----Col. Roosevelt is taking part in the state election campaign in Maine, emphatically urging the election of Hughes and Fairbanks and the return of the Republican party to power. He made one of his characteristically warm speeches in Lewiston, on Wednesday. ----

News of Roumania's entering the war, at once caused a drop in the price of wheat in this country, owing to the strong possibility of the early opening up of Russian wheat to the allies in Europe, and perhaps to the capture of the Dardanelles. Wheat dropped 11½ cents

Owing to the Chautauqua which will be held in Westminster, September 1 to 7, the annual convention of the Carroll County Sunday School Association will not be held on the first Thursday in September, as has been the custom, but will be postponed to a later date. Hundreds of farmers and dairymen from Baltimore, Harford, Carroll, How-ard and Frederick counties, attended a meeting in Baltimore, on Tuesday, in the interest of advancing the price of milk 2 cents per gallon. Don't kill, nor in any way mistreat, toads or land terrapins. The former, especially, are valuable in gardens because of the bugs and insects they catch. They are disreputable in appearance, and not nice to step on, but so far as known, have a perfectly good record for usefulness. The terrapin is also perfectly harmless, and has no bad habits. They are said to be useful in exterminating snails in damp cellars.

Automobile parties to the Gettysburg battlefield will hereafter be closely watched when they bring along a supply of whiskey or beer. It has been stated that the presence of empty bottles on the battlefield, after such visits, has led to giving to the guides and police special instructions as to how to deal with such situations. Practically, all booze parties can visit the ground only under close guardianship.

County fairs in Pennsylvania this fall will be deserted so far as children under 16 years are concerned, unless there is an unexpected abatement of infantile paralysis. Dr. Dixon is warning the management of each fair a week in advance of the opening date that all children under 16 are to be excluded. Twenty-three fair managements have already been notified of the drastic measure. In all, 86 fairs, scheduled for September and the first week in October, will probably be af-

School physicians have recently decided that school lead-pencils may do deadly work as disseminators of disease germs. The lead-pencils for an entire room are usually in charge of the teacher and are distributed when they are needed for class work. Children habitually moisten the pencils in their mouths, a practice more unsanitary than the use of the oldfashioned slate cleaned with saliva. It is now proposed to have the pencils fumi-gated daily with formaldehyde gas and a small fumigator has been designed for

Wm. H. Overholtzer Killed.

Wm. H. Overholtzer, formerly of this district, and a son of Mrs. Sarah Overholtzer, of Taneytown, was shot and killed, on Monday of last week, in the streets of Andarko, Oklahoma, by Jacob Tingley proprietor of an Indian curio shop, who at the same time wounded Mrs. Kate Overholtzer, shooting off the ends of two of the fingers of her left hand.

Mr. and Mrs. Overholtzer who lived at Wichita, Kansas, had motored to Verden, Okla., the first of the month, to visit Mrs. G. W. Milne, a sister of Mr. Overholtzer. It appears that Mrs. Tingley and her husband had been having do-mestic troubles and Mrs. Tingley secured a divorce, Mr. Overholtzer acting as her attorney. A reconciliation was later effected, but their domestic life continued unhappy, and on Sunday Tingley chased his wife out of the house threaten-ing to kill her. She escaped and asked the Overholtzers to take her to Andarko, which they did, on Monday.

Tingley followed, coming up with Mr. and Mrs. Overholtzer just after arrival at Andarko, and demanded to know what had become of his wife, and without waiting for a reply, began shooting Mr. Over-holtzer, only one shot taking effect. Tingley ran back to his auto, secured another revolver and again fired twice through the fingers of Mrs. Overholtzer's hand as she was trying to protect her husband, both bullets entering near the heart causing instant death. Tingley gave himself up to the officers, saying he believed his victim had been interfering between himself and wife. Tingley is said to be a man of dissolute habits, is possessed of considerable prop-erty, and is thought to have been under the influence of liquor at the time of the shooting. There was talk of lynching for a while, but an indictment for murder in the first degree was quickly brought

Wm. H. Overholtzer was born near Taneytown March 4, 1864. He removed to Kansas when about 21 years of age, engaged in business of various kinds and was active as a Republican. He prospered greatly and was the owner of two good farms, a lot of rental properties in Wichita, besides mortgages and land in

He is survived by his aged mother and the following brothers and sisters: George and Jere Overholtzer, Mrs. Frank E. Crouse, Mrs. Cornelius Stover and Mrs. Crouse, Mrs. Cornelius Stover and Mrs. Jacob Fringer, in and near Taneytown; Mrs. John T. Albaugh, New Midway; Mrs. John Eyler, near Detour; Samuel Overholtzer, of Waynesboro; John J., of South Dakota, and Mrs. G. W. Milne, of Oklahoma. Mr. Overholtzerfrequently visited his relatives here, his last visit being last Summer when he made the trip in his auto. trip in his auto.

will be remodeled so that all of the light in the class rooms will be from one side, the desks being arranged in harmony with the plan for the greatest comfort of the pupils. The stairway will be greatly enlarged and made easy of ascent, and a new steam heating plant will be installed.

There will be six teachers. The new portion of the building will likely be ready for use in about six weeks, and it is said that the improvements now being made will cost about $3200.00, which is separate from the amount already contributed by patrons for equipment. Prof. Koontz expects a large school this Winter, and says that Taneytown can now offer very superior educational advantages—a school for the town and this section of the country to be proud of.

Give Us Your Calendar Orders.

We will close our calendar orders for 1917 in the near future. The uncertainty of securing all numbers of calendars is increasing, therefore those who place orders at once will have the best chance of securing what they want. Our patrons are urged to regard this notice seriously, if they want calendars for the coming season, as we shall make no further announcement on the subject. We will do the very best possible to take care of all orders, but can no longer positively guarantee old prices.

Considerably Mixed.

With the European war, the threatened railroad strike, the infantile paralysis epidemic, the Presidential campaign, the Mexican affair, the big advance in cost of paper, and the usual amount of minor troubles, all on hand at the same time things generally are considerably mixed, making it a good time in which to watch

CONGRESS TO SURRENDER

AND AVERT STRIKE

Railroads Prepared to Render a Partial Service.

The latest on the strike situation is that Congress is likely to surrender to the trainmen, and pass a law legalizing 8 hours as a days work, which would give employers pro rata pay for overtime— practically equivalent to a day and a quarter's pay for ten hours work.

The remedial bill is admittedly a make-shift. It provides that beginning Decem-ber 1, eight hours shall be a day's work, with overtime at a pro rata rate. A com-mission of three persons is to be ap-pointed by the terms of the bill, this commission to observe the effects of the eight-hour day on both railroads and their employes for a period of not less than six and not more than nine months, and within 30 days after the observation period shall make a report to the President and the Congress. For a period of 30 days after the commission has made its report the railroads are forbidden to reduce present wages, which are estab-lished by the bill as the standard for the ished by the bill as the standard for the eight-hour day.

The Pennsylvania, as well as all other railroads, is making preparations to run trains with as little interference to regular service as possible, with non-union men, and to in every way overcome possible strike conditions, on and after Sent 4

For weeks the company has been ob taining the signatures of its unorganized force to help in such emergency. This force has been receiving instructions in the running of trains, and it is asserted that a well-developed army of engineers, firemen, conductors and brakemen has been assembled. Some of the men have had past experience in the work to which they will be assigned, while others have been in the railroad service so long they have acquired knowledge of the work, and will not tackle the new duties wholly beginners. Regular schools of instruction have been held and the volunteer force thoroughly drilled in the tasks expected of them, if the occasion should arise.

It is known that the Baltimore and Ohio, like all large railroad systems, has many men employed as station agents, and in other station and maintenance of way capacities, who have had experience in running of trains. It will be a comparatively easy matter to mobilize these, it is said, and while the trains may not be run as regularly as with the existing train crews, they can be manned so as to prevent any complete tie-up on any part of the system. The repair shops, it is asserted, will be able to furnish a number of capable engineers and firemen, while the ticket agents and others can good be made into efficient conductors. soon be made into efficient conductors.

If the proposed strike is conducted without criminal interference with railroad property, and without personal assaults on non-union men, it seems probable that the roads will be able to give very fair service, continuously, and to up to full efficiency without the aid of the present employees

This time, public sentiment seems to be strongly on the side of the railroads, as the trainmen are already high salaried men, as compared with other kinds of emyloyment, and an eight-hour day for this class of work, is not considered practicable. Besides, the whole movement is regarded as one of force and its staging during the Presidential campaign an additional means of compelling the grant of the terms of the brotherhood. Hardly anybody argues that the train-men are entitled to either an eight-hour day, or more pay.

Clean Up The School Premises.

We want to call the attention of the mothers of the tens of thousands of little children who will be starting to school within a few days to the need of womanly inspection of the school houses and premises. The school board, usually composed of "mere men," is apt to overlook some things that the eye of the mother and housewife would not let pass.

