----Maryland is the first state in the Union, except very small states like Delaware and Rhode Island, to have a county agricultural agent in each county (23) in the state. This seems to argue well for better farming in Maryland, as these agents devote their full time to the interests of the farmer.

Many farmers in this county will be interested to learn of the success of a former Carroll county farmer, L. E. An extra session of Congress is practically assured. Even if the war situation did not cause it, the great mass of unfinshed business would likely demand one. Besides, there is unwillingness to adjourn and leave the President in sole charge of war questions. The appropriation bills, over which there has been so many charges of "pork," are still pending, and the op-ponents of some of the items of the measures seem determined to hold them up.

----The Pennsylvania Railroad broke its twenty passengers, at Mt. Union, Pa., on Tuesday night. A passenger train had arrived at the point, a little late, and was undergoing the usual examination, when a fast freight special crashed into the rear of the passenger train, completely demolishing the last car, a sleeper. It is thought that the wreck was due to the freight engineer failing to see the signal lights, or perhaps to a heavy fog.

George W. Crabbe, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of West Virginia, has definitely accepted his election to the position as superintendent of the Maryland League. In the meantime, Dr. Heisse has been given power by the headquarters committee to conduct the affairs of the league

Proceedings of School Board.

We regret our inability to publish the recent proceedings of two meetings of the School Board, as five columns of our first page would be required, therefore we will nake mention of only a few of the most important items.

The following bids were opened for the Hampstead school: Cecil A. Snyder & Mathias, $14,169; Eline Brothers, $14,-930; N. C. Erb, $14,672.

The contract was not awarded at either the first or second meeting.
Senator Warfield appeared in behalf of establishing a new High School at Sykes-ville, and the Board agreed to take the matter under consideration. The proposition for a new school building at Westminster was postponed for the present. It was agreed to build new buildings at Silver Run and Union Mills, and that the present properties be sold at public sale, the building at Union Mills to be reserved.

to be reserved. It was also agreed that at New Windsor additional land be bought, and that a building be erected. The purchase of additional land at Union Bridge was also authorized.

A large number of more or less important questions relating to various schools were disposed of.

The request for authority to inaugurate new policies based upon the Frederick County report, was laid before the Board, and it was moved, sconded and passed by them that authority be given Supt. Unger to publish the entire Frederick report and inaugurate all the policies of this report as soon as it can be conveniently done.

This report was at great length, and presented a large number of desirable improvements in methods. A portion of the summary of the report says:

tem on a similar basis with the Frederick County system, but it is encouraged in the belief that it is the desire of the Board to do all in its power to put the educational system on a high plane, to get for the tax-payer all that is possible with the money placed in its hands for obtaining adequate results, and what has been done in other parts af the state can be done here and that our people are anxious that it be done. It is convinced that the methods now practiced in the manage-ment of our county schools are neither adequate, economical nor satisfactory, and to this end it recommends to the Board the adoption of the following sug-

----No More "Raffle" Publicity.

The Record has for years consistently declined to give space to the result of raffles, or drawings, and not to advertise the same. Gradually, the weekly press is getting wise to their legal responsibility in such cases, a specimen of which appears in the last issue of the Annapolis Advertiser-Republican, which says:

peal being that he was an extra me tends singer. Judge Worthington's only concession was to name the House of Corrections against editors recently, the Advertise Republican will hereafter print no news about raffles and similar 'chance-taking' about raffles and similar 'chance-taking'. entertainments. This step is taken as measure of caution, since the move has been made by the Government to enforce the very letter of the law prohibiting papers to be sent through the mails containing information for the furtherance of games of chance.

This ruling will be applied to the raffles and ticket-selling on chances at church fairs and socials, as well as in every other application.

-----The Government Liquor License.

The Christian Citizen, published by the Lord's Day Alliance, in its last issue gave a list of eleven dealers (not including druggists) in Carroll county who had taken out U. S. Government retail licens for liquors during 1916, or after the dry law had been passed for the county. Among these was one dealer in Taney town, whose place has since closed up, and is out of business.

We presume these licenses were taken out thinking that perhaps the county law might be declared unconstitutional, or that the vote last November might reverse the vote previously taken. Apparently, all who have had such licenses issued, are violating the county law, which says in section 22: 'The issuance of an internal revenue special tax stamp or receipt by the United States to any person as a wholesale or retail dealer in liquors, or in malt liquors at any place within territory which, at the time of the issuance thereof, is Anti-Saloon territory, shall be prima facie evidence of the sale of intoxicating liquor by such person at such place, or at any place of business of such person within such territory where such stamp or re-ceipt is posted, and at the time charged in any suit or prosecution under this Act: Provided, that such time is within the life of such stamp or receipt.'

-0.53-0 A Successor to Sun Almanac.

'The Maryland Almanac'' successor to The Sun Almanac, has appeared in its long familiar blue cover, published by Kent & Owens, Baltimore, (P. O. Box 693.) The work is a combination of the statistics of 1916-17, covering the gap left by the discontinuance of the Sun almanac with the issue for 1915, and will be continued hereafter, if it is well received.

We are sure that thousands of former Sun patrons, and others, will want this Almanac at 25% per copy. We have felt the loss of it, for in no other compact form can be had the vast amount of statistical information concerning election returns, and much other political and historical information relating not only to Maryland, but to the whole country. We trust that the venture will meet with the financial success that it so abundanaly deserves. Send 25¢ to the publishers, and get a copy of this invaluable compendium of often wanted information.

PROHIBITION FORCES USE THE STEAM ROLLER

Washington to be Dry After the First of November.

Washington, Feb. 28.—The capital of the United States was voted dry after November 1, when the prohibitionists in Congress, angered and exasperated by a wet filibuster, tonight adopted "steam roller" methods and jammed through the House without debate the Sheppard-Barkely bill, closing all the saloons in the District of Columbia on the date mentioned. The vote was 273 to 137. The same bill has passed the Senate, and all it now needs to become law is President Wilson's approval. It is generally under-stood that the President will sign the

The action by the House came after one of the stormiest and bitterest legislative battles of this session of Congress. The wets resorted to every known parliamentary tactic to delay consideration of the measure and a vote.

Finally, Representative Garrett, to smash the wet filibuster, offered an amendment to the Harrison rule, directing the House to put the Senate bill on its passage without further debate. The rule was adopted after a number of forced rollcalls. Passage of the bill was greeted with wild

The prohibitionists today also resorted to drastic steps to save the Reed ''bone dry'' and anti-liquor advertisement legislation in the Postoffice Appropriations bill. This measure struck a snag in the conference committee between the Senate and the House, and the drys feared an effort would be made to kill the whole

Notice was served on the wets that, in order to save the Reed "bone dry" anti-advertisement legislation the drys would ask the House to concur in all the Senate amendments to the Postoffice Appropriations bill, so that the measure would not have to go before the Senate again for further consideration. Such a course would block the movement, suggested by the wets that the Postoffice bill could be talked to death in the Senate between now and adjournment. As a result, the House and Senate conference got together on the pneumatic tube provision, and it is expected that the postal bill will be called up in the House this Friday morning.

