Both Dr. Jos. I. France and Ex-Gov. Goldsborough, Republican candidates for Senator, will stump the counties in their interest. The contest promises to be a close one between the two, both expressing full confidence of winning.

The name of Dr. C. P. Gettier, of Littlestown, has been substituted for D. Elmer Buckey's for the appointment as postmaster of the Littlestown Postoffice. President Wilson has withdrawn Buckey's name and recommended Gettier for the appointment to the Senate.

-----The Woman's Relief Corps, a National organization of 24,8000 members, which is an auxiliary to the Grand Army of the Republic, is planning a campaign to aid in the general beautification of the route of the Lincoln Highway. Their first step will be to see that each and every school house on the Lincoln Highway has an American flag of standard size, and other plans are now forming. Their work will be along the same lines as that of the General Federation of Women's Clubs which has undertaken the task of beautifying the Lincoln Highway from one coast to the other. -----

The suit growing out of the crash on the W. M. R. R. near Thurmont, on June 24, 1915, ended last week, when the jury in the Superior Court, Baltimore, brought in a verdict, previously agreed upon by the counsel, for $10,000 in favor of the widow and children of Frederick L. Hayes, engineer on the passenger train, who lost his life in the collision. The money will be divided so that $5,000 of the money will be given to the widow, Mrs. Viola H. Hayes, and the remainder will be divided between Earl F., Hilda E. and Mildred V. Hayes. The suit was for $100,000.

----Two yeggmen dynamited the safe in the Pikesville postoffice, on Tuesday night, and escaped with their plunder. Postmaster Davis heard the explosion and as soon as possible notified the police and detectives of the P. R. Shortly after that, the two yeggmen forced the door of the station with the intention of robbing it, when a revolver duel took place between the four, resulting in the death of one of the yeggs and the capture of the other. Both of the officers were injured, one of them seriously, having been shot four times.

The LeGore Bridge Question.

A hearing was given before the Ways and Means Committee of the House, last Friday afternoon, on the LeGore bridge bill, which was marked by warm controyersy. The Frederick county Commissioners and their counsel attended the hearing. The speakers for the bill were Ex-Senator Maloy, of Baltimore, and Frank L. Stoner, of Erederick; those against the measure were D. Princeton Buckey and Jacob Rohrbach, of Frederick. The bill provided for a jury of appraisement, the finding of which was to be paid partly by the county and partly by the State Road Commission, and it seemed to be the understanding that Mr. LeGore would be willing to accept $100,000 for the bridge and roads. or $40,000 000 for the bridge and roads, or $40,000 from the county and $60,000 from the State Road Commission, a proposition to which the County Commissioners would not agree.

The Commissioners finally agreed that they would pay $20,000 and to have Mr. LeGore secure another $20,000 from the state, and the Frederick county delegation. tion in the House agreed to back such a proposition providing Mr. LeGore would be satisfied. If not satisfactory, then the Commissioners would fight any other basis of settlement as being unjust to the county in their judgment. A further conference was held at the Court House, in Frederick, on Monday, when the Commissioners stated emphatically that the companies of the conference o cally that they would not agree to a larger sum than $40,000, half to be paid by the county and half to be taken from the county's share of the state aid road

Agreement was finally reached on the matter in Baltimore, on Wednesday, when the Commissioners agreed to pay $20,000, and that $30,000 be taken from the county's unused allotment of the Shoemaker state aid road law.

It is the plan to have the bill now in the legislature, which directs the county to purchase the bridge and roads at a valuation to be determined by engineers, amended to conform with this tentative

The $30,000 from the road fund is to be paid within a period of four years. This money has never been entirely utilized by the County Commissioners, because of the extreme expense of construction and maintenance of Shoemaker roads at a cost from $8,000 to $14,000 per

The commissioners feel that in view of the fact that many persons think Mr. LeGore should be paid for his bridge the sum the county would spend for the con-struction of a bridge at that point, and that if the Senator and county delegation sees fit to pass the amended bill that it will be a settlement satisfactory to the general public and the taxpayers at large.

The New Road Proposition.

Solicitors have been going over the territory served by the Taneytown-Keymar road, this week, in an effort to secure the but everybody should do their very best to secure the road, under the very liberal With the explaint that he "hated to ay it," Rear-Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, ormer aide for operations, told the louse Naval Committee that in fighting be partially benefitted, and should help.

The proposition to build a pike from Taneytown to Keymar, has stirred up sentiment along the road leading from school house, on Monday night. It is understood that the Pennsylvania end of the road, already macademized the road, already macadamized part of the way, would be finished to the state

That the whole road from the Frederick county line to the Pennsylvania line, will eventually be built, is altogether probable, if the people "pony up." As a highway connecting Frederick with Hanover and York, it is a very important main road, but the probability now seems to be that it would not come under

Western weekly newspapers have neary all advanced their subscription rate to $1.50, before the big advance in the cost of paper. Eastern papers, especially the 8-page form, are seriously consider-ing the same proposition, and within a few months-unless paper prices unex pectedly drop—weekly papers generally will be compelled either to raise their subscription price, or advertising rates, in order to meet their largely increased cost of production. The Maryland Press Association held a called meeting in Baltimore, last Saturday, one of the objects of which was to discuss relief measures; and the publishers of the various counties of the state are quite likely to get together, in the near future, as county organizations, and take action. Job printing charges have already been pretty generally advanced.

.... Spring Coal Prices.

The coal man may not give the usual spring reduction of 50 cents at cn. It won't come on April 1, anyway. The consumer must wait until the anthracite miners and operators have settled their differences. This conference is now in session in New York. After it is over the operators will send out their revised price ists, and the dealers will then know what's what-and, maybe, why. In spite of the fact that the operators are deliberating behind closed doors, enough information has leaked through to indicate very little will be scaled off on spring prices, if any.

There is a wide difference of opinion as to the realities of the coal price situation. The operators claim that any agreement made with the miners that adds to the cost of producing coal, must be added to the selling price. That the actual profit on coal is at the lowest safe limit. Attorneys for the miners say this is talk," without real foundation, and that the miners are entitled to advances without necessity for higher selling prices.

HOW TO CARE FOR OUR COUNTRY ROADS.

Importance of Proper Work on Them in the Spring.

The cardinal essential in spring maintenance of earth roads, especially those on heavy soils, is good drainage. So long as the water can be kept from penetrating deeply into these roads they will remain at least fairly passable. To accomplish this on average earth roads, however, is far from easy. During the early part of this season of the year rains are often of long duration and tend to saturate the soil. Water from snows is per-haps even more penetrating than long-continued rains, while alternate freezing and thawing of the wet surface tends to increase the porosity of the soil and per-mit even more ready access of water into the foundation.

