Oh, it was all right for Jim to laugh and say that he was only huffed a little and would be over it by morning. I knew better. There was some thing queer in his face as he went out. He did not even glance in my direction. He had said very little but he had put me as effectually in the wrong as if he had not kissed medeliberately kissed me-that very evening, on the roof.

I did not go to sleep again. I lay wretchedly thinking things over and trying to remember who Jezebel was. and toward morning I distinctly heard the knob of the door turn. I mistrusted my ears, however, and so I got up quietly and went over in the darkness. There was no sound outside, but when I put my hand on the knob I felt it move under my fingers. The counter pressure evidently alarmed whoever it was, for the knob was released and nothing more happened. But by this time anything so uncomplicated as the fumbling of a knob at night had no power to disturb me. I went back to bed.

CHAPTER XX.

Breaking Out in a New Place. Hunger roused everybody early the next morning, Friday. Leila Mercer had discovered a box of bonbons that she had forgotten, and we divided them around. Aunt Selina asked for the candied fruit and got it-quite a third of the box. We gathered in the lower hall and on the stairs and nibbled nauseating sweets while Mr. Harbison examined the telephone.

He did not glance in my direction. Betty and Dal were helping him, and he seemed very cheerful. Max sat with me on the stairs. Mr. Harbison had just unscrewed the telephone box from the wall and was squinting into it, when Bella came downstairs. It was her first appearance, but as she was always late, nobody noticed. When she stopped, just above us on the stairs, however, we looked up, and she was holding to the rail and trembling perceptibly.

"Mr. Harbison, will you-can you come upstairs?" she asked. Her voice was strained, almost reedy, and her lips were white. Mr. Harbison stared up at her, with the telephone box in his hands. "Why-er-certainly," he said, "but unless it's very important, I'd like to fix this talking machine. We want to make a food record." "I'd like to break a fcod record,"

"Jim is sick," she said, with a sob. "He-he doesn't want anything to eat, and his head aches. He-said for me-to go away and let him die!" Dal dropped the hammer immediately, and Lollie Mercer sat petrified, with a bonbon half-way to her mouth. For, of course, it was unexpected, finding sentiment of any kind in Bella, and none of them knew about the scene in the den in the small hours of the morning.

"Sick!" Aunt Selina said, from a hall chair. "Sick! Where?" "All over," Bella quavered.

"Suppose he should-Bella, are you telling us all his symptoms?" Bella put down her handkerchief and got up. From her position on the stairs she looked down on us with something of her old haughty manner. "If he is ill, you may blame yourselves, all of you," she said cruelly. 'You taunted him with being-fat, and laughed at him, until he stopped eating the things he should eat. And until he has worn himself out. And now-he is ill. He-he has a rash." Everybody jumped at that, and we instinctively moved away from Bella. She was quite cold and scornful by

sort of rash?" "I did not see it," Bella said with dignity, and turning she went up the

There was a great deal of excitement, and nobody except Mr. Harbison was willing to go near Jim. He went up at once with Bella, while Max and Dal sat cravenly downstairs and wondered if we would all take it, and Anne told about a man she knew who had it, and was deaf and dumb and blind when he recovered.

Mr. Harbison came down after a while, and said that the rash was there, right enough, and that Jim absolutely refused to be quarantined; that he insisted that he always got a rash from early strawberries and that if he did have anything, since they were so touchy he hoped they would all get it. If they locked him in he would kick the door down.

We had a long conference in the hall, with Bella sitting red-eyed and objecting to every suggestion we made. And finally we arranged to shut Jim up in one of the servants' bedrooms with a sheet wrung out of disinfectant hung over the door. Bella said she would sit outside in the hall and read to him through the closed door, so finally he gave a grudging consent. But he was in an awful humor. Max and Dal put on rubber gloves and helped him over, and they said afterward that the way he talked was fearful. And there was a telephone in the maid's room, and he kept asking for things every five minutes.

When the doctor came he said it was too early to tell positively, and he ordered him liquid diet and said he would be back that evening.

Which—the diet—takes me back to the famine. After they had moved Jim, Mr. Harbison went back to the telephone, and found everything as it should be. So he followed the telephone wire, and the rest followed him. I did not: He had systematically ignored me all morning, after havig dared to kiss me the night before And any other man I knew, after looking at me the way he had looked a dozen times, would have been at least reasonably glad to find me free and unmarried. But it was clear that he was not: I wondered if he was the kind of man who always makes love to the other man's wife and runs like mad when she is left a widow, or gets a divorce. And just when I had decided that I hated him, and that there was one man I knew who would never make love to a woman whom he thought. married and then be very dignified and aloof when he found she wasn't, I heard what was wrong with the telephone wire.

It had been cut! Cut through with a pair of silver manicure scissors from the dressing table in Bella's room, where Aunt Selina slept! The wire had been clipped where it came into the house, just under a window, and the scissors still lay on the sill.

