BRIEF NEWS NOTES OF GENERAL INTEREST.

Gleaned from the County and State and our Exchanges.

The pronounced drop in the prices of butter, eggs, potatoes and other food products, is believed to be due to the boycott, and to the investigation now going on into the justice of prices.

Baltimore women are about forming a company for the establishment of an animal pet cemetery—dogs and cats. A cemetery of this kind has been in successful operation in London, for some years. ----

The season for killing muskrats opens today, Dec. 15. Numerous arrests were made, along the bay, this month, for violation of the law. In one case a man was fined $10.00 each on twenty hides found in his possession. ----

A Republican Club was organized in Westminster, last week, with the following officers: A. H. McCormick, president; Claude T. Kimmey, secretary; Dr. Glenn W. Horner, treasurer. All Republicans of the county are invited to

The proposed 2½¢ piece is opposed by every two-cent newspaper in the county, and a bill will be presented for a two-cent piece. There will be legislation offered, therefore, for a two-cent, a two and a half cent, and a three-cent piece. Our own opinion is that neither one is popularly needed or demanded.

------Chairman Zouck, of the State Roads Commission, has notified contractors to stop work as soon as the material on hand shall have been exhausted. This action will bring a large-sized protest from sections where roads are torn up and only partly graded, but the order is precau-tionary and looking to future permanency

The immigration bill containing the restrictive literacy test for admission of aliens which has caused three presidents to veto such a measure, was passed by the Senate on Thursday, 64 to 7. The bill as amended in the Senate now goes to conference. It passed the House last session. The President will likely veto it

John Hull, a produce dealer residing in Kingsdale, Adams county, while sawing wood Monday had his left arm accidentally caught in the circular saw and that member was nearly severed from his body. A Littlestown physician was placed in charge of the case but later in the day Mr. Hull was taken to the York hospital

Former Presidents Taft and Roosevelt and all other future pre United States after their terms expire would be given a seat in the House of Representatives without vote at a salary of $25,000 yearly by a bill introduced Thursday by Representative Moore, o Pennsylvania. Candidacy for any poli tical office would automatically bar such men from membership in the House.

Enos D. Myers, the young cashier of the closed Lemaster, Pa., National Bank, and his wife, Cora, made a deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors to George A. Greenawalt, a Justice of the Two fine, highly improved farms n Peters township, a house and lot in Lemaster and a large tract of mountain land in Franklin and Fulton counties are included, the total value being $60,000.

Buckwheat production ran to only 4,480,000 bushels in Pennsylvania this year, a crop about 80% of normal, and one of the smallest crops in years. The 1915 crops, 5,540,000 bushels, averaged twenty bushels to the acre, while this year's was only sixteen. The 1916 season was poor at virtually all times. When the crop was planted the weather was too wet. When it was in bloom droughts came along. Added to the small moisture

The first step of the Department of Agriculture toward a policy expected to reduce prices on food staples was taken last week when the embargo on Canadian potatoes was ordered lifted. Shipments potatoes, it was explained, must be certified by shippers to be as sound as is commercially practicable and to contain no more than 10 per cent. of tubers showing traces of disease. Heretofore, Canadian potatoes were admitted only at designated ports of entry.

-0.63.0-The State of Pennsylvania paid more than $28,000 in bounties for weasels and an almost equal amount for the scalps of wildcats, foxes and minks in the first year of operation of the bounty act of April 15,1915, according to a report made to the Governor by the State Game Com-Thousands of dollars were saved to the state treasury through run-ning down of wholesale frauds. The bounties are paid from proceeds of the hunters' license act. The State paid $6 bounty each for 792 wildcats; $2 each for 4748 gray foxes and $1 each for 4014 The bounty for the weasels was

Rev. Theo. D. Mead Dead.

Rev. Theodore D. Mead, former pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic church, Taney-town, but for the past twelve years engaged in pastoral work in the suburban section of Baltimore, died on Monday, at St. Joseph's Hospital, Recently, he fell into one of the excavations for the new school building connected with his church, receiving a broken leg, and the shock of the fall, connected with his poor condition of health, hastened his death.

Father Mead had recently been engaged in making extensive building improvements in his parish. A handsome rectory was finished about a month ago, and a new school building is under way which will be one of the finest in the city when completed, and the foundations have also been laid for a new church. Father Mead was greatly interested in all of this work, and although ill, often expressed the hope that he might see the completion of his work. Father Mead completion of his work. Father Mead was born in Connecticut in 1842 and came to Maryland when young. He was ordained a Priest—47 years ago, and served in various parishes in Maryland, coming to Taneytown from Hancock. He is survivel by one sister, Mrs. Hilburn, of Baltimore. Funeral services were held on Thursday morning.

were held on Thursday morning.

Father Mead was jovial, popular and sympathetic by nature, and was highly esteemed, not only in Taneytown, but wherever he was known. He visited here several times a year, and always called at the Record office, as well as on a long list of parishioners and friends.

-----Will Subscription Price Advance?

We are frequently asked, "Will the subscription price of the Record be advanced?" To all, we make the reply that at present we do not know, and make no promises. The Record, of course, will be guided by what the other county papers agree to do. If it is a question of "standing it," the RECHED will "stay" as long as any of the others at the $1.00 rate, which is a losing proposition, at present, for all. What the osition, at present, for all. What the new year will develop, we are unable to even venture a guess at this time.

A good way to help keep the rate at $1.00, would be for our friends to send us new subscribers. The expense of producing a weekly paper is practically the same for 1500 or 1600 copies as it is for 2500. The difference in the cost of 52 sheets of paper with ink, presswork and mailing added and the $1.00 price, leaves a small margin of profit, which, if it could be sufficiently maltiplied by new sub-scribers, might make even a $1.00 paper profitable now, or at least self-sustaining. At the present standard of costs, every weekly in the county needs a $1.50 rate, and all their present subscribers, to make the business pay.

-0.63.0-Complaints From Correspondents.

This week we received complaint from two of our best correspondents that we occasionally add to their letters, items not sent in by them, and to this we had to plead guilty. One complaint says:

"I never give the social calls of neighents of the bors, and as the call (mentioning one) was some distance from here my own folks here might wonder that I never mention them nearer home. occur to me that a call, or to take a meal with a neighbor, is any real news. Par don this, for I mention it only because some might censure me for being partial."

Our correspondent is right. These little Sunday and week-day visits are not real news, and we do not care for them; and yet, some people do seem to care for them, and if they are not given space we are apt to offend, which we do not want This is one of the many problems of the "easy job" of running a country newspaper. Now, what shall we do about newspaper. Now, what shall we do about it? Offend our good correspondents—or those who who want the visits printed : Perhaps we will have to run a sort of free-for-all department.

GERMANS WANT PEACE BUT WILL CONTINUE WAR

Proposals Made Through Neutrals to the Entente Allies.

At a special session of the German Reichstag, on Tuesday, Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg announced that peace proposals had been transmitted to the Entente capitals through representatives of the United States, Spain and Switzer-land, and the announcement was received with great applause.

The specific terms of peace are not revealed, as yet, consequently little can be said of the real prospects of peace; but it is generally thought that the offer is a tactical one, for political effect, rather than one that can be seriously considered by the allies by the allies.

The German address reviews briefly the events of the war, places responsibility for it on the enemies of Germany, and alludes in a very complimentary manner to the achievements of Germany and her helpers, as well as to confidence in their ability to carry on the war to a final and fully successful termination.

In Washington the news was received wistly and without official comment.

quietly and without official comment, though it is generally understood that this government will gladly act as one of the arbiters for peace, if there be any chance of accomplishing it. The general comment of the English and French press is of a scoffing character, alleging that the German movement, so far as made known, could not be accepted. However, the governments are not disposed to make any hasty reply, and in the meantime will not welcome any plan by the United States, or any other neutral nation, which may have a tendency to interfere with their own policies or interests.

National Prohibition Progress.

Washington, Dec. 14.—The liquor issue was thrust suddenly upon Congress today when the House Judiciary Committee re-ported the nation-wide amendment to the Federal Constitution at almost the same hour that the Senate agreed to take up for a vote rigid prohibition for the District of Columbia.

The action of the Senate in determintng to vote upon a dry Capital was not surprising, but the action of the House committee in reporting out the nation-wide amendment caused a distinct shock in those quarters which oppose nation-wide prohibition or which think this to be an inopportune time to force issues

The committee stood 12 to 7 in favor of passing the measure along to the House. Individual members of that body stated frankly during the afternoon that they were tired of bearing all the burden of the fight for and against a nation-wide amendment. As long as they held the necessary resolution in their committee files, the proponents confined their pressure to the committeemen. Now that the measure is on the House calendar, the committee feels that it has placed the responsibility for its

or its defeat where it properly belongs. From the best information available tonight it seems difficult, if not impossible, to pass the anti-liquor amendment. gress is required in order to submit it to the states for ratification. It is just possible that the House may give the twothirds vote, but the Senate probably will not permit the amendment to come to a vote in that body. If pressed it would occupy so much time in debate that a number of the appropriations bills would fail to come up, the leaders insist.

Proceedings of School Board.

At the regular meeting of the Carroll County Board of Education held in the office of the Board, on Wednesday, Dec. 6th, 1916, all members were present. The meeting was called to order at 10.30 a. m. After the reading and approval of the minutes of the previous meeting the reg-ular order of business was taken up. The presentation and passing of bills was first taken up. The bill for $36.00 rent for land in Manchester adjoining the school property, was discussed and it was moved, seconded and passed that Superintendent Unger and Commissioner Allender be appointed a committee to investigate this matter.