The chief attention of the road man must therefore be directed toward getting and keeping the water away from the road. So long as the foundation can be kept dry, even a heavy freeze followed by a rapid thaw will do little or no real damage to the road surface. damage to the road surface. A dry soil does not heave. The foundation will therefore still be solid, and the road will be able to sustain the traffic without serious rutting. On the other hand, a saturated soil expands greatly on freezing, and when it thaws out has not only lost practically all power of sustaining the weight of traffic, but also is in an ideal condition for taking up or absorbing still more water, and thus forming still more mud. The spring maintenance of earth roads requires, therefore, first, preventive measures, which must be taken the previous fall or summer, so that the road will go into winter properly graded, well compacted, and with good provisions for for drainage; and, second, timely, continuous, systematic, and intelligent attention throughout the winter and spring.

It is true that the only sensible and really economical thing to do with earth roads on which the traffic has reached a certain volume is to hard surface them. But the larger part of our earth roads must remain such for a long time to come. These roads, however, need not become impassable mud lanes every winter or spring. A certain amount of timely and intelligent attention during the late winter and early spring will yield results commensurate with the cost. We must also learn that it requires as great, if not also learn that it requires as great, it not greater, skill and experience to maintain an earth road properly as to maintain any of the high-class pavements. The fundamental principles of earth road maintenance are few and not difficult, but to carry out these principles under the almost infinite variations of conditions with which the road man finds himself almost infinite variations of conditions with which the road man finds himself confronted requires a high degree of intelligence, skill, and experience. Not until we realize these facts and put them into practical application will we have the earth roads which it is possible for is melting snow on the ground, it will about 80,000 trees were so disposed of. pay to have the road man go over the road daily to see that the drains and side ditches do not become clogged and to note the need of any necessary repairs. A few minutes work with a shovel may device finds its greatest usefulness during this season. It may be used to good advantage to clear the roadway of slush and melting snow and so prevent this water from soaking into and softening the subgrade. To fill ruts, smooth the surface, and maintain the crown of the road, the drag is unexcelled when in the hands of a skilled operator. An unskilled man may do more harm than good. Further-more, the actual condition of the road during this period will depend largely on the knowledge of the road man as to just when to drag, as well as his skill in the operation of the implement. In addition to the maintenance, provision should be made for doing all essary grading or earth work as early in the spring as possible in order that it may become thoroughly consolidated before the dry weather of summer. If the work is done too late, the road will not only probably become very dusty in dry weather but will need additional atten tion later in the fall. Where the soil is a heavy clay or gumbo the condition of the road may be very materially improved by adding sand from time to time as that already on the road is worked in by the passing traffic and the drag. Only rarely do our earth roads, even when neglected, become equally bad over their entire length. Most frequently the really bad places are confined to comparatively short sections, while the remainder of the road is fairly passable. An examination of the worst will usually show that the drainage, either surface or underground, is seriously at fault. The trouble can be remedied by providing the necessarry drainage, and in nearly every case could have been prevented by a comparatively small amount of timely and properly directed attention. The lesson is obvious. Systematically organized and properly directed maintenance throughout all seasons is our only guaranty of fairly passable earth roads during the spring of the year.— U. S. Dept. Agriculture.

-... Give Arbor Day a Practical Turn.

The annual proclamation of the Gov-ernor reminds us that Arbor Day falls on Friday, the 7th of April. It calls on people irrespective of age or sex to aid the efforts which the State itself is making to set Maryland well up among the other States for its attractive homes, fine trees, and valuable forests.

Arbor Day, very unfortunately, is but one day in a year, and people have often remarked that if the enthusiasm and effort expended on that day toward the planting of trees and the conservation of orests might be distributed over the year as a whole, much good might be accomplished in a practical direction. Since obviously this is not, or cannot, be so, it remains to ascertain what steps may be taken to the end that the resultant benefits of one day's work may themselves be divided among this and many years, not failing in their effects through the cessa-failing in their effects through the cessation of enthusiasm and care too often prone to succeed the tree-planting by institutions and individuals on Arbor Day.

Since its formation in 1906, the State Board of Forestry of Maryland has been bending a good share of its energies toward inducing owners of waste land to reclaim them through a more profitable use. The State of Maryland is normally a fertile one, yet 11 per cent of its total land area, 674,955 acres, are classified as waste lands at the present time. This is waste lands at the present time. This is unfortunate, but none the less a fact, and lands once good enough to grow good crops of timber, later showing profitable returns when used for agriculture, have so far deteriorated through the direct efso far deteriorated through the direct of fects of forest removal, erosion, and poor use as hardly to be fit now for anything, certainly not for farms. Only one crop is still available; that is of trees. For two years landowners of the State have had the opportunity of buying standard, During the early part of the season, as long as the weather is very rainy or there Many of them have, and a year ago Pennsylvania grew and planted severa million and though they are larger than we, the disproportion in size is infinitely less than in planting. Other sections should not be more progressive than this, probably are not really, but something is needed to convert this subject of treeplanting from an admitted need to an $1.00.

Arbor Day affords an opportunity, and forest planting stock is still obtainable through the Board of Forestry at Baltimore. Such standard varieties as White Pine, Norway Spruce, Red Oak, Black and Honey Locust, White Ash and American Elm are for sale as little trees to persons, schools, and organizations at ow per-thousand charge, averaging rather less than one cent each. quantities and single trees are sold, and the forest plantation is one which thrives under a minimum of cultivation and care. Full directions for proper planting accompany each order filled, and when desired expert assistance from the of the State Forester, Johns Hopkins University, is also supplied to formulate planting plans or execute the work.

The planting season will commence on or before Arbor Day. Organizations or individuals who wish to give a practitrend to that day's work, combining attractiveness and utility, sentiment and business, cannot do better than by carrying it out in a systematic way that will later reflect their good judgment and prove an excellent investment. They should order trees at once. ----

The fighting in Europe still continues fiercely, with great loss of life, and no appreciable gain or advantage to either side. Apparently there is a "wearing down" process going on which will eventually give great advantage to the side with the most men left. As to which side is losing most, the reports and claims are very conflicting.

Somebody sent the RECORD a card asking for their paper to be changed to Westminster R. D. No 1. As no name was signed the desired change can not

The Baltimore annexation bill has been delaying legislation all week, and at this time is in a very uncertain situation. The opposition to it is largely on political grounds, between the counties involved, and the city.

So far as we have been able to understand the proceedings, the Carroll county bills relating to collection of taxes, and the taxation of mortgages and judgments, are still in the unfinished stage. The mortgage and judgment tax bills have passed the House, but seem to have reached only the second reading stage in the Senate; while the House has passed a tax collector bill, and the Senate one of a different character, a case in which agreement will be necessary.

Another Loan For State Roads.

The Finance and Ways and Means Committees have agreed upon a maximum loan $2,750,000 for state road improvement. This loan has the approval of Gov. Harrington.

The expenditure of the revenue from the loan for highways is committed to the State Roads Commission, under the provisions of the general act. This means that the commission, as heretofore, will select such roads for improvement which, in their judgment, will serve the greatest number of persons. It further means that all bills now pending for appropriations for special roads will go by default.

It will remain for the commission to decide which of the several roads asked for in the pending bills shall be improved.
With the issue of bonds amounting to $2,750,000 for roads, the total state debt for this purpose will be $18,510,000.

