BRIEF NEWS NOTES OF GENERAL INTEREST.

Gleaned from the County and State and our Exchanges.

Mrs. Sparks, a W. C. T. U. organizer, will deliver a lecture at Mt. Zion (Haugh's) church, on Sunday morning, Mar. 16. All are cordially invited.

W. L. Marbury, Progressive Democratic candidate for U. S. Senator, has issued a challenge to Senator John Walter Smith to a joint debate on the question of party loyalty.

Prominent tobacco growers of Lancaster county, admit that they have overdone the culture of the weed the past few years. There is 20 per cent. (300,000 cases) of the 1912 crop yet in farmers' hand, with no demand.

Secretary of State, Wm. Jennings Bryan, has declared that he is not committed to the candidacy of anyone for U. S. Senator from Maryland, and knows nothing of any stand taken, or to be taken, by the administration, with reference to the Senatorship.

A proposition is on foot, in Baltimore, by which a theatrical syndicate would purchase one-half of the Eutaw House property, for a new theatre fronting on Eutaw St. Should this deal be made, the hotel part would be increased to ten stories, fronting on Baltimore St.

An effort is being made, in Illinois, to fix the wages of female employees in Chicago stores at $12.00 per week. It is claimed that $8.00 represents bare living wages, on a most economical scale. Employers say they will hire men, in case they must pay any such wages, as they prefer men and only use women because they are cheaper.

A coroner's jury Monday exonerated J. Harry Bean, of Washington, and his colored chauffeur, from blame for the death of John Zimmerman, of Frederick, who was killed Sunday by riding his motorcycle into the former's automobile. Witnesses testified that Zimmerman was riding at a rapid rate of speed on the wrong side of the road and that he crashed into the machine with terrific force.

President Wilson probably will not call the new Congress to meet in special session until April 7, as Chairman Underwood, of Ways and Means, at a conference told the President that the present outlook was that the committee would not be able to complete its revision of the tariff schedules and have its bills ready to lay before the House by April 1, the date originally set for assembling the new Congress.

A strong effort is being made in Baltimore county to place a fusion county ticket in the field against the Democratic nominees. It is thought that if the Republicans and Progressives get together on a good ticket, they can win, with the help of independent Democrats; but unless they do get together, it will be useless to place any ticket in the field. There is strong sentiment in the county against the present Democratic organization.

A dynamite explosion—the most terrific and disastrous in the world's history, occurred last Friday morning, about 10.40, at Hawkins Point, near Baltimore, when 340 tons of dynamite, being loaded for transport to Panama, was exploded. A steamship, barge and tugboat were blown to atoms and 50 or more men killed. The force of the explosion was distinctly felt throughout Maryland, Delaware and New Jersey.

Postmaster General Hitchcock in his annual report adopted the recommendation of Assistant Postmaster General DeGraw, which was submitted to him in December last, that the aggregate salaries of rural carriers be increased from $1,100 to $1,200 per annum. If adopted by Congress this increase will raise carriers on standard routes to $1,200 a year and increase pro rata the pay of all carriers serving on routes of less than 24 miles.

The Just Government League of this country is right in passing resolutions condemning the action of the Washington police in failing to maintain order during the parade last week. What Washington apparently needs is a new police force. No matter what we may think of the cause of suffrage we must demand that our ladies shall be given the respect that womanhood is entitled to. No man who has any principle at all will insult a woman.

Postmaster John A. Horner, of Emmitsburg, assisted by his office force and carriers, moved the postoffice Monday night in record-breaking time, to the temporary quarters in the Zimmerman building adjoining the permanent home of the post-office, which is undergoing extensive improvements. The improvements, which are being made by Mr. Zimmerman in the permanent quarters, will cost about $1,200, and when finished Emmitsburg's postoffice facilities will compare favorably with those of towns of like size in convenience to its patrons.

"When you board a train at Gettysburg to go to Baltimore you do not know if you will land in Baltimore or in Eternity," said Rev. J. B. Baker in a sermon at St. James' Lutheran church, Sunday evening. Rev. Baker is preaching a series of sermons on the Ten Commandments. "Thou shalt not kill" was the subject Sunday evening, and in this connection was mentioned the apparent disregard for life of some railroads. The name of the Western Maryland was not mentioned, but it is the only direct line to Baltimore and was the inference taken by the audience.—Gettysburg News

A New Taneytown Industry in Prospect.

It seems practically settled that Taneytown is to have a new and extensive industry; one that will not only benefit the town, but the whole surrounding country. A number of gentlemen were here, on Monday, representing the Hanover Creamery Co., inspecting several locations, and will return, this Friday, with good prospects of closing a deal for a lot of ground for their plant.

As we understand the project, it will be a factory of dairy products: condensed milk, fine butter, ice cream, etc., as well as an ice factory and cold-storage plant. The proposed building will be of brick, or concrete, about 70 ft. long, two stories. Ten or twelve hands will be employed. The company has ample capital, and understands the business. The demand for milk will of course be greatly increased, and in this way will benefit our farmers who will find it profitable to supply the demand. By another week, we hope to be able to say the project is assured.

Spelling Contest at Uniontown.

The spelling contest at Uniontown, on March 4, was a highly successful affair and the teachers of the district may justly feel proud of their efforts toward securing increased efficiency in spelling in their schools.

It is believed by those who were in charge of the contest that if the same test had been applied to many who are making protests against the present methods of teaching spelling in the public schools, that the results would have been far less satisfactory.

There were seventeen contestants, of whom, five spelled all of the fifty words, and five more spelled forty-nine of them correctly.

In the final oral contest, all the words contained in that part of the speller assigned for the contest were used, and it became necessary to use words the eighth year grade in order to be able to determine the district representatives.

The following, any two of whom would have represented their district with credit deserve special mention, Edna Robertson, Frances Heck, Anna Little, Carroll Leister, Wilfred Copenhafer, Blanche Cronse. The representatives chosen from Uniontown district are Minnie Marquart and Mary Hahn, of Baust's school.

The Livingston Centenary.

The Church of God, Uniontown, Md., Rev. L. F. Murray, pastor, will celebrate the Livingston Centenary, with appropriate services on Sunday morning, March 16th., at 10 a. m.

"The Morning Star of the Dark Continent," a Missionary Song Story will be rendered, also the following selections: Why Celebrate this man? An exercise by Junior pupils. The Mill Boy. How a boy became a missionary. Africa. How Livingston traveled. A man who stayed by his job. The Slave Raiders. Livingston's death. These selections will be interspersed with suitable songs, solos, and duets.

In addition, charts, maps, and mottoes descriptive of Africa will be on display. The thought in this service will be not amusement or entertainment, but instruction and enthusiasm for mission work. All are invited to be present at this anniversary.

Lindsay—Yourtee.

Miss Kathryn R. Yourtee, daughter of the late Elder Eli Yourtee, of Brownsville, Washington Co., and Mr. Guy Lindsay, of New Windsor, Carroll Co., were married on Wednesday, at high noon, at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. H. P. Fahrney, East Second street, Frederick. The ceremony was performed by Elder Victor Long, of Hagerstown, an uncle of the bride, in the presence of the immediate family.

As a processional, the Lohengrin wedding march was played, and during the ceremony "Annie Laurie" was rendered by Mrs. George Yourtee. The bride wore a gown of white marquisette. Following the ceremony an elaborate dinner was served. The couple left on a wedding trip, after which they will reside in New Windsor, where the groom has just completed and furnished a new home.

April Subscription Expirations.

Naturally, we have an unusually large number of subscriptions expiring in April, to all of which we will send our customary notices soliciting renewals. We would be glad to be relieved of this item of expense, each month, and would appreciate it if our friends would not wait for notice, but would pay up before the end of this year.

On Wednesday morning an unknown man died in Wm. Lohr's barn several miles north of Thurmont. The man was a tramp and had stayed in the barn during the night in company with a gallon jug and a quart bottle and another man, not a tramp. Both were dead drunk when found in the early hours of the morning, and little liquor remained. The unknown man was in very bad condition and died soon after being found. Justice of the Peace Joseph C. Gernand of Thurmont, was notified and with Dr. E. C. Kefauver went to where the dead man was. It was decided that death was caused by drink and no inquiry was held. On his person was found nearly five dollars in money and about a gross of shoestrings. Nothing was found on him to tell who he was or where friends or relatives could be found.—Thurmont Clarion.

The Senatorial deadlock in New Hampshire was broken, on Thursday, by the election of H. T. Hollis, Democrat, as United States Senator, the result of the Progressive movement. Hollis will be the first Democrat to represent New Hampshire since the war.

NO LIQUORS SERVED AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

All Administration Social Events Likely to be Dry.

Washington, March 9.—The edict has gone forth that the Wilson-Marshall administration shall be a "white ribbon" affair, with no wines or liquors served at any entertainments. Not only do the President and Mrs. Wilson and their daughters taboo the sparkling cup, but also do the Vice President and Mrs. Marshall, the Secretary of State and Mrs. Bryan and nearly all the Cabinet. This is one of the most important changes in the social regime in Washington under the new administration, and it is reckoned by those who know that it will save to society hundreds of thousands of dollars annually spent in that one luxury by those who entertain frequently.

When the Secretary of State and Mrs. Bryan had the British Ambassador to lunch with them, a few days ago, and was asked what wines should be served, Mrs. Bryan replied that neither she nor the Secretary drank wines, nor yet did the British Ambassador.

The move of the President and Mrs. Wilson, the Vice President and Mrs. Marshall, the Secretary of State and Mrs. Bryan and others it is expected will put a quietus upon drinking where they are to be entertained.

Mrs. Champ Clark took the initiative in the congressional set after Mr. Clark became speaker, and had only cooling grape juice punches and lemonade served where others gave stronger refreshments.

It was not a particular change for Mrs. Clark, as she had never served wines and liquors; but this fact was not so evident until after the visitors included the white official Washington.

Mrs. Rutherford B. Hayes was the last mistress of the White House to taboo wines and liquors.

School Commissioners.

A regular meeting of the Board of School Commissioners for Carroll county was held in their office on Friday, March 7. In the absence of the president, Dr. Wm. D. Hopkins acted as president pro tem.

The minutes of the February meeting were read and approved. Dr. Hopkins was ordered to purchase a stove for the Ridge school in Mt. Airy district.

Requests for $10 each from the Finksburg and Manchester schools for purchase in libraries were granted; also $10 for Salem school for the erection of a belfry.

The application of Miss Arminia Shipley for a teacher's pension was approved by the Board.

The superintendent, commissioners, L. D. Reid, and Dr. Wm. D. Hopkins were appointed to meet the superintendent and commissioners of Frederick, Howard, and Montgomery counties at Frederick on March 19, for the purpose of considering plans for establishing a joint Summer school for the four counties.