The applications for contributions from

The applications for contributions from the School Board to the following schools: Alvah J. Leister, Shiloh school; U. H. Shipley, Sandy Mount school; C. M. A. Shildt, Hobson Grove, were discussed, and it was moved, seconded and passed that each school should be given $10.00 to be added to the amount which they had already collected to be used for the purpose intended.

The bills presented by Nicodemus, of Mt. Airy, through Mr. Erb, for the replacing of the heating plant in a proper state for efficient service, after due consideration, were turned over to the Counsel to the Board for further consideration and to be paid upon his order.

In connection with the approval of bills the matter of purchasing a light auto truck was taken up, and it was decided by the Board that this matter be deferred until the next Board meeting.

The question of Mr. Morelock's salary was next brought before the Board, and it was moved, seconded and passed that Mr. Morelock's salary be $900.00 pro rata. The adjustment of Mr. Kolb and Mr. Jenkins' salaries was next discussed and it was decided by the Board that Mr. Kolb's salary for the months of September and October should be $950.00 pro rata, and Mr. Jenkins' salary for the months of September and October should be $1300.00 pro rata. A raise in salary of $50.00 for Mr. Reese was next brought up and was disproved by the Board.

The matter of spouting for Deep Run was brought before the Board and was approved. The renting of the White Rock church was then discussed, and as the renting of this property at $6.00 per month beginning Dec. 1st, 1916, for the remainder of the school year, being the cheapest thing to do, it was approved by

The renting of property for Slack's at $5.00 per month for the balance of the school term, was approved by the Board. The renting of the church at Stony Ridge for $6.00 per month was next brought up and was approved by the Board.

Continued prevalence of diphtheria at Mechanicsville was next discussed and the motion of burning the books was disapproved by the Board.

The matter of purchasing chairs for the Westminster High School and other schools was brought before the Board and it was moved, seconded and passed that Supt. Unger be given authority to contract with the furniture store as he sees fit.

The action of the State Roads Commis sion relative to our property at Pine Hill moved, seconded and passed that this and Commissioner Feeser with power to

The establishment of a teachers' training course in the Westminster High School was brought up for discussion and it was moved, seconded and passed that this matter be left in the hands of Supt. Unger for further investigation.

The matter of Pennsylvania children attending our schools, was again brought to the attention of the Board, and action in regard to the same was suspended until the next meeting. No other matters being up for discussion the Board adjourned at 4 o'clock p. m.

Lord's Day Alliance.

The Lord's Day Alliance of Maryland is strengthening its organization in the state by securing co-operating committees in the counties. Rev. L. B. Hafer, of Taneytown has for several years been vice-president of the organization for Carroll county, and the committee for this county has been appointed. The following persons have been selected to represent the respective districts: Taneytown, Rev. L. B. Hafer; Uniontown, H. B. Fogle; Myers, G. W. Yeiser; Woolery's, Lester S. Patterson; Freedom, Edw. Mellor; Manchester, H. F. Leese; Westminster, George Mather; Hampstead, E W. Belt; Franklin, Arthur M. Zile; Middleburg, E. H. Sharetts; New Windsor, Geo. P. B. Englar; Union Bridge, John F. Danner; Mt. Airy, Frank G. Dorsey; Berrett, Frank Brandenberg.

----The New Wall Papers.

Some of the hitherto popular colors and shades in wall paper patterns do not figure at all in the new fall styles and patterns. Reds and other of the darker shades do not appear in the samples now being shown. Blacks and whites will remain in favor in next season's goods. Certain shades of gray and tan will also be used, but the new styles are leading more toward the lighter tones. The price of raw colors has risen greatly, and many quarters at which anyone desiring agrishades are unobtainable.

The absence of these dark-colored papers will result in better lighted rooms. The reds, browns and other dark papers have the expensive habit of absorbing the light. Statistics show an enormous wastage through misdirection of light and that they are quick to grasp an idea and a lack of intelligent diffusion of the illuminant. White cartridge paper reflects 80 per cent of the light, while dark brown reflects but 18 per cent, blue-green but 12 per cent, and black five-tenths of 1 per cent. With lighter colors on our walls, there will be a vast improvement in our greater notice of Carroll county.

THE COUNTY AGENT TO DEVELOP AGRICULTURE

What the Office is, and What it Proposes to do.

The following letter to the press of Carroll county explains itself. The movement seems to us to be in line with agricultural progress and development, and to deserve the full co-operation of our farmers and all allied interests. The Record will try to give the innovation publicity as often as it is considered desirable.—ED.

"When a county first secures a county agent, many persons naturally ask why an agent is employed, and what he is supposed to do. So, in this, my first talk to the people of the county through the papers of the county, I will try to explain how the position of county agent came to be formed and the nature of the work an agent is to do.

The first settlers in this country were The first settlers in this country were farmers, and, until about 1850 there were few large cities and little manufacturing. The great majority of the people lived on the farm and farming was the honored occupation. But about that time a great commercial age developed; mining, manufacturing and railroading were the great things, and farming, the chief business of this distinctly agricultural country, was of this distinctly agricultural country, was left for those with too little education or initiative to make a living at anything

The farm boys thought farming drudg-ery and flocked to the towns and cities to become bookkeepers, railroaders, law-yers and doctors. Town and city people considered the country a good place to get something to eat and to get away from it as soon as possible. Farmers rather pitied themselves, and anyone who tried to apply brains and business methods to farming and make anything of it but plain hard work, was considered a dreamer, or book farmer, and had little or no attention paid to him.

The past twenty years, however, has seen the tide swing back to the land, and now farming is like a popular song. Everyone is thinking about it. No amount of education is considered too much to he used on it. It is a worthy occupation for the wisest and the strongest. The sons of farmers who intend to farm, like the sons of doctors who intend to practice medicine, are sent off to school to study farming. Town and city people have said and written so much in the pastfew years about their longing for the country that, 'back to the land' has become a slogan. Farmers, now, instead of pitying themselves, buy an expensive automobile, rare back and take the whole road, and those men or women who farm with brains get men or women who farm with brains get their name in the paper most every week for they have produced wheat that aver-ages thirty bushels, while the average for the United States is 13, alfalfa for their own and their neighbors cow, a hen that laid 300 eggs in a year while the average hen lays less than a hundred, and a cow that gave 55 quarts of milk in one day, 31,000 lbs. or 3,827 gals. in a year, while the average cow produccs about 3,000 lbs. At the present time everybody wants to either farm or do something to get his name in the pot. The most obscure weekly paper prints quotations from bulletins and authorities on agricultural topics and our President recently said, must have greater agricultural produc tion." So, following the trend of the times, Congress recently turned its attention to the farmer, and, after careful investigation and consideration, decided that since the Federal Government and the individual states have been spending great sums of money annually for the past ten to fifty years, investigating agricultural problems, the need of the times is to aquaint the farmer with these results. The county agent idea, however, did not originate in congressional halls, among farmers. Some counties in the corn belt have had agents for ten years or more, the county itself providing all the necessary funds. A few counties in this state, in cooperation with the Government, have had agents for five years or more, and our State Leislature at its last session proved itself awake to the farmer's interest by meeting the government's offer to pay half the expense of agents by appropriating $21,000 annually for placing an agent in each county in the state, and agents have already been selected in all but four counties.

The duties of a county agent is to be the agent of the State Experiment Station, and Agricultural College, and United States Department of Agriculture in demonstrating to the farmers what has been learned about their problems. The agents have found that they can accomplish more by confining their efforts to a few definite needs of the county each year than by going indiscriminately from one thing to another. The things to be done during the year are usually decided upon at a conference of representatives of the organizations of the county, such as the farmers' clubs, the granges the newspapers, the schools, and the churches. together with representative farmers of the different sections, the state county agent leader and the county agent. The agent gets the plan of work carried out by getting farmers in each section to act demonstrators; that is, to grow on their farm under his direction the particular crop which is wanted demonstrated in that community, and by teach ing the public what these demonstrations are to show by speaking to the organizations, by writing weekly news notes for the papers, and by visiting the individual cultural information may apply, and by and by being at the service of the people of the county at all times.

Personally, I appreciate being the agent of Carroll county. The neat, well-kept farms show that the farmers are efficient, capable of putting it into execution, and with the help and sympathy which I feel sure they will give and show toward this work I feel certain that we can do our share toward greater production and make the people of the state take even Disposal of Cholera Hogs.

Is it right for farmers having hogs that die of cholera to send them to a place where they are made up into tankage, beef scrap and fertilizer? Is it right for the manufacturers of these goods to sell them back to farmers as feed for hogs and poultry, or to be spread on the ground? I have known of such hogs to be hauled over the public roads for a distance of 8 or 10 miles. Isn't it possible to spread the disease in this way?—Reader, Dan-

It is unlawful to dispose of cholera hogs in the way described. Such transportation of the carcasses would be almost certain to spread the disease, and tankage and fertilizer made from such carcasses would be subject to suspicion at least. Every outbreak of cholera should be reported at once to the State Live Stock Sanitary Board at Harrisburg, Pa. A quarantine would then be established and the farm where the outbreak occurs would be safe-guarded against future losses, and the entire community protected against a spread of the disease. Reporting such outbreaks ought to be regarded as a public duty.—Penna. Farmer,

Who is the Middle Man?