.0.0. It is said that the Democratic National Convention will be conspicuous because of the absence of "office holders," and other administration influence. STRANGE ENOUGH, though true, that the average editor is continually stepping on toes belonging to somebody, simply beause he speaks out in plain type from the information he has, and in most cases he is blamed for being a mischievous busy-body, when he is trying his best, all the time, to add a little more to the sum total of the "greatest good to the greatest number.'

.0.0.0. THERE IS A SPRING Primary this year, and it is due on Monday, May 1. Spring primaries do seem a little out of season; nevertheless, the naming of candidates for U. S. Senate and the next Congress, is an important act, and our voters should take the time out of their busy season not to let the act go by default. Evidently, the people want the primary plan; and if so, it is their job to "get busy" and make the result one really representative of their choice.

JUSTICE HUGHES will be the Republican nominee if he maintains his present attitude of indifference and does not take himself unequivocally out of the race. -10-63-01-THERE WILL BE some "doings" at Annapolis, this week, that will not show up how things were "done" for some little time after the wreckage and obscurities have been cleared away. Being a legislator is not the easy snap it is cracked-up to be, after the members "get back home," because it is always a sure thing that then there will appear both sins of omission and commission, to be remembered against members "the next time." Those who escape this experience are among the lucky ones, who perhaps had little else to do than answer the roll calls and accept their pay checks.

bitterest opponents in the past are becom- the outbreak of the European war much officers of the navy is not proof against and whose illiteracy is a misfortune, not ing more open-minded. Both elements of this waste it is estimated, has increased an inquisitive committee of Congress.

THE CARROLL RECORD seem to be willing to wait for the convention and let that decide. The fact that Col. Roosevelt has ordered that his name be not used in state primary contests, and that he has been "corking up" his wrath against the Taft element in the party, has had much to do with bringing. about the changed situation.

Republicans in general, too, are becoming alive to the fact that if they are to defeat Mr. Wilson there must be a united party back of the effort, and even those who have considered Col. Roosevelt a party wrecker, appear now to feel that even he will be better than Wilson, and are willing to accept him, if need be, as the "lesser evil."

With the new rules governing the nominating convention, it is quite probable that the convention itself will represent a real expression of majority party sentiment throughout the country, and if it is clearly demonstrated, without violent preliminary contests, that this sentiment doubt that the party will again fall in line back of him.

On the other hand, it is becoming increasingly more apparent that the Progressives-except those who claim no allegiance whatever to the Republican organization-will also fall in line for the nominee, if it be clearly shown that some other leader is more generally desired than their favorite. In other words, there seems to be a genuine spirit in favor of a get-together movement, and a burial of by-gone incidents.

There is ample time jet before the June convention for this spirit to undergo a most decided change-it may either fall to pieces, or be still more closely cemented-and there is no man in the whole country who can have as much influence on results as Col. Roosevelt himself. The fact seems to be that the more he eliminates himself now, the stronger his chances will be for the nomination.

> ----A Rural Credit Law.

A question about which comparatively little is heard in the East, which is a very live and important one in the West, is the movement for a "Rural Credit Law" which will enable the great landed area of the Western states to be opened up to owners and workers on a fair credit basis. At present, the high rates of interest prevailing in many sections of the far West, which means the placing of mortgages at from 10 to 25 per cent interest, greatly retards the development of this portion of the county, and incidentally the whole country, as whatever retards development of land, also retards the production of

The Kansas City Post, commenting on the subject, says:

"Any advance in the price of land without a corresponding increase in productivity is inflation which works a twofold injury to the public. It increases cost of living and tenant farming. If a bank lends $1,000 with which to buy land to hold for an advance in price without improving it that is inflation.

But if a bank lends money with which But if a bank lends money with which to purchase live stock to consume the roughage of the farm and convert that the newspaper publisher is recognized as one of the leaders of thought in his comone of the leaders of the leader

Speculative credit is a curse to any country. It is prohibited in all European personal rural credit systems. Productive credit is a blessing.

Real estate mortgages have increased nearly five-fold in the last 20 years, yet Congress has been working several years to get through a land mortgage bill, and has ignored personal productive credit.

This much has been accomplished by the organization fighting for a real rural credit measure, as contrasted with the 'fake'' Moss credits bill and the other legislation pending in Congress which would deny personal credit. The issues have been clarified. The measures in Congress have been gone over and every evil teature shown forth.

In the light of the knowledge gained, the course to be taken in the future is charted. One of the great abuses of agrarian pursuits, the tenancy of farms, is growing fast. It will continue to grow, as studies of the bills show, until there is legislation that will stop bad practices; until the country awakens to the need of proper laws to give hard working and earnest men some chance to gain access

A proper rural credits law is the only solution now in sight. At least it is the only one that would prove acceptable to the great mass of the people. The crea-tion of the Federal Reserve bank system has shown that governmental interven-tion may be used to allow money and credit to flow in their proper channels; to give stability and permanence to the labor and industry of cities. A rural credit law designed in the interest of the farmers and tenants is what is needed, The government has a far more potent interest in these classes, for not only the well-being of the people is tied up in the measure, but also the ultimate food supply of the nation.

War a Boom to Junk Business.

Although the junk business is looked upon by many as a rather lowly means of earning one's livelihood, nevertheless the men who are now peddling through Whether or not Col. In city papers advertisements are being inserted urging people to bring out the hoarded papers and rags to tide over the famine and housewives are requested to save this junk. An appeal has also gone forth to many church organizations with a result that many aid societies are making considerable funds by gathering these supplies for paper mills, etc. Prices are rising and the following is now being paid: 25 to 40 cents and even 50 cents per hundred for paper, varying as to its condition. Rags have advanced from 100 to 300 per cent., also varying on their condition and rags that sold two years ago are now worth from $1.50 to $2.00 more and carpets 75 cents per hundred. > .0-0.0. Public School Athletics.

We give below a portion of the report of a special committee appointed by Dr. M. Bates Stephens, with reference to the county school athletic meets of last year, the full report being too extensive for our

"The Committee, in view of the success of the county school meets and the State Wide Olympiad last year, recommends that cooperation with the Public Athletic League in the conduct of athletic meets be continued during the ensuing year along the same lines with a few ad

The Public Athletic League will furnish medals as prizes for the athletic meets for each county as well as for the State Wide They will send score sheets, entry blanks and necessary instructions and forms for the principal of each

The county is to furnish the programs, officials and send the winners of the different athletic events at their county's expense to the Second Annual State Wide Olympiad to be held in Baltimore. The Public Athletic League will secure entertainment for the boys in the homes of local school boys.

The same plan will be followed in having each county conduct an athletic meet in the Spring with the cooperation of the Public Athletic League and, at the end of the season, have a State Wide Olym-piad in Baltimore city.

It was agreed that boys should be classified according to their age and weight. Boys who were 16 years old on or before 1, 1916, are considered as Seniors. All other boys are Juniors.
The Juniors are divided, according to their weight, into four classes-80-lbs and under, 95-lbs and under, 115-lbs and under, and unlimited weight. The latter class is to include boys who are not yet 16 years of age but who are too heavy to enter the other weight classes.