Guy McC. Cookson, Ezra C. Caylor, and William Robertson were appointed trustees of the Uniontown school.

The teachers' salaries for the Spring term were ordered to be paid on Friday, April 4.

Orphans' Court Proceedings.

MONDAY, March 10th., 1913.—Laura E. Gaver, administratrix of William E. Gaver, deceased, returned an additional inventory of money and settled her first account.

Sarah C. Gummel and Holan Warehime, administrators of George Gummel, deceased, returned inventory of personal property and received order to sell same; also returned inventories of money and debts.

John W. Dell, J. Grant Dell and Francis A. Dell, administrators of Amanda Dell, deceased, reported sale of personal property.

Grace S. Raver, administratrix of Agnes F. Wamaling, deceased, returned inventories of personal property, money and debts, and settled her first and final account.

The last will and testament of John W. Gill, late of Carroll county, deceased, admitted to probate and letters testamentary thereon granted unto Julia A. Gill, who received warrant to appraise and order to notify creditors; returned inventories of personal property, debts and money.

Alice S. Englar, executrix of Elizabeth Englar, deceased, received order to take goods, and settled her first and final account.

The last will and testament of Alice V. Frounfeiler, late of Carroll county, deceased, admitted to probate and letters testamentary thereon, granted unto J. Edward West, who received warrant to appraise personal property and real estate and order to notify creditors.

TUESDAY, March 11th., 1913.—Letters of administration on the estate of Harry D. Stoner, late of Carroll county, deceased, granted unto Samuel C. Stoner, who received order to notify creditors.

Percy H. Shriver, executor of Adelaide McCadden, deceased, received order to sell stocks.

The last will and testament of Larkin S. Bennett, late of Carroll county, deceased, admitted to probate and letters testamentary thereon granted unto Westminister Deposit and Trust Company, which received warrant to appraise and order to sell real estate; also order to notify creditors.

Charles E. Nusbaum, administrator of Henrietta Nusbaum, deceased, returned inventories of personal property, money and debts due.

Our continued story will end next issue. For the present, we will not run another one, but will substitute a short story, and fill the rest of the page with matter better adapted to summer reading. Should there be a demand for it, we will run another long story in the Fall and Winter.

Damage to Gettysburg Monuments.

The Gettysburg Compiler, this week, in a detailed article on the damage recently done to monuments on the battlefield, concludes as follows:

"Colonel Cope at each monument gathered up all the broken fragments and it is believed that the monuments can be repaired in some shape with cement so that their original condition during the anniversary celebration. There is not time before this event to replace them with entirely new work, but eventually it will be up to the United States government to replace all these memorials with new ones for the government is the custodian.

There is no clue to the identity of the vandals. The commission has been authorized to offer a reward of One Hundred Dollars for information that will lead to the detection of the vandals who marred the monuments on the battlefield. This reward to be effective should be ten to fifty times larger. The better way would be to put the Secret Service men on the job as quickly as possible who by the process of elimination might reach a suspicion point of view and then have the goings and comings of all those covering the period in which the damage was done carefully followed. Or, if there were any strangers in the neighborhood this could be ferreted out. The notion that it was done by a drunken man does not look plausible as the way Plum Run had to be crossed and the distance covered and the work that was done would eliminate any such conclusion. The only rational conclusion is that the work was that of a mental and moral defective, one who might entertain an imagined grievance and take revenge in some almost insane way.

The commissioners have put on a number of extra guards and will make every effort in their power to prevent any further depredation.

The Yellowstone National Park has its detail of cavalry on duty to prevent depredations in that great park of natural beauty. At Gettysburg where the heroism and patriotism of the country is being preserved in a great national park to point the finger for all time to the peace and union the country wrought here, a regiment of cavalry can not be too quickly sent to preserve the field inviolate from the outrage of depraved vandals."

Suffragettes and the Antis.

With 15 brass bands blaring away, several score gorgeously decorated floats gliding along and the singing of suffrage songs, about 10,000 women of Baltimore will march through the main streets of the city on the afternoon of Saturday, May 31. It is to be a suffrage demonstration and Mrs. Donald R. Hooker, president of the Just Government League, believes it will eclipse the great Washington affair and be a really remarkable parade.

Every suffrage organization in the entire city will be well represented and many that have not come out in favor of equal rights. A number of the county leagues have signified their intention of sending floats. The members of the Talbot County League will send one depicting what woman country wrought here, as she gets the ballot, which promises to be particularly effective, and Harford county, where there are many Quakers, intends to send a float filled with Friends.

The antis in their fine new quarters up on Charles street, in the Anneslee, declare that they are making converts every day. Mrs. Robert Garrett has been particularly successful in persuading uncertain ones to decide against suffrage, and Mrs. W. P. E. Wyse, another ardent anti, has also achieved quite a reputation as a converter. The antis estimate that since they opened their headquarters a short time ago they have kept at least 500 people from casting their fortunes with their sisters who believe in votes for women.—American.

A Rooster Whips Man.

New York, March 13.—Benjamin Sherman, a farmer living near Glen Gardner, N. J., came out second best in a battle with a game rooster yesterday. The farmer, early in the morning, gathered three dozen eggs in a basket. As he came out of the coop, the rooster, a game cock with a reputation as a fighter, flew at his face and inflicted a deep gash just under the right eye with a spur. Before he could recover Sherman was spurred again on the right side of the face near the mouth.

He attempted to catch the bird, but it sank a spur in his right wrist. In making a swing with the basket of eggs he lost his balance and fell to the ground. The bird then spurred him in the right leg several times.

A farm hand who heard Sherman's cries ran to the poultry yard and knocked the bird over with a spade. Sherman took to his bed and called for a doctor. It will be several days before the man will be about.

Lost Both His Legs Twice.

New York, March 12.—For the second time within five years William Fitting, 19 years old, of East Williston, L. I., suffered amputation of the legs by a train on the Long Island Railroad today. This time, however, it was his wooden legs.

Fitting fell under a train at Glen Head, more than four years ago, and both his legs were cut off. He had wooden pegs made and with crutches has moved about briskly. He was standing at the Westbury station today when a woman walked on the tracks in a bewildered way, not seeing a train approaching. Fitting yelled at her, but she did not understand, whereupon he stumbled over to her and pushed her aside just as the train came by.

Fitting was not able to get out of the way and was knocked down and under the wheels. Bystanders thought he had been killed, but found that except for a few bruises he had only lost his "legs" again.

A SURGERY CASE OF WIDESPREAD INTEREST.

Is a Surgeon Responsible for after Treatment in Hospitals?

A case of widespread interest, as well as a very unusual one, was tried before a jury, in Baltimore, during the past few days, the verdict being rendered, on Wednesday. Mrs. Bertha Stevenson, by her husband, of Caroline county, brought suit against Dr. Guy L. Hunner, a prominent surgeon, for $30,000 for alleged lack of attention to Mrs. Stevenson, following a surgical operation performed by Dr. Hunner. The jury brought in a verdict of $1,000, for Mrs. Stevenson, and the case was promptly appealed.

Dr. Hunner performed the operation at the Union Protestant Infirmary, without pay. A few months after the operation, and after the patient had returned home, it was discovered that pieces of gauze and other dressing material had been left in the wound by an interne of the hospital, and these were removed by the family physician. It was claimed that these foreign substances had set up a tubercular condition in the patient. The operation was performed two years ago.

At the trial there appeared some of the most prominent medical men and surgeons of the city to testify on behalf of Dr. Hunner. Their testimony was in the nature of expert evidence, and all of it tended to exonerate Dr. Hunner from any blame of negligence. One of the chief points raised was the liability and responsibility of a surgeon even after the patient's operation had been performed. It was contended, in part, by the defense that the surgeon's liability ended after the actual operation had been completed.

Dr. Hunner said that if the verdict should stand, it would result in putting an end to the work done by surgeons for charity's sake. "Many operations are made by surgeons who receive no recompense for their work," said Dr. Hunner. "If the rules of law that governed the trial of this case are allowed to stand, there will be an end of charity cases and the poor will suffer as a consequence. No surgeon, called on to operate for charity's sake, will want to lay himself open to a heavy suit for damages when he is doing the work without recompense."

"When I operate in a private home I expect, of course, to assume entire responsibility, but when I operate in a hospital, under modern conditions, I ought not to be held responsible for the act of others. The hospital appoints internes who are supposed to be competent, and when it becomes necessary to allow a portion of the work to devolve upon them, I ought not to be held responsible. The law must be changed to meet the change made in surgery during the last 25 years."

Pennsylvania R. R. to Try Electrification.

Electrification of the Pennsylvania Railroad Main Line for suburban traffic from Broad Street Station to Paoli was authorized on Wednesday, by the Board of Directors at a meeting in Broad Street Station. Work will begin at once, and the system will be completed by January 1, 1914. The railroad will not build electric power houses at present, but will buy its power from some outside concern. Probably overhead trolley wires will be used instead of a third rail system or electric locomotives. The improvement will cost $4,000,000 which will be paid out of an unexpended balance of $6,000,000 which remains from the last stock issue.

Eventually, it is believed, the action of the Board means the electrification of the entire system, but this is a matter which it will take years to bring about. The electrification will apply only to suburban trains on the Main Line as far as Paoli. No new tracks will be laid, the new electric cars using the present tracks. Six of the 16 tracks in Broad Street Station will be electrically equipped and all four tracks on the Main Line will be similarly fitted out. The electric and steam trains will use the same tracks, all through trains still being drawn by steam power.

Only a few new cars will be needed for the new service. All the steel cars which have been built for the suburban traffic since 1910 have been made so that they can be equipped with motors and trolley poles. Installation will begin at once.

Firing Engines Hot Work.

Interesting testimony of the hardships of a fireman's life, particularly in the Summer, was given by David May, a fireman, before the Arbitration Board on Tuesday, in New York.

"Believe me gentlemen, it's mighty hot on an engine in the Summer," he said. "One day last August I stood on the footboard of my engine on the Baltimore & Ohio and the thermometer in it registered 120 degrees. While passing through a tunnel near Mt. Airy, Md., the thermometer was actually burst by the heat."

Under these conditions May said he had to make a 76-mile run, which frequently required from 10 to 15 hours, in which much hard work was required of the fireman, particularly ascending Mt. Airy hill, a grade nine miles long.

Owing to the difficulty which has been experienced by passengers from time to time in learning the cause of delays to trains on which they are traveling, it was announced last week at the offices of the Pennsylvania Railroad, in Baltimore, that instructions had been issued to all passenger conductors that when traffic is interrupted trainmen shall pass immediately through their trains and announce the cause of the delay. When a train is disabled at or near a station, trainmen are to notify the passengers as to cause and probable extent of the delay, in order that they may continue on their journey or return on an available train.

Give us your April 1 change of address.

MARRIED.