It was mysterious enough, but no one was interested in the mystery just then. We wanted food, and wanted it at once. Mr. Harbison fixed the wire, and the first thing we did, of course, was to order something to eat. Aunt Selina went to bed just after luncheon with indigestion, to the relief of every one in the house. She had been most unpleasant all morn-When she found herself ill, however, she insisted on having Bella, and that made trouble at once. We found Bella with her cheek against the door into Jim's room, looking maudlin while he shouted love messages to her from the other side. At first she refused to stir, but after Anne and Max had tried and failed. the rest of us went to her in a body and implored her. We said Aunt Selina was in awful shape-which she was, as to temper-and that she had thrown a mustard plaster at Anne, which was true.

So Bella went, grumbling, and Jim was a maniac. We had not thought it would be so bad for Bella, but Aunt Selina fell asleep soon after she took charge, holding Bella's hand, and slept for three hours and never let

About two that afternoon the sun came out, and the rest of us went up to the roof. The sleet had melted and the air was fairly wirm. Two houseus, and somebody in an automobile down on Riverside drive stood up and waved at us. It was very cheerful and hopelessly lonely. I stayed on the roof after the others had gone, and for some time I thought I was alone. After a while, I got a whiff of smoke, and then I saw Mr. Harbison far over in the corner, one foot on the parapet, moodily smoking a pipe. He was gazing out over the river, and paying no attention to me. This was natural, considering that I had hardly spoken to him all day.

so I sat still, and it grew darker and colder. He filled his pipe now and then, but he never looked in my direction. Finally, however, as it grew very dusk, he knocked the ashes out and came toward me. "I am going to make a request, Miss McNair," he said evenly. "Please keep off the roof after sunset. There are—reasons." I had risen and was preparing to go downstairs. "Unless I know the reasons, I refuse to do anything of the kind," I retorted. He bowed. "Then the door will be kept locked," he rejoined, and opened it for me. He did not follow me, but stood watching until I was down, and I heard him close the roof door firmly behind me.

Lesson XI.-First Quarter, For March 16, 191

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Gen. xxii, 1-13. Memory Verses, 12, 13-Golden Text, Hos. vi. 6-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

In the last part of the previous chapter we see Abraham dwelling at Beersheba, the well of the oath, having made a covenant with Abimelech. There he called on the name of Jehovah, and for the first time we have the name of "the everlasting God," which carries us on to Ps. xc, 2; Isa. xl, 28. Every new name of God has some new revelation of Himself.

The everlasting God not only tells us that He is from everlasting to everlasting, but He loves with everlasting love and carries us in His everlasting arms and is always the same Jehovah. (Jer. xxxi, 3; Deut. xxxiii, 27). Whether He blesses us or tries us, He is the same God of love. For years the heart of Abraham had been made glad by this boy, this beloved son for whom he had waited full twenty-five years, and now he is commanded to offer him for a burnt offering. There is nothing quite like this in all the Bible story. The demand seems overwhelmingly awful, but God is love, and God is faithful, and Abraham knew it. The New Testament record is that, knowing the promise and being certain that God would somehow fulfill it, even if He had to raise Isaac up from the dead, He did receive him from the dead in a figure (Heb. xi, 17-19).

After some twenty years Jacob received Joseph back as from the dead. God spared Isaac and Joseph, but He spared not His own Son (Rom. viii, 32), and, He being literally alive from the dead, all things are made sure to us

I cannot think that Abraham talked this over with Sarah; but, being sure that he would bring the boy back again, he started off early in the morning, taking only two of his young men with him. His destination was Moriah, which is now part of Jerusalem, the same hill that David bought from Ornan, the Jebusite, where the destroying angel stayed his hand when Jehovah said, "It is enough," and where Solomon built the temple (II Sam. xxiv, 16, 24, 25; II Chron. iii, 1).

How wonderful are the associations of truths and places in Scripture and how all center around the cross and the indescribable sacrifice of the Son of God! It was on the third day that the place was reached and the great transaction accomplished (verse 4), and how often a third day event calls our attention to the great center of all past history and to the resurrection time, ever drawing nearer! Consider Jonah and the marriage in Cana and all others that you can find in the book.

Note the confidence with which Abraham says to the young men, "I and the lad will go and worship and come again to you" (verse 5). He was fully they went both of them together (verse 6). One cannot but see the Son of entifically demonstrated. Necessary foreshadowed in Abraham and Isaac.

Hear the lad as he says to his father, "Behold the fire and the wood, but where is the lamb for a burnt offering?" (Verse 7.) Oh, the anguish of the and it should be devoted to religious father's heart! But do we ever con- worship, spiritual improvement, Chrissider the anguish of the heart of God | tian fellowship and Christian service. the Father?