It is unwise for a boy to compete in a higher weight class than his own, but this is allowed in order to make up a meet in the costume in which they are to ompete and must not be over weight. No boy who has reached the age of 21 is eligible to compete. A boy must have been a bona fide scholar on Feb. 1, 1916. of the fact that they are connecting a both spectators and competitors. The entry blanks will call for the entry of six boys on each relay team and two teams may be entered in each weight Since it is believed that the relay team requires more cooperation than does running alone, this event has double the number of points scored. That isthe winning relay team is awarded ten points and the second team eight points, whereas in other events the winner gets only five points and the second place winner three, third two, fourth one. If a school has entered twelve boys on its two relay teams and on the day of the meet only seven boys appear, three of those boys may run in the individual dash of the weight class in which they belong. If all twelve boys appear, four of them would have to run in the dash of the weight class to which they belong, since their relay teams would be filled.

A boy on the day of the meet cannot he transferred from a dash to a relay in order to complete a team. The proper way is to enter six on the relay team.

The Public Athletic League plans to have a medical examination made of the heart of every boy who competes. Thir-teen hundred and forty-one were examined last year in the counties. The events decided upon by the Committee are as follows: 80-lb Class: 50-yds Dash, Standing Broad Jump, Baseball Throw for Distance, 440-yds Relay Race (4 boys).

95-lb Class: 60-yds Dash, Standing

Step and Jump, Baseball Throw for Distance, 440-yds Relay Race (4 boys).

115-lb Class: 70-yds Dash, Running Broad Jump, Baseball Throw for Distance, 660-yds Relay Race (4 boys).

Junior Unlimited Class: 80-yds Dash, 220 Junior Chilmited Class: 80-yds Dash, 220-yds Dash, Running High Jump, 8-lb Shot Put, 880-yds Relay Race (4 boys). Senior Class: 100-yds Dash, 440-yds Run, 880-yds Run, Running Broad Jump, Running High Jump, 12-lb Shot Put, One Mile Relay Race (4 doys).

Because salvation is free, as the revivalist tells us, is no excuse for starving the clergymen. But that is what nearly every American church has done.

"While I am not on the disabled list yet," writes a preacher aged 93, "I am deeply interested in the old soldiers of the corps.

-----Fortunately for the country, the gag Bread and Butter A Luxury.

With a large part of the world snaving the slices thin and dispensing with the butter, it is not inaptly prosposed as a Lenten diversion in American hotels to make the guests pay for the bread and butter they consume. Managers are sadly familiar with the guest who makes a farinaceous meal while waiting for his soft-boiled egg or a saucer of prunes. The charge for bread and butter will still leave several unremunerative items on the table, if not in the menu, such as salt, pepper, sugar and ice water, all of which will no doubt be included in time in the dread reckoning when men smile

If the cost of meat keeps on climbing, those who visit the average fashionable restaurant will be confined to the privilege of tipping the hatboy and the waiter. Nevertheless, no reason can be advanced for providing bread and butter free, except managerial anxiety to incur the good will of the customer and please him so much that he may want to come back. If "bread is the staff of life and bread and butter the gold-headed cane," why should not payment be made as for any other staple article of diet?

The public does not expect potatoes free, and there is no such thing as souvenir oatmeal or complimentary scrapple. We are all interested in detaining the soaring prices as in arresting the flight of time, but it must be sadly admitted that bread is food and therefore susceptible to a cash valuation .- Phila. Ledger.

> .0.0. An "Anti-Ain't" Association.

The fact that Kansas normal school students have formed an "anti-ain't" association is an indication that this improper abbreviation of "are not" is still more widely used by careless or semieducated people that might now be supposed among the classes long since substituting the proper abbreviation "are n't." The latter is to be preferred not only because good usage demands it but because the plural form of the verb is plainly noticeable and this serves as a Boys will be weighed on the day of the guide to the speaker. Those who employ the older and discredited form continually "I ain't," "he ain't," etc., in complete ignorance or reckless disregard

The derivation of "don't" - "do not -is far more perceptible than that of "ain't" yet one hears fairly well educated people say "he don't (he do not,) forgetting that this contraction can be employed only with a plural subject -with the exception of the first person singular -and that "doesn't" must be substituted in other instances of a singular subject. A pack-horse is made of "don't" just as a pack-elephant is made of "ain't," the latter being required to do duty not only for "are not" but for "am nct" and "is not," being connected with "I," "he" and "it" as well as with plural subjects. The commendable "Anti-Aint" Association might do well to become also a "pro-doesn't" society. -The Frederick Post.

> The Literacy Test Again.

It is to be regretted that the Republican leader in the House of Representatives has surrendered to the majority in the matter of the literacy test for immigrants, for while a vigorous opposition from the minority would have been in all probability without effect in staying the passage of the pending bill it might have had its effect in strengthening the President's disapproval and in weakening the numbers of those who would be disposed to pass the bill over a veto.

Literacy is not a test of the fitness of the hewers of wood and the drawers of water, however much it may be necessary to make it one of the qualifications for citizenship, and it is a mistaken notion that the ability to read and write is any guarantee of the good character of the immigrants who seek our shores. Illiteracy is an evil to be stamped out, but it is unfair to apply a test to those who were born and lived under a different system of government from our own a fault. - Phila. Ledger.

POULTRY and EGGS

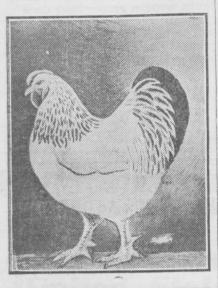

WHAT GOOD FEED DOES.

Result of a Year's Experiment With Two Pens of Pullets.

Prentice Moore, poultryman at the Idaho experiment station, cared for two pens of White Leghorns, thirty pullets to the pen, from Nov. 1, 1914, to Nov. 31, 1915, writes F. W. Orr in the Farm and Fireside. These hens in both pens were progeny of the same parent stock and looked equally promising at the beginning of the test. One pen averaged 24.6 eggs per hen during the year, the other 128.5 eggs per hen. Both lots were confined in yards fifty feet square throughout the year. The poor laying hens were fed a mixture of fifteen parts wheat, two parts oats and two parts barley; also grit and green food, but no mash.

The hens in the better laying pen were fed a grain mixture composed of [Prepared by United States department of twelve parts wheat, two parts corn, three parts oats, two parts barley, one part Kaffir corn, one part millet, one half part sunflower seed and one part buckwheat. They were also fed a dry mash made up of one part wheat meal, two parts bran, two parts white shorts, one part cornmeal, two parts fish meat meal and 1 per cent charcoal. This pen was also fed oyster shell, grit, green feed and dry granulated bone. Both pens were fed the scratch feed in deep litter.

The hens in the poor laying pen not only averaged less than one-fifth as many eggs, but produced a much larger proportion of small, unmarketable eggs than did the better laying pen.

The hens were weighed on the last day of each month throughout the year, and it was found that the hens with a limited ration could not maintain their body weight when laying, but the well fed pen maintained quite a uniform weight while laying over five times as many eggs.

Had the pen fed the limited, unbalanced ration had free range this showing, of course, would have been less striking. Nevertheless, during the winter months, when egg prices were highest, they would have been under the same disadvantage as the hens confined in the small yard.