We hear a great deal, these days, of the iniquities of the "middle man," so it might be well, before condemning him too much, to find out just who he is, and what he does. Generally speaking, he is in that space between the "producer and consumer," two other individuals of whom we hear a great deal as being more or less badly treated by this man in the middle-this superfluity-this fellow who gets most of the blame for high prices, and ought to be abolished.

Let us also see whether we can find out just who "producer" and "consumer" is. In order to do so, we will have to do a bit of explaining. For instance, it is pretty clear that as all people must eat, to live, all people are consumers-of food products. The farmer is called the producer of these products, because he is closest to the soil from which food products chiefly come, directly or indirectly. This would be a plain statement of just who the two classes are, were it not for one big fact; these consumers must produce something, in order to get the money with which to purchase the farmer producer's food, and without which the business of producing would be wholly unprofitable.

The farmer, as a matter of clear fact, is not a pure producer—he does not create anything. Before he can produce, he must consume, or use the products of other producers, such as labor, fertilizers, machinery, buildings. He also depends on the Great Giver for favorable seasons, and on scientific research and experiments; in fact, his producing depends on a wide variety of helps that he does not aid in producing. Consequently, he is a "middle man" -there is no escaping the

These consumers of food must necessarily be producers of some commodity of value. They may work for some big corporation-as a railroad company-draw their wages, and buy food. They too are "middle men." There is the mining industry-for instance, coal mining. We speak of mine owners as coal producers. In reality, they are in the same position as the farmer-merely owners of the raw product, and nearest to it-the first developers of one of the products of the earth. Mine owners would have a worthless investment, like the farmers, were it not for the fact that they can, by using "middle men," and the products of others aid in the development and marketing of their own coal product.

A coal mine owner can not place a ton of coal in the cellar of a customer 100 miles away. A farmer's wheat is not fit for bread until it goes through somebody's mill. The feeder of cattle can not deliver a steak, or roast, to the consumer's kitchen. The lumber dealer and the iron producer must pass his products through numerous hands before they can be assembled into a labor-saving piece of machinery.

Speculation could be continued indefinitely, and all sorts of combinations worked out. As a matter of fact, nearly every class-perhaps every class-of people in this world are both producers and consumers, and are in between other producers and consumers. Why, the term "middle man," as one of disparagement, is totally misplaced; in fact, there is no difference between classes, for all are WORKERS first, and producers and consumers afterward.

position of the "middle man." as we discuss him, is when he is too numerous at a certain place; and this condition can happen as well with the regulation consumer and producer, as we commonly know them. When we have over-production, or too little consumption, or too much consumption, there is sure to be trouble, and what can happen at both ends can happen in the middle. But, to be a little more definite on the food question. The problem is to get it to the consumer in the quantity and condition in which the consumer wants it. ·0-[J-0-Disguised Advertising.

Every newspaper office has its waste basket enriched by the product of publicity departments of numerous business concerns, or interests. Much of this matter is of considerable real interest, as well as containing a large percentage of free advertising, its general object being to "put one over" the country newspaper man who is supposed to be hungrily waiting, every day, for something to come along with which to fill the yawning pages of

Really, the scheme is very uncomplimentary to the perceptive qualities of the said country newspaper man, as well as contrary to the rule he has that advertising is a thing to be paid for. This free publicity effort usually comes as a sort of string, or encumbrance, to real business, and the additional service is asked as a favor, or as a sort of 'good measure' proposition, in consideration of previous paid for business.

Propositions of this kind are like a man going to a warehouse for a ton of coal, and asking for a sack of flour to be thrown in; or of paying a farmer for a horse, then insisting on the gift of a pig. Just why the manager of a newspaper should be expected to fall for these extra donations, is difficult to understand. unless it is because of the well known generosity and "easiness" of the fraternity.

These polished news-advertising writeaps are not confined to any one thing, or class, but extend pretty well over the whole range of the country's activities. We have had them from railroads, machinery firms, the lime business, corn boosting, electric service, lumber interests, use of dynamite, patent medicine concerns, automobile factories, real estate schemes, insurance companies, and many others not now in mind. Every day-almost every mail-brings fodder of this kind to a newspaper office, so that the waste-basket gets fed, very often, as a mechanieal act.

It can readily be seen, we think, that it is utterly out of the question, even if so disposed, for the editor of a really newspaper, to use such material, free. But, why should he? Everything that goes into a newspaper costs time and money. Every paid service turned out by a newspaper is a "value received" service-a transaction complete in itself, and no more subject to an additional gift than a transaction in any other line of business.

Somehow, it seems that the mental attitude of the public toward a country newspaper is different from its attitude toward other lines of business. Perhaps crystalizing in due course. A question it is because of a sound of charity con- which we hope will be decided upon its nected with the word "subscription;" or perhaps it is because printers are often disposed to "cut under" and fight each other. Whatever may be the cause, there is a disposition to regard a newspaper office as an institution to "get as much out of" as possible, and in default of getting it, to "pay it back" by cutting off its revenue, in not "subscribing," or by some other means. Evidently, the Tablets. These tablets also improve the attitude of the public is wrong; but then, waste paper is worth 75¢ per 100.

----Says Roosevelt Did It.

A California woman, in a letter to The Christian Work, N. Y., commenting on the extreme attitude of Col. Roosevelt with reference to what constitutes a proper "preparedness" policy for this country,

"You may be interested in knowing that it was largely his war talk on the Pacific Coast that turned the voters to Wilson. Almost every woman I know was a Hughes woman until Mr. Roosevelt began talking. Without exception we all voted for President Wilson. It was his constantly reiterated remark, "There is something that is worse than war, and that is moral cowardice." That may be very well, but he said it with too much unction. Anyway, Mr. Roosevelt left the impression, whether he meant it or not, that the brave man is the fighting

-0-0-0-Feminine Notoriety

The spectacle of a lot of "equal suffragists" interrupting the President in the House of Representatives last week, while delivering his address to Congress, by the unfurling of a banner, "What will you do for votes for women," is difficult to characterize in temperate language, especially as the thing was deliberately staged, and evidedtly enjoyed as a success. We think it proper to say that as the object was likely to gain notoriety, the act itself was, in fact, notorious,

Votes for women is a question deserving real consideration. It is not a thing to be bullied into, nor to be conferred merely as a wanted fad. Acts like the one referred to, will not only not advance the cause, but will give it a backset, and whoever officially originated it deserves to be reduced to the ranks. The Ellicott City Times in its comment on the act says:

"The justice or desirability of "votes the consideration of the propriety of the demonstration made by some women in the halls of Congress last week while President Wilson was in the act of reading his message to the nation's lawmakers. There are times for all things. If dignified and deferential deportment is ever commanded by any circumstances in the course of human existence, we would imagine that on the occasion of the President's personal presentation of his solemn recommendations to the distinguished representatives of all the people of the United States, recommendations embodying only serious and long studied considerations of questions vitally affecting the destines of a hundred million people, delivered at the official time, at the official place and in the official manner, would be the last place and time women of education and refinement would care to be seen demeaning themselves in such a way as to require a cordon of men to be thrown around their body to prevent further enterprise in the emula tion of a cross roads political campaign manifestation. They appear to be proud of their accomplishment in circumventing the of-ficers of the law and staging a sensation that at least could do little but personally advertise the perpetrators as somewhat violent fanatics and to fill most of the rank and file of their legions with apprehension. If they are proud of the fact that they invaded the dignity of the halls of Congress, outwitted the detectives and guards, forcefully preventing some of them from performing their sworn duties, in order to break one of the most solemn ceremonies of the American people, they exhibit a spirit of selfishness, a lack of patriotism, an indifference to American ideals and a ghastly disregard for the rights of others, that we fear, will hardly involve the commendation of an intelligent electorate.

Women Suffrage is something that is merits and demerits when electorates are called upon to so decide. But God forbid that votes are ever given to women in the halls of Congress on December 5.' ...

An Embargo?

Just now there is a great deal of foolish agitation in some quarters in favor of placing an embargo upon wheat and other food products and thus prevent their exportation to foreign countries. However justifiable such an act might be under imaginable conditions it cannot be said truthfully that the present situation calls for any such inconsistent and unjust Almost every woman I know action. While it is admitted that prices of all cummodities are high-too high in many instances-they are due to abnormal and temporary conditions, and are sympathetically resultant with each other.

An embargo on food stuffs would be illogical for several reasons: First, because the food supply of our country is not dangerously short; second, the Federal and state governments, together with Here is an utterance that must be ac- business men's associations, are conductsome votes for Hughes by his speeches. demand would be as unfair as for the It is quite unprofitable, so far as the farmer to arbitrarily limit production; under the strained conditions, and which also advocated a stringent and exclusive immigration act: sixth, it would be highly inconsistent for our government to withhold food from the unfortunate, starving people of Europe while still permitting the exportation of munitions of war for the purpose of killing each other.

Since, owing to circumstances, the greater part of our exports go to the allies rather than to other ports as well, it is possible that part of the agitation in this country is born of a desire to limit the supplies of the allies. It must be remembered that a part of the cause of high prices is due to a shortage of many crops, and that farmers are not proportionately profiting by the high prices since the production of the lessened yield cost nearly as much as would a bumper crop. Before we talk of placing an embargo let us learn to save and make the best use of what we have. There is no question but that if everyone would learn to economize and stop the waste of necessities, it would go a long way towards reducing the high cost of living. We urge our readers to protest against the placing of an embargo on farm products and we believe that the better sense of the country as a whole will realize it would be unjust and will join in the protest .-Penna, Farmer.

The Art of Doing Without.