The schoolhouse should be thoroughly scrubbed with hot water-not merely rinsed out as is so often the case. The wood work should all be cleaned, and all thoroughly dried several days before school begins. The grounds and out-houses should be made decent and presentable—the grounds fit for playing on and the outhouses sanitary and clean. The condition of the latter is an everlasting disgrace to the majority of school districts. The objectionable and disgusting caricatures so often found on the should be eliminated. All this is properly the duty of directors, and the mothers should see that it is done.

It is proper work for granges, women's clubs, etc., and work that is so often neglected by everybody. The school grounds in most neighborhoods would furnish opportunity for a day's community-work. Weeds should be cut, stumps and rocks in many instances removed; in fact the entire premises should be put in such condition as would inspire pride and respect in the heart of the child, and supplant the indifferent carelessness he usually feels towards the unkempt and unkept school property. We are firmly of the opinion that there should be at least two women on every school board and we propose pushing this idea next year when the election of school officers takes place in Pennsylvania. - Pennsylvania Farmer.

The Maryland Quarantine.

The Maryland State Board of Health late last week, promulgated the stringent regulations adopted to prevent the introduction of infantile paralysis from infected areas, as well to prevent its being carried from Maryland. A system of permits was established.

The regulations for persons under 16 years of age, on and after August 26 and until further notice, provides that all local health authorities shall not grant any resident of Maryland, 16 years of age or under, permission to enter Pennsylva-nia, New Jersey, New York or any other state where infantile paralysis (poliomyelitis) is epidemic or unusually prevalent. Permits must not be granted when the 'object or purpose is instruction, recreation or pleasure, or to facilitate such purpose on the part of relatives or guardians of persons 16 years of age or under. Permits may be granted in the following

When person applying declares the intention to take permanent resident in another state, or when a parent, guardian, or employer makes such a declaration for the person applying for such a permit.

Persons 16 years of age and under, residing in Maryland, whose places of employment or occupation are in another state, may be allowed to go to and fro under limited permits, renewable at intervals not exceeding seven days.

Persons returning to Maryland with such certificates or permits, will be detained on their premises and subject to medical observation during a period of 14 days from the date of the certificate or

Hay Fever Treatment.

A new theory about "Hay Fever" is that it is a peculiar form of indigestion. arriving in mid-summer, that effects the mucus-membranes of the nose, and the eyes. That it is not due to the pollen from flowers and certain weeds, but is curable by treating the stomach. If any-body has a cure for the disease, he ought not be mean enough to want to sell it but should publish it, free, far and wide.

A book on the subject of "Hay Fever, its prevention and Cure" has just been published, written by a Philadelphia physician, who adheres to the pollen theory; that uric acid is one of the contributing factors, and that the nervous system has something to do with the receptive condition of the patient. The book gives full description of the treatment. Antiseptic applications in the early stages, to the nose and throat, are recommended, as in influenza or catarrh.

ROUMANIA ENTERS

WAR AGAINST TEUTONS.

The Allies Considerably Strengthened by the Action.

Roumania, one of the largest of the Balkan states, has at last cast its fortunes with the European allies against Germany, Austria and Turkey, which means a new armed force in the field of between 600,000 and 700,000 well equipped men. The action of Roumania has been in doubt from the beginning, and there is strong suspicion that the country has been looking out for self-interest from the beginning, rather courting favor of the strongest side, and fearful of entering and making a mistake. Her action now is therefore taken as meaning that her advisers consider ultimate results will be in favor of the anti-German allies.

Roumania has profited greatly by the war, and also by keeping out of the former Balkan states war. The country has been immensely prosperous through selling her products to both sides at exorbitant prices, and through not suffering any of the devastation of war. Just now, however, she sees additional territory to be gained from Austrio-Hungary and perhaps from Bulgaria, as her share of the settlement at the conclusion of hostilities.

There is a question, however, as to how her big army is to be supplied with war munitions, as the country is not largely engaged in manufacturing, but has depended on Germany, heretofore, for her guns and ammunition, and there is some doubt as to her present equip-ment for long or hard service.

Her entering the war will give Russia free and direct entry into Serbia, which in itself will be a great advantage, and may result in the entire cutting off of Bulgaria and Turkey from Germany and Austria. It will also open up the shipment of Russian grain and other supplies into England, France and Italy.

Meadow Branch Church News.

The revival service in progress now for little over one week in the Meadow a little over one week in the Meadow Branch church is very largely attended. Just nine days after the meeting began, nine were baptized, and nine more now await the rite. Five of those baptized were heads of homes, as well as some of those who are yet to be baptized. Prof. Schlosser, of Elizabethtown College, is doing the preaching and will remain per-ing the preaching, and will remain per-haps a couple of weeks longer. On account of infantile paralysis, Prof. Schloss-er's school work will be delayed a couple of weeks longer than was planned in the original program.

The Sunday school of the church had its outing on August 26th., when Prof. Schlosser gave a very interesting talk to the boys and girls. There were perhaps 350 present, all of whom were treated to made at Louisville school. Commissioner Zentz was authorized to make necessary repairs to the Patapsco school. ice cream and cake, in the basement of the church. Never in its history did this Sunday school have more complete orrepairs to the Patapsco school.

The following appointments were made ganization, with cradle roll and home departments. Organized class movements are growing rapidly. Some classes began a little over a year ago with about half a dozen and have now arrived at the numerical strength of fifty or more in one class. Bro. J. W. Thomas has the credit of pushing the first well organized class forward to its present success, and his wife and sister Rosie Geiman, have been just as vigilant and successful as cradle roll superintendents.

The Sisters' Aid Society met on the and spent the entire day quilting and doing other useful sewing for charity.

The meeting was held at the country those present took dinner with the Roop family. Those present ranged in age from mere girls to the mothers in Israel of 80 years. At the close of the day of splendid loving service, the president requested Elder Roop to conduct the devo-tional service. With wrapt attention the inspiring story of Dorcas was read and told, with a closing prayer of thanksgiving and praise.

Those visiting at the home of Elder W. E. Roop are Miss Iva Long, and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Englar and daughter, of York, and Mrs. J. M. Prigel and son, of Long Green, Baltimore county.

The Squirrel Shooting Season.

In answer to inquiries, we give the information that according to the interpretation of the squirrel law by the State Game Warden, the season opened on Friday, Aug. 25, and will close on Sept. 30. Then until Nov. 10 it will be illegal to shoot squirrels, but after that period of ten days they may be shot from 10 to Dec. 24, and it will not be lawful to again shoot them until Aug. 25, 1917.

Soda Water in Paper Cups.

From this time on, when you go to a soda fountain to get a cool drink, it will be served in a paper cup. This will be the case throughout the State of Mary-land. The State Board of Health made the ruling recently, and after the first of September "no person in this State shall dispense or sell any soda water or other soft drink to be drunk on the premises unless the same shall be served in a container which shall be immediately thereafter destroyed." That is the way the State Board put it and any one who shall violate this rule shall be guilty of a misdemeaning and shall be guilty of a fire demeanor and shall be subject to a fine not exceeding $500. It is supposed that all soda fountains and the druggists who sell soft drinks will serve their patrons in paper cups after this. The law says that the container must be destroyed at once, and soda dealers are not going to throw glasses away.

So, we have another enforced use of paper, that is already so high in price, and we wonder "what next" will be devised by the germ theorists. By the way, how is it demonstrated beyond question that all paper is immune from germ contagion? And what becomes of the theory that the paper on cigarettes is detrimental to health? And why not compel ice cream to be served in paper saucers, and be eaten with paper spoons?

When we consider the old rags, the cheap waste of various kinds, and the chemicals and other ingredients of paper, and that its manufacture and handling is not specially guarded, we think it is given a bill of health hardly justifiable. The order will cause any amount of trouble, as well as violations, and small dealers are likely to be forced out of business. There also appears to be a contention as to whether or not the order applies to bars, and to small dealers in soft drinks not using fountains; and another question is how all are to secure the necessary fixtures and the paper cups. The State Board of Health has been appealed to, to modify the order in such a way as to make it possible for the regulations to be observed.

----EVERYBODY is looking for an easier job, and more pay, and is prepared to use pressure, if need be, to get it-that is, everybody but the country newspaper publisher, who is in a class of philanthropists by himself, and willing to stay there eternally.

Among other leading public questions, is this-What are our troops staying down in Texas for ? Unless the Mexicans soon "start something," the Presidential campaign will be ended, a lot of votes will be lost, our money will be spent, and nothing to show for it. What is the exact present Mexican situation?

-----Fairness to the Public.

The RECORD predicted, years ago, that eventually the general government must take over the entire "strike" question, and it appears to us that it is now full time that this be done. Strikes are no longer inaugurated because of the oppression of labor, nor because of starvation wages, but in order to get good conditions made better-high pay made highershort days made shorter, and past successes have given boldness and insistence to present efforts.