The pen that made the better record made only a fair average production for having such excellent care and favorable feeding. The origin and former breeding of these hens were not known, but they were of a good quality of White Leghorn stock.

Fattening Poultry.

A fattening ration that brings good results consists of cornmeal, ground oats and middlings, equal parts, with about 10 per cent of beef scraps. If a cheap grade of flour can be bought about 10 per cent of that can be added with profit. Whole milk, buttermilk or skimmilk is used in mixing, as it hastens the fattening process and improves the quality of the flesh. The mixture should be moistened to such an extent that when pressed together it will form into balls, but will readily fall apart. The fowls should be fed three times a day all they will clean up. They should be stuffed on this fattening ration until they show inclination to take less food, when they should be marketed. It usually takes about two weeks to put them in prime condition for the market.

For Poultry Health.

A mess of potatoes, carrots, beets or turnips chopped fine should be given frequently to fowls, for scarcely anything conduces so much to their healthfulness. All through the year vegetables are relished, but they are absolute necessities in the winter, when there is no foraging for the hens. Chop the vegetables fine and mix them with scalded or moistened cornmeal or feed them raw or cooked without grain. The fowls will highly relish such a meal and soon clean up every

Plenty of nests in a somewhat @ darkened corner of the poultry @ house help to break the birds of the egg eating habit.

In every poultry house there should be a dust bath, where the hens may get rid of lice.

Fewer pullets, but better pullets, if more conscientiously followed by the poultryman, would insure more satisfactory results. Keep salt and charcoal before the laying hens.

GREEN FEEDS FOR FOWLS IN WINTER

Green feeds for poultry contain only a small per cent of actual feed nutrients, but are important because of their succulence and bulk, which lighten the grain rations and assist in keeping the birds in good condition. The poultryman should secure a sufficient supply of such feeds to last through the winter months in sections where growing green foods cannot be obtained. When chickens are fattened without the use of milk green feed helps to keep them in good condition.

Cabbages, mangel wurzels, clover, alfalfa and sprouted oats are the green feeds commonly used during the winter. Cabbages do not keep as well in ordinary cellars as mangel wurzels, so where both of these feeds are available the cabbages are fed first. They are often suspended, while the mangel wurzels are split and stuck on a nail on the wall of the pen. Clover and alfalfa may be fed as hay cut into onehalf and one inch lengths or may be bought in the form of meal. Alfalfa meal has a feeding analysis equal to bran, but is not as digestible on account of its larger per cent of fiber. Clover and alfalfa should be cut while slightly immature if they are to be cured and fed to poultry. The leaves and chaff from such hay are especially adapted for poultry feeding. Sprouted oats make a very good green feed and are used quite extensively in this country. The oats can be soaked for twelve hours in warm water and then spread out in a layer of from one-half to one and one-half inches deep on a floor or in a tray or tier of flats which have openings or holes or a three-sixteenths inch mesh wire bottom, so that the water drains freely. They may be stirred daily and sprinkled or allowed to sprout without stirring until ready for feeding. They are usually fed when the sprouts are from one to one and one-half inches long, although some poultrymen prefer to allow the sprouts to grow to two or three inches long. Oats need a moist and warm atmosphere in which to sprout quickly, so that it is necessary to furnish heat or to keep them in a warm room during the winter, while they may be sprouted out of doors during the rest of the year. It takes from six to ten days to sprout oats, depending on the temperature of

Where the double yard system of confining poultry is used one of the yards is kept in green feed, into which the hens are turned when the crop attains a height of four or five inches. This method of alternately yarding poultry furnishes green feed for the birds and at the same time freshens the yard. Rape, wheat, rye, oats and barley are usually sown for this purpose. Rye is good for late fall and early spring feeding, as it will live through the winter in most sections. Oats, wheat and barley are used throughout the spring, summer and early fall. Several of these grains may be sown together to secure a greater variety of green feed, and any quick growing grains may be used for this purpose.

Feed For Winter Eggs. Hens must have grain to supply the carbohydrates for the eggs and skimmilk or beef scrap for the protein. Grit and shell aid digestion, and mineral matter builds up the eggshell. The pullet or hen must also have green food in abundance at all times. Don't feed the hens by measure, but give them all they will eat up readily. Feed the meat scrap and ground or rolled grain in hoppers. This may be before the hens at all times, or the hoppers may be open during the aftermoon only .-- Orange Judd Farmer.

Intellectual and Physical Needs Are Great-Trainer Tells Why Race Course Is Necessary.

What qualifications are necessary to constitute a serviceable race horse was recently discussed by a number of prominent trainers who have stables at the Gravesend track, the New York Times states. There was a diversity of opinion, but all agreed that the first and most important thing in a thoroughbred was soundness. In expressing his views, Charles Langdon, trainer of Charlestonian, said:

"The thoroughbred can only fulfill its mission provided the product be continually subjected to severe trials in public. The only appreciable test, proved by the experience of many centuries, is the race course.

"The last struggle for victory, in race, results from the co-operation of the intellectual, the physical and the mechanical qualities of the horse, the development of which combined power is higher and more reliable than any that can be obtained in the same animal by other means.

"The combination of these three qualities forms the value of the horse destined for fast work, and in my opinion constitutes the serviceable race horse: the mechanical in respect to the outward shape and construction; the physical as regards the soundness and normal development of the digestive organs and motive power; the intellectual or the will and energy to put the other two in motion and persevere to the utmost. The attained speed is not the aim, but only the gauge of the performance.

'This is what gives the thoroughbred horse a value for breeding purposes and is looked for in vain in any other species of the animal kingdom."

KEEN SIGHT OF THE GULL

Sea Birds Have Remarkable Eyes for Acute Work-Experiment Convinced Ocean Travelers.

There is perhaps no other bird, of land or sea, so keen of sight as the common gull. To convince a skeptical friend of this, an American naturalist once made some interesting experiments. Two men were passengers on a steamer where the spring ebb aided them to run twenty miles an hour. A dozen gulls followed them in the steamer's wake without apparent effort, and circled in graceful curves over the water. Breaking a cracker biscuit into four parts, less than an inch square each, the naturalist handed one piece to his friend and told him to drop it into the seething waters on the starboard.

Immediately the bit of biscuit became invisible to human eyes, and yet before it had gone thirty yards astern a gull detected it, and, dipping into the foam, secured it. One by one it picked up the other bits of biscuit, though neither of the two men could see them. Tearing off a postage stamp from an old envelope, the naturalist dropped it overboard. The gull detected the waif and made as if to pick it up. But when within a yard or so of it the bird saw that it was nothing in his line, and glided upward again to his favorite station on a line with the topmast truck.

Loss, Pain and Fear.

Loss is painful, it requires a readjustment of the perspective of life, but it is purifying; like pain, it is a beneficent arrangement of nature whereby greater harm is averted.

It purges the dross of selfishness, of the canker which attaches to great possessions divorced from the ideal. Fear contains greater pain than all of these and is without their compen-

For they, and they alone, are the weapons by which the phantom is conquered.

