BRIEF NEWS NOTES OF GENERAL INTEREST

Gleaned from the County and State Francis Scott Key, in 1828, for church and our Exchanges.

Fifty persons have been killed in Philadelphia, since the first of the year, by automobiles and auto trucks. Two little children were killed on Monday.

Baltimore will vote, in November, as to whether the city will have Sunday baseball, or not, which will add to the interest of an already very interesting election. There will therefore be no Sun-day ball this year.

Let it be not taken too seriously, as an evidence of unpopularity, that Mr. Bryan was defeated in his own state as delegate to the National convention. An alalysis of the figures shows that he was defeated by the liquor vote.

From forty to fifty arrests were made in the vicinity of Frederick, last Sunday, for violations of the state automobile laws. Commissioner Baughman says "It is merely a question of protecting the public, and the motorists must observe

As most of the cheap American flags are "made in Germany" there will be a shortage, this year, for Fourth of July celebrations and other occasions. There ought to be a U. S. law against foreign competition in the making of American flags. That we must go to Germany to get cheap flags, is about the limit.

----After a lapse of 52 years, a Bible which was lost in the Charleston prison during the Civil war in the Fall of 1864, was this week returned to Miss Martha Reem, of Landisburg, sister of the owner, Adam Reem, who served with Company C, 188 Pennsylvania regiment. Reem never returned from the war. It is believed that he was starved in prison.

One hour after he had been kicked by a horse, Clayton A. Overcash, 45 years old, died at Fetterhoff Chapel, near Waynesboro. Mr. Overcash, who was a blacksmith, was attempting to shoe the animal, when he was kicked on the right side over the lungs. He was taken into his home and Dr. Brosius, of Mont Alto, was summoned, but he died before the physician arrived.

Col. Winston Churchill, of England, has severely criticised the conduct of the war on the part of England, charging that the army is not doing its share for the number of troops claimed to be at the front. That there are supposed to be 5,000,000 men in arms, who are confronted by only 900,000 of the enemy. He arges greater activity on the part of the English army-greater aid to the

That whiskey was being brought into Westminster, Hampstead, Manchester, Mt. Airy, Sykesville, Union Bridge, Taneytown and other places in the county and disposed of in violation of the Local Option Law has been known to the temperance people for some time. Much evidence has been secured recently and the men who are doing the buying, hauling and selling are known, and if they continue to violate the law they will be arrested and suffer the penalties they so justly deserve.—Westminster Times. ----

The new school law that goes into effect on June 1, will make a number of changes. Among the changes will be a supervisor of high schools, who shall have supervision of State-aided high schools, and a white supervisor of colored schools. The district school trustees have less authority and control; the County School Commissioners, under the new name of "County Board of Education," possesses less power, and the county school superintendent is exalted to the chief figure and central authority in the altered educational system.

E. B. Snyder, of Hagerstown, has sold his fruit farm of 250 acres on Jack's Mountain, along the W. M. Railroad in Franklin county, Pa., to an orchard syndicate of New Jersey and Pennsylvania men tor $35,000. The sale also includes all the stock, implements, etc. The purchasers, who have other large holdings in the same section, will develop the Jack's Mountain property. The farm consists of 3,000 apple trees in bearing and 1,500 trees that were planted this Spring. The new owners will develop the entire tract and plant thousands more Celebration at Keysville June 10.

At Keysville, on Saturday afternoon, June 10, there will be another marking of historic spots by the Patriotic Sons of America. A handsome marble tablet will be unveiled on the land donated by and school purposes, now occupied by the union church, and 8 36-foot steel flag pole will be presented to the school.

The exercises of the day will be held in front of the school building, or adjacent thereto, beginning at 2 o'clock. There will be at least two addresses—by State Secretary Wm. James Heaps, of Baltimore, and by William L. Seabrook, States Attorney for Carroll county. The program has not been positively arranged, but these two speakers will be present for sure, and perhaps others.

The Keysville school children will have part in the program giving several reci-part in the program, giving several reci-tations and songs, and a band of music will be present. Further announcement of the program will be made in the RECORD, next week, as well as by posters. There will be several Camps of the P. O. S. of A. present, and a general invitation is extended to the public to attend and help make the event memorable. Children of all Carroll county schools will be welcomed. No special invitations, other than the public announcements, will be issued, but all are invited.

More Revenue-no Discount.

It is calculated that about $100,000 a year net increase in revenue will come into the State Treasury through the abolition of the discount for the prompt payment of State taxes, which goes into effect on June 1. This act, framed by Speaker Laird, was one of the important revenue measures of the State administration and restricts and restricts are stated in the state of the state administration and restricts are stated in the stated are stated in the stated are stated as a stated a tion, and went through the Legislature without opposition. Indeed, many members hardly knew what the bill meant, though all those on the committees that passed upon it were aware of its great importance from a revenue viewpoint. importance from a revenue viewpoint.

For years and years there has been allowed a graduated discount for the prompt payment of State taxes, and this has heen as high as 5 per cent. Many tax collect-ors, especially in the counties, have taken advantage of it to make for themselves by estimating the amount they would be able to collect in a given month, advancing that much to the State and collecting it afterward. The profit came in taking advantage of the high rate of discount allowed by the State, as in many instances the collector could make a profit even by borrowing the State. bank and paying the State.

Bouquet from a Brother Publisher.

In connection with a letter on another matter, the RECORD received the following "bouquet" that we are vain enough to display, and all the more so because it comes from one of the fraternity, who in turn appreciates ante-mortem flowers, and knows of their scarcity.

"Permit me, to commend you on the continued excellent quality of The Rec-ORD. Somehow it seems like an old com-panion, a childhood friend, to me. Since the earliest days of my recollection it has RECORD was due. Father and mother used to, and still do, look for its arrival with as much interest as they do for a letter from a dear friend. If the Satur day mail should fail to bring his Record, father would feel that the week had ended too abruptly. He would feel as much lost as he would with Sunday left out.

Pardon this digression, but I am sure that you very often wonder, as whether your work is really worth while, and this may be one way of telling you that it is. You may be sure that my parents are only two of a large number who find THE RECORD a bright spot in each week, even though it sometimes brings sadness as well as joy.'

Yours very truly, G. Roy Hess, Editor, The Brunswick Times.

-10-63-0-As to the Grand Jury's Report.

I have read the report of the Grand Jury, and the advice of our God-fearing State's Attorney, and the good kind advice he has given to violators of the Holy Sabbath Day. I have read these reports for fifty years and this, I think, was one of the most honorable and reasonable Grand Juries we ever had to look into matters and view them as they did. Now, I want to ask some educated Christian man or woman to explain a few matters to me. My father was a poor man and I got only about 90 days schooling, so I know little as I had to work all of the time.

Why are the laws so strict on the poor man, or woman, that runs a little store that he or she can sell a cake, or a glass of lemonade, on Sunday, in order to pay her rent and clothe herself and children? If she does so, she does it at her own

Now think of the poor boy and girl that must work six days in a week and from 4.00 a. m. to 8.00 p. m.—no eight hour law for them—how can they get a plate of cream but on Sunday, or not at all? How do the rich do? They order it and have it delivered on Sunday, and get their

How about the railroads and their operatives? There is no necessity to run a railroad or cement plant on Sunday. The railroad meu say, work on Sunday or quit. Is this justice? Why not indict these concerns and make them shut down, and let their employees go to church and do God's will? It is written in the Scripture that we should treat all fair and alike in order to have them walk in the paths of peace and prosperity. It is also written, "the wages of sin is death." We know the laws of God treat all alike, but the laws of our country are only for the rich, and down on the poor. I will ask some Christian man, or woman, with good common sense, to answer this through the RECORD. A POOR SINNER.

CARROLL COUNTY

C. E. CONVENTION.

An Inspiring Event held this Week. in Uniontown.

The 25th. Anniversary Convention of the Carroll County Union was held in Uniontown this week, meeting in the Church of God, Lutheran and M. P. Churches. The addresses were very interesting and inspiring, and all the meetings were well attended. The delegates and visitors were very hospitably entertained, and were made to feel most wellcome by the people of Uniontown.

Four banners were awarded, two Junior banners; the one for missions went to the Luth. Band, of Westminster, and for the best attendance to the Taneytown Lutheran. The banner for the highest amount per member for missions to the Lutheran Mt. Union C. E. Society, and the State banner given for missions to Grace Lutheran Society, of Westminster. Next year a banner will be given to the Society giving the largest amount to the Temperance cause. The next annual convention will be held in Taneytown.

The anniversary sermon was delivered by Rev. Rene H. Williams, of Hughesville, Pa. Mr. Williams organized the Lutheran Society of Uniontown, 25 years ago, and started the Carroll Co. Union. It was most fitting that the convention met in Uniontown this year, and that he should preach the anniversary sermon.

The convention sermon was by Rev. Curtis F. Oswald, a Presbyterian minister, of Baltimore. The State Pres., Mr. Bryant Mather, and State Sec'y, Mr. Spencer E. Sisco, of Baltimore, were among the speakers.