The present day strike is an exhibition of power, pure and simple, used to gain a desired end, whether justice be attached or not, and irrespective of the consequences to others. Organized labor has largely passed the point of legitimate care and defense of labor, and become a force to prosecute, selfishly, whatever it may please to demand. That this condition must end, or the whole country be turned over to a species of anarchy, must soon be patent to all.

That politics is played over such questions, is detestable. It is a fact, though unadmitted by politicians, that fear of the labor vote prevents legislation fair to all-to employer and employed-and this will continue until there is an uprising of the people in a demand for National protection against unfair efforts of force, which ultimately make the general public the paymaster.

Fair hours and fair pay must eventually be established by legislation, and employers of labor protected, both in their operations and in their capital and property. Investors in securities of corporations are greatly interested in this, and every depositor in a bank, or investor of saving, or purchaster of manufactured or carried commodities, is equally interested in fair pay only for a fair day's Labor, organized or otherwise, is not the only great thing to be considered in this land of ours; or, to put the truth in a broader and more general form, organized force, of whatever character it may be, has no right to lay oppressive burdens, either on one another, nor on those dependent on them. Fairness, not force, should dominate, and the country should be protected from the continuous agitation that unsettles business rules and expectations.

> -0.0-0-The "Poor Devil."

There are times in our experience as as an editor-preacher when we feel like speaking out in blunt English the truth in detail about occurrences, and we are not deterred from doing this because of any fear of consequences from the guilty, but rather through sympathy and regard for the feelings of the concerned innocent who suffer keenly because of occurrences that come about through no fault nor desire of their own. In reality, the cause of the circumstances of which we speak, is usually often the victim of other circumstances, and "letting loose" on him is after all un- Advertisement.

satisfactory policy; for he is the "poor Devil," the sacrifice, the broken vessel, resulting from the real foundry of his sin and weakness, which exists to conspire for the downfall of such.

What does the public care for a wrecked life, more or less? As a rule, it fails to lay the blame where it belongs; gives a few days talk on a "poor Devil" who couldn't control his appetite, congratulates itself that such a person has "gone out," and is very apt to wish that certain others of like class might go the same route-and that ends the interest of the public in the incident, as a rule.

Who makes these "poor Devils?" too often receives scarcely more than a passing thought; but, the question is receiving more-very much more-attention, in these present days. The man who can indulge in an evil, because he is stronger of will, while a weaker brother falls, is all wrong in his defense of the evil. A thing is not right simply because one can overcome it, but is wrong because of its general evil effect, especially when its operation preys on natural human appetites, and seduces its victims gradually.

In the final analysis of things, when, the "unfaithful stewards" of earth are lined up without power of argument, and without "personal liberty" claims to hide behind, exact responsibility for our many 'poor Devils' will be accurately placed, and it will not always be where it is commonly placed now-the circle will be much wider, and as we now mistakenly gauge values, will be much more respectable in appearance and in business and social connections.

California's Fight.

Just now, California is making a strong appeal for its wine-producing business interests, against state-wide prohibition. It is no doubt stating exact facts and figures, showing to what great extent the State would be the loser, financially, if prohibition should be adopted by the people of the State. We have no doubt, too, that those directly interested in grape and wine production there, are honest beyond mere dollars and cents in arguing that California's products should be excepted in the widespread agitation against alcoholic beverages.

The state is not inconsistent, as argument goes, taking as a just basis the protection of home industries. We find the same argument everywhere. In some States it is wool; in others it is iron, copper, sugar, cattle, lumber, grain-any leading thing that is produced in a State. Everywhere there is manifest the selfish interest to protect the money-making industry of the State. It is the tariff question, pure and simple, in local form.

The question of right has a continuous struggle with the question of money getting-a question and struggle as old as the world itself. It is a question that blinds, and falsifies, and fights. It is the old story of self interests against God's interests, and the greatest point of contest between these two great interests in the whole wide world. No wonder we have been having it, these hundreds of years, and apparently no nearer solution than in the beginning. If we could stop it, there would no longer be a debate over whether the world is getting better or worse. If we could stop it, all other sins could easily be run down, cornered and suppressed; in fact, most of them would voluntarily surrender and die. We do not blame California, specialty, in her present fight. She is simply exercising the natural propensity of aggregated interests; not defending wine because it intoxicates, but wine because it brings in money and prosperity-and only incidentally, the

A New Periodical.

A new and very interesting periodical, The Searchlight on Congress, reaches our desk through the courtesy of Dr. Howard A. Kelly, of Baltimore. It is rules and customs, as well as the votes on problem.—Manufacturers' Record. 'pork'' measures, and facts in general not likely to reach the public through ordinary channels. We give below, extracts referring to "undelivered speeches" which get into the Congressional Record under 'leave to extend remarks,'' one of the abuses that has grown into a fixed habit.

"The public supposes, at least the polticians expect the public to suppose, that a speech in Congress bears a legitimate and influential relation to legislation. Quite the contrary is true. Speeches rarely shape legislation. Instead of being the result of deliberation, a legislative act of Congress is much more often the cause of discussion-afterward, and through the questionable medium of the leave-toprint privilege.

For example, on June 19 the House passed H. R. 11707, the Ashbrook widow's pension hill. This was done without a roll call and without debate. All the deliberation" came afterwards.

After the measure had been passed when discussion could no longer contrib-ute in any way to its character, William A. Ashbrook, of Ohio, made the usual request:

all members have five legislative days in which to extend remarks in the Record on this bill. "There was no objection."

'Ashbrook's request that members generalty be permitted to print speeches on this particular bill illustrates a common practice. That is done many times in a Very few important actions are taken which are not followed by such a blanket permission for all members to indulge in undelivered, post-legislative speeches. Think of what this means: The deliberation, if it may be dignified by that name, is the result and not, even in the remotest way, the cause of the legislation to which it has reference.

In his leave-to-print speech, on the Ashbrook pension measure, Barnhart "said," four days after the bill had passed: "Pass this bill and be just to those who are already the victims of war's cruel hardships and thereby assure those of the future that they should not suffer Helvering "said" in his "extended remarks," "Mr. Speaker, coming now to the immediate bill before the House * * * " when the bill had been passed for days.

'Speaking' through the same leave-toprint medium, days after it had been done. Shouse "said:" Let us, therefore, pass this bill, not as partisans, but as patriots—performing an act of simple justice in which we should all rejoice."

There was a striking similarity in several of the undelivered speeches on the Ashbrook widow's pension bill. The poem entitled, "The Brave at Home," was incorporated in no less than three. One statesman used this poetry as an embelishment for his speech without quotation

An unbelievable proportion of matter appearing in the Congressional Record is of this character. It has been estimated that probably half of what goes into the Record is never spoken or read in either House or Senate. But generally leave-toprint speeches are so phrased as to indicate that they actually were delivered. Here is an example, put into the Congressional Record March 23 by Fred A. Britten, of Illinois. This undelivered "extension of remarks" begins:

"Mr. Speaker, I desire to address the House priefly on what I conceive to be a question of ornsiderable importance which has grown out of the recent controversy in the Senate upon certain 'warning' resolutions'

Surely that opening would suggest that Surely that opening would suggest that he was speaking to his colleagues, rather than to far-away constituents. In the next paragraph, Britten "says," "It is not my purpose, Mr. Speaker," etc. In other places—"Those are fine words, Mr. Speaker"—"This is no time for politics, Mr. Speaker." The phrase, "Mr. Speaker." occurs twelve times in that short. occurs twelve times in that short, undelivered speech.

Some leave-to-print statesmen have been known to go so far as to place parenthetical "applause" and "laughter" here and there throughout undelivered speeches. But such instances are now very rare.

Paper Famine and Prices.

The price of paper, which has advanced from 100 to 200 per cent or more, over prices prevailing a year ago, seriously threatens the life of a large number of publications throughout the country and greatly lessens the profits of others. It is doubtful if any other large in-

-----Equal Basis Assessment.

Isn't it remarkable how unanimous is the approval of the naked theory that all assessments should be upon an honest and equal basis? And isn't it also remarkable how many there are who, though they approve the theory, strain every nerve to avoid the practice?

Every man rightfully feels that it is rank injustice to assess another man upon a lower ratio of value than he himself is assessed. And, yet, there are many who, while thinking that way relative to themselves, are perfectly willing to be assessed at a ratio lower than their neighbors.

There are many who are quick to 'kick about somebody else's under-assessment; but who are desperately backward about having their own under-assessment corrected. Of course, this is a perfectly unselfish (?) attitude. It is a most convincing evidence of good (?) citizenship.

We have our share of so-called "good citizens." It is natural to presume that upright citizens of this type will insist upon their assessments being lifted to a just and proper level (?). Do they? How many do you know who are that conscientious? You can put your finger on hundreds who are quick to kick if they think they are over-assessed. But how many do you know who voluntarily call attention to their own under-assessment? If assessment disparities, as between the city and the counties, are a meritorious reason for dissatisfaction and protest, why are not similar disparities as between individuals in the same community matters of equally aggressive protest. No man in Baltimore whose local property is under-assessed, as compared with like property correctly assessed, has any honest quarrel with a county man who manages to escape with a false valuation. Both are guilty of evading the underlying principles of the Maryland Constitution.