There is an error in the dry bill, which will result in it being carried into the courts. The last paragraph of the measure fixes November 1, 1916, as the date when the law becomes effective. The Anti-Saloon League officials intend to carry into the courts the question whether or not this provision will not force the saloons to close immediately. They assert the date named makes the measure retroactive and that, therefore, those sa loons which remain open after the President signs the measure are violating the law. A test case will be made and carried into the courts. The real purpose of this move, however, is to force the courts to hold that it was the intention of Coneffective date of the law.

-----Pennsylvania Farmers and Automobiles.

One out of every six farmers in Pennof every one hundred farmers owns an auto truck according to statistics just announced by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

One year ago there was an automobile on every tenth farm of the State and the total number was estimated at 22,608, but during 1916 there were purchased by the farmers 10,660 automobiles, making a total of 33,268 at the present time, show ing an increase of almost fifty per cent. over the previous year. In 1915 there were 15,000 automobiles on the farms of of the State and this number has been more than doubled in just two years.

In twelve counties twenty per cent or more of the farmers own motor cars and in only ten counties is there less than one machine for every tenth farmer.

Seven counties show more than a thousand farmers owning autos with Lancaster county well in the lead with a total of 2, 600 automobiles owned by its 10,000 farmers or one car for every fourth farm. Philadelphia county shows one car on every third farm but the total is only 247 automobiles as there are less than 800 farmers in the county, Chester county shows twenty four per cent. of the farmers or 1,359 owning cars while Bucks is third with 1,324 and Allegheny fourth with 1,195. Washington county farmers have 1,135 auotos, Berks county 1,112 and York county shows 1,099.

> -----Would Abolish Toll Roads.

Frederick, Md., March 1.-More than 100 property owners of northeastern Frederick county appeared before the Board of County Commissioners yesterday petitioning that the county take over three turnpikes, embracing about 16 miles of highway.

In the event the roads are taken over six tollgates will be abolished. The transfer of these roads will mark the elimination of all tollgates in Frederick

It was pointed out that while the County Commissioners have no authority to purchase roads, the county would maintain the highways if they were do-nated to the board. The property owners hope that eventually the State will take over these roads and make them a part of the good roads system. The removal of these tollgates would make a free road from Philadelphia to Baltimore, Littlestown, Pa., Taneytown, Keymar, Woodsboro and Frederick,

Urged to Grow More Food.

The Deputy Secretary of Agriculture, of Pennsylvania, C. E. Carrothers, is urging the planting of every available spot of ground in potatoes and vegetables, this coming summer. In so far as his suggestions concern farmers, they are not likely of great value, as farmers generally are already raising about all they have the time and help to raise; but, they can be used by a great many, not farmers, to considerable advantage. He says:

"Intensive farming should be carried on to the very limit if the high cost of living is to be abated. Farmers in Pennsylvania, where some of the most fertile fields in the world are to be found, should get all they can out of their ground. By varying the crops and a proper system of rotation, planting closer and giving undivided attention to their crops, farmers can help both themselves and the people. "Something of this sort must be done, for there is no excuse for importing potatoes from Haiti and other vegetables that are staples from outside places. "One thing that was quite noticeable during the agricultural trips last fall was the many uncultivated places in the most productive farm districts. People living in small towns, especially, should utilize these places. They have, as a rule, large yards, and many of these contain space that is unused. These spaces should be planted with vegetables and every inch used. In many towns the houses have back yards that are large enough for the raising of enough vegetables to keep the family through the winter.

"This is a matter that affects not only Pennsylvania. It should be given attention by farmers everywhere and those living in small towns and on the outskirts of the cities. Here in Pennsylvania, where conditions for larger crops are especially good, the continued waste is prodigal and Mayor Preston Buys Potatoes.

Mayor Preston, of Baltimore, bought 1000 bushels of potatoes, on Monday, and made arrangements to bring them to the city and distribute them and sell them at cost to people with small means. Delivery men have offered their services, free of charge. The Mayor also had several offers of large quantities of potatoes and cabbage, and may make further purhases. These operations have affected the local market, potatoes dropping 25¢ a bushel, since last Saturday, and onions $2.00 a sack.

Eggs have also made a big drop, but this is largely due to the warmer weather and greater production. There is no scarcity of food, but to some extent it is being held for higher prices, both by producers and dealers. Most of the potatoes purchased were at $2.25 per bushel, in Washington county. ----

Engine Jumped the Track.

Owing to a freight engine jumping the track near New Windsor, on the W. M. R. R., we received no letter mail, this Friday morning, from W. M. points. The Baltimore papers reached us by way of Hanover, about two hours late. Passenger trains for Baltimore over the W. M., were run over the Pennsylvania division, by Taneytown and Hanover.

The people of the United States are ap parently using more sugar than ever be ore, for the increase in consumption has been greater than the increase in popula tion. According to figures in Bulletin 473, recently prepared by the Bureau of Crop Estimates of the United States Department of Agriculture, the total consumption of sugar in this country for the decade ending with fiscal year 1912-13 was 42.9 per cent greater than the consumption for the preceding decade, while the population for the same period only rhows an increase of 21 per cent.

President Asks for Power to Meet all Situations.

The big Cunard liner, Lucania, sailing from New York to Liverpool, was sunk by a German submarine, on Sunday night, off the Irish coast. There were between 200 and 220 members of the crew, and from 70 to 80 passengers, 26 of which were Americans. The sinking of the Lucania was typical of the heart-lessness of this phase of war. It was struck without warning, at 9.30 at night, and sunk in forty-five minutes, a second torpedo being fired into it after most of the boats had cast off. It was the ship's wireless messages that summoned the help that saved the survivors in the boats. There were ten deaths due to excitement and exposure, three of whom were Amer-

The President appeared before Congress, on Monday, and asked for authority to use the forces of the U.S. to protect American lives and property against the German submarine menace by arming merchant vessels, to preserve an armed neutrality, and to employ "other instru-mentalities and methods" as they may be necessary. A bill embodying his request, and appropriating $100,000,000, to carry it out, was presented.

Both Senate and House had a wrangle over the bill, on account of the objection to giving the President monarchical power; as one expressed it, the act would be like signing a blank check, to be filled in afterwards by the President. While the Republicans led in the opposition, a number of peace Democrats concurred.

Strangely enough, the House apparently leads in its opposition to the Wilson request, as there the Democratic majority is heaviest. It is thought, however, that both Senate and House may agree to a compromise measure, practically acceding to the President's wish, though it is equally probable that Congress will be assembled in extra session, and remain in session until the war situation becomes more definite. The opposition to giving the President absolute power is pretty generally held as being repugnant to our Democratic form of government.

The sensation of the week has been the interference by Germany in the Mexican situation, in which a plot has evidently been under way by which Mexico, with the assistance of Germany (and by invitation, Japan) is to make war on the United States. Germany pictured to Mexbassador to the United States, has been in the possession of President Wilson for sell personal property and real estate.

> The latest indications are that the request of the President for arbitrary authority will be granted, and that an extra session may not be called. The bill empowering the President to arm merchant ships has been passed, and providing a $100,000,000 bond issue. There is little sign of division along political lines, and a strong united American sentiment prevails.