By their aid we learn that it is a trick of the devil, a disorder of the sick imagination, a stage dragon to be trampled under foot; that outside ourselves it has no existence.

QUALITIES OF RACE HORSE ATTRACTIVE SURROUND-INGS FOR OUR FARM HOMES

Suggestions For Laying Out Grounds And Planting Attractive Shrubbery.

B. W. ANSPON,

Maryland Agricultural College.

Are you entirely satisfied with your home grounds? Have you envied your neighbor who had a well planted yard? If so now is the time to remedy that condition. As the growing season is rapidly drawing near we should have our plan prepared before planting time comes.

To prepare a plan is not a difficult task. In fact, it proves a very interwhich culminates the exertion of the esting one, when the various members of the family are consulted and their views are incorporated in the plan.

Take the measurements of the grounds and transfer them to a good piece of drawing paper. Locate on the plan all existing objects as house, buildings, fences, trees, walks, etc. This should be drawn to scale. If we use the scale one inch equals twenty feet every inch on the plan will represent twenty feet of the grounds.

With this plan before you it is a simple matter to view the whole area at a glance. Here one can only study the relation of one part to the other. Those plantings that have not pleased us can be changed, and so arranged that they will make more pleasing ef-

Where trees are too crowded this should be indicated on the plan. New groupings, changes in the walks, in fact any work that is to be done on the grounds should be indicated on this plan. Then we will have a clear record of the changes to be made. All the work does not have to be done at once. If limited funds are available a portion of the work can be done this spring, the rest later. Without a plan this would be impossible. No mind can carry a definite plan from one year to the next. We are prone to attempt details that are found in other gardens without considering the general arrangement, from which these details are taken. Consequently a poor garden is the result. Every garden should be a picture. One definite idea should be carried out; all other ideas should be subordinate to this main one.

Make Your Own Plan. One should select the style of gardening one wishes to follow and adhere to that style.

For most conditions the informal style is best. In arranging our plan according to this style there are several general principles that should be considered.

1. Keep the centers open. This provides for a large expanse of lawn, which serves as a background upon which to make the picture by means of trees, shrubs and flowers. 2. Plant in masses. In this style we desire the effect of the mass rather than the individual plant.

3. Arrange the groups in irregular borders, not in straight lines. To unite the buildings with the grounds vines and foundation plantings of shrubs are useful. Thereby the angular lines of the foundations can be concealed.

Send to reliable nurserymen for their catalogues. From these select the plants wanted. Great pleasure can be derived from groupings of native plants. There are many native plants in this State that lend themselves to planting in the home grounds. Among these may be mentioned button-bush. flowering dogwood, arrowwood, fringetree, elders, alders, wild azalea, mountain laurel, oaks, pines, maples, hickories, tulip popular, sweet gum, black

With so many plants to select from that are perfectly hardy there is no reason why we should select tender plants. Frequently we see such plants that are tied up in straw and burlap during the winter to prevent their freezing.

SOYBEANS IN MARYLAND.

Of late a great deal of interest in soybeans has been manifested throughout Maryland. Soybeans are well adapted to practically all sections of Maryland, as far as climate is concerned, but thrive best on rich loam and clay soils. They will not grow as well as cowpeas on poor, sandy soils, but are far better than coypeas on stiff, clay soils. They will also stand poor drainage better than cowpeas will. In other words, in those sections where cowpeas do not grow well, soybeans will be far more satisfactory. They are also better adapted to the stiff clay soils in the sections now producing cowpeas well than the cowpeas

The two important factors to be taken into consideration in the production of soybeans are inoculation and the selection of the proper varie-

Practically all soils in Maryland must be inoculated for soybeans if they have not previously grown soybeans successfully.

The best varieties for Maryland are Wilson, Virginia, Ebony, Cloud, Arlington, Medium Yellow, Haberlandt, Hollybrook, Peking and Taba. The Mammoth Yellow variety is commonly found on the market but it is one of the poorest varieties for Maryland except where it is simply used for a green manure crop.-Nicholas Schmitz, Maryland Agricultural College Extension Service.

Phillips Lee Goldsborough

REQUESTS THE SUPPORT OF

ALL REPUBLICANS

AS THEIR CANDIDATE FOR

United States Senator

At the Primaries to be held Monday, May 1, 1916.

Mr. Goldsborough is the candidate who is best qualified by ability and experience and by the fact that he is known to be the man who will represent all the people of his state and will effectively support their every interest. He is the man to whom all will be proud to point as Maryland's representative in the highest Legislative body in the world.

in whom the people have confidence. He must be a known quantity and a known quality. He must be known by the real test of public life. He must be conspicuous for his ability as a statesman and needs be of recognized personal power as a thinker and speaker. Such a man is Phillips Lee Goldsborough and I am not convinced that there is now avaiable any other man in the state whom we can elect." "What I am most concerned about is that we shall name for Senator, a man

Benjamin Armstrong Richmond, Cumberland:

"I believe that the results in the general election depend upon the wisdom of the Republicans in nominating Phillips Lee Goldsborough for Senator. I do not think there is another man in the state who can be elected to that office on the Republican ticket and I do not think there is a Democrat in the SOUTHERN MARYLAND.

"Phillips Lee Goldsborough is the ablest man within the Republican ranks in Maryland. The record he achieved as chief executive of the state is one of which Republicans can feel justly proud. I feel confident he will receive the support of the Independents. He is the man of the hour in the coming Senatorial primary.

Thomas Parran, of Calvert County:

"The public record of Phillips Lee Goldsborough is the best asset of our party and one that appeals to all classes of voters. It will elect him the next United States Senator. I cannot believe that the voters of Maryland will repudiate at the coming primary, the spler did administration that has just been given us by Governor Goldsborough."

NORTHERN MARYLAND.

Senator Richard S. Snader, of Carroll County:

"Mr. Goldsborough is an individual possessed of executive ability high above the average of public men in governmental affairs. As Governor he demonstrated he exercises his abilities with an eye solely to the building up of the state. I feel sure we can put Carroll County in the Goldsborough column in the primary.

Clarence Oldfield, of Howard County:

"After careful thought and frequent interviews with Republicans in Howard County, I arrived at the positive conclusion that Phillips Lee Goldsborough is the best qualified candidate for the Republican nomination for United States Senator.

EASTERN SHORE.

Senator Henry M. McCullough, of Cecil County:

"No Marylander has a record of accomplishments that can surpass that of Phillips Lee Goldsborough, who, unaided by fortune, has won success in his political career, entirely through his well directed efforts to serve the people of his state and country."

Wilbur F. Turner, of Wicomico County:

"Mr. Goldsborough is the strongest man in the Republican ranks. His administration demonstrated he knows the wants of the people and is able to secure for them what they need. This applies particularly to the counties and I am for him.

BALTIMORE CITY.

Col. Edward C. Carrington: "Former Governor Goldsborough has been twice elected by the people of Maryland to high office in a state-wide vote. As between Mr. Goldsborough and his opponent, I would feel that I was guilty of bad citizenship if I did not vote for Mr. Goldsborough."