No man has a right to seek under. assessment. Every man should expect prices of raw materials have advanced to be properly assessed. That does not the manufacturers of the finished products mean that he should submit to overassessment. It is just as reprehensible for a government to deliberately overassess as it is for an individual to falsify himself into an under-assessment. A fair from the largest dailies to the smallest and honest valuation, according to the weeklies, have been bearing the burden actual worth of the property involved, is the only safe policy for any assessing au-

PROFIT IN LIGHT HOGS.

Large and Heavy Boned Swine Much More Expensive to Fatten.

The standard breeds of hogs as now so well developed are all good. No one can find objections to anything except too large a bone, which compels growers and feeders to take too much risk of disease and death before the hogs can be marketed.

While the big boned and consequently extra large hogs when finished for market are not objectionable in many ways, I have found that they are not as profitable or as safe to grow as light boned hogs that mature and fatten well and are ready for market at from seven to ten months of age. I will give my reasons for advocating the growing and fattening of hogs that are or can be large and fat enough for butchering or marketing at a varying weight of from 150 to 250 pounds, writes W. A. Graham in the Farm and Fireside.

The Berkshire is an excellent hog and, although classed as a lard hog, produces better bacon and hams than most others, while for economical gains it is unsurpassed. Berkshires are fine rustlers, fatten well and usually show a good profit whenever raised. The picture shows head of Berkshire boar.

First, such hogs can be grown cheaper than those of coarse bone, which take many more months to mature; second, one gets rid of them without as much risk from disease and death as is experienced with large hogs weighing from 400 to 600 pounds when well fattened. I am met in this argument by the inquiry, "How is one to feed out all his grain or make hog growing a good money making proposition if he sells his animals so light in weight?" I am able to show the way out of any difficulty arising on this point. It is simply to grow more pigs-double the number if it is necessary, which is easily done.

There was in the past a better demand and a better price for the extra large and very fat hogs. The great quantity of lard they yielded was the main factor in stimulating an extra price a hundred pounds. The quantity of salable meat the carcass of a hog will yield from the butcher's block or the city packing house is the require-

Finally, I must show that it is decidedly in favor of the small boned hogs, which mature and get fat at from six to ten months of age, when it comes to growing them. And this is how such a thing is brought about: The first hundred pounds of any hog is decidedly the cheapest to produce. All hog growers will agree with me about that. Then the second hundred pounds costs more than the first, and so on up to any weight. The last hundred pounds put on an already quite fat hog costs the very highest price because it is all fat that is being put on. So I find the lighter hogs, but fat, are the profitable ones for the average farmer.

ALFALFA FOR SHEEP.

Superior to Other Roughages and Reduces Cost of Fattening.

Alfalfa hay has been found superior to other roughages for sheep because of its palatability and the nutriment it carries, asserts A. M. Paterson, instructor in animal husbandry in the Kansas State Agricultural college.

Alfalfa when of good quality not only answers for roughage, but also serves as a partial substitute for grain and thus materially reduces the cost of fattening sheep.

Alfalfa is primarily a hay and not a pasture plant. While it may be grazed with success in arid regions this practice means certain failure in some of the eastern states. Sheep are particularly severe on alfalfa pasture because they graze so closely. Extreme care should be taken when the sheep are first put on the pasture in order to avoid bloat.

Alfalfa pasture in conjunction with cornfield feeding often gives the best results. Affalfa pasture alone for sheep is too rich a nitrogenous product. It is necessary to feed other grasses or some grain as a supplement.

Foot and Mouth Disease.

The biggest trouble in keeping foot and mouth disease under control lies in the fact that hogs carry it with symptoms which we are not likely to read correctly, says the Farm and Fireside. A common symptom of the disease is sore mouth, and all cases of sore mouth should act as alarm signals. Hogs have infectious sore mouth which is not foot and mouth disease, and sore mouths often accompany hog cholera. Sore feet are not so very uncommon even in the absence of infectious disease. Yet sore feet are a symptom of foot and mouth disease.

POINTS THAT MARK A GOOD DRAFT HORSE

The height of a horse is measured in "hands" (four inches) from the top of the withers to the ground, says Hoard's Dairyman. An ideal draft horse stands over sixteen hands (sixtyfour inches) and under eighteen hands high. If the animal is tall and rangy it is apt to be too light in weight, not wide enough and lacking in quality.

The least that a draft horse should weigh is 1,500 pounds. Above that the weight may rise to over a ton and still be desirable if the animal is not coarse or clumsy. Weight is absolutely necessary for the horse that is to pull heavy loads, for it enables him to get a firm grip upon the ground and to use his muscles to the best advantage. However, when judging an animal you must distinguish between weight of bone and muscle and that of fat. The animal that carries an extreme amount of fat is less valuable for work or for breeding purposes than the heavily muscled one that may be somewhat

The draft horse should have a broad, massive, evenly proportioned form suggestive of weight and great strength. The body ought to be blocky and symmetrical, with well set legs and heavy

Quality is sometimes associated with small, fine boned animals, but the massive draft horse that weighs a ton may show just as much quality as the Shetland pony that weighs two or three hundred pounds. Fine hair, a soft, pliable skin, clean joints and strong, clean bones always mean good quality, and we want to see them on the draft horse. The overfat animal with coarse joints, coarse hair and a sluggish disposition is just as undesirable in the draft horse class as among road horses. In judging the action of a draft horse it is necessary to pay close attention to the animal when at a walk, for it is at this gait that it must do most of its work. See that the feet are advanced in a straight line and that as each one is raised the shoe shows plainly. Sometimes a horse travels with his feet too close together and "interferes," or it may be that as each front foot is raised it is turned outward and "paddling" is the result. Both of these faults are undesirable and should be scored heavily. Every good draft horse should be able to move straight ahead with a smooth, springy action whether at the walk or trot. It is at this time that any lameness is most easily observed. Look out for it.

The draft horse should have a lively, energetic disposition and yet be easily handled. He should be neither sluggish nor too nervous, but just a wide awake, ready to go kind of an animal, free from such vices as biting, kicking, shying, etc.

Value of Diversified Farming.

The successful farmer is the one who has a diversity of crops. It does not pay to farm; neither would it be the best thing to plant nothing but corn. The farmer who makes a success has a few cows, a few hogs, a few head of mares. He plants corn, wheat, oats, alfalfa, Kaffir and other crops for feed. Then if one fails he stands a chance to make something out of some of the Gothic Architecture.

The styles called Gothic, springing from a common source in Romanesque architecture and developing throughout western Europe on differing lines, are in general characterized by the following features, although not all of these will be found in all examples:

Ribbed vaulting, pointed arches, the flying arch and pinnacled buttress, clustered shafting, traceried windows in all but the earliest phases, stained glass, a progressive tendency toward loftiness, lightness of supports and suppression of wall surfaces, a system of decoration of which one element was the emphasis and adornment of structural features and another the use of sculpture and carving of human, animal, vegetable and grotesque forms. controlled by a definite didactic purpose and significance, and finally the use of available materials according to their nature upon principles in part of tive effect.-A. FREAK WAGERS ON RECORD

Offer Proof That Men With Gambling Instincts Will Bet on Anything Under the Sun.

In the "good old days" extraordinary wagers were more common than they are today. In 1670, for instance, London Answers says, Lord Digby staked £50 that he would walk five miles round Newmarket Heath in a certain time, barefooted and stark naked, and had the misfortune of losing by the narrow margin of half a minute, the king and all the court being witnesses of the performance.

In the latter half of the eighteenth century a Liverpool scientist bet a brother scientist that he would read a newspaper by the light of a farthing dip at a distance of 30 feet. The wager was cheerfully accepted. The first scientist merely coated the inside of a shallow wooden box with sloping pieces of looking glass, so as to form a concave lens, placed it behind the farthing dip, and easily read the small print at the distance named. The winning of the wager was witnessed by a Liverpool dockmaster, who ultimately applied the idea to lighthouse requirements and evolved the modern reflected light.

About two years ago, during a yachting trip of members of the Mersey docks and harbor board, A. W. Willmer, a leading Liverpool cotton broker, was presented with a pair of wooden shoes for his birthday, and another member of the board offered to contribute a sum of money to two charities if Mr. Willmer would go to the cotton exchange wearing them. For sweet charity's sake Mr. Willmere appeared on 'change wearing the wooden shoes and the stakes were handed over to him. Perhaps the limit was reached in a certain town in Canada, where a man propelled a green pea with a toothpick for about eighty yards along the pavement within half an hour of the stipulated time and won his wager.