The music by the choirs and the sing-

School Commissioners.

The meeting of the Board of School Commissioners of Carroll county which was adjourned on May 5, reconvened on Monday, May 22. The members were all present, and the meeting was called to order at 11 a.m., by the president J. Pearre Wantz.

The following appointments of district trustees were made: Hoods Mills, E. A. Shoemaker, R. C. McKinney, J. C. McKinney; Sweet Air, Howard E. Penn, Ira R. Davis, Geo. W. Jenkins; Cherry Grove, Geo. C. Leppo, Urias Markle, N. A. Arter; Washington, Joseph Study, Edward Harner, D. W. Stouffer; Patapsco deferred to June meeting.

The organization of the Board, which was begun on May 5, was completed, resulting in the election of Maurice S. H. Unger as secretary, treasurer, and county uperintendent; Charles Reed, clerk, and Charles O. Clemson, attorney.

It was decided to visit Hampstead in the afternoon for the purpose of investigating the condition of the school building and premises at that place.

On account of the delay in closing the public schools of Westminster caused by the prevalence of scarlet fever in the town and community, the teachers' meetlng which was scheduled in Teachers' Hand Book for Friday, June 9, will be postponed until Tuesday, June 13.

The annual examination for teachers' certificates will be held in the high school building on June 14, 15, and 16, beginning each day at 9 a. m. All persons expecting to teach in the schools of the county, and who do not already hold certificates, are required to attend On motion the Board adjourned 12.15

-----Prices on the Turn.

Within the past ten days, prices in many lines of trade have made a turn downward. Firms that have been standing pat, chiefly engaged in "marking up selling prices, are now coming out with samples, and offers of lower prices, and with an apparent desire to do business. Even gasoline is "off" about a cent a gallon, and there seems to be a general assurance that for the present the worst is not "yet to come" along any line.

Paints and oils show a lower tendency; paper and products of this character are at least at a stand-still, a break being in evidence; drug prices are in the same category, many of the fancy prices becoming more normal.

Many articles are still unquestionably high, and will remain so, due to the war. but there is likely on foot a readjustment

The mad dog scare which developed in the vicinity of Jonsville several weeks ago has not entirely blown over. Dogs giv-ing the slightest indication of rabies are these days unceremoniously killed. Farmers and residents are not taking any chances, believing the dog that wandered over the county several weeks ago bit many dogs. For this reason they feel that a mad dog epidemic is highly probable unless precautions are taken. two boys who were bitten by a dog, eral weeks ago, show no signs of illness.

REPUBLICANS BEGIN MOVEMENT TO CHICAGO. ---

Getting Ready for the Nomination of Candidates.

Beginning with the first of next week interest will shift to Chicago, where the headquarters of the favorite sons will be open and which will be the bourne of visiting local leaders from all sections. Weeks, Burton, Fairbanks, Root and Sherman all will have headquarters open by Saturday next, and some of the canidates will be present in person.

There is no indication yet of Hughes headquarters being established. Probably nothing will be done in that line until Governor Whitman, of New York, arrives in Chicago with his group of delegates favoring the Justice. As Governor Whitman is to put Hughes in nomination, he probably will be looked upon as the leader of the movement, although up to this date he has not received authority to say that Hughes is a candidate or that he will accept the nomination if offered.

Progressives and Republicans are daily becoming more firmly agreed that the platform will be at least as important as the candidate, and there is now no doubt that the two wings of the Republican party are in substantial accord. The platform will be written in Chicago, not in Washington, as will be the Democratic platform. The Committee on Resolutions will have before it tentative planks prepared by some of the foremost men in both the Progressive and the Republican parties, and they will prepare a report which, when accepted by the convention and made the party platform, will define accurately the Republican position on tariff preparedness and the foreign policy of this country.

It has been decided by Roesevelt that he will not go to Chicago during the Republican and Progressive conventions, but will keep in touch by telegraph and telephone. Supporters of Justice Hughes, however, say they look to see Roosevelt rush across the country at the opportune time if there is a development which would be to the advantage of the ex-

The situation with reference to Judge Hughes is very unusual. The country knows nothing whatever as to how he stands on any of the great questions. He unquestionably has decided opinions, but he has not expressed them. As Gover-nor of New York he was a radical, yet was conservative enough to be named Judge of the Supreme Court. He is of course presumed to be neutral, so far as the European war is concerned, but whether he is for a vigorous "prepared-ness" policy, or is a "pacifist," nobody knows; and unless he makes an open statement before the convention, the probability is that many delegates will vote

There will be fewer delegate seats contested in the Republican convention, which meets June 7, than in any national convention of the party in 20 years. With all the 985 delegates to the 1916 convention elected with the exception of those from West Virginia, which will be chosen by direct primary June 6, only 53 contests have been filed with Secretary nolds, of the Republican National Com-

Four years ago more than half of the delegate seats were in dispute and the National Committee held daily sessions for more than three weeks hearing contests. "The adoption of the direct primary in the election of delegates by a large number of states is responsible for the great decrease in the number of contests," said Secretary Reynolds. year more than 600 of 985 delegates were chosen by the direct primary method.'

"We have no fat or bacon. Ham is only for the very rich and sausage is not retailed, but sent to the soldiers. For four weeks I have had no butter, nor margarine. Only one-fourth of a pound allowed each person weekly.

'Although pork is quoted at 3 marks and 50 pfennigs per pound, (85 cents,) one cannot buy it any price. Chopped meat is 30 cents a quarter of a pound.

Treasure Found in Cellar.

York, Pa., May 24.—Mrs. Wm. H. Wolf, of East College Avenue, this city, was made happy today by uncovering in her cellar about $14,000, hidden in a small paint bucket, which had been put there several years before. Wolf was a house painter and was killed about three weeks ago while crossing the tracks of the Northern Central Railway, in the northern part of the city.

About two years ago he remarked to his wife that if anything should happen to him, she should dig in one corner of the cellar and there she would find the treas-ure. He advised her not to disturb anything until after his death. She paid but little attention to it until he was run down by the train and decapitated. She recalled the instructions of her husband and today decided to ascertain just what they meant. With pick and shovel she uncovered the small paint bucket and was surprised to find it filled with money. Wolf had been very economical during his lifetime and when he was killed it is said had money in every pocket.

Automobile Sleepiness.

Frequently when there is an accident, where the car runs off the road, hits an obstruction or is upset, the driver or some other occupant of the car or the reporter says that "the steering gear gave away." Yet it is safe to venture that it is not the real reason for the accident. What often happens is that the driver goes to sleep. In a report of an accident last fall the driver frankly said he went to sleep and the next thing he knew he was under the car, which was thrown was under the car, which was thrown against an abutment.

The soporific effect of driving an auto at night for several hours is really responsible for more accidents than defective construction. The constant vibration of the steering wheel, the continuous noise of the machine and the drone of the wind have the same effect as does the buzz of an electric fan on most folk. fore the driver realizes it he is getting drowsy. The wheel is held more and more loosely. Gradually the car takes the line of least resistance, aided by the slackening (but not totally abandoned) control of the driver. The next thing hands he is off the road. Sometimes the car overturns. Sometimes the driver escapes, together with the occupants of the car, oftentimes the dereliction results in injury or death. If more drivers realized the danger of not keeping awake there would be fewer accidents. At least, this is the opinion of experienced drivers .-Indianapolis News.

-0-63-0-Bryan may be a Candidate.

It is generally understood in National Prohibition circles that William Jennings Bryan can be selected as the Presidential candidate of that party, if he will accept. The Prohibition National Convention will be held at St. Paul July 19 to 22 and will be preceded by a rally in the interest of the movement to obtain pledges from 5,-000,000 citizens to vote for only candidates for public office who favor national prohibition. Other candidates for president being considered by the party leaders are: Former Gov. William Sulzer, of New York; former Gov. Eugene Foss, of Massachusetts; former Gov. J. Frank Hanly, of Indiana; Gen. Nelson A. Miles, of Washington, D. C., and Richnond P. Hobson, of Alabama.

The convention promises to be the most important in the history of the party, in the opinion of the leaders. One suggestion that may come before the convention involves the entire reorganization of the party under a new name.

Ex-Gov. Goldsborough, who had to defend himself against charges of the Progressives in the recent Senatorial campaign, that he was disloyal to instructions at the Chicago convention, four years ago, and was Anti-Roosevelt, now openly supporting him and is trying to get votes from the Maryland delega-tion for him. It is adduced by some that his alliance with Col. Carrington in the Senatorial campaign, is responsible for his apparent change of mind, which has been a big surprise.

The Maryland delegation will be di-Hughes, three or more will follow Mr. Weller's lead for Weeks, one or two for Burton, and two or three for Roosevelt.

-----German Army Makes Gains.