Dr. Howard A. Kelly, noted surgeon and sturdy Democrat:

"Mr. Goldsborough was the model Governor of Maryland and we have never had a better one. His appointments in Baltimore City, Magistrates, Police Commissioners and members of the Liquor License Board, gave us, without exception, the best officials we ever had in these positions."

John B. Ramsay, Vice-President, Merchants-Mechanics National Bank: "Upon the success of Mr. Goldsborough in the Primary, depends the success of the Republican party in the general election." Published by authority of

A Forgotten Edict

Historical Story of the Sixteenth Century

By F. A. MITCHEL Emmonson

Harry, the great king, the bluff king, he who married six wives and beheaded two of them, was dead, and his son Edward, a mere lad, was on the throne of Great Britain. But the boy being too young to govern, the Duke of Somerset, having assumed the title of lord protector, was sovereign in his stead in all but in name.

But Somerset was supplanted by John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland, an ambitious man, and planned that the crown should rest upon the heads of his descendants. Having married his son, Lord Guilford Dudley, to Lady Jane Grey, who had royal blood in her veins, before the young Edward died in 1553, the duke persuaded Edward to name his daughterin-law to succeed him.

It was on May day of this year that a number of young persons were dancing around a pole in a field in the county of Essex. Among them was young Robert Woodville, son of Sir Thomas Woodville, a young man much beloved by all who knew him. Many a lass cast covetous eyes upon him, but they were all forced to give way to Mary Edmonson, who was the most comely, and withal, modest and amia-

These two were swinging round the circle hand in hand when a man rode up to Woodville and asked to have speech with him apart from the others. The dancing stopped, for there was a grave look on the stranger's face, and all waited while Woodville and he talked earnestly, but in low tones. The newcomer appeared to be endeavoring to persuade the young man to something which he did not approve. Presently Woodville broke away from him, beckoned Mary Edmonson aside and said to her:

"The young King Edward is dead and has named Lady Jane Grey to be his successor. There will be other claimants-Mary, the late king's daughter by his first wife, Catherine of Arragon, and Elizabeth, his daughter by his second wife, Anne Boleyn. This man is an emissary of the Duke of Northumberland, beating up adherents for his daughter-in-law, the Lady Jane Grey. He offers me a commission in the army and when Jane is firmly established on the throne a position at court. I am persuaded to accept his offer." "I beg that you will not," replied the girl. "The rightful sovereign is Mary, the daughter of the only rightful wife of the late King Henry. The Duke of Northumberland will bring sorrow on the poor girl, on whose head he is endeavoring to place a crown. More likely he will set an ax to her neck. She is too young to decide such a matter for herself or she would refuse to be made the dupe of her father-in-

"No one," replied Robert, "can tell where the crown will eventually rest. If on the head of the Princess Mary, I gain nothing; if on the head of Lady Jane, and I help to place it there, our wedding, instead of taking place among rustics, will be celebrated within a palace."

"Say, rather, in a dungeon." "No, no, sweetheart. I have confidence in the duke. Think of the place I shall be able to offer you as one of the supporters of the successful claim-

Ambition proved stronger than the pleadings of the girl, and the end of the matter was that Woodville went off to London to report in person to Lord Guilford Dudley, who had sent for him, while the messenger went on to enlist further recruits. Well had it been for the young man had he listened to the advice of his betrothed. The Lady Jane Grey at first refused to accept a crown to which she knew she was not entitled, but was at last persuaded by the entreaties of her father-in-law and her husband to accept it. She was queen but nine days when her adherents were overpowered, and the Princess Mary, afterward called Bloody Mary, became sovereign. The Duke of Northumberland, Lord Guilford Dudley and Lady Jane

Grey were imprisoned in the Tower of London and later suffered death on

Tower hill. News came to Mary Edmonson of the collapse of the scheme her lover had supported and that he was a prisoner in the Tower of London. Mary was a ward in chancery to a man of the law named Roger Bradford. To Bradford she went and implored him to go with her to London and defend her lover when he should be tried for high treason. But when the lawyer learned that Woodville had been one of Lord Guilford Dudley's lieutenants in the conspiracy he told Mary that any defense was useless. The queen was very bitter against the conspirators and was resolved to punish all who were concerned in the plot. "But," added Bradford, "I will try and think up a plan by which Robert Woodville may escape death. Come to me on the morrow, and if my knowledge of the law serves me I will te!

When Mary went to him the next day he told her that the only way he could get her lover out of the Tower was to accuse him of having committed a crime against the church. The government might consider a sacrilege of more importance than high treason If he could bring Woodville to his home to be tried for an offense against religion he would have an advantage. But if he were acquitted the sovereign would claim him to be tried as a

"What I propose," added the lawyer in conclusion, "is to bring him here if possible, try him for sacrilege and convict him.

"Convict him?" exclaimed Mary. "Yes. He must be convicted."

"And the punishment?" "He will be hanged."

Mary could see no advantage in be ing hanged over dying at the block, but Bradford, who knew more law than most of his craft, told her that there was a royal edict on the record; which might help him to save her lov er's life. It was a hundred years old, belonging to a period when matters of justice were very crude. With more civilized methods of court procedure it had become obsolete, but had never been repealed.

A church near by where Robert Woodville lived had been robbed and the communion service taken. Roger Bradford had got wind of the thief, and after forming his plan to get possession of the body of Robert Woodville he sent for the man who had confessed the sacrilege and asked for a piece of the silver communion service. Having received it he gave it to Mary Edmonson and told her to place it in Woodville's house. This she did, and the next day a search was made of the house and the plate found there.

Bradford went to London and demanded the body of Robert Woodville that he might be placed on trial for the stealing of the church plate. The lieutenant of the Tower refused to give up Woodville, since he was to be tried for high treason. Bradford insisted that his demand be referred to the queen. Mary declined to consider a crime against herself in preference to one against the church. She ordered that Woodville be sent to his native county to be tried for sacrilege, but that he be returned in case he was not convicted, to be tried for high trea-

The queen's order must be obeyed to the letter, and bringing Woodville from the Tower would be of no avail unless he were convicted. As soon as he arrived he was brought into court, and the person who had found the plate in the accused man's home having sworn to the fact, Woodville was convicted and sentenced to be hanged. No defense was made; none would have secured the prisoner's acquittal, and it did not accord with Bradford's plan that the trial should result in an

An officer of the queen's household had been sent with the prisoner from London to bring him back in case he should not be found guilty. This man insisted that Woodville be hanged immediately, since he had orders not to leave while the prisoner lived. But Roger Bradford succeeded in getting a stay while the condemned man's betrothed went to London to petition the queen for a pardon. The officer yielded, though he assured the lawyer that there was no hope of a pardon.

Bradford, accompanied by Mary Edmonson, at once set off for London, and on their arrival the former went to the Tower and demanded to be permitted to inspect the statutes deposited there. As an attorney he was not to be denied this privilege, and, going to the rooms where the rolls of parchment bearing edicts of England's sovereigns were kept, he found one which he copied.

