

BRIEF NEWS NOTES

OF GENERAL INTEREST.

Gleaned from the County and State and our Exchanges.

Mrs. Masie Bowersox, wife of Ephraim Bowersox, and daughter of the late Allen Davis, of Uniontown, died Wednesday. Beside her husband, nine children survive.

The farm of Thomas Otto, at Middleburg, was sold, according to advertisement in the RECORD, on Thursday, to Wm. Main, of Union Bridge. The price paid was $80.60 per acre.

Mrs. Philomena Little, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Jerry Storm, of McSherrystown, niece and nephew of Mr. Jerome Storm, spent Sunday with him and his daughter, Mrs. Emma Clingan and family, of Littlestown.

September 2 has been definitely set as the date upon which President Wilson will receive notification of his renomination. The ceremony will be at the Long Branch (N. J.) "Summer White House." It will take place in the afternoon on the lawn in front of the mansion.

Mrs. Mary Lyons, who conducts a confectionery in Huntingdon, W. Va., captured a large tarantula and has it on exhibition in a jar. A short time after its capture she noticed the tropical spider. She knocked it out with a broom.

Heavy frost prevailed in the glades of Garrett county Monday morning, the thermometer dropping to 30 degrees. The ground was covered by a slight fall of snow. No serious damage has been reported to crops. In Cumberland the mercury dropped to 43 degrees.

One of the prize snake stories of the year comes from Orrtanna. It goes thus: Jack Musselman was plowing one day recently when he discovered a nest of fourteen young copperhead snakes. He did not disturb them, but later found a chicken had come along and devoured the entire nest.

Three thousand, one hundred and forty patients were treated in the York hospital and dispensary during the year ending May 31, 1916, at a total cost of maintaining the institution of $24,698.33. Of the large number of patients treated, including accident cases and incurables, only 88 died, an unusually low percentage.

Eight deaths from sickness among the regular and National Guard troops on the border during the week ending August 12 are disclosed in statistics made public today at the War Department. Medical officers regard the death rate as exceptionally low since it covers a total force of approximately 140,000 in field camps.

Adams county, Pa., people are wondering what is wrong with the potato crop. Farmers are complaining that a small worm is getting into the tubers and spoiling them. The worm is barely half an inch long and is white. It burrows into the potato while in the ground but as soon as it is dug up the worm crawls back into the ground leaving the potato full of holes.

Complaint has been made to the authorities at Hagerstown about conditions at Pen-Mar on Sundays. It is claimed that the shooting galleries, bowling alleys and in fact that nearly all of the places of amusement on the mountains are run the same on Sundays as on week days. It is stated that this is contrary to law, and the authorities are making an investigation to learn to what extent places of amusement are being operated on Sundays, and to learn the law in reference to the matter.

Within a period of 36 hours three men have been killed on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. Grover C. Bowie, a yard brakeman, was Sunday morning thrown off a car in the Brunswick yard, run down and so badly injured that he died that evening at 6.30 o'clock. Flagman Runckles, Baltimore, according to a report received from Brunswick, was run down at Mount Airy last Saturday night just before midnight, and instantly killed. The third death was that of Lawrence E. Deck, fireman, who was killed last Saturday morning.

Dependent over the death of her mother, Mrs. George Devilliss, Mrs. Sarah Gorsuch, wife of Wm. Gorsuch, near New Windsor, Monday morning, in the absence of her husband, went to the attic and hanged herself to a rafter. About five years ago her father, George W. Devilliss, suffering from melancholia, hanged himself in the barn on the same farm. Two sons survive, W. S. Gorsuch, Baltimore, and George C. Gorsuch, near New Windsor. The following sisters and brothers also survive: Mrs. Edward Stem, Winfield, Md.; Mrs. E. C. Ensor, and Mrs. J. H. Rupp, New Windsor; H. H. Devilliss, Sams Creek, and C. H. Devilliss, New Windsor.

When Maryland E. Eppler, of Two Taverns, went to the lot at the rear of the Presbyterian church, in Gettysburg, Pa., on Saturday evening shortly after 11 o'clock to get his team and go home, he found that someone had preceded him. The horse had been securely tied, and a hasty search of the vicinity failed to locate the animal. Mr. Eppler thought that the horse had probably gotten loose and gone home, but when he arrived there he found that this was not the case. The team was found near Taneytown, and restored to Mr. Eppler, on Tuesday. It has been established beyond a doubt, that it was driven there, and then abandoned by the would-be thieves.

Letter From Mt. Lake Park.

Mt. Lake Park, which suffered along with all other Summer resorts, early in the season, is now crowded. In fact, hundreds have been turned away, and other hundreds, hearing of the condition, have staid away. This is the situation at the very beginning of the Bible conference, which practically means that the Park is more than full, without needing this additional attraction. Deer Park, Loch Lynn and Oakland, are also full to the limit. It is said that Deer Park has not been full for years, and that the rush to this mountain top is almost unprecedented.

There is general interest here as to what the future of this beautiful natural resort will be. Apparently, a controlling interest in the stock of the Association has passed, or is about to pass, into new hands, but nothing is at present known as to the designs for the future of the new controlling power. It seems likely, however, that there will be new attractions, a new tone, a more progressive policy, the removal of some restrictions, and in general a wide-open promotion which will attract a much larger clientele; but the universal hope is that all this may be done without a lowering of the moral tone of the old Mt. Lake Park.

The Epworth League institute of last week drew a great many people, many of whom are staying over for the Bible conference. The European war, the infantile paralysis epidemic, and the recent very hot weather, are given as contributing causes for the large attendance, but another fact adds to the general situation, and that is, a number of the boarding cottages have not been opened at all this season.

The Moody Bible Conference, which opened on Sunday, includes the following names as part of the platform talent: Chas. G. Trumbull, of the Sunday School Times; Rev. Robert McWatty, Russell D. D., of Chicago; Rev. James M. Gray D., in charge of the conference; Howard A. Banks, of Washington; Pastor Jos. M. Kemp, of Calvary Baptist church, N. Y.; Prof. Melvin G. Kyle, D. D., Prof. E. O. Sellers, in charge of the singing, and others.

There is a large representative of visitors from Baltimore and Washington, while the most are from various West Virginia places, as usual, with a sprinkling from Pennsylvania, Ohio, and other states. There will be no regular chautauqua, this year.

The weather has been panicky—anywhere from 82° on the 7th, to 39° early on the 14th, and showers almost every day, lasting only a few minutes. Generally speaking, the past week was quite comfortable, the fine largely preponderating over the disagreeable.

Last week, Mr. and Mrs. R. Lee Myers, Mrs. Nathan Englar and Joseph Englar, of Linwood, passed through, on their way home from a motor trip to Uniontown, Pa. This week, among those attending the Bible Institute, are Mrs. Jesse P. Garner and Miss Emma Garner, of Linwood, and Mrs. Kate Gilbert and Miss Arminta Murray, of Uniontown, the latter being at the Maryland Inn.

Automobile parties are very numerous, but as accommodations are scarce, most of them pass on after taking a meal and a rest, wondering why it is that they can't get accommodations just as they want them, while the hotel people are of the opinion that automobiles are an invention of the evil one, and no good to the hotel business.

The Tax Case Appeal.

The arguments in the appeal from the decision of the Frederick Circuit Court in the case of Charles Wertheimer and David Lowenstein, holding the act which provided for a re-assessment in the counties of the State was unconstitutional, will hardly be aired in the Court of Appeals before August 25. This was brought to light on Saturday when Leo Weinberg, attorney for Lowenstein & Wertheimer received a telegram from ex-Senator Edward M. Hammond, counsel for the State Tax Commission, suggesting August 18 as a possible date.

Because of his physical condition, due to overwork, it will be impossible for Mr. Weinberg to appear in the case before August 25. In substance, this was his reply to Senator Hammond on Saturday. Mr. Weinberg tentatively suggested August 25. Mr. Weinberg explained that no effort was being made to intentionally delay a hearing of the case in the Appeals Court of Maryland, and that he saw no need for urgency in taking up the case.

The Tax Commission is convinced that the financial condition of the States requires prompt adjudication of the questions involved, because a reassessment is essential to equalization of the burdens of taxation, and if the case were not heard until the regular term of the Appeals Court it would be impossible to assess the mountain sections during the winter months.

A Family Reunion.

The Eastern Branch of the Belt-Parish Family Association will hold its 18th Annual Reunion on the Emory Grove Camp-meeting grounds, August 24, 1916, rain or shine.

Every person who can in any way, trace the relationship of his or her family to a Belt or Parish is eligible for membership in this association. It is a splendid way to meet your friends and spend a day in God's Temple, for "The groves are God's first Temples," and we all enjoy a day in the woods. If you so desire make it a real basket picnic and come.

Dinner will be served at the hotel to those who do not care to bring their own. If you wish dinner at the hotel, please notify the President, John D. Belt, 173 W. Main St., Westminster, Md., of that fact on or before August 21st, 1916.

The program will begin at 9 a. m., and a short memorial service for the departed loved ones will be held at 11 a. m. Bring the children and let us have a line parade from the Hill Top at 2:30 p. m. Mrs. J. D. Belt, Chairman Executive Com.

MD. STATE GRANGE FAIR NOW IN FULL SWING

Events of Each Day as seen by Our Special Correspondent.

The 19th. Annual Maryland State Grange Fair, under the auspices of Taneytown Grange No. 184, P. of H., opened most auspiciously on Tuesday morning at Ohler's Grove. Early on Monday afternoon the rat-a-tat of incoming Boy Scouts disturbed the pastoral peace of the town. It was a great treat to see Young America taking so seriously the weight of their great responsibilities. The Westminster troop headed straight for Camp Ohler, while the Union Bridge troop camped on the outskirts of town, in Motters field. Troops from Littlestown and Hanover arrived in autos and afoot Tuesday morning.

From 6.30 to 9 o'clock, Monday night, the Scouts were the guests of the Taneytown Saving Bank, on the lawn of Treasurer Walter A. Bower. Ice cream, cake and lemonade were served to about 75 Scouts and their friends, after a splendid concert by the Boy Scouts Band, of Westminster, under the leadership of Prof. Charles J. Peltz. Rev. S. R. Downie, in a few words warmly welcomed the lads to the town.

Tuesday's program was given over to the Boy Scouts of Carroll County, who are in camp all week, being in charge of Prof. Charles J. Peltz, of Medford Grange No. 188. The Scout Band rendered a fine program. Addresses on the nature and objects of the Scout movement were made by Rev. S. R. Downie, of Taneytown, and Arthur Gait Birnie, a Philadelphia Scout Master.

The following contests were staged, to the delight of all; tent pitching, bandaging, first aid race, demonstration in Fireman's lift, message relay race, signaling, bugling, one mile scout pace, making fire and boiling quart of water, judging size and distance, and baking corn cakes. Prizes were offered to the winner of each of the above events. The entire days program was under the management of Scout Masters Gray, of Union Bridge, and Shriver, of Westminster.

The poultry exhibit is one of the finest of the fair. Supt. Milton Ohler, of this branch of the fair, deserves great credit for the showing made. The grain exhibit is as usual a much sought object mecca for the visitor, while the jellies, preserves and canned fruit attracts the attention of all. Supt. John H. Shirk is in charge of these last mentioned exhibits, and it is due to his "pep" that things around his quarters are a fairly land of good things in riot.

The fancy work exhibit in charge of Mrs. Annie E. Eckert serves as a reminder of the nimble fingers and esthetic eyes that adorn our fair ladies, whose artistic efforts have always made this department a crowded corner at the annual fair.

An entirely new and rather unique feature of this year's fair is what is termed "The Family Exhibits," which consists of exhibits made by members of a family in one display. Each exhibit is allotted a 5x6 alcove. The building is open on all sides, so that sight-seers pass around these spaces without entering, and feast on the good things from the outside. Here are found anything from potatoes to portieres—a really fascinating spot to visit.