The revelation of the German plot aroused all shades of opinion, and led to practically a unanimous front, leaving no doubt as to the status of public sentiment, o far as Germany is concerned. German authorities are trying to make it appear that the discovered German let-ter is a ''fake'' produced in order to warm up American sentiment, but the State Department is apparently fully satisfied of its genuineness, though it seemsalmost incredible that German diplomacy would employ such a clumsy method. -----

Goose Raising.

Pasture is essential to the successful raising of geese, according to Farmers' Bulletin No. 767, recently issued by the United States Department of Agriculture.
The industry is at present on the basis of small flocks raised on general farms, few, if any, farms being devoted entirely to goose raising. In some producing sec tions, however, the fattening of geese conducted as a special business. For this business the geese are collected from general farms, usually over a large area, and are fattened for several weeks before be-

Geese can be raised in small numbers successfully and at a profit, says the bulletin, on farms where there is low rough pasture land with a natural supply of water. Geese are generally quite free from disease and all insect pests, but occasionally are affected by the diseases common to poultry. Grass makes up the bulk of the feed for geese, and it is doubtful whether it pays to raise them unless good grass range is available. A body of water where they can swim is considered essential during the breeding season, and is a good feature during the rest of the year. The market for geese is not so general as for chickens. This should be considered in undertaking the raising of geese. The demand and the price paid for geese are usually good in sections where goose fattening is conducted on a large scale. Many geese are kept in the South for the production of feathers rather than for their flesh, but the demand for their feathers is not so good as it has been, making the business less profitable. Wherever possible, the geese on a farm should have free range. Many farmers in the South keep them to kill the weeds in the cotton fields.

The Inaugural to be Modest.

The inaugural ceremonies will apparently not be as imposing as such events usually are, due to a general feeling that this is not a favorable time to indulge in display of pomp, nor to go to lavish expenditures to carry out a governmental formality. Moreover, the re-election of a President is never quite such an enthusiastic occasion as the election of a new one, and the high cost of living adds a deterrent influence.

There is a noticable lack of preparation for the event, which is also said to be in line with the President's own wishes. But, there will be a pretty general local participation, by states, and by the various branches of the governmental service. Maryland will send the 1st and 4th Regiments, and Troop A cayalry, but there will not be any Democratic clubs in the parade.

The women will make a showing, if plans do not miscarry. On the whole, the parade is expected to be the smallest of the kind witnessed in many years.

It is part of the plan for Mrs. Wilson to stand beside the President when he takes the oath. This is quite Wilsonian, and breaks another historic precedent. The nearest approach to the President's wife taking any part was eight years ago, when Mrs. Taft rode down Pennsylvania Avenue with her husband, but she aid not accompany him to the platform.

British Gains in Fighting.

The British forces, not only in France, but in Asia, made big advances this week. They advanced several miles, in France on a ten mile front, and are still advancing slowly, compelling the Germans to retreat, and it is believed that before the movement is ended it will represent one of the greatest allied gains of the war.

On the Tigris river the British forces have captured important Turkish forts, and set the Turkish army to flight along a wide front, one of the most important gains in that field for a long while, and one that apparently cuts communication between the German and Turkish forces. The French also appear to have had the best of the land fighting, this week; while the German submarine raids on merchant yessels have grown more nu-merous and serious, as it affects not only the food, but the ammunition supplies, of the allies. While hundreds of vessels are still safely arriving and departing, the submarine toll is much heavier than ever. The German retirement is said, by Berlin, to be only the carrying out of plans for shortening their lines of battle. This is an evidence of lack of men to hold wider lines, and will also give the Allies a smaller front to attack. The last report says that the British are still advancing, and that the gain has recovered a great amount of French territory.

British Food Regulations.

The British government is realizing the seriousness of submarine warfare on the food situation of that country, and is taking advance measures to try to keep on the safe side, among them being the

A guaranteed price to the farmers for

The importation of apples, tomatoes and fruits, to be prohibited entirely. Brewing will be cut down to 10,000,000 barrels, and a similar reduction in the output of spirits, which will be a saving, annually, of 600,000 tons of food stuffs. Powers will be given the Board of Agri-culture to compel farmers to cultivate their ground. An increases in the minimum of farm ages, running from 50 to 80 percent.

The importation of paper must be reduced by a further 640,000 tons annually.

The only exceptions made as to importations of fruit will be in the case oranges and bananas, in which the amount will be restricted 25 percent. The importation of tea, coffee and cocoa, is prohibited because there are large stocks of these on hand.

These restrictions will not only be along economic lines, but will release a large vessel tonnage for other more needed purposes. It is thought that fully 900,000 tons of shipping will be saved.

The following imports are also prohibited: Baskets, boots and shoes, brandy, books, canned fish, clocks, cottou hosiery and lace, embroidery and fancy needle-work, flowers of all kinds, furs, gloves, glass manufactures, hats and bonnets, mattings, perfumery, paints, plated and gilt ware, rum, typewriters, wines, wood and timber, and other articles. The design of this list is to protect heme dealers, as well as to prevent the expenditure of money for luxuries, especially not of home manufacture.

Postoffices Must Save Twine.

Some idea of the economic measures in use in the Postal system of this county, can be gathered from the following instructions issued to Postmasters relative to the use of wrapping twine:

"Use only the amount of twine neces sarry to tie packages securely. Once around the length and twice around the width are sufficient to hold packages of average size. For smaller packages less twine should be used.

In removing twine from incoming mail care should be taken to cut only a single strand at the knot, when the twine is tied in a hard knot, and it should be taken from the package intact if the package is

Every Postmaster, who may in this manner save more twine than is required at his office, should send the excess by mail to the nearest first-class postoffice or division headquarters of the railway mail service.

Twine, too short or otherwise unfit for reuse must be placed in receptacles, kept separate from paper and other waste materials, and when fifty pounds or over have thus been saved, instructions for disposition from the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General should be requested.'

TAFT was the worst defeated Republican candidate who ever ran for the Presidency, there is no man today in the United States, more generally held in high respect; and no ex-President this country has ever had is more in demand for public occasions, nor are the views on public questions of any man in the United States, more respectfully listened and regarded, than are those of Mr. Taft. As a matter of fact, he is very far from being a "dead one" politically. ----

THERE HAS LIKELY BEEN some weeping, and much "cussin," done by the "wet" newspapers that will lose some booze ad revenue because Congress had the decency, for once, to respect state laws against the liquor business. All that a state has to do, now, is to pass a law prohibiting such advertising, and Uncle Sam backs it up, whether the radical "free press" advocates like it or not. If the big newspapers want to be half-way decent, they will stop arguing for "freedom" to do what public sentiment says is indecent.

Should We Continue To Feed Europe?

does not become one to be narrow-minded about anything. Home Mission, to the institution still goes begging, though our exclusion of Foreign Missions, does not ability to give to it has doubled and represent a full-grown religion. We are our brother's keeper in a very wide sense. On the other hand, we have such excellent mottoes as "Charity begins at home," "America first," "There is no place like be thy country's," etc., etc.

So, there may be two sides to the quesfeeding Europe, which is practically what Europe, and that alone, is doing it; and ings of The Word are all against this this is also equally true of many articles | man-made, and man-practical disposition aside from food; but, for many hundreds of prosperity. of thousands the cost of these other items is making it more difficult to have the for the good of humanity? is not a quesmeans to buy food, so, in effect the whole tion giving much trouble these days. trend of high prices is to place on food necessities almost the entire burden of are still as short and stingy as they ever the change wrought by the war demand in Europe for our products.

