TWO MEN ARE KILLED AT CEMENT PLANT. Result of a Premature Explosion of Dynamite Charge.

A frightful accident occurred at the quarries of the Tidewater Co., Union Bridge, shortly after five o'clock, Saturday evening, when the day workers were going home and the night men coming in. Samuel Sprague, foreman, and three Italians were loading three deep holes, when some of the dynamite they were using exploded, thus putting off prematurely the three blasts which were nearly completed. Sprague was horribly mangled and torn, but not instantly killed, living nearly an hour after the accident. John Ciofani, a young Italian was ap-parently as badly injured, but lived un-til nine o'clock. Another Italian, a new man, this being his second day's work, had an arm broken at the wrist, and his face severely burned and cut. Pietro Mattioli the fourth man though knocked down by the explosion was practically unhurt. Theories are being advanced as to the cause of the explosion but they are mere conjecture. The danger of using high explosives is ever apparent. Samuel Sprague, was born in Pittsburg, Pa., and received a good education in the public schools of that city. He was for a time a fellow student of the notorious Harry K. Thaw. Being of a roving disposition he wandered from home, and continued his travels until he reached this part of Maryland, about 24 years ago, when he discontinued his roving life and later married Miss Agnes Warner, who survives him with 10 children, the oldest a son in his nineteenth year, and the youngest a daughter one year old. His mother and two sisters are living in Pittsburg. The mother and one sister attended the funeral. He had worked for the Tidewater Co.

two months when he worked for the new railroad contractors. When he first commenced work he lived seven miles from town, and walked that distance twice daily. An aunt of Mr. Sprague's was also at his funeral. He was 45 years, 5 months and 22 days old. Funeral serv-ices were held at the Old Order Brethren church, at Beaverdam, Monday forenoon, Elder Samuel Repp and Elder Senseney officiating.

John Ciotani appears to belong to an unfortunate family. Born in sunny Italy, 20 years and 5 months ago, when about 15 years old he came with a brother-inlaw to America. Four years ago he came with his brother-in-law to work at the Cement Works, his father being al-ready there. Two years ago, in com-pany with his brother-in-law, he went to Baltimore and at the hotel where they spent part of the night, he unwittingly blowed out the gas light. When found, his companion was each block and his his companion was past help, and his own life was saved only by heroic effort. Last Fall when the earthquake occurred in Italy, his family was in the danger zone, and his sister the wife of the man who was asphyxiated by gas in Balti-more, was killed. His father returned to Italy as soon as he could after hearing of a good boy and well liked senting, the State Tax Commission on Thursday handed down an opinion in the Bendann and Hutzler cases in which it holds that certificates of deposit issued by banks are not to be classed as securities subject to the 30-cent tax rate.

The decision vacates assessments levied by the Appeal Tax Court upon funds that were in bank to the credit of the late David Bendann and the late David Hutzler, of Baltimore, at the time of the death of each. The Bendann case involved more than $40,000 and the Hutzler case more than $30,000.

This does not mean that the state can not make such certificates taxable prop-erty, by law, if it desires to do so. The decision refers only to existing legislation.

Judge Oscar Leser dissented from the views of his colleagues, holding that such deposits are evidences of debt and should be taxed at the rate of 15 cents per $100 for state purposes and 30 cents per $100 for local purposes. The city solicitor will appeal from the decision of the commison, which, if sustained, would deprive the city and state of a large revenue. The contention that bank deposits are not covered by the statute in question rests entirely on the clause requiring the assessment to be "at their actual value in the market." It is argued that bank deposits have no actual value in the market. With this technical view Judge Leser does not agree. The disposable value of the deposit would represent its market value; and the mere fact that under ordinary conditions such disposable value is measured by the face value of the deposit does not alter the case. If mere correspondence between market value and face value were sufficient to exclude credits from the operation of the act, then certificates of deposit or promissory notes issued by corporations would also be excluded.

----Dr. Patterson President of M. A. C.

Dr. Harry J. Patterson was elected president of the Maryland Agricultural College, on Thursday, at a meeting of the board of trustees in the office of Governor Goldsborough in the Garrett Building. There was no opposition to him. The board failed, after three ballots, to elect a Secretary and Treasurer, and Wirt Harrison, now the assistant and one of the candidates for the place, was directed to perform the duties temporarily.

Dr. Patterson has been connected with the college for years, principally as direc-tor of the Experiment Station. He was elected president about two years ago, but resigned that office last October and declared himself in fayor of a commission form of government for the college. Sub-sequently, when it appeared that the commission government would not be substituted, Dr. Patterson indicated that he would be glad to be re-elected president.

There was opposition to him at the last meeting of the board. Some of the trustees have indicated that they were in favor of getting an outside man for the pres-inency of the college and it is understood that a number of successful agriculturists in other States were communicated with. Presumably, these trustees were unable to make sufficient headway to justify them the misfortune to his family. John was in offering the name of anyone else at the

LIGHTNING RODS AND THEIR INSTALLATION. -Ten Questions and Answers About

Their Value and Erection.

A large number of letters have been received by the Weather Bureau asking for information about the value of lightning rods for farm buildings. It has therefore seemed advisable to reprint, for the infor-mation of the public, the article entitled "Ten questions and answers about light-ning rods" which appeared in the Week-ly News Letter of July 8, 1914:

(1) Do lightning rods really protect (1) Do lightning rods rearry protect buildings? Answer: Yes; but the rods must be of proper character, properly in-stalled, and properly grounded in relative-ly moist earth. Periodical inspection and maintenance in good condition are indispensable to efficient protection.

(2) Do lightning rods on a building in-crease the danger of its being struck? Answer: Opinion is divided; but a prop-erly rodded house may be struck several times without injury, whereas a single stroke without the protection afforded by the rods may cause disaster. (3) Should lightning rods be put up with or without insulators? Answer: Without. Buildings with metal roofs, or wherein any metal construction employed is properly connected to earth, are already is properly connected to earth, are already partly provided with lightning protection. If rods are added to such buildings the rods should be put in direct metallic con-nection with the roof and other metal work about the building wherever prac-ticable. All down spouts should be led led into metal pipes going into the earth to give the proper earth connection, or the spouts should otherwise be well grounded by use of wires or cables. Insulators are entirely unnecessary, and it is proper to have extended metal work in buildings, like heating and water pipes, all electrically connected together and all well grounded. This latter result is gained incidentally through connections made to water pipes, since the latter usually pass through the earth outside the building.

(4) Are gilded or otherwise expensive points of platinum or special metal or of anciful construction necessary ? Answer: No; not in the least. Sharp needlelike points are effective in dissipating small sustained electrical charges, but such electrical manifestations are perfectly harmless. The imagined superiority of such fanciful points is utterly valueless when the rod is struck by a real lightning flash. The useful qualities lightning rod points must possess are infusibility, mechanical strength and security of installation, and permanence and durability under pro-longed exposure to the weather. Stout bluntly pointed iron rods three-eighths or bluntly pointed iron rods three-eighths or one-half inch in diameter rigidly and se-curely fastened so as to project 1½ or 2 feet above the structure to which they are attached satisfy all the requirements. (5) What material is best for conduct-ors or rods? This question can not be answered fairly in a single statement. Because of its availability and cheapness, as well as its electrical properties, iron is one of the best materials for rods. Iron, however, rusts and deteriorates under however, rusts and deteriorates under prolonged exposure to the weather. This s only partly overcome by galvanizing; hence galvanized iron lightning rods methods of making connectiens to earth In general terms the conductor should be carried down into the earth and away from the building in a trench or other excavation, so as to reach and embed the conductor itself or plates attached thereto into permanently moist earth. Connections with water pipes or other metal work itself connected to earth constitute good grounds.

 (8) Are Government buildings provided with lightning rods? Answer: Yes; many of them, but naturally not every one.