The horse, cattle and swine exhibit is under Supt. W. K. Eckert's eye, and nothing has been left undone to make this a great success, from a three-day milking contest to a public sale of cattle on Friday.

WEDNESDAY.

The inclement weather greatly interfered with the plans of the local Lodge of the Knights of Pythias, on Wednesday, preventing the turnout of its own members and of visitors from sister Lodges. Despite this, however, a very creditable procession was formed, consisting of the Grand Officers and prominent members in automobiles, members of Calanthe Lodge, of Union Bridge; Charity Lodge, of Westminster; Pleasant Valley Lodge, of Frizelburg; and Taneytown Lodge, which headed by the Taneytown Band, paraded the entire town.

Warmed with marching and tired from a sight-seeing tour through the labyrinthine mazes of the coin-subtracting emporiums of amusement in Ohler's grove, the plumed Knights of Pythias sank willow and hungry into seats surrounding a sumptuous repast prepared by friendly feminine skill and calculated to tickle the palates of the Epicurean—and what is so rare as a meal in the woods! When the hour of two arrived, the Taneytown band under the leadership of A. H. Bankard gave the signal, the audience wended their way to the Auditorium, and the afternoon flow of the Pythian soul was on.

After a most enjoyable concert by the Band, Dr. R. S. McKinney, of Taneytown, the master of ceremonies, in his usual happy vein, rose to start the ball rolling. Rev. Guy P. Bready, was introduced and pronounced the invocation. Bubbling over with the spirit of the occasion, Dr. McKinney delivered the address of welcome, and he was dull of comprehension who did not feel the wideness of the welcome when the genial doctor made an end of speaking. Rev. S. R. Downie was introduced and made the response in fervid and friendly fashion—a generous response to a genial welcome.

Mr. Harry W. Nice, Grand Chancellor of Maryland, followed with an address on Pythian principles that was surcharged with eloquence and abounded in apt illustration, that left no doubt in any mind of the fitness of his choice as the star attraction of the afternoon's program.

Mr. James M. Hendrix, G. K. of R. and S., of the Grand Lodge of Maryland, delighted his audience with an appeal to the members to live the principles of the Order, that thrilled all hearts.

Dr. McKinney then announced the prize winners in the moving pageant, and Grand Chancellor Nice, in brief speeches filled with delicious pleasantries, presented a headman's axe to a representation of Charity Lodge, of Westminster, as having the most men in line, and a M.

at A. Helmet to a representative of Calanthe Lodge, as having the next largest delegation in the parade. Both prizes were works of artistic skill, and were the gifts of the Taneytown Lodge.

The Band closed the happy occasion with the second half of the much enjoyed concert, and Pythian Day was over. Much credit is due the local committee for its untiring zeal in making up and carrying to a successful conclusion, an affair of such true merit and real enjoyment.

The day, opening with rain, passed from cloud to sunshine—Old Sol giving the afternoon festivities a brilliant shower of warm welcome rays that added not a little to the pleasure of the occasion. More people than Monday sought the joys of the day out in the woods. The attractions were on in full blast, and the refreshment stands found eager buyers of the good things that the gastronomic regions compel. But, and conveyances in profusion rushed the pleasure seekers out to the grove, in true metropolitan fashion. All in all it was a great day for the State Grange Fair.

THURSDAY.

As early as the crack of dawn, the weather man from a heart fully alive to the claims of Thursday—Grange Day at Ohler's Grove—made good his promise to give the sons of the soil some real Elysian shine, the kind that sends the roses to the cheeks of maid and matron, and puts upright springiness into the feet of lad and dad.

The dusty roads held no terrors for those whose object was to attend the fair. From all parts of the country they came, in autos and carriages, by train and on foot, until it is said that 14,000 people were present. More than 500 automobiles were parked in the grove, while more than 100 were outside, in adjoining fields.

The hour for the program being reached, to the auditorium the great crowd pushed, like an army intent on conquest. The genial Prof. Chas. J. Peltz, rose in true director style, the piano thundered, and the great chorus of mixed voices broke forth in the majestic strains of "The Gloria." The grand concert, thus begun, continued through the morning and afternoon sessions, rendering in masterly fashion, in turn, the following: "Circibirin," "In Oh! Madrid," "The Bridal Chorus," "La Poma" and the "Anvil Chorus."

Jenny Lind Green, organist and director at Grace M. E. church, Baltimore, formerly of Calvary church, New York City, interspersed the program with most exquisite recitations, and instrumental and vocal solos—reciting by special request "Taking an Elevator," to the great glee of her most appreciative audience.

Prof. C. E. Temple, of Maryland Agricultural College, spoke in the morning on "Plant Diseases." In the afternoon, B. John Black, Master of the State Grange, and Dr. A. G. McCall, of the Agricultural College, both made short addresses, which were well received.

A particularly pleasing feature of the concert was the use of anvils, under the manipulation of Mr. Shriver, of the Westminster Boy Scouts, in the rendition of the "Anvil Chorus" by the great choir. This selection brought to a successful conclusion the master program of the week's gathering. Great credit is due Prof. Peltz for his most praiseworthy training and conducting of the Carroll County Choral Society. On all sides enthusiastic request is made for the organizing of this chorus into a permanent society, and it is hoped that this much-to-be desired organization may be speedily consummated.

Hurt in Auto Collision.

Westminster, Md., Aug. 15.—Four persons were injured Sunday night when the automobiles of John Spangler, Mayberry, and A. Weaver Wagner, New Windsor, collided near Tyrone, on the State road from Westminster to Taneytown. Mr. Wagner's arm was broken and his face badly cut. Mrs. Wagner was injured internally. Mrs. Spangler and daughter were thrown through the wind-shield of the car and cut and bruised. The Weaver car was wrecked, as it was struck sideways as it came out of the county road to the pike.

A second accident occurred about 400 yards from the scene of the first when the cars of Bailey Fleagle, Westminster, and John Spahr, Union Bridge, met on a sharp curve. The occupants were only slightly bruised. The cars were locked so tight that horses were required to pull them apart.

Hay Fever and Weeds.

The American Hay Fever Association has been meeting annually for 30 years and talking over the situation of affairs as the enemies, between sneezes. Through the helpful suggestions of science and the wisdom of the deliberative body much has been accomplished to mitigate the discomfort of the disease. Now the association is appealing to the general public for co-operation in the cause.

Hay fever is aggravated, if not induced, by the dissemination of pollen from various plants. Hence the annual visitation of hay fever is made concurrently with the flowering season. The persistent dandelion and the gaudy goldenrod are chief offenders, and there are various weeds equally discouraging to hay fever sufferers. It is against the weeds that the society now makes war and asks the good offices of the public as an ally.

Societies for the suppression of weeds are being formed, municipal ordinances are being drafted and an intensive campaign against plant pests has commenced in various localities. Citizens are clearing up the vacant lots and generally accomplishing some aesthetic improvement to relieve the hay fever friends from the necessity of choking up and sneezing.

The large number of sufferers in this country gives the movement an important influence upon their fellow-citizens. In some states candidates for public office are making the conquest of weeds a part of their personal platforms. In the course of time, no doubt, it will come to pass where the various political parties will view with alarm the menacing spread of the ragweed and kindred plant pests.

RAILROAD STRIKE PROBLEM NOT YET SETTLED.

Managers and Employees unable to Agree on President's Plan.

President Wilson on Thursday laid his plan for averting the threatened railway strike before the employees' committee of 640, and, having found the managers' committee adamant in his proposal that they accept the 8-hour day, he appealed to the railroad presidents and asked them to come to the White House for a conference.

There is every indication that if the railroad presidents sustain their managers President Wilson will appeal finally to the financial powers which control the roads, for it is his purpose to deal with the ultimate authority before he gives up his effort.

The President's plan, which is expected to be formally accepted by the employees and committee at a meeting at 9 o'clock, on Saturday morning, proposes: An eight-hour day as the basis for computing wages.

Regular pay at the eight-hour day rate for overtime. To refer all other collateral issues to a small commission, to be created by Congress, on which the employees, the railroads and the public would be represented.

Acceptance of the proposal by the employees was forecast by expressions of their leaders after they left the President's conference. One of them declared: "The men would be fools not to accept it."

The attitude of the railroad presidents is not so clear. No one can say what will be the effect of an appeal such as a President of the United States, speaking in the name of the welfare of a nation, can make. But from such information as can be gathered, it appears that the railroad presidents, if the managers' committee understands them, are unalterably opposed to conceding the eight-hour day or anything else out of hand, but are quite ready to arbitrate anything and everything in almost any form of arbitration upon which the employees and the committee may agree.

The railroad presidents, it is understood, justify their stand upon the broad ground of maintaining the principle of arbitration, which, if sacrificed in this instance, they intend to tell the President, will be destroyed, as a factor in the settlement of industrial disputes.

Government Crop Reports.

There has always been more or less criticism, especially among farmers, of the practice by the government of issuing forecasts of crop production. Many claim that the information is used by speculators to the injury of farmers and consumers alike. The fact of the matter is, they are designed to prevent just this thing, and the utmost secrecy is observed by the Department of Agriculture to prevent any leaking of information until all information is in, and it is then announced simultaneously in every part of the country. Before this service was established, speculators gave out false information continuously concerning crops; during the growing season the impression was created that indications pointed to immense yields, and the price would necessarily be low. After the crops were bought it was then published that they fell far short of expectations, and that there was an actual scarcity and prices soared. The Government Crop Reports have put a stop to this almost entirely. While they may not be exact, they are the best figures it is possible to get. In fact, past experience has shown that, on the average, they have been verified at harvest to be within less than two percent variation.

The estimates are made by a corps of more than three-quarters of a million correspondents, most of whom are practical farmers. When the estimated figures fail to be realized it is usually due to some abnormal conditions which arise after the monthly estimate. For instance, last year the potato crop was struck by the blight and the yield fell far below the yield as estimated in July. A wet harvest ruined a great portion of the oats and wheat crops, and early frosts reduced the corn yield millions of bushels. These unforeseen factors cannot be forecasted and it is well to keep them in mind as possibilities, but the service on the whole, we believe, is far more helpful than harmful, as the figures are much more reliable than any that are likely to be circulated by interested parties.—Pennsylvania Farmer.

Predicts Hard-Coal Scarcity by Winter.

Get your coal into the cellar now. If you wait until it is time to fire up the furnace you may not be able to buy anthracite even at a premium, for there is almost certain to be a shortage of hard coal next winter.

This is the warning issued by the Anthracite Bureau of Information, with headquarters in Wilkes-Barre, and it is based on the shortage of labor in the mines, the decrease in the percentage of domestic size coal produced compared with the total output, the almost total lack of stocks in the large storage yards and the decrease in production which is frequently caused in winter by weather conditions. The bureau's statement says in part:

"It is true that as compared with 1915 the production for the first six months of 1916 has shown an increase of nearly 1,100,000 tons, but it must be remembered that the proportion of the small or steam sizes has increased more rapidly than the prepared or domestic sizes. The shipments of anthracite in June, 1916, amounted to 5,636,975 long tons, and while they exceeded those of June, 1915, by about 180,000 tons, they were approximately half a million tons short of the average monthly shipments for April, May and June, 1914.

"The anthracite mines are now working to their utmost capacity, a very unusual condition at this time of the year. The producing capacity of the mines, however, has been very much decreased by shortage of labor. There is no reason to believe that the situation will improve during the coming fall, and if in addition to decreased output due to labor shortage mining operations and railroad transportation are interfered with by weather conditions or otherwise, it will be extremely difficult to meet the demand during the winter months."