It is a live and open question, therefore, as to how far this country ought to go in the direction of feeding Europe, because that also means laying the cost, almost directly, on our home consumers, and that is a serious fact. If there could be such a thing as a natural market price for food for our home use, such as would be set by supply and demand, and a world demand market and price for our unneeded surplus, that would represent an absolutely fair condition, but, such a situation is impossible, apparently.

Just now, we are experiencing absolute "free trade" at the export end. This free the gift of life, strength, intellect and optrade in selling, of course, is demanded by those who have the products to sell, and is as positively opposed by home consumers, and especially by those whose income has not swelled sufficiently to compensate for the increased prices.

The only way in which the situation shipments, which, by the way is just best, they are but "poor rich men," and what Germany is trying to do with her never will be more-men who once lived submarine warfare. So, strangely enough, should Germany succeed in preventing European trade with this country, that would almost immediately compel lower prices of food in this country. Food producers, therefore, must be anti-German, in order to boost their own financial interests, while our poor, especially, should be pro-German, for the same reason. Should this country go to war with Germany, which our governmental necessities are apt to require, the act would mean continued selling to Europe, in all probability; but it would also mean continued high prices-or even higher prices -for our own people. So, in order to maintain our National honor, and prevent National subserviency, we would be, in effect, doing so at the financial cost of our own population.

Trying to place the odium of high cost on food speculators, and the much abused 'middle man' will not do, because such charges are largely untrue. Food is high at its origin. That it needs numerous handlings before it reaches all consumers, is necessary, and each handler is entitled to a profit. There is no avoiding this, unless a city, for instance, will undertake the buying and distributing, and then the cost of the latter is added to the tax-payers; or unless charitable institutions will act as distributors without pay. The only way to reduce the cost of food, is to reduce it in first hands.

In our own humble opinion, the whole peaple of this country must be given a fair deal on the general proposition. The producers alone, should not dictate a course beneficial to their own selfish interests. The best sort of patriotism is that which is devoid of selfishness, and at a time like this, the rights of the home brother should certainly be entitled to decent consideration against the needs of the foreign brnther. And this is especially true because the poor, the women and children, of our own land have had nothing to do with stirring up Europe's

True, the same classes in Europe are just as innocent; but, when it comes to a real show down of one's duty, home interests should come first, and the interests of those least able to take care of themselves. When a ship at sea is about to sink, the order is, "Women and children first to the life-boats," and we must come to that way of thinking and acting in this food proposition that is largely becoming a starvation proposition-or at least, a terribly burdensome infliction on our home people.

Prosperity Does not Reach the Church.

Notwithstanding the fact that there are handreds of men in every community profiting by present "war prices," there day its people purchase as great a bulk is little or no evidence that they are spending any larger portion of their incomes for the spread of "The Word," or that to be no bottom to the British purse, and they are in any way contributing more liberally to the uplift, and lightening up, of the world in general. •--Shortage in Fertilizers.

A big share of our farm products will go next summer to feed the armies and hungry people of Europe. The cost of living has been forced to an almost intolerable heighs by this drain on our resources. And now comes a new threat in the likelihood that fertilizers are going to be scarcer and higher than ever this year, thus reducing the productivity of the soils.

The farmer may think that if farm products fall off, at least they will be higher in price, so that he will get a larger figure for them, with less labor of harvesting. But the country as a whole will suffer, and the consumer will be closer up against the wall and less able in future years to buy commodities. All of which will hurt the farmer.

However, there is no question that every food producer will do his best to raise a good crop. He realizes that at the high prices that will prevail, it is a golden chance. It may merely be suggested, following the warning of farm bureaus, that farmers order their fertilizers early, so as to avoid getting stranded owing to the stortage of freight cars. Fertilizers will do the farmer little good if they have to stand in freight stations and warehouses for weeks after they should be in the ground. Also the farmers are urged to conserve every ounce of stable manure. Many a farmer, after sitting around the grocery store complaining about his failure to make money, allows manure to stand so that its vital elements leach into the ground, and so exposed to sun and wind that you can see the precious plant food escaping in form of steam. All of which is a part of our national spendthrift policy, and one of the reasons why for many years farming was a discredited occupation. - Frek' k News.

England's Great Wealth.

More and more do the astounding financial operations of England stagger the human mind. Upon the dizzy top of a sixteen-billion-dollar national debt that country swiftly and with apparent ease places another three and a half billions. The Most Sought After Thing in the World.

In the March American Magazine a writer says:
"Men have been living on this world for many centuries. They have traded in their lives for many different things fame, money, power. But the consensus of opinion through the ages is that the thing most to be desired is happiness. No man can be really happy unless his exercises is clear; therefore, it mays his consience is clear: therefore, it pays to be honest and to treat the other fellow as one would like to be treated. No one can be happy who sacrifices his health; therefore, fame and too much money—either of which usually demand health in exchange—are not to be desired. No man can have the highest happiness unless he can feel that he is doing a little good by living, that he is going to leave the world a bit better after he has gone.

Therefore, it pays to bring children into the world and care for them; it pays to

He Saw the Black Hole.

The nest thing I wanted to see in In dia was the "Black Hole" of Calcutta I could hardly wait to see the famous prison in which, in 1756, 133 people were suffocated in a single night. One hundred and fifty-six British prisoners, captured by the natives, were cast into a room eighteen feet square, and the following morning only twenty-three of them were living.

Without waiting to unpack my trunk I hurried to the spot. But I was sadly disappointed, for all there was there was a monument with a chain around it. I felt cheated. In America we would have given the visitor something for his money. We would have preserved the prison, with its two small windows, and put a showcase in the corner with samples of the nails and a rusty hinge. The restored prison would have been filled with wax figures, their coats noticeably dusty and hunched at the collar, and outside would have been a lineal descendant of one of the survivors, selling post card views and a history of the "hole" for a quarter.-Homer Croy in Leslie's.

Strap Hangers In Tokyo.

After one has ridden for a few weeks on Tokyo trams he realizes that more than 2,000,000 people, living within a radius of three miles of the imperial palace, require many trams to carry them. Seats are always at a premium. Even the New York subway is not as continually crowded. The trams are fast, well handled and plenteous, but a moving stairway or sidewalk covering all the tram lines in the city would scarcely fill the bill.

There are five or six stations from which trains depart for different parts of the empire, but these stations are only joined by city trams, so that if one wants to go from Tokyo station, the terminus of the Shimonoseki line to Europe, to Ueno station, whence trains depart for Nikko, Karuizawa. Sendai and Hokkaido, he must take a riksha, a taxicab or a street car or else circle the city for more than twenty miles in more than an hour to reach a station that is only a mile and a half away as the crow flies.-Maynard Owen Williams in Christian Herald.

The Broken Broker.

The late Judge Pennypacker of Philadelphia was an advocate of the enfranchisement of woman, but he also advocated justice in the relationship between the sexes for man.

