REPUBLICANS MAKE A SWEEP OF THE COUNTRY

Elect a Big Working Majority in Senate and House.

Except for the fact that no election is absolutely certain until after the votes are counted, the election of Harding and Coolidge was practically assured from the time of their nomination. In other words, the Republicans had no lucky combination of circumstances favorable for the Dem-ocratic candidates, against them, this time, as they had four and eight years ago; and, right or wrong, the Wilson adminstration of the past four years was long ago picked for public disapproval, mainly because of the League of Nations, and extravagance in the conduct of the war.

The immensity of the victory for Harding is clarifying. It attests American sentiment, not merely party sentiment. A modest majority of electoral votes, would have left some questions—particularly the League of Nations—open to debate. It has also likely served notice that the masses of voters want a return to legislation by Congress, and a retirement of the dominating influence of the President as dictator and arbiter in affairs political and industrial.

The pluralities in many states broke all previous records. No state gave an increased Democratic plurality. Among the big figures given Harding

The Republican membership in the Senate is increased from 49 to 58 or 59; the membership in the House about 260, thereby giving a greatly increased working majority in Congress. Twenty-six Republican Governors were elected outside of the South, five of whom replace Democratic Gov-

Harding's popular plurality will be over 6,000,000.

Among the surprises was the election of a Republican Congressman in Texas; the defeat of Champ Clark, of Missouri, former Democratic speaker of the House, and a member for 25 years; Gov. Cox lost his city, county and voting precinct; three Democratic Senators named Smith, were defeated; the Republicans made by gains in Louisian Constitution. big gains in Louisiana, Georgia and Perhaps the most striking was in Ohio, where the huge Harding majority carried into office five That I new congressmen, giving the Republicans the entire Ohio delegation of twenty-two members. A net gain was made of seven Republicans in New York, six in Pennsylvania, two in California, one in Connecticut, one in Maryland, two in Massachusetts, one in Michigan, one in Nevada, two in New Jersey, one in Oklahoma, one in Texas and one in West Virginia. The only net Democratic gain thus far reported was in Kentucky, where Representative King Swope was defeated.

VOTE OF THE STATE.

Four Republican Congressmen, and Senator Elected.

The vote of the State, in general, was a surprise even to those who had felt assured that Harding would carry it. The woman vote was unquestionably a strong factor in Republican success; but aside from this the same influences prevailed as are apparent in the vote of other States the trend of public sentiment away from the Democracy of Wilson. Harding's plurality of 62,000 and Weller's plurality of 16,000 are new figures for Maryland. At best, Harding's plurality was not figured above the 10,000 mark, and then only by the most optimistic.

The "dry" vote against Weller, which under more normal conditions, would have defeated him, could not overcome anti-administration sentiment, especially when it was aided by the unpopularity of Smith in his own party, notably in Baltimore. The "wet" Democratic vote also added to Weller's vote; and the argument was strong that Harding should be supported by a Republican Senate and House. Mr. Weller was particularly fortunate in having Senator Smith for an opponent, and in being a candidate in Presidential year.

Hardings plurality in the state is about 62,000. Baltimore city gave him a plurality of 47,562.

The Republicans elected four Congressman, Blakeney, Hill, Mudd and Zihlman; and the Democrats elected wo, Goldsborough and Linthicum.

Both of the amendments, one increasing the pay of members of the legislature, and the one increasing the pay of Court clerks in Baltimore, were defeated.

It is difficult to analyze the effect of votes for women, on the result, but it seems reasonably clear, that the Republicans gained most from that vote. At any rate, the League of Nations issue did not appeal to women to any great extent.

Some of the county pluralities for Harding were as follows; Allegany 3692, Carroll 1684, Charles 752, Frederick 1701, Garrett 1448, Prince Georges 1745, Washington 1545. Queen Annes was the banner Democratic county, giving Cox 1057 plu-

Iverson, Independent, received 20,184 votes for Senator, and Hawkins (colored) Independent, received 5720 votes. The Iverson vote was largely Democratic, and the Hawkins vote largely Republican.

Considering this election, in connection with most of the votes in recent years, it is questionable whether Maryland is hereafter to be considered a Democratic state. The probability seems to be that "votes for women" has made it safely Republican made by the Republicans in the House Republican, as indicated by the reg-

That Harding carried the county more important to elect a Republican Senator, than to support Smith because he was presumed to be more "dry" than Weller.

The Record has direct returns from most of the districts showing the number of "rejected" ballots, ranging from 2 to 10 in each voting district; but as the return is incomplete, and the numbers small, we omit their publication. Apparently, only 100 to 200 votes in the county were thrown out, which is a good record, considering the great number of new voters, and the complexity of the bal-

The vote on the school and road loan was not very decisive. The smallness of the vote will likely be taken as a demonstration of lack of interest; but many are always disposed to consider lightly all "amendments;" the new voters did not want to take a chance on spoiling their ballots, while others failed to realize the importance of expressing their verdict, one way or the other. The vote shows pretty clearly the districts that strongly desire schools and roads.

There was some variation in the vote for the electors, owing to faulty markng of the ballot. The vote the first elector on the ballot, and the average vote, would not correspond. but the variation is unimportant. We have two "official" counts, but they vary a few votes for President.

Memorial Monument at Lineboro.

A monument in honor of the soldiers of the world war, was unveiled at Lineboro, this county, on Oct. 23, with appropriate exercises. Wm. L. Seabrook, of Westminster, delivered the address. A bronze tablet on the monument contained the names of soldiers, two of whom rendered the sacrifice of their lives.

BRYAN ON THE RESULT.

Says both President Wilson and Cox were to Blame.

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 3.—Wm. J. Bryan placed what he termed the blame for Democratic defeat about equally between President Wilson and Governor Cox in a statement made here this evening. "The Presi-dent," he said, "laid the foundations for the disaster and the Governor completed the structure.

"The American people want the government to play its part in the abolition of war, but they are indifferent as to whether we are part of a league or part of an association of nations," the statement said.

"The real issue presented by the Democratic party was not whether we should co-operate with other nations interested in peace, but whether we should assume a moral obligation which had no weight except as it suspended the right of Congress to act independently. The nation will do its part in aiding to prevent war, but it will not surrender into the keeping of any foreign group the right to determine when we shall declare war.

"Governor Cox, instead of repairing the injury done by the President, aggravated the situation by the manner in which he avoided domestic issues and misrepresented the position of the Republican party on the league issue, which he declared to be para-

"As world peace is a thing nearest the President's heart, he can hardly refuse to hasten the coming of peace by so small a sacrifice—if it could be called a sacrifice—to escape from a three-month combat with a hostile Congress supported as it is by the recent vote."

Lutheran College for Women Urged.

At a meeting of Lutheran women just held in Chicago, and at the convention of the United Lutheran Church, which met in Luther Place Memorial Church in Washington, plans for a Lutheran college for the higher education of women were heard. Lutherans are saying that other religious bodies have fostered their Smith, Bryan, Mawr and Goucher Colleges, and in view of the wider opportunities for women it is time Lutherans founded one. All existing women's colleges are crowded to the limit. The sum talked of for a beginning is $1,000,000.