(9) Does the Government use the material or the rods or the system of any particular agency? Answer: No; there is nothing mysterious or exceptional about lightning rods, the material of which they are composed, or their construction and installation. Suspicion may well be aroused as to the reliability of those mak-ing extravogent cloime of emeticies. ing extravagant claims of superiority for their particular wares to the exclusion of others.

others. (10) What is the best arrangement of rods on a building ? Answer: A building completely screened and surrounded by and inclosed beneath a cage or network of substantial metallic conductors, all preperty interconnected and inined to the properly interconnected and joined to the earth, would be most effectively protected from lightning discharges. For ordinary purposes a far simpler system is adequate. For example, good protection is afforded by a conductor running along the ridge of a building and extending to the earth, either at the middle of the sides or, pre-ferably, at each of the four corners. Points should rise above any prominent features of the building, such as chim-ners of the building, such as chimnews or the building, such as chim-news or, in the absence of these features, from the ridge of the roof at intervals of 25 feet or thereabouts. Fuller details of lightning-rod installation are to be found in Farmers' Bulletin 367, which may be had on application. -U. S. Dept. Agri-culture culture.

Reply of the U.S. to Germany.

The reply of the State Department, made the latter part of last week. to the last German note, is generally taken as a last warning to Germany that if any more vessels are sunk, carrying Ameri-ican citizens, the act will be considered sufficient occasion for a declaration of war by this country against Germany. Such is not the plain language of the reply, but if it means anything, seriously,

The note is generally backed in this contry by public sentiment, regardless of party, as being not only just and right, but straight forward and without evasion of the impression of the issues.

While war is not likely to occur, both the War and Navy Departments are ac-tively "taking stock" and making prep-arations for the possibility of trouble. It is held by some that Germany would welcome a state of war between the two countries, as it would at once have the effect of shutting off the shipment of war materials from the United States to the allies, and at the same time would not likely mean an increase of the army of the allies against Germany, through the sending there of U. S. troops or war ships.

-000-Notes from the War.

An American owned steamer, "Leel anaw." flying the American flag, was sunk by a German submarine on Monday, enroute from Archangel to Belfast. with a cargo of flax. Flax was declared a contraband of war, in April, by Germany. The German commander set the crew afloat, then destroyed the vessel, as well as cargo. There is difference of opinion, in diplomatic circles, whether anything but the cargo had a right to be destroyed, but the U. S. will hold that the destruction of the vessel was contrary to international law. ---

That Johnzie E. Beasman, of Carroll county, who recently came out for Blair Lee's nomination for the Governorship, is to have the support of the Lee forces in the Legislature for the State Treasurership was one of the bits of gossip that found its way through the Rennert Hotel, on Wednesday. Mr. Beasman, who has ong been one of the Democratic leaders in Carroll, was in a very willing mood concerning the Governorship, but the line-up did not favor him. So, after a long period of cogitation, he, about two weeks ago climbed right up on top of the Lee bandwagon. Mr. Vandiver is said to be a candidate to succeed himself, but is now saying little.

The citizens of Myersville, Frederick county, have settled the electric light project by a vote of 34 to 4 in its favor. This result was reached at the town election held on July 10. The proposition voted on was the installation of not less than 12 lights, at a cost of $20 each per year, the lights to be of 60 candle-power and to burn all night and every night. The Hagerstown & Frederick Railroad Co., which will install the system, will give two lights free over and above the 12 lights to be paid for. The lamps are not to be over 150 feet apart. In order to secure this rate, there must be 30 individual users of electric lights in the town.

At the annual meeting of the Maryland Bar Association, held July 7, 8 and 9th, at Cape May, New Jersey, Hon. Hamnond Urner, Chief Judge of the Sixth Judicial Circuit, and one of the Judges of the Court of Appeals of Maryland, was elected President of the State Bar Association for the ensuing year; and Charles O. Cleroson, a member of the local bar, was elected Vice-President of the State Bar Association to represent the Fifth dicial Circuit, composed of Carroll, Howard and Anne Arundel counties. The new President is a son of Hon. Milton G. Urner, one of the senior members of the Frederick Bar, who is also well known in Carroll county. Mr. Clemson is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for State's Attorney for Carroll county.

and Keymar, and Mr. Reifsnider's mother, of Taneytown, met with an auto accident, near Lewistown, Frederick county last Sunday. In company with two other autos, they were on their way to Harper's Ferry, and in passing an auto coming to ward them, at a curve in the road, th the Reifsnider car was overturned, which threw all of the occupants out, fortunately out serious injury to any of them. Mrs. David Reifsnider was running the car, at the time, and owing to a corn field between could not see that a car was approaching around the curve. She turned out of the way as soon as the car was seen, and in so doing ran into a small pile of crushed stone, a tire bursting and the machine skidding at the same time, causing the accident. Had she taken less space for passing, or had the tire held, or had the cornfield not been there, there would have been no accident.

The engine of the machine was not damaged, the injuries to it being limited to windshield and fenders. Mrs. Reifsnider, Sr., was brought home, on Wednesday, very little the worse for her experience, while all the rest are good as new. Mrs. David says the accident does not scare her a bit, but is ready to run the machine again any time.

Grangers' Storm Insurance Co.

Messrs. F. Neal Parke and Charles O. Clemson, receivers for The Grangers' Mutual Fire & Storm Insurance Company, of Carroll County, have qualified by filing a corporate surety band in the sum of $10,000, and have taken over the books and papers, applications, etc., belonging to the company and are engaged in going over the books of the company preparatory to making a statement as to the present condition of the affairs of the concern. The receivers will have a difficult task before them to work out the problem of determining just what share losses shall be assessed against the policy-holders of the company. The assets of the company consist almost entirely of uncollected assessments against policy-holders.

Reported Change in Lincoln Road.

According to the Frederick Post there is a report current in Frederick that the route of the Lincoln National highway has been changed, to go via Baltimore, Washington and Frederick, to Gettysburg. As the story goes, President Wilson interceded with the Lincoln Highway Association, and caused the change, though the route will be increased 172 miles.

We have not seen this report verified anywhere, nor does anybody take much interest in it, as the whole scheme is regarded largely as a fanciful proposition, without much real solid backing to it, no matter which way the road goes-if it 'goes'' at all.

Weller Likely to be Nominated.

The announcement, this week, from ov. Goldsborough, that he will not enter a contest for the Republican Gubernatorial nomination, seems to make it practically assured that O. E. Weller of the State Road Commission, will se-cure the nomination. Wm. T. Warburton has many supporters for the place. but the Weller boom has such support and headway that he will likely win easily. It is hoped by state leaders that and headway that he will inkery will easily. It is hoped by state leaders that Mr. Warburton may yet consent to be a candidate for Attorney General. Mr. Warburton, however, shows no signs of stepping aside, and has outlined a complete tour of the counties of the state. He has not yet qualified as a candidate, but it is said that his papers will be filed early next week. There are no dications that the contest between Weller and Warburton will be other than friendly, so that no bitterness in the party is likely to be stirred up.

----Mr. Williams' Speech at the Key Monument.

The speech delivered by Wm. F Williams, of Baltimore, at the unveiling of the Key Monument, June 12, is reproduced on our editorial page, this week. It contains so many good things—so many splendid thoughts-that we feel it to be entitled to greater publicity than was given by its delivery. In many respects it sounds notes that many of us fail to realize, or realizing, fail to observe. ----

W. M. Road to Build Signals.

The Western Maryland Railway Company has awarded a contract for the immediate construction of 80 miles of automatic block signals, covering the road from Big Pool to Williamsport and from Hagerstown to Emory Grove. The contract was secured by the Union Switch and Signal Company, which recently com-pleted the signal system for the railway company between Cumberland and Big

The installation of this system in the territory covered by the contract will give the Western Maryland a block system for all of its single-track line between Cumberland and Baltimore. The road will, it is declared, have one of the best automatic systems in the East on the completion of the contract.

The Union Switch and Signal Company now has its force on the line to be covered, and it is estimated that the work of installing these signals will be completed and in working order within four months time, or about 120 working days.

The sale of the John S. Weybright farm, by Oliver D. Birely, Mortgagee, as it appears in this issue, has been with-drawn, and the property will be sold by with-Albert W. Ecker and Allen D. should be of ample size (not less than one-quarter inch in diameter) carefully installed and subjected to systematic inspection and repair.

Two-strand cable galvanized-iron fence wire of substantial size of the same style as barbed wire but without the barbs furnishes a very good material for cheap iron lightning rods. The presence of the barbs constitutes a rather serious inconvenience in handling and installing such a conductor, and no material benefit is derived from their presence.