"Weman," he said whimsically one day at the Pennsylvania Historical society, "mustn't play it both ways. She mustn't get the vote and the equal wage through man's sense of equity and then get all kinds of unfair privileges through his sense of gallantry.

'There's a lot of truth in the story of the young broker who after his failure was thrown over by a pretty girl.

"'Why was the engagement broken off?' a banker asked the ruined broker. "'Well,' he answered, 'after I'd given her a string of pearls, an opera box and a birthday gift of a twelve cylinder limousine I went to smash, and her people accused me of amusing myself at her expense." "-Baltimore Sun.

And the best part of it is you'll enjoy it, and the satisfaction that comes when it is done will be worth more than hearing your uncle has left you $10,000.-American

HOME GARDENS AND ROTATIONS

ROTATION OF CROPS ADVOCATED FOR IMPROVEMENT OF SOIL FERTILITY.

SYSTEMATIC PLANTING PLANS

Large Amount Of Food Products May Be Had From a Small Area Of Land.

College Park, Feb. 15 .- In his work with the various County Demonstration Agents, S. B. Shaw, Specialist in Horticultural Extension, has had an excellent opportunity to make a careful study of home gardens. In a recent article on this subject, Mr. Shaw says: "The advantages of having a garden from which an abundance of fruits and vegetables can be had are well-known. In some instances. however the land used in the production of these crops does not yield as abundantly as it might if the garden was planned so that every part would be growing some crop each month in the year. To bring about this condition it is necessary, first to lay out the garden in such a way that the greatest amount of work can be done in the shortest time, and then practice a system of crop rotation.

"Sometimes fruit trees, shrubbery or flowers are planted promiscuously throughout the garden. This practice has its disadvantages, in that it is difficult to plow, harrow and cultivate around trees and shrubbery without injuring them to some extent.

"Few people realize the large amount of food products and income that can be derived from the systematic planting and cultivation of a small area of land, when devoted to the growing of garden crops. Too often the planting ceases with the first crops sown, and when these have matured, the fertile soil is either allowed to produce a magnificent crop of weeds, or else remains idle until the following season.

"The systematic rotation of farm crops have been advocated for a number of years, the principal end in view being an improvement of soil fertility. A well-planned rotation of garden crops brings about this same result and in addition accomplishes two other purposes. It affords a greater amount of food supplies for a longer period of time, and, to a certain ex tent, it aids in the control of certain insect and disease pests.

"As a rule, most insects and disseases attacking garden crops can be controlled by the application of suit able poisons and chemicals in the form of 'spray materials.' However, some of these troubles, particularly those diseases occurring in the soil, are hard to combat in this way. Rotation ofter proves the only remedy in instances of this kind, hence the advantage of having a well-planned system of grow ing the different crops.

"Insects and diseases thriving on plants belonging to a certain family or class of plants will often find the plants of a different family entirely unsuited to their use. For instance beets, parsnips and turnips are seldom affected with the same troubles that prove destructive to cucumbers. cantaloupes and watermelons, and vice versa. Here, too, a carefully planned rotation often proves an effective means of control for various garden

MANAGEMENT OF BRED SOWS.

College Park, Feb. 15 .- In a recent article written especially for the County Demonstration Agents for use in connection with the local Boys' Agricultural Clubs throughout the State, S. S. Buckley, Animal Industry Extension Specialist, treats this sub ject very thoroughly. He says, in part: "Get acquainted with the sow, Look her over often and carefully and be sure that she is free from lice. If she is kept with other hogs, they must be free from lice. Use crude oil or coal oil and lard about the ears, on the inside of front legs, on the sides of the head and down the back. Don't give the lice a show to live.

"Keep the pens and the yards clean. Have dry bedding in the houses. Wash the feeding troughs and keep them clean at all times.

"The sow is being kept to produce pigs. You are feeding the sow really for the good of those pigs. If the sow gets too fat, the pigs will get too fat, and they will die at farrowing time If the sow gets poor, thin and weak, the pigs will be weak, and they will die at birth or shortly after. "You must keep the sow fed well with food that gives strength, and which can be used to make the bodies of these pigs strong without becoming fat. Corn or cornmeal by itself is not the kind of feed, because it makes fat very easily and makes heat. Bran beans, peas, alfalfa and clover hay meat scrap, fish scrap and tankage make hard, lean meat and give strength. Grass pastures are good and help to keep the bowels in proper condition. In winter time grazing on rye, wheat or clover is good, but if the sow cannot graze, she should have some sliced potatoes, beets or other root crop to help regulate the condition of the bowels. Keep the sow in good condition without allowing her to become fat. As the time approaches for her to farrow feed her plenty of grain for strength and roots for regu

VINDICATED THE MULE.

A Legal Case Where the Honor of the Animal Was Involved.

One of the most famous cases reported in the Missouri Law Reports is that of Lyman versus Dale, known as the "celebrated mule case."

It seems that Dale's hired hand, Parker, after a day's work supplying water to a clover huller, was passing through the city of Springfield, riding one mule and leading another. He met Lyman just opposite a pile of bricks in the street, capped by a red lantern. The mule being led became frightened at the bricks and lantern and, jumping aside, broke a wheel out of Lyman's buggy.

This laid the foundation of the case. Lyman sued Dale for a damage of $5, charging him with "negligence in handling a wild and unruly mule."

The case was first tried in a justice of the peace court at Springfield, Mo., and was appealed to the circuit court. From there it was taken to the court of appeals, which court, failing to agree, sent it to the supreme court of

This court held that Lyman could not recover damages unless he proved that the muie was "wild and unruly." Judge Henry Lamm said that, while the amount involved in the case was small, the value of the case was great for the sake of the doctrine and also because it involved the "honor of the Missouri mule."-Exchange.

These figures-320,817-represent the actual number of cars manufactured by us since August 1, 1916, and delivered by our agents to retail buyers.

The unusual fall and winter demand for Ford cars makes it necessary for us to confine the distribution of cars only to those agents who have orders for immediate delivery to retail customers, rather than to permit any agent to stock cars in anticipation of later spring sales.

We are issuing this notice to intending buyers that they may protect themselves against delay or disappointment in securing Ford cars. If, therefore, you are planning to purchase a Ford car, we advise you to place your order and take delivery now.

Immediate orders will have prompt attention.

Delay in buying at this time may cause you to wait several months.

A UNIFORM SURPRISE

Story of the American Revolution Laid In General Washington's Southernmost Command.

By ETHEL HOLMES @.......

General Washington, commander in chief of the patriot forces during the American Revolution, had a very large territory to watch over. True, the revolting colonies all lay on the Atlantic coast, but they reached from Maine on the north to Georgia on the south, inclusive, and it must also be remembered that the only method of conveyance on land in those days was the legs of a man or those of other animals, principally the horse.

Naturally Washington was obliged to rely on his lieutenants in different sections. In South Carolina General Marion was carrying on a hide and seek warfare with British troopers under Colonel Tarleton, an energetic young cavalry officer.

One evening a man stopped at the plantation of John Rutledge, a cotton planter, and asked if he could be lodged for the night. All the men of the family were with Marion, the "Swamp Fox," as he was called, the only inmates of the manor house being Mrs. Rutledge and her daughter, Kate. At the time of the stranger's coming Kate was on the gallery, and it was of her that he made his request. He wore the clothes of a poor white man, but there were indications that he was a gentleman.