It is said that the United Lutheran Church will devote $500,000 the comng year to advancement of Christian education for women. A part of their plan is the providing of trained wo-men assistants for Lutheran churches n college towns, notably at Cornell, Minnesota and Wisconsin

A new $10,000 scholarship has been established at the Woman's College of Pennsylvania. It was from this college that nearly 40 years ago Dr. Anna S. Kugler went to India. She now is head of the largest hospital in South India, and has been honored by the British Government and by local Indian grandees to an extent hardly reached by any other American woman.

DRY CONGRESS ASSURED.

No Revision of the Volstead Act Regarded Likely.

The dry forces are jubilant over the results of Tuesday's election as they claim the result spells the defeat of any move to have a beer and wine amendment adopted by the Slxty-seventh Congress. Of the 435 members of the House of Representatives more than 225 who voted for the Volstead act were re-elected according to Wayne B. Wheeler, counsel of the Anti-Saloon League.

Mr. Wheeler adds that many new members were elected who are opposed to any change in the prohibition laws and that many former members of Congress who did not vote on the liquor issue are on record in the campaign just ended as opposed to raising the alcoholic content of permitted beverages, or otherwise weakening the national prohibition code.

In further discussion of the subject, Mr Wheeler said, "The issue was made more difficult in some districts by candidates announcing themselves dry in opposition to present dry members of Congress, and they received the wet vote to punish members of Congress who had gone on record against them. One of the bitterest fights was in Mr. Volstead's district in Minnesota. He had a handicap of 6,300 to overcome, and his opponent declared he was as dry as Mr. Vol-stead. The fight was won by con-vincing the voters that Volstead's de-Carroll County went topsy turvy into the Republican column. The women vote of the county was largely not indicated by the regret indicated at the cago, Mr. Bryan says; feat would be heralded as a wet victory, and it would give the wets a wet chairman of the judiciary committee.

The Coming Sale Season.

Already, the outlook is for a record number of Public Sales, next Spring. We thought the past Spring was the limit, but the indications are for a still greater nuber for 1921. Record is preparing a schedule of sale dates, preliminary to the publica-tion of its Sale Register in January. This schedule is for office information use, and is free to all parties interested in sales.

We suggest that all who have selected their dates, and purpose having this office print posters, or advertise their sale, should give us their date now. The Record always handles more sale business than any other paper in the county, so that a sale anywhere within our reach is hardly well advertised, unless placed in The Record. This schedule, and Sale Register, is part of our free service, and it is worth a great deal to those who will have sale. We already have dates in, from February 21 until the last of Farmers of State to Meet.

The Agrcultural Society of Maryland will hold its annual meeting in Salisbury, next week, Nov. 9, 10, 11. The Society is composed of all the Farmers' organizations of the State. A number of farmers of Carroll county have been appointed delegates by the Governor, and all members of the different associations are urged to attend. There are a number of very important questions which are of vital interest to the farmers, not only to the farmers of the State, but of Carroll county. The most important question before the farmer today, is that of marketing his product, and the buying of supplies. Every live farm-er should make an effort to be present.

Salisbury can be reached by train, by way of Baltimore, boat to Claiborne and train. By auto, around the head of the Bay to Elkton, and south down the peninsula. The shortest way is to go by ferry from Bay Shore to Rock Hall. Leave Baltimore 9:30 A. M., and 4 P. M. Annapolis to Claiborne, leave Annapolis 8 A. M., and 5:20 P. M.

Get in touch with County Agent Fuller, if you are going, so space can be reserved on the boat. The first session is Tuesday, at 9 A. M. All

The Election is over. Now, let us get down to real business.

HOTEL RATES TO BE HIGH. Prohibition held to be Responsible for Higher Charges. The proprietor of one of the largest notels in New York city, gives the following reasons why hotel rates throughout the country can not come back to anywhere near former levels.

"The hotel man of the past was not a business man. Like Topsy he simply grew and flourished. He sold a few rooms, some food and lots of "booze." He made a living, and some-

The hotel man never did much figuring as to where his profits came from. He didn't have to—or at least he thought he didn't. He was not much different from hundreds—yes, thousands—of other small business men of all kinds in those days.

The real difference, however, is that for years and years, all over the country, he was establishing in the public mind a false price for rooms and food
—a price that he never could have made and continued in business, except for the profit he made on his liquor

In the past many of the smaller hotels made all, and in some cases more than their total net profit from their bar. From the smaller up to the very largest, taken as a whole, probably 75/per-cent of the money made in the hotel business came from the sale of wines and liquors. The public is looking for a return, in time to pre-war prices in hotels, the same as in other lines of business. The public has a right to expect that, unless the public is told why it can never be.

The public is fair and reasonable and just; but the public is also forget-The public in a way knows the loss of revenue and profit the hotels have suffered from prohibition, but when it sees the reduction in prices taking place all around it, in other lines, it is not going to be satisfied that the hotel men are playing fair, unless it knows why.

The hotel men will never be able to sell their goods proportionately lower, the same as other lines of busi ness not affected by the eighteenth amendment.

The public bought rooms and food in hotels in the past at or below cost, because hotel men were satisfied with profits—most of which came from liq-

There being no more profit from this source, rooms and food will have to be priced at a figure that will enable hotel to pay overhead maintenance, lepreciation, operating expenses and eave a margin of profit sufficietly large to hold the organization together, so that service may be rendered to the public during dull as well a busy periods."

One Mr. Bryan did stay out of the campaign, so far as front rank work was concerned, and it was his first disapperaance in a long string of Presidential contests—but not necessarily a final one.

Let us hope that we will hereafter of Congress. and indirection in handling the queshope for, considering the unscrupulousness of the "wet" side to the issue, and perhaps to some extent to "dry" brethren, after the need for playing has ended. At any rate, we think that much of the political propaganda used at the recent election was of decidedly bad odor, and a good many good people are hoping for a change to greater respectability.

Progressive and Reactionary.

For some years, these words have been prominently and somewhat flippantly used in politics. The "progressive" contingent, largely having its inception in the middle west, soon attracted to itself a very large fol lowing, due to the word itself apparently indicating that politics had been dragging, and not keeping up with the people or the times; and in addition had become too much the property of a lot of long-serving Senators who were too much "set in their ways" and rather intolerant of the new men and their ideas who came "from the west."

In its growth, "progressivism" has not only been the parent of such expedients as the referendum, the public primary, woman suffrage, and others of like tenor, but has taken to itself advanced, but largely only as they that arouses hostility, and a means credit for about all that has been accomplished in the way of desirable legislation, and has been impatient with conservatism generally.

Those who have not travelled so rapidly toward discarding old political methods for the new, have been given the name "reactionary," more or less contemptuously, as describing those who oppose improvements in legislation, and hold somewhat tenaciously to historic plans and methods. Even the measure of conservatism and caution, needed to accompany the wisest of legislation, has been impatiently regarded and the "reactionary" label has been applied in very many instances without justification.

But, we are of the opinion that the radical brand of "progressivism" has reached its peak. Some of its methods have been tried out, and the results have been disappointing. The country is showing a strong tendency toward "reaction" from trying every new thing proposed; and reaching the conclusion that every new doctrine is not necessarily a good one.