CUSTOM OF CARRYING CANES

Biologists Trace It to Their Satisfaction to the Faraway Days of the Caveman.

A cane imparts a sense of confidence and ease to its carrier. Before the age of boomerangs, bows and arrows, firearms and steel a cane (or cudgel) in the hand was often a matter of life and death when a citizen of the canyons was attacked by an enemy. He who could ply his knotted stick with the best skill was probably the political boss of those days. A certain remnant of this primitive instinct exists today, remarks the Minneapolis Journal.

Some biologists trace the origin of the walking stick back even farther than cavedom. In the arborial stage certain animals were accustomed to the feel of wood and depended on trees for sudden ascension from danger. The ape found it easier to walk on his hind legs with a bowed stick in John the Divine is perpetuated is a his paws. Whether there is any conmassive building flanked by towers nection between these facts and the under the most ideal weather condilike a fortress, and the visitor is shown present use of the cane is, of course, tions, result in little beyond dismal highly theoretical.

> Man today carries his walking stick for three reasons—it is fashionable, it makes walking easier and in the event of attack it may be used as an article of self-defense.

There are many memories and sentiments wrapped up in canes. Collections of them have the same artistic and historical value as any other antiques or curios. If you walk down the evenue with a cane that was once used by the prince of Wales, you probably step a little more proudly. The stick carried by your distinguished grandfather is a relic with which your household will never part.

Plants and Saints.

Certain plants were connected by our ancestors with certain saints, on account of their coming into flower about the time of the occurrence of those saints' days. In this way the snowdrop was called the "purification flower," from its blossoming about Candlemas; the crocus was dedicated to St. Valentine; the daisy to St. Margaret (hence its name marguerite); the cardamine, or lady's smock, to the virgin, its white flowers appearing about Lady day. There was also the Lent lily, or daffodil; the Pasque flower, or anemone; Herb Trinity, Herb Christopher, St. Barnaby's Thistle and the Canterbury bell, in honor of St. Augustine of England.

Outsang the Archangels.

In nearly every town in the land is told the story of its particular bumptious citizen, whose arrival in heaven caused the Supreme One to advise the one on his right to arise and let the newcomer sit down. But this epitaph may be read on a tomb in a cemetery at Madrid: "Hic jacet Juan Pinto, the Spanish Orpheus. When he arrived in heaven he joined his voice with those of the archangels. Scarce had he heard it than the Almighty exclaimed, 'Be silent, all, and allow the illustrious tenor, Juan Pinto, to sing alone."

ALFALFA OUR MOST VALUEABLE HAY CROP

Requires Good Soil For Successful Growth And A Well Prepared Seed Bed.

NICKOLAS SCHMITZ Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

No soil, regardless of type or location in the state, will produce fair crops of alfalfa unless it is fertile; producing at least 40 to 50 bushels (or 10 barrels) of corn per acre in a normal season. No amount of fertilizer applied either before or after seeding will make up for poor land at the start. Moreover, starting alfalfa under such conditions is indeed very expensive. If the land is poor it is far better to wait a few years and grow fertilizing crops, such as cowpeas, crimson clover, soybeans and red clover in the rotation before each money crop. If manure is available the more used the better. In fact, the supply of organic matter is a very important factor in alfalfa production. It is seldom that land very low in humus grows alfalfa successfully. Thus, the problem is one of supplying the proper amount of humus as well as supplying sufficient plant food.

Alfalfa Requires Drainage. Drainage must be good. Alfalfa requires much more complete drainage than do other farm crops. Land inclined to be wet and springy in winter and early spring, although dry enough during the growing season to produce good crops of corn, wheats, oats and grass, is not drained well enough for alfalfa. On such land alfalfa is sure to be killed out sooner or later by heaving due to the frequent freezing and thawing so common some seasons

Abundance Of Lime Needed. Liming for alfalfa is absolutely necessary on practically all Maryland soils-even in the natural lime stone sections. It makes little or no difference what kind of lime is used if the proper amount of each is appliedit is a question of cost and ease of handling rather than the effect upon the alfalfa. The amount of lime to use under average conditions is one ton per acre of Caustic lime, that is burnt stone or lump lime, ground lime or burnt oyster shells. Hydrated lime should be used at the rate of 2,600 to 2,700 pounds, and ground lime stone or ground oyster shells should be applied at the rate of 3,600 pounds to 2 tons per acre.

The best time to apply lime is the season before sowing the alfalfa. If, however, this is not convenient or impracticable, it may be applied just before, or even after seeding, with the assurance of good results and no in-

Well Prepared Seed Bed.

Alfalfa requires more than any other farm crop, a thoroughly prepared seed bed for successful germination and early growth. Sowing alfalfa upon loose, freshly plowed land will, even

An ideal seed bed is one obtained by plowing the land in the fall, then in early spring harrowing it until the surface is smooth and thoroughly pulverized to a depth of about 2 inches. Hence, where alfalfa follows small grain, a clover, or timothy sod, the land should be plowed as soon as possible after the crop has been removed, thus allowing plenty of time for at least one or two good soaking rains to settle the soil well before seeding time. It must be remembered that frequent surface workings between the time of plowing and seeding are absolutely necessary to conserve moisture, kill weeds, and properly pulverize the sur-

GET READY FOR MARYLAND WEEK.

At the recent meeting of the Executive Committee of the Maryland Agricultural Society and affiliated organizations, it was decided to hold the Maryland Week Exhibition this year from November 14 to 18. It is urged by the committee that local granges and farmers' clubs begin to plan at once for exhibits to the state show. It points out that members of such organizations have been in the past among the most active supporters of the show. With the passing years this competition has grown steadily keen er and those organizations or individuals that win laurels at this year's show should be hard at work planning for their part in the big affair. There is no better way for the local grange or club to place itself and its neighborhood on the map than by winning a high place in the club exhibit class. The members who immediately after harvest turn their earnest attention to planning such an exhibit are laying the foundation for a fruitful career as the most useful organization of their community. Neither should they attempt such an exhibit without first holding a local show for the benefit of their own neighborhood. In this work the help of the County Demonstration Agent will be found of the greatest help. There is no work in which he is more anxious to succeed than in developing local spirit and pride in agricultural production.

FARM ANIMALS.

Guard carefully the health of the hogs and poultry. If hog cholera breaks out in the community, get in touch with your County Agent, and prepare to inoculate against the disease. Prompt action is necessary in such cases.

.... Prohibition Vote Upheld.

Judges Brashears and Forsythe have decided that Ellicott City shall vote on prohibition, in answer to an injunction to prevent the printing on the ballots used in the city the necessary words for voting for, or against, the prohibitory law.

The Court did not go at length into the question of the constitutionality of the act, but stated that there was no doubt that the act was constitutional, and cited a number of authorities bearing out this point. The Court also said that it was of the opinion that the general registration books of the Second election district should be used and that with the proper challengers, watchers, etc., a fair election would be held. As to the preparation of the ballots, the Court expressed the opinion that two sets of ballots should be used, one by the residents of the Second election district living within the corporate limits of Ellicott City who are entitled to vote upon this question, and the other by the voters of the Second election district outside the corporate limits, the first containing the question of the submission of prohibition and the second without it.

The Public Buildings Bill.

Politics involves some fine distinctions at times. For example, the omnibus public buildings bill is to be reported soon, but not acted upon until after election. It is held to be bad politics to pass the measure now, but good politics to advance it as far as possible without final action. The idea seems to be to provide in the reported bill for public buildings here, there and everywhere, so that in each case the Congressmen can say to his constituents, "My bill for your new postoffice has been reported favorably," and thus secure about the same local reaction as though the pork actually had been appropriated for, while the general stigma for that much more pork barrel legislation will be averted, until after election, because the bill has not been passed. Individual congressmen first introduce bills for public buildings, and later these are united in one measure. Just to illustrate, Congressman Langley has a bill in for a $75,000 public building at McKee, Kentucky. In 1900 McKee had a population of 106. By 1910 it had grown to 146 Its total annual postoffice receipts are given as $526. Congressman Mondell of Wyoming is asking for $75,000 buildings for three little towns which are all decreasing in population. One of them— Green River—decreased from 1723 in 1890 to 1313 in 1910. In the same period the other two, Newcastle and Sundance, decreased respectively from 1715 to 975, and from 515 to 281.

The Famous McClernan Sanitary All-Steel Kitchen Cabinet!

It is pantry, store-room and kitchen table combined. It is made of high-grade furniture steel, formed on heavy power presses. All joints reinforced and electric-welded (no solder or rivets, screws or bolts), giving it a virtually seamless construction as rigid as a steel casting, yet no heavier than wood.

It has no defects that will develop with use. It cannot warp or shrink or swell. It will not sag or bend. Drawers and doors and slides will not bind and stick. Joints will not open and make cracks for dirt and vermin to lodge in. Mice cannot gnaw into it. Roaches or other pests cannot hide in it.