Blue Mountain House to be Rebuilt.

The Blue Mountain House re-building project is not dead. A prominent real estate man and promoter, of Norfolk, has been for the past two weeks endeavoring to loosen up the capitalists in the enterprise. He spent some days at Waynesboro, and his presence at Hagerstown is also noted. It is said that he is meeting with much encouragement, as the financial plan proposed seems to meet with favor among men of discernment in that line.

Those closely informed about the movement predict that the famous resort will be up and ready to open its doors by the beginning of next season.

Our Financial Obligations to the Church

The financial obligations of a member to his church, represents a debt, rather than a donation. The church must be supported by cash contributions, as well as any other going institution, and while dues may be assessed by the church officials, the individual member actually owes the amount of his pro-rata share of the necessary operating expenses of the church—and for value received.

Mere payments of money to the church organization, however, is the merest beginning of the member's full duty. Too much stress is placed on "good and regular standing" as meaning that a member is "paid up" so far as his dues are concerned. This is a primary necessity, but only that. Just what does constitute the whole duty of a church member, it is not our purpose to enter into, as duties vary according to church discipline; but in general, they stand for full co-operation with and allegiance to, all of the objects of the church, and to the carrying out of all the requirements necessary to being a Christian.

What we particularly want to emphasize, is, the financial responsibility of each member, and the need for its systematic and prompt observance, as a full-fledged duty and obligation—not as a charity, not as a mere formality, but as an honestly assumed binding debt, as honest as any other that may be entered into.

Without the church, our government would be a failure. The keeping up of the church means to contribute to the advancement of civilization. In reality, we get more for our investment in church dues than we get for any other expenditure. Then why should there be a percentage of persons who contribute nothing in this direction? The only answer is that such people are willing to be supported, like paupers, by the generosity of others—to be beneficiaries, but not taxpayers.

Even taken from the purely secular point of view, the church is a paying institution. It helps, mightily, in reducing the number of public charges; in many ways its ministrations help to keep down the tax rate of the state; it is a mighty agency in the field of education; it performs for us, in its ministerial acts, services that would otherwise need to be paid for through legal channels; the care of the sick and the burial of the dead are alone acts of important financial consideration—all items well worth paying for.

No, the church isn't a charitable institution. It is not a beggar. It does not ask pay for services not rendered. Every man, woman and child, needs its ministrations in some form, and they demand honest payment. Drop the church as a medium for the worship of God, and for the saving of souls, and it is still an institution that everybody needs, and one that calls for liberal financial support.

The Man and the Soldier.

The longer the European war lasts the more apparent it is, that man for man, the German soldier, barring his educational and physical soldier training, is not a better man than a Frenchman, an Englishman, or a Russian. The German superiority, at the outset, rested largely in the high efficiency of the army machine, and the skill and know-how of its individual units, and not in mere man-bravery. As time has elapsed, and the entente armies have had practice, and time to build up a great fighting machine, we naturally hear much less of "how the Germans can fight." The Russians were held, by many, to be poor fighters, while as a matter of fact their poorness was lack of training, lack of highly efficient officers, and more than all, lack of heavy guns and general fighting equipment. The Russian army, today, is quite a different proposition, even though it is not now equal, perhaps, to the general efficiency of the other armies.

The English, who came near being classed as weak, by comparison with the French, are now doing their share of the hard work, largely because their government is prepared to help them fight. Of the principals, aside from Germany, the Belgians were best able to engage in fighting, at the outbreak, and France next; and it was due to Belgian preparedness that the life of France was saved, and that the whole war was not a quick German-Austrian victory, as it was unquestionably planned to be.

Mere manhood bravery, after all, is pretty much an equal trait in all fully civilized nations. In some it may be less dashing; in some there is more deliberation; and there are qualities and habits that vary; but, taken as an average, a man is a man, everywhere; so far as his general make-up is concerned, and there is not now apparent any superiority in this direction attaching to those of German birth.

Germany had more real soldiers, at the outset, while the other countries had only men; and the whole war, so far, has simply demonstrated the value of special training—expertness, efficiency—or whatever else it may be termed, and it is the specialist, the whole world over, who produces the best results in any direction.

What of the Outlook?

Nearly two months have elapsed since the Presidential nominations, with the forecast of the final result practically surrounded by the same conditions as at the beginning, with the odds in the "betting" apparently favoring the Republicans.

The situation, however, is mixed with complications affecting both sides. It is easy enough for the Republicans to figure together the Roosevelt and Taft vote of four years ago, and win easily; but such a total must be discounted because of the fact that all of the Progressive vote will not support Mr. Hughes, and it is claimed that a portion of the vote for Roosevelt was normally Democratic, and will this year return to Wilson.

Mr. Wilson, on the other hand, has made himself objectionable to the pro-German constituency, because of his attitude to the allies, and it is confidently assumed that he will lose fully 20 percent of the German Democrats. He is also out of favor with many of the financial interests of the country, and has not apparently won much favor either with the preparedness, or the pacifist followings.

His Mexican policy is both favored and condemned, and no great popularity can be expected from that source, while the tariff laws of the country—largely untried, because of the war—will likely represent a liability, rather than an asset, in tabulating campaign resources.

Figuring a candidate out of the running, in these times, is much easier than to establish the fact. There is ample time yet for events and issues to arise that may bear powerfully on the vote in November. Mr. Hughes, for instance, has not shown his metal as a campaigner, nor have his utterances been examined and weighed. The people, as yet, have had little more than a very distant chance to weigh him in their estimation, and this counts for a great deal.

He will be compelled to point out the mistakes of the Wilson administration, and must convince the people that they have been mistaken—at least, make them think so. On the other side, Mr. Wilson will have to demonstrate the fact that the people actually wanted his re-nomination, and overcome the idea that his party was compelled to give him a walk-over, or confess the failure of his administration.

At present, giving both prospects non-partisan judicial survey, the outlook is favorable to Mr. Hughes; but, the election is three months in the future, and three months is an age in modern politics.

The Teacher's Grind.

This is the time of year when the school teacher does not feel so young as she used to be, as the old song says. She has been keyed up to concert pitch for ten months, and school strain is severe. This does not mean the fluff girl who is merely doing the three Rs until an eligible husband turns up. Rather it is the teacher who has settled down into faithful persistent work year after year in the chosen profession which she proposes to follow until incapacitated.

Teaching school is not merely hearing recitations and marking papers. It is a problem in personal executive management, in control of 40 or 50 little individualities, each with his own determined and contrary will.

Sometimes the more devoted a teacher is, the less she can solve this problem. She is forever inciting the pupils to aim high, is not content with commonplace achievement and continually points where better work could have been done. Such ones are chary of praise because they want the pupils to be dissatisfied with anything less than their best.

This kind of teacher is often considered by the children to be exacting and fault finding. She becomes unpopular, the children combine against her, and giggle and squirm in the class room. Meanwhile the easy going girl who praises everything, is loved by all. She jollies them along and gets more loyal support, though less is being accomplished.

This is what takes the life out of many conscientious teachers, and makes them prematurely old. There may not be such a thing as a teacher's taking her work too seriously. But at least she needs plenty of diversion, outdoor and social life, to save herself from irritated and morbid fretting over her difficulties.—Frederick News.

The Mass of the People.

Trust in common decency and general fidelity is not misplaced, and if a man thinks there is something radically wrong with the race he had better look within and see what part of his own being needs tinkering. To look on the typical American crowd should mean a renewal of faith in human nature, if one has a realizing sense of all that has gone to the making of it. Most people are doing their best and are trying to live and let live according to the light vouchsafed them. The deliberate evildoers are in the minority or life would be insupportable. The leaders of the people are chosen from those whose faith in the people is high and fine and strong. The crowd cannot care for a man who does not believe in its essential goodness and honesty.

Does this mean that the only good thing is the popular thing, and that the right way is the way the crowd takes? Not exactly. It means that if you have something better than the rest have, you may not hug it to yourself and run off with it, like a selfish animal that has discovered something good to eat. The sum of your own happiness is divisible. You are yourself a product and a survival out of a mob of ancestors; and the question now is, will you dispense to this contemporary throng?

The strong and admirable natures have never made the mistake of looking down upon their fellows. They have not despised nor condescended. They have confessed themselves not weary and disgusted with the evil that lives on earth among men, but touched and quickened by the perennial virtue that does not die with the virtuous. The poets and the philosophers that have shaken our dispositions are they who have read deeply into the true nature of a man and have seen as in a book the authentic legend of his career and character. "To love is to understand." The deeper one looks the better opinion one entertains of those who are poor and still brave, are tempted and still firm, are pestered and badgered with mishap and still can laugh. Do not look in the stately pleasure parks of those who can pay any price for anything if you would find the bubbling spring of happiness, but seek for it in the door-yard of some humble rural homestead where contentment dwells because love bides.

The crowd is not truly seen when it is seen in a mass; it is made of people built like you and me. To our finite understanding it is a moving miracle of numbers; it is hard for us to conceive that these thousands upon thousands have nearly all some sheltered place where they rest at night, a table somewhere spread, a circle of friends with whom they clasp hands frequently or walk, linking arm in arm. Traverse our streets these summer evenings, and on piazza after piazza, or on one flight of white steps after another, it is the same—a group of people with their own family jokes, their own intimacies or sorrow, house after house, all through the city. They have come out to take the cool of the evening air, and in the exchange of pleasantries with the neighbors or acquaintances who pass there is the blessing of a friendliness which must in time spread over the world, with other gracious dispensations, to make it impossible to go to war.—Phila. Ledger.

New Mission of the Automobile.

The gypsies have taken to automobiles. A "king" of one of the clans has crossed the continent in an eight-cylinder touring car that was "a palace on wheels." Romany, he said, has sold or given away his nags and parked its red wagons. Beggars on horseback are no longer a marvel.

The gypsy makes a singular departure from all his old customs. With him the horse has always been associated. In the earliest stories and drawing of his people the horse has been the one beast that was the companion of his wandering. He rode it out of that unknown central Asiatic land from which he came, and it has helped him in his worldwide roaming. He knew his charm that transformed the jaded nag into a racehorse, the dye that made a roan steed of a despised piebald. As a trader he had no equal and in abandoning the horse for the car he gives up his chief means of livelihood.

No people of the world presented a stranger problem; students of races and languages could never understand why the gypsies, without a common creed of religion, history or tradition, retained wherever they went the peculiar characteristic that forces them on their restless, endless roaming. Nations that have not driven them from their borders have tried to tame them. In Australia, where more live than in any other European country, the Government has vainly tried to settle them down and make them into good citizens.

The automobile represents a phase of citizenship; its owner is registered, numbered, tagged. It cannot run on grass from the roadside or corn pilfered from a farmer's granary; it requires the modern commodity of gasoline. The old "king" looked admiringly at his possession, and said that an automobile meant a home and its ownership would end his people's wanderings. If it does it scores high; for it accomplishes a task which every other human agency, and every Government in the world, long ago gave up as hopeless.—N. Y. Sun.

Canada's Great Advance.

Two years of war have seen Canada effecting achievements on behalf of the British Empire which not even the most farseeing contemplated when the present world struggle began in August, 1914. She has raised an army now within measurable distance of 500,000 men. She has increased her grain acreage so as to gain the third place among the wheat-producing countries of the world, exceeded only by the United States and Russia. Financially she has transformed her situation entirely, becoming a creditor instead of a debtor nation and raising a domestic loan for the first time in her history, as an earnest of her whole-hearted spirit. Industrially, she has expanded enormously and gained a position not easily described in figures, and she has evolved an entirely new pursuit, that of munition-making, which daily grows in magnitude and importance.