Copper is better than iron not only on account of its indestructibility but also because of its softness and pliability, which make it easy to install. Scientists are not n accord in regard to the relative merits of the electrical properties of copper and iron, but in any case questions of cost, durability, and the like far outweigh minor differences in electrical properties. Aluminum is a competitor for iron and opper for lightning rods. Its durability inder exposure to weather is in its favor. but its fusibility makes it inferior to iron or points. If low first cost is the controlling factor, galvanized-iron rods must be chosen, but subsequent inspections be chosen, but subsequent inspections must be made and repairs may become necessary. If higher first cost is not an obstacle, the choice should go to copper first or possibly aluminum.

(6) Should lightning conductors be made in the form of solid rods, flat bars or bands, stranded twisted cables, woven stranded ribbons, or hollow twisted cables? Answer: Any of the forms may properly be employed, or two or more forms may be employed in combination. onductors should be put up in long continuous pieces as far as possible. Solid round wires one-quarter to one-half inch in diameter are best for this purpose. Conductors of a size larger than one-fourth inch, however, present difficulties in handling and installation if the rods are solid. It then becomes better to use stranded cables and other similar forms. Long continuous lengths ample cross sec tion combined with flexibility, and the ease of its installation over crooked courses render stranded cables, in general, better than any other form of conductor Substantial iron points in combination with copper cables from five-sixteenths inch in diameter, for small farm build-ings, to one-half inch in diameter, for large important structures, form one of the best possible systems of conductors for lightning-rod construction. There is no good reason for purchasing other fanciful forms of cable at materially greater prices per pound than are asked for standard makes of cable of approximately the same cross section.

(7) Must lightning rods be connected to the earth ? Answer: Yes; by all means and most effectively. Just a few operators in the lightning-rod profession have sought to impose upon the uninformed a system of ungrounded lightning rods. Such rods are a menace instead of a protection. It is impracticable to fully discuss here

It is now believed that while the Russians have been holding the German forces, at Warsaw, this week, in terrific battles, the Russians will vacate the city and fall back, save their army, and draw the invaders farther away from their present bases of supply.

The Italian army has made advances. in spite of the heavily fortified country, they are operating in, and have taken large numbers of Austrian prisoners.

The news from the western front, this week, has apparently demonstrated no great change in the standing of the armies. That talked of "drive" by a by a great English army, is still a matter of uncertainty and conjecture, but it is be-lieved that a big forward movement is imminent in the very near future.

HARMONY is the name of an elusive bird in political circles, and the primary system does not aid in its catching. Once everybody is invited into a contest, it is a pretty difficult proposition to persuade all but one to stay out, for the sake of "no fight" which is the best definition of harmony.

Newspapers ?

A contributor to the Philadelphia Ledger advises that paper, as follows, with reference to the Harry K. Thaw case : "Would it not be an excellent idea for the PUBLIC LEDGER to resolve never again to print anything about Harry Thaw Has not the clean-minded public been sated with the affairs of this young roan who, except for a crime, has never done anything worthy of notice? Whether paranoiac, lunatic or murderer it matters not. Contemplation of him and pic-tures of his weak face only serve to disgust us.

No doubt a large part of our less prosperous countrymen feel that his escape, first from the electric chair and now from an insane asylum, is due to the employ-ment of his wealth. If this be true, disgraceful as it is, why keep the thought of it constantly before us? Since we can't change it, do let us forget it, remember-ing it only if at some future time the memory of it may strengthen us in a similar case to prevent its recurrence.'

To which, the Ledger replies as follows: damn an enemy by the weapon of silence.

THE CARROLL RECORD Address of Wm. F. Williams, Jr., at 12th., 1915.

> Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen: A "tribute" has been defined as a personal contribution made in token of services rendered." And since our mission here today is to pay, or render our tribute to the memory of Francis Scott Key, we are content to accept the defini-tion just cited, and we would ask two questions which such a definition suggests. In the attempt to answer these questions we shall indicate what we conceive to be the tribute we should pay. First, then, let us ask: What service has Francis Scott Key rendered to his country ? to you ? and to me? We would not include him among the great statesmen, great soldiers, or even the great lawyers of America. There may be greater poets. And yet, while we would not say he rendered great service as a platement addition of the service as a not say he rendered great service as a statesman, soldier, or a lawyer, we claim he did render a great service to his coun-try and to us. A service which deserves the best contribution we are capable of offering. He rendered, we believe, a four-fold service to all Americans fold service to all Americans.

First. He gave to all a new and per petual inspiration to love and defend the flag of our country. Second. He inspired a greater sacrificial service to our country.

He rendered a service much Third. needed today when he enunciated the thought that our greatest victories should be won through justice, rather than by Fourth. He served his country well when he incorporated in his immortal song the injunction to "praise the power that hath preserved us a nation, and when he gave a new force and emphasis to the motto: "In God we Trust."

I say he gave to all a new and perpetu-al inspiration to love and defend the flag of our country. We would not charge that Americans were without patriotism prior to the writing of the Star-Spangled Banner by Francis Scott Key, and yet we Banner by Francis Scott resp, and print of feel confident that the patriotic spirit of America has received a greater impetus from Key's poem than from the individual effort of any other American.

Where is there an American who can sit unmoved, whose heart does not beat faster, or whose blood does not course swifter through his veins, as he hears the words, sung or recited, of that immortal song? Let a man become thoroughly im-bued with the spirit which inspired those words and he will willingly, yea, gladly march into the very jaws of death and hell that the "Star-Spangled Banner" may continue to wave over "the land of the free and the home of the brave.'

While the red, white and blue of our country's flag have ever been symbolic of virtue, purity, strength, justice and sacri-fice, yet as we gaze upon these tri-colored folds today, kissed by the passing breezes which blend them into an indescribable beauty, there seems to shine forth a new glory as we hail in the words of Key the em of our nation-"The Star-Spangled Banner

Denied the voice and vision of a prophet, we know not the destiny of the land we love; but of this we may be assured; so long as the tongue of the youth and the voice of our children shall continue to proclaim the song of "The Star-Spangled Banner," never shall the patriotic spirit of our ancestors die, nor the sun of our greatness as a nation set.

I say Key inspired a greater sacrificial service to our country. Service without sacrifice is hardly worthy of the name, and Key inspires a real sacrificial service "In the days of "personal journalism" it was perhaps in order for a newspaper to ignore a hated rival or to attempt to the home is the foundation stone upon But it was a power so capable of abuse that it has rarely been exercised in mod-ernment rest, and when we are constantly reminded by his song that war desolates the home, we are taught a lesson in patriotism which should strengthen the weakest heart and cause us to resolve a fealty to home and country immovable in its loyalty and determination. Determination to defend our homes against all who would despoil them. I claim that Key rendered a service much needed today, not only in our own country, but throughout the world, when he enunciated the thought that our greatest victories should be won through justice, rather than by might. How the world needs to heed this lesson today, while so many nations are being devastated by a war which has staggered civilization, clogged the wheels of national and international progress, and caused many to seriously ask: Have we made any real progress at all since the age of bar-We do not agree that it is the bounden duty of a newspaper to peddle every crime, in detail, that readers can be exemplify this thought which has united the people of our country, of all parties and creeds, in their support of President Woodrow Wilson in a crisis such as but and vile out of its continues as to hepter sent a "holier than thou" paper; but the newspapers do owe it to the country to nations at war if their rulers were inspircater to respectability, truthfulness and ed by the thought of justice, and not inthe non-sensational, rather than to the toxicated by power and the exercise of immoral, the criminal and the merely might. the administration of justice rather than by the exercise of might; if he has taught us to trust in God and "praise the power that hath preserved us a nation," then have we not a right to ask: What personal contribution shall we make in order to pay our tribute to his memory ? Should we offer less than our best? I think not. If asked to sum up in one sentence that which I believe to be the contribution commensurate to his service I would say: We must maintain America as "the land of the free, and the home of the brave." You say our land is the land of the free.