As time goes by the virtue of self-denial s more and more apparent, and the art or women' is in no wise comingled with of doing without more needed. The social fascinations of today, the craze for dress, amusements, recreation, automobiling-all the glitter and attractions of a materialistic age-call loudly for self control, self denial and careful living. And those who try to keep pace with the crowd set a pace that kills.

No man ever succeeds who does not learn to do without. The very basis of religion, of good conduct, or good character lies in the virtue of self control. It is the highest evidence of self mastery and the foundation of all social and busi-

Did you ever stop to watch a crowd around a street fakir selling some article of household use—a potato peeler, for instance? How he persuaded the men that their wives could not peel potatoes without it, found ready purchasers, who laid down their quarters, marched home and presented the article with pride and potatoes the same old way the next day.

We listen to argument. We persuade ourselves. We are easily convinced that we need, in fact must have, many things that we might well do without. We see things in the shop windows that appeal. We read alluring ads until our resisting power breaks down. We go bargain hunting until we are loaded down with things we cannot use. "I like to go shopping," said a woman one day, "I see so many things I do not need. And that is a finer art than buying a lot of things I do not need.'

Doing without may be difficult at times, but it gets you somewhere. All successful careers are built upon it. Saving money and doing without is a painful process, but the results are mighty pleasant. Sacrifice was never easy and self denia never popular. But you can't have all the big things of life if you insist upon having thousands of little things all the time. The boy who want a bicycle and the like, but he knows his wheel will give him pleasures that will over-balance the little sacrifices. Saving for a purpose is not difficult, and self denial for larger pleasures becomes a joy. It is easy to follow the line of least resistance—to do the easy thing; to follow the crowd. But following crowds brings you no desirable

It is a splendid achievement—this doing without—and few learn it. But the structure it builds is a lasting one and beautiful. And the pitiful fact is that if you do not do without now, there may come a time when you will have to do without, and then it will be too late. That is the lesson of the poorhouse and the breadline. And as sure as you practice the sin of self gratification and ignore the virtue of self control, listen to the lure of the shop window, the amusement column, the appeal that is on every hand to spend, and let yourself go, you too will join a crowd that is sliding down a hill to nowhere only to get a hard bump at the bottom, when it is too late to mend and wake up to vain regrets. Get the thrift habit now-and thrift is just doing without, until doing without becomes a habit that has untold blessings in store for those who practice it .- (American Bankers' Association.)

DAIRY and CREAMERY

POINTS THAT MARK GOOD DAIRY ANIMALS

Form of Parts That Indicate Heavy Milk Production.

[Prepared by United States department of agriculture.]

In addition to the general form which marks the dairy type, there are individual parts of the cow which indicate her ability to produce a surplus of milk. Following is a description of the more desirable form of the parts denoting heavy production:

Head.—The heads of the male and female are much the same, except that greater size and heaviness are expected in that of the former. As a whole the head should have a clean cut outline and be free from any coarseness of bone, flesh or skin. In the bull score card more weight is given this part than in the cow score card, which is owing to the fact that the general character of the bull and his masculinity are evidenced in his head. A strong, muscular muzzle and jaws indicate ability to handle large quantities of feed. The form and quality of face, forehead, eye and horn indicate the nervous energy and refinement essential to productive ability.

Neck.—The necks of the cow and the bull are radically different. That of the cow should be of medium length. slender, free from flesh and loose skin. It should be small at the junction with the head and should join the shoulders smoothly. The neck of the bull should be of medium length, small at the head and swelling into a prominent crest. The crest in the bull indicates masculinity and should be both high and broad.

Fore Quarters, Withers.—The withers should be sharp, the ends of the shoulder blades fitting close to the spinal processes and ending some distance below the top of them. This junction should be so smooth as to form a straight line from the top of the spinal processes down the shoulder blade to its junction with the foreleg.

Body, Capacity, Back.—It is very important that there be great strength in this region, as the back supports the weight of the abdomen or barrel.

Ribs.-Flat ribs are found to be associated with the wedge shaped, lean appearance of the dairy animal as compared with the round ribs of the beef animal.

Barrel.—The barrel in both the male and the female should be broad, deep and full and well held up with well as A good sized barrel indicates large capacity for digesting feed one of the essential functions of the dairy cow. Although the barrel should be large, it should not sag away from the backbone into what is popularly called a "pot belly," leaving loose skin in the flank, nor swing when the animal walks. This indicates an object tionable weakness in the abdominal muscles, which should hold the barrel close up to the backbone.

Loins.—The loins are that portion of the backbone just in front of a line drawn between the hip bones and extending forward to the beginning of the short ribs. The loins should be broad and strong. A sag or drop in this section of the back indicates weakness. A lack of width in this region is caused by short processes on each side of the backbone.

Hind Quarters, Hip Bones.—The hip bones should be wide apart and prominent.

Rump.-The rump should be long. wide and level. The length is measured from the hips to the pin bones. The rump is level when a plane passed through the top of the hip and pinbones is horizontal. A high pelvic arch is not desirable. The pelvic arch most careful attention. is inclosed by the spinal column and the pelvic bones. The joints of this arch constitute the hip and pin bones, and this region contains the greater part of the reproductive organs in which the calf develops. It is asserted by some breeders that a short rump is associated with a short udder and a sloping rump with a sloping udder.

Pin Bones. - These bones are the parts of the pelvis which are on each side of the tail. They should be prominent, widely spaced and on a level with the hips. Low placed pin bones are the cause of a sloping rump.

Thighs.-The inner surface of the thighs should be thin and curved out | + that returns the greatest profit. + 30 as to give ample room for the udder. Beefy, thick thighs are an obcialization in the milk producing funcjection, as they do not indicate spe-

tion and do not give room for a broad

Tail.—The tail should be level in its attachment to the spinal column, small at this junction, and the bone should extend to the hocks. It should be thin throughout and the switch long and fine.

Escutcheon. - The escutcheon or "milk mirror" is the region above the udder between the thighs, where the hair grows in a different direction.

Hind Legs.-The legs should be evenly and squarely placed on the body. The bones of the legs should be clean and close in texture. The joints should be ample in size to form leverages for the actions of the muscles, but they should be free from growths of any nature, either fleshy or cartilaginous. When the hocks are set farther back than the rear of the body they are described as sickle hocks. The Mammary System.-The mammary system is composed of the udder teats, mammary or milk veins, and

The Udder.-The udder should be large, wide and have a long attachment to the body of the cow. In shape it should be somewhat rounding, with the lower part, floor or sole of the udder as level as possible. The development should be symmetrical to make the quarters even in size. The more common defects in the udder are short attachment in front and low attachment behind, lack of width, sagging or pendulousness, a lack of uniform development and fleshiness. Probably poor fore udders are as common as any other defect. Lack of development in this region causes a short udder attachment to the cow's body and very frequently accompanies a pendulous udder.

Pendulous udders indicate a short body attachment and a weakness of the muscular tissue which holds the udder to the body. Such udders are liable to be bruised by swinging when the animal walks or runs and also are in danger of being stepped on by the cow when she rises.

Three kinds of tissue go to make a cow's udder-namely, glandular, muscular and fleshy. The first kind is the secreting tissue that produces the milk, and the more there is of it the better.

The function of muscular tissue is to support the udder and insure its firm attachment to the body.

Fleshy tissue is undesirable in the udder, and its presence indicates lack of quality and producing ability. Glandular tissue has a springy, elastic feeling, and an udder in which this predominates collapses to a great extent when empty. On the other hand, when fleshy tissue composes a large portion of the udder the latter is firm and does not collapse when empty. Considerable skill is necessary to determine the kind of tissue in the udder by the feeling. way is to 1 milked dry and then judge the charac ter of the udder.

Teats.-The teats should be of convenient size for milking and should be evenly and squarely placed at the center of each quarter, so that the bottom will be in a horizontal plane and the distance equal between teats. They should be free from bunches, either internal or external, and the sphincter muscles at the bottom of the teats should be rigid enough to prevent the leaking of milk, but not stiff enough to cause difficult milking.

Mammary or Milk Veins and Wells. -The mammary veins are on each side of the belly, extending from the udder forward toward the shoulders. They should be large, long, branching and tortuous and should enter the abdomen well toward the shoulders. After that portion of the blood required for milk production is taken away the remaining portion returns to the heart through these veins. A large vein indicates that a great quantity of blood is being returned to the heart and that consequently much blood passed into the udder and was available for producing milk. In the heaviest milkers these veins are very crooked and often branching, in some cases entering the abdomen through several openings on each side. The milk well, or the opening through which the vein enters the abdomen, should be large and well

Cows Need Water In Abundance. All animals require plenty of good. pure water. This is especially true of the milking cow, as water constitutes more than three-fourths of the total volume of milk. The water supply therefore demands the dairyman's

NEW ONION DISHES ALL PREPARE FOR WINTER

WILL BE LIKED BY THOSE FOND OF THE VEGETABLE.

Baked and Served in Appetizing Form They Are Excellent for Invalid-Various Methods of Pickling Can Be Recommended.

Baked Onions for an Invalid .- Prepared in this way, onions are served frequently in sanitariums, when onions cooked in other ways are taboo. Use the large white or yellow onions. Do not peel, but arrange in a baking dish, still in their jackets and add enough water to prevent burning. Bake until they are thoroughly tender, the center being steamed in its own juices. When ready to serve, remove the outer jacket of skin, season with salt, pepper and butter and serve very hot.