Economically all these factors have contributed to create a flood of prosperity similar to that enjoyed by the United States and the effect of which is to stimulate every class and element throughout the Dominion to ever-increasing efforts in behalf of the cause to which she has dedicated herself, believing, as she does that not only victory, but safety rests with big battalions and adequate preparedness. All these developments have been of the greatest benefit to the mother country, but surpassing them even has been the moral advantage accruing to Great Britain in the struggle through the whole-hearted support which Canada, Australia, and the other self-governing dominions are according her, and which, there is reason to believe, will result in a rearrangement of the relations of the motherland and the overseas possessions of the British Empire after the war is over.—From "Canada's Two Years of War and Their Meaning," by P. T. McGrath, in the American Review of Reviews for August.

Health Insurance.

Twenty-five out of every 1,000 employees in American industries, according to recent statistics, are constantly incapacitated by sickness, the average worker losing approximately nine days each year on this account. This "non-effective rate" for the great army of industrial workers in the United States barely suggests the total money loss to employers and employees. The lessened efficiency, the effects of reduced earnings in times of sickness, as well as the cost of medical attention, and the economic loss from deaths, swell the cost to industry and to the Nation to almost incalculable figures.

That much of this loss is nothing less than preventable waste and that this waste can be largely reduced by a properly conducted system of governmental health insurance for wage-workers are conclusions set forth in Public Health Bulletin No. 76, containing the results of a study of "Health Insurance—Its Relation to the Public Health," just issued by the United States Public Health Service.

The preventive value of health insurance is given especial emphasis in this study. "Any system of health insurance for the United States or any State should at its inception have prevention of sickness as one of its fundamental purposes," says the bulletin. "This country should profit by the experience of European countries where prevention is being recognized as the central idea necessary to health insurance if health insurance is to attain its greatest success in improving the health and efficiency of the industrial population."

Such a system, it is pointed out in the bulletin, would

1. Provide cash benefits and medical service for all wage-earners in times of sickness at much less cost than is now possible. Adequate medical relief would thus be placed within the reach of even the lowest paid workers who are most subject to ill-health.

2. Distribute the cost among employers, employees, and the public as the groups responsible for disease causing conditions and afford these groups a definite financial incentive for removing these conditions. This can be done by means of small weekly payments from employees, supplemented by proportionate contributions from employers and government at a rate reducible in proportion to the reduction of sickness.

3. Become an effective health measure by linking the co-operative efforts of the three responsible groups with the work of National, State and local health agencies, and by utilizing these agencies in the administration of the health insurance system.

4. Afford a better basis for the co-operation of the medical profession with public health agencies.

5. Eliminate the elements of paternalism and charity-giving by making employees and the public, as well as employers, joint agents in the control of this fund.

"A governmental system of health insurance," concludes the study, "can be adapted to American conditions, and when adapted will prove to be a health measure of extraordinary value.—U. S. Health Service.

"I am bothered with liver trouble about twice a year," writes Joe Dingman, Webster City, Iowa. "I have pains in my side and back and an awful soreness in my stomach. ### REMEDIES FOR ROUP.

Cause and Treatment of This Disease in the Poultry Flock.

Roup is a germ disease originating in the poultry flock either through bringing infected birds in contact with the others or by means of bacteria carried by the wind. The general impression among almost all poultry raisers that any affection of the mouth or breathing organs of a fowl is a form of roup is incorrect, according to R. H. Needham, associate in stock remedy analysis in the Kansas State Agricultural College.

One should exercise care and intelligence in diagnosing cases of suspected roup, especially at long range. The trouble may be mechanical. Sometimes foreign substances, such as small bones, become lodged in the throat. A brief examination will add materially in determining the character of a respiratory malady. Drafts, dampness and exposure are conditions that promote the development of roup germs. They are factors which tend to reduce the vitality and establish inflammatory conditions, enabling germs to gain entrance into the system and to thrive, whereas in good health the effects might be slight and of short duration, due to the prompt resistance offered by a well fortified system.

The Silver Laced Wyandotte is perhaps the most beautiful of all the seven varieties of the breed. Formerly it was very popular as a show bird, but the difficulty of breeding true to color has lessened its popularity. Like all the Wyandottes, it is a good layer and a splendid table bird. The cock pictured is a Silver Laced Wyandotte.

To effectively combat this disease sick fowls must be completely separated and kept at some distance from the others. Treatment must be regular and frequent, as often as three times daily in severe cases. Mucous plugs, patches and incrustations should be removed with a toothpick, splinter or cotton swab, care being taken to destroy or disinfect all such material. A number of reliable remedies may be applied afterward. The remedies:

- Hydrogen peroxide and water, equal parts.
- Potassium permanganate, 2 per cent, or one-half teaspoonful to one teaspoonful of water.
- Boric acid, 4 per cent, or one teaspoonful to one teaspoonful of water.
- Coal tar disinfectants, 2 per cent, or one-half teaspoonful to one teaspoonful of water.
- Carbolic acid, 5 per cent, or one teaspoonful to one scant teaspoonful of water.

MAKING GUINEAS PAY.

These Fowls Are Easily Raised and Cost Little For Food.

In a clean nest I set a chicken hen on seventeen guinea eggs (twenty under a large hen), writes a correspondent of the American Agriculturist. After twenty-five days I very carefully moved the eggs into a deep nest and placed the hen on them, for when the little birds bust out they almost immediately become quite active and will jump right out of a shallow box. As soon as all were hatched and dry I removed them to a big, roony box with a clean sand covered floor and had a wire frame to cover the top.

I do not feed the guineas until they are twenty-four hours old, then give them hard boiled eggs, cut up fine. A tiny bit is fed every two hours for a few days, gradually changing to commercial chick feed and fine cracked corn. If the weather permits I put them when a week old in a coop with a pen in front, so that the wild little things cannot get away when fed. After they become accustomed to their new surroundings and babies are let out every clear day. They pick up seeds and thrive wonderfully.

To make guineas grow fast and keep well I find two things are necessary—to feed often, but little at a time, as "stuffing" makes them ill, and it is very important that the water vessel be so arranged that they cannot walk into it, as wet feet are disastrous to baby guineas (a small fount is ideal), and to keep them dry and never let them out in the rain until they are entirely feathered.

They are easily raised, cost little for food, do not scratch up flowers and vegetables, are delicious for the home table and can readily be sold to private families and commission merchants.

POULTRY POINTERS.

Probably the best season for caponizing is the latter part of August or the beginning of September.

From now on during the hot summer months it is well to watch closely for lice upon the little chicks.

The best flock of fowls soon goes back when the sanitary measures are neglected.

Cleanliness is a principle, and unless one is clean with his fowls poultry raising becomes a costly joke.

When it is noticed that the comb and wattles of the cockerel begin to spring a little, thus proving its sex, caponizing should be performed.

PROFIT IN RAISING DUCKS FOR MARKET

There is money in raising ducks if the time, labor and brains necessary are put into the industry, says the Home and Farm. There is always sale for ducks and duck eggs. Their eggs are not so desired for table use as are hen's eggs, but bakers prefer them, and their uses are constantly widening. It used to be that duck eggs had a strong gamey or rank flavor, but the newer strain of ducks has very nearly lost that. The same externals, such as coop, house, brooder, will answer for little ducks or little chickens. After they are feathered young ducks need no shelter in summer or early fall except for protection from enemies or in severe rains.

There are not as many different breeds and varieties of ducks as of chickens, but the list of distinct kinds is long and one has considerable latitude of choice. Most commercial growers use the Peking, but the reasons which compel the use of this breed on market plants do not maintain in the case of home flocks. The Peking, Aylesbury, Rouen, Cayuga and Muscovy are all good table ducks, and the Indian Runner, though small in size, is esteemed by many breeders. In addition there are several wild varieties which are being more or less successfully bred in captivity.

Muscovy ducks are fine fowls for the farm, being easy to raise, hardy and long lived. As table birds they are unsurpassed by any other breed. The Muscovies are silent or quack-less and do best if allowed to make their own nests and rear their young. The bird shown is a Muscovy drake.

Pekings and Aylesburys are white in color; Rouens are a beautiful combination of green, black, brown and gray; Muscovies are white or white and black; Cayugas are black, and Indian Runners are white or fawn and white.

Ducks are sold as broilers, dressing, when properly handled, very plump and meaty, at from two and a half to three pounds at six weeks of age. But we think they sell to more profit and more readily when mature. The cost of feeding is less than for feeding chickens.

They do not readily digest grain, though once in awhile it is good for them, but they should be kept in grassy lots and near running water if possible. They must be fed twice a day on a mash food, and they should be given grit, oyster shell and charcoal. Ducklings require warmth for the first two weeks, when they are let out to swim and paddle around. Thirty ducks and six drakes make a good start. Beginners may open with half that number. They demand little care.

Care of Young Fowls.

The young stock will come through the summer months in excellent condition if given a variety of food, plenty of green stuff, and if the lice are kept down. Do not overcrowd, particularly in the roosting quarters, for on the warm summer nights with no breeze stirring the chickens get what is called the "sweats," which stunts them and makes them a prey to all kinds of disease—colds, sore eye, chickenpox, etc. With the old stock, the amount of bulky, fattening food should be cut down considerably; if not, the warm weather with too much fattening food will make them lazy and unprofitable to keep on hand.

Limber Neck of Poultry.

Limber neck or wry neck is a degrading condition of the nerves resulting from some form of poisoning. Eating decayed animal or vegetable matter or too much salt often poisons poultry and results in these nervous ailments.

Fish That Sing.

There is a fish called the buttermilk, which is found off the Scottish coast. This fish, which is fat and comfortable looking, about a foot long as a rule, makes a distinct hooting noise from the back of his throat when landed in a net or caught on a long line. A netful of these fish, though they are rather rare, is sometimes caught, and when they are hauled in the chorus of sharp, siren-like hoots is very startling to a stranger.

But in Ceylon there is a shellfish, a kind of mussel, which positively sings. In still weather when the water has ebbed away from the mussel beds for a few hours these shellfish can be heard producing a long, low, ditty sound. How they do it no one knows, but they make a quite distinct attempt at singing, and as they have no throats they must produce the sound by some manipulation of their double shells.—London Globe.

Wasted Motions.

Our life is peppered with motions that fly wide and wild. It begins on awaking. We stretch our arms—waste motion! We ought to utilize that gesture for polishing our shoes. We rub our eyes—more foolishness. We should rub our eyes on Sunday for the rest of the week.

But it is in processes like shaving that scientific management is really needed. Men flatter themselves that they shave with the minimum of gesture. They believe that they complete the operation under five minutes. But, excusing their inaccuracy, do they know that under the inspection of the scientific manager their performance would look as jagged as their razor blade under the microscope? The day will probably arrive when a superman will shave with one superb motion as delightful to the soul as the unclogging of an orange skin in one long unbroken peel.—New Republic.

Sheep's Two Perquisites.

The sheep is a chunk of misguided animation which is afflicted with a perpetual cold in the head and has the appearance of always needing its nose wiped, but it has the distinction of being the only animal, man not excepted, which can afford to wear strictly all wool clothing the year round.

Probably the greatest accomplishment of the sheep is getting itself lost in a snowstorm, at which it is such a success that a number of famous painters have put in a lot of time painting pictures of sheep working at this.—Farm and Fireside.

All False.

Mr. Grimes (with great indignation)—I've finished with that fellow Skinner, absolutely finished with him. He's a bad one. He has a lying tongue in his head. Mrs. Grimes (sympathetically)—Dear me! And only yesterday his wife told me that he had false teeth.—London Tit-Bits.

FOR RHUBARB PIES

RECIPES THAT HAVE BEEN TRIED AND NOT FOUND WANTING.

Fine Served With a Form of Mince-meat—Mixed With Raisins—Two Kinds of Rhubarb Meringue Are Recommended.