The war in Europe, this week, has been favorable to the Germans, both against the French and Italian forces. The en-gagements have been marked by terrific cannonading and great loss of life, one attack after another being made with persistence in order to gain progress. The Germans have retaken Douanmount, a fortress lost to the French a few weeks ago, which replaces their strong attack on Verdun.

The Italians have been forced from their advanced positions, and many prisoners and guns captured; the latest report being that the reformed Italian lines are now holding. It appears that inactivity on the Russian front has permitted the Austrians and Germans to withdraw some of their forces there, and concentrate them against Italy.

The Dry State Campaign.

Interest in the fight of the wet sections of the state to remain wet, will increase as voting time approaches, and that a strenuous campaign will be waged by both sides, is unquestioned, the chief centre of which will of course be Baltimore; yet the smaller units will be just as vitally concerned, locally. The fact that the vote will be taken in a Presidential year, with Senator and Congressmen to be elected, guarantees a big vote and a generally memorable contest.

It is an assured fact that the various candidates do not relish the situation, as they will naturally become more or less involved with the liquor issue; not only as a local proposition, but because the next Congress will have the growing question before it, and the candidates will therefore be placed in much the same position as have candidates for the state legislature in recent years.

Both wet and dry enthusiasts will want to know how the several candidates stand, and party lines are sure to be broken because of the information received; and this will apply not only in the units in which the vote on the liquor question is being taken, but to a large extent throughout the entire state, the Presidential candidates, alone, possibly excepted.

That this information will be plainly asked for, is beyond question, and how the candidates will "get around" offending some, for the sake of gratifying others, will be a most difficult procedure, and must be causing some pretty hard thinking, even now. Even should there be a "combine" formed by the candidates themselves, most of them likely have a record of some sort on the general question, and this will no doubt be used in of clear-cut statements, and will give them fully as much trouble.

This year, there is the likelihood, too, that the Prohibition candidates for Senate and House will cut a much more important figure than formerly. Unless there is a decided "dry" choice between the candidates of the two old parties, the anti-saloon vote is quite apt to go to straight Prohibition candidates, and this is another thought that must add to the perplexities of the regulars, as well as to the uncertainty as to the final count of

Looks Like Hughes.

There is no telling what the Republican national convention may do, judging from the "pledging" of delegates elected. The fact is, the convention promises to their customers at one-tenth-yes, onebe a representative and "unbossed" one, and barring the possibility of rebellious refusal to accept the verdict of the majority, there appears now to be no good reason why the party should not be united back of the nominee, whoever he may be, with possibly one exception-Roosevelt-and it is not at all a sure make them-no more, no less. It is the thing that even he might not be generally | home merchants that must support them, accepted.

Mentioning Names.

Writers to newspapers, as well as editors themselves, are quite liberal in their mention of the names of certain classes of people-notably colored people-in writing up violations of law and disgraceful "scrapes" of various kinds, but just as noticeably omit names—and likely the occurrences-when other classes of people are involved, and this fact illustrates a habit that is distinctly unfair and disreputable.

Crime is crime-wrong doing is wrong doing-no matter who engage in them. It is the wrong, rather than the perpetrator, that should be shown up, when so doing is likely to do more good than harm. Therefore, if it is right to publish the name of a colored man, as a violator of law, it is just as right to publish the name of a white man in the same connection. Somehow, the man who can't defend himself-and who has not a strong following of friends to protest-"gets his," while equally guilty, but more highly connected, offenders slip clear.

In the interest of real justice, is this right? Does it not show a tendency to knock the fellow who is already down? Is it not an example of how the strong prey upon the weak, and does not this same trend permeate humanity to its discredit in all grades of society? Why can we not be as fair to, and as considerate of, the weaknesses of poor "Bill Jones" as we are of those of well-to-do John Thomas Smith?

The best of us are "trimmers," and false beacons in our expressed opinions of others. We regard names and station, rather than criminality. For our "horrible examples" we select those who cannot "get back" at us. We bravely whip the weak, and like cowards help hide the sins of the respectably cloaked. And this we do every day, and still consider ourselves honest teachers and preachers of righteousness?

.... The Mail-Order House.

We think the home merchant never had a more sincere or constant champion than we are. We have always and continuously advocated the patronage of the local merchant exclusively because we are quite certain that the individual life and future welfare of the communitynot only the town and the people who live in town-but the whole community, is bound up in the fight of the home merchant against the mail-order house.

There are times, however, when we feel that we are taking a lot more interest in the issue than the merchants themselves are. Our interests are naturally bound up with theirs, but after all it is the merchants themselves who have the most at stake and if they choose to ignore the inroads of the mail-order houses, why New York financiers and is managed by should we worry? One little word tells the story of the successful methods of the roail-order houses-advertising. Everlasting and continuous advertising-expensive advertising. The sort of advertising that takes no count of the cost so employing a dredge which cut a deep long as the results are satisfactory; ad- main canal with many lateral branches, vertising that is difficult to prepare and

These workmen were world at their command, there are many merchants who will sit back and say "advertising don't do me any good," or "it don't pay in my business," or "they'll come in and buy from me anyway when they want anything I have," or "the ads cost too much money-I can't afford it," or a thousand and one other excuses familiar to the man who solicits advertising for the local papers.

Don't pay? Man alive! Listen! If advertising did not pay every mail-order house in the United States would be in the receivers' hands in six months. Local merchants have the means at hand-their local papers—of covering their trade territory once a week with their message to twentieth-of the proportionate cost to the mail-order people. Do they use that weapon? In many cases they do not. They prefer to sit back and say it don't pay, or they can't afford it.

Listen again! The local newspapers are just exactly what the home merchants and the home papers are a strength and Judge Hughes, however, both above a support to the merchants in a thousand has been paid without regret. But life is dissimulation. In hundreds of thousands of homes there are faded portraits, tattered uniforms, little reminders of a thousand sorts which in a quiet hour are again and again baptized in tears, as they suggest personal loss, blasted hopes, destroyed happiness, and still, these but quicken memories that are ever with those who really paid the price, just as the ceremonies and exercises today bring back more vividly the partings, the anxious days, the terrible news of 50 years ago. In the very words, "Memorial day" there is a wealth of meaning to some which those of the present generation cannot understand as fully as they should, to appreciate the significance of observance of the day.

And yet, those of the present generation have only to look across the Atlantic, and contemplate the carnage and destruction there, to gain a better appreciation of the price paid by this nation before they were born. Figures tell something, but hearts tell more-broken hearts which time cannot heal. Let imagination touch the sorrows of the countless widows and orphans this great war has made, let it reckon the prospects of life dashed to ground, yes, buried beneath blood-scaked sod, and there will come some conception of 50 years ago in this country, and of the significance of Memorial day dedicated to the men who fought and died, constituted the real price of the peace this country has enjoyed for half a century.—Exchange.

.0. Scientific Farming Reclaims Great Tract.

One of the largest and most scientific agricultural enterprises in the eastern part of the United States is a farm in western New York. The June Popular Mechanics Magazine in an illustrated article tells of the scientific methods and up-to-date implements used on this big farm, which has been in the course of development for the last three years. This farm comprises 11,000 acres, and is two miles long and nine miles wide. A trip of 60 miles is required to pay off all the help. The undertaking is backed by a civil engineer who is also a scientific

The land comprising this farm was originally a vast, undrained swamp, and its reclamation was accomplished only by through the tract. As the land was Still, in view of these things, and with clear off the trees and stumps with axes followed by others with five-gang plows, etc., drawn by caterpillar tractors of light construction. These light engines have almost wholly supplanted horses on the farm, and are a source of special interest to the boys of the farmers. One tractor has eight times the pulling power of a

Of the 4,000 acres of muck land in the tract, only about 1,000 acres have been reclaimed and are now in use. Much of the farm is devoted to truck gardening conducted on a strictly scientific basis. A cost system is maintained and it is possible to know just what each crop cost.

All the produce is prepared for shipment according to factory methods. The crates are made on the farm, a special nailing machine being one of the laborsaving devices used in their construction. The workmen are well provided for with bungalows of modern type and with modern social conveniences, and such improvements as telephones, electric lights, etc. An evidence of the success of the enterpise is that much of the land is now valued at $500 per acre.

----A Symbol of Health.

The Pythagorians of Ancient Greece ate simple food, practiced temperance and purity. As a badge they used the five pointed star which they regarded as a symbol of health. A red five pointed star appears on each package of Chamberlain's Tablets, and still fulfils its ancient mission as a symbol of health. If you are troubled with indigestion, biliousness or constipation, get a package of these tablets from your druggist. You will be surprised at the quick relief which they afford. Obtainable everywhere.

The First Skater.

The first man or nation to skate is lost in the minds of antiquity. The Eskimos of the farthest North were found to be in possession of runners carved from whalebone when they were first discovered. Skating is mentioned by a Danish historian about 1134, and Fitzstephen, in his "History of London," says that in the twelfth century young men fastened the leg bones of animals under their feet by means of thongs in order to slide along the ice. A pair of these bone skates is now in the British museum. Londoners got the idea from Holland, probably via Lincolnshire, where skates have been used on the frozen fens from the very earliest times.