Progressive leaders in both parties -as so known-have not been able to cut much figure, nationally. The underlying spirit of Americanism is still for a sane, tried, and carefully planned policy. The spirit of Washington and Jefferson, and other old founders of our plan of government, still lives; and this, in its truest aanysis, is not "reactionary." American conservatism and common sense is not so easily put to rout by mere Postal Rate Discrmination Against Printers.

The Editor of the Record recently prepared an article showing in detail how the P. O. Department discrimiantes against the merchandise of the printer, in the matter of allowing Parcel Post rates. With the exception of a few items—such as printed envelopes, letter heads and bill heads -the printer can not have the benefit of Parcel Post rates, except for packages weighing over four pounds.

It is a fact, that a 31/2 pound package of general job printing, for delivery within the second zone, is required to pay 28c postage, (8c per pound), while all other classes of merchandise of the same weight package, would cost only 8c postage. This also means that the printer must pay 28c postage on 3½ lbs, but only 9c postage on 4½ lbs; or for 28c he can send a package of 24 lbs just as easily as 3½ lbs.

This is because printed matter (with few exceptions) is "Third Class" matter as long as mailed in quantities of 4 pounds and less, and when it passes beyond this (4 lbs) weight, becomes "Fourth Class," or Parcel Post matter.

Knowing so well the apparent injustice of such a law, the Record prepared an article on the subject, and ent it to "The American Press," a journal for newspaper men, published in New York. This journal published the article, with this introduction, giving it a four-column wide head-regulations against printrs' merchanwill be enlightening to those publishers who have suffered under these abuses in silence, but who have not sensed the injustice under which they have worked. The article will be helpful, however, if publishers generally—and most of them conduct job offices—see that the facts are put into the hands of their representatives in Congress, and in the hands of their Senators.

"It is very questionable if these conditions are understood by members A proper activity on have a great deal less of insincerity the part of the printers will result in remedial legislation beyond doubt. The peculiar mental gymnastics of tion of National prohibition. We are the postoffice department have been a aware that this is a great deal to source of irritation and annoyance to newspaper publishers and to printers, for years. It is quite time a constructive effort was made to put an sue, and perhaps to some extent to end to arbitrary rulings and absurd the desire to continue playing the and injurious discrimination. Read game on the part of some of the the following article and then call it specifically to the attention of your congressmen, requesting that legisla-tion for relief be prepared, and a fight made to pass it."

The article in question is too lengthy, and would be out of place in our columns; but we sincerely trust that the editors of the country-or rather, the managers of printing offices-will look up the article in question (November issue of The American Press) and take the necessary action suggested. The Record may, if proper interest is manifested, go to the expense of preparing the article in shape for presentation to members of Congress; but it is rather too much of a burden of expense for a single victim to undertake.

Buy Close to Home When Values Are Tumbling.

Our merchant advertisers assure us that they are "marking down" goods and taking their losses, just as fast to complete their prepared addresses as wholesale prices come down; and and require them to answer questions we believe them. It is true, also, afterward. In that way cross-examithat these same merchants did not "mark up" their prices as cost prices | "heckling," which is a bullying word replaced their stock. The merchants, therefore, are likely to lose greatly more in the downward trend, than they made in the upward trend.

As a rule, the average merchant is liberal and business-like in his treatment of condtions attending bsuiness. His business training and associations leads him naturally away from stooping to "littleness" in business expedients. The country merchant, especially, is more honest and honorable than he gets credit for, and is accorded a vast amount of unfair treatment on the part of the general public, who often fail to observe the nice balances that should apply to buyer and seller, all living together as parts of

We fully believe that in the season of price reduction that is evidently before us, the home merchant will prove a dependable man to deal with. His advertising may not be as attractive, and his offers not so alluring, but he is pretty sure to tell the truth, and do his best. When a business man is permanently located, and knows his patrons, who in turn know him, personally, there is little possibility of his acting dishonestly, or deceitfully, and his advice is likely to be "straight."

We should say that, in general, when prices and values become much disturbed, it is greatly the best for buyers to stick pretty close to home folks, for the best sort of treatment. When things are so mixed that one does not konw "what next," and when people are likely to be caught, by playing smart, prudence suggests sticking close to persons and things that are known to be dependable.

The League, and A League.

These two much talked of inventions will now go where they belong -on the legislative calendar. They have served their purpose in the open field of discussion, to, and beyond, the point of being overworked, and in a sense they have escaped, and both are alive to tell the story. Whether or not "The League" was primarily intended to be a political winner on the American stage, is perhaps debatable. We prefer to think that it was not, but that it was designed for a greatly higher setting, and that it failed to be more than a football, was the fault of fate, rather than of its inception.

At any rate, "The League" and "A League," have gone into retirement, temporarily, and when they emerge will have more than one promoter and caretaker, thereby correcting the lonesome entrance that was the main cause of its undoing. "HECKLING."

One thing which this campaign seems to have raised from outlawry to legitimacy is what is called 'heckling"-that is, the public questioning of political candidates 'Heckling" has long been an accepted Englsh custom, but with us the interrogation of public speakers by persons in the audience has been regarded as bad manners and as intended merely as partisan and malicious interruption. In this campaign, almost for the first time, it has come to be recognized as a popular right, and speakers on both sides have so treat-

It is, in a way, a revival of the old joint debate custom, in which political competitors were forced to meet the issues of the campaign face to face. There could be little dodging or evasion under those conditions, and when it was attempted, the attempt was patent to everybody. The English method of heckling, as well as the English motive, is not altogether unobjectionable, since it is often boisterous and frequently against the interests of fair play. But it does make for political sincerity, and, properly modified and restricted, will prevent dishonest candidates from concealing their real positions. The people will be able to smoke them out on the stump, and, knowing this, all parties will avoid the platform and campaign hypocrisies in which they now indulge. A code of procedure might be adopted which would permit speakers nation would be substituted for provided of getting at the truth at close quarters. The candidate who refused to aree to this would write himself down as evasive and unworthy.—Baltimore Sun.

WHY====

People of Balkans Disregard All Laws of Sanitation

Disease in the Balkans is looked upon by the people as a result of fate. The peasantry has been educated in superstition, rather than in the laws of sanitation. They are opposed to the killing of mosquitoes, rats, flies and vermin, believing that they are part of life. They know nothing about the carriers of disease. The importance of protecting their food supplies from winged insects has not been impressed upon them. Little or no attempt is made to drain mosquito pools or marshes, so that the Balkan States claim the distinction of having some of the worst malarial sections on earth.

The peasant has little faith in medical science. "How can a bug give us typhus?" they ask. "Every living thing harbors insects. Why not man? If the good God sends us disease and misfortune we believe that He knows

In most districts in the Balkans the houses of the rural population are small and poorly constructed. Many of them are built of mud and straw and have no provision for sanitation or ventilation. The only air admitted to the homes is obtained through accidental imperfections in construction. A few of the houses have two stories. the lower floor being occupied by the horses and cattle, the upper by the family. In such houses as these families live crowded together under the most unhygienic conditions.