In many respects that is true, and yet 1 feel there is much for us to do before we are actually free indeed. Our land is free from chattel slavery, and yet there are thousands of children working in mills and factories whose condition is but little better than that of industrial slaves. Our land is "the land of the free" in so far as we pay no allegiance to a foreign mon-arch, nor submit to the dictate of no ruler who would deprive us of our inalienable rights, and yet we are compelled to admit that time and again the people have been betrayed and their wills thwarted by those placed in office by their votes. Bribery and corruption are no strange words in our political vocabulary.

We say ours is "the land of the free, and yet there are thousands, and possibly tens of thousands, who are slaves to drink. How much the lesser slave is the abject serf of King Alcohol than one who did the bidding of the plantation master ? And so long as this flag, of which we so often sing, and of which we are so proud, gives protection to such a damnable institution as a saloon, we will never be a free people in the highest sense of the Oh, may God hasten the day when the Flag of our Country shall no longer protect such a hell-born institution of crime, shame, misery and debauchery; for then, and then only, will "Old Glory" word. float without a stain over the land which gave us birth. One of the most commendable and patriotic acts of the Nation-al Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, in my judgment, was its declaration for national prohibition, and I can find no words to express my commendation, approval and congratulations to the citizens of Carroll County on the liquor question. And so, my friends, I believe there is yet much to be done if we would have this land of ours in deed and in truth a 'land of the free.'

You say this is "the home of the brave." Yes, when we speak of a bravery that will cause a man to die for his country, there s no question of the bravery of the men of America; and we should teach the youth that such is part of his patriotic du-But we need today, to solve many of our most serious problems, a bravery that will make men willing to live and sacrifice for their country.

We need a bravery that will cause us to oppose all men or systems which tend to oppress," and which will make us dare to defend the helpless children of our land from exploitation by unscrupulous em-ployers and reduce to the minimum the blight of child labor, while improving the conditions of those who may be compelled to work.

We need more of that bravery which will combat the schemes of the corrupt politician and the grafter. We need a bravery that will defy the dictates of a political "boss" and cause men to use a reasonable independence in casting their ballots. We need a bravery that will refuse to put a monetary value on honor, virtue, peace, happiness, sobriety and integrity, and will never cease until our country is free from the blight of the legalized liquor traffic.

We need more men brave enough to vote against any man or party which favors a union of Church and State, or who would appropriate public money for sec-tarian purposes. We need more of the bravery which will make men confess faith in Jesus Christ, the Son of the living Cod before the would and not be ashamed God, before the world and not With our country thus free from those evils which now curse and debauch it; with our men inspired with a bravery which impels them to serve and sacrifice, we shall have made "a personal contribution" worthy of the man to whose memory we meet today, and to whose memory we offer this humble tribute of respect. The Patriotic Order Sons of America, and all others who contributed to the erection of this beautiful monument we unveil today, will, for years to come, look upon this memorial with pardonable pride and joy, and generations yet unborn will receive patriotic inspiration from this effort to honor the memory of Francis Scott Key. And yet there comes to me the thought that this monument, standing today so firm, and apparently able to defy the ravages of time, shall, in obedience to the immutable laws of Nature, crumble to dust, and return to the elements from whence it came, while you and I, through faith in God, and by patriotic service to our day and generation, can erect in the hearts and lives of those we serve, monuments which will defy the ravages of time, triumphs over the laws of nature, and stand forth forever, glorious, eternal, im-

What Baltimore Wants

Baltimore city, according to its newspapers, is openly in favor of the party, and the candidates, which will give the city what it wants in the matter of greater extension and greater political power. The News is fairly representative of this sentiment when it says "What Baltimore gains at Annapolis next year depends mainly upon the pledges it extracts from the two state conventions. * * * The vital thing, therefore, is so to commit the state conventions that the city can go to Annapolis and demand fulfilment of things that have been nominated in the bond."

There is the situation in plain Shylockian English. The News further states its opinion that Mayor Preston is for Lee, because Lee "promised better for those things in which the city is chiefly concerned; and as the Mayor long ago cut his eye teeth, the city has taken it pretty well for granted that he received assurances that were satisfactory."

Statements more frank than these could not well be devised, and come as a sort of novelty in this age of playing the soft pedal in politics. Evidently, the fight is on pretty openly between the city and the rest of the state, the important question being-How much that the city wants, if any, is antagonistic to the best interests of the whole state ?

----Will the Submarine Bring Peace?

In the August American Magazine Herbert Quick writes an article full of fresh ideas entitled "The Submarine as a Peacemaker." He says that sea power has ruled the world in the past but that sea power has been ended by the submarine and makes the Monroe Doctrine self-executing for every nation. Following is an extract from his article: "The future history of the world will be far different from what it would otherwise have been, because of the submarine. The mastership of the seas has passed from every nation. Defense is made perfectly practicable against overseas expeditions everywhere. Japan and Great Britain are forover safe from invasion, once their submarine forces are fully developed; but they are capable of being starved by their enemies. We of continental situation are in better case than ever before as against transmarine foes, actual or potential.

"The submarine is in itself a mechanical and scientific Monroe Doctrine which is self-executing. Germany may as well abandon forever any hope of transplanting her flag to other lands which must be reached by sea, unless they are in too backward a state to take advantage of this new invention and are undefended by a strong power.

"The division of the world among the nations must stand as it is, save as it is affected by the present war. The submarine is an effective 'action to quiet title' of all nations to their colonies. It robs Great Britain of the command of the seas, but it confirms her in what she has gained by it-unless her colonies revolt and use the submarine to defend their shores. It cuts off North America from any possible war with South America, as soon as we and the South American nations provide ourselves with the new weapon of defense. It gives us only two possible enemies with whom we can wage real war-Canada and Mexico. It makes it impossible for Canada to receive aid from the mother country in such a case, assuming the possession on our part of the hundreds and hundreds of submarines which the situation will soon call for. It coops China, India, and Russia and the rest of Europe with Japan on the Eurasian continent as effectually, so far as war is concerned, as before the invention of the mariner's compass. It makes the Australiasian Powers safe from the yellows and browns. It carries out over all the seas a stalemate as complete as that which exists in the trenches in France, a stalemate in which real naval battles are impossible, in which destructive war on commerce is raised to the nth power, and in which world intercourse must be based on peace, or so far abandoned as to make the very existence of the insular commercial peoples hazardous. What will Congress and the Department of the Navy do about an adequate equipment of submarines ?"

HINTS ON HORSE SHOEING.

When Too Long Delayed the Hoofs Are Sure to Suffer.

The impression seems to prevail that a colt ought not to be shod so long as he can go without it, and many colts acquire a short step, dawdling gait, because the feet are tender, and this causes them to be afraid to step out freely. So long as they can stay on the farm they may get along, but natural feet ought not to be expected to do duty on unnatural footing such as public roads afford, writes W. W. Hunter in the National Stockman. Most farmers allow shoes to remain on too long. The hoof continues to Every farmer should aim to mate only suitable sires and dams for the production of ideal horses for the various purposes, and then should feed and develop the product perfectly. Only a pure bred sire can beget a grade horse. He also must be sound, muscular, prepotent and suitable in type if the colt is to be ideal. This is equally true of his mate. The sire does not necessarily correct in his progeny the serious faults of conformation of his mate. He reproduces only those of his features which are stronger or dominant over the corresponding features of the mare. The stallion shown is a Percheron.

grow all the time, and the shoe that is a perfect fit when it was put on will not fit the hoof after it has grown a month or more, and when shoes are left on for three months, as is sometimes done, the best of feet are injured and sometimes ruined.

One point in controversy between the blacksmith and the farmer is the use of worn shoes. I have already referred to the need for heavy shoes on draft horses, especially when calks and toes are used. A little thought will enable any one to understand that thin, light shoes would not bear the pressure without springing.

I shall mention but one more of the many mistakes we all make, that is shoeing the front feet and leaving the hind ones bare. In a state of nature on very hard ground this practice is all right, for lively colts wear their front feet off in play, so shoes may be needed, but when a horse is asked to draw a load he ought to be shod so he will not be afraid to throw weight on his hind feet so that there will be no risk ֎֎֎֎֎֎֎֎֎֎֎֎֎֎֎֎֎֎֎֎֎֎֎֎֎ LIVE STOCK NOTES.

FARM DEMONSTRATION WORK MEETS WITH APPRECIATION.