Kenilworth Ranch Fried Onions .-Cut in slices and soak in milk ten minutes. Then dip in flour and immerse in boiling fat hot enough to brown instantly. You cannot keep the slices whole after they have fried six or seven minutes. Take out with a skimmer, lay on brown paper a few moments to absorb all fat and serve with steak or veal cutlets. They will be firm and Glazed Onions.—Choose mild onions for this way of cooking. Melt half a cupful of butter in a saucepan, then put in as many peeled onions as will fit in without crowding. Move about until all are well coated with butter, sprinkle with a tablespoonful of sugar, then pour over them a well-flavored soup stock. If you have no stock on hand dissolve a little beef extract in hot water and salt well. Simmer until the onions are tender, take off the lid of the saucepan and let the stock simmer down to about half a cupful. Serve in a heated covered dish as an accompaniment to a roast of pork or mut-

Pickled Onions.-Use the smallest onions you can find, pour hot water on them and let them stand until their skins can easily be removed. Make enough brine to cover the onions; let them remain in it from one morning until the next; replace the old brine with new, allowing it also to remain on the onions 24 hours, and change the brine again on the third morning. On the fourth morning put the onions in fresh water and heat them to the scaldng point, stirring frequently. A pint of milk added to the water will help whiten the onions during this boiling. Drain well and place the onions in a jar, pouring scalding hot vinegar over

If spiced pickles are desired, place one-half pound of "prepared" spices, such as may be procured at the grocer's, in thin bags, and steep them in the vinegar 15 minutes. But if the whiteness that is so appetizing in pickled onions is to be retained, the spices must be omitted. As the onions are placed in the jar, distribute sliced red peppers through them. These pickles present a very attractive appearance when put up in glass jars and sealed the same as canned fruit. They are particularly nice served with cold meats or fish of any kind .-- Emma Paddock Telford in Kansas City Star.

Fried Raw Turnip.

For a family of six persons grind with coarse meat grinder four medium-sized raw turnips. Place either fresh pork fat or ham fat in frying pan; when hot put in ground turnips, with about one-half cupful of water, to fry. Season with salt and pepper. As water boils out gradually add just enough water to make a brown liquid; continue cooking until turnips are soft and of golden brown. Nice when served with steak, pork chops or fried

Date Pie.

Two cupfuls of dates, stoned and chopped. Spread evenly over bottom of plate that has previously been lined with rich paste, then make a custard with the yolks of three eggs, one cupful milk, one-third cupful sugar, pinch of salt, little nutmeg. Pour over dates and bake in slow oven till custard is firm. Frost with the whites of two eggs and one-half cupful sugar. Brown in oven.

Winter Clothespin Apron.

To hang out clothes in winter: Make convenient clothespin apron, and a little while before hanging out the clothes put the pins in the oven until well heated through. Then tie on the apron and put the hot pins in the pocket. These keep the hands from becoming chilled and the work of hanging out clothes is more easily and quickly done.

Apricot Pudding.

Put a layer of apricots (dried, made into rich sauce) into a buttered dish, add a few lumps of butter, then a layer of cracker crumbs, sprinkled with a little cinnamon, then a layer of apricots, etc., making the last layer of crumbs. Bake in oven and eat hot or cold (hot is best) with sweetened whipped cream.

Making White Curtains Ecru.

First soak the curtains over night in cold water to remove all dust. In the morning wash in the usual way and rinse thoroughly to remove all soap. Then put in boiler with a tan stocking. Remove when the right color is reached.

Add Salt.

If you find that your cream refuses to be whipped, add a pinch of salt and it will stiffen almost immediately.

Forth in Search of Cold Weather Necessities.

Falling leaves, deepening color in the woods and darkening evenings give notice of the preparations of Mother Nature for her winter's rest and recuperation, says a writer in the Port Angeles Herald. The fruits of her summer labors are ripening in the trees, or gathered already into the storehouses. Freshening winds are coming in from the ocean through narrow straits; the air is chilly when the sun lies low and bears the scent of autumnal rains; flurries of snow sweep the mountain ranges. The wild creatures are seeking snug quarters and laying in their provisions for the winter seasons.

The men go hunting. Not one in ten ever thinks of the reason. He does not philosophize on the fact that he is following the custom of the ages, when he takes his weapons in the fall and seeks game in the forest. With him it is sport, but with his ancestors it was duty. They knew that if they failed of good fortune in the chase their families would go hungry in the winter. New skins were needed for protection against the cold weather; meats had to be obtained and placed, dried, in primitive storage. The animals knew all about it then, and still realize the danger of the season. Birds and beasts of the eatable sort grow shy when the lengthening nights and shortening days herald the coming of winter! But the beasts of prey, like the men, are out hunting. They also need their stores, and in order to get them their muscles grow taut, their claws sharp and their coats very clean and glossy, so that the creatures they hunt may have difficulty in scenting their approach.

SHIPS COMMAND HIGH PRICES

Rise in Values of All Kinds of Steamers Since Outbreak of War Has Been Enormous.

Extraordinary figures have recently been fetched by steamers, especially smaller and older steamers, that the admiralty does not covet for its own use, states the London Economist. For instance, a small steamer of 350 tons gross, built in 1904, and suitable only for the coasting and continental trade, changed hands a short time back at £15,000, the price working out at more than £40 a ton gross and £100 a ton net. In peace times, if she had sold for £12 a ton she would have made a good enough bargain for her owners, so that the rise in her value is quite fantastic. Under such conditions owners are naturally tempted to sell their property and keep the money by them to be invested in shipping when prices fall. So long as the ships are not sold out of the country no objection can be taken, and it is significant that the big fleet of the London & Northern company was recently sold outright at a price that gave the shareholders a premium of 450 per cent on their holdings, and left enough over to compensate the managers to the extent of £250,000.

Chinese Make Milk From Beans.

The threatened shortage of milk might not look so serious if the Chinese method of making bean milk were established in this country. The beans are soaked for some time and then crushed between stones. The crushed pulp is strained through a cloth, diluted with water and boiled. It is strained again after boiling and then bottled ready for use. This product looks like fresh milk and has a decidedly pleasant taste. Chemical analysis shows its percentage of fat to be equal to good cows' milk. In China it is produced at low cost; 50 cents a month will buy a pint a day. A special yellow bean is used for this purpose. Experiments looking toward their introduction into this country have already been begun by the department of agri-

Finds Letter of Robert Fulton.

Unearthed in the quest for manuscripts and autographed letters to make part of the exhibit of historic relics of early Pittsburgh which Dr. W. J. Holland of Carnegie Museum is preparing for display during the city charter centennial celebration, is one dated in 1813 and issued by Robert Fulton, inventor of the steamboat. The letter, according to the Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph, is one which Fulton wrote to David Cook, a steel manufacturer of Pittsburgh, to make for him and ship to him certain specified quantities of boiler plate for use in the steamboat which at that time he was perfecting.

Oil-Burning Engines Efficient. An English naval architect in a re cent study of applying oil engines for the propulsion of warships states that in the case of a battleship he found that with an equal number of shafts, equal power and speed can be obtained with double-acting two-cycle engines as with steam, auxiliaries being included in each case, and the machinery weight being equal, says the Scientific American. He found that the radius of action could be increased at full speed at least three times and at cruising speeds at least four times.

At the Opera House.

"In the last act the villain was shot and writhed on the floor for nearly five minutes."

"I presume you would call that creating a heavy atmosphere?" "Yes. And he succeeded all right.

By the time he finished flopping about the air was thick with dust."

Danger Signal.

If the fire bell should ring, would you run and stop it, or go and help to put out the fire? It is much the same way with a cough. A cough is a danger signal as much as a fire bell. You should no more try to suppress it than to stop a fire bell when it is ringing, but should cure the discase that a greek the coupling. This disease that causes the coughing. can nearly always be done by taking Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, Many have used it with the most beneficial results. It is especially valuable for the persistent cough that so often follows a bad cold or an attack of the grip. Mrs. Thomas Beeching, of Andrews, Ind., writes: "During the winter my husband takes cold easily and coughs and coughs. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best medicine for breaking up these attacks and you cannot get him to take any other." Obtainable everywhere. Advertisement on, Elmo, spent Sunday in Baltimore vititing Grandpa and Grandma Delphy and her sister, Mrs. Sallie Berry.

William Farquhar is suffering from a very stubborn case of quinsy.

Mrs. James Sinnott and her

While I hear much complaint about the cost of flour and the bread products therewith an incident related by my father, Joel Farquhar about conditions 100 years ago that is in 1816, the year with-out a summer has been brought to my recollection. In the latter part of that year with three small horses, "A pony team" as he called it, hitched to a miniature conestogo wagon, he took 12 barrels of flour to Baltimore. The load netted him $168.00 or $14.00 per barrel. Ordinary farm work then ranged from 40 to 50 cents per day. Now with wages much higher there is probably more complaint about the cost than there was then. At that time all food was prepared and cook-ed at home. Now much is bought ready for the table at stores. A pound of candy was then a years supply for a family.

How far would it go now?

Misses Helen and Edith Lindsay visited friends in Westminster, on Sunday.

Mr. Humer Visits Overland Plant.

Clyde L. Humer, representing the Taneytown sales agency for the Willys-Overland cars, in Taneytown, was one of he 5000 dealers to visit the great Toledo plant of the Company, and a convention of its representatives, now in progress. The tour of this great plant was a very impressive sight to Mr. Humer, and all present. The guides were carefully picked men who knew the plant from beginning to end, and able to answer all questions.