Injunction to "Keep Smiling" Is One of the Best That Mankind Has to Recollect.

Cultivate your smiles unceasingly, girls. This does not mean that you must sit around subway trains and street cars wearing an insipid grin. Not at all! It does not even mean that you must actually smile in the literal sense of the word. But your expression can be smiling without your lips being parted at all. If every woman realized how much harm she is doing to herself when she sits in the street cars and subways with her face muscles all relaxed and drooping she would try the smile cure for ugly lines. The smile can bring about magical results in lifting a girl from the ranks of plainness to the heights of actual beauty.-Pittsburgh Dispatch.

PLANT HAS CONSTANT MOTION

As Long as It Lives the Leaves of Vegetable Growing in India Jerk Spasmodically.

Perpetual motion machine of the botanist is a plant which grows in India. It is never quiet. Its leaves are dancing day and night, and neither the dead atmosphere of a tropical noon nor the soft breezes of twilight are able to soothe it with their restful lullabies. Botanists call it the telegraph plant.

Its motions differ from those of the aspen tree, which is the American type of almost perpetual motion in nature. The aspen leaf is affected by the lightest breeze, and quivers.

The leaves of the telegraph plant have a sort of jerking motion.

Each leaf is divided into three leaflets. The outside pair move up and down in nervous little jumps, as if they were being touched and shocked by some electric wire. The middle leaflet isn't quite so lively, but it keeps up a continual motion, nevertheless.

The only time the plant is quiet is when it is dead. It belongs to a big family of tropical plants known by the name of desmodum. Members of this family are characterized by long leaves, small flowers and flat jointed pods.

Crimean War.

Russian encroachment upon Turkey was the direct cause of the Crimean war. For many years previous to 1853. Russia had cast a covetous eye upon Constantinople and the sultan's possessions and had contrived in various treaties to lay the foundation of a claim to something like a protectorate over the Christians of the Greek church in Turkey amounting to threefourths of the sultan's subjects in Europe. As early as 1844 Emperor Nicholas had proposed to divide with Britain the inheritance of the "Sick Man," as he called Turkey, and in 1853 he began to urge his claims in a form which Turkey could not accept without ceasing to remain an independent state. The other great powers intervened as mediators, but in vain, and meantime a Russian army took possession of Moldovia and Wallacia. After nearly a year of fruitless diplomacy, negotiations were broken off, and Britain and France agreed to support Turkey by armed interven-War was proclaimed against Russia on March 28, 1854. The Fly in the Ointment.

Mrs. Higgins, says Answers, was an incurable grumbler. She grumbled at everything and everyone. But at last the vicar thought he had found something about which she could make no complaint: the old lady's crop of potatoes was certainly the finest for miles round.

"Ah, for once you must be well pleased," he said, with a beaming smile, as he met her in the village street. "Everyone's saying how splendid your potatoes are this year."

The old lady glowered at him as she answered:

"They're not so poor. But where's the bad ones for the pigs?"

A Woman's Job.

"Writing," said Mrs. Gertrude Atherton, the novelist and femininist, "is a woman's job. Men ought to do things, not write about them. When a man does nothing but write his hands get soft and his character, too." Mrs. Atherton once nearly fell in love with a man who was a writer. But a thought saved her in time, she confides to an interviewer. "I thought: 'Good heavens! the man does nothing but sit on a three-legged stool and write little stories all day and peddle them about to the magazines; he might as well be crocheting!' so I promptly recovered."

STABLE VENTILATION.

Information as to the Size of Outtake and Intake Flues.

A stable 20 by 42 feet, with fifteen cow stalls, would require a foul air outtake flue, with an effective area of 480 square inches. This flue can be made any convenient size from 12 by 40 inches to 20 by 24 inches, as long as the cross sectional area remains the same, writes E. Kammer in Hoard's

The outtake flue should be built of two layers of matched flooring with heavy waterproof paper between. This makes a fairly warm flue and is much more efficient than a metal flue. The danger of condensation is also lessened. The outtake flue should start about fourteen or sixteen inches from

The Ayrshire cow has never been bred with any system of mating to produce increased dairy ability in families, which accounts for the creditable records that crop out now and then from some new source. This shows that there is a wonderfully uniform dairy tenden-cy running through the whole breed, and no dairyman really knows what he may have for a record breaker in his herd until he gives his cows a systematic official test. The cow shown is an Ayrshire.

The total effective area of the fresh air intake flues should be equal to the area of the outtake flue. This would require six intakes 8 by 10 inches or equivalent. If the intake flues are to open on the east side of the barn and the cows are facing west the air will enter at the rear of the cows. As it is better practice to bring the fresh air in near the heads of the cows it might be advisable to place one intake on both the north and south ends. This will give a more equal distribution of air. Still better, the four remaining intakes on the east side should be continued through between the ceiling joist and opened directly over the feed alley. If this cannot be done satisfactory results will be obtained by opening these four on the east wall. The distance, three feet seven inches between the ceiling and the sill, will be sufficient length for the intake flues. All flues should be equipped with register faces or screens on the outside and adjustable registers on the inside. These intake flues should have at least 10 by 12 inch registers. The degree of ventilation can be controlled by opening or closing the registers. In severe weather it may be found necessary to close some of the flues.

The success of a ventilating system depends, first, on the care used in its installation, and, second, on the proper regulation of the system after it is in

PUBLIC SERVICE BULLS.

Cheapest Way to Introduce Good Blood Into Dairy Herds.

Something new is happening all the time, and dairying and dairy breeding are contributing their share of evidence that the world moves. A few years ago such a thing as placing a bull at public service was unknown. In fact, no one seemed to think that the service of a bull, good or bad, was worth anything over a dollar or as an accommodation. But now it is different. There are bulls whose owners charge as high as $500 for a service

And why should this not be the case? A farmer readily pays $20 or more for stallion service, which results in an animal worth probably a hundred dollars when it is a year old. A well sired yearling calf is worth from $100 to $1,000. But still we have placed a small valuation on the service that begets such an animal. Bulls have a proper and profitable place in the stud for public service. It is the cheapest way possible to introduce good blood into a herd, and if in every dairy community there were a crack bull of one of the dairy breeds whose service would be available for the best cows in the community it should prove profitable for his owner, but vastly more so for those who would be accommodated. Buy a good bull if you possibly can. If you can't pay the price, buy the service of one.-Pacific Dairy Review.

BEGINNING A PURE BRED DAIRY HERD

The dairyman who has made a start in improving his cows by better breeding and better care and feeding is frequently tempted to make a sudden change from grades to pure breds, says the Kansas Farmer. Good cows are essential to profitable dairying, but a sudden change to a pure bred herd will involve the investment of a good deal more capital in order to secure the same production. It is a worthy ambition to desire a pure bred herd, but the best, safest and most economical way to get it is to grow into it gradually instead of going into it by selling off all the grades and putting the proceeds into pure breds. There may be exceptions, but for most men the safest plan is to make the change very gradually.

The very best breeding herds in the country have been started in a small way, beginning with only one or two pure bred animals. After a decision has been made as to what breed most completely fits the conditions the first step in raising the standard of the herd is to keep production records on the grade cows, eliminating from the herd such as do not come up to a certain standard. The next step is to secure a pure bred bull of good breeding and raise the heifer calves from the best cows. It is becoming more and more difficult to buy good dairy stock on account of the increasing demand, and

An admirer of the Jersey cow claims she will produce more but-ter fat and solider and better butter on less feed than any cow in the field today. In other words, she is a piece of machinery that does more work with less power than other cows. The bull pictured is a

this is about the only way that a really highly productive herd can be devel-

The knowledge and experience acquired in developing a grade herd along the lines suggested will be useful in handling the pure bred herd. After a good start has been made with the grades it is usually possible to purchase a pure bred heifer or two as foundation for the pure bred herd of the future. If proper judgment and care have been used in selecting these pure bred heifers and a high class sire is kept at the head of the herd it will require only a few years to build up a pure bred herd. As the pure bred heifers come into milk they can take the place, one by one, of grade cows that can usually be sold at good prices. In this way the change is made so gradually that there is no heavy expenditure of capital, and the experience gained makes it possible to handle the better animals in such way as to get the largest possible returns.

FEEDING THE CALVES.

Amount of Skimmilk Needed For Animals of Different Weights. Most troubles from feeding skimmilk to calves come from overfeeding, according to the dairy department of the station at Corvallis, Ore., and this can hardly be avoided unless the calves are fed separately and each one's portion weighed or measured.

The calves should first be fed whole milk for three or four weeks, then one pint of whole milk is left out and a pint of skimmilk added. The next day two pints are thus exchanged, and so on until the whole milk has been entirely replaced by the skimmilk.