SELBY—BLIZZARD.—Mr. Murray S. Selby and Miss Mabel E. J. Blizzard, both of this community, were married on March 11, 1913, by Geo. F. Bowers, at his residence.

DIED.

Obituaries, poetry and resolutions, charged for at the rate of five cents per line. The regular death notices published free.

WINEMILLER.—The funeral of Mr. Chas. W. Winemiller, whose death was recorded in our last issue, was largely attended, at Middleburg, M. E. church last Sunday morning, Rev. Hastings, the pastor, officiating. He was 68 years and 29 days old.

HARNER.—Jonas S. Harner died at the home of his son, Edward S., Taneytown district, on Sunday afternoon, Mr. Harner had a stroke of paralysis, several years ago, from which he never recovered, and for the past year or more had been in a more or less helpless condition. On Saturday, he received another stroke, and the end came rapidly.

Mr. Harner was a successful farmer and barn builder, and had accumulated a considerable estate. He was also prominent in politics, as a Democrat, and had served as county commissioner and assessor. He leaves one brother and one sister: Calvin Harner and Mrs. Ellen C. Cross, of Taneytown, and the following children: Robert A. Harner, near Gettysburg; Jonas Harner, an engineer on the W. M. R. R.; Edward S. Harner, Taneytown district; Mrs. Reuben Willide, Middleburg district, and Mrs. Minnie Kelly, of near Harney. His wife died about ten years ago.

Mr. Harner was in his 76th year. Funeral services were held on Wednesday morning, by his pastor, Rev. D. J. Wolf, at the Reformed church, Taneytown, assisted by Elder John H. Utz. The pallbearers were, Samuel Currens, Henry Biddle, John Hiltner, Filmore Bowers, J. A. Kump, James King, John E. Bair and Hezekiah Hahn.

MINNICK.—Ella, wife of Samuel G. Minnick, of Union Bridge, was stricken with paralysis about 8 o'clock, on Monday morning, and lingered in an unconscious state until 1.30 p. m., when her spirit passed to the realms of Eternal Day.

Mrs. Minnick had appeared particularly bright and cheerful while visiting at her son Charles's home, on Sunday evening, and when the awful summons came on Monday morning it was entirely unexpected. Thus has passed away a woman whose quiet unassuming disposition and gentle manners has caused her to be much esteemed by her acquaintances.

She leaves besides her husband, one daughter, Pearl, wife of John Bowman, of Middleburg, and two sons, Charles and Stanley, of Union Bridge, who sincerely mourn the loss of a kind and affectionate mother. She also leaves four grandchildren, Samuel Bowman and an infant brother, and Emory and Charles Minnick, Jr.

Mrs. Minnick was 56 years, 8 months and 2 days old. She had been a member of St. James' Lutheran church, Union Bridge, for a number of years and the funeral services were held there on Thursday morning, at 10.30 o'clock, Rev. G. W. Enders, a former pastor of the church, officiating. After the services the remains were taken to the cemetery at Winters' church and buried.

IN LOVING REMEMBRANCE

Of my mother, Rebecca C. Harnburg, who died three years ago, March 13, 1910.

Sweet be thy rest,
No more we may greet thee
Till with the blest, in heaven we meet thee.
O my son sweet, the awful summons came
There we shall meet, where sad tears fall never
Sweet be thy rest,
By her daughter, Maud.

IN SAD BUT LOVING REMEMBRANCE

Of my dear father, Otha A. Shank, who departed this life eight years ago, March 15, 1885.

The last farewell was spoken,
Just eight years ago today,
Our family circle was broken,
When our dear father passed away.

Lately the house and sad the hours,
Since both father and mother are gone;
But oh! a brighter home than ours,
In heaven is now their own.

IN LOVING REMEMBRANCE

Of Alice, wife of Rev. T. J. Yost, who died one month ago today.

A mother dear has gone and left us here,
We loved her, years we loved her,
But Jesus loved her more,
And he has sweetly called her
To the bright and shining shore.

The golden gate was opened
And a gentle voice said, "come!"
And with farewell yet unspoken
She calmly entered home.
Farewell, dear dear mother,
May your slumbers be as sweet and gentle
As your love,
And when God shall call us homeward,
May we meet in Heaven above,
By Katie.

Farmers Are Advertising.

One of the noticeable features of most up-to-date country newspapers, is the large amount of advertising space now used by farmers. Ten years ago, this was not true. Very few public sales were then advertised, except such as were necessary on account of the settlement of an estate, or in order to foreclose a mortgage, or because of some legal requirement.

Apparently, farmers considered that newspapers were simply to be read, and that the advertising privilege belonged to patent medicine concerns, manufacturers and store-keepers. Taking that view of it, large advertising patronage was more or less resented, because it crowded out reading matter; farmer readers felt that they were paying for something that they did not get—plenty of news.

Now, advertising itself has changed greatly in character. The old set advertisements, standing unchanged from one year's end to another, have largely disappeared. Advertisers have learned to incorporate real news in their business announcements, and very few single ads are left run over four weeks, while many are changed weekly.

Advertising has not only been made more interesting, but it is no longer restricted to a few classes of business. The farmers are getting wise. The Special Notice Column of the RECORD is used more extensively by farmers than by any other class of people. They have learned that if advertising can sell store goods, it can sell farm goods. It can bring customers to a farm, or to a sale, equally as well as to a store, or to some mail order house in a distant city.

The RECORD has contained more public sale advertising, this Spring, than ever before, and we expect it to contain still more next Spring. The farmer has gotten started on the right road, and he will keep it up, because it pays. The weekly paper is for his use—for his profitable use—and he is very foolish when he does not take advantage of his opportunity.

Our President Wilson.

President Wilson apparently comes into office under conditions peculiarly novel, and with less "soreness" on the part of the general public than has been observed for many years. He is generally credited with being a "good man," a scholar, and a student of politics along the sanest of progressive lines. Not an "old time" politician, but a man who will give to the country an illustration of how the affairs of the country can be administered under a newer and better political regime—one not heretofore tried.

His appearance on the stage is accompanied with all the applause and bouquets that any man could wish for. The country is in a prosperous condition, in spite of all the ills from which it is claimed to be suffering. He has a good working majority in both branches of Congress, and the old enemy of his party is split in two. Moreover, the particular element in his party, which he represents, is apparently in public favor, and there appears now no serious obstacles in the way of a successful administration, unless they should come from "reactionaries" within his own party.

President Wilson, however, will be expected to "make good." The applause will soon die down. The time will come, very soon, when the President, and not the candidate, will have to show his calibre. After admiring circus posters, and the music of the band, outside, the crowd will want to see a good show, inside, and the repertoire will need to be very extensive to please all. The overture has been excellent—splendid—now for the play itself.

The remainder of this year will likely show a good many important facts; perhaps some not now even hinted at, and perhaps some that are dreaded may prove troubles of mind only. Let all classes, parties and interests, give the new President and his administration a fair show. If the old brands of politics that we have been using are out-of-date, and there are better ones to adopt, by all means let us be open-minded enough to give them fair trial, and adopt them, if worthy. There isn't much in labels and trade-marks, nor in party names. The inside of the package is the main thing.

What Is Democracy?

The Frederick Citizen scents trouble to Democracy, and to President Wilson's administration, should the confidently published statement be true that the administration intends to take a hand in the Senatorial battle in Maryland, especially in the interest of Mr. Marbury, who appears to have some things to explain with reference to the regularity of his fealty to party.

In other words, the Citizen thinks we "do not elect a President for the purpose of using the power of his administration to elect men who suit him to the United States Senate." Further on, it asks, "have we got a Democratic President? Is this, then, Democracy?" To which, the Citizen emphatically dissents, but believes the President has been misrepresented, and that he will be coming back "hands off" in Maryland.

As we said last week, there seems to be a strong probability that conservative Democrats of the old school will have to "back down, or fight." The chances are, they will do the latter, and the Senatorial scrap is likely to bring on the battle without delay, therefore the importance of the President's connection with the situation.

If there is to be a Democratic "split," it is not likely to be long coming. Before the summer is over, the question will be settled. The Republicans have shown their temper, and that the lead strings do not all centre in the same place, even if disruption follows. Will the Democratic masses be more docile? Will President Wilson and Mr. Bryan be able to harmonize and centralize the whole party? The question is as interesting as a "to be continued" novel.

The following significant paragraphs appeared in the last issue of the Democratic Telegram (Baltimore): "If it is necessary to be a half Populist, in order to be a 'progressive,' and 'progressives' of this sort are going to rule the Democratic party, then its best and sturdiest elements will leave it."

"Regular Democrats regret very much the apparent inclination of the President to get mixed up in a purely state campaign. Whether they are with or against the men supposed to have his support, they believe that it would be better for the President to keep his hands out of purely local fights."

The expressions of these two editors are significant, as showing that "regular Democrats" are not prepared to adopt extreme "progressive" policies, and if such expressions are made so early, and so clearly, it is easy to believe that they represent a host of others which may come along in due course of time—even in advance of tariff legislation.

Ten Hour Days for Women.

The agitation for shorter work days for women, is apt to have the effect, in some cases, of putting women out of employment. In considering the length of a work day, not only the kind of employment but the place of employment, should be taken into consideration, and perhaps the preference of workers themselves, and the various seasons of the year.

A uniform work-day is hard to establish, especially for salesladies and office help, in all the varying employments engaged in by women, for a whole year, and this is especially true when there is no variation in wages paid. Perhaps in factories, where constant work is required with the aid of machines, and where the business of employers is not greatly affected by busy seasons, a maximum day of ten hours work can easily be established but in country towns for various classes of work, we are of the opinion that the law will not work so well, nor without some displacement of female help.

While most of the laws regulating wages and hours are likely humanitarian, and in the interest of laborers, it must not be forgotten that beyond a certain point of reason, the consuming public, and not employers, must pay the increased expense which these movements stand for. With it all, there is too much of the intimation that employers are tyrants, grinding down their help to the finest possible point, for their own selfish profit.

We are decidedly of the opinion that more good would be accomplished for labor—and especially for women—should workshops be, by law, strictly required to be well lighted and ventilated, and the general surroundings be made healthful and sanitary, even to the weeding out of tuberculous, or the employees likely to transmit disease, than by interfering seriously with the length of a day's work. Twelve hours work, in a desirable room, might easily be less objectionable than eight hours work in an undesirable one.

Bryan Laying Pipes For 1916.

Washington, March 6.—Unless some pretty close friends of William J. Bryan don't know what they are talking about, the Peerless One will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for President in 1916, after having proved to the country by his administration of the Department of State that he is not as incurably radical as some persons believe.

Mr. Bryan's way of doing this is comparatively simple, according to those friends, and was hinted at yesterday by the Peerless One when he was sworn in as Secretary of State. At that time he said he expected his tenure to be short.