The next morning he asked for an audience of the queen, basing his request on the fact that if his client Robert Woodville were hanged the execution would be illegal. This excited at once an interest in the queen, and she granted the audience, giving permission also for Mary Edmonson to be present.

As soon as the two were in the queen's presence Bradford said: "May it please your majesty, this girl, Mary Edmonson, claims for her husband Robert Woodville, sentenced to be hanged for sacrilege."

"If it pleases the wench," replied the queen, "to marry a man who is to die she has our royal permission.

"I hold in my hand," rejoined Bradford, "a copy of an edict of his majesty King Edward IV. decreeing that if any man sentenced to death within his royal domain and a woman shall claim him in marriage he shall go free." "Have you seen the record of this

"I have, your majesty."

"And it has never been repealed?" "It has not, your majesty." "Then I will repeal it."

"This may be your majesty's right or it may be only the right of the parliament. In either case it cannot be made ex post facto."

"Do you alone possess a knowledge of this edict?"

"So far as I know, your majesty." The queen thought, "Might not others who conspired against me avail themselves of this method of escaping punishment?"

"I will issue a pardon in this case, she said presently. "But if we hear of this edict of my ancestor and prede cessor before we are ready to take steps for its repeal you will incur our royal displeasure.

When Mary Edmonson returned to her home she bore a pardon for he

Mary chose to be married on the same greensward from which her be trothed had gone to support the cause of Lady Jane Grey. When they had been pronounced man and wife she said to her husband:

"This is a better place for our wedding than a palace. The Lady Jane was wedded in a palace."

Lesson II.—Second Quarter, For April 9, 1916.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES

Text of the Lesson, Acts ix, 32-43 Memory Verses, 39, 40-Golden Text, Tit. ii, 7-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

We leave Saul at Tarsus, his native town, for a time and return for a few lessons to Peter as the human instrument through whom the risen and ascended Christ continues to prove that He is alive and the same Jesus. The one only thing that believers are on earth for is to magnify the Lord and glorify Him in all things and win people to Him. Unless we are turning people to Him we are not magnifying Him, for when He is lifted up before people in our lives by word or deed He who was lifted up on the cross for us will draw unto Himself all whom the Father has given unto Him to form His body. We must think of Peter as in chapter viii, 25, preaching the word of the Lord wherever he went to save sinners and to strengthen and comfort the saints.

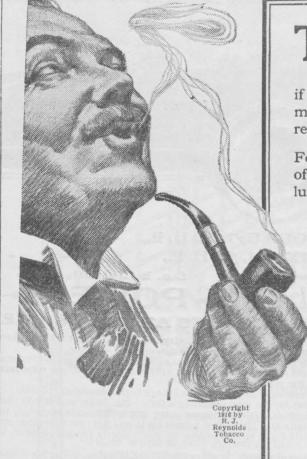

So he came to Lydda and was used by the Lord to give health to a man called Aeneas, who had kept his bed eight years, being palsied. His words to him were, "Aeneas, Jesus Christ maketh thee whole; arise and make thy bed." He was made whole and arose immediately, and one result was that all who dwelt there, seeing this miracle, turned to the Lord. I have often thought that perhaps the Lord would still heal more people if He saw that the restored health would glorify Him or win others to Him. He knows whom He can trust with health or trials and which will be best for the person intrusted with either. When Lazarus was allowed to die it was that in some way the Son of God might be glorified (John xi, 4). The man of John ix, 3, was born blind that the works of God should be made manifest in him. If only we can say "I have glorified Thee on the earth" we shall have His "Well done."

Turning to Peter at Joppa, we are introduced to a saint, called Dorcas, who while she lived was full of good works and alms deeds which she did. She was not full of talk about good works which might be done, nor did she spend her time telling of alms deeds which she knew that others were able to do and ought to do, but she was in the Lord's hand to be used by Him as the needle was in her hand. a willing instrument. Good works are prepared beforehand for each believer to walk in (Eph. ii, 10), not in any way to add to our safety which is wholly due to the blood of Jesus Christ, His finished work, but as an evidence to people that we are indeed His workmanship. Good works are not necessary to God to prove to Him our faith, for He reads the heart, but the good works of believers are good and profitable unto men who cannot read the heart (Tit. iii, 8).

This faithful saint became sick and died. She departed to be with Christ, which is far better than continuing here. She was absent from the body and present with the Lord. She rested from her labors (Phil. i, 21, 23; II Cor. v, 8; Rev. xiv, 13). Consider this well and then note the conduct of these disciples at Joppa. Two men were sent to Lydda to find Peter and bring him without delay, hoping that he might bring Dorcas back to them from the dead. This was all very natural, and the same desire prevails everywhere today, as a rule, to have loved ones come back to earth even though we know that they have gone to be with Christ and have the gain, the very far better. But quietly consider it. When our loved ones on earth go away for a few days or weeks or months to rest or for their health, and we know that they are well and happy, what would it be but utter selfishness on the part of those left at home to send for them to come back after a day or two, saying: "Oh, I am so lonely! I can't bear to have you away. Come right back to me." Now, what was the difference in this case? I hope that I am not misjudging those weeping widows, but as I see them showing the coats and garments which Dorcas had made I am wondering a little if they wanted her back to do some more sewing for them when perhaps she had simply worked herself to death for them. I can almost imagine the Lord Jesus saying to Dorcas after she had reached her heavenly home and was enjoying something of the bliss of paradise: "Dorcas, they are asking to have you come back to earth for awhile, but I leave it to you. I'll be glad to have you stay, for I love to have my redeemed ones with me in glory (John xvii, 24), but if you are willing to go back for a time I will let you bring others with you." I think that would decide Dorcas to return, and we know that by her return to the earth many believed in the Lord (verse 42). The result was the same in the case of Lazarus, brother of Mary and Martha, for we read that "by reason of him many of the Jews went away and man who found himself in tormen after death wanted some one to warr his brothers who were still on earth. lest they should come to the same awful place (Luke xvi, 27, 28). So it is not difficult to think that some might be willing to come back from heaven if they could take others to that place of bliss.

NE OF THE most persistent advertisers in the history of success was ROBINSON CRUSOE. He knew what he wanted—a ship—and he put up an "ad" for one. He tied a shirt on the end of a pole, stuck the pole in the ground on the highest point of his island—and his "ad" flapped in the ocean breeze. That, in the language of the sea—was very plain to every seafaring man. Despite the fact that he got no inquiries for a long time—R. C. kept at it. The Folly in Buying Blindfolded

HOW MANY MEN AND WOMEN in this community do their shopping blindfolded? Funny when you think of it that thinking men and women will play "Blind Man's Buff" with their money. You don't have to shop blindfolded unless you want to. The Out-of-Town Houses started the Big Game of "Blind Man's Buff." But, it's a dangerous game for us to play in our town. It isn't a fair game. It isn't fair to ourselves. It isn't fair to our community. It isn't fair to our home merchant. He is helping us to operating with us working with us to unfair to our home merchant. He is helping us, co-operating with us, working with us to upbuild and improve all our home institutions. Then, let us play fair with ourselves and with him. Let us give the home merchant the first chance. That is all he asks.