Years pass without a doctor entering the huts. Disease goes untreated. In the country districts dentistry is virtually unknown. Bathtubs are rare in the Balkans, even in the larger cities. The people in that part of Europe rarely wash. You must be a very unclean people in the United States," said a well-to-do storekeeper of Sofia to an American, "if you find it necessary to bathe every day!"

BAROMETER OF THE TIMES

Why Circulation of Pennies Is So Regarded by Officials of the Treasury Departemnt.

What becomes of the pennies? About 80,000,000 or more are made and put into circulation every year and very few ever come back to the treasury department. This has long puzzled treasury officials, who assert that it would be impossible to lose 80,000,000 pennies a year in such out-of-the-way places that no one would find them, and it is certain that few persons are hoarding them. The copper is a real barometer of business. In hard times they collect by millions in the subtreasuries and when trade revives they flow out as fast as they flowed in.

The most valuable penny of American issue is that of 1799, and collectors pay hundreds of dollars for each of them. The great scarcity of this coin is alleged to be due to the fact that a Salem firm in 1800 collected all the pennies it could find, bored holes in them and made necklaces, arm ornaments and anklets and these were sent with slave ships to Africa, where they were traded to chiefs for captives. The first penny was issued in 1793 and was very similar to the pennies of later dates except that a chain of 13 links was woven about the words "One Cent." The "white pennies" or nickel cents, were issued in 1857 and they are already so rare as to be sought by col-

How to Tell Real Mahogany.

You buy a "mahogany" table, pay a good price for it, and then begin to wonder whether it is made of real mahogany. Red gum can be made to look so much like mahogany and Circassian walnut that it is often sold for one or the other of these woods.

How can you tell the difference between the false and the true? By looking at the cross-grain; if you can see the pores with the naked eye, then you will know that all is well. If you can't see the pores without the aid of a magnifying glass, then you will know that you are in the presence of red gum.

Even through varnish the pores of mahogany and walnut are distinctly visible.-Popular Science Monthly.

PLAN FOR FATTENING FOWLS

Profit Just as Sure With Poultry as It Is With Cattle and Hogs, Says Specialist.

If it pays to fatten hogs and cattle before they are marketed, why won't it pay to fatten poultry before marketing it? The same conditions apply in each case, says F. E. Fox of the poultry department, Kansas State Agricultural college.

Mr. Fox, who has had packing house experience, says that the largest per cent of poultry that comes to the packing house has to be fattened before it is killed. It is the custom on the ordinary farm to cull out the flock the night or morning before marketing regardless of the condition of the birds. The poultry have been running on the range around the barnyard picking up most of their living and are just in a good growthy condition ready to take on fat at very little

The farmer should cull out his flock and either crate feed or put them in a small pen under sanitary conditions for a period of two weeks and give them all the corn, kafir, or other grains they will eat, Mr. Fox says. This is long enough to feed under ordinary conditions.

If a farmer has the time the most profitable way to dispose of his surplus poultry is to milk feed them for fancy trade such as hotels and wealthy customers in a nearby town or city. There is usually great demand for high class poultry for Sunday and holiday trade in the city.

Milk feeding is practiced extensively in packing houses. The chickens are crate fed on a ration of corn meal or other mash feed mixed with two parts of buttermilk and poured in the troughs on the side of the crate. They are fed for about three weeks all they will clean up twice or three times a

The main objection to milk feeding on the farm is that the birds have to be dressed at home. If sold alive they shrink a great deal in taking them to market and they may get bruised or get their bones broken, as the milk makes their flesh soft and tender and their bones weak and brittle.

LITTLE TROUBLE WITH GEESE

Lameness, Caused by Confinement and Improper Food, Is Chief Ailment of Fowls.

Geese should be easier to raise than any other kind of poultry, as under correct conditions there should be no disease among the young. A leading breeder of geese says that the only ailment he has to contend with is lameness, which is generally caused by too close confinement, unwholesome food, too warm housing or too close quarters. Geese require dry and windproof quarters with litter on the floor and will stand the hardest winter weather. To treat lameness give a tablespoonful of castor oil, by holding the beak open and working it down the throat. Renew the dose next day, if necessary. Keep the ailing bird in a dry place and feed stale bread and water.

STANDARD-BRED FOWLS BEST

Some Farmers Can Make Money With Mongrels, but High-Class Birds Will Do Better.

Sometimes a man succeeds with barnyard mongrels better than his neighbor with prize-winning fowls because he gives them better care. But let the successful farmer, who has not already done so, turn his attention to pure-bred birds and he will derive a still larger profit in dollars and satis-

HIGH MORTALITY IN POULTS

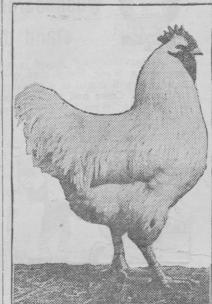

Some of Most Common Causes Are Exposure to Cold and Dampness and Overfeeding.

The high mortality common in young poults usually is due to some of the following causes: Exposure to dampness and cold; improper feeding; close confinement; lice; predatory animals; weakness in the parent stock. | old hens.

LARGE INFLUENCE OF MALES

Selection of Roosters to Increase Egg Production Is Urged by Poultry Specialists.

Although poultry experts have long advocated culling non-producing hens, poultry workers at the College of Agriculture at Ithaca now advise the selection of roosters to increase egg production, according to an article in the Cornell Countrymen. From experiments extending back for more than a year, it has been demonstrated that it is possible to determine from appearances the males which are most likely to produce the best-paying

The difference in the appearance of males is comparable to the difference in the rate of growth and the intensity with which hens lay, according to the college. Some hens can lay an egg once in every 24 hours; others are not able to produce an egg oftener than once in 48 hours, although both have the same care and feed. If one hen can lay faster than another, it indicates that she can digest large amounts of feed quickly. The experiments at this point determine also the value of males as foundations of high-produc-

The Cornell workers measured several lots of males a year ago, and by observing the records of the offspring, they say that they can tell from the appearance of the rooster whether his daughters will be good layers. Members of the college staff think the results of these experiments will have as much value in developing efficient poultry flocks as the original discovery that it was possible to de-termine by appearance which hens

A rooster to father egg-laying offspring should grow rapidly and mature quickly. He should appear deep bodied and short legged, full in breast and abdomen with a flat, wide back. His head should be moderately short, set on a large full neck, and with prominent eyes. A good male for breeding is friendly, courageous and proud of himself, calling attention to his pride by frequent crowing.

MAKE HEN FLOCK PROFITABLE

With Possible Exception of Leghorns Fowls Over Two Years Old Do Not Pay to Keep.

It seldom pays to keep hens for laying after they are two and one-half years old. This may not be true of Leghorns but is generally so of most other breeds. Hens older than this may return some profit but younger hens will return greater profits. In this day of high-priced feed, culling will make poultry more profitable.

VARIETY OF FEED ESSENTIAL

Every Flock of Hens Must Be Supplied With Necessary Material to Manufacture Eggs.

Every flock of hens is an egg factory. Like any other factory the flock can be given the best materials in the world to work on and still fail to produce enough to pay for running the plant. Good feed in sufficient variety is necessary for egg production, but the ability to manufacture eggs from feed must be there first.