Secretary Bryan's plans, it is said, are to hold on as Secretary of State for a year or so, in the mean time demonstrating to the people by his acts that he is an absolutely safe statesman, not in the least inclined to plunge the country into disaster. Having demonstrated this, Mr. Bryan is to resign, and when the 1916 convention comes along point out to Mr. Wilson that unmistakable plank pledging him to a single term. Then he is to go before the voters and insist on his own nomination.

When this report was brought to the attention of Mr. Bryan he hastened to explain that what he had said about tenure in office in his talk to the subordinate officials in the Department of State referred only to them and that he had not had his own tenure in mind. He said further that the reference was largely jocose. Nevertheless, there are some prominent Democrats who believe that, whether Mr. Bryan had his own tenure in mind or not, his stay in the Department of State will not last more than two years.—N. Y. Tribune.

Woman's Sphere in the World.

A distinguished bishop of the Church of England once said: "If we left what are called 'burning questions' alone, they would very soon burn themselves out." For years the question of what has been called "the rights of women," whatever the expression thus formulated may mean or cover, has kept well in the front, notwithstanding that it was with confidence predicted of it that it would soon be relegated to the limbo of oblivion. But there are few topics of greater importance than that which stands at the head of this article, because there are few which lie so close to the very foundation of the social fabric.

Goldsmith says: "The modest virgin, the prudent wife, or the careful matron are much more serviceable in life than petticoated philosophers, flustering heroines, or virago queens." She who makes her husband and her children happy, who reclaims the one from vice, and trains up the other to virtue, is a much greater character than the ladies described in romance, whose occupation is to murder mankind with shafts from the quiver of their eyes. Indeed, we shall never know in this world how much we owe to the labors and prayers, and pious efforts and fervent zeal of devoted women. It was to a woman that the risen Savior first showed himself after the resurrection, and to whom he announced his ascension into heaven.

There are many instances in our Lord's ministry on earth in which he showed his love and reverence for woman. His whole life at home—in the house of Joseph and Mary—when he was subject unto his parents, and listened to the tender teaching of his mother, is the perfect pattern to every child in every age. It was thus "he grew in favor both with man and God his Father." He dried the tears of the widow of Nain by words of deepest sympathy and by giving back her son from the grasp of death. He praised the humble offering of another poor, lonely widow in the treasury court of the temple. It is owing to the honor which Christ gave to women during his ministry of love and mercy that Christian society has always held her in love and affection. It is not so in non-Christian nations.

The age in which we live, however, is essentially one of change and innovation. It is decidedly a nervous age. Some style it an age of advancement; and there are not wanting those who would give to women much the same sphere of work as that which belongs to men. Women are now placed in a position, and say and do things of which their good grandmothers and great-grandmothers would never have dreamed, and of which they would not have approved. This, however, is by many considered a fair and just restoration of what they style "the rights of women." This means about, to be just like the men. We read it now and then, that it is a pity there are so few good men. (I don't believe this, however.) If so, how do we account for it? It is very largely traceable to the neglect of the home, the kingdom where the mother's mission is to rule. There woman moulds the father and the children by the unseen power of loving, gentle influence.

Whenever women or men begin to invert the order of things they get into trouble and become participants of all sorts of inconsistencies. And rightly so, for why should they be wiser than their Maker? It is always safe to go by teaching that is divine. St. Paul had something to say on the vexed question, and at the risk of being counted a back-number, I quote him. "Let your women keep silence in the churches; for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law. And if they will learn anything, let them ask their husbands at home." But then, some of the suffragettes say Paul was a bachelor, and didn't know much. But according to Paul there must have been some little agitation of the subject of "equal rights" even in his time. The ban against women speaking in churches has long since been removed. Now the question is being debated as to whether it is not their duty to speak on the street corners, to march in parades, to vote just like the men, and run for office, to serve on juries, and perhaps in the army and navy. It looks a little as though the time had come when Paul must be put into the category of back-numbers, doesn't it?

It is a fact, however, that the greatest opposition with which these suffragettes have to contend is from their own unbelieving sisters. It will be necessary for them to show that the ballot is actually desired by the majority of the women themselves, and this they have not done. The attack made against suffrage by Julia Morgan Harding, of Pittsburgh, head of the Allegheny anti-suffragists, has aroused much interest. The Harding letter names these reasons against the proposed law: "Suffrage statistics show that only 9 per cent of the women of the country want it." "The vast majority of the women of Allegheny county do not want it, because that it is a privilege rather than a right." "Suffrage has done nothing claimed for it in other States. Political women would be a menace to society, to the home and the State." "The best legislation is to be found in States where women do not vote." "It would be a constitutional outrage if woman suffrage were carried into law without the real consent and deliberate demand of the majority of the women of the country."

From this we see that the suffragettes have it not all their own way. The great majority of their sisters are against them. The Anti-suffrage movement conducted by women is a strong one. Their more fervent sisters may regard them as old-fashioned and out-of-date. But, after all, are not old-fashioned ways sometimes the best? They are always the best in the order of nature. The American home used to be the greatest, the most important institution of the land. It was the pride of womanhood. The woman made the home. In these days of woman's clubs and woman's movements, when a woman runs rainbow-chasing after every fad and fancy, undertakes to settle "off-hand the affairs of the universe," she is apt to know least of all about the home. Isn't it a fact that if the home is not what it once was, it is because the women of that home spend too little time in it? Never in the history of this country has there been such a social upheaval—an upheaval of the home, with a resort to the divorce courts—as has been the case since the mainstay of the home—the woman—went into politics and fads.—Rev. H. C. Holloway D. D., in Lutheran Observer.

Best Known Cough Remedy.

For forty-three years Dr. King's New Discovery has been known throughout the world as the most reliable cough remedy. Over three million bottles were used last year. Isn't this proof? It will get rid of your cough, or we will refund your money. J. J. Owens, of Allendale, S. C., writes the way hundreds of others have done: "After twenty years, I find that Dr. King's New Discovery is the best remedy for coughs and colds that I have ever used." For coughs or colds and all throat and lung troubles, it has no equal. 50c and $1.00 at R. S. McKinney's, Taneytown, and H. E. Fleagle's, Mayberry. Advertisement.

The Tariff on Clothing.

The tariff which has been evoked over the suppression of the sweat shops makes an interesting problem for the Democratic Tariff tinkers. They have heretofore, at the instigation of the trusts which control the manufacture of cloth, raised a great furor for free wool, as if the high cost of clothing wholly depended upon the duty upon wool. This is in the highest degree absurd to any man who thinks. The average suit of clothes weighs seven or eight pounds, of which about one-half only is wool, the rest being trimmings, buttons, wadding, etc.

With the duty on wool 15¢ a pound, it will be seen that the farmer only gets from 45¢ to 60¢ protection on a suit of clothes that costs all the way from $25 up to $100. On the other hand, the sweat shops in Great Britain will manufacture a suit of clothes with wages paid to the tailor to make it up of from $3 to $10. In this country the tailor who makes a suit of clothes gets from $10 for a common suit up to $50 for a fine suit of clothes. The sweat shops in this country have gradually reduced the cost of ordinary clothing by the starvation wages they pay the men and women employed.

If these sweat shops are abolished, as it appears they will be, then the price of ordinary clothing must go up unless clothing is admitted free of duty, when we shall get it as the product of the sweat shops of Great Britain and Germany. In that event the men and women employed in the manufacture of clothing will be thrown out of work and wages. And there you are, Mr. Underwood.—Washington Tribune

Chronic Stomach Trouble Cured.

There is nothing more discouraging than a chronic disorder of the stomach. Is it not surprising that many suffer for years with such an ailment when a permanent cure is within their reach and may be had for a trifle? "About one year ago," says P. H. Beck, of Wakelee, Mich., "I bought a package of Chamberlain's Tablets, and since using them I have felt perfectly well. I had previously used a number of different medicines, but none of them were of any lasting benefit." For sale by all dealers. Advertisement.

The Governor of Arkansas has solved the problem of lifting himself by his bootstraps by signing his own commission as Senator and then following it to Washington.

Mrs. Lister, wife of the Governor of Washington, kicked into the street an objectionable bill which had been brought to the Executive Mansion for her husband's signature. Is this a sample of the stern measures to be expected in future from women in politics?

LAZY MAN, BEWARE!
Bill Slowpoke was a lazy cuss. He'd lie in bed and sleep while Mary slaved in the frosty morn to shovel snowdrifts deep.

One morning as he lay and snored while Mary shoveled hard He dreamed he died and went above And handed in his card.

"Take him below," St. Peter roared, "And roast him till red-hot; Then make him ever shovel coal In the redhottest spot."

"He made his good wife shovel snow, Now roast him through and through; Then jab him with hot pitchforks And make the villain stich."

Bill woke. He jumped clear down the stair. He ran as if for life And grabbed the shovel awful quick From his astonished wife.

WHITE HOLLAND HINTS.
Why White Holland raisers strain their gizzard to breed that variety up to high Bronze weights is a puzzler. Bronze standard is thirty-six pounds for cock, twenty for hen, twenty-five for cockerel and sixteen for pullet, while the White Holland is twenty-eight pounds for cock, eighteen for hen, twenty for cockerel and fourteen for pullet.

These weights are all too high-artificial.

Heavyweights are flabby, unprolific breeders and not the market call.

weight, the popular demand, turks from twenty-five to thirty-five pounds selling slow from 3 to 7 cents less and mainly bought by hotels and restaurants.

The White Holland is naturally medium sized, and as such is at its best for breeding and market, and big size is a detriment to its propagation.

A field a flock is a pretty sight. Their pure white plumage, jet black beard, red head and neck tinged with bluish white, pink shanks and graceful, alert movements inspire even a pessimist to enthusiasm.

At market their creamy color, curves and satiny skin quickly attract the buyer, and no expert epicure, after feasting on their juicy, tender sweet meat, will fall to pronounce it the best turkey.

ey ever. It is the most gentle and domestic of turkeys, requires no large territory for roaming, bears confinement better and matures for holiday market quicker than the big boned Giant Bronze.

The hens are prolific layers and, being so gentle, are fine sitters and mothers.

To beget strong progeny a breeder should have a good sized head; neck strong and long and graceful; back broad and descending gracefully to long tail; breast wide, full, round, deep; body, egg shaped, with round end front; wings, large and strong; caruncles, feet, thighs, large; shanks, thick, long, straight, well set.

Male and hen should be well matched, hen more refined of course, as females usually are.

For best results mate adults, eight hens or less. To the gobble avoid overfat and inbreeding, and let mother turkey hatch the poults and run the kindergarten.

DON'TS.
Don't fret. That won't pay the debt. Just feed and water Biddy right. She'll knock that mortgage out of sight.
Don't feed one kind of grain nor introduce a ration too quickly, and don't neglect to feed well and regularly the year around.
Don't depend much on burglar alarms. A well fed, well trained bulldog or collie is the best defense against thieves.