The plant is worth $25,000,000, and occupies 103 acres, with a production occupies 103 acres, with a production capacity of 1000 cars a day. It uses 17,300 employees, as compared with 250 in 1908. The restaurant connected with the plant is very extensive and can feed 388 persons at one time, but this is nothing as compared with the shops, where all is whirl and motion, yet all is perfect sysvarious styles of cars. It would require too much space to attempt to even mention everything to be seen. While we looked on, whole forests of lumber were being turned into bodies n the wood-work department-lumber by the wood-work department—ther by the carloads, and as 214 feet is required on even a small touring car, we could readily see why so much is required. In fact, big figures apply all the way through; 18,000,000 pounds of solder annually, 2,500,000 pounds of tin, 10,000,000 pounds of bress and copper 12,000. 000 pounds of brass and copper, 12,000,-000 feet of steel tubing, 125,000 tons of

Mr. Humer says, "But what impressed me more than all else was the department in which materials are tested. They have to know a thing is right be-fore it goes into a Willys-Overland car. That's how they safeguard the public The work of assembling a car was also specially interesting. He says:

"We followed the whole operation. We began at one end of a track 645 feet long where the frames and rear systems are put in place. By the time the other end of the conveyor is reached the frame has grown into the finished car. overhead, parts are lowered by chains. Along the way men are attaching the parts. The frame is not in motion all the time, but can be instantly connected with the links of an endless chain and sent on its way whenever desired. Top quality of workmanship is assured by having each man do work on which he is an expert, if it be only to tighten a holt. Lines of motors, already tested, wait on both sides of the conveyor. These are put into place, cantilever springs are put on, steering mechanism and lighting and starting systems are adjusted. Gradually the car takes form. Instead of painting the chassis with a brush, a sprayer is used. It does the work more rapidly, more unformly and at a lower cost. The tracks of the assembly lead directly through ovens in which the paint is baked. Fenders and running boards come into their places.

Wheels with the tires on are brought along on a runway. First comes a front wheel, then a rear wheel. You ought to see them put on the tires. It is lightning. By a special device, invented by one of the men in the department, the tire can be put on a wheel in three seconds. From overhead bodies are dropped down on to the chassis and soon made fast.

The car is now ready for its tests. Rapidly revolving wheels in the floor engage the wheels of the car, and send them at high speed to make sure that they are operating freely. This is not a test under the power of the car. Gasoline and water are then put into the car. It is pushed off the track into another room, till its wheels are in contact with wheels in the floor. With the use of the self starter, the machine gets its first chance

It surprised me the way the motors started. They were off with a rush. There was no hitch or delay. All the work had been done right. In a few minutes the motor was working apparently almost as smoothly as if it had been a year on the road.

It is processes like these, all that I have described, that explain why every car in the Willys-Overland line is what it is at a low every car. so low a cost. Making so many is the answer, making them to go all over the world and having profited by the experiences of users everywhere. Quantity production, immense and costly machines, skilled designing, careful inspection, accurate tests of material, efficient factory methods, rapid assembly and advanced methods of handling, all these we saw; all these tell why the Willys-Overland Company lives up to its ideals of a car for every need or taste, price, class and ser-

BILLY BRADFORD

Story of a Boy Who Had Never Heard of Christmas

By F. A. MITCHEL

Billy Bradford was the son of a constitutional rover. Billy was born in a prairie schooner crossing the plains in 1849. When he was old enough to experience his first Christmas he was astride a donkey in Mexico. There was no Christmas for the Bradford family and no mention of Christmas. If Billy's father remembered it was Christmas day he said nothing about it. The wife and mother remembered it with tears. She had no home. There was no mantel on which her little boy might hang his stocking, and if there were there was nothing to put in it.

The mother died while the family were still moving from place to place. Then the father died while passing through an uninhabited country. Billy found himself alone. He was eight years old. Considering that he was left in a wilderness, with no one to take care of him, perhaps his want of the refining influences of a home were in his favor. With a little help from kindly neighbors, he went about providing for himself as a young squirrel does when left on its own resources.

At first he slept out under the trees, then made himself a sleeping place partly under ground. For food he lived mostly on berries. But his father had left a gun, and Billie knew how to bring down birds. That is all he did, the same as wild animals.

One day while examining the articles his father had when he died Billy found some certificates of shares in a mining company located near San Francisco. He had no idea what they were, but one day a traveler passed that way, and Billy showed them to him. He told Billy that they represented a fortune for whomsoever owned them. When Billy told him that his father's was the name written on them and that he (Billy) was all that was left of the Bradford family the stranger advised him to go to San Francisco and look the matter up. Billy explained that his father had crossed a country with no trees and plenty of Indians and stopped awhile in a city, whereupon the man inferred that Bradford had been a forty-niner, had invested in a mining venture and moved on.

The stranger furnished Billy with funds to go to San Francisco, writing out a note for the amount, and Billy made an X at the bottom. Then the lender went on his way, saying that he would likely turn up some day in San Francisco and claim the amount due him. He never did.

Billy knew nothing of traveling and walked the whole way to San Francisco, more than 300 miles. He reached the suburbs of the town on a winter evening at dusk. Passing a house that was lighted up he looked in through a window. A number of children were inside and some older persons were hanging evergreen festoons from the ceiling. The scene in the house pleased Billy, and he went to the door and knocked. A little girl opened it, and Billy said to her:

"What you puttin' up the green things for?"

"What are we putting them up for? Why, for Christmas, of course." "What's Christmas?" "Oh, my good gracious!"

She ran back into the room where the Christmas preparations were being made and cried out: "There's a boy at the door who doesn't know what Christmas is."

The astonishment at this announcement among the children was eclipsed at sight of Billy, who followed the girl into the room and stood staring about him, half blinded by the lights. A lady descended from a stepladder and confronted him.

"Are you the boy who doesn't know what Christmas is?" "No; I don't."

"Where were you brought up?" "I wasn't brought up at all. I was a mover." "What do you mean by that?" "That's what mother said we was.

We was always goin' somewhere." "Where is your mother?"

"Dead." "And your father?"

"Dead."

"And you never heard of Christmas?"

"No, I never did." "Children," said the lady, "how often have I tried to make you understand how thankful you should be that you are surrounded with comforts! Here's a boy who has neither father nor mother, who has always been a wanderer and who doesn't know what Christmas is. Have you anything to be thankful for, little boy?" "Yes, I'm thankful that I wasn't borned a groundhog or somethin' like

The children were not able to comprehend this assertion. They did not know that the only thing the boy had to be thankful for was that he was a human being. If they were thankful it was that they were far above other human beings who lived in small houses, wore ragged clothes and didn't have all the money they wanted for candy. 'Come with me," said the lady to

She led Billy into another room, where a gentleman sat reading, and told the gentleman what had thus far rating for.

taken place. Then she went back to the room from which she had come and resumed her Christmas preparations.

For an hour the gentleman ques tioned Billy and drew from him a disconnected account of his life. He was principally interested in that part of Billy's wanderings which pertained to the child's visit to San Francisco when gold was discovered in the territory and there was a great hegira of gold hunters. For Billy told him about the "printed papers," as he called them, and that he had come to the city on its account. But the trip to the gold fields had occurred when the boy was too young to remember much about it, and he was enabled to give the gentleman very little information.

Billy took out the pocketbook and showed the certificate. The moment his interviewer saw the name of the mining company printed in large letters at the top he opened his eyes in astonishment. The certificate was for a thousand shares of stock, and each share was worth several hundred dol-It was plain that this little orlars. phan boy, if he really owned that bit of paper, was very rich. Never before had the gentleman seen such wealth centered in a person so near to the brute creation. The woman returned and said:

"Little boy, you're going to sleep in this house tonight."

"Reckon I couldn't do that. I never slept in a house." "It's time you did. We're going to show you what Christmas is. Come." "One moment," her husband interposed. "Let me have that old pocketbook you showed me.'

Billy gave him the pocketbook, then went with the lady to the room where the children were. His attention first fell on a row of stockings dangling from a mantel.

"This is Christmas eve," said the "Tonight, so the tradition is. Santa Claus will come down the chimney and fill these stockings with gifts. This is your stocking. Tomorrow morning you will find it full of nice

This was all Greek to Billy, except that something would be given him. It was a new sensation, for nothing had ever yet been bestowed upon him. Then he suffered himself to be led up to a bathroom, and after he had been soaked and the softened dirt rinsed off him he was taken to a little room with a white iron bedstead and snowy linen on it and told to get between the sheets. He obeyed, but when half an hour later the lady looked into the room Billy was not to be seen. She sought for him and found him curled up like a dog under the bed instead of in it, She thought best to leave him where he was.

The next morning Billy was dressed in some borrowed clothes and stood before a mirror to note the change in his appearance. It would be impossible to say whether he was more astonished at his clothes or his reflection. Both were a wonder to him. Then he was taken downstairs, where the children were opening their stockings, and given his own Santa Claus' offering. He had no idea as to what most of the things were, but demonstrated that possession is a human instinct by being much delighted with everything he took out.

After breakfast the lady took Billy into the library and told him the story of the birth of the Christ Child in a manger; how the sins of the world had been redeemed and how the event had been celebrated once a year. Then Billy was taken back to the children, who taught him games and told him stories about what they did, how they went to school, and Billy absorbed every word of it. All day it seemed to him that he had been translated to heaven. His lair in the forest began to seem horrible to him, and he won dered if he would ever become suffl ciently polished to live among these lovely persons.

And the Christmas dinner. Billy looked at the table, loaded with good things, and seemed to be in a stupor of wonder. He ate till he could cram no more into him.