COLONY HOUSE IS PREFERRED

Give Poultryman Chance to Raise His Fowls Under Ideal Conditions-Must Keep Clean.

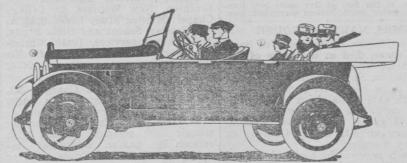

Colony houses on free range give the poultryman a chance to raise his birds under ideal conditions. But the same sanitary precautions must be taken as with laying houses. The small houses must be frequently cleaned and sprayed and the roosts painted with kerosene or some lice paint to keep down the red mites.

NO PROFIT IN POOR LAYERS

Unprofitable Producers Should Be Culled Out to Save High-Priced Feed and Labor.

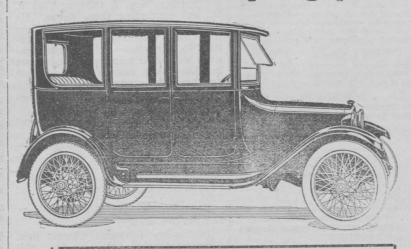

It pays to cull out the poor layers any time, to save the feed anl labor they cost, but to make a profit on them it is best to cull in late summer or early fall, before the rush of spring chickens lowers the market price of houses, plain to the view. This is the so-called Silent City of Alaska. The duke of the Abruzzi saw it a few years ago when he visited Alaska. Many attempts have been made to photograph it, but for some reason unexplained, without success. Some persons have gone so far as to declare that it is a view of the city of Bristol, in England.

Irregularities of ice formation, plus imagination, doubtless account for the strange vision an uplifting of the supposed scene being attributable to mirage. Optical illusions of this kind are not uncommon in arctic and antarctic regions.

There is a famous mirage, called "Fata Morgana," which on occasions is seen from the neighborhood of Reggio, in Italy. Here the effect produced is due to a layer of heated air, which by refraction of light brings into view a distorted picture of the far-away Sicilian shore. To the Italian peasant it appears as a city with palaces, towers and minarets—the mysterious home of the fairy Morgana.

William Scoresby, the arctic explorer, describes a similar mirage which he beheld from off the coast of Greenland. He writes: "The general appearance of the coast, as viewed through a telescope, was that of an extensive ancient city, abounding in ruins of castles, obelisks, churches and monuments—a grand and interesting phantasmagoria.'

A feature of arctic geography which appears on all the maps is Crocker Land, which Peary thought he saw from a mountain peak in Grant Land.

The troops of Napoleon when he was in Egypt were rather frightened by mirages. And during the recent war the British of Mesopotamia were obliged on at least one occasion to stop fighting because of the confusion arising from an illusion of the kind. As everybody knows, mirages are very common in hot desert regions. A layer of warmed and rarefied air serves as a mirage, reflecting objects above it. Thus, reflecting the sky, it may produce the effect of a sheet of water, the unsteadiness of the heated air lending ripples to help out the picture and render it more deceptive.

HOLDS TREES AT HIGH VALUE

How Conservation Is Carried Out on the Island of Bukara, Off Coast of Africa.

Real conservation is carried out on the island of Bukara, off the coast of Africa, according to Dr. H. Lyndhurst Duke, in the Cornhill Magazine. It is a little island of almost solid granite, and with 19,000 persons trying to get a living from its scant soil. Trees are looked upon as a priceless possession, and of them Doctor Drake says:

"The leaves are plucked with infinite care and taken home in the evening to feed the cattle and goats. The sticks and branches go to help build the huts, the bark being previously carefully peeled off and put aside to dry to be used as fuel or cord. Dead sticks are of course invaluable for fuel. . . . When occasion necessitates the lopping off of a large branch or the felling of the tree, shoots are carefully stuck in the soil to reproduce in due time, yet other trees. Dead leaves also belong to the owner of the tree, a man must not steal his neighbor's leaves nor his sticks nor his rubbish on pain of being brought before the chief and heavily fined. . . . A father will divide up a tree among his children, apportioning so many branches to each with leaves and all the other appurtenances dead and alive."

How the Can-Can Originated.

The average man of the streets has a vague idea that the can-can is as much a national dance of France as the Highland fling is of Scotland. The fact is that the dance is done only in a few hectic cafes in Paris. It originated in 1842 when Elise Sargent, a grisette of astonishing beauty, was named "queen" of a revel of students and who marked her coronation by introducing the wild lingerie-tossing dance that swept into instant popularity throughout the underworld of the French capital. It is danced almost exactly as the little grisette introduced it.

Hold up your head, throw your shoulders back, look the world in the face; go about among your fellows as a winner. Why We Raise Glasses.

"Well, here goes"-and every glass was swung upward and held for a fraction of a second before it "went." How started a custom, a mannerism now so general that no one drinking in company would think of omitting it even in these days of ginger ale and sarsaparilla? American sportsmanship demands that boxers shake hands before the bout. Autre temps autres moeurs. The time and temperament that sanctioned duels decreed that before the mortal combat the antagonists drink a glass of wine. To avoid the suspicion of attempting to poison each other's liquor both raised their glasses aloft and poured a little from each into the other. In these unromantic days poison has passed out of fashion, but the custom of raising glasses with its significance and implication of sincerity has remained.

Why He Didn't Go Back.

"Do you ever visit the little town where you were born?"

"No," said Mr. Grabcoin. "There isn't a particle of resentment in my makeup.

"What do you mean?" "I don't want to go back there and embarrass all the old fogies who said I would never amount to anything."-Birmingham Age-Herald.

IN SAD BUT LOVING REMEMBRANCE of our daughter, Edna B. Welk Keefer, who died Nov. 7, 1918.

Days of sadness still come over us, Tears in silence often flow, For memory keeps her ever near us, Though she died two years ago.

Oh we loved our daughter so dear, No hearts on earth can tell, But Jesus loved her better still, And called her home to dwell.

We think of her in silence, No eyes can see us weep, For many, many, tears are shed When others are asleep.

Ring the bells of Heaven clearly, In our dreams we hear her say, Come dear father and mother, I will meet the week-end with Samuel Dayhoff spent Sunday with Jesse Garner's and attended services at Pleasant Hll. On that happy golden shore.

The depths of sorrow we cannot tell.
At the loss of our sister we loved so well
And while she lies in peaceful sleep,
Her memory we shall always keep.

Jesus must have loved her dearly.
That he took her home so soon,
But we cannot tell the reason,
Why he took her from our home.

The Sun Explains It.

"It was due to the fact that an overwhelming majority of the American people wanted a change in the national Administration. Whenever any group in the electorate is discontented it vents its resentment upon the party in power. There were innumerable such groups, and their reasons for discontent were diverse and ofttimes conflicting. The farmers were sore because they are not getting a higher price for wheat, the consumers because they have to pay so much for

Poor men complained because their taxes were so high, and rich men because they had to pay so big a proportion of the taxes. Certain business men objected to the Administration because it had been too friendly to labor, and laboring men because it had not got them higher wages or taken care of their interests as consumers. Liberals voted against Cox because Wilson had abandoned his ideals at Paris, and reactionaries because Wilson had injected too much idealism into the peace treaty.