"We are patriots in this house, sir," said Kate, "and my father, who is fighting for our independence, charged us to admit no one who favored the British cause. If you are one of us you are welcome to what we have to give; if not, we must decline to receive you.

The young man did not reply immediately to this. When he did he said: "To make truthful assurance that I am a patriot would be impossible. I can only say this: If I receive your hospitality you need have no fear that I will abuse it. I promise you that no harm shall come to any one in this house through me." There was a look on the man's face that betokened he was in fear of something. Besides, he looked tired and hungry. Miss Rutledge being a woman, the stranger excited her commiseration. There was an unmistakable sincerity in his words. She yielded so far as to invite him in to partake of a meal, reserving her decision as to further entertainment till later. A negro cook was soon preparing a supper, while the stranger, having turned his horse over to a black stableman, was in an upper chamber getting rid of South Carolina dust.

When his supper was ready he w summoned by a quadroon house servant. Kate Rutledge felt that she should be present with the guest at supper, but since his dress betokened that he was of inferior social grade and he seemed to have Tory sympathies she felt it beneath her dignity to do so. As soon as he had eaten he called for her and said:

"If you will permit me to occupy the meanest of your chambers for the night I will go forth at dawn without disturbing you or any of the household. If you insist upon my moving on I will sleep under the stars. Which course shall I take?"

This was too much for Miss Rutledge's education in hospitality, and she permitted the man to remain in the house. As soon as she had given her consent he retired to his chamber, saying that he had had no sleep for some time and since he must be off early could not now take a full night's rest. In thanking his hostess for her kindness to him it seemed to her that for the moment he forgot himself and fell into the manner of a gentleman At any rate, she suspected that he was of higher grade than his coarse coat and breeches and woolen stockings be-However, there was not enough incongruity between the manner and the clothes to make much of an impression on her.

A few hours later when Miss Rutledge was about to prepare for bed she heard a loud knocking below and. taking a candle, went down to see who might be seeking admittance. Opening the door, there stood a young man in the uniform of a captain in the Continental army. He entered hurriedly. closed the door behind him and said;

"Hide me, Kate, quick! I was captured this afternoon by the British and escaped this evening. They are after me.

"Won't they search every nook and corner?

"I fear they will." "Wouldn't you have a better chance in a disguise?" 'What disguise have you for me?"

Kate paused to think. "Father's clothes," she said presently, "are too large for you, and Arthur's are too small. A stranger came to the house this evening and asked for food and ledging. He is about your size. If you could use his clothes they would serve you admirably.'

"Where is he?" "Asleep upstairs."

"I'll go and see what I can do with

The officer was Captain Stringfellow, the fiance of Kate Rutledge. He escended to the stranger's chamber, awakened him and said to him:

"My friend, I would like to borrow your clothes."

The man, seeing an officer in Continental uniform, looked surprised. "If I lend you my clothes I shall have nothing to wear.' "As soon as it is daylight Miss Rutledge will send out for apparel for

"And if there is delay I suppose I can wear your uniform?" "Certainly!"

"In that case you are welcome to my clothes. But I suppose you will not need them till tomorrow?" "Indeed I shall. I need them now."

"Very well; take them." While Stringfellow was doffing his uniform and putting on the citizen's clothes the latter asked him what it all meant. The captain told him of his capture by the British and his escape and that he expected pursuers might arrive at any moment and search the house for him. The stranger listened to all this intently, but made no com-

"By the bye," said Stringfellow, suddenly remembering that if the man were so disposed he might betray him, 'which side are you on?"

"Never mind that. I shall do you no harm or any one else in this house. That I promised the young lady who kindly took me in, fed me and gave me a bed for the night."

When Stringfellow had changed his clothes the stranger said that if men came to the house to make a search he would prefer to be up and about. So he arose, put on the captain's uniform and went downstairs with him. Kate Rutledge received the two men in the great hall, used principally for a living room, and, seeing the stranger in the uniform of an American officer, was not only surprised at his costume, but that in such apparel he appeared far more gentlemanlike than ever before. Besides, he greeted her with the manner of a born aristocrat. "Do you not fear," she said, "that in this uniform if British soldiers come they will make a prisoner of you?"

"If they do I will prove that I am not an American officer.' "But that will betray Captain Stringfellow. They will surmise at once that he has changed clothes with you." "Never fear for that. I will not reveal the true situation until there is no danger of betraying him. You kindly took me in and gave me meat, drink and shelter. No one in this house shall suffer through me." The three chatted together, the stranger being informed as to the relation between the other two, and the lady's name. But he gave no information about himself. His change from a poor white man to a gentleman would have excited the curiosity of Stringfellow and his fiancee had it not been that they were momentarily expecting a party of British soldiers to look for the American.

Presently sounds of horses' hoofs announced the coming of the pursuers. A voice without was heard detailing a sergeant and six men to search the house, while the rest rode on. Then the door was thrown open and the searchers entered.

"Come, come, sergeant!" said the guest in a tone of authority. "When you enter a dwelling of gentlefolk use the knocker.'

The sergeant looked at the speaker in a puzzled way, then suddenly stood erect and saluted. "What means this, Major Thorn-dyke? How come you to be in a rebel uniform?"

"What is your business here?" asked the major instead of replying. 'We captured a rebel captain this afternoon. He escaped, and we are following him. I have the orders of the lieutenant commanding to search "And you have now the orders of Major Thorndyke to retire from this house and leave it undisturbed." The sergeant looked for an explanation to follow the words, but since no explanation was vouchsafed he saluted and retired with his men. However, as he was about to close the door behind him Major Thorndyke ordered him to ride on and recall the search-

During this scene Stringfellow and Miss Rutledge looked on with increasing wonder. As soon as the soldiers had gone the guest turned to them and

"You see, captain, that I have kept my word. You are as safe here from the king's troops as if you were at General Marion's headquarters. If there are rebel troops about I am in far more danger than you. Three days ago I left Colonel Tarleton's headquarters in the disguise you now wear with a view to gaining information as to the "Swamp Fox's" lair, that we might trap him. I failed and was working my way back to where I belong through this country, where the king's troops and the Continentals are both roving, when a few hours ago I asked food and shelter of Miss Rutledge. She gave them to me, and I verily believe in her kindness of heart if I had been discovered here by your men she would have protected me. You must admit, captain, that I risked something in donning your uniform, for had your men instead of mine come here I would have been hanged for a spy. You are at liberty to get back into it and without danger from our troops so long as I am with you."

The evening was finished with refreshments ordered from the larder by Miss Rutledge, after which all retired to their rooms. In the morning Captain Stringfellow appeared in his uniform, and Major Thorndyke, having sent a trooper for his own regimentals, presented himself at breakfast in proper apparel. After the meal had been finished Captain Stringfellow was sent under a flag of truce to General Marion's army.

EVERY KIND OF FAD HAS SOME ADVANTAGE.

Trouble Is, One Is Apt to Go Into Them With Too Great Enthusiasm at First-Three Good Examples of That Kind.