The skimmilk ration should consist of ten pounds of milk to the first 100 pounds of live weight, with five pounds of milk added to the first additional 100 pounds of live weight and three pounds for the next additional 100. A calf weighing eighty pounds should be fed eight pounds of skimmilk, one weighing 150 pounds should be fed twelve and one-half pounds and one weighing 300 pounds should be fed eighteen pounds of milk. Any wide variation from this is likely to bring

Cost of Milk Fat.

Our inspector has been spending some time in Carroll County, looking over property insured in the above company.

We wish to call your particular attention to the danger of terra cotta and hanging flues, air tight stoves, gasoline stoves, wooden fire boards and shingle roofs.

We also call your attention to the advantage of keeping premises clean, removing rubbish and other accumulation which cause fires.

The Home Insurance Company maintains an Information Department at Baltimore, and shall be glad to write any policyholder or property owner giving full information on the subject of fire hazards, as outlined above.

PROTECT YOUR PROPERTY BY INSURANCE AND AVOID FIRES WHENEVER POSSIBLE.

everyone wore homespun-

and, likewise, everyone used hand-mixed paint. To-day, when machine-spun cloth is so much better and cheaper, no one would think of wearing homespun. Many people are still using hand-mixed paint, however, because they do not know that will save them money and labor. Devoe Lead and Zinc Paint is simply made of the same ingredients the old-time painter used: Pure White Lead, Pure White Zinc, and Pure Linseed Oil. The only difference is that Devoe is mixed by machinery, 500 gallons at a time. Therefore, it is always absolutely uniform in strength, color and covering capacity.

We guarantee Devoc Lead and Zinc Paint to be pure. We know it contains no whiting, silica or other worthless materials. Stop in and ask for Color Card.

What O. T. Shoemaker

of Taneytown

has to say about cream separators this week

T will be worth your while to find out what some of your neighbors who use De Laval Cream Separators think of their machines before you buy any separator.

About the best thing we can say for the De Laval is that all the farmers around here who use it are boosters. It does good work for them and pleases them, and we know it will please you.

Make it a point to ask your neighbor about his De Laval

There are nearly two million satisfied De Laval users throughout the world. More De Laval Separators are in use than all other makes combined. It isn't the cheapest, but the majority of separator users have found out by experience that it is the best and by far the most economical separator to own. We want to tell you about an arrangement we have whereby you can make partial payment at time of purchase and pay the balance on such lib-eral terms that the De Laval will save its cost while you are paying for it.

Come in and see us the first time you have a chance and talk it over. Sooner or later you will buy a DE LAVAL

His Backbone Is a Spring. The snapping bug has a spring in his back, like a knife. When not in use as a spring it serves him as a backbone, so you see he is a believer in scientific efficiency and makes one part of his machinery do the work of two. His spring backbone, or backbone spring if you prefer, gives him power to jump, which in turn gives him his name. · Nature probably gave him the spring to help him get on his feet when he's on his back. You've noticed how helpless some insects are when you lay them on their backs. Not this one, however. He slips his backbone out of its groove and then slips it back again suddenly. The spring pops him up in the air, he turns a somersault and drops right side up. Spring backbones are common in several other beetles. The beetle of the pestiferous wire worm, which destroys the farmer's crops, has a spring in his back. Other members of the family make their homes in trees or decayed wood. -Philadelphia North American.

Resourceful Burglar. A constable going the rounds of his beat in London a few nights ago noticed a light in a house from which the family and servants had gone out of town. After the officer had pulled the bell several times a man put his head out of the bedroom window to say that he would be down in a few minutes He came down in a dressing gown and carrying a candle in his hand. The constable explained his suspicion, whereupon the man stated that he had just run up to town to see that all was right. After chatting for a little he invited the constable to have a glass of wine. He lit the dining room gas and produced a bottle of port. After they had drunk each other's health he let the constable out and bolted the door after him.

The man lost no time in getting the together and left the house by another exit.

The Fastest Swimmers.

Few people have any idea of the rapid pace attained by some fish. The dolphin and porpoise are perhaps the swiftest of all. The latter fish has been seen to dart round and round a steamer proceeding at between seventeen and eighteen miles an hour. Probably a bonito (a fish of the mackerel family) at its best could move for some distance at forty miles an hour. Salmon, too, and trout swim very fast, particularly when accomplishing their annual spawning migration upstream. Herrings in shoals move at a steady ten or twelve miles, but mackerel much faster. Whales, though not fish, can swim at a great speed. When excited they will dash along at as much as seventeen miles an hour, but ordinarily four or five miles an hour is their speed. Seals, again, are much more speedy, and certain eastern water snakes glide along at terrific velocities.

The most of the halibut are caught with the hook and line. The fishing, however, has nothing gamy or sporting about it. The lines are dropped down into the sea in such a way that the baited hooks rest on the bed of the ocean. The lines are of great length. Some of them are sixty miles long. When loaded with fish it takes the steam engine on the vessel the better part of a day to wind them up. They are divided into sections, each section having a float or buoy that rests on the surface and is marked by a flag in the daytime and at night by a light The line lies right on the bed of the sea. Attached to it are hundreds of hooks, and each hook is baited. The halibut swallows the bait and is caught on the hook and held there until the

The truest and most devoted friend that man ever had is the little inanimate bundle of nerves that stands guard by his bedside through the dead hours of the night, its palpitating little heart spreading cheer and confidence over the surrounding gloom. Yet man often forgets the debt of gratitude he owes this faithful and tireless little friend for the sleepless, watchful hours it subjects itself to in order that he may slumber in security and comfort. and when it sings its merry morning lay I have seen him, instead of be stowing fond caresses, reach from his warm quilts, grasp it ruthlessly and slam it into the farther and darkest corner of the room, crushing the dainty hands that seemed uplifted in an a: titude of horror and protection, scorn fully muttering such uncouth and unworthy reproach as "Hang that blink. ety-blank alarm clock, anyhow!" then | sense of proportion." return to his snoring!—Zim in Cartoons Magazine.

Stevenson's Brownies.

Stevenson maintained that much of his work was only partially original. His collaborators were the brownies who ran riot through his brain during the hours of sleep. He instances the case of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." "I had long been trying to write a story on this subject," he writes, "to find a body, a vehicle for that strong sense of man's double being which must at times come in upon and overwhelm the mind of every thinking creature. For two days I went about racking my brains for a plot of any sort, and on the second night I dreamed the scene at the window and a scene afterward split in two, in which Hyde, pursued for some crime, took the powder and underwent the change in the presence of his pursuers. All the rest was made awake and consciously, although I think I can trace in much of it the manner of my brownies."

Tennyson's Birds.

Of all the poets Tennyson was the most exact in his rendering of the songs or calls of birds. A young lady was present when he was reading "Maud." When he came to the passage which says, "Birds in the high hall garden cry, 'Maud, Maud, Maud!'' he suddenly ceased reading and asked She blushed and hesitated and then

"Nightingales, I suppose."

The poet turned away with the one word "Rooks!"

He always made the sound right. What could be better than "the moan of doves" and "'Whit, whit, whit!" chirruped the nightingale?"

Then, linnets, robins and thrushes "pipe" in his pages, the woodpecker "laughs" and "mocks," the lark and the plover "whistle," the jay "scritches," the parrot "screams," the peacock "squalls," the blackbird "warbles," the ocean fowl "shriek," and the eagle "yelps." He may well ask in one of the daintiest of his lullabies, "What does little birdie say?" He knows, and he lets his readers know too .- London

Burning Diamonds.

You often hear of people with money to burn, but so far none has ever attempted to burn his diamonds. The reason why perhaps is because they will burn beautifully. "A great many people imagine that diamonds are indestructible," said a jeweler, who was placing a load of gems in his safe for the night, "but as a matter of fact, a fire of diamonds would be the briskest, prettiest thing in the world. Diamonds are nothing but coal carbon. Put a handful of diamonds on a plate and set a light to them. They will burn with a hard, gemlike flame till nothing is left. There will be no smoke, no soot, and at the end the plate will be as clear as though just washed. Not the slightest particle, even of ash, will remain."-Pittsburgh Press.

A Lost Book.

Among the Somalis of Africa there is a legend that when God first made them, a man and a woman, he wrote down in a book the law they were to follow. They were promised that as long as they carefully preserved this book they should continue great and powerful, but if they lost it their greatness would depart from them One day the book was carelessly lef lying outside a tent, where a bullock found and devoured it. From that fa tal day their decadence set in, and to the present time whenever an ox dies of disease or is killed his entrails are religiously examined to see if any trace of the book can be found. If found they believe they should recover

HIS LIFE FOR BOAT

Commander Tried to Expedite Trip Up Tigris.

Chops at Cable Turks Stretched Across River Until, Wounded Seven Times, He Has to Turn Back.

London.-How Lieutenant Commander Edgar Christopher Cookson. in command of the British Gunboat Comet, during the advance up the Tihad stretched across the river as an obstruction is vividly told by a letter which one of the crew wrote to his mother and which was recently published in the English newspapers. While trying to cut the cable the gallant commander was shot seven times and died soon after reaching the deck of his vessel again. For his gallantry he received the Victoria Cross.