Friends of free speech denounced the Administration because of Palmer and Burleson, and enemies of free speech because of Louis Post and Fred Howe. The Irish were agin' the Government because it had not freed Ireland and the anti-Irish because Mr. Cox proposed to bring the Irish question to the attention of the League of Nations. Some were incensed because the Federal Reserve Board is trying to bring about deflation, and others because it wasn't doing it fast enough or hadn't begun soon enough.

In addition, there was justifiable criticism of the Administration at Washington because of extravagance and inefficiency, although the critics did not take into consideration the fact that the Wilson Administration was not peculiar in this respect, but that inefficiency and extravagance have marked all our national. Administrations, whether Democratic or Republican. And the Republican spokes-

Canadian Wheat to U.S.

Washington, Nov. 1.-Imports of Canadian wheat and flour during the first 15 days of October were greater than in any corresponding period in the past seven years, the Federal Trade Commission says in a report today to President Wilson. The report was based on an investigation ordered by the President after he had been asked by Governor Allen, of Kansas, to place an embargo on wheat imports from Canada.

The Commission found that 4,950,-000 bushels of Canadian wheat and 65,946 barrels of Canadian flour were shipped into the United States during the first 15 days of last month This was more than three times as large as the shipments in any October in the past seven years, according to the report.

"The largest October importations in this period amounted to only 1,745,-000 bushels," the Commission said. "That was in 1915. They are also at a rate considerably greater than the importations in January, 1918, when the imports aggregated 7,339,000. This was the largest monthly importation from Canada between the years 1912 and 1919.

The old plan of offering a burglar a cigarette and asking him to take a chair while you telephone to the police, is not now so successful as in the past. The best plan is to tackle the fellow right away. For this purpose you should step behind him, take hold of his coat and force it over his face, then tie his left arm to his right leg across the back. Properly carried out, this method rarely fails.

The title of the above story should be "Easier Said Than Done!" And it also reminds us of some politicians who say a lot but never produce. That's the way many stores advertise now-a-days—their ads sound fine, but an investigation of the goods proves disappointing. It's a great deal more satisfactory to buy from a firm that guarantees every statement made in its advertising and the quality of every article it advertises. THAT'S WHAT WE DO. Hanged for Symmetry.

One rarely sees a hunchbacked person nowadays. People thus afflicted used to be far more numerous. But medical science has learned how to publican. And the Republican spokesmen unquestionably "got away with" their assertions concerning Mr. Wilson's autocratic temper and "oneman rule."

So all of these groups voted pellmell for Harding, and he won his unprecedented victory. The tidal wave insures a comfortable Republican majority in the Senate and a large one in the House. That is well. There will be undvided power and likewise undvided responsibility in the national Government for at least the next two years. For whatever good the next years. Davy Jones' Rich Cargo.

A diver was sent down recently at | New York to locate a case of machinery that had fallen into the river. As soon as he reached the bottom he signaled that he wished to come up. When his helmet was removed, the first thing he said was. "What's the number of the case?" There were so many cases at the bottom of the river that he didn't know which one belonged to his employers. Mosquitoes Dislike Swamps.

Recent experiments prove that, contrary to the general belief, mosquitoes do not thrive and multiply in foul, stagnant water. In fact, mosquito larvae actually lose vigor and die when surrounded by decomposed vegetation, Whether this is due to bacterial action on the larvae or to an excess of injurious gas due to the decomposition has not been ascertained. At any rate, swamps are not guilty of encouraging mosquitoes, and clearing these swamps does harm .- Popular Science Monthly.

Ohio State Journal.

Borders in the garden and yard are like frames that lend beauty to the picture. In many gardens and lawns there seems to be no space that can be spared for flowers, yet there are walks of cement, brick or cinders, waste spaces along the alley, or around small buildings which if bordered with some flowers would change the entire appearance of the place.

China astors, old fashioned pinks, English daisies, forget-me-nots, sweet alyssum, candy tuft, and verbenas are good varieties for almost any soil or climate. In places where a taller border would bring out the picture, use sweet William, Oriental poppies, or the stately hollyhock. Then find a high place for a bird house, or plant some shrubs for nest places.

The true home picture is lacking without the birds and flowers. -The Thrift Magazine.

Town and Country.

I wonder when ambitious cities will learn that it is a dangerous business to be everlastingly campaigning for a greater population. Nearly every town and city in the United States had one slogan, "More population in 1920." This has been going on for the last fifty years until we see our farm population decreased to the danger point. The 1920 census will show five million less people living on the farms in this country now than there were in 1910. It will show an increase of population for the nation of twenty milions. This means twenty-five million more people in the towns and cities and five million less people to feed them. Unless these city folks can find a substitute for bread, meat and potatoes, something serious is going to happen.-John A. Simpson, Farmer.

The Small Towns.

It has been figured up that there are about 12,000 small towns in the United States, half of them with populations of 500 or less. It is these small towns that the rural people are intimately associated with. They sell their produce there, buy the things they need; in fact, these are a part of the rural community. Some of these small towns will become cities, but a very large per cent of them will remain as they are. It is no disgrace to live in a small town, but the rule is that these people are waiting until next year, or some future year to improve their schools, put in sidewalks, a water system, or a sewer system to safeguard the health of the people, or before taking any steps to improve the social and living conditions of the children .-The Thrift Magazine.

Billboards Indicted.

Not alone because they are a blot on the landscape, boardings are considered an evil in more tangible ways. When they are not strongly supported there is always danger of their falling over in storms. Unless they are of fireproof material they are easily inflammable and often serve to carry fire from one building to another. If the boards are not raised several feet from the ground the space back of them almost invariably becomes a dump for refuse and a convenient place for criminals to hide.

Signboards nearly always shut out sunlight and air. To prevent this as much as possible, some cities limit the height and width of the board. The importance of breathing space around a building is recognized by a number of millionaires.

The Accusing Eye

By CLARISSA MACKIE

immummummini.

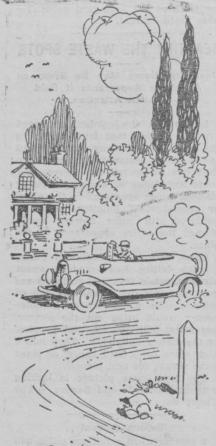

Miss Jarvis twisted the solitaire diamond around on the third finger of her left hand until the glittering stone was buried in her soft palm. Then she stared at it with dull resentment in her lovely eyes—the plain gold band of the inner circlet looked like a wedding ring. With a swift, ruthless gesture she tore it from her finger and sent it spinning across the room.

From a dark corner of the rich carpet the jewel glowed at her like an angry accusing eye—a questioning eye! "Why?" it seemed to ask, "Why did you lead James Meade on if you did not love him? Why did you accept this ring from him and' promise to marry him? Was it because he is rich and influential and you were afraid to wait for Paul-Paul with his fearless courage during the war-his medals of honor-his crippled foot-Paul coming home from war with joyous heart to find fallen fortunes and to learn that his promised wife had changed her mind and was going to marry an older man-one safe and sound, rich with the making of wartime profits?"