KURIOS FROM KORRESPONDENTS
Q. When is the fertility of eggs lowest? A. Generally in midwinter.
Q. Some of my hens have died, and on opening them I found their gizzards very large. What is the cause and cure for such an ailment? A. Constipation, unless a tumor has blocked the operation of the intestines. The latter cause is rare. A half teaspoonful of epsom salts in water for adult fowl would help patient if given in time. The gizzard is distended simply because the food cannot go farther.
Q. Please state the crosses that made the Slate and Bourbon Red turkeys. A. It is claimed the Slate came from a cross of the White Holland and Black and the Bourbon from a cross of Bronze and Buff.
Q. What influence for color has cabbage on the egg yolk, and what does put that rich yellow in it in winter? A. Cabbage makes a light yolk, and a surplus gives a flabby egg of poor flavor and keeping quality. Yellow corn, clover or alfalfa puts the gold in the yolk and helps to make finest hen fruit.
Q. In your experience with the layers of white eggs and the layers of brown eggs which class have you found is more constant to color of shell? A. The white egg breeds we have kept have never failed to lay a chalky white egg, but we have found the brown egg layers to lay eggs from a dark brown to almost white, individual hens laying two or three shades a week.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.
H. B. Fullerton, a Long Island gardener, sold a barrel of cauliflower for 45 cents and traced it to a city market, where it was being sold for 25 cents a head. Beans that sold for 30 cents a bushel were resold to city housewives at $4 a bushel.

A good big bunch of hens on the roost means comfort and few frozen combs. Roost slats should be arranged so they may be moved close together on a cold night.

One way many get poor laying stock is to set the first hens that go broody. These first hatchers are the hens that do the heavy winter laying. They set these hens on the eggs of the poor layers, when any old bunch of featherers lays the cheap egg.

F. A. Hinds of Battle Creek, Mich., named one of his hens Miss Gatling, because on several occasions she has laid three eggs a day. Are we to infer from this that she manufactures haymow explosives?

In washing white birds for show it is wise to clean the shanks and feet first. To leave these last means handling the fowl after the plumage is washed, and the less of that the better, for a single stain often means the loss of the blue ribbon, especially the prize for the whitest bird.

The Buffalo Poultry and Pigeon club has enrolled a class of over forty boys and girls to study poultry culture. Cornell university is supplying a poultry course to the rural school districts of New York, and the department of public instruction in Pennsylvania is introducing poultry instruction in the rural schools.

Bleaching birds for show with hydrogen peroxide still flows with our fresh new judges that know it all, but the judge of experience knows the natural feathers and the fake by simply running his fingers through them. Peroxide makes a hen's feathers so brittle that a second wash after its use means the breaking and dropping of many of them.

One reason for colds and roup at shows is the use of insecure water cups on show coops. These cups dump their contents in the coop. The birds not only are without drink, but they sleep on the wet sawdust and, of course, get sick.

Missouri shipped 1,296,144 pounds of feathers to the other states last year, value $518,458. Yankees sleep on 13,000,000 tons of feathers, and these must be renewed every twenty years. A million pounds are thrown on the dump heap every year; hence we waste in our country 10,000,000 pounds annually. Missouri sets an example to the nation.

From the amount of grease in some beef scrap there is mighty little hydraulic pressure used at the factory to eliminate it. Much of our so called high protein beef scrap is lehi-hog-lard cracklings.

Mrs. Ellen Bucks of Bristol, Pa., to save her sixty young featherless Plymouth Rocks from the frost cut up her old stockings and made dresses for her little roosters. Thus one more necessity is the mother of invention.

The dropping board should be watched closely, for the drop is a quick indicator of any digestive disorder. When natural it is semisolid, cylindrical in shape, dark green and has a pure white tip. If the tip is yellow look out for trouble.

Iron With Their Feet.
One of the most curious sights which I beheld in Cairo was men ironing with their feet, says a writer in the Wide World Magazine. They had not been mixing their drinks. It is simply a custom of the country. These men were employed in the native tailoring establishments. Except for a long iron handle, the irons were shaped like the ordinary flatiron, only larger. A solid block of wood rested on the top of the iron, and on this the men placed one foot, guiding the iron in the direction desired by means of the handle. For the sake of convenience the ironing boards were raised only a few inches above the ground. The men ironed with great rapidity, and, however strange the method may seem to our ideas, it certainly does the work very well and expeditiously.

GRAND DUCHESS VLADIMIR ON A PUZZLING ERRAND

There is much speculation regarding the read object of the recent visit to London of the Grand Duchess Vladimir. Being an aunt of the Russian czar, her mission naturally is supposed to have great importance, although announced unofficially.

She herself proclaimed the fact by accepting the constant escort of Anthony Drexel, and allowing him to make up intimate little dinner parties where she met people who are fashionable and entertaining but not usually selected to dine informally with royalty. On her partitulary for Mr. Drexel more will be told further on.

There is a belief that the Russian visit really was concerned with grave questions of state involved in the precarious condition of the little czarvitch. His eventual recovery seems to be accepted as impossible. Who will become the heir apparent in case of his death?

Grand Duchess Vladimir was supposed to be in England to secure the personal support of King George and Queen Mary for her son, Grand Duke Cyril, who is next in succession to the Russian throne after the czarvitch and the czar's only brother, Grand Duke Michael.

Cyril married a cousin of King George and his own cousin, an English princess, daughter of the duke of Edinburgh, who married one of Cyril's aunts.

Grand Duchess Vladimir had her second son, Grand Duke Boris, with her, and some presume he was brought to England with matchmaking intent, and the fact that the gay young man (as New York can testify) conducted himself in an exemplary manner, hardly leaving his mother's side, leads to the inference that the mother fancies Princess Mary might be available for his wife. The very thought of that match would be enough to make Queen Mary's hair stand on end.

But the more probable assumption is that the grand duchess' main object in going to London is in the interest of her eldest son, Grand Duke Cyril, who is already by marriage in the British royal family.

Frederick's Fear of Coffee.
In 1777 Frederick the Great turned this loose: "It is sickening to see what quantity of coffee is being used and how much good money goes out of our country for it. Everybody is drinking it, but this must be stopped. We must all drink beer instead. His majesty was raised on beer, and so were his forefathers and his officers. Big battles have been won by soldiers brought up and strengthened on beer, and the king believes that coffee-drinking soldiers cannot be depended on to endure hardships or to successfully fight enemies if another war comes up!"

Arthur Englar had sale of his farm effects, on Thursday, and will remove to Westminster, April 1st. Verely Kooztz has rented the farm.

AN "INVESTIGATION."

"In your opinion, who was to blame for the wreck?" This question was asked the officials of an eastern railroad who were placed on the witness stand at an investigation of a terrible wreck.

"Undoubtedly the engineer." The answer was made by all of them. The blame was put upon the engineer of the train.

And the engineer? He was dead. Being dead, he was incapable of appearing in his own behalf, and the preponderance of the testimony being against him, he was adjudged guilty.

"Is there any way," was asked, "by which such an accident could be prevented?" "The only way is to tighten the discipline upon the employees."

It was patiently explained that no matter how good your roadbed and equipment, no matter what safety appliances may be employed, you cannot insure the perfect working of the human brain—

And so on. Nevertheless—

It was afterwards shown that operating officials had recently issued a circular letter to the passenger engineers calling attention to the lateness of the trains in reaching the terminals and urging the necessity of maintaining the schedules.

The engineers easily understood the significance of the warning. Whatever he condition of the road, they were expected to take the risk and make the time.

The dead engineer knew the track was bad over a certain section. Two wrecks had recently occurred there, but—

He must either lose his job or jam his heavy train through on schedule. He took the risk, held the train to the time tables, put the train into the ditch—and died.

What caused the wreck? A soft roadbed and rotten ties!

To go over that section according to orders was to invite disaster. Therefore the engineer was guilty.

There was nobody to stand up for the dead engineer, who did only what he was ordered to do.

And there was no one to speak in behalf of the 200 passengers. Moreover—

The engineer was dead. And the people easily forget.

REDUCE THE TARIFF—But.

"Reduce the Tariff? Why, of course; Just slash and cut away," Said Democratic Congressman.

"'Tis rob'ry, as you say; So start to slashing right and left, And up and down the line; Reduce the Tariff on all goods, Of course—excepting mine."

"My people thoroughly believe Protection is a fake. Excepting that which is upon Some articles they make. So go for all the other goods And cut them to the bone; But as for my home industries, They must be let alone."

"Reduce the Tariff? Certainly; The Sons of Greed we'll tame, But in my section 'tis as well To let things stand the same. Take off the duty, cut it down; Ah! That is right and fine— On other fellows' goods, of course, And keep it up on mine."

RULES ON TABLE DECORATION

Amateur Needs No Help From the Professional if He Will Follow These Hints.

It is not necessary to have one's table decorated by a professional if the amateur will remember a few salient rules of table decoration.

Do not have clashing colors. They jar on the eye like a "calithumpian" serenade on the ear. To promote this harmony take into consideration the color of the rooms and of one's principal china; likewise, unless your complexion is of the best, your own looks.

A one-color scheme is always safe, but should have a background of green in foliage or trailing vine. In combination do not try to be bizarre, and remember that all shades of the same color will not harmonize.

Pink and lavender are charming together, and far less commonplace than blue or pink. Dark blue and purple and pale yellow are effective; so, oddly enough, are orange and scarlet, as scarlet sage and golden rod.

Further consider the season of the year. A vivid decoration that would look well in the fall or winter would be ugly in hot weather. Likewise would be ugly in your color scheme for the lighting standpoint—natural or artificial.

Laquered brass can be cleaned by washing in hot water, and a little soap may be added if necessary.

Chocolate made before the guests arrived and put in the fireless cooker was piping hot two hours later, when it was served.

Every kitchen should have strips of carpet placed on the floor. Rag rugs are the very best to buy, as these wash well and last for years.

Olives, stoned and chopped and mixed with fresh butter or heavy cream, and cream cheese, make one of the most delicious of sandwich fillings.

If a pair of shoes has become stiffened with walking in the wet, they should first be washed with warm water and then have oil well rubbed into them.

A simple and excellent way to remove dirty marks from a raincoat is to cut a raw potato in slices and rub it well on the marks. It will also remove mud stains from dress skirts, children's coats and men's trousers.

To mend a slightly broken plaster article make a solution of camphor and alcohol thickened with shellac. This must be applied hot to the edges of the pieces to be cemented, and the pieces must be held together until the liquid has cooled and hardened.

Cream of Tomato Bisque. Put one quart of tomatoes into a saucepan with a small onion sliced. Cook twenty minutes, then rub through a sieve and return to the fire to keep hot. Meanwhile boil one quart of milk in a double boiler, thicken with two tablespoons each of butter and flour creamed together and stir constantly until smooth and creamy. Season the strained tomato with a teaspoonful of sugar and pepper and salt to taste.