Mince Rhubarb Pie.—One cupful of rhubarb, after chopping fine, one-half cupful sugar, one-half cupful best molasses, one-half cupful water, one-half cupful raisins chopped, one and a half crackers, rolled, one egg, one-half teaspoonful cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoonful cloves, a little nutmeg, a little salt and one tablespoonful butter. Bake with two crusts. This makes two pies.

Mock Lemon Pie.—One cupful rhubarb sauce, three-fourths cupful sugar, yolks of two eggs, two tablespoonfuls of sweet cream. Flavor with lemon extract, bake in one crust and frost with whites of two eggs and two tablespoonfuls of sugar.

Rhubarb and Raisin Pie.—Two cupfuls of rhubarb and one cupful of raisins, chopped together quite fine, one cupful sugar, one teaspoonful cinnamon, a little salt and bits of butter. Bake in two crusts.

Delicious Rhubarb Pie.—Line a deep pie plate with crust and cut fine enough rhubarb to nearly fill the plate, and put it in a saucepan. Mix one-half teaspoonful cornstarch with a little cold water and stir into one-half cupful boiling water, pour over rhubarb, add a small handful of seedless raisins and at least one and a half cupfuls of sugar (the amount depends upon the acidity of the rhubarb); beat all together, but do not boil. Bake with two crusts.

Rhubarb Meringue Pie.—Beat the yolks of two eggs, add one tablespoonful cornstarch, one cupful of sugar and one cupful of finely-chopped rhubarb; turn into pie plate lined with rich crust and bake; when done cool slightly, then frost with the two whites beaten stiff, three tablespoonfuls sugar and one teaspoonful of lemon extract. Brown lightly in the oven.

Rhubarb Meringue Pie No. 2.—To one cupful of finely-chopped rhubarb add one cupful of sugar and the grated rind of one lemon, put one teaspoonful of cornstarch in a cup, moisten with a little cold water, then fill the cup with boiling water and add to it the rhubarb, then add the beaten yolks of three eggs. Bake with one crust and when cold cover with meringues of the whites of the three eggs and three tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar and brown lightly.

Artichokes.

Artichoke is a coming vegetable. The French have shown us its utility.

The plant grows wild in southern Europe. The artichoke is a graceful plant, several feet high.

Its handsome leaves and fine appearance recommend it for ornamental use. The artichoke belongs to the same family as the daisy and the sunflower.

The part which is eaten is the flat, circular disk which bears the flowers. The tender base of the disk is also eaten after the heads are boiled tender.

Dressed with oil and vinegar, the tender parts of boiled artichoke make a good salad.

Finnan Haddie.

Place fish, skin side down, in a baking pan with water enough to cover. Boil ten minutes, when skin may be easily removed. Cut off the tail well into the meat. Return to pan, using half milk and half cream instead of water. Thick slices of boiled potato should be placed snugly around the fish. Season in the pan if desired.

The unserved fish may be separated from the bones, mixed with cream or milk and cracker crumbs, well seasoned and baked. This makes a delicious lunch or side serving.

Bag of Lettuce.

To place lettuce or parsley of celery in a cloth bag and keep directly on the ice means that the vegetable will keep fresh and crisp much longer than in any other way. Bags, all made and stamped with the name "Lettuce," "Parsley" or "Celery" may be had for 35 cents. There is a shir string at top to pull tight and keep the contents in place. It would possibly take about an hour to make one of these bags, but the comfort and satisfaction in using one cannot be computed.

Scrambled Rice and Bacon.

Three cupfuls cooked rice, 12 slices of bacon, three eggs, beaten, salt and pepper.

Fry or bake the bacon till crisp; pour off half the fat and put the bacon aside in a warm place. Mix together the eggs and rice and add salt and pepper as needed. Pour into the hot bacon fat left in the frying pan and scramble. Heap in a mound on a hot platter and surround with the bacon.—Good Housekeeping.

Oxford Salad.

Small leaves of lettuce, three to each guest. On each slice of orange place a strip of canned red sweet pepper. Over all pour a dressing made of the juice from ends of oranges, a little of the pepper liquor and plenty of salt. Very pretty, and so good.

To Dry Cut Glass.

Dry cut glass with soft tissue paper if you want it to be brilliant.

HOW TO SECURE A GOOD STAND

Proper Seeding Of Crimson Clover Is Essential To Successful Production.

NICKOLAS SCHMITZ

Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

The lack of rain in late summer and early fall is responsible for many failures of crimson clover, because the young seedlings are very easily killed by lack of moisture or hot sunshine. The seedbed, then, should be firm, moist and finely pulverized. Where sown in cultivated crops, such as corn and tomatoes, the cultivation necessary for these crops is usually sufficient for the clover; where following small grain the stubble should be plowed down as soon after harvest as possible, and the land well worked-up. Then, after one or two good rains and a light surface-working, the field is ready for crimson clover seeding.

Of late years, preparing stubble land for crimson clover by discing thoroughly has been practiced, and under favorable conditions has given good results. This saves labor, but can not be recommended for hard clay soils.

Method Of Seeding.

The seed may be broadcasted by hand, or sown with one of the broadcasting machines found on the market, of which the wheel-barrow seeder is about the most satisfactory. In cultivated crops the seed may also be sown with one of the special single row horse-seeders, made for seeding intertilled crops; but, generally, the machine is best.

When sown in corn a rotary hand-seeder may be used on horse-back. This seeder should be supported a foot or so above the saddle horn, and the horse's ears covered to prevent the seed entering.

Time And Rate Of Seeding.

It is best to seed some time between the middle of July and the middle of September. Along the water-fronts in Southern Maryland and in the southern part of the Eastern Shore it may be safe to sow as late as the middle of September or a little later, but by far the best results are obtained if seeded a month or six weeks earlier. In the northern part of the Eastern Shore and in the crimson clover section of Harford, Baltimore, Howard and Montgomery counties, it should not be seeded later than September 1st, and preferably 4 or 5 weeks earlier. In Carroll county and in almost all of the lower altitudes of Frederick and Washington counties and in the Mountain Section it is seldom safe to sow after August 25th, and it may be seeded as early as July 15th.

The most common rate of seeding is 15 pounds per acre. A few use 20 pounds, while others use only 12 pounds per acre. If the weather and soil conditions are just right, 12 pounds is enough.

SHRUBS FOR HOME GROUNDS.

B. W. ANSPON

Maryland State College Of Agriculture.

According to their flowering habit, shrubs are divided into two groups. One group of shrubs produces flowers from buds that were formed the previous season. The other group produces flowers from buds that are formed on the new wood of the current season.

It is the first group in which the flower buds are prepared before hand, that we especially are interested in at this time. Among this group are the following shrubs:

- |                   |                  |
|-------------------|------------------|
| Azaleas           | Golden Bell      |
| Calycanthus       | Japan Quince     |
| Daphne            | Mock Orange      |
| Deutzias          | Mountain Laurel  |
| Dogwoods          | Privets          |
| Dwarf Almond      | Rhododendrons    |
| Flowering Currant | Spiraea (Spring) |
| Flowering Crab    | Flowering        |
| Flowering Peach   | Viburnums        |

The growth of these shrubs can be controlled by pruning now. As soon as the flowers fade, shorten back the old wood. Old shoots that tend to crowd should be removed. Those growing out of the bounds should be cut back to conform to the general outline of the plant. By this method of pruning, strong shoots will develop, on which the flower-buds for the ensuing year will form. Where the growth of such shoots becomes too vigorous, pinch them back.

On Rhododendrons and Azaleas cut out the old flower heads as soon as they fade.

Climbing roses need little pruning, save cutting off the flower clusters after they are through flowering.

Evergreen trees, to develop into good specimens, should have the lowest limbs extending the greatest distance out from the trunks. When upper limbs are allowed to grow out beyond the lower limbs, serious injury results. The longer branches will shade the lower and also throw off the rain from them. Soon the lower limbs will drop their needles or leaves and die. All upper branches that extend beyond the lower limbs should be cut back until they are shorter than the ones directly beneath them. Always cut back to a strong bud, so as to leave no stub. Pinching out the terminal bud will check growth in that direction, when the branch tends to grow out of bounds.

This Overland is the world's most powerful low-priced car. It has a 31 1/2 horsepower en bloc motor that is a perfect marvel for speed, power and endurance. By increasing the bore of the motor from 3 1/8 to 3 3/8" we are able to offer a power plant which at 1950 R. P. M. develops full 31 1/2 horsepower. Tests under every condition in all parts of the country demonstrate that it easily develops better than fifty miles per hour on the road. Speed of course varies under different conditions, but in practically every instance it has been getting fifty miles an hour and with ease. We have scores of telegrams showing that twenty to twenty-five miles per gallon of gasoline is not unusual. The performance of this car is almost beyond belief.

Take any other low-priced car on the market. Pit it against this new Overland. Compare them for sheer speed, for abundance of power, for riding comfort and economy, and you'll find this car will back anything else clean off the boards. That's a strong statement, but a fact nevertheless. Try it yourself and see. Here are more important facts.

It has four-inch tires which are more than generous for a car of this size. Not only has it a large and roomy body, but it has an attractive, up-to-date streamline body. It has the latest and most improved system of ignition. It has the cantilever springs—the easiest riding springs in the world.

What's more, it's complete. Not a thing to buy. You get the finest Auto-Lite electric starting and lighting system, magnetic speedometer, one-man top, demountable rims and practically every accessory found on the highest priced cars. It only goes to prove how big production can cut cost and save you money. First come, first served. Place your order now.

NOBLEST OF ALL VIRTUES

True Friendship Has Qualities Which Render It a "Thing Apart"—Stepping-Stone to Love.

Avowed with candor and maintained with good faith, friendship is ever the stepping-stone of love. John Hare goes a trifle higher with his definition of the term, calling it "Love, without either flowers or veil." Perhaps the maximum breadth and depth of meaning, however, finds expression in Grimwald's lines: "Friendship is the flavor of flowers, the lively spirit of life, the sacred bond of blissful peace, the stalwart staunch of strife." Accept this or coin other definitions as we may, we must not forget that even though it is the freest of all the sentiments, it is by no means the lightest; on the contrary, true friendship, and I speak only of this kind of a friendship in its sublimest and fullest sense, is the noblest of all the virtues. Such friendship, whose laws are austere and eternal, cherishes confidence and lauds fidelity. It writes faults and frailties upon the waters, and virtues and victories upon the rocks. It downs bigotry, dissolves doubts and destroys the egotistical "I" for the co-operative "we." Like all knowledge, it is free—divine and human. It runs along to where the natural ends and the supernatural begins. "It keeps company with the sallies of the wit and the trances of religion." It underlies the whole superstructure of fraternalism and links us with home and with all that we understand and love. Take it away, and it disjoins and dislocates everything. Lost, it is "Chaos come again." Loyal and obedient, it is a shield and a high tower, standing for equality and justice, and leading the world on on one system of laws for all people, and a fraternal recognition of the solidarity of the race.—"Friendship, Charity and Benevolence," George Leon Varney, in National Magazine.

HAD AN ALGONQUIN ORIGIN

Name "Manhattan" Has Been Traced—Means Noble and Beautiful Landscape or Object.

The name Manhattan is associated with the waters surrounding the island on which stands the greater part of the city of New York, and with the island itself. It was on September 12, 1609, that Henry Hudson steered the good ship, the Half Moon, into what is now New York harbor and east anchor about two leagues beyond the narrows, at a point near the site of the present Battery park. Hudson had with him an English mate, Robert Juet by name, who kept the log-book of the Half Moon. That log-book briefly recounts the trip of the explorers up the river that today bears the name of the explorer, just as that same name is borne by Canada's great inland sea of the far north, Hudson bay. In one of the entries in his log, Juet writes of the Half Moon being off a cliff, "that looks of the color of white-green, on that side of the river which is called Manna-hata." Ruttenber, in a chapter contributed to the excellent memorial History of New York, discusses the derivation of the word "Manna-hata" from its Algonquin origin, and finds that its root-syllables mean "noble and beautiful landscape or object . . . and thus represents an exclamation or eulogistic expression." The various spellings of the name are Manhattan, Manhat-tae, Manatthanes. There is also the form already given in the quotation from Juet's log-book.