"No-no-no-" whispered Elsie, covering her shamed eyes with her ringless fingers; "but I could not hamper Paul with my support when he had to begin all over again-"

The eye winked derisively. "Tell that to the marines-but not to Paul Browning," it seemed to say.

Elsie regarded the jewel with rebellious eyes. The door pushed open and a man entered. "Your mother said you were in here," he said cheerfully, as he leaned over and kissed her unwilling lips. "You look awfully in the blues, dear. Come and drive with me-I want to show you a house in Westchester.

"I don't like Westchester, James. Long Island is much smarter, and besides there are some lovely old places there.'

"Too old, some of them."

"I love old places," she said defiantly. "Little old-fashioned houses hugging the water, with quaint gardens and giant locusts-and-" "You are describing the old Browning place, Elsie," he said coldly. There was silence between them for a moment until his glance found the glittering ring in the corner.

"Your ring?" he asked with lifted brows as he brought it to her. "It slipped off—no—I threw it there, James. I am sorry-but I am cross this morning-forgive me," she cried penitently. He smiled and kissed her, but his eyes were troubled as he put it on her finger. Presently they were gliding along the Westchester roads under a glorious summer sky. Elsie admired the beautiful house her lover had chosen; it was so perfect in every detail that only a carping spirit could find fault with it, and Elsie was sore-hearted, not mean. "Now we are going to look at a place on Long Island," he said as he turned the car toward the city. "First, we will have a bite to eat."

Elsie was surprised when they stopped before a modest restaurant on a crowded thoroughfare. James Meade usually patronized the best hotels and when they lunched it was either in some tea room of Elsie's choice or a fashionable hotel restau-

-we won't have to wait." This proved to be the case, but Elsie ate little beyond the first spoonfuls of soup; her eyes caught sight of a familiar figure across the rooma straight young form garbed as a waiter, but with a pathetic limp. The Accusing Eye winked at her again as she dropped her spoon with a sickening realization that Paul, her splendid young lover, had come to and later when they were again in the car she turned to Meade with blazing eyes. "You did it intentionaly. James; how could you?" she de-

"It is better that you should know and see things just as they are," he said gravely, but the girl only smiled bitterly and turned away her head. She did not speak to him again for a ong time, as they threaded the city streets, crossed the bridge and finally emerged upon the Merrick road. Then she closed her eyes to keep back the tears that wanted to come. At one moment she yearned to give Meade his ring and hasten back to Paul-Paul Browning, a waiter in a restaurant-Paul who had fought for her as he had for thousands of others like her-she wanted to snatch him away and work for him; she wanted to do some menial labor for him-

"Here we are," cried Meade cheerily as he stopped the car, but when Elsie opened her eyes she could not see until the tears had brimmed over. Meade pressed his handkerchief to her face and at last she smiled waveringly at him. "I am such a goose," she

"A dear, delightful goose," he agreed as he lifted her down and pushed open a white painted gate. "And what do you think of this, Elsie?" He stood apart with folded arms and watched her face change from sweet gravity to wonder, and then joy. The oy quickly faded to resentment. "Not this place, James-not Paul's

"You love it?" he asked.

"For his sake," she said bravely, 'I would leave my own luxurious home-I would give you up, with all that it means—only to be with him and wait upon him always-I don't care how poor-how lowly-forgive me,

James, dear, I am so unhappy and have been very wicked!" He held her very close in his arms until she had sobbed out her grief, and while his voice was brave his and he did not want her without the love that she had to give some one, and above all he was generous and he wanted her to be happy. "I couldn't buy this place if I wanted to, dear," he said at last. "Your future husband has too much grit to let it go-I've tried to buy him out through my agent and he wouldn't sell. Unknown to him—I've had an opening made for him in my cousin's bank-and the ring-that is my wedding gift to you and you are to dispose of it and buy some scrubbing brushes and things for your house-I'm going now, Elsie, and you must be happy and make him happy, too! Some day, I'm coming out to see if you are living up to it! I think I hear him coming now-he has a motorcycle, you know-Good-by!" wrung her hand, dashed down the steps and into his machine; in a moment there were a cloud of dust on the shore road. From the other direction came the rattling whir-r-r of a motorcycle. Elsie went down to the gate and held it open as Paul came through, afoot, limping, his eyes ashine. "Elsie," he cried incredulously, "You-waiting for me? Why, I dream of this every day, but-" She crept into his arms. "I am the dreams come true," she whispered.

LIFE PRIMITIVE IN ARABIA

Natives Satisfied With Little in the Way of Comforts, and Require Few Luxuries.

The scribe is an important man among the Arabs. His desk is a soapbox. He sits on the floor of his poor establishment, a nook in the corner of a building, drawing up beautifully penned legal documents for clients who cannot read or write.

Restaurants in Algeria reveal the intimacies of the oven and the kitchen to the passerby. The national dish is made of granulated flour. Many kitchens are too small to afford their patrons dining room space. They display their plates of fried fish in the door, and the native customers may eat them standing in the street, or may carry them home, or if he has no home, to a nearby cafe. It is never far to an Arab cafe, the chief furnishings of which are benches, stools, dominoes and checkers. Spools and huge pieces of wood are the pawns in these games of draughts. The cafes also serve as lodging houses. The street Arab who roams the wharves and quays of Algiers by day may come here to sleep at night. If he has earned or begged no money he will sleep on the stone stairway leading to the docks; but if he has gained six sous he will hunt out an Arab cafe, and spend a night of luxury.

Telephoning to Airplanes.

In May, 1917, the problem of the use of wireless telephone for communication for airplanes when in flight was presented to a group of American engineers and scientists at the request of Major General Squier, chief signal officer of the army. Laboratory work was directed especially toward producing a telephone transmitter which should be responsive to the voice, but at the same time insensitive to extraneous noises, much as those made by the motor or the wind. A full transmission set was taken into the air on July 2, the same year, and, when the planes were two miles away, speech was received at the grounding station. On July 4 the receiving set was taken into the air and the aviator received spoken messages clearly when several miles from the ground, The tests and experiments were kept up through the summer, and on December 2, 1917, an official demonstration of both receiving and hearing was

LESSON FOR NOVEMBER 7

PRINCIPLES OF CHRISTIAN LIV-ING.

LESSON TEXT—Matt. 6:1-7; 12.
GOLDEN TEXT—Seek ye first the king-dom of God and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you.—

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Mark 10: 23-31; Luke 11:2-4; 12:22-32.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Our Heavenly Fa-

JUNIOR TOPIC-Jesus Teaching How to Pray.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC

—Golden Rules for Living.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC
—Counsels for Daily Living.

Having set forth in the previous chapters the standard of righteousness, Christ now exhibits the underlying principles which control the heir to the kingdom.

I. As to Giving (6:1-4).

Doing alms before men is not condemned, as that would contradict Matthew 5:16, but the doing of them before men to be seen of them. To seek publicity in doing our alms is to miss the reward of our heavenly

II. As to Praying (6:5-15).

1. False prayer (vv. 5, 7). This consists (1) in praying to be seen and heard of men (v. 5). (2) Using vain repetitions (v. 7). This does not mean that we should ask but once, for we have examples of Christ and Paul praying three times for the same thing (Matt. 26:39-46; II Cor. 12:7, 8), but the using of meaningless repetitions.