In his letter the seaman explains that the Turks were heavily intrenched not far from Ali Gharbi. During the time that we were bombarding them," he writes, "some of our troops and cavalry went inland to try to surround them. They nearly succeeded, but found the enemy a little too strong, though they captured 1.600 prisoners and about twenty guns. Just as it was getting dark our seaplane dropped on the water alongside us and told Lieutenant Commander Cookson that the Turks were on the run.

"A little further up the river they had placed obstructions so that we could not pass without clearing them away, giving them time to get away. This turned out to be the liveliest time I have had since the fighting started. Commander Cookson decided to go up and clear the obstruction and then give chase to the Turks. It was very dark when we started off with the Shaitan and Sumana follow-

"When we got around the head of land the Turks opened fire with rifles but we steamed right up to the obstruction. The Turks were then close enough to throw hand bombs, but luckily none of them reached the deck of the ship. The obstruction turned out to be a big cable stretched across the river with dhows made fast to An attempt was made to sink the center dhow with gunfire, but when this failed the commander ordered that we steam alongside of it.

"Commander Cookson, when he saw that the boat could not be sunk by firing, took an ax and leaped over the bows of the Comet on to the dhow He chopped at the cable until he had to turn back, he was so badly wound-He was shot in seven places, and when we dragged him back aboard his last words were, 'I am done. It is a failure. Return at full speed.' He never spoke afterward. We had six wounded, but none seriously.

During that time we had not been silent. We fired at them with guns and rifles, and the Shaitan and the Sumana were also blazing away. Our troops ashore said it was a lovely sight to see the vessels with all their guns working. We must have frightened the Turks, because on going up again at daybreak after burying our officer we found that they had cleared out and retired farther up the river. We steamed after them, and when we reached Kut-el-Amara we found the cavalry there. This is the first place to which the army has got before the navy. Subsequently we received orders to pursue the flying Turks and forced the enemy to leave several dhows laden with stores, provisions and ammunition."

$2.50 FOR FUNERAL SERMON

Man Arranges Details for His Obsequies and Names Hymns to Be Sung.

Reading, Pa.—"Good sermons" for his funeral at $2.50 a sermon were ordered by William H. S. Moyer, who died here recently and whose will has been filed for probate. All the provisions in the will were carried out to the letter.

Mr. Moyer left a large estate and he made 11 small bequests to churches, colleges, orphanages and cemetery companies. He named the kind of coffin he wanted and the text of his funeral sermon. The hymns were specified. One was "My faith Looks Up to Thee."

Two clergymen were named. In case one became ill or refused to preach the sermon for $2.50 a substitute was provided.

The Right Not to Laugh.

If one were to accuse you of poisoning your grandmother you would presumably smile in unruffled fashion and go about your affairs without feeling any burden of accusation. But if one accused you of lacking a sense of humor you would first of all resent it indignantly, and, furthermore, for an indefinite time to come you would be conscious of a desire to disprove the charge, scrutinizing anxiously every phrase that might conceal some subtle hidden test, emitting now and then forced laughs on suspicion. Perhaps you boast your emancipation in many fields where public opinion customarily rules. You wear a straw hat when you please; you object to the insignia gris river, attempted single handed of mourning; you flaunt your readiness to cut a steel cable which the Turks to discuss any subject in mixed company; you do or do not serve butter at your dinner table. Yet you are afraid you may not laugh in the right places. Many a one who proclaims his right to individuality of opinion fears to assert an equally inalienable right not to laugh. Deep in his heart he dreads the withering accusation that he lacks a sense of humor.—Burges Johnson ic Harper's Magazine.

Death and Life Masks. In the preparation of death masks the usual method is to cover the face of the dead body with oil and then apply plaster of paris. The oil prevents too close adhesion to the skin and makes it possible to remove the plaster when it has hardened. A mold is thus formed, into which fresh plaster is poured. The resulting cast is the death mask. Death masks are of course exact resemblances of the faces from which they are made, and their value is impaired only by the changes of contour which may have been caused by death itself. The custom of taking death masks is very ancient and widespread as well. The Romans made them of wax, the Egyptians of thin gold plate. A few specimens have been found among the American Indians. Life masks are similarly made, but mobility of expression is necessarily sacrificed.-New York Times.

Beaumont Greater Than Fletcher. Francis Beaumont is most renowned for his share in writing Beaumont and Fletcher's plays, a partnership probably unequaled in the history of literature and very seldom rivaled. The Alsatian novelists, who ultimately quarreled, Erckmann and Chatrian, and the English novelists Besant and Rice are somewhat parallel, although Sir Walter Besant went on writing successfully for years after the death of his colleague. In the Elizabethan partnership it was otherwise. Fletcher, though the elder man, outlived his friend for more than nine years and proved himself the lesser poet. Beaumont was laid to rest in the poets' corner of Westminster abbey, which he Ionia, Ind.-A. P. Fleckenstein of Ionia is the possessor of a Bible which as been in his family for 332 years. Most of the time it has been in Germany. It was in Hoerstin, Bavaria, until 1883, when it was brought to America. In 1893 it was exhibited at the world's fair.

The flyleaf at the beginning of the New Testament contains the following tribute to the translator:

"A true translation into the German language according to the old translations used in the Christian church and enlightened with many wholesome annotations by the Rev. Dr. John Dietenberger. To the praise of God and the most gracious pleasure of the Roman imperial majesty and to the good of the common German nation and now embellished with illustrations and put into this grand form. CONVICTS TO PLANT COTTON

They Will Cultivate 1,300 Acres of Prison Farm in Oklahoma.

McAlester, Okla.-Thirteen hundred acres of the state prison farm will be planted to cotton this year. All work except the overseeing of the labor will be done by prisoners.

The land on which this cotton will be produced was a few years ago merely a rocky waste. Hills, rockcovered and eroded by rains and gullies deeply cut by spring floods, surrounded the concrete walls of the penitentiary. Hard labor and careful management have changed the surface to a rolling, well-drained seed bed.

Rocks were removed from the sur face. Gullies were filled up after drains had been laid. Dams and riprap were emplaced to hold back the fine soil carried down by showers.

In the coming year almost the entire acreage will be devoted to cotton. Of the land still rocky and unimproved hog and cattle pastures have been made. Bermuda grass is spreading and before many years at the present rate of development enough beef and dairy supplies will be produced to feed the convicts.

Naming a Town.

An interesting story is told as to the origin of the name "Moosejaw" as applied to a town in Canada. Some fifty years ago, so the story runs, a pioneer, with his team of oxen and "prairie schooner," passing along the banks of the river, was obliged to camp at this point in Saskatchewan on account of an accident to his cart.

A spoke had fallen out during the day, and the wheel was falling apart. He looked about for something to insert for a temporary brace for the wheel, while his wife busied herself with the evening meal.

The pioneer's child, while romping around, found the jawbone of a moose, which she held up to her father, who by this time almost despaired of finding anything with which to repair his cart. He was delighted to find that the jawbone exactly fitted the place of the missing spoke. The Indians thereafter named this district the "Place Where the White Man Found the Moosejaw." This, it is said, accounts for the town's queer name.-Washing-

Message of a Banknote.

Writing on a banknote once freed an English slave. The note came into the hands of a Liverpool merchant's cashier. He examined it, noticed some red marks on the back and by the lavish use of time and ingenuity deciphered the message. It ran: "If this note should fall into the hands of John Dean of Longhill, near Carlisle, he will learn thereby that his brother is languishing a prisoner in Algiers." John Dean was found, and he applied to the government and interested the prime minister, who stirred the foreign secretary into action. Inquiries were made, and the dey, by golden arguments, was persuaded to release him. For eleven years he had been a galley slave, and he had written the message in blood with a splinter of wood. His release came in time to allow him to die at home.-London Telegraph.

Neighbors.

Occasionally a writer makes a big hit by a very simple device. He discovers his neighbors. Most of us live next door to people for years and visit with them on the front porch and once in awhile call on them. But we rarely get really acquainted.

And then a McCutcheon comes along. or a Webster, or a Briggs, or a George Ade, or a Fatty Lewis and finds out that a neighbor is a human being. It is revealed that he gets peevish when the buttons aren't sewed on, and that his children have the croup, and that the baby keeps the family awake all night, and that in general he is a romantic character.

It is possible that your own neighbors might be as interesting as those of the gentlemen just mentioned if you would take the pains to know them .-Kansas City Star.

How She Proposed

A Story For Leap Year

By ELINOR MARSH

Professor Poland of --- Woman's college was lecturing to his class, his subject being customs in India. He had excited considerable attention while dwelling upon the suttee, the girls showing great indignation at the immolation of a widow on her husband's funeral pyre. A hundred pens taking down the lecture scratched fiercely on as many notebooks. From the suttee he passed to the products of the country, and the pen scratching fell off so perceptibly that the professor was admonished that he was losing his hold on the interest of his class. He kept a number of slips, on each of which was written some bit of information calculated to attract the attention of young women, and, taking up one, he interpolated it into his lecture.