When all ready to serve add a half teaspoonful of soda to the tomatoes and then the boiling thickened milk. Stir quickly and serve at once with croutons.

Hermits. Cream one cupful butter with one and one-half cupfuls of sugar and add one teaspoonful of vanilla, three well-beaten eggs and one-half teaspoonful of soda dissolved in one tablespoonful of hot water. Mix one and one-half cupfuls of chopped nut meats with one cupful of chopped raisins, one-half cupful of currants, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one teaspoonful of cloves, one-half teaspoonful of ginger, and three cupfuls of sifted flour, then combine the two mixtures, drop from a teaspoon on buttered pans and bake in a moderately hot oven.

Malted Milk Fudge. To make malted milk fudge dissolve three cupfuls of malted milk in a cupful of water, add three and one-half pounds of granulated sugar and three cupfuls of hot water. Boil until the syrup spins a substantial thread or forms into a soft ball when dropped into cold water. Beat and cool in the usual way and cut into squares. A handful of nut meats and raisins may be added just before it comes from the fire.

Veal With Almonds. One cupful of cold chopped veal is mixed with a dozen chopped almonds, pepper and salt to taste, and bound together with a well-beaten egg. Add a dash of paprika. Next roll into small balls and set in a baking pan. Pour over the whole a generous cup of tomato sauce and cook in a fairly hot oven for twenty minutes. Garnish with watercress before serving.

Log Cabin Toast. Sauté strips of bread in clarified butter and drain. Have ready some creamed chicken. Arrange the toast strips log cabin fashion, and fill the center with the creamed chicken. Garnish with parsley.

Chicken a La Maryland. Cut up chicken, brown each piece; then put in kettle and cook slowly until done. Serve on platter with toast points. On same platter serve corn fritters and fried bacon; also sweet potatoes fried.

Will You Spray Your Trees This Spring?

The old, reliable Myers Sray Pump embodies the very points in construction that you have been seeking—ease of operation, durability and effectiveness.

The brass cylinder, brass valves and brass plunger rod, all insure lasting service and freedom from frequent and disagreeable repairs.

The large air chamber makes possible a strong and constant pressure on both the up and down strokes.

The mechanical agitator keeps the solution thoroughly stirred, making it impossible for it to settle.

The self-cleaning, adjustable brass nozzle combines with the other special features to make it a splendid spraying outfit.

CHAPTER XXI.

A Bar of Soap.

Late that evening Betty Mercer and Dallas were writing verses of condolence to be signed by all of us and put under the door into Jim's room when Bella came running down the stairs.

Dal was reading the first verse when she came. "Listen to this, Bella," he said triumphantly:

There was a fat artist named Jas,
Who cruelly called his friends nas.
When, altho' shut up tight,
He broke out over night
With a rash that is maddening, he clas.
Then he caught sight of Bella's face
As she stood in the doorway, and stopped.

"Jim is delicious!" she announced tragically. "You shut him in there all alone and now he's delicious. I'll never forgive any of you."

"Delicious!" everybody exclaimed.

"He was sane enough when I took him his chicken broth," Mr. Harbison said. "He was almost fluent."

"He is stark, staring crazy," Bella insisted hysterically. "I—I locked the door carefully when I went down to my dinner, and when I came up it—was unlocked, and Jim was babbling on the bed, with a sheet over his face. He—he says the house is haunted and he wants all the men to come up and sit in the room with him."

"Not on your life," Max said. "I am young, and my career has only begun. I don't intend to be cut off in the flower of my youth. But I'll tell you what I'll do; I'll take him a drink. I can tie it to a pole or something."

But Mr. Harbison did not smile. He was thoughtful for a minute. Then: "I don't believe he is delicious," he said quietly, "and I wouldn't be surprised if he has happened on something that will be of general interest. I think I will stay with him tonight."

After that, of course, none of the others would confess that he was afraid, so with the South American leading, they all went upstairs. The women of the party sat on the lower steps and listened, but everything was quiet. Now and then we could hear the sound of voices, and after a while there was a rapid slamming of doors and the sound of some one running down to the second floor. Then quiet again.

None of us felt talkative. Bella had followed the men up and had been put out, and sat sniffing by herself in the den. Aunt Selina was working over a jig-saw puzzle in the library, and declaring that some of it must be lost. Anne and Lella Mercer were embroidering, and Betty and I sat idle, our hands in our laps. The whole atmosphere of the house was mysterious. Anne told over again of the strange noises the night her necklace was stolen. Betty asked me about the time when the comfort slipped from under my fingers. And when, in the midst of the story, the telephone rang, we all jumped and shrieked.

In an hour or so they sent for Flannigan, and he went upstairs. He came down again soon, however, and returned with something over his arm that looked like a rope. It seemed to be made of all kinds of things tied together, trunk straps, clothesline, bed sheets, and something that Flannigan pointed to with rage and said he hadn't been able to keep his clothes on all day. He refused to explain further, however, and trailed the nondescript article up the stairs. We could only gaze after him and wonder what it all meant.

The conclave lasted far into the night. The feminine contingent went to bed, but not to sleep. Some time after midnight, Mr. Harbison and Max went down-stairs and I could hear them rattling around testing windows and burglar alarms. But finally every one settled down and the rest of the night was quiet.

Betty Mercer came into my room the next morning, Sunday, and said Anne Brown wanted me. I went over at once, and Anne was sitting up in bed, crying. Dal had slipped out of the room at daylight, she said, and hadn't come back. He had thought she was asleep, but she wasn't, and she knew he was dead, for nothing ever made Dal get up on Sunday before noon.

There was a note moving in the house, and I hardly knew what to do. It was Betty who said she would go up and rouse Mr. Harbison and Max, who had taken Jim's place in the studio. She started out bravely enough, but in a minute we heard her flying back. Anne grew perfectly white.

"He's lying—the upper stairs!"

Betty cried, and we all ran out. It was quite true. Dal was lying on the stairs in a bath-robe, with one of Jim's Indian war-clubs in his hand. And he was sound asleep.

He looked somewhat embarrassed when he roused and saw us standing around. He said he was going to play a practical joke on somebody and fell asleep in the middle of it. And Anne said he wasn't even an intelligent liar, and went back to bed in a temper. But Betty came in with me, and we sat and looked at each other and didn't say much. The situation was beyond us.

The doctor let Jim out next day, there having been nothing the matter with him but a stomach rash. But Jim was changed; he mooned around Bella, of course, as before, but he was abstracted at times, and all that day—Sunday—he wandered off by himself, and one would come across him unexpectedly in the basement or along some of the unused back halls.

Aunt Selina held service that morning. Jim said that he always had a prayer-book, but that he couldn't find anything with so many people in the house. So Aunt Selina read some religious poetry out of the newspapers, and gave us a valuable talk on Deception versus Honesty, with me as the illustration.

Almost everybody took a nap after luncheon. I stayed in the den and read Ibsen, and felt very mournful. And after Hedda had shot herself, I lay down on the divan and cried a little—over Hedda; she was young and it was such a tragic ending—and then I fell asleep.

When I wakened Mr. Harbison was standing by the table, and he held my book in his hands. In view of the armed neutrality between us, I expected to see him bow to me curtsy, turn on his heel and leave the room. Indeed, considering his state of mind the night before, I should hardly have been surprised if he had thrown Hedda at my head. (This is not a pun. I detest them.) But instead, when he heard me move he glanced over at me and even smiled a little.

"She wasn't worth it," he said, indicating the book.

"Worth what?"

"Your tears. You were crying over it, weren't you?"

"She was very unhappy," I asserted indifferently. "She was married and she loved some one else."

"Do you really think she did?" he asked. "And even so, was that a reason?"

"The other man cared for her; he may not have been able to help it."

"But he knew that she was married," he said virtuously, and then he caught my eye and he saw the analogy instantly, for he colored hotly and put down the book.

"Most men argue that way," I said. "They argue by the book, and—they do as they like."

He picked up a Japanese Ivory paper weight from the table, and stood balancing it across his finger.

"You are perfectly right," he said at last. "I deserve it all. My grievance is at myself. Your—your beauty, and the fact that I thought you were unhappy, put me—beside myself. It is not an excuse; it is a weak explanation. I will not forget myself again."

He was as abject as any one could have wished. It was my minute of triumph, but I can not pretend that I was happy. Evidently it had been only a passing impulse. If he had really cared, now that he knew I was free, he would have forgotten himself again at once. Then a new explanation occurred to me. Suppose it had been Bella all the time, and the real shock had been to find that she had been married!

"The fault of the situation was really mine," I said magnanimously; "I quite blame myself. Only, you must believe one thing. You never furnished us any amusement." I looked at him sidewise. The discovery that Bella and Jim were once married must have been a great shock.

"It was a surprise," he replied evenly. His voice and his eyes were inscrutable. He returned my glance steadily. It was infuriating to have gone half-way to meet him, as I had, and then to find him intrenched in his self-sufficiency again. I got up.

"It is unfortunate that our acquaintance has begun so unfavorably," I remarked, preparing to pass him. "Under other circumstances we might have been friends."

"There is only one solace," he said. "When we do not have friends, we can not lose them."

He opened the door to let me pass out, and as our eyes met, all the coldness died out of his. He held out his hand, but I was hurt. I refused to see it.

"Kit!" he said unsteadily. "I—I'm an obstinate, pig-hearted brute. I am sorry. Can't we be friends, after all?"

"When we do not have friends we can not lose them," I replied with cool malice. And the next instant the door closed behind me.

It was that night that the really serious event of the quarantine occurred.

We were gathered in the library, and everybody was deadly dull. Aunt Selina said she had been reared to a strict observance of the Sabbath, and she refused to go to bed early. The cards and card-tables were put away and every one sat around and quarreled and was generally nasty, except Bella and Jim, who had gone into the den just after dinner and firmly closed the door.

I think it was just after Max proposed to me. Yes, he proposed to me again that night. He said that Jim's illness had decided him; that any of us might take sick and die, shut in that contaminated atmosphere, and that if he did he wanted it all settled. And whether I took him or not he wanted me to remember him kindly if anything happened. I really hated to refuse him—he was in such deadly earnest. But it was quite unnecessary for him to have blamed his refusal, as he did, on Mr. Harbison. I am sure I had refused him plenty of times before I had ever heard of the man. Yes, it was just after he proposed to me that Flannigan came to the door and called Mr. Harbison out into the hall.

Flannigan—like most of the people in the house—always went to Mr. Harbison when there was anything to be done. He openly adored him, and—what was more—he did what Mr. Harbison ordered without a word, while the rest of us had to get down on our knees and beg.