It is beautifully enameled, inside and out, with a smooth, hard baked, durable, washable, snow white finish, that will not chip or flake. A number of exclusive features go with the cabinet that make its equipment complete. It excels the ordinary wood cabinet in every way and costs very little more. To appreciate the marked superiority of the material, construction and finish of the McClernan Cabinet, you must see the Cabinet itself.

We are showing it now. Come in soon and look it over.

one is reminded that the first savings bank was instituted by a woman-Mrs. Priscilla Wakefield-who inaugurated a bank scheme for the encouragement of thrift among the children of Tottenham toward the end of the eighteenth century. In 1808 Whitbread proposed a national savings bank, but parliament would have none of it. It was not until a Scotch minister, the Rev. Two Trespassers

One of Them Seemed Inclined to Commit Burglary

By ETHEL HOLMES

To women flowers are irresistible. Men sometimes love flowers, but it is questionable if any man ever felt toward them as a woman may feel. To a man flowers may be beautiful; to a woman they may be companions. She may tell them what lies nearest to her heart, and she will derive sympathy from them.

Effie Tisdale was one of those girls to whom flowers thus appeal. In the spring she would watch for the first wild flowers and take long walks in the country to gather them. She would have cultivated flowers had there been any ground for the purpose about her home. Living in a city, she was obliged to go elsewhere for her

One day toward the close of the summer, when the flowers that are cultivated in the open were fast shedding their petals, Effie concluded to take one of her long walks. If she could not find flowers she might at least enjoy a beautiful view she had often looked upon several miles from the town. It was a good day for walking, the air coming out of the northwest and laden with the first crispness of autumn. She stepped out briskly, drinking in the beauties of natural scenery as only one can who has been endowed with the gift of such appreciation. When she came to the view she sought she sat on a stone and feasted her eyes upon it, her whole eing refreshed with it as if she had drunk some delicious beverage. She was looking from an eminence toward a gap between two ranges of hills or, more properly, mountains. In places the foliage had begun to lose its deep summer green. Here and there a light smoke from some house curled up against the landscape. Over all the afternoon sun spread a golden glow. When Effie had feasted her eyes for some time she arose for her return, which she chose to make by another route. At the foot of the declivity beneath her the road turned and led into another which would take her back home. She descended from her perch, her eyes lingering upon the view before her as she walked, passed around the bend and ascended another rise in the ground. On this elevation was a country place. The awnings to protect the windows and the porch from the sun were still in their places; wicker chairs and hammocks had not been taken in.

The gate was open. A gravel walk led up to the house and a conservatory beside it. Most of the plants had been removed from their beds to their glass winter home. The open gate and the gravel walk were inviting. Effie was drawn by the sight of verdure under the transparent house to go in and inhale that delicious odor so enjoyable to lovers of plants. But dare she? That was a question she alone could decide.

She looked longingly for some time into the inclosure, expecting to see some one moving about. Despite the appearance of occupancy, no one appeared. The place had surely not been closed for the coming winter or the porch furniture would have been removed. If sure the occupants had gone away. Effie thought she would venture in; if not, she would refrain.

While she was peering wistfully she heard a step, and a young man in hunting costume and with a gun on his shoulder approached. Effie wondered if he would know whether the coast was clear.

"Can you tell me." she asked. "whether the family living in that house are there now?'

"Why do you wish to know?" asked the young man.

"Because-because-well, I would like to go in and look about-the conserva-

'You don't mean that you are afraid to do so?" the huntsman interrupted.

"It isn't that. If the family were not there it wouldn't be so much like trespassing. "But it would be trespassing all the same, wouldn't it?" "I don't know. There would be no one there to be offended." "Well, such being the case, suppose we go in and have a look." "I will if there's no one except the caretaker.'

"There isn't. The occupants went to the city yesterday, leaving the butler to close up. Come! Let's go in and make ourselves at home."

Effie shrank back. "I only wish to see the plants in the conservatory,' she said. "I don't know if I would be

She felt somewhat anxious, since he had a gun, lest he might shoot some one. But when he reached the house he deposited the weapon, together with his other hunting paraphernalia, on the porch, then continued his way toward the conservatory The door stood open and, deferentially standing aside for Effie to pass in, he followed her. She stood inside, looking around her admiringly.

"How different the air in here from outside!" she said.

"Kind of moldy; something like the inside of a tomb.'

"Not at all like a tomb. It's a home for living plants. The odor is their

This recalled Effie to the situation and she looked anxiously toward the

"Don't be frightened," said the young man, then addressing the flower: "Santhy, just you tell whoever is in charge of this place that I can throw stones even if I do live in a glass

He said this with a pretense of valor that made Effie wonder all the more, though she was a bit frightened at the prospect of a battle with the but-

"Santhy's talking to me again," said the poacher. "He says: 'Take all the flowers you want and give them to the little girl with you. She's just the daintiest, prettiest creature that has ever been in this conservatory. Don't you see all the flowers bowing their heads before her? Look at that aster over there. This sounded very pleasant to Effie and she blushed a little.
"Which one of you flowers," con

With this he began to gather such flowers as were in bloom and turn them over to Effie.

"Is there anything left in the larder?" asked the burglar. "There's some crackers and cheese sir, and a part of a cake." "Bring them out and make a pitcher of fruit punch."

Effie's mind was so imbued with the belief that her companion was a tres passer that it did not occur to her that he had any right whatever to give such an order. Her imagination helped her to hear this order given in a commanding tone. Instead of waiting for the refreshment she took to flight.

Laughing, the young man ran after "Hold on," he said, "and I'll explain. I live here. My mother and sisters have gone to town. I remained for some shooting. Forgive me for imposing upon you. You looked so wistfully innocent when I saw you peering in at the gate that I couldn't help it. Won't you take a bite with me on the porch? The butler's wife will wait

Effie had no mind to accept such an invitation, though she consented to keep the flowers. Her entertainer offered to take her home in his car, but she declined this offer too. Bidding him good day, she set off to walk home. Presently she heard the sound of an auto behind her, and along came the trespasser. He drove the car beside her and finally convinced her that she might as well ride with a strange man as walk while he rode beside her.

When a man determines to get a woman for himself his superior dominant power is a great advantage to him. This man had impressed this girl with the fact that he possessed a daring which was foreign to herself, and, though he had admitted that he had been chaffing her, the impression did not fade. He had followed her in his auto and rendered it absurd for her to be walking while she might be riding. Besides, she would much rather ride with an agreeable young man than walk alone. Thus far it was all resistance on her part. Now they came to a part of the road where it forked. One fork led to her home directly, the other by a roundabout way. The driver turned into the latter road. Effie made no move to induce him to take the other. Perhaps she delayed till too late. An auto is a hard vehicle to turn. It requires much backing. When they reached her home they had ridden many miles. During the following winter a sister of Effie's entertainer called on her, and she was the recipient of flowers from the conservatory on which she had trespassed.

It is generally known that freckles are divided into two classes, those which are constitutional, fading as cooling weather approaches and coming into full glory again in the spring and those that come in the spring and disappear entirely in the winter.

Both are materially checked when preventive and corrective measures are taken before the action of the sun on the skin has full sway.

Simply powdering the skin is not sufficient when going outdoors. It is necessary that the exposed parts be thoroughly massaged with a good cold cream, then dusted with rice powder, which serves as a mask and does not allow the sun's rays to penetrate as

A greaseless cream or a tonic astringent may be substituted in place of the cream, which should contain one or more bleaching agents to act on general principles.

Going into the sunshine wearing a small hat (many of them are brimless this year) certainly encourages freckles. Protect the face by wearing a larger hat and a chiffon veil or by carrying a parasol. All these adjuncts are usually becoming this season, so there is no objection to their employ-

Light freckles are frequently conquered and dark, large ones considerably bleached by the application of lemon juice directly to the skin when it does not prove too irritating and adding a little alcohol when it does.

Where freckles are thickly distributed use a little camel's hairbrush to apply the juice directly to them, allowing it to dry on, to be removed after an hour's time or longer.

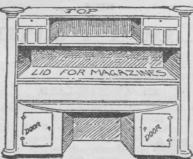

When the skin will permit it, take a slice of lemon and apply to the spots, taking care that none reaches the eyes

How Worn-Out Musical Instrument Was Converted Into Really Useful Article of Furniture.

We had a worn-out cabinet organ made of walnut. My husband and I decided to make it into something useful. We took the stops, keys, etc., out and made six pigeonholes, three on each side. In the middle we left a place for account books. We fastened the lid below, which made a nice place to put magazines. We then took out the pedals and the sides and made two compartments. One side I use for linens and the other for baby's clothes. The Great Civilizer.