Thirteen Maryland Counties Now Have County Agricultural Agents.

Progressive farmers throughout the State are beginning to recognize the value of agricultural demonstration work. This work is being conducted in thirteen counties of the State through local or county agricultural agents, who represent the combined extension service of the Agricultural College and the Department of Agriculture. One of the most helpful lines of work which the county agent does DEMONSTRATION DAY PARADE. aside from conducting demonstrations and giving purely local advice, is the bringing of the specialists of the Agricultural College and the Department into systematic touch with his people.

One of these methods is the holding of county field days in the interest of better agricultural and demonstration work. It results in bringing the agricultural agencies to the farmer and making him feel that their workers were really at his service has never been done before. Meetings are accompanied by practical demonstrations and are held at every convenient place possible, such as cross roads, school houses, village stores, picnic grounds and often in the front yard of some farm home. The speakers enter quickly into the spirit of the occasion, giving short, practical talks that the listening farmers and their wives can take right home and put into practice.

In explaining the handling of the corn crop during the recent field days in Worcester and Somerset counties, the extension worker in farm crops used sample ears brought him by farmers to explain seed selection or took his audience to the edge of a convenient corn field to point out to them the advantage of a well-prepared seed bed and proper cultivation. The specialist in plant diseases explained the practical points of scientific potato growing. He carried with him a sack of potatoes which he used to show how to treat them for scab, how to select marketable potatoes and how to make hill selections for the improvement of seed.

The speaker on fruit and truck crops gave practical advice on the handling of the strawberry crop from field to market right in sight of a number of fields where actual picking was in progress. Growers present expressed their appreciation of the value of his instructions, only regretting that they had not had such help long before. The main benefits resulting were no doubt that the workers of the Agricultural College and Department of Agriculture actually met and talked with the farmers of these two counties right in their own surroundings and became well acquainted. The work of the county agent was also thoroughly explained and demonstrated so the people might realize how they could best make use of his services and through him of those of the State College and the Federal Department. In the future all local agricultural work by either of the above agencies will be done in co-operation with the county agents wherever a county is farsighted enough to have employed one. thus securing for itself every benefit of the demonstration organization.

FEEDING BEEF CATTLE.

Young Animals Should Be Kept Gain. ing Steadily From Birth.

No line of work has undergone such a marked change during the last dec ade as has the cattle feeding business, writes W. H. Tourhave in the Country Gentleman. When farm grains were cheap little consideration was given to the cost of production. Before 1908 steer feeding was based almost entirely upon the efficiency of the ration rather than upon the cost of a pound of gain. Today the cost of production is the most important item. Even though smaller daily gains are made, if they can be made at a lower cost and the cattle can be sold at a price that will make the net returns greater such a method of feeding should be practiced.

The care and feeding of the young growing animal are important factors in beef production. A calf that is destined for the butcher's block or for the breeding herd should be kept in growing condition from the time of birth until he goes into the herd as a mature animal or finds his way into the feed

An animal that is stunted during his growing period will not make satisfactory gains in the feed lot, nor will he ever be fully developed. It is not necessary to force the young cattle, but they should be kept gaining gradually. In this connection it is important to use farm grown grains and forage crops whenever possible. Corn silage. clover and alfalfa hay during winter and good pasture during the summer are most excellent for developing young cattle.

Sore Mouth In Pigs.

This is due to an infection and 'n order to get rid of it pens and yards must be cleaned thoroughly, then disinfect with a 5 per cent solution of compound cresol. Wash the sores on the pigs with a 3 per cent solution of the same medicine. Whitewash sheds and sprinkle lime over the lots and especially around any damp places, as the germ causing the disease grows more in moist or wet locations.

fected. Well fed sheep manage to survive the effects of the nodular worm. There is no remedy. Treatment has to be given for the other worms mentioned. Gasoline is the best drug for stomach worms and powdered kamala is effective for tapeworms. Pea silage, if of good quality and not moldy, is an excellent feed for sheep when used along with plenty of mixed or clover or alfalfa hay, wheat screenings or oats and bran, etc. Moldy, spoiled pea silage is deadly and pea silage fed very heavily without enough of other sound feeds may injuriously affect the kidneys. We have known it to prove deadly to sheep.

ALFALFA FOR HOGS.

As a Supplement of Corn It Ranks High as a Pork Producer.

According to a recent bulletin from the Nebraska experiment station, it costs 5 cents per pound for feed alone to make pork when corn is worth 60 cents a bushel. It was found in most of these tests that the use of such supplementary feeds as oil meal, tankage and cottonseed meal gave more rapid gains and greater profits than corn and alfalfa, although the reverse was true in some instances.

The most suitable supplementary feed for corn in fattening hogs seems to depend on several variable factors. It is evident that corn must be supple mented with some byproduct rich in protein in order to secure the most rapid and profitable gains, although under certain conditions it might be found more profitable in the long run to depend upon alfalfa alone as a supplementary feed.

Likes the Red Hog.

I have tried two other breeds of hogs in twenty-five years' experience, and I think that the red hog will do best on such a ration as corn and clover alone-that is, better than any other breed, says A. C. Adams in the National Stockman. Tankage, mill feeds and all such byproducts are constantly advancing in price, and the thing to be done by hog breeders is to develop a breed of hogs that do well on corn and clover. Of course pigs after being weaned require something more for a good while. That hog is best that does best under normal conditions. That hog is the red hog-easy to grow, easy to fatten, easy to sell, but blamed hard to beat!

The little basket shown is an imported darning basket, which is lined with flowered cretonne and provided with all the implements required for darning successfully. These include a darning egg and emory pincushion, reels of darning silk and cotton and wool and a pocket for needles. The basket might be duplicated in raffia or by any one who has skill in basket making, or it may be purchased ready made and, after being lined with cretonne, fitted up with the required articles.

Restoring Colors In Carpets. If a carpet is almost all wool the color may be brightened or wholly restored if washed with a pail of water containing three gills of ox gall. If necessary to use fresh ox gall procure it at the butcher's, cut it into small pieces, cover with warm water and allow it to soak for several hours. Dilute the liquid and wipe the carpet off with it. It makes a lather and should be rinsed off with clear water.

THE AMBITIOUS POULTRY KEEP. ER CANNOT AFFORD TO NEGLECT HIS FOWLS AT ANY TIME.

ROY H. WAITE, Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Just because your young chickens have grown to an age when any little neglect doesn't cause them to die off In large numbers, do not think that you can take your attention from them. In order to get winter eggs, your flock of pullets must be in good shape before cold weather begins. If you get them started to laying early, with reasonable care they will usually continue to lay well all winter. If they begin the winter in poor shape they will have to spend most of their energy in keeping comfortable and will have no surplus to put into egg production.

After the rush of spring hatching and caring for the youngsters, there is often a tendency to take a long breath, so to speak, and lay back to take things easy when the chicks get a little size and chick troubles are over. You, however, will have to keep them "jumping" if you are to have them in laying condition by early fall. See that they have clean, comfortable quarters in which to roost. See that they are free from lice and mites. See that they can find shade on hot, blistering days. But above all, see that they can get hold of the proper feeds.

Do You Watch for Bargains?

The main reason why one subscribes for a newspaper, is to keep posted on what is going on, and to profit by the information one secures by reading. Some people are so intent on the "locals," or the "specials," that they do not read or much else; and some take most interest in the "correspondence." But, the reader who gets the most for his dollar is the one who reads the advertisements, and the results of doing things, in addition to the other features named.

A newspaper pays for itself many times over, in a year, to the live bargain seeker -pays in cash, without counting the news features-and to the man who uses it to sell something of his own, it is likely to get something of his own, it is had y to pay for itself more times over. Catch the idea? Whether you believe it, or not, it's true. We don't wonder that some people say they "can't afford" to take a paper—they simply don't realize take a paper—they simply don't realize the opportunities they have of making the paper pay them. These persons are said to be under the influence of Mars and to have inherited warlike tendencies, but it more than usually shows an ordinary amount of courage that is possessed by most persons. Poor Knights of the Garter.