"Among the singular marriage customs of different people there is one in India which is very delicate."

Every pen of the hundred young ladies began to send forth a sympathetic sound.

"A father will hold his daughter for marriage. A parent having a very beautiful daughter or being able to settle on her a large dowry will somesuch young men as desire her cannot for marriageable women. Widows may he had at a very low price."

A hum of expressions of amusement, approbation or dissatisfaction interrupted the lecturer.

"When a father finds that he has been holding his daughter too high and wishes, so to speak, to put her on the hargain counter [laughter] he does not tack a card to her on which is written 'Special,' as would be done in America if we had any such marriage custom. He adopts a much more poetic method. He marries her to a bouquet of flowers and throws her husband into a well. Since he must be drowned the bride becomes a widow. This is a notification to the young men that she may be had cheap.'

Professor Poland, who was a young man of twenty-seven, paused and showed a white set of teeth under his dark mustache in a smile which was meant to be a partial unbending from his professional dignity. A ripple of amusement passed over his auditors, and he was about to return to a finish of the products of India when Belle Halliday, one of those girls who go to college to let off a surplus stock of mischief, arose to ask a question. Professor Poland paused and looked at her inquir-

"This being leap year," she said, "it occurs to me that this wedding to the delicate way of proposing to the man of her choice. It would be equivalent to saying, 'I may be had for a song; buy me.'

The class tittered. The professor looked at the ceiling, then made the following reply:

"Your method, Miss Halliday, would involve a knowledge on the part of the man proposed to of the Indian custom in question, which he would not be likely to poss

"Oh, I didn't think of that!" And Miss Halliday sat down in pretended confusion. But if there was any confusion in the matter it was with the professor, who was at the disadvantage of being one man among many women. He made an attempt to smile, then went on with his lecture, but did not again strike anything as interesting to his class as the matter of a girl being wedded to a bunch of flowers and her husband being thrown into a well.

Professor Poland's lecture was delivered in February, and Miss Belle Halliday was graduated in the following June at the foot of her class. As has been said, she did not go to college to study, but to have a good time. She was philosophic about it. "Why should I make a grind of myself when all the rest of the class are grinds? If I spent my time studying, who would do the deviltry? If I were destined to make my living as a teacher I would need to apply myself. But I'm not to teach; I'm to be married."

"Got him picked out, Belle?" asked a chum.

"Yes."

"Maybe."

"Has he proposed?"

"No, and I don't expect him to propose. This is leap year, and I intend to do the proposing myself." "Going to be married to a bunch of flowers and throw your husband in a

The chief reason underlying Miss Halliday's indisposition to make a grind of herself she did not mention. Her father was a rich man, and she was an only child. Besides what property she might expect from him, she possessed a fortune in her own right, inherited from a grandmother. Indeed it would be difficult to find a reason why she should, like the busy bee, improve each shining hour over dead languages, mathematics or philosophy for which she would have little or no use,

But Miss Halliday was bright enough to get what she wanted, and in one respect she knew very well what she

since the probability of her coming to want was very remote.

wanted. She wanted Professor Poland. But Professor Poland was in receipt of an income of $1,500 a year and possibly might in the course of ten years be worth twice that to the cause of education. Miss Halliday knew very well that the modest young man would never have the assurance to propose for the hand of an heiress.

"I hope," she said to Professor Poland when they separated at commencement time, "that this will not end our acquaintance. I have always been greatly interested in your instruction and am indebted to you for having helped me through several examinations which would without your assistance have sent me home to finish my college course sitting round trying to look pretty. Mamma has directed me to invite you to spend a part of your vacation with us at our country place, and we shall look for you at an early date.'

The invitation was followed up by one more specific, and in July Professor Poland found himself at Morning Glory-Belle had named the place from a flower she especially loved—a magnificent place in the center of spacious grounds and commanding a fine view of distant hills and nearby lakes. While Miss Halliday was in college she, like other students, was under his authority. It seemed to him now that the conditions were inverted. He appeared to himself nothing more than a pedagogue with so little income as to be barely able to tip the servants, while his former pupil was arrayed in "purple and fine linen" and occupying a social position to which he could never hope for an entree, and if he was granted an entree he would not be able to support it.

Miss Halliday's treatment of Professor Poland was calculated to throw him a price to be paid by the suitor before into a fever. She was not only gracious; she was as devoted to him as he would have been glad to be devoted to her were their positions reversed, lavtimes put so high a price on her that sihing on him such delicate attentions as a woman will lavish on a man she afford to pay it. This makes a market feels privileged to favor. In other words, a courtship was going on, in which the woman was doing the courting. The professor sometimes drifted, resigning himself to this delightful spell she was throwing about him, and sometimes suddenly came to a realization that he was standing on the brink of a precipice. Now, if women were the privileged proposers they would doubtless acquit themselves far better than the men. At any rate, they are by a superior delicacy far better fitted for the purpose. To Miss Halliday what she was engaged in was as simple to her as the reconstruction of the Roman forum would have been to Professor Poland. When she was ready for his proposal she took him out into the garden and began to gather a bouquet of flowers. "Are they for me?" asked the pro-

"For you? No. I'm going to be mar-

The professor felt as if some one had snocked the life out of him. "Who is the fortunate man?" he gasped. "I'm not going to marry a man. I'm going to marry these flowers." Several months had passed since Professor Poland had mentioned the Indian custom to his class, and it did not occur to him that Miss Halliday's words referred to what he had then said. However, he was not afraid of such a rival and somewhat recovered his equanimity. "Oh!" was his sole reply.

Belle went on collecting flowers for posy and when she had done so made a dumb show of affection for them. There was a stable on the place and a well from which to draw water, which was brought up by a pump. Belle went to the well, lifted a trapdoor and threw her bouquet down into the opening. Then, without remark, she sauntered back to the garden.

Now, Professor Poland was not quite so stupid about the art of love as might be supposed. He attended Miss Halliday on her visit to the well, and when she led him to a vine clad recess and sat down on a rustic seat a vague connection between what she had done and the Indian custom he had embodied in his lecture found lodgment in his brain. He realized that this might be in lieu of a proposal. Surely it was not encouragement for him to propose. It was either a proposal or it was nothing. If it was a proposal it was incumbent on him to respond. If he responded and Miss Halliday's act meant nothing he would be in an unfortunate position. If she meant what he suspected and he made no response he would still be in an unfortunate position. What should he do?

His inclinations decided him. "The honor you do me is, I assure you, fully appreciated. Since I love you and have loved you for some time it is not an absence of love that causes me to hesitate. It is the disparity of our incomes.'

"That, I think, can be easily arranged to your satisfaction. I am ready to settle upon you"-

"Pardon me: I cannot accept a settlement. If I marry you I shall do so with the expectation of always remaining self supporting. If I am to be a rich woman's husband you must be a poor professor's wife.

"I shall be very proud of your standing in your profession and shall do nothing to turn you away from it and your enjoyment of it."

And so it was arranged that the professor should still occupy his chair at the university. This he did for a time. Then his wife was calling on him continually for some duty in connection with her estates, and at last, finding that such duties took up the principal part of his time, he resigned his professorship and devoted his whole time to the management of a property which had by this time come to be considered a family matter.

Lesson X .- Second Quarter, For June 4, 1916.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Acts xvi, 6-15. Memory Verses, 9, 10-Golden Text, Acts xvi, 9-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

It is beautiful to see Paul and Barnabas and Silas and others teaching and preaching the word of the Lord at Antioch after their return from Jerusalem. Personally I am heartily grateful to God that He ever led me to give myself wholly to the study and exposition of His word and that He has been graciously pleased to use me to help many to know Him better. This morning (May 25, 1915) among other mail was a letter which said: "Many, many years ago [it must be twenty-five at least] I learned to love my Bible through your teaching, and now I am teaching large classes each week. I have a class of 165 ladies and am teaching in Genesis-'My heart cries, "I will extol Thee my God, O King, and I will bless thy name forever and ever"'" (Ps. cxlv, 1). It is not comforting to read of the contention over John Mark which led to the separation of suchecood friends as Barnabas and Paul, but the Lord overruled it for good by sending forth four missionaries instead of two, Barnabas and Mark sailing to Cyprus, while Paul and Silas went through Syria and Cilicia (xv. 35-41).

The first missionary tour ended at Lystra and Derbe, whence Paul and Barnabas retraced their steps by the way they had come, strengthening the saints and assuring them that tribulation was the way to the kingdom (xiv, 21-26). Now we find Paul again at Lystra and Derbe and are introduced to Timothy, of whom Paul spoke as "my own son in the faith" and of whom he wrote saying, "I have no man so dear unto me" (I Tim. i, 2; Phil. ii, 20; margin). He also speaks of his mother, Eunice, and his grandmother, Lois, and of their unfeigned faith, which had been granted to Timothy likewise (II Tim. i, 5). Being well reported of by the brethren that were at Lystra and Iconium, Paul took him along with him on this journey, and we find him associated with Paul in his letters to several of the churches, while in each of the letters to the Thessalonians the greeting is from Paul and Silas and Timothy.