What did he know of "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world?" (Rev. xiii, 8.) Was it just then or when he placed the ram on the altar in Isaac's stead or through the whole incident that he saw Christ's day and was glad? (John viii, 56.) Notice the repeated saying, "They went both of them together" (verses 5, 6, 8), reminding us of the "they two went on" of II Kings ii, 6, 7, 8, 11, and suggesting perfect oneness and accord. We do not imagine any resistance on the part of Isaac as his father placed him on the altar upon the wood and bound him and took the knife to slay his son. We think of such words as "of his own voluntary will;" "I lay down my life of myself;" "I delight to do Thy will, O my God" (Lev. i, 3; John x, 17, 18; Ps. xl, 8; Hab. x, 7, 9), and we remember how the Lord Jesus gave Himself into the hands of His enemies and suffered them to take Him and bind Him and lead Him and mock Him and scourge Him and crucify Him, and He took it all as a cup which His Father gave Him to drink. It was enough. The child of promise was given back to God. Abraham saw God and not the child. and now the Lord speaks, the uplifted hand is stayed, and the ram is placed on the altar in Isaac's stead.

Isaac was spared and given back from the dead in a figure. God spared not His own Son, and as truly as the ram died in Isaac's stead so did Jesus Christ die in my stead. "His own self bare my sins in His own body on the tree;" "the Son of God loved me and gave Himself for me." By His being made a curse for us all who truly receive Him are delivered from the curse of the law (I Pet. ii, 24; Gal. ii, 20; iii. of the country. One cannot do much 13). The Lord did see and provide-Jehovah-jireh (verse 14 and margin). What He has provided in Him see Eph. i. 3-7; Rom. viii. 32; I Pet. i. 3, 4, total abstinence his influence becomes and remember that all is freely by grace (Rom. iii, 24).

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning March 16, 1913. Topic.—How may every Sabbath be "the Lord's day?"—Jer. xvii, 21-27. Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The Sabbath is "the Lord's day." In the commandment given to Moses concerning the Sabbath it is said, "The seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God." In the New Testament, after the Sabbath had been changed from the seventh day of the week to the first, it is simply yet significantly called "the Lord's day." All time is God's, but this seventh portion of time He makes a special claim upon, and we should "render * * * unto God the things that are God's."

Nor is there ever any loss in giving to God what belongs to Him. The opposite is always true. Self interest should compel every man to serve God, for in so doing he best serves himself. This is strikingly true of the Sabbath. The benefits of keeping it holy and sacred unto Him all accrue to us, while failure to do so always means physical or mental or spiritual loss or all three to ourselves.

The question of making the Sabbath the Lord's day is a very vital one in our age. There was a time in the history of our country when certain prescribed regulations were in force concerning the Sabbath from which it was difficult to depart. Whether this was the true spirit of Sabbath observance may be a question, but there is no question that the Sabbath today is too much disregarded. As in the days of Jeremiah, it is given up too largely to business and to pleasure. It is too often Mammon's day and society's day rather than "the Lord's day."

The enemies of Christianity disregard it and denounce it, and, what is worse, professed Christians are neglecting to keep it sacred and holy unto God. The results of Sabbath desecration will be disastrous. God exacts a penalty for disobedience. Israel paid the penalty of a commercialized Sabbath, and America will pay it. It therefore rests upon every individual American citizen to see that the Sabbath is observed in true spirit and in the manner approved by the word of God.

The Bible sets forth no schedule of specific acts to govern our lives upon the Sabbath in order that it may be the Lord's day. It does, however, lay down certain general principles concerning the Sabbath. If we adhere to these we shall make every Sabbath the Lord's day. (1) The Sabbath should be hallowed, kept sacred. God hallowed it, and we should do so in imitation of His example.

It should be made sacred by abstinence from many things that may be perfectly lawful upon other days. There should always be about it an atmosphere of sacredness that speaks to us of God and brings us closer to God. (2) The Sabbath should be a day of rest. It was set apart supremely as a rest day. The word Sabbath means rest-

"to rest from labor." The commandment says, "In it thou shalt not do any work." God "rested the seventh day" from the work of crepersuaded that it would be so. Now ation, and "wherefore the Lord blessed see the lad carrying the wood and the the Sabbath day and hallowed it." father with the fire and the knife, and | Man needs the rest of one day in seven. This fact has been practically and sci-God bearing His cross and remember | work must be done, but the judgment the words, "It pleased the Lord to of God will come upon governments bruise Him; He hath put Him to and employers of labor who require grief" (Isa. liii, 10). It was the only unnecessary work to be done upon way to save us and so wondrously the Sabbath day. (3) The Sabbath should be a day of worship. Man not only needs physical rest, but an opportunity to worship God. The Sabbath provides this much needed opportunity,

Christian Endeavor and Temperance. I am very glad that the Christian Endeavor society has taken up the work of urging total abstinence. There is no doubt that the organized effort that the society will put forth will result in securing hundreds of thousands, If not millions, of signers, and that means a very perceptible decrease in the total amount of liquor consumed and a very considerable increase in the strength of the temperance sentiment to encourage total abstinence so long as he drinks himself. General Idea, According to Evidence Presented, Is That There Is Something Suspicious About Their Neighbor.

The natives of Hiramville were assembled around the postoffice, not to get any letters for themselves, but just to see if anybody got one. During the period of waiting they fell to discussing an individual who had lately built a house in their midst.

'Ye're dead right, Jabe," put in Hi Webster, the general storekeeper. 'There's suthin' almighty queer about thet feller. I had an experience with him on'y yesterday.