After dinner the gentleman who had questioned him took Billy's pocketbook and opening it drew forth the certificates of stock that Billy was going to San Francisco to see about.

"My boy," he said, "Christmas reminds us that we must do for others beside ourselves. We have given you a pleasant Christmas, but it behooves me to do something far more important for you. I do not doubt that you are heir to that which will buy everything you can wish for-far more than you can enjoy. What was probably worthless when your father made an investment in it of a few hundred dollars is now worth hundreds of thousands of dollars. Tomorrow I will take the matter up for you and hope to establish your claim to your property." This was lost on Billy, but Christmas was not. As it was his first Christ mas, it was his happiest. And when it was ended and they told him he must wait a whole year for another it seemed to him very far away.

It took some time to establish the fact that Billy was the son and sole heir of the owner of the certificates in the mining company, but it was finally accomplished. Billy was permitted to remain with the family with whom he spent his first Christmas, and the court appointed the head of that family his guardian. Billy went to school with the children and came to look upon them as his brothers and sisters.

But at last Billy became of age, and from a wild boy he had become quite a gentleman-like and intelligent young man. The fortune he received on the day of his majority he handled with skill and discretion, enjoying the income of it with the girl who had received him when he knocked at the door and asked what they were decofor me I had my husband make a small cupboard about four feet high and just as wide as a cracker box.

He fitted three shelves about eight inches wide and eight inches apart, in the top of the cupboard. This I placed in one corner of the room, using the wall for a back. I painted it to match my woodwork. I covered a cracker box with cretonne and placed it in the bottom. I set pictures on top of the cupboard. The shelves I used for sewing articles, magazines, school books, etc. The box held my mending and unfinished articles of sewing.

Chicken Saute That Is Declared to Be Delicious by Those Who Have Partaken of It.

Take a nice, tender chicken, wash and clean thoroughly and cut into small pieces at the joints. Separate the breast from the back and split it first down the center through the bone, and once again crosswise, and season the whole well with pepper and salt. Put one and a half tablespoonfuls of butter into a stewpan and when it has melted add the chicken. Let this brown for a good five minutes, then add one a half good-sized onions, sliced, and let these nicely brown, being careful not to let them burn in the least. Add one tablespoonful of flour and let this brown. Then add three large fresh tomatoes (or onefourth can of tomatoes) and let these brown. Cook very slowly, allowing the mixture to simply simmer. Add one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, one teaspoonful thyme, one bay leaf and one clove of garlic finely minced. Stir, cover and let the whole smother over a slow but steady fire. The tomatoes will make sufficient gravy as yet. If you have sweet green peppers, add three, taking the seeds out and slicing very fine and stir well. Let all smother gently for 20 minutes at least, keeping well covered and stirring occasionally. Then add one cupful consomme if you have it, if not, one cupful of boiling water. Let it cook again for a full half hour, very, very slowly, over a very steady fire, and season again to taste. Cover ten minutes more and serve hot. The above is very much esteemed as a famous New Orleans dish.

"If she swallowed anything, she cried out she was swallowing fire and brimstone." For over twenty days she took nothing but water. She had no sleep day or night, but lay cursing and blaspheming, tearing her clothes, and whatever she could reach, in pieces. Wesley prayed with her. OLD TREE STILL PRODUCTIVE

Planted by Governor Endicott Nearly Three Centuries Ago, It Bears Yearly Crop of Fine Fruit.

Thought to be the oldest fruit tree in this country, the pear tree planted Robert L. John Endicott purchased a large tract of land at Danversport, then known as the southern section of Salem village. The estate afterward became known as the Endicott plantation. This year it is estimated that there were close to 3,000 pears on the tree. Few people who visited Danvers missed the opportunity of seeing this wonderful tree, which was carefully guarded by a picket fence. The tree is made up of three distinct trunks, which are partially decayed, although the upper section of the tree is quite healthy in appearance. GOES FAR BACK IN HISTORY

Nippur Tablet, Recently Discovered and Translated, Has Brought Joy to Archeologists.

A Sumerian epic that tells the story of the reconstruction of civilization after the deluge has been discovered on one of the famous Nippur tablets in the University of Pennsylvania museum. Announcement of the discovery and the completion of the translation of the epic has just been made by Dr. Stephen H. Langdon, Sumerian scholar and assistant curator of the museum. The epic, according to Doctor Langdon, takes up the history of civilization after Paradise, the fall of man and the flood, and is a sequel to the Sumerian epic which he translated a year ago. The fragment which contains the latest history is four and one-half inches long and one inch thick. It contains about 300 lines of inscriptions. It dates from about 2250 B. C., and hence represents a literature older than that of the Baby. lonians and the Chaldeans. "The boat or ark is mentioned." Lesson XIII. - Fourth Quarter, For Dec. 24, 1916.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Isa. ix, 2-7-Memory Verses, 6, 7-Golden Text, Isa. ix, 6-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

I am always glad to have a lesson in prophecy, remembering that the study of it is specially commended and that our Lord said that those who neglected | Principles Which Railways Hold Should it or were slow to believe it were foolish (II Pet. i, 19; Luke xxiv, 25; Amos iii, 7). The prophecy of Isaiah is a specially fascinating study, as it is an epitome of the whole Bible and, very strangely, has the same number of chapters as there are books in the Bible, and is divided into two parts of thirty-nine and twenty-seven chapters, just as there are thirty-nine books in the Old Testament and twenty-seven in the New. Another interesting fact for young people is that the letters in Old and Testament are three and nine, which, placed together, make thirty nine, and three times nine give twentyseven, the number of books in the New Testament. The name Isaiah Agnifies the help or salvation of Jehovah, and next to the Psalms it is the greatest salvation book in the Bible as to the use of the word, for some form of the word is found in the Psalms over 120 times and in Isaiah over fifty times. There is no Saviour but one and no salvation apart from Him, even as He said: "I, even I, am the Lord, and beside me there is no Saviour." "A just God and a Saviour, there is none beside me" (Isa, xliii, 11; xlv, 21; Acts iv, 12). He is the center of the Bible and the circumference, too, for when He shall be King at Jerusalem, which God has placed in the midst of all nations and countries, all kings and nations shall fall down before Him and serve Him (Ezek. v, 5; Ps. lxxii, 11).

The first part of Isaiah is divided into smaller sections, the first two being sections of six chapters, each ending with Isaiah's vision of the King on His throne (chapter vi), and Israel's national anthem when He shall be their King (chapter xii). The section in which our lesson is tells us that the Messiah, who is also called Immanuel, shall be born of a virgin, that He shall gather all Israel, and nations shall come to Him after He shall have smitten the earth with the rod of His mouth and slain the wicked with the breath of His lips, and then shall the earth become full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea (chapters vii, 14; xi, 4, 9, 12). The Spirit, through Micah, said that He would be born at Bethlehem (and He was), that He would rule in Israel (and He will) (Mic. v. 2-4). All that was written of His first coming in humiliation has been fulfilled literally, and all that is written of His second coming in glory shall be fulfilled just as literally. The second verse of our lesson chapter had a fulfillment when He was in Galilee, according to Matt. iv. 12-16.

The R. V. of lesson verse 3 reads. "Thou hast multiplied the nation; thou hast increased their joy." This is in accord with other predictions concerning their glorious future, as in chapter xxxv, 10. Lesson verses 4, 5, take us back to the story of Gideon and his 300 and his great victory over the Midianites and deliverance from their oppression. That was very manifestly the hand of the Lord, using 300 men, who were sifted out of 32,000 to defeat and overthrow a great army. That was the zeal of the Lord of hosts (verse 7), as it was also when Hezekiah was delivered from the hosts of Sennacherib (xxxvii, 32; II Kings xix. 31). It is an unusual expression and shall have a full and final fulfillment when He shall come again, of whom it is written. "The zeal of thine house 'hath eaten me up' (Ps. lxix, 9; John ii, 17). Not armies and navies. battalions and their equipments, weapons and munitions of war, shall bring His kingdom on earth; but, behold, the Lord will come with fire and with His chariots like a whirlwind, for by fire and by His sword will the Lord plead with all flesh (Isa. lxvi. 15-16; Ps. 1, 1-3; II Thess. i, 7-10). This is the child and the son of lesson verse 6, the firstborn of the Virgin Mary, the son of David, son of Abraham, son of man, son of God (Luke ii, 7; Matt. i, 1; John i. 34, 49, 51).

A real child a son subject to the limitations of the Nazareth home till He was thirty years old, yet truly God manifest in the flesh, the Creator in human form. His name is Wonderful, as He said to Manoah in Judg. xiii, 18, margin. He is the great Counselor, who is wonderful in counsel, excellent in working; great in counsel and mighty in work (Isa. xxviii, 29; Jer. xxxii, 18, 19). He is the Mighty God. according to the last passage quoted. as well as our lesson verse, and He is the Almighty of Gen. xvii, 1; Rev. i. 8. and elsewhere. He is the everlasting Father, for He said to Philip, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father" (John xiv, 9). He is the Prince of Peace, and He alone can bring peace on earth. "He shall speak peace unto the nations" (Zech. ix, 10). His word will do it, the sword of His mouth. Then shall be fulfilled all that is written of Him as the son of David to sit on David's throne, not only in our lesson, but in Jer. xxiii, 5, 8; Ezek. xxxvii, 21-24; Luke i, 32, 33,

SCHOOL, SAFETY DEMANDS FEDERAL CONTROL OF THE RAILROADS

Only Way to Meet Emergencies of Nation, Says A. P. Thom.