The splendor that surrounds the Order of the Garter makes it almost impossible to believe there ever have been 'poor" knights of the order or that these still exist today. Such, however, is the case. These now number eighteen in all, and their official title is the Military Knights of Windsor. They are divided into two "foundations," twelve being in the "upper foundaer." When Edward III. founded the premier order of chivalry of the world he appointed one poor gentleman to act as a sort of attendant or squire to each knight, and twenty-six was the structure I feel sorry for the poor original number. A party of American sightseers was dawdling about in Cairo. There were a Mrs. Carleton, her son, Richard, and Miss Maud Raymond. They had ascended the Nile and seen the wonders thereof, and now they were looking for trinkets to take home with them to America. They had drifted into a bazaar where anything could be bought from an amulet to an idol.

Gish Dewar sold trinkets in the bazaar.

All day long he sat in the shadow of his striped canopy, looking sad and mysterious. His dark eyes never questioned the passing crowds, nor did he importune the tourists to buy as did his fellow merchants, who talked about him.

"Who is this Gish Dewar?" asked All Benamid, the shoe dealer.

"A stranger who has pushed himself forward, a lazy one who does not haggle. He sets a price upon his wares; and one may buy or not! Every day he loses customers."

"The rich Americans pause to buy. See, Gish Dewar is almost asleep!" It was true that Gish Dewar's turbaned head was drooping somnolently, even while three Americans paused before his stall.

"The old beggar's asleep, Maud," laughed the man carelessly. "Let us go on.'

"But, Dick," protested the pretty girl. "I do want one of these curious filagree bracelets and one of these long chains of blue-green Egyptian scarabei. Aren't they lovely, Mrs. Carleton?" turning to the white haired woman who accompanied them.

"Yes, my dear, but this little brooch like a coiled snake appeals to me. Oh, Dick," to her son who was obviously bored, "do awake the man!"

Dick Carleton stifled a yawn and prodded Gish Dewar in the ribs with his walking stick.

The turbaned head flew up and a pair of liquid dark eyes blazed at him in hot anger.

But Gish Dewar's voice was silkily smooth.

"Excuse, effendi," he murmured; "you would buy?"

"Yes, this bracelet, now?" Maud Raymond held the filagree trinket in her fingers.

The eyes of Gish Dewar gazed not at the bracelet. He was staring at the girl's little hands, white and ringless. "How much?" insisted the girl with a note of impatience in her voice. "A hundred plasters," muttered the seller of curios.

Miss Raymond took out her purse and paid for the bracelet, and, having One by one his companions yawned priced the scarabei chain and finding and went home to dress for dinner. it too costly, they were about to mov on when Gish Dewar brought out a small copper box and opened it.

"You can keep the money," laughed Dick rudely, turning away. Gish Dewar gathered the 500 piastres into his strong hands and shook them musically.

"I will wager my lord 500 piastres that I will return this money to him at the moment of his greatest humiliation, for he has been a false friend."

Dick laughed harshly and followed his companions. His good looking face wore a scowl. His thoughts were unpleasant enough.

"What did the fellow mean?" he asked himself. "What the deuce did he mean by talking about 'false friends?' " Mrs. Carleton was apologizing for her son's bad temper.

"I am afraid it is the tropical sun," she said, striving to reassure the girl whom Dick wanted to marry. Maud was her goddaughter and Mrs. Carleton had counted upon this European trip to bring about the desired engagement.

They went along the bazaar, and while Dick and his mother picked out a silky rug, Maud hurried back to Gish Dewar. He was sitting there in that motionless, meditative attitude.

He glanced up sharply at sound of her light step and then drew back into the shadow.

In the sunlight her face shone with its wonderful tints of cream and pink, gray eyes, black lashed and cool, and shimmering golden hair.

She was wasting a wonderful smile upon the poor merchant.

"I will buy the amulet," she said softly, taking money from her purse. "Hurry, please!"

Gish Dewar opened the copper box, took out the onyx amulet and laid it in her hand, but he waved away the proffered money.

"Effendi has paid for it," he said in a muffled tone.

"But I cannot take it unless you let me pay for it. The gentleman is not a relative; he is merely a friend," she WOMEN ARE HONORED IN WAR

Henry II was a firm believer in the horseshoe as a lucky emblem, and he presented a gilded horseshoe to many of his regiments. When the monarch presented the barony of Oakham to Walchelin de Ferreis, the new lord, to please the royal donor, demanded of Oakham a shoe from the horse actually ridden by him. Sailors cherish horseshoes as luck bringers, and before the days of dreadnaughts it was Jack's practice to nail a horseshoe upside down on the mast of his ship. Nelson nailed a horseshoe with the points upward on the mast of the Victory before he took the ship into action at Trafalgar.

"Here, effendi," he said, "are amulets to wear.

Dick Carleton looked them over. One of onyx, set with a large pearl, attracted him.

"I like this one," he said. "It will make a unique watch fob." Gish Dewar became urgent.

"It protects the wearer against dangers by sea and it protects one from false friends!"

There was a sneer in his tone that sent the blood to Dick's pale face.

"You talk too much, my man," he said coldly.

"Perhaps my lord is sensitive. I am a poor man. I meant no harm! The charm guards one against danger and from false friends! See, my lord, I must speak truthfully!"

Gish Dewar's brown hands went out in a flashing gesture that startled Maud Raymond, so familiar was it. She peered down at the face of the curio dealer, but it was in deep shadow. There was a glimpse of dark eyes, an aquiline nose, a pointed beard. She felt a vague disappointment as she turned away.

There was something in gesture and voice which had reminded her of Elmer Winn, but Winn was in China, had been for five years, and she uttered a sad little laugh at her own folly. How could a sun dried Egyptian be Elmer Winn?

Dick was snapping angrily at the curio dealer.

"Keep your rubbish!" he said insolently, flinging the amulet on the carpet before Gish Dewar. "I dare say it was made in New York, any way!" "Dick. do be careful!" cautioned his mother. "You never know what these foreigners will do!" Maud stood aloof regarding Dick with contemptuous eyes. How like him, to haggle with a humble merchant in an Egyptian bazaar! - By nature Dick was small and mean and tyrannical.

"Oh, my lord is mistaken!" returned Gish Dewar, with deadly courtesy in his tones; "my lord is mistaken. The amulet was not made in the place he calls New York. It came from the tomb of Prince Ammenara, a nephew of Rameses II. of a time long past when my lord's ancestors were poor peasants working in the fields!"

Dick was stuttering with rage. He felt that Maud was secretly amused at the truthful words of the Cairene merchant thoughts. That afternoon he had proposed to Maud Raymond and had been firmly refused. "I don't love you, Dick, and I never shall," she had said.

So Dick had excellent reason to be melancholy, and there were other unpleasant memories that would not be banished.

He ordered another glass of whisky and soda and sipped it moodily. Out of the silence of the room a voice spoke like the crack of a whip. "Ah, Carleton, I was looking for you!" Dick half rose from his chair and confronted Elmer Winn's handsome bronzed face. Winn's hands were braced on the table, and his broad shoulders leaned across the polished mahogany.

"False friend!" he said cuttingly. Carleton winced and sank back in his chair. "All's fair in love," he muttered sullenly.

"False friend," repeated Winn. "You wrote to me that you were already married to Maud. I was so enraged that I hated all of you, even my country, and I would not read a newspaper from home. I believed your lie, and when a few weeks later I received my ring from her I knew you had spoken | fighting in the trenches in France, retruly

"I left China. I have money. I have wandered the world over, amusing myself by various methods in many lands. "Once in a bazaar in Cairo I saw you and her, and her hands were bare of rings. I knew she was not married to you-that you lied!"

Carleton was cringing in his chair. "I loved her!" he whispered hoarsely. "So did I." reminded the other man; then, with a sudden change of voice, he added:

"The wager, effendi!"