Mr. Harbison went out, muttering something about a storm coming up, and seeing that the tent was secure. Betty Mercer went with him. She had been at his heels all evening, and called him "Tom" on every possible occasion. Indeed, she made no secret of it; she said that she was mad about him, and that she would love to live in South America, and have an Indian squaw for a lady's maid, and sit out on the veranda in the evenings and watch the Southern Cross shooting across the sky, and eating tropical food from the quaint Indian pottery. She was not even daunted when Dal told her the Southern Cross did not shoot, and that the food was probably canned corn on tin dishes.

So Betty went with him. She wore a pale yellow dinner gown, with just a sophisticated touch of black here and there, and cut modestly square in the neck. Her shoulders are scrawny. And after they were gone—she and Aunt Selina announced that the next day was Monday, that she had only a week's supply of clothing with her, and that no policeman who ever swung a mace should wash her undergarments for her.

She paused a moment, but nobody offered to do it. Anne was reading De Maupassant under cover of a table, and the rest pretended not to hear. After a pause, Aunt Selina got up heavily and went upstairs, coming down soon after with a bundle covered with a green shawl, and with a white balbriggan stocking trailing from an opening in it. She paused at the library door, surveyed the inmates, caught my unlucky eye and beckoned to me with a relentless forefinger.

"We can put them to soak tonight," she confided to me, "and tomorrow they will be quite simple to do. There is no lace to speak of"—Dal raised his eyebrows—"and very little founcing."

Aunt Selina and I went to the laundry. It never occurred to any one that Bella should have gone: she had stepped into all my privileges—such as they were—and assumed none of my obligations. Aunt Selina and I went to the laundry.

It is strange what big things develop from little ones. In this case it was a bar of soap. And if Flannigan had used as much soap as he should have instead of washing up the kitchen floor with cold dish water, it would have developed sooner. The two most unexpected events of the whole quarantine occurred that night at the same time, one on the roof and one in the cellar. The cellar one, although curious, was not so serious as the other, so it comes first.

Aunt Selina put her clothes in a tub in the laundry and proceeded to dress them like a vegetable. She threw in a handful of salt, some kerosene oil and a little ammonia. The result was villainous, but after she tasted it—or sniffed it—she said it needed a bar of soap cut up to give it strength—or flavor—and I went into the store-room for it.

The laundry soap was in a box. I took in a silver fork, for I hated to touch the stuff, and jabbed a bar successfully in the semi-darkness. Then I carried it back to the laundry and dropped it on the table. Aunt Selina looked at the fork with disgust, then we both looked at the soap. One side of it was covered with round holes that curved around on each other like a coiled snake.

I ran back to the store-room, and there, a little bit sticky and smelling terribly of rosin, lay Anne's pearl necklace!

I was so excited that I seized Aunt Selina by the hands and danced her all over the place. Then I left her, trying to find her hairpins on the floor, and ran up to tell the others. I met Betty in the hall, and waved the pearls at her. But she did not notice them.

Just Then Dallas Had to Open the Door and Step Into the Room.

"Is Mr. Harbison down there?" she asked breathlessly. "I left him on the roof and went down to my room for my scarf, and when I went back he had disappeared. He—he doesn't seem to be in the house." She tried to laugh, but her voice was shaky. "He couldn't have got down without passing me, anyhow," she supplemented. "I suppose I'm silly, but so many queer things have happened, Kit."

"I wouldn't worry, Betty," I soothed her. "He is big enough to take care of himself. And with the best intentions in the world, you can't have him all the time, you know."

She was too much startled to be indignant. She followed me into the library, where the sight of the pearls produced a tremendous excitement, and then every one had to go down to the store-room, and see where the necklace had been hidden, and Max examined all the bars of soap for thumb prints.

Mr. Harbison did not appear. Max commented on the fact caustically, but Dal hushed him up. And so, Anne hugging her pearls, and Aunt Selina having put a final seasoning of washing powder on the clothes in the tub, we all went upstairs to bed. It had been a long day, and the morning would at least bring bridge.

I was almost ready for bed when Jim tapped at my door. I had been very cool to him since the night in the library when I was publicly staked and martyred, and he was almost cringing when I opened the door.

"What is it now?" I asked cruelly. "Has Bella tired of it already, or has somebody else a rash?"

"Don't be a shrew, Kit," he said. "I don't want you to do anything. I only—when did you see Harbison last?"

"If you mean 'last,'" I retorted, "I'm afraid I haven't seen the last of him yet." Then I saw that he was really worried. "Betty was leading him to the roof," I added. "Why? Is he missing?"

"He isn't anywhere in the house. Dal and I have been over every inch of it." Max had come up, in a dressing gown, and was watching me insolently.

"I think we have seen the last of him," he said. "I'm sorry, Kit, to nip the little romance in the bud. The fellow was crazy about you—there's no doubt of it. But I've been watching him from the beginning, and I think I'm upheld. Whether he went down the water-spout, or across a board to the next house—"

"I—I dislike him intensely," I said angrily, "but you would not dare to say that to his face. He could strangle you with one hand."

Max laughed disagreeably.

"Well, I only hope he is gone," he threw at me over his shoulder, "I wouldn't want to be responsible to your father if he had stayed." I was speechless with wrath.

They went away then, and I could hear them going over the house. At one o'clock Jim went up to bed, the last, and Mr. Harbison had not been found. I did not see how they could go to bed at all. If he had escaped, then Max was right and the whole thing was heart-breaking. And if he had not, then he might be lying—I got up and dressed.

The early part of the night had been cloudy, but when I got to the roof it was clear starlight. The wind blew through the electric wires strung across and set them singing. The occasional bleat of a belated automobile on the drive below came up to me raucously. The tent gleamed, a startlit ghost of itself, and the boxwoods bent in the breeze. I went over to the parapet and leaned my elbows on it. I had done the same thing so often before; I had carried all my times of stress so infallibly to that particular place, that instinctively my feet turned there.

And there in the starlight, I went over the whole serio-comedy, and I loathed my part in it. He had been perfectly right to be angry with me and with all of us. And I had been a hypocrite and a Pharisee, and had thanked God that I was not as other people, when the fact was that I was worse than the worst. And although it wasn't dignified to think of him going down the drain pipe—still—no one could blame him for wanting to get away from us, and he was quite muscular enough to do it.

I was in the depths of self-abasement when I heard a sound behind me. It was a long breath, quite audible, that ended in a groan. I gripped the parapet and listened, while my heart pounded, and in a minute it came again.

I was terribly frightened. Then—I don't know how I did it, but I was across the roof, kneeling beside the tent, where it stood against the chimney. And there, lying prone among the flower-pots, and almost entirely hidden, lay the man we had been looking for.

His head was toward me, and I reached out shakingly and touched his face. It was cold, and my hand, when I drew it back, was covered with blood.

ALIMONY BUT NO DIVORCE FOR AMERICAN BEAUTY

Another American girl has found, through bitter experience, that marriage to an influential European, with entree to court circles and the receipt of honors from social leaders in a great foreign capital, is not an unmixed joy. Another European has discovered, on the other hand, that prestige and wealth and station do not allow to permit him to trifle with the affections of a self-willed independent American girl, even when he presents his case before the judges of his own country.

Vittorio Moschini, member of the Italian chamber of deputies, married the beautiful Olga Lulu Davis of Austin, Tex., in 1910. In less than a year he tired of her and sought to put her aside. As divorce is not recognized in Italy, he brought suit for nullification of the marriage, alleging technical irregularities. Against his wife he preferred the most humiliating charges, determined as he was to bring her into disgrace if necessary to accomplish his purpose.

The court in Rome has just decided that these charges are groundless; that the marriage was legal and cannot be dissolved. Moschini must continue to support his wife, and if the couple lives apart he must pay her at least $200 a month.

Moschini is not a titled nobody. He is a scholar, an eloquent orator, a crafty politician, a man of influence in high circles, one of the most powerful members of the Italian congress. Nor was he a fortune hunter, for he counts his wealth in the hundreds of thousands of lira.

And Olga Davis had neither money nor social position. She spent most of her girlhood days on a ranch in Brown county, Texas. Her father, James Davis, was a "gun fighter" and sheriff, and in attempting to round up a gang of horse-thieves was shot and killed. The widow moved to Austin and the daughter, in order to help her mother, who was now practically without an income, obtained a place as clerk in a dry goods store. Her beauty attracted much attention, and through a friend she procured money to go to New York and study for the stage.

A wealthy woman whom Miss Davis met in New York hired her to go to Europe with her as companion for two years. In a hotel in Vichy, Signor Moschini, then on a vacation tour, caught sight of the western beauty and fell in love with her. He sought an introduction, and passionate Latin that he is, proposed marriage at once. Captivated by his graceful manners and blinded by the glamour of wealth and visions of high court life, Olga Davis accepted. Moschini would brook no delay. He bundled his pretty fiancée to Rome, where the mayor performed a marriage ceremony.

Canned Corn Fritters.

Empty the contents of a can of corn into a colander, run cold water over it to rinse off the liquid in which it was cooked, and thus rid it of the tinniness, then crop the corn fine. Mix with two cupfuls of this a cupful of milk, to which you have added a pinch of soda, a tablespoonful of melted butter, two beaten eggs, two tablespoonfuls of flour and salt and pepper to taste. Drop by the spoonful into boiling fat, drain on brown paper laid in a colander and serve hot.

The Forty Year Test.

An article must have exceptional merit to survive for a period of forty years. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy was first offered to the public in 1872. From a small beginning it has grown in favor and popularity until it has attained a world wide reputation. You will find nothing better for a cough or cold. Try it and you will understand why it is a favorite after a period of more than forty years. It not only gives relief—it cures. For sale by all dealers.

Mrs. Housewife — "Mrs. Busybody called after dinner yesterday. She always comes after dinner, and it is so aggravating when you have a big wash on scalding. I didn't have time to prepare anything nice for her. And she'll go around telling everybody what a mean table I set."

Anty Drudge — "She's a regular 'after-dinner' caller. Dinner is what she is after. But why don't you try Fels-Naptha Soap? You would have your wash all through—and dinner, too, before she got here."

Do you make your head save your hands? With Fels-Naptha Soap you can wash clothes in cool or lukewarm water in about half the time it takes by the old-fashioned boiling, hard-rubbing way. It's easier on the clothes, easier on you, saves fuel, time and bother.

One cake of Fels-Naptha will prove this to you next washday.

Be sure to follow directions on the Red and Green Wrapper.

Lesson XII.—First Quarter, For March 23, 1913.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Gen. xxiv, 58-67. Memory Verses, 64, 65—Golden Text, Prov. iii, 6—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

We have our choice this week of a resurrection lesson from Mark xvi or the regular lesson, but as we saw Isaac risen from the dead in our last lesson and this one shows us a bride for Isaac and his marriage, suggesting the resurrection of the bride of Christ, the church, and the marriage of the Lamb, we will take the regular lesson.