It will certainly be interesting if Timothy shall tell us some day in the kingdom that he saw Paul stoned. dragged out of the city as a dead man, return to life and return to the city. and that with the teaching at home led him to receive the Lord Jesus; whether in that way or just by the word preached he was one of those whom God gave to Paul and in a special way a man after his own heart (verses 1-3). As they went from city to city they were able to comfort and strengthen the disciples by the decision of the

Having passed through what is known as Asia Minor to the extreme west, they were forbidden by the Holy Spirit to preach the word in the prov ince of Asia or in Bithymia (verses 6, 7), and this leads us to notice the control and guidance and power of the Holy Spirit in all this working of the risen and ascended Christ through His

Whether it be our Lord Himself or Peter or Stephen or Philip or Paul and his companions, the Holy Spirit is the speaker, the worker, the teacher, the guide, the controller in all things. He is mentioned fifty times in seventeen chapters of this book. There is nothing that a believer needs so much as to be filled with and controlled by Him, for only thus can the risen Christ manifest Himself in us and work His works through us. We are not told how the Spirit forbade them to go to Asia or suffered them not to go into Bithynia. It may have been by circumstances or by a direct message, as when He told Philip to speak to the treasurer, or Peter to go with the messengers from Cornelius (viii, 29; x, 19). Oh, for ears to hear and a readiness to obey, a heart in tune with God, a life fully yielded to Him!

While at Troas Paul saw, in a vision of the night, a man of Macedonia, in Europe, and he heard him say, "Come over and help us." Therefore they concluded that the Lord was calling them to Europe, and so they crossed to Neapolis and went to Philippi, the chief city of that part of Macedonia (verses 8-12). If we have no wills nor plans of our own the Lord will in His own time and way give us sure guidance (Ps. xxxii, 8; Isa. xxx, 21; Ex. xxiii, 20). They did not at first find the man of the vision, but in our next lesson in this book we shall see a man and his household made glad. They did find on the Sabbath a wo men's prayer meeting, and as they spake the word of the Lord, the heart of a woman named Lydia was opened to receive the message, and being baptised, she and her household, she constrained the apostles to make her house their home for the time being (verses 13-15). She had worshiped God according to her light, and no doubt she and the others had prayed for more light, and God, who sent Philip to the eunuch, and Peter to Cornelius, sent Paul to this meeting. What a happy home this now was. Let all praying women be encouraged and those inclined to be discouraged by circumof the gospel in Europe.

Naturally, you want a car that can be operated easily -you realize that the extent of pleasure and safety in driving depends upon the ease of control.

In most cars the details of control seem to be planned with an eye for convenience in assembling the various parts.

But the Overland control was arranged just as you would arrange it if you were designing a car for your own convenience.

You control the electric magneto, the electric lights, the electric horn, with your finger tips, without bending forward.

To start the motor you merely touch a foot button in

"Where the Shoe Pinches"

THIS man knows where the shoe pinches, and he lays the blame on no one but himself "I should have known better." This is the kind of reform that counts. Most people busy themselves trying to reform other people. They think things would be just a little better if somebody else did just a little different. But "where the shoe pinches" is probably with reverself and averaging the state of the st with yourself, myself and ourselves. When we get to the point of knowing this and acknowledging it, then we have made a start. Let's try this line of reasoning in tackling our Community problems. Where does the "shoe pinch"? "Am I doing anything that is keeping back the growth of the community?" "Am I leaving anything undone to advance the growth?" With this spirit we can co-operate. And co-operation wins every time.

> -0-63-0-Taneytown's Financial Statement.

The annual statement of the Corporation of Taneytown, published in the RECORD of last week, is of more than passing interest to citizens of Taneytown. It not only gives the information that $7738 was received by the town and $6038 expended, lost year, but by careful examination there are other facts of interest that can be gleaned.

The town was incorporated in 1884 and it is within the recollection of many, what conditions existed prior to that time. The pebbles on the streets, of which there were many, varied in size from that of a man's head to larger. During the Winter and Spring months the streets were nearly impassable on acceptable of the streets. count of the mud which was frequently nearly hub deep to vehicles; owing to the irregularities and ups and downs of the Mrs. Alice L. Harnish is spending some pavements, it was not safe for one not thoroughly acquainted with them to travel forth after nightfall even with a

Now, our streets compare favorably. not only with those of similar sized towns, but also with those of many larger ones our pavements are equal to those found anywhere, and our streets are fairly well

All these improvements could not be brought about without some trouble and expense. The first debt contracted by the town was the issue of bonds amounting to $6000 for improvement of streets; later, when the need of a water supply became apparent, $10,800 worth of water bonds were issued. A municipal building being needed, $5000 more was expended for that purpose. When it became necessary to have a street lighting system, a gas plant was installed and $6700 was porrowed for this purpose.

These obligations have been taken care of, as follows: All of the improvement bonds except $800 have been paid. The $5000 debt on municipal building has been entirely paid, and $3000 has been paid on the gas plant. While nothing has been paid on the water system debt, yet by the protection furnished on the occasion of several bad fires, it has been the means of saving property to the value of more than the cost of the entire system. In view of the foregoing, and the further fact that the statement shows a balance in the treasury of $1700, with resources $9798 in excess of the liabilities, we think the citizens can feel that the affairs of the town have been managed carefully and economically.

The foregoing has been furnished the RECORD by R. S. McKinney, clerk to the Commissioners, and it supplies an interesting and congratulatory review of what has been accomplished without any burden of heavy taxation. Necessarily, the time is coming when taxes can be reduced, or still greater public conveniences undertaken.

Dangerous Learning. A little learning is a dangerous thing, but a little too much learning is still more dangerous. To have too much learning sets you so far above your fellow mortals and fills you with such contempt for them that you cannot be comfortable in their presence nor they in yours. Beyond a certain point learning ceases to be of use and becomes a burden, because nobody can comprehend what you are talking about. Thus it happens that men are so learned sometimes that the only way society can live with them is to shut them away in some asylum.

So, then, follow Pope's advice, 'Drink deep or taste not the Pierian spring," but don't drink too deep Which is much the same as saving that a happy medium in the matter of learning is just as happy as any other happy medium.-Life.

Our Debt to the Pioneers.

I love to think of the bold, adventurous men who blazed the pathway of civilization across the continent to the shores of the peaceful ocean. They, and not the politicians of this era, made this a world power. We owe them a debt of gratitude which we can never repay except by being model citizens. They had none of the ordinary incentives to high endeavor. They acted their parts in a rude age, upon an obscure stage, far from the teeming centers of population and publicity, with no Boswell to follow at their heels to record their words, with no newspaper correspondents to blazon their deeds. No trumpet of fame sounded in their ears, cheering them on in their onerous, hazardous, self appointed task, but they wrought nobly for their country and their kind .-Champ Clark.

Alone In a Great City. "Alone-alone in a great city!"

The words burst like heart tearing sobs from the lips of the wretched looking man at the street corner, and passersby eyed him in silent sympathy. "Alone in a great city!" he sobbed again. Then over his careworn face flashed a sudden look of hope as he added, "Ah, that gives me an idea!"

Taking from the pocket of his shabby waistcoat his real silver watch, he turned quickly into a side alley over which hung the sign of the three golden baiis. A few minutes later he returned, pushing a little ticket into his now empty pocket and jingling some coins gayly.

"A loan," he muttered in happy, care free tones-"a loan in a great city!"-Lendon Mail.

Thackeray and Dickens.

Thackeray was much taller than Dickens. His form, indeed, approached the gigantic in its proportions. He looked far older, although the two men were much about the same age. His immense head, his broad forehead and his prematurely white hair gave him an appearance of authority and even of severity, which one might have thought would prove intimidating to a stranger. Yet I at least never felt it so. He seemed to me to be less self assertive. less conscious of his superi-

What He Wanted. Arthur H. Engelbach in his collection of anecdotes of the bench tells this story about Lord Braxfield, who was among the last of the Scotch judges who rigidly adhered to the broad Scotch dialect,

"Ha'e ye ony counsel, mon?" be said 20 Maurice Margot when placed at the

"No." was the reply. "Do ye want to ha'e ony appointit?"

continued the judge. "No," said Margot. "I only want an interpreter to make me understand what your lordship says."

Different Kinds of Bread. A crust of bread is usually regarded in this country as the last stopping place on this side of starvation. Foreigners like crusts, Americans do not; therefore the foreigners buy hearth bread, which is baked on the floor of the oven, and which consequently has a heavy crust all over it, whereas we buy the pan loaf, which has a good crust only on top. That is one reason why our immigrants have better teeth than native Americans, although they take less care of them and spend less money on them. Not only to they buy better bread, but they keep it longer. They have learned what we have still to discover: that bread fresh from the oven is unfit to eat.-Youth's Companion.