What Is a Weed?

The simplest definition of a weed is "a plant out of place," and the inhuman scientist may be satisfied with that disposition of the lovely mountain laurel or the aristocratic rhododendron, where great specimens of either stand in the way of a road or a building. I think I may construct my own definition of a weed as, in the first place, a plant of persistent and spreading growth that is not sufficiently beautiful in foliage or flower to commend it for its own sake, or as a plant attractive in itself that tends to possess the land of the exclusion of all else. Thus the ox-eyed daisy is a weed, even though it is beautiful, because it spreads persistently, so that whole fields on the careless farm wave with its flowers, justifying the gibe of Dr. Bailey of Cornell, who said, when passing such a display, "That man is not a farmer; he's a florist." The same Dr. Bailey's definition of a weed as "A plant not wanted" is simple and true.—Countryside Magazine.

Indictment of Mosquito.

In a large percentage of the biting insects the piercing organ consists of a tube, or gutter, in the hollow of which lie certain rods, with sawlike edges, and the outer gutter incloses an inner gutter facing the other way, up which ultimately the blood the mosquito sucks will flow. In the mosquito there is also a median structure, like a double-edged sword, the prolongation of the lower lip. This is traversed by the duct from which flows the so-called saliva of the insect. This saliva carries with it the microscopic unicellular animals which cause malaria. A writer on the danger of the mosquito has said that, "down this minute, microscopic duct has flowed the fluid which has altered the fate of continents and played a conspicuous part in destroying civilizations of Greece and Rome," and that malaria is "a disease which has probably played a bigger part in the history of the world than that conveyed by any other insect."

Sorrows of an Author.

Many of the sorrows of the author in this living present are quite as active as 150 years ago when William Oldys lived and died in London. The "blue pencil" was as remorseless then, though under some name now forgotten. Oldys tells how he wrote some valuable article of nearly two sheets and how the bookseller, "for sordid gain and to save a little expense in print paper, got Mr. John Campbell to cross it and cramp it, and play the devil with it, till he squeezed it into less compass than a sheet." The book borrower of that time was the same neglectful person that many of us know today, and Oldys sighs over books he has lent which have never been returned. He was a keen antiquary, delighting especially in musty manuscripts, and, half in temper and half in good humor, tells of "Old Counselor Fane, who gave me a parcel of manuscript and promised me others, which he never gave me nor anything else besides a barrel of oysters."

An Early Ironclad.

Many people imagine that the first armored ship was the "iron cased frigate" Gloria, launched for the French navy in 1857, yet, according to the Popular Science Monthly, the Dutch built an armored vessel nearly 300 years earlier. That was in 1585, when Antwerp was besieged by the Spaniards. The Dutch took one of their biggest ships, cut her down and erected on the deck a battery with armored and sloping sides, within which they mounted eight of the heaviest guns the factories of the day could produce. The roof of the battery formed an armored breastwork for men armed with crossbows and shotguns, and there were gratings in the roof to provide ventilation for the battery below. A contemporary picture of the Flins Bell, as she was called, bears a striking resemblance to the Merrimack, which was designed and built on precisely the same principles.

The Licorice Plant.

The licorice plant resembles a rose with a single green stem, reaches a height of about three feet and bears a small purple star shaped flower. The first year's root growth resembles a loosely twisted string of tow and may run to twenty feet in length. The second year it assumes a woody substance when dry, and the third year it acquires its commercial value. The time for digging the root is the winter, when it is dried and crushed under heavy stones drawn around on it by mules, much as olives are crushed to extract their oil.

The Retort Caustic.

"No, indeed," said the concelted young puppy who had been asked whether he had attended a certain select dance. "I—aw—only associate with my equals, you know."
"Really?" responded a witty young lady. "You should aim higher than that!"—London Telegraph.

Heard In the Hall.

"You don't know enough to stay in when it rains," derisively said the cane to the umbrella.
"Look here," retorted the umbrella; "such bluffs from a mere stick like you don't go with me. My motto is 'Put up or shut up' every time."

Sympathy.

Cora—Have you seen my new photographs, dear? Every one says they look exactly like me. Dora—What a shame! Can't you get another sitting?

Taken at His Word.

Creditor—Suppose I'll have to wait till the day of judgment for what you owe. Debtor—Yes; call late in the day, though.—Fliegende Blaetter.

All Want It.

Butcher—What kind of a cut of meat do you prefer, ma'am? Customer (bit-terly)—A price cut.—Baltimore American.

Earrings Denote Widowhood.

That India is a land of curious customs is confirmed by the Popular Science Monthly. A widow, instead of wearing black crape, dons ponderous earrings made of solid brass. Since her widowhood is perpetual she is obliged to wear them the rest of her life. Each year another ring is added. The constantly increasing weight of metal stretches the lobe of the ear, to which it is attached, in an extraordinary manner. It is safe to say that no widow ever forgets the fact of her widowhood when wearing such a clumsy weight.

A Silent City.

No industry brings the village of Gilthoorn, Holland, into touch with the world. It is almost wholly inaccessible except by water, and the inhabitants are shy and keep within doors, betraying not the slightest interest in visitors. Indeed, Gilthoorn has been likened, empty and silent in its green picturesqueness, to a place visited in a dream.—Argonaut.

Progressive.

"When did you commit your first fatal extravagance?"
"When my boss referred to my wages as my 'salary.'"
"And when did you perpetrate this latest folly?"
"The day my wife called my salary my 'income.'"—Cleveland Leader.

Appropriate.

Manufacturer—I'm going to call this new cigar "The American Lady In the Japanese Kimono." Dealer—Why? Manufacturer—Domestic filler and imported wrapper.—Illinois Siren.

The End of a Lawsuit

A Lawyer Paved the Way; a Woman Did the Rest

By F. A. MITCHEL

My friend Jernegan came into my law office one morning and said to me: "Tom, my affairs have been in the hands of Turner & Swift ever since my dad died, and they have got them into a frightful snarl. They now tell me that I'm likely to lose everything. I've concluded to take the management of the estate out of their hands and put it in yours."

This seemed to me like a doctor called in to save a patient that had been given up by another doctor, but Jim Jernegan and I had long been chums, and I couldn't refuse him. A tin box full of papers arrived at my office, the box being marked in gilt letters "Estate of James R. Jernegan," Jim's father, and I proceeded to an investigation.

The deceased had made a fortune by a land speculation in which he had had a partner named Hausman. The two had quarreled, each claiming the lion's share of the property. This had started a lawsuit which had been inherited with the property by the heirs. The value of the land had increased, but the costs of the suit had increased proportionately. Hausman before his death had transferred his interest to a man named Starkweather, and Starkweather had died, leaving it to his only child, a daughter.

I found my client absolutely ignorant of the condition of his interests in the property. "Don't talk to me about it," he said. "I know nothing of law. That's what I hire you for." So I was obliged to work out the puzzle unaided. I found that there were just two interests in the property—Jim's and Starkweather's daughter's. The lawyers had been playing these two interests off the one against the other to make business for themselves. I would have brought about a settlement, but the rascals had got the matter so tangled that this was impossible. There was but one way to effect such a result, and that was by a union of the two opposing interests. Since one of the parties was a man and the other a woman this might be effected by marriage.

But I saw no hope in such a solution. The woman might be old; she might be homely; she might be a virago. And even though she were young and attractive I knew that Jim would never marry. When twenty-two or twenty-three years old he had been jilted by a girl he loved, and this had made him a confirmed woman hater. He was now thirty, frequented clubs and had no home. I think that he would have liked a home, but could not have one without a wife, and he had no confidence in any woman.

However, I determined to have a look at the person who was fighting Jim for the estate and ask her if she would accede to something of no real importance as an excuse to call upon her. I found a woman of about twenty-seven, handsome and apparently otherwise attractive, except that her disposition did not seem especially amiable. But whether this was natural to her or had been engendered by her fight for affluence in lieu of poverty or some other cause I was ignorant. Beyond this defect, which I was obliged to admit was serious, there was no reason why she should not make a husband happy.

I determined to broach my plan to her. Beginning with a statement of how her lawyer had played off her interests against those of her opponent, I entered into a detailed explanation of the tangle into which the two interests had been brought and finally ended by saying:

"There is but one way in which the property can be saved. The two interests should be united in one person."

"How can that be?" she asked in wonderment.

"By marriage."

"Then all I have to say is that the property will be sunk."

I made no rejoinder, but, gathering up some papers I had brought with me, took my leave. Any attempt to bring two such persons together would be evidently futile. The lady was as much in the hands of her lawyers as Jim had been in the hands of his. She knew nothing about the condition of affairs until I made my statement to her. She did not even know who was her opponent. Until I informed her she had no idea how she had been used by her lawyers or that she was in danger of poverty, for they had kept her supplied with an income taken from the principal.

I was not surprised, then, when in a few weeks I received a call from her at my office.

"Would a legal marriage," she asked, "with this man who is endeavoring to cheat me out of my property, without my living with him, bring about a settlement of this suit?"

After some thought I told her that it would help matters very much. I told her this not because I would approve such a marriage, for I would not and felt sure that it would bring about added difficulties, but I hoped by fostering the idea a union of hearts might be effected. I added, however, that I would think over what she had said and advise her more definitely.

I next tackled Jim. I went through the same explanations as with the lady, ending in the same way.

"Not on your life!" was the decided response.

Neither of my two clients asked a question as to the age or condition of the other. Miss Starkweather cared nothing about it because a marriage with her opponent was to be a mere legal function. Jim did not care because, having once been jilted, he would not marry any woman. However, besides my friendship for Jim, there was a big fee for me.

Months passed, during which there was no change in the situation except that the property was going from bad to worse. Miss Starkweather had meanwhile transferred her affairs to an honest lawyer who gave her a true view of the situation and refused to keep up his income on an expectation of securing a slice of the property for himself. He also confirmed what I had said about a settlement by marriage, though he pointed out grave consequences that might result from this plan. Nevertheless he showed her how it would render available funds for present use, and she determined to adopt it provided the party of the other part would consent. I broached the plan to Jim, who was also cramped for funds, and assured him that, besides releasing certain moneys, possibly it might end in a settlement of the suit. He took the matter under consideration and, when posted at his club for dues and supplies that he could not pay for, concluded to adopt the marriage plan. I tried to interest him in the lady by sounding her praises, but he wouldn't listen to me. "She may be a Medusa for all I care," he said.

I was obliged by the contracting parties to draw up a paper stating the conditions of the marriage, one of which was that when it became of no use financially to either party no opposition would be raised to an annulment or divorce. This was to be signed just before the marriage ceremony.

The day before the wedding Miss Starkweather's attorney came to my office to protest against what he called my method of settling the suit, averring that not only was it unprofessional, but he believed it would result in a worse tangle than ever. I denied that it was my plan, but had been suggested to me by Miss Starkweather. I had partly assented to it at first, hoping to make an amicable match, but since this plan had failed I declined to approve the plan. Jernegan had assented to it on account of an immediate pressure for funds.

The lawyer begged me to go to his client with him and dissuade him from making a marriage that was contracted in enmity. I consented to do so, and when we met her I confirmed what he said about the probable evil effects of such a marriage.

"I relieve you gentlemen," she said, "of all responsibility in this affair, and I beg that you will give yourselves no concern about it whatever. My mind is made up. Good morning."