"What do you mean, Winn? Why do you speak like the curio seller in the bazaar at Cairo?" gasped Dick. "Because I am he!" thundered the other. "I became Gish Dewar, the curio dealer, because it amused me to form part of that colorful life. I was lonely. But now"-his voice softened-"it is different. I sold the onyx amulet to a lady, and I promised her that if she would wear it next her heart it would bring back one she loves and one who loves her." He turned away. "Where are you going now?" demanded Dick. "I am going to make her wish come true," said the man who had been Gish Dewar, and behind him on the table he left a copper box containing 500 piasters.

clothing and blankets. A Turkish girl makes all the kibitka or tents, domestic carpets and other household requisites before she is married. If she gets married without completing this task it is expected that she will by her own labor refund the money which her parents have given her as her dowry. This dowry usually consists of 100 sheep and a certain amount of money, which a bridegroom either pays down in a lump sum to the parents of the bride to collect his friends for a succession of horse races and other sports. An important part is to decorate a camel with the handsomest trappings, which are sent to the bride's tent. On this she goes forth to receive congratulations of her relatives and friends. It is on this she is carried away by the female relatives of the bridegroom. She and her attendants feign to resist the act by throwing raw oats at the other women.

Baggage Not Excessive.

Johnny Poe, the former Princeton lootball player, who loves a scrap and who has fought in all the South American revolutions since 1901 and is now cently wanted to get back to the United States from Santo Domingo, because there was no excuse for a fight there and there was promise in Europe. Being unable to secure any ordinary means of getting home, he went to the master of an English freighter soon to sail from that port and asked him: "Will you take me back to the United States?" "Sure I will," answered the captain. "How many pieces of baggage have you?" "Fifty-four," replied Johnny; "a pack of cards and a pair of socks." The freighter's master refused to ac-

Our industrious hens are now producing twice as many eggs every day as we care to eat. Months before December comes they will have gone upon their prolonged vacation.

Without cold storage those two eggs for your Christmas breakfast would cost as much as you will pay for a dozen. A solution of ammonia pumped through pipes in storage rooms does for you what the hen herself cannot do-distributes a supply of good eggs evenly around the entire calendar.

We talk foolishly about cold storage as if it were a menace instead of one of the genuine blessings of a scientific age.

Mr. Hodges and His Grand Old Hat. "Spring's official parade was observed Monday morning," reports the Olathe Register, "when Frank Hodges donned his ancient Milan straw hat, and made his way to the office. The parade formed at the corner of Elm and Water streets and proceeded with due pomp and ceremony to the Hodges lumber yard, where it disbanded and Mr. Hodges went to work. Dwellers along the way, who have been waiting anxiously to take down their heating stoves and take off their heavies, noted its passing with satisfaction and a great wave of activity followed in its wake. Mr. Hodges has been pestered with agents of new fangled hats who want to sell him a 1916 model, direct drive lid, with a self starter and a row of colored electric lights about the brim. But Mr. Hodges, with true conservative mien, clings to the old order. In these days of feverish rush to keep up with the changing times,

The Most Important Question.

He was five and of a somewhat critical turn of mind-also analytic. He was left at home with the maid. Just after he became hungry in the evening his mother called by telephone. He answered the phone, but didn't understand the conversation. Before he had an opportunity to ask that the instructions be repeated, his mother insisted that he tell her whom he loved. He was thinking only of dinner, however, and nothing else. Thus it was that he interrupted the string of endearing inquiries to remark in a loud voice: "I don't know who I love. I want to know where I'm goin' to eat."

Text of the Lesson, I Kings xii:6-16. Memory Verse, 16-Golden Text, Prov. xvi, 18--Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

In this record of the division of the kingdom and its cause we still see God over all controlling and in all working, for He has foreseen everything from the beginning and provided for every so called emergency and always tells the final outcome. This division of the kingdom has never been healed till this day, but it will be in His time, according to Ezek. xxxvii, 21, 22, "I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king to them all, and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all." The immediate cause of this division is found in chapter xi, 9, 10, "The Lord was angry with Solomon because his heart was turned from the Lord God of Israel, which had appeared unto him twice and had commanded him concerning this thing that he should not go after other gods." Therefore was the kingdom rent in twain. Departure from God and disobedience to Him is back of all trouble, as a rule, and the devil is back of that, but the time will come when on this earth there shall be no more trouble, and from this earth and this atmosphere the devil shall have gone forever (Rev. xx, 10; xxi, 1-4; xxii, 3-5). Whether it be providing a king for Israel, as we have seen in the case of Saul, and David, and Solomon, or dividing the kingdom, as we are about to see, the Lord generally works by ordinary human instrumentality.

In our lesson story today we see Hadad Rezon and Jeroboam and Rehoboam and old men and young men all doing seemingly as they saw fit, but behind the scenes is an unseen hand controlling. "The Lord stirred up an adversary unto Solomon, Hadad, the Edomite." "God stirred him up another adversary, Rezon, the son of Eliadah." "Thus saith the Lord, the God of Israel, Behold I will rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon and will give ten tribes to thee." "The cause was from the Lord, That He might perform His saying, which the Lord spake by Ahijah, the Shilonite, unto Jeroboam, the son of Nebat." "Thus saith the Lord, Ye shall not go up nor fight against your brethren, the children of Israel: return every man to his house, for this thing is from Me." (I Kings xi, 14, 23, 31; xii, 15, 24). Even the devil cannot touch a child of God without God's permission, as we see in the case of Job and of Simon Peter.

The believer who aims to walk with God in humility and obedience may live in continual peace and quietness, Lesson VI .- Third Quarter, For He Held It Only Long Enough to fallen motor car. Make Sure of a Better.

By CLARISSA MACKIE. THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES. (Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspa-per Syndicate.)

Evelyn Post acknowledged the respectful greeting of the tall, straight young man in the doorway. Hendrick did not look the part of chauffeur-not exactly; he was altogether too handsome, too self-possessed, with an air of authority that did not rest well on a servant. But his skill in driving compensated for these other faults. He had remained in the employ of Evelyn's mother for three months and all during that time he had kept his "place."

But Evelyn did not like him-she was positive of that; because he looked disconcertingly like men of her own class. It was puzzling and not at all desirable in a menial. There even were times when she found herself addressing him on terms of equality. Of course, she always followed such a lapse by unusual haughtiness. Altogether the advice of Hendrick was rather disquieting to his young mistress.

Now he stood, quietly attentive, waiting for his morning orders.

"Get the morning mail, Hendrick," said Mrs. Post; "return and drive Miss Post over to Mill Hill."

"I beg your pardon, Mrs. Post, but the river is rising and the Mill Hill bridge is unsafe," said Hendrick.

"Then go around the other waythe long road," returned Mrs. Post. Hendrick bowed and disappeared.

At eleven o'clock Hendrick returned with the car and announced that the long bridge was down in the flood and that the upper bridge could not long hold up against the waters pouring from the swollen creeks which were tributary to the river.

Evelyn paused with one foot on the step of the car.

"I'm sure it cannot be so bad," she said carelessly. "You will drive over, Hendrick; Mrs. Beatty's please." Hendrick hesitated, almost as if he were going to demur; then he shrugged his shapely shoulders, climbed to his seat and started the car

Evelyn found herself studying her chauffeur's stern, clear-cut profile. How becoming was the neat tan livery -Hendrick was so dark-she bit her lip and stamped her foot on the rugs. She would tell her mother to discharge Hendrick in the morning. He was presumptuous! "Presumptuous? In what way?"

asked her conscience. Evelyn Post knew that the chauffeur's presumption lay in the fact that he stimulated her interest-nothing beyond that! At the foot of the slope that led to the bridge, Hendrick stopped the car and turned to Evelyn.

"Do you still wish to cross the river, Miss Post?" he asked. Evelyn glanced indifferently at the no sign of the plucky chauffeur who had dared death to carry out her foolish orders.

She tossed aside her veil and hat and, crawling out on the jutting end of a girder, she looked down at the "Hendrick!" she called, and her voice broke into sobs.

She fancied that some of the planks around the car moved; then a gloved hand was visible, then a shoulder, and at last Hendrick's pale face looking up at her from the heaped debris.

and questions, which Evelyn answered with what calmness she could muster. Then Alice Beatty issued a few orders and in ten minutes several men were racing down the long hill to the broken bridge. Mrs. Beatty and Evelyn followed in the runabout. When they reached the bridge it was to find the flood tearing at the splintered boards which had imprisoned Hendrick in the fallen motor car. The Beatty servants were quick-witted and trained to meet emergencies. Two of them tossed down a noosed rope his arms. Then, by main force they pulled.

When Hendrick reached the river bank he promptly lost consciousness. Bigley, the gardener, made a hasty examination and spoke to his mistress.