STATES' RIGHTS PRESERVED

Govern Regulatory System In Interests of Public and the Roads-Compulsory System of Federal Incorporation Favored.

Washington, Dec. 4 .- That the interests of national defense require that control of railway lines should rest with the federal government and not with the states was the claim advanced by Alfred P. Thom, counsel to the Railway Executives' Advisory Committee, in concluding his preliminary statement of the case for the railways before the Newlands Joint Committee on Interstate Commerce.

"We must be efficient as a nation if we are to deal successfully with our national emergencies," said Mr. Thom, "and we must appreciate that efficient transportation is an essential condition of national efficiency. If we are to halt and weaken our transportation systems by state lines, by the permanent imposition of burdens by unwise regulation, we will make national effi ciency impossible.'

States' Rights Would Not Suffer. Mr. Thom cited many instances in which shippers in one state were injuriously affected by selfish regulations imposed on the railroads by neighboring states. He pointed out that federal regulation would be no invasion of the rights of the states but would be the means of preserving the rights which they acquired when they entered the Union, one of which was the right to the free movement of their products across state boundaries.

What the Railroads Advocate, The principles which the railroads believe should be incorporated in any just system of regulation were summarized by Mr. Thom as follows: 1. The entire power and duty of regulation should be in the hands of the national government, except as to matters so essentially local and incidental that they cannot be used to interfere with the efficiency of the service or the just rights of the carriers.

2. As one of the means of accomplishing this, a system of compulsory federal incorporation should be adopted, into which should be brought all railroad corporations engaged in interstate or foreign commerce.

3. The Interstate Commerce Commission under existing laws has too much to do and is charged with conflicting functions, including the investigation. prosecution and decision of cases. The latter duties should be placed in the hands of a new body which might be called the Federal Railroad Commission. Regional Commissions should be established in different parts of the country to assist the Interstate Commerce Commission by handling local cases.

4. The power of the Commission should be extended to enable it to prescribe minimum rates and not merely maximum rates as at present. This would increase their power to prevent unjust discriminations.

Justice to Public and Roads.

5. It should be made the duty of the Interstate Commerce Commission, in the exercise of its powers to fix reasonable rates, to so adjust these rates that they shall be just at once to the public and to the carriers. To this end the Commission, in determining rates, should consider the necessity of maintaining efficient transportation and extensions of facilities, the relation of expenses to rates and the rights of shippers, stockholders and creditors of the roads.

6. The Interstate Commerce Commission should be invested with the power to fix the rates for carrying mails. 7. The federal government should have exclusive power to supervise the issue of stocks and bonds by railroad carriers engaged in interstate and foreign commerce.

8. The law should recognize the essential difference between things which restrain trade in the case of ordinary mercantile concerns and those which restrain trade in the case of common carriers. The question of competition is not the only fair criterion. 9. The law should expressly provide for the meeting and agreement of traffic or other officers of railroads in respect of rates or practices. This should, however, be safeguarded by requiring the agreements to be filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission and to be subject to be disapprov-

"My legal proposition," Mr. Thom said, "is that the Constitution as it mow is gives full authority to Congress to regulate the instrumentalities of interstate commerce in all their parts. If the power of regulation is to reach the public requirements, it must be coextensive with the instrumentalities of

Mr. Thom explained that the roads are not asking either of the Committee or of Congress any increase in revenues, but that they are merely asking the perfection of a system which will be responsible to any need that may

BEGINNING OF NEW INDUSTRY

ERMINE COAT

Fashion has decreed that the pointed collar should again be one of the style features in women's coats. This ermine fur coat with deeppointed collar shows one of the season's latest models. The collar is trimmed with ermine tails. The coat is loose-fitting, with one of the empire effect belts, which will be worn extensively this winter.

VOGUE NOW FOR FEATHERS

Hat Ornaments of All Shades and Designs Are Shown in Really Amazing Display.

One has only to glance at the counters and counters of feather hat ornaments to be assured that these trimmings are to have an unprecedented vogue. Never were feathers contrived into such novel and intriguing effects; these conventional feather wings are present but nobody notices them in the amazing display of buttons, buckles, bands, cockades, rosettes and what-not all made of tiny, brighthued plumage and ready to sew on velvet hats. One round feather button in shades of orange, scarlet and gold will add incalculable style to a simple velvet sailor, and though one must pay a tidy price for a really chic feather ornament, hat and trimming will not amount to such a large sum that the average woman cannot afford to be very chic and modern. For a wee bit of feather and garnishment goes a long way and a button, buckle or cabochon of plumage will sufficiently trim a very wide-brimmed hat.

All-feather turbans are among the exclusives in millinery. They come in black and white combinations, in speckled pheasant feathers and in grebe feathers with iridescent hues. The taupe-colored and burgundy-colored feather turbans are especially on the smart hats of the period, the decorative touch is always imparted in a distinctive manner. Vivid parti-colored feathered cockades are favored. and also large plaques made from composition of various kinds and set in rims of old gold filigree. Then there is a wide choice of head fancies.

NOVEL LITTLE KEY HOLDER

Easily Fashioned From Round Hand-Embroidery Frame and a Little Brightly Colored Brocade.

This is easily and quickly made from a round hand-embroidery frame. A piece of brightly colored brocade is cut a little larger than the frame and is stretched on by the usual method. The edges may be cut off neatly and a few brass or gilt hooks sewn on, one at the top for hanging the holder up, the others for the keys. The wooden frame may be left its natural color or may be enameled white or gilded, according to taste.

White Kids Washable.

Much to milady's gratification, smart white kid boots, which are so fashionable today, are washable, just as the gloves she may scrub with pure white soap and warm water. Before going to bed she puts shoe trees in her boots and bathes them, and in the morning, presto, behold, they are spotless and fresh as new.

Head Flower Hair Ornaments. Instead of a Spanish comb, three dahlias of shaded red and pink crystal beads were worn below her left ear by a beautiful Parisian at a charity ball in Biarritz recently.

American Will Establish Plants in Honduras to Make Alcohol

From Bananas. An American has just secured a concession from the government of Honduras which is expected to be profitable to him and the government. The concession is for the manufacture of alcohol, which is a government monopoly. There have been great losses to banana planters in the past because many of the bunches did not contain a sufficient number of "hands" to be marketable, and have been thrown away. It is from this waste product that the American, who has had experience in the industry, intends to make alcohol. He has deposited $25,000 with the government as an evidence of good faith, and this is to be credited toward the export duties of three cents a gallon. He must also pay $2,000 a year for the salaries of government inspectors and must begin operations within a year. His agreement provides that he shall take all the bananas offered up to 200,000 bunches monthly. He has also secured the right to build a sugar and paper mill near the distillery. His plan is to aid planters in restoring worn-out banana lands for the raising of sugarcane, to make sugar, distill alcohol from the refuse and make paper from the bagasse, the fiber

Note About Moro Coffee. Steps are being taken to rehabilitate coffee growing among the Marano Moros of Lanao, Philippine Islands. Coffee at one time was exported in considerable quantities from the Lanao region, but owing to tribal wars and armed resistance against the authorities, the industry practically disappeared. A nursery has been established with more than 200,000 seedlings. A considerable part of the farm is to be planted to coffee, and the Moro farmers are to be supplied free of charge with healthy young trees grown from selected seed. Recently 50,000 young seedlings have been furnished the colonists at the American colony of Momungan, and there is every reason to believe that coffee raising will be profitable.

American Ports Superior.

Among interesting facts gleaned from a study of American ports, made under the auspices of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, are the following: American ports are better suited by nature to handle the largest liners than any of the old-world ports; Boston has the most expensive, as well as the largest, pier in the United States, if not in the world, and will soon have the largest dry dock in the western hemisphere; the most noteworthy port development in recent years has been on the Pacific coast, at San Francisco, Seattle, Los Angeles, Portland, Tacoma and San Diego. Stress is laid on the increasing influence of the federal government on port development.

NO. 4954 EQUITY In the Circuit Court for Carroll County

Harvey R. Ward, Plaintiff,

Rosa L. Ward, Defendant.

The object of this suit is to procure a divorce a vinculo matrimonii from the defendant, Rosa L. Ward, and the general relief.

The bill states that the plaintiff and defendant were married June 10, 1903, by Rev. W. E. Robertson, a Minister of the Gospel at Towson, Baltimore Co., Md. That the plaintiff and defendant resided together until the 3rd of March, 1913, at which time the defendant left the plaintiff and has since said time ceased to live with him as husband and wife, and has resided separate and apart from the plaintiff; that the plaintiff is a resident of Carroll County, Maryland, and the defendant is a resident of the State of Massachusetts, and a non-resident of the State of Maryland.

That the conduct of the plaintiff towards the defendant has always been kind, affectionate and above reproach, and that the said defendant, Rosa L. Ward, has without ary just cause or reason abandoned and deserted the plaintiff and has declared her intention to live with him no longer.

That such abandonment by the defendant has continued uninterruptedly for more than three years, is deliberate and final, and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation.

That the plaintiff and defendant have had no children born to them as a result of said matriage.

It is thereupon this 11th day of November, Rosa L. Ward, Defendant.

no children born to them as a result of said marriage.

It is thereupon this 11th day of November, A. D., 1916, ordered by the Circuit Court for Carroll County, sitting as. a Court of Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Carroll County once in each of four successive weeks before the 18th day of December next, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill, warning her to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the third day of January, A. D., 1917, to show cause, if any she has, why a decree ought not to pass as prayed.