That ended the matter so far as my lawyers were concerned. But I took the precaution to tell Jim that the woman had relieved me of all responsibility in the matter and asked him to do the same. He said that something must be done to procure funds, for he was on the border of disgrace. No matter what resulted from the marriage he would not blame me.

The marriage—it could scarcely be called a wedding—was appointed for 11 o'clock in the morning. I went with Jim to the house. He didn't wear different clothes from his usual daily apparel. On the way he seemed rather melancholy. I fancied that he was thinking of the girl who had jilted him. When we reached the house we were shown into the drawing room. In a few minutes a clergyman entered. It seemed more to me as if we were to take part in a funeral instead of a wedding. We three sat without speaking till a rear door was thrown open, and the bride, in ordinary apparel, attended by an elderly lady, entered. She was evidently much excited and kept her eyes on the floor.

The parson and I rose, but Jim sat still. Turning to look at him, I saw on his face an expression of astonishment and wonder mixed. He seemed glued to his chair. Then, suddenly starting up, he made several strides to the bride and stopped before her. She raised her eyes to his, but there was no surprise in them.

"Mildred," he cried passionately, "what means this? Why did you?"

"I didn't."

"Did you consent to this legal union knowing me to be the groom?"

There was no reply to this. Again she dropped her eyes to the floor. Jim looked at her steadily for a time without speaking, then, turning to the clergyman, motioned him to proceed with the ceremony.

All these months I had been working up the climax of a romance without knowing it. Had Jim permitted me to tell him anything about his legal opponent it would have come out that she was the girl who he considered had jilted him. Perhaps it is well he did not, for the unreasonableness of lovers is proverbial, and had he known the facts it is quite likely the climax might have been different.

After my visit to Miss Starkweather she had investigated her affairs and learned that her father had come into possession of the interest in land owned by Hausman, who had been part owner of the land bought by him and Jim's father. In this way she learned that her lover, with whom she had quarreled, was her opponent in the lawsuit. She had then taken her own peculiar way to effect a reconciliation.

I confess I was tickled to death at the result of my initiative, worked out by the marvelous method of a woman. Two estranged lovers were brought together, their estate was saved to them, and I pocketed a $10,000 fee.

REQUIRES CARE IN MAKING

Tea, to Be at Its Best, Must Be Prepared Under Exactly the Proper Conditions.

There is practically no nutriment in tea, though there are small amounts of mineral salts. The principal ingredients are caffeine, which stimulates the nerves; volatile oils, which give the flavor; and tannic acid, which retards the digestion!

The Japanese have made a religious and aesthetic ceremonial of tea-drinking, and, like the mineral waters whose efficiency is found to depend largely on the change and rest accompanying their drinking, the afternoon tea has its psychological as well as its physiological reasons for the pleasant results produced.

Like all beverages which refresh by stimulating, tea should be used with great discretion.

Less tea is used to the cup than in the case of coffee—one-half to one teaspoonful as compared to one tablespoonful. A mild cup of tea well made will not hurt a healthy person, and, although the stimulating principle is the same, tea does not seem to have so direct or so pronounced an effect on the central nervous system as does coffee. Children, people with gastric troubles or those who are nervous should not drink tea.

Green tea contains much more tannic acid than black tea. Be sure it does not boil or stand on the leaves if you use it.

Hard or stale water does not make good tea. It should be freshly drawn and freshly boiled.

Boiling the tea is a crime. The caffeine is readily soluble and is quickly obtained in solution. Boiling or long standing on the leaves only results in more of the injurious tannic acid being extracted and spoils the flavor as well as making the beverage more harmful.

COVERS FOR SWEEPING DAYS

Provision May Be Made That Will Do Away With Much Annoyance on Those Occasions.

To find the necessary coverings on sweeping days has often sent the maid scurrying about for old aprons, sheets, towels and anything else she could lay her hands on to use for this purpose.

A friend of mine has solved the difficulty in this way: She purchased a quantity of grey cambric and made from it a large sheet with which to cover the beds and sideboard; smaller covers for dressers and toilet tables were made and still others, in suitable shapes, were designed to put over the lamps, mantels and the like. She also made from the cambric a bag to keep the covers in; this was hung in the broom closet.

While light, the cambric formed a perfect protection against dust, and a simple shaking when the sweeping was finished freed the covers from the dust that had settled upon them, so that they required washing but once a month. The use of these dust covers saved much valuable time and extra work. The cost of a set is moderate and it does not take long to make them.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Omelet of Peas.

Beat up three eggs, to which add one tablespoonful of grated cheese; pepper and salt and mix thoroughly. Butter an omelet pan and pour in the mixture; keep moving it gently with a fork, while you sprinkle in with the other hand some cooked green peas or canned. The omelet will be cooked by the time you have sprinkled in two handfuls. Slip it off on a very hot dish, fold over and serve at once.

Queen Cake.

Three eggs, two cupfuls sugar, large half cupful butter, one cupful milk, one teaspoonful soda, two teaspoonfuls cream of tartar, three cupfuls flour. Flavor to taste. This makes two quite good-sized loaves or a large sheet. It can be divided and put three whites in one loaf and three yolks in the other. Then use one and a half cupfuls of flour to each loaf and halve everything else in proportion.

Cream of Rice Soup.

Two quarts of chicken broth, one teaspoonful of rice, one quart of milk (half cream is better), one onion, one stalk of celery, salt and pepper to taste. Wash the rice, add the onion and celery and cook two hours; then strain through a sieve. Add the seasoning and the milk or cream, which has come to the boiling point. If milk is used, add a little piece of butter.

Egg Sauce.

This is excellent with almost any oiled fish. Have ready two hard-boiled eggs, cut in small pieces. Use two tablespoonfuls of white roux, or melt two tablespoonfuls of butter and add one of flour to it, then a cupful of boiling water and cook for at least ten minutes. Add the egg, seasoning, more butter, and, if liked, a teaspoonful of chopped parsley.

Beef a La Mode.

Three pounds round steak chopped fine, two well-beaten eggs, four soda crackers rolled fine, one teaspoonful salt and one teaspoonful sage, one-half teaspoonful pepper, two tablespoonfuls milk. Roll into a loaf, mixing well, and bake two hours.

Chicken and Macaroni.

Take equal parts of cold chicken, boiled macaroni and tomato sauce. Put in layers in a shallow dish and cover with buttered crumbs. Bake until brown.

SUNDAY SCHOOL

Lesson IX.—Third Quarter, For Aug. 27, 1916.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Acts xx, 16-27. Memory Verse, 24—Golden Text, Acts xx, 32—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

After the uproar of Ephesus, Paul bade an affectionate farewell to the disciples there and crossed over to Macedonia, whither Timothy and Erastus had preceded him (xix, 22; xx, 1). After comforting the disciples, probably in all places where he had preached the word, he and his party recrossed to Troas, where he first heard the call to Macedonia. He had tarried three months in Greece, and now they abode seven days at Troas (xx, 2-6; xvi, 8, 9). There they had an all night preaching service, at which one young man who sat in a window slept so soundly that he fell out from the third story and was killed, but the Lord restored him through Paul, and all were comforted. Paul must have been full of overflowing messages which he felt would be his last to them (xx, 7-12, 25). While all the party went by ship to Assos, Paul walked across country to meet them there (verse 13). While fellowship with the brethren is often refreshing, there is nothing so grand as to be alone with God, and this lonely walk would give Paul opportunity for the communion he desired.

Paul desired, if possible, to be at Jerusalem by the day of Pentecost, so instead of visiting Ephesus again he sent for the elders of the church there to meet him at Miletus, and the principal part of our lesson today is the record of his farewell address to them (verses 14-17). He reminded them that for three years he had faithfully testified to Jews and Greeks repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ, testifying the gospel of the grace of God and preaching the kingdom of God (verses 21, 24, 25). These are the truths which all need to know, and there is nothing so grand to tell as the grace of God which bringeth salvation to all and justifies freely all who truly receive him (Rom. iii, 24; Eph. ii, 8, 9; Tit. ii, 11; iii, 4-7).

Since all are guilty before God and the righteousness which He requires no mortal man has nor can obtain by his own efforts it is surely good news that God has provided this perfect righteousness in Christ Jesus and offers it freely to every penitent sinner (Rom. iii, 19; II Cor. v, 21; I Cor. i, 30; Rom. x, 4). Humility becomes us always, for we are nothing and know nothing and can do nothing apart from Him, and there is no room for boasting except in the Lord. If we realized how great is the wrath from which we have been delivered and which still rests upon and awaits those who are not saved there might be more prevailing tears on our part for lost ones about us (verse 19; I Thess. i, 10; John iii, 36). Then there is the building up or edifying of the saints so necessary for the glorifying of God on the part of His saved ones (verse 32), and nothing can do this but the word of God, which is the only food for the soul (John xvii, 17; Jer. xv, 16). Paul could say: "I kept back nothing that was profitable unto you. . . . I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God" (verses 20, 27). Although it is written that "all Scripture is profitable," that there is a special blessing upon all who read or hear the book of Revelation, that our Lord said that it was foolish not to give heed to all that the prophets had said (II Tim. iii, 16; Rev. i, 3; Luke, xxiv, 25), yet there are those who turn away from all prophecy and especially from the book of Revelation and encourage others to do so. Such would do well to consider what is written of those who feed themselves instead of the flock and are called wolves, thieves, robbers, hirelings (verses 29, 30; Ezek. xxxiv; John x).

Paul was always speaking of the kingdom of God, as was also our Lord Jesus (verse 25; xxviii, 23, 31; Matt. iv, 23; Acts i, 3), but of all Bible topics perhaps none is more misunderstood than that of the kingdom, which is yet to be set up on this earth at the second coming of our Lord and which cannot be till He shall come, as He Himself taught (Luke xix, 11-13). Will all who read these notes please bear with me in my oft repeated assertion that this is not the age of world conversion nor of subduing all things to Christ? But, as James said at the council at Jerusalem, it is the time of taking out from the gentiles a people for His name, that so He may come again with His church, His bride, as the Messiah of Israel for their conversion as a nation, and then through them the winning of all nations (xv, 13-18).

The only business of believers is to give the good news to others as quickly as possible—that the church may be completed—cause all Jews and gentiles to hear, as Paul did in Asia (xix, 10). Men instruct the saved ones as to the purpose of God, that they may win others, for every sinner saved brings joy in heaven (Luke xv, 7, 10) and helps to complete the church. A readiness to earn our own living while doing this, if necessary, would be doing as Paul did (verses 34, 35). He was ready to suffer or be imprisoned or be killed, as God might will, if only he might finish his course with joy and the ministry he had received of the Lord Jesus (verses 22-24; xxi, 13). He desired only the approval of God.

MISSION OF SENTIMENT

This picture of Jules Bois, distinguished French journalist and poet, was taken on the deck of the French liner Rochambeau when it arrived at New York recently. M. Bois comes, as he describes it, on a "mission of sentiment," to distinguish it from the missions of many of his compatriots who have preceded him. The French government, as a special mark of appreciation, will permit the entire company of the Theatre Francais to visit this country next October. For the first time since the founding of the institution in 1681 the French government has agreed that the organization may leave France. M. Bois also comes to arrange for the education in this country of many young Frenchmen who will serve apprenticeships in the great banking houses of the country, in our mills and in our experiment farms and colleges.

FIND DRINK EVIL GROWING

More Victims Found Among Women in Manufacturing Towns in Great Britain.

London.—Annual reports from the minor courts of Lancashire show an increase of drinking among women in the manufacturing districts. At Rochdale the justices' records show that in the year past 173 men and 122 women were arrested for drunkenness against 228 men and only 17 women in the previous year. Rochdale's prosperity, due to the fact that the women of the laboring classes have all the employment they want, and in most cases separation allowances from soldier husbands, is held responsible for the increased drinking. There is one liquor license in the town to every 272 women.