Solomon being dead, Rehoboam, his son, reigned in his stead, all Israel having made him king at Shechem (xii, 1; II Chron. x, 1). When Jeroboam heard in Egypt that Solomon was dead he returned and, with a deputation, waited upon Rehoboam with a request that he would lighten the burdens which his father's magnificent reign had caused to be placed upon them. He asked for three days to consider their request, and meantime he consulted first with the old men and then with his young men. The former advised moderation and that he speak kindly to the people, but the latter advised increased severity. So when the third day came and Jeroboam and the people came again for his reply he spake to them as the young men had advised, for the Lord was by their evil counsel working out His purpose (verse 15), as He also wrought by the counsel of Hushai, which was evil toward Absalom, to overthrow him. "The counsel of the Lord standeth forever, the thoughts of his heart to all generations," but all other counsel or device He bringeth to nought (Ps. xxxiii, 10, 11). "Whatsoever the Lord pleased that did He in heaven and in earth, in the seas and all deep places" (Ps. CXXXV. 6).

However people may associate themselves against Him or take counsel together against His people, all shall be broken to pieces and come to nought. -(Isa. viii, 9, 10). For "the Lord of hosts hath sworn, saying, Surely as I have thought, so shall it come to pass; and as I have purposed, so shall it stand." (Isa. xiv, 24). He maketh the wrath of man to praise Him, and the remainder He restrains. He saith to the sea, "Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further; and here shall thy proud waves be stayed." (Ps. lxxiv, 10; Job xxxviii, 11). If our hearts are whole toward Him He will hold strongly with us and cause others to see and know that He is with us; but if we are self willed and rely on human wisdom He will work against us and overthrow us, though He may bear long with us. He has a purpose for the jagged remains of the old bridge. every individual life of His redeemed, as well as for the church, which is His boor, and for His people Israel and for all nations; and He will accomplish His purpose through His willing people individually and collectively. "The bridge isn't safe, Miss Post," sternness in his voice.

"So you said before," returned Evelyn coldly. "Please drive on. I and low ever since." promised Mrs. Beatty I would be there at twelve o'clock, and it is now half past the hour."

The car glided down the hill until the front tires touched the timbers of the bridge. Evelyn glanced at the river boiling between its narrow banks. She could see that it was rising rapidly, and the wooden planks of the bridge were wet where the waters hag splashed up between them. The frail structure trembled at the first impact of the heavy car.

Hendrick got down and came to the tonneau, one gauntleted hand resting on the door.

"It is unsafe to take the car across the bridge, Miss Post," said the chauffeur patiently; "it is more than unsafe -it is foolhardy. If you will walk across. I will try and take the car over and then pick you up on the other side." He opened the door.

"If you are afraid, Hendrick, I will with wonderful self-control. Hendrick | privilege to serve you." would be discharged the instant they that.

The bridge swayed a little under Post," he said quietly, "and some day their united weight. They reached I will gain it." the other side and Hendrick dropped his burden and ran back to the car. He leaped to his seat and started the machine across the bridge.

Evelyn, hating him with all her heart, saw the bridge quiver under the weight of the big car. She longed to cry out and send him back, but pride stilled the words on her lips. The structure sagged when the car reached the middle. There was a rending crash of timbers, and then a horrible thud from the river beneath. She saw the water boiling up through The car and its driver had disappeared.

Half mad with terror and remorse, the girl ran to the edge of the bank and looked for Hendrick. The car was visible, half balanced on the big stones beneath the bridge. But the broken timbers of the bridge were heaped over it so that she could see

It was several hours afterward, when the late chauffeur was lying with bandaged head in the best bedroom of the Beatty home, that Evelyn was admitted to see him. Mrs. Beatty had personally borne her cousin's request to see Miss Post.

The room was bathed in the late afternoon sunlight. Teddy Hendrick son was lying with his dark eyes fixed on the door. A glad look came into his face when Evelyn entered.

An auto operated by Chas. E. Goodwin, of Westminster, accidentally struck ning, on the state road, near town, while he was driving a heifer. The heifer became frightened at the machine and struck across the road in front of it, the but the boy did not, the machine catching and throwing him to the ground. Taneytown suffered defeat by Woods-Taneytown suffered defeat by woods-boro, on Saturday afternoon, on the field at Granger's Fair ground, by a score of 3 to 1, which spectators say should have been 3 to 2. Taneytown did not have its best team, as several of the players could not be present, but the game was a very creditable battle, nevertheless, to the very last inning. The series now stands, Woodsboro 2, Taneytown 1. On Monday afternoon Taneytown went and tie piles, and a hard ridge through the centre of diamond. Considering the rank umpiring given the visitors, the re-Wm. H. Overboltzer, wile and son, of Wichita, Kansas, are in this section vis-iting relatives. They made the trip of 1442 miles by auto, encountering a great

The Community Outing.

(For the RECORD)

Overhanging clouds bade fair to put a quietus on the annual community out-ing when starting time arrived. But the enthusiasm of our folks proved too much for threatening weather conditions and it was a merry crowd that found its way to Ohler's Grove, on Wednesday last. The festivities began on scheduled time and knew no 'let up'' until the supper gong called everybody to a feast of good things. Under the good humored directorship of Robert Stott and his corps of able helpers, the various athletic contests succeeded each other in quick succession to the delight of participants and onlookers. The entries were many, the contests close and the interest manifested was more than gratifying. The events and winners were

Time 57 seconds. Timekeeper, Samuel Mehring. An elephant walk, exceedingly funny, a jumping contest and a footwicket game brought the events to a close; no records were kept in these free-for-all contests.

The Taneytown Band gave an interesting concert enjoyed by everybody. The little folks had their games aplenty and did full justice to the occasion. Nightfall found a lot of bodytired but spiritrested jubileers homeward bound, and the 4th. annual outing ending most successfully. The committees-in-charge wish to express their sincere gratitude to all who in any way helped to make the outing so enjoyable, especially the band, those conveying pic-nicers to and from the grove, the entertainment committee and the weatherman. -

He Fooled Himself.

"Old Josh Lee was a miser, and he breakfasted every morning on oatmeal. To save fuel he cooked his week's supply of oatmeal on Sundays. This supply, by the time Saturdays came round, was pretty stiff and tough and hard to down. "One Saturday morning old Josh found his oatmeal particularly unappetizing. It had a crust on it like iron. He took a mouthful of the cold, stiff mixture: then he half rose, thinking he'd have to cook himself some eggs.

"But he hated to give in. He hated to waste that oatmeal. So he took out the whisky bottle, poured a generous glass and, setting it before his plate, he said: "Now, Josh, if you eat that oatmeal you'll get this whisky; and if you don't you won't.

"The oatmeal was hard to consume, but Josh, with his eye on the whisky, managed it. Then, when the last spoonful was gone he grinned broadly, poured the whisky back into the bottle again and said :

"'Josh, my son, I fooled you that time, you old idiot ! "''

The new bus line between Taneytown and Westminster, that started on Wednesday of last week, made its last trip, on Saturday. Evidently, two lines will not pay, and the second venture, soon gave up the field to the first. It came unheralded, and left the same way.

A light suggestion. How would it do to "jar up" lightning bugs-of which there is a large crop this season--and set a jar in each of our street lamps? This plan might give us light every night and all night, such as some of our neighboring towns boast of-moon or no moonand at low cost.

We are afraid that some of our patrons are holding off work they will want done for Grangers' Fair week. Please remember that our print-shop has its limitations, and that, as a rule, we can not be sure of doing work "right away." Every job needed for Fair week, should be in our hands not later than next Monday or Tuesday, if at all possible.

Edwin G. Cover, of Easton, paid Taneytown a visit, on Wednesday, accompanied by the venerable Thomas Mehring. His activity extends to wholesale and retail merchandise, real estate, fire insurance, canning-and politics.

report correctly, this should end the games with Thurmont. The series stands, Taneytown 1, Thurmont 1. The home club won from Fairfield, on Thursday afternoon, 10 to 3, in a well played game, notwithstanding the heat. The visitors maintained their old reputation here for being a gentlemanly lot, and put up a good game, considering the fact that they have had but little practice this season.