After the figurative death and resurrection of Isaac (quite a reality to both Abraham and Isaac) Abraham returned to Beersheba and dwelt there. It is our privilege to dwell always by the well of Him that liveth and seeth us and by the well of God's faithfulness and with joy draw water from the wells of salvation (Gen. xvi, 13, 14, margin; xxi, 31, margin; Isa. xli, 3).

Gen. xxiii tells of the death and burial of Sarah at the age of 127 years and of the purchase of the cave of Machpelah at Hebron as a burial place. Gen. xxiv is the record of Abraham's servant obtaining a wife for Isaac and is wondrously suggestive of the present work of the Holy Spirit obtaining a bride for the crucified and risen Christ. We know from Eph. v, 31, 32, that Adam and Eve are typical of Christ and the church, and there is much to be learned from all the brides of Scripture, notably Rebekah, Rachel, Asenath and others. The Bride, the Lamb's wife, is described in Rev. xxi, and in Jer. iii, 14. Jehovah says that He is married to Israel.

We have seen Abraham promised a seed as the dust of the earth or the sand of the sea and again as the stars of heaven, and we have seen the two combined (Gen. xiii, 16; xv, 5; xxii, 17). Later we shall see the star promise given to Isaac and the dust promise to Jacob (xxvi, 4; xxviii, 14), and some day when we see the elect church and the elect Israel completely gathered, the heavenly and the earthly seed of Abraham, the stars and the sand, we may wonder that we did not see it before.

In our lesson chapter we see a wealthy father and his only son, who had been given back to him from the dead in a figure and to whom he had given all that he had (verses 35, 36). We see also a servant who had control of all his master's goods going forth to obtain a wife for this son and carrying with him samples of his master's wealth (verses 10, 22, 53). The story of the servant's prayer, his childlike trust in God, the direct answer to his prayer and his refusal to eat till he had told his errand are all most fascinating and instructive and a grand commentary on the Golden Text.

As we read of the only son to whom the father gave all that he had we cannot but recall these words: "All things are delivered unto Me of My Father." "The Father loveth the Son and hath given all things into His hand" (Matt. xi, 27; John iii, 35). Then as to the Holy Spirit, whose special work in this age is to obtain a bride for Christ and who is suggested by Abraham's servant and his commission, we cannot but think of these words concerning Him: "He shall testify of me." "He shall receive of mine and shall shew it unto you" (John xv, 26; xvi, 14). The Holy Spirit tells in His word of the wealth and the love of the Son of God, and the only question for the sinner is, "Will thou go with this man?" (Verse 58).

When the reply is, as Rebekah's was, "I will go," then the matter of our redemption is settled, and we start on our way to meet our Isaac, having received from the Spirit evidences of His love and His riches of grace, such as are set forth in Eph. i, 3, 6, 7, 13, 14; Rom. iii, 24; v, 1; viii, 1; I John iii, 1, 2, etc. We must start at once, as the servant did with Rebekah, and not tarry in the old surroundings, for we are now His purchased property, and we are to serve the living and true God and to wait for His Son from heaven, whom He raised from the dead, even Jesus, who delivered us from the wrath to come (I Thess. i, 9, 10). There is no record of the journey beyond the fact that Rebekah and her damsels rode upon the camels and followed the man as he took them and went his way.

It must have been a long journey, commonplace and weary, and they knew not the way, but the man knew the way, and they had only to follow him. The only true life of the believer is to yield to the Holy Spirit's control and guidance and let Him have His own way with us in everything. We cannot but believe that the servant would have much to tell of Isaac and his wealth and that he had little if he could else to talk about, and we can scarcely think that she would grow weary of hearing about him to whom she had already given herself and with whom she expected to spend her life as his wife, the sharer of his joys and sorrows.

Rebekah's covering herself as she met her beloved makes us think of the seraphim of Isa. vi, who in the presence of the glory cover themselves with their wings, and of Paul, some of whose favorite words were, "Not I, but Christ;" "Not I, but the grace of God" (Gal. ii, 20; I Cor. xv, 10). In verse 67 we read that Isaac was comforted, and I Thess. iv, 16-18, tells us to comfort one another, with the thought of meeting our Beloved in the air when He shall welcome His bride.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning March 23, 1913.

Topic.—Vital Living: the lesson of Easter.—I Cor. iv, 8-18. Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

Easter throbs with the idea of life. It comes at the season of the year when life in the natural world, which has lain dormant for so long, once more manifests itself.

The ancient festival of Easter was a tribute to the Goddess of Spring, the time of new life in the natural world. The Christian Easter celebration commemorates the resurrection of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ from the dead—His rising to new life. It also speaks to us of moral and spiritual life through faith in the crucified and risen Lord. Since He was our representative we died with Him, and in Him we rise from moral and spiritual death to moral and spiritual life. The vital living referred to is therefore the Christian life, spiritual life, apart from the new life of the body which will come with its resurrection.

Christianity is a life. It is not a code of morals or some form of ethical philosophy. Before we become Christians we are "dead in trespasses and in sins," and to become one we "must be born again."

The spirit of God must change our natures, which are sinful, and implant within us the spirit of divine life, which comes through faith in Christ and communion with Him. In the parable of the vine and branches Christ Himself teaches the doctrine that Christianity is a life. Paul declares, "It is no longer I that live, but Christ liveth in me." The mystery of such a life is apparent, but the fact cannot be questioned. But why need we worry about our inability to explain a life in union with Christ when physical life, even in its humblest forms, is as great a mystery?

Christian life to be vital must be constantly nourished. In all the realm of nature there is no form of life that lives upon itself. In every sphere of life the appropriation of outward elements is essential to sustentation and growth. The soul must also be nourished, and God has provided the means of grace by which this can be done. There must be daily communion with Christ, the reading and study of the Scriptures, private and public worship and active engagement in Christian service. There must be spiritual "exercise unto godliness." "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength."

Easter should inspire us with a new desire for vital living. If we have been careless and indifferent we should be filled with a new zeal for service at the thought of Christ's new life and the assurance that we, too, shall rise again and live in communion with Him forever.

BIBLE READINGS.

Job xix, 26, 27; Ps. xvii, 15; Dan. xii, 2, 3; Matt. xxii, 31, 32; Luke xiv, 1-15; xv, 24-32; Rom. xii, 1, 2; I Cor. xv, 12-20; Gal. ii, 19-21; Col. iii, 1-5; Eph. ii, 1-9; II Tim. iv, 1-8.

"The Smallest Society in the World." When Dr. Clark was in Asia Minor on his first visit to Turkey some twenty years ago he spent a day or two in the home of Rev. L. S. Crawford in Bursa. There he saw "the smallest Christian Endeavor society in the world" and wrote about it for the Christian Endeavor World, or the Golden Rule, as it was then called.

It consisted of two boys, one an American boy, the son of the missionary, and the other an Armenian boy, Loukas Kyriakides. They were about eight or nine years old at that time and held their meetings on a wide shelf in a large closet, as the boys said "it seemed a little more sacred" to climb up and be there by themselves. Everything that a Christian Endeavor society ought to do they did, even to the taking up of a collection.

The father of the American boy, who is still a missionary in Turkey, writes to Dr. Clark that his son Douglas, who is now a teacher in Phillips academy, Andover, Mass., has just been married to one of Andover's fair daughters and that Dr. Loukas Kyriakides, who is now a research chemist with the Hood Rubber company in Boston, was one of the honored guests at the wedding. Thus there has recently been a reunion on American soil of "the smallest Christian Endeavor society in the world."

Egyptian Fields.

A Christian Endeavor society has recently been organized in the United Presbyterian mission at Alexandria, Egypt. The start was made with a membership of twenty-five, but a good many more attend the meetings who have not yet signed the pledge. The membership represents five or six nationalities from the east and west, drawn together to praise and to pray to the same Lord. Miss Grace Saxen, a well known American Bible teacher, who has been staying in Alexandria for several weeks, has led two of the prayer meetings and has been a blessing to all. Christian Endeavor is far different in this country from what it is in America or England, but our motive and our aim are the same. We have a vast Moslem population on the one hand and on the other a large European population, a great part of which is entirely given up to the things of the world. "Who is sufficient for these things?" Our sufficiency is of God.—V. L. Bigwood of Alexandria, Egypt, in Christian Endeavor World.

Relieves Neuralgia

Sloan's Liniment gives instant relief from neuralgia or sciatica. It goes straight to the painful part—soothes the nerves and stops the pain. Don't rub—it penetrates.

PROOF

MRS. RUDOLPH NISCKE, Oconto, Wis., writes:—"I have used Sloan's Liniment for toothache and neuralgia in the head where nothing else would help me and I would not be without the Liniment in the house."

SLOAN'S LINIMENT

is also good for rheumatism, sore throat, chest pains and sprains.

Pains All Gone

Mrs. C. M. DOWKER, of Johannesburg, Mich., writes:—"I wish to say your Liniment is the best medicine in the world. It has cured me of neuralgia; those pains have all gone and I can truly say your Liniment did cure me."

Pain All Gone

Mr. J. R. SWINGER, of 547 So. 12th St., Louisville, Ky., writes:—"I suffered with quite a severe neuralgic headache for four months without any relief. I used your Liniment for two or three nights and I haven't suffered with my head since. I have found many quick reliefs from pain by the use of Sloan's Liniment and believe it to be the best Liniment on the market to-day. I can recommend it for what it did for me."

A "Come Back" Song.

Congressman John Q. Tillson (Rep.) of Connecticut, in his farewell song in the House, last week, made his climax with a bit of original verse in the shape of a prophecy, as follows:

Republican aquatic birds,
We're lame, as you may see,
From cares of state and long debate
We are to be set free.
We fought the battle bravely, and were
Vanquished in the fray;
Some think we ne'er shall fight again,
I rather think we may;
And we'll come back, yes, we'll come back—
Two years, or four, and we'll come back.

We hadn't even half a chance
To win out in the fight,
But held our banners high aloft
And battled for the right;
Our party sorely rent in twain,
The opposition strong;
Result—we now are leaving you,
But not for very long.
For we'll come back, yes, we'll come back—
Two years, or four, will bring us back.

McKINLEY, HILL, and LONGWORTH, too,
DALZEL and PINCKNEY and others,
And many called Progressives true
Are going with their brothers.
Such fate disension brought to all;
If Hiking's what was needed,
'Twas quite enough. The lesson learned,
I surely will be heeded.
By friend or foe, yes, all come back;
Two years, or four, will bring them back.

Our virtue Uncle Joe, alas!
Is also booked to go;
Regretted much by everyone,
I'll send no more than Joe,
When Danville district voters wake
To look about and find
How much they've lost by what they've done
They'll surely change their mind,
And send him back, yes, send him back—
Two years, not more, will bring him back.