Nearly all of the manufacturing places show similar results. The chief constable of Wigan says that in the past six months the number of women visiting bars has almost doubled. A few exceptional places show an improvement in conditions.

YUAN BOWS TO CONFUCIUS

Emperor of China Confers Princedom Upon the Descendant of Religious Leader.

Peking.—Emperor Yuan Shi-kai has honored Duke Kung Lin-yi, a lineal descendant of Confucius, with a princedom, an honor heretofore not bestowed by any Chinese ruler upon a descendant of the distinguished sage.

Duke Kung Lin-yi was recently received in audience by Emperor Yuan Shi-kai, who has shown great zeal in upholding the Confucian doctrine, following the example of previous dynasties in China.

Duke Kung Lin-yi lives at Chu-fou, near the tomb of his distinguished ancestor, and recently acted as host to Dr. Paul S. Reinsch, the American minister to China, and a party of Americans who accompanied him on a visit to the Confucian tomb.

109,000 WOMEN WORKERS

Figures Show Large Number of Englishmen Released for Army Service.

London.—Over 109,000 women up to now have taken the places of men in British industrial life, releasing as many men for service in the army. These figures have been compiled by the statistical department of the board of trade and fall short of the correct total, as many firms have not yet made their returns. Women now predominate in factories, which they never entered before the war, and work metal lathes and drills quite like old hands.

FIND USES FOR NITER CAKE

English Textile Manufacturers Bleach Linen With Product Hitherto Considered Waste.

London.—Niter cake, a waste material produced in enormous quantities in the manufacture of nitric acid, has been found to be a useful product in the woolen industry and calico bleaching. A solution of the cake can be used as a substitute for sulphuric acid or any mineral acid in chemical processes where acidity alone is required.

HOT WEATHER WEAR

LINEN PERHAPS THE MOST SUITABLE OF ALL MATERIALS.

Attractive Garments of This Stuff Are Being Freely Displayed and Find Ready Purchasers—Typical Suit Shown in Illustration.

There is nothing more crisp and cool and wholly suitable for the summer tailor than linen. The war, which has served as an excuse, legitimate or otherwise, for the boosting of prices, and against which has been charged a good deal of fabric shortage, has affected, to some extent, the linen supply, but it is difficult to believe that the shortage is serious when one views the attractive garments the shops are showing.

Norfolk and other belted coats, as well as suits showing the flaring peplums and fitted or semifitted jackets, are developed in linen, and it is also found desirable for riding suits.

The suit here illustrated is made of heavy white linen crash. The collar and cuffs are detachable and are made of black chiffon.

The buttonholes are not worked in the usual way with thread, but are bound or piped with a thinner linen, and this treatment is found a very desirable one with most of the heavy suits or dresses of tub fabrics, as a buttonhole so finished gives much better service and keeps its shape better than when worked with thread.

In making the coat of any linen suit it should have a lining extending below the shoulders, so as to strengthen and hold the garment in shape, and also to prevent any "pulling" where the sleeve fastens in.

The suit illustrated has a circular skirt topped with a yoke that is cut four and a half inches deep front and back, and which points to a depth of six inches at the sides. A left side fastening is used, with invisible snap hooks securing the garment.

The coat is 32 inches long at its front points, while below the waistline in the back the peplum measures 12 inches, a gradual upward slant being effected from front to back. The coat is finished all about its edge with a two-and-a-half-inch-wide bias piece stitched on.

To make the suit, seven yards of linen, 36 inches wide, and five-eighths of a yard of satin for collar and cuffs, are required.

The jacket has two generous slantwise pockets.

Among the attractive linen suits recently noted, one showed a skirt of natural color linen, accompanied by a cutaway coat of black and white checked linen. Another plain linen skirt was topped by a peasant blouse of Chippendale print.

WITH NEEDLE AND THREAD

Cottage Mailboxes Are Constructed in a Manner That at First Seems Somewhat Peculiar.

You would not expect to find a description of cottage mailboxes on a needlework page, but that is just exactly where these newest boxes belong, for they are made with needle and thread. They are made of heavy cardboard or a light wood, like that of cigar boxes, and covered with cretonne to match the hangings in the living hall or dining room. A disk of the board is first covered with cretonne. To this is joined with a puffing of cretonne a smaller disk inclosing a bit of mica upon which the words "Outgoing Mail" or "Incoming Mail" are lettered. Now this should be enough of a suggestion for any number of cute holders for the mail as it arrives or is ready for the post. Cigar boxes may form the foundation of these wall pockets, which can be made as capacious as one likes, and may be covered with bits of the hangings, or with the wallpaper, or even painted in bright shining colors.

Japan Ranks Fifth as Power.

The Statistical Bureau has just announced the population of Japan at the end of 1913, the figures for Japan proper being 53,356,295, and 15,169,923 additional for Korea, 3,265,169 for Formosa and 1691 for Saghalien. This makes the entire population of Japan 71,793,078. On the rough estimate of the world's population at 1,440,000,000. Japan has a little over 4.9 per cent. In population Japan proper ranks fifth among the great countries of the world, China coming first, Russia, the United States of America and Germany next in order.

The increase of population in Japan proper is very rapid, the average in the five years previous to 1913 being 1.5 per cent a year. A Wedding Reception.

(For the Record.)

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Fleagle, Sr., of Colonial Park, Baltimore, received their friends August 12, from 3 p. m. until 10 p. m., in honor of the marriage of their son, James, to Miss Jennie Viola, daughter of Mrs. Margaret Coffin, of Genoa, Nebraska.

Prof. Fleagle and bride having spent two weeks of travel in Yellowstone Park, were radiant, no doubt having caught some of the glories of that wonder world of the National Park, which is a natural wonderland. Fresh from gazing on "Old Faithful," the most brilliant geyser in the world, then came the Witches' Caldern, Primrose Spring, Mud Geysers, bubbling and spouting boiling mud, back to Turquoise Spring, a hundred feet in diameter of the most exquisite coloring the earth knows, by the Devil's Kitchen, reached by going down, down, a ladder made of spruce trees. It became hot, hotter, hottest, as they descended. The guide will show also the Devil's Tea Kettle. It is big, boiling, and ready for use, as well as the Fountain Geyser throwing boiling water a hundred feet into the air. Prof. Fleagle and bride seemed to have checked with their baggage, all their stock of adjectives and superlatives. They told the guests nothing. We know those beauties are there, but do brides and grooms see them?

Mr. Benjamin Fleagle and wife received their guests on the lawn of their home, where the supper table was laid. At 6 p. m. supper was served by the young ladies, while children gowned in white flitted over the velvety emerald carpet, bearing trays of cups, and steaming coffee pots.

Perhaps the fairest and quaintest sight, was Miss Nellie Keefer, a little niece of the groom, in pink silk frock, bearing a high brown stone jar of tiny pickles. Later, as the stars came out one by one, and the moon rode high in the heavens, Japanese lanterns danced in the night breeze while music floated in the air to the delight of the guests. Refreshments were served before the departure of the guests.

Those who paid their respects to the bride and groom and host and hostess were: Mrs. Guthrie, of Romney, W. Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Bay, Mr. Taylor, Mr. Margaret Bay, Willard and Babcock Bay, of Jarrettsville; Obadiah Fleagle, Samuel Repp and wife, Audrey Repp, Margaret Repp, Rinalda Repp, of Uniontown; Mrs. D. S. Segatose, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Wailes, Plum Tree Farm; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Keefer, Miss Nellie Keefer, Mayberry; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fleagle, Miss Mildred Fleagle, Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Hiteshe, Miss Margaret Hiteshe, Prof. Ben. E. Fleagle and wife, Miss Mary Constance Fleagle, Miss Janette Fleagle, all of Baltimore; Miss Lorena Fleagle, of Brookline, Mass; Miss Eccleson, Richmond, Va.

Prof. Jas. Fleagle and bride will reside in Aberbein, Md., where he is principal of the High School.

Wireworm Control.

In the eradication of the corn and cotton wireworm, one of the most important steps is to leave the soil undisturbed from the middle of June to the middle of August. This says a new publication of the department, Farmer's Bulletin, 733, may prove, indeed, to be the most beneficial measure that can be adopted. In addition to handling the ground in such a way as to make this possible, the author, Edmund H. Gibson, recommends that manure and cover crops be turned under in order to add humus to the light sandy spots and that, if it must be grown on infested land, corn be planted early and everything possible done to hasten its rapid growth.

The adult beetles deposit their eggs in the soil about the roots of corn, cowpeas, and other plants, for the most part, during the latter part of June and through July. As soon as the young wireworm, or larva, emerge from the eggs they begin to feed upon the roots of the plants around them. With the coming of the winter the worms descend into the ground to a depth depending upon the severity of the climate. Always, however, they go down sufficiently far to make fall and winter plowing useless as a means of eradication. In the spring the worms return to the top soil. Altogether they remain in the ground as larvae for two years and possibly for three. They then enter the pupa or resting stage and in about 12 days emerge as adult beetles, and very shortly thereafter begin to deposit their eggs.

This, however, the beetles will not do in soil which is crushed or baked. A field in this condition they will leave for one which is covered by a dust mulch or which has recently been plowed. This fact is of the utmost importance in controlling the pest and is the reason why infested land should not be planted to any crop which requires cultivation through the summer.

An advantageous way of handling such land is to plant a winter cover crop—wheat or rye, for instance—after harvesting the corn. This may be pastured during the winter months and turned under during the spring. The humus which is thus added to the land stiffens the sandy soil, which, as has been said, provides the most favorable conditions for the wireworms. A catch crop of red clover is also excellent, and such combinations of wheat and clover in certain localities not only afford two crops a year, but permit the soil to remain undisturbed at the time when the beetles are laying their eggs.

The most effective means of getting rid of the pest would undoubtedly be to let the infested fields be idle for three years. In this way a crust would be formed on the surface, which the majority of adult wireworms could not penetrate. For obvious reasons, however, the average farmer does not care to do this and will prefer to adopt the measures already mentioned. In any event, he is warned by the author of the bulletin not to plant corn two years in succession on infested land.—U. S. Dep. Agriculture.

No Slang For Him.

Donald had been to Sunday school and on coming home was asked what he had learned. The lesson was the story of Joseph, and the small learner was evidently very full of his subject. "Oh," he said, "it was about a boy, and his brothers took him and put him in a hole in the ground; and then killed another boy, and took the first boy's coat and dipped it in the blood of this boy and—"

"Oh, no, Donald, not another boy!" his sister interrupted, horrified. But Donald stood his ground.

"It was, too," he insisted. Then he added, "The teacher said 'kid' but I don't use words like that."

The Famous McClernan Sanitary All-Steel Kitchen Cabinet!

It is pantry, store-room and kitchen table combined. It is made of high-grade furniture steel, formed on heavy power presses. All joints reinforced and electric-welded (no solder or rivets, screws or bolts), giving it a virtually seamless construction as rigid as a steel casting, yet no heavier than wood.

It has no defects that will develop with use. It cannot warp or shrink or swell. It will not sag or bend. Drawers and doors and slides will not bind and stick. Joints will not open and make cracks for dirt and vermin to lodge in. Mice cannot gnaw into it. Roaches or other pests cannot hide in it.

It is beautifully enameled, inside and out, with a smooth, hard baked, durable, washable, snow white finish, that will not chip or flake. A number of exclusive features go with the cabinet that make its equipment complete.

It excels the ordinary wood cabinet in every way and costs very little more. To appreciate the marked superiority of the material, construction and finish of the McClernan Cabinet, you must see the Cabinet itself.

We are showing it now. Come in soon and look it over.