In many recent editorial contributions and magazine articles it is conglusively proved-were new proof necessary-that the railroad is the most potent of all factors in the civilization of mankind. Not only in a commercial sense, but in an ethical and religious sense, the railway is a pioneer, for it makes possible the intercourse of nations, the broadening of ideas, the seeking of newer and better things and the escape from the undesirable. In the wake of the railway come better conditions of every sort, for better transportation advantages beget better commercial conditions, and they in turn beget more intellectual development and higher ethical standards. That the railway is built primarily as a business investment does not alter the case. No claim was ever made that the railway was an ethical enterprise, but the fact remains, whatever the motive, that the railway is the handmaid of national progress, commercial, intellectual and religious.-New York Mail.

In the annual lists of earthquakes registered at the Harvard seismographic station occasional shocks occurring in winter are noted as due to "frost cracks"-i. e., the sudden opening of fissures in the ground, resulting from freezing. The late Professor Shaler in one of his lectures mentioned the occurrence of a sensible shock at Cambridge some forty years ago, which he traced to a crack in the frozen ground. An apparent earthquake near Akron. O., probably due to a frost crack, was described in the American Geologist. Vol. 1, 1888, while another, which caused a mild panic at Attleboro, Mass., was reported in the Attleboro Sun of Jan. 23, 1903. Professor Woodworth says that "this idea of frost cracks is very widespread in New England as an explanation of many small shocks coming at a time when the frozen ground is known to have cracked open."-Philadelphia Press.

Discomforts of Coaching Days. Posterity will know nothing of the misery their forefathers underwent in the traveling way, and whenever we hear-which we often do-unreasonable grumblings about the absence of trifling luxuries on railroads we are tempted to wish the parties consigned to a good long ride in an old stagecoach. Why, the worst third class that ever was put next the engine is infinitely better than the inside of the best of them used to be, to say nothing of the speed. As to the outsides of the old coaches, with their roastings, their soakings, their freezings and their smotherings with dust, one cannot but feel that the establishment of railways was a downright prolongation of life .-Surtees (1858).

Theodore Hook and His Chest. Thomas Moore held the post of registrar in the Bermuda government, but he only held it for a few months and left after appointing a deputy. Another famous man of letters, Theodore Hook, held a somewhat similar position in Mauritius, but left suddenly under a cloud, owing to some irregularities with the treasury chest. It is said of this incorrigible joker that on his passage home he was asked by one of the passengers why he was leaving Mauritius and calmly replied that it was owing to "a little trouble with his chest"-Westr ter Gazette.

Fortunes in Farthings.

It is well known that shopkeepers make pounds by ignoring farthings or by giving something for them that is worth far less than a farthing, but where shopkeepers make the pounds banks and the English government make their hundreds of pounds. If a farthing is due from you in taxes you are charged onepence. On the other hand, you are never paid onepence for

The same principle is applied to fractions of pounds. Banks in reckoning interest for themselves call any part of £1 a full pound, whereas in reckoning interest for you odd shillings are left out of account. Thus for a deposit of £99 9s. 11d. you would receive interest on £99 only.

It is amazing how the state profits

by not paying fractions of pence: The government has a special fund in which are placed the fractions of pence withheld in paying dividends on government stock. This fund amounted to more than £150,000 in ten years before being used for other purposes. As far as the government is concerneu, farthings mean a lot.-London An-

He still thought that the ameer was treating a serious matter with less consideration than it deserved, but thought it advisable to say no more on the subject. About a week afterward he was invited by the ameer to ride with him. They rode for some distance outside the town, and they passed gibbet after gibbet. At length Sir Charles said, "Your highness has been busy of late." "Oh, no," replied the ameer; "they are your little lot." Holmes says that there are six people present whenever two meet in conversation-the real A, the real B, A as he sees himself, B as he sees himself. A as B sees him and B as A sees him. The remark comes back when one goes out upon the street and considers himself and the other people who pass. particularly those who seem on the slippery road to success. It is not they themselves who go by: it is what they would have other people think them. They wear their outward aspects like clothes.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Acts xxi, 17-40. Memory Verses, 31, 32-Golden Text, Acts xxii, 15-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

This chapter tells of the completion of Paul's return journey to Jerusalem from his third missionary tour and of some of the happenings there after his return. Our lesson two weeks ago was his farewell to the elders of the church at Ephesus who came to Miletus to meet him. Sailing by the south of the island of Cyprus, they landed at Tyre and, finding disciples, tarried there seven days. We may imagine what blessed fellowship they had in the word and in prayer and that wonder ful farewell on the shore when men, women and children knelt in prayer. Knowing the message of the Spirit through the disciples that Paul should not go up to Jerusalem, they could scarcely refrain from feeling some anxety about him, but they could only commit him to God, as they could not dissuade him from going on (verses 1-6).

Continuing their voyage, we find them next at Caesarea at the home of Philip, the evangelist, one of the seven. whose four daughters did prophesy, and there they tarried many days, and again we may easily imagine the fellowship in the word and in prayer. We cannot think of Paul tarrying any where without speaking of Christ crucified, risen again, ascended, interceding and returning to set up His kingdom and always urging the believers to walk worthy of such a God and Saviour, who had called them to such a kingdom and glory and made them joint heirs with Himself. While at the home of Philip a prophet from Judea named Agabus came and testified strongly by the Spirit that at Jerusalem Paul would certainly be bound and given into the hands of the gentiles. Therefore he was once more urged by the believers not to go, but his reply was that he was ready to be bound and to die also for the name of the Lord Jesus (verses 7-13).

At the time of his conversion the Lord told Ananias that Paul would be called upon to suffer great things, and on this journey to Jerusalem Paul was impressed that something unusual awaited him. Yet nothing moved him, and he counted not his life dear unto himself if only he might glorify God (chapters ix, 15, 16; xx, 22-25; Phil. i 20). When he would not be persuaded even by the brethren at Caesarea to give up going to Jerusalem at this time they ceased pleading with him, saying, "The will of the Lord be done,' and so the company went on their way to Jerusalem, accompanied by some disciples from Caesarea and an old disciple from Cyprus with whom they were to lodge (verses 14-16). When the spirit hindered Paul from going into Asia or Bithynia he yielded and obeyed (chapter xvi, 6, 7). Was he obedient now or somewhat self willed, or was he simply bold and fearless in doing what he believed to be right, knowing that it was part of his calling to suffer for Christ's sake and he must not shrink from it? Subsequent events and the words in verse "that he should not go up to Jerusalem" would seem to indicate that this time he was a bit self willed. But it is one of those things that I am waiting to have cleared up in the kingdom, meanwhile desiring for myself more of his fearless boldness and whole hearted devotion to the Lord.

A glad welcome awaited him at Jerusalem from James and the elders, and as he declared in detail what things God had wrought among the gentiles by his ministry they glorified the Lord (verses 17-20). The record in verses 20-26 concerning the thousands of believing Jews who were zealous of the law and insisted upon circumcision and other customs for Jews who believed is to me another perplexity and does not look like the freedom wherewith Christ sets us free (John viii, 32-36; Gal. v, 1). The suggestion of James and the elders that Paul shall seek to conciliate these custom keeping Jews by joining in this yow with four other men does not seem like the leading of the Spirit or in accord with Paul's stand, "Not as pleasing men, but God, who trieth our hearts" (I Thess. fi. 4: Gal. i, 10). Neither did it work out as they had hoped that it would, but led to a riot which moved the whole city, causing Paul to be cast out of the temple and beaten as they went about to kill him, necessitating his rescue from their hands by the chief captain and his soldiers (verses 27-32).

As the captain could not understand what the uproar was about nor who Faul was nor what he had done, for some cried one thing and some another, he caused him to be bound and carried into the castle. As he was being borne by the soldiers up the castle stairs because of the violence of the people he asked permission to speak to the chief captain, who was surprised that he could speak Greek, and asked if he was not an Egyptian leader of a band of murderers (verses 33-38). As our Lord Jesus was numbered with transgressors, we must not think it strange when we are treated the same way and falsely accused or misjudged. When Paul told who he was and asked permission to speak to the people the captain granted it to him (verses 39. 40). Speaking of himself as a citizen of no mean city, reminds us of our citizenship (Phil. iii, 20, 21) and its privileges and responsibilities.

One View of the Study of Latin.

If one does not study things because they "train the mind," why, then, should one study them? The answer s extraordinarily simple. One studies things because they serve a purpose. pose, but a purpose—a valid purpose, a genuine purpose, not a make believe

Mental discipline is not a valid or genuine purpose—it's a make believe. Meanwhile the number of purposes, of genuine, valid purposes, is simply infinite. Learning to read Vergil is, of course, just as valid a purpose as learning to play a symphony or learning to bake a pumpkin pie. The test is, however, not, Did the student get mental discipline? but Can he read and enby Vergil? Can be play the symphony?

Will some one cat the pie? And because people rarely care to read Vergil, because almost none of the thousands who study Latin ever can or do read Vergil, therefore, in so far as they are concerned, studying Latin has no purpose and cannot be defended as mental discipline.-Abraham Flexner in Atlantic Monthly.

How Leaves Purify Air.