Do you remember a few years ago when we all went wild about paperbag cookery? Everything from soup to pudding we baked in paper bags, and we vowed that every dish that had been cooked by that new method possessed a strange deliciousness that never have been gained but through the paper bag. We bought recipe books and no end of bags. We liked the fad for a while and then we forgot. We had a few failures and we became disgusted. So passed the fad for paper

And then came a new vogue for cas-serole cooking. To be sure, similar dishes had been cooked with similar results in France, Spain, Germany and Scotland, and other lands, for eons of years. But somehow our culinary interest was focused on the casserole, and we swore our eternal and undying devotion to it. It was chicken en casserole, beef en casserole and everything else en casserole until we forgot all about the casserole and relegated it to the top shelf with the

At one time in the history of our culinary experiments we became addicted to the use of the fireless cooker. We spent our good money on a large and complete outfit and spent long hours experimenting with the various appliances. But before we had saved in fuel enough to cover half the cost of the fireless cooker we grew weary and up to the attic went the fireless cooker in disgrace. Now, the really sensible thing to do would be to accept these fads for what they are worth and to keep them all. There are things that can in no other way be so well or so conveniently cooked as in paper bags. Baked fish in a paper bag is delicious and leaves no dishes to be washed. Casserole chicken is more delicious than any other sort of chicken and an occasional casserole stew is well worth while. For cereals and many sorts of meat dishes the fireless cooker is a convenience to every housewife, and surely vegetables and puddings cooked in glass have many decided advantages. Therefore, keep all these devices for what they are worth, and take care not to exhaust your interest at first by too great

Bread Pudding.

Butter three thick slices of stale bread and put in a buttered pudding dish with one pint of milk. Set this on back of the stove, or, if ther is a stove shelf, on the shelf and allow it to soak one hour. Beat two eggs with a pinch of salt and pour, with a large cooking spoon of Jamaica rum, into the bread and milk, breaking the bread in pieces with the spoon; sprinkle in a few seeded raisins or currants and bake in a slow oven until perfectly done, usually about an hour and a half. Knitting Help.

When knitting a sock or stocking if one will add a thread of good white linen to the varn when beginning the heel and knit every stitch plain on the right side and purl every stitch on the wrong side, which will do away with the ribs, the heel will not be much thicker than the rest of the foot and will wear at least three times as long. This is useful for children's winter stockings and men's socks.

Pare the apples, cut them in halves, remove core and put them on the stove with a small quantity of water; stew ten minutes. Pour milk over soaked crackers, add eggs beaten, and stir in the apples with the sugar. Add flavoring and grate nutmeg over the top of the pudding. Place butter on top just as the pudding is ready to be put into the oven. Bake in a slow oven until firm and brown. Serve hot.

Garnishes for Foods.

Flowers, fruits and the sweet gelatin garnishes should be used only on desserts. Jellies make attractive garnishes, for they sparkle and quiver and, best of all, add to the taste of what they decorate. Little molds for stamping out decorations may be bought, but they are not needed if you have a sharp-pointed knife and a steady hand.

Invert a glass of very cold currant or crabapple jelly onto a cutting board and slice it, and then cut it into strips hearts, rings and such figures. These are pretty on all custards and on floating island and delicate molds.

Biscuit Tortoni in Boxes. One cupful died macaroons finely crushed, two cupfuls thin cream, half cupful sugar, third cupful sherry, one pint heavy cream. Soak macaroon in thin cream one hour, add sugar, wine and freeze to a mush; then add heavy cream beaten stiff. Mold, pack in salt and ice and let stand two hours. Dream Cakes. Melt one-half cupful of grated cheese and add to it one-eighth teaspoonful paprika, one-eighth teaspoonful salt, a few grains of cayenne and, if not thin enough, add cream, to make a smooth paste. Cut fresh bread in very small slices, spread a slice with the cheese mixture, press another slice on quite firmly and saute in butter. When brown on one side turn over and brown the other.

Shrimps a La St. Jacques.

Chop two cans of shrimps and fry in one tablespoonful of butter with a small onion chopped fine, add threequarters of a cupful of milk, salt and pepper to taste, yolk of one egg. Stir but do not let boil. Pour into buttered dish or clamshells, cover with bread crumbs and bake until brown. Serve with sliced lemon.

Jugged Chicken.

Cut up chicken as if for fricassee. To every pound of meat allow two heaping teaspoonfuls of flour, one scant teaspoonful of salt, one-quarter of pepper. Roll each piece of chicken in the mixture. Pack closely in a large beanpot, cover with boiling water and bake until tender, two or three hours.

Favorite Salad.

One pint of baked beans, four teaspoonfuls chopped celery, two tablespoonfuls chopped onions, two cupfuls chopped raw cabbage. Mix together and serve with your favorite salad dressing.

For Silverplate.

When putting away best silver after ise try placing a piece of loaf sugar in both teapot, coffee pot and hot water jug to absorb any moisture that might be left in, and leave lid open.

Wealth That Works

Money saved and deposited in a bank is wealth that works. Wealth that works is capital. Unlike brain and muscle, it does not wear out or deteriorate. It grows and improves.

The only gain from labor is what is saved. Labor, therefore, makes wealth and when wealth works it is capital.

Capital at work pays wages, which, when saved, creates more capital. Labor is the producer when labor saves.

Lesson X.-First Quarter, For March 11, 1917.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, John vi, 22-40. Memory Verses, 32, 33-Golden Text, John vi, 35-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Anything that will give a man a living, provide that which he needs to supply his physical necessities, seems to most people to be the all important thing. Here is a man who abundantly fed more than 5,000 people and by His helpers waited on them all and served them. They must not lose sight of Him, for with Him they never ited be hungry. So they follow Him across the sea and find Him. He knew what was in them. He read their hearts and told them why they sought Him (verse 26). Then He told them of something more important than life for the body-everlasting life and bread from heaven and a resurrection body which would never die. In other discourses He told them, or, rather, his own disciples, that if they made the coming of His kingdom their first concern their Heavenly Father would see that they never should lack food or raiment (Matt. vi, 31-33; Luke xii, 29-31). But before any one can make the coming of His kingdom their first business they must obtain eternal life as the gift of God, and this is more important than keeping the body alive, a thing that only God Himself can do, for He giveth life and breath and all things. and no one can keep alive his own soul (Acts xvii, 25, 28; Ps. xxii, 29). To the man who thought he had plenty to keep his body and soul together for a long time God said: "This night thy soul shall be required of thee. Then whose shall those things be?"

The great thing is to be rich toward God by receiving Himself as our life and then ever be found laying up treasure in heaven by a whole hearted missionary life of winning others to Him and thus helping to hasten the coming of His kingdom (Luke xii, 15-21). To the question of these people, What shall we do that we might work the works of God? His answer was that the one thing needful, the one essential thing, was to believe on Him whom God had sent-that is, receive Him (verses 28, 29; i, 12). Then they ask for a sign, some work of His. that they might believe on Him, and this after they had just seen Him feed thousands of people with a few loaves and fishes. What more did they want? What more could they ask? Then they seem to make light of His recent feeding of the multitude by quoting Moses as feeding Israel in the wilderness This led to His further discourse on eating Himself as the real manna, the true bread from heaven. Mark His wonderful words, "My Father giveth you the true bread from heaven, for the bread of God is He which cometh down from heaven and giveth life unto the world;" "I am the living bread which came down from heaven; if any man eat of this bread he shall live bread that I will give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world." "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink His blood ye have no life in you" (verses 32, 33, 38, 42, 51, 53).