It has been calculated that a single tree is able through its leaves to purify the air from the carbonic acid arising from the respiration of a considerable number of men, perhaps a dozen or even more. The volume of carbonic acid exhaled by a human being in the course of twenty-four hours is put at about 100 gallons, but by Boussingault's estimate a single yard of leaf surface, counting both the upper and the under side of the leaves, can, in favorable circumstances, decompose at least a gallon of carbonic acid a day. One hundred square yards of leaf surface then would suffice to keep the air pure for one man, but the leaves of a tree of moderate size present a surface of many hundred square yards. All other forms of vegetable life act similarly in abstracting the noxious carbonic acid from the atmos-

The Art of Optimism.

Live in the active voice, intent on what you can do rather than on what happens to you; in the indicative mood, concerned with facts as they are rather than as they might be; in the present tense, concentrated on the duty in hand without regard for the past or worry about the future; in the first person, criticising yourself rather than condemning others; in the singular number, seeking the approval of your own conscience rather than popularity with the many. Whoever lives the life of such unselfish devotion to the good of others and of all and lives it in the active voice, indicative mood, present tense, first person, singular number, is bound to find his life full and rich and glad and free-is bound, in other words, to be an optimist.-William De Witt

Tibet is all mountains and valleys. There is scarcely a plain worthy of the name. The mountain passes are at a high altitude and crossed only with great difficulty. The valleys are well populated, but the cities are small and the houses crude buildings of mud walls. The streets are narrow and dirty. Northern Tibet is peopled largely by nomad tribes, while in the south there is a more settled population.

Disaster of Nepotism.

Another name for nepotism is "pull." It puts the right man in the wrong place, where he can wreck enterprises. It also discourages other young men because they see that a rival has an opportunity merely because of relationship, not because of merit. This evil is particularly strong in old enterprises that run through the second and third generations. A man starts a concern, hands it down to two or three sons who vary in ability, and by the time their sons have got good positions all the way through the concern it is well fixed on the high road to ruin. HOG CHOLERA LOSS

Precautions Against Spread of Disease Urged By County Demonstration Agents

Serum Readily Obtained From State Laboratory

Amount Needed Determined by Weight Of Hog - Symptoms Easily Recognized-Annual Loss From This Source Estimated At $300,000.

College Park, Aug. 17 .- Continued reports of hog cholera outbreaks in Maryland bring to the attention of the farmer the fact that our annual loss from this source is estimated to be about $300,000. During the present season, this loss has been considerably reduced through the activity of farmers in taking steps to prevent the spread of the disease. The County Demonstration Agents have been especially helpful in urging hog owners to take the needed precautions against the spread of cholera to their

The symptoms of this disease are easily recognized and every hog owner should take steps to have his hogs inoculated before they are affected. When affected with hog cholera, the animals appear dull and are inclined to lie quietly in the bedding. Several affected animals will lie huddled together. The eyes are at first dull and Later they become watery and the discharges dry up, leaving the lids more or less gummy and glued together. As the disease progresses, they become weak and stagger in walking. The back is arched and the abdomen tucked up. The respirations are short and rapid. The appetite is poor, and thirst, due to fever, is increased. Temperatures vary from 103 to 108 degrees F. The animals may cough and vomit frequently. Loss of flesh is well marked. Red or purple spots or areas, to be seen back of the ears and along the belly, are due to skin hemorrhages. There may be constipation or diarrhoea. The discharges may be thin and show the presence of blood. Evacautions are painful. In some individuals and in some herds, the symptoms may be well marked and characteristic, while in others, they are scarcely noticeable.

The Maryland Agricultural Extension Service is co-operating with the County Demonstration Agents through its specialist in Animal Husbandry, Dr. S. S. Buckley. In regard to taking the necessary precautions for preventing the spread of cholera, Dr. Buckley says, "Keep hogs and pens in the best possible condition. Avoid placing new ly-purchased hogs in the pens with others for at least thirty days. Do not allow hogs to graze where they will be exposed to other hogs or to graze at all near railroads over which hogs are shipped. Report any cases of sickness among the hogs in your neighborhood promptly to your County Agent and secure, if possible, the services of a competent veterinarian."

"Have your swine treated with protective serum, or at least acquaint vourself with the method of protecting hogs against this disease and avail yourself of it as soon as your swine are exposed. Do not regard the serum treatment as such a perfect specific in the immunization of hogs against cholera that all other measures of protection, care and management can be disregarded. The hog owner who wishes to be successful must familiarize himself with hog cholera."

Farmers can secure hog anti-cholera serum at cost by applying to either their County Agent or where an Agent is not employed, by applying direct to the Biological Laboratory, Maryland State Board of Agriculture, College Park, Maryland.

The following table gives the amounts necessary for different weights of hogs:

1 cc per pound weight up to 10 lbs. 10 cc for weights from 10 to 20 lbs. 20 cc for weights from 20 to 50 lbs. 30 cc for weights from 50 to 75 lbs. 35 cc for weights from 75 to 100 lbs. 40 cc for weights from 100 to 150 lbs. 50 cc for weights from 150 to 200 lbs. 60 cc for weights from 200 to 250 lbs. 70 cc for weights from 250 to 300 lbs. 80 cc for weights from 300 to 400 lbs. 90 cc for weights over 400 lbs.

Seeding Crimson Clover

College Park, Md., Aug. 17.-In a circular on Crimson Clover, Nickolas Schmitz, of the Maryland Experiment Station, advises seeding between the middle of July and the middle of September. He says, "Along the water fronts in Southern Maryland and in the southern part of the Eastern Shore, it may be safe to sow as late as the middle of September or a little later, but by far the best results are obtained if seeded a month or six weeks earlier. In the northern part of the Eastern Shore and in the crimson clover section of Harford, Baltimore, Howard and Montgomery counties, it should not be seeded later than September 1st, and preferably four or five weeks earlier. In Carroll county and in almost all the lower altitudes of Frederick and Washington counties and in the Mountain Section, it is seldem safe to sow after August 25th, and it may be seeded as early as July 15th.

Fable of Two Maidens.

Once there were two maidens whosought to catch a nice young man, and it was a false Fart in the eyes of the undiscerning, for the one was exceedingly fair to look upon and dressed stylishly, while the other was plain of countenance.

The pretty girl smiled sweetly on the nice young man and talked to him till she dazzled him with her beauty and charmed him with her wit. The plain one gazed wonderingly at him and made him talk to her of divers things, while she listened, entranced at his wisdom and learning.

He took the pretty girl out riding, to the theater and bought her chocolates and flowers, and all the knowing ones said she had struck a winner, when one day he married the plain girl and took her on the continent for their honeymoon.

The pretty girl had made him very much pleased with her, but the plain girl had gone one better and made him very much more pleased with himself. Moral.-The people who read human nature as they run generally get first to the wire.-Pearson's.

Going Without Food.

Science says that if he can get drinkng water an ordinary man can exist for about thirty days without food. At the end of that time the machinery of the body will not be ruined and can be entirely strengthened back to its old standard by careful feeding. one-quarter of our body weight is fat, and it is mostly this fat which is absorbed as food during the period of starvation. We can absorb and burn up our muscles until 60 per cent of their weight has gone. We can do the same with from 30 to 40 per cent of our liver and digestive organs and 20 per cent of our lungs. Our hearts can lose 10 per cent, and our brains and nervous system can lose 5 per cent. It will thus be seen that the more vital organs, brain and heart, yield least of their valuable substance for the life of the body, while the less valuable substances-fat, muscles, and so on-are consumed first.-New York American.

Novel Methods of Warfare. In ancient history there are two well authenticated instances of wild animals being used by attacking armies. The first is related by Appian when describing the siege of Themiseyra, in Pontus, by Lucullus in his war against Mithridates. Turrets were brought up, mounds were built and huge mines were made by the Romans. The people of Themiseyra dug open these mines from above and through the holes cast down upon the workmen bears and other wild animals, together with swarms of bees. The second instance occurred in England when the Danes and Norwegians were attacking Chester, held by the Saxons and some Gallic auxiliaries. After adopting stoning and boiling water defenses in vain against the besiegers the Saxons threw down all the beehives in the town upon the attackers,

The office of sheik ul Islam-literally chief or ancient of Islam-ranks second only to that of sultan in the Ottoman empire. Its holder is ecclesiastical head of the empire and supreme interpreter of the Koran, with absolute control over all imams, dervishes and religious institutions, but he has judicial and political authority also, being, indeed, first magistrate, privy seal and minister for education. In some respects the sheik ul Islam is superior even to the sultan, for his edicts are irrevocable. The sultan may dismiss him before he issues an edict, but the edict once issued takes automatic legal effect, even though, as happened in the case of Abdul Hamid, it decrees the deposition of the sultan himself.

Just by Good Luck.

A young man who had received the privilege of shooting over the land of a farmer got rather close once or twice to the home grounds. Late in the day he met the farmer. "You've had pretty good luck," said