No mere man could say such things and be truthful or in His right mind, but He was the God-man, God manifest in the flesh, and He was The Truth. Compare verses 47, 54 and note that He says to eat His flesh and drink His blood is the same as believing in Him, for the result of each is eternal life, and there are not two ways of obtaining eternal life. Compare verse 56 and I John iii, 24, and note that eating His flesh and drinking His blood bring the same result as keeping His commandments. So the one great thing is just believing Him, receiving Him, appropriating Him, as we do food for our bodies. As He lived by the Father who sent Him, we are to eat Him and live by Him (verse 57). This is no new figure, for the prophets understood it, one saying, "Thy words were found, and I did eat them, and thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of my heart," another being admonished in these words: "Eat that thou findest; eat this roll, and go speak unto the house of Israel; * * * fill they bowels with this roll that I give thee * * * and speak with my words unto them" (Jer. xv, 16; Ezek. iii, 1-4).

Because of these sayings the Jews murmured at Him, as did also many of His disciples, yet He went on to speak of ascending up where He was before (verses 41, 61, 62). Many of His disciples even went back and walked no more with Him, but if they had been true disciples they would have continued with Him. As it is written, "They went out from us, but they were not of us" (verse 66 and I John ii, 19). Simon Peter's answer when He asked. "Will ye also go away?" is very notable: "Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life, and we believe and are sure that thou art that Christ, the Son of the Living God" (verses 67-69). Perhaps no word in this discourse has brought more comfort to souls than the last clause of verse 37, "Him that cometh to Me I will in no wise cast out." So when any unsaved sinner or any wandering backslider comes to Him they may be certain of being accepted. The first clause of that verse should rest us concerning the sure completion of His Futility of Arguments.

As no men are created equal, all arguments, if indulged in, must be carried on either with superior persons or inferior persons. Viewed in this way, the utter futility of all arguments becomes apparent at once.

First, it is futile, of course, to carry on an argument with a superior person, because, being superior, he will have such complete contempt for your opinions that he either will not listen to you at all or else he will listen with patronizing smile and immediately dismiss from his mind what you have to say as not worth consideration.

It is easily futile to argue with an inferior person, for if you have anything to argue about worth the time of a mau of your standing and mental capacity, then it is absurd to waste talk upon an inferior being who will not be able to appreciate it. Thus are disputatious people isolated from the world, and there is no help for it.

Old English cookery was astonishingly lavish. Yorkshire cooks, for instance, seemed to fling about dozens of eggs and pints of cream. A favorite pie to send to one's friends at Christmas was made like this: Take a turkey and bone it; take a goose and bone it, and so on with a chicken, a pheasant, a partridge, a pigeon and a lark; then put the lark in the pigeon, the pigeon in the partridge, the partridge in the pheasant, the pheasant in the chicken, the chicken in the goose and the goose in the turkey. The turkey should then be placed in a dish with a couple of hares to fill up the crevices and six pounds of fresh butter, covered and cooked. The recipe said this was "an agreeable pie to eat cold."-London Tit-Bits.

What Thrift Means.

Thrift is positively essential to sucsuccessful. A man should put his own name on his list of creditors. He should cut down his expenditures 10 per cent and pay that amount to himself. Any business should pay 10 per cent, and a man should consider himself a business proposition which should pay dividends. When he begins to see this he will become thrifty. It has been estimated that if a man who begins to work at the age of twenty on a salary of $50 a month and receives an increase of $5 each year for forty years will save 10 per cent of his salary and invest it wisely or put it in a savings bank at compound interest, at the end of that time he will be financially independent and can retire with a comfortable income.

Canvas Water Bags For Foresters. A canvas water bag that can be carried conveniently on a pack horse is used by members of the United States forest service when it is necessary to transport water to places remote from a regular supply for drinking and cooking purposes. It can also be used to quench incipient fires by means of a small hand pump carried along with it. The container is made of heavy cotton fabric without seams or patches, rendered water tight by treatment with a mixture of paraffin and turpentine. Each bag has a capacity of ten and three-quarters gallons of water and weighs when filled about ninety-eight pounds. Thus a pack load of two bags weighs nearly 200 pounds, exclusive of packsaddle and blanket.-Popular Me-

"That's all right, dad," replied the unrepentant son. "It isn't as if I was asking you to bear the whole burden. You just furnish the money and I'll try to find the time."-St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A disastrous freight wreck was apparently narrowly missed, last Sunday afternoon, just north of town between Null's bridge and the old brick yard, by a freight special going south at good speed. A part of the brake mechanism to the third box car from the rear end of the train, broke and fell to the centre of the track, cutting and fell to the centre of the track, cutting into the ties for over a half mile, when it finally broke a dozen or more ties and should have a reliable remedy handy, threw the front truck of the car off the Fever, sore throat, tight chest and croupy track before the train was stopped. The car was heavily loaded, which likely preyented it from jumping the track, and perhaps wrecking a large portion of the train. Division Foreman Frock, with his hands and the train crew, replaced the car and brought it as tar as town in a crippled condition, and repaired the track in time for the evening trains. ----

An Unusual Farmer.

Chambersburg, Pa., Feb. 28.-Abram Light, a farmer, has nearly 100 bushels of potatoes that he does not need for his own use. A dealer offered him $2.50 a "No," replied Light, "you cannot buy them. I had good crops this year and now I am going to help those who have not been so fortunate. I will sell them to my neighbors for $2.00 a bushel, but no more than a bushel to any one. I have more than 300 bushels of wheat and corn. I will not sell more than one hundred bushels of wheat at a time, and then only to a local miller, so that my neighbors may be able to get food for their families." In these days of inviting high prices, and holding for more, the example of Mr. Light is a conspicuous exception, and shows a neighborly disposition that is worthy of greater employment.

The greater part of the tremendous Mrs. Kate Hamilton, of Taneytown, and | mail-order business that liquor houses of Howard LeGore, wife and daughter, Baltimore have been engaged in, faces the prospect of being swept out of exist-ence with the passage by the House, fol-lowing the Senate, of a bone-dry law for prohibition states. It is estimated that the passage of the bill will decrease the consumption of liquor from 25 to 40 per cent in the United States, and as the mail-order constitutes a very profitable, and in some cases, the sole business of the distributors, some idea of the scope of the action of Congress can be gained.

> > Old Lord Mayors' Banquets.

There used to be a good deal of savagery about London's lord mayors banquets, even in times comparatively recent. The humbler guests at least struggled with each other for food and had to bring their own table cutlery if they wished to eat decently and in comfort. For instance, Samuel Pepys tells us how, at the banquet served up two years after the restoration, there were many tables, "but none in the hall but the mayors and the lords of the privy council that had napkins or knives, which was very strange." Still more strange to such a lover of female beauty as Pepys was the plainness of feature of the city dames. Of the ladies' room he says: "I could not discern one handsome face. * * * Being wearled with looking upon a company of ugly women, I went away and took coach and through Cheapside and there saw the pageants, which were very silly."