2. True prayer (v. 6). Since prayer is a transaction of the soul with God, we should have a real desire for fellowship with the Father, then go and meet him in secret.

3. The model prayer (vv. 9-15). This involves (1) right relationship-"Our Father" (v. 9); (2) right attitude-"Hallowed be thy name" (vv. 9, 10); (3) right spirit-"Give us our daily bread," "Forgive us our sins," "Lead us not into temptation" (vv. 11-13).

III. As to Fasting (vv. 19-24). The Lord knew the temptation which would befall his children in their pilgrimage here below touching wordliness, and the anxiety to which it would lead; therefore, he sets forth the proper attitude toward them: 1. The nature of earthly riches (vv. 19, 21). (1) Uncertain (vv. 19, 20). Earthly treasures corrode, or are taken from us. (2) Seductive (v. 21). Christ called riches deceitful (Matt. 13:22). It is not wrong to possess earthly treasures, but when earthly treasures possess us they become a snare.

2. The effect of earthly riches (vv. 22-24). (1) They blunt the moral and spiritual perceptions (vv. 22-23). When the heart is upon earthly treasures it is taken off God. (2) They render null and void all service (v. 24).

IV. As to Faith in the Heavenly Father (vv. 25-34).

Be not anxious about food and clothing (vv. 25-32). Because (1) it shows distrust for God (v. 30). (2) It is useless (v. 31). Anxiety can bring nothing. (3) It is heathenish (v. 32). Those who have not learned to know God may worry over tem-. poral affairs, but those who know him as a loving Father should be free from care.

2. Be anxious to seek the kingdom of God and serve him (vv. 33, 34). This does not forbid proper forethought in making a reasonable support for one's self and family.

As to Censorious Judgments (7:1-12).

1. The sin and folly of censorious judgments. This does not forbid us making an estimate of the lives of those about us, for "by their fruits ye shall know them:" neither does it prevent us from administering rebuke to those who deserve it. It rebukes that readiness to blame others and to magnify their weakness and

2. The duty of discrimination in dealing out holy things (v. 6). The gospel should be preached to all, but there should be discrimination, for "dogs and swine" have no comprehension as to holy things.

3. Qualification for discrimination (vv. 7-12). (1) A life of prayer (vv. 7-11). A life of prayer is a requisite for rightly divining the word of truth. (2) A disposition to treat others as one would be treated (v. 12). Confucius set forth this principle negatively, but only the Christ could do it positively. Between the negative and positive sides of this rule is found the difference between heathenism and Christianity. No man can live this rule unless he has been born from above and abides with Christ in the school of prayer, till he becomes like

What God Requires.

What God requires is an undivided will—a yielding will, desiring only what he desires, rejecting only what he rejects, and both unreservedly. Where such a mind is, everything turns to good, and its very amusements become good works. Happy indeed is such a one.-Fenelon.

When Death Comes.

When death, the great reconciler, has come, it is never our tenderness that we repent of, but our severity .-George Eliot.

4TH RED CROSS ROLL CALL FOR MEMBERS BEGINS ARMISTICE DAY

National Headquarters Reports Work Done In Past Year and It's Aims For the Future

ENTIRE PEACE TIME PROGRAM OUTLINED

In making an appeal to the people of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia, comprising the Potomac Division, to renew their memberships or to become new members of the American Red Cross, David H. Brown, Division Director of the Fourth Roll Call, which begins November 11 and ends November 26, has issued the following statement, in which is shown the work that has been carried on during the past year, the existing activities, and the entire peace-time program of the great relief organization:

The Fourth Roll Call is not a cam- | Red Cross Work At Home:

It is merely the yearly opportunity for American men and women to pay their annual dues and renew their membership in their Red Cross.

This Roll Call finds the Red Cross, as much at any time since it entered the great war, in the midst of tremendous concerns.

The world is so full of uncertainty -that which is called modern civilization is so utterly upset—that no sooner is one duty ended than another looms as large.

The present program of the Amer ican Red Cross is vastly important and fundamentally essential.

Its primary obligation was to the service men of the Army and Navy. Of that obligation these things still remain:

First, To stay with the Army of Occupation, comprising about 17000 officers and men, and serve as their Red

Second, To continue in the hospitals of the Army, the Navy and the Public Health Service where there are more than 26,000 men, many of whom will be retained there for months and some of them for years, and carry on their recreational and social work

Third, To keep in touch as an advisory organization with the discharged men of the Army and Navy, and be ready-not in the way of financial aid, but what is worth far more-to contribute kind advice and friendly assistance.

Fourth, To continue the work that has been going on in connection with the families of soldiers and sailors, and as growing out of this a similar work for the community at large.

The fact that the men have returned does not by any means eliminate domestic problems. In many cases it only intensifies them. This is particularly true in the case of more than 125,000 families whose men are in the number of the dead, where there is a wealth of service that the Red Cross can still render.

Fifth, While the Government itself is carrying on vocational training for existing agencies, to co-operate with maimed and crippled men, it has turned over to the Red Cross the care of those who have been blinded in the crash of war. No more sacred service can be imagined than this.

Work in Europe:

So far as the world at large is concerned the American Red Cross must still stand by to the limit of its possibility and the measure of its ability. On the Western Front its work is now life and the expansion of our national over. Belgium, France and Italy are slowly but surely making progress, with their feet firmly set upon paths of reconstruction.

What the American Red Cross does of these fall into the machinery of life for Europe depends upon what the throughout the world, the American American people ask it to do.

It knows how. The experience of minister in the name of humanity and the past is invaluable. The American mercy. Red Cross is ready. It is up to the American people to decide.

service. It spent thirty billion dollars in the world fight for Democracy.

That was an average of $300.00 per capita from our entire population. The United States owes twenty-eight billion dollars as a war debt.

That is an average of $280.00 per capita for our entire population.

The average American community spent last year about $9.00 per capita for education and about $3.50 per capita for fire and police protection.

As a nation we spent last year $10.00 per capita for candy, 50 cents per capita for chewing gum, $215.00 per capita for tobacco, 75 cents per capita for perfumery.

Last year the American nation spent less than 29 cents per capita protecting and developing the health of the country.

And yet-Last year 1,250,000 American people died of sickness.

Seven hundred and fifty thousand of them died of preventable disease. Twe hundred thousand adults died last year from tuberculosis.

Tuberculosis is neither hereditary nor necessary, but is a disease of defective civilization. Last year 300,000 American babies died before they were one year old. One hundred and fifty thousand of them did not live a month.

This slaughter of the innocents was largely the result of ignorance, indifference and economic inhumanity. The records of the war show that our civilian population is blighted with Venereal Disease. The Public Health Service indicates that one-tenth of our American life is thus contaminated.

The American Red Cross does not claim responsibility to analyze and solve these great questions of Public

It only recognizes that under its Charter it is compelled to "devise and carry on measures for mitigating the suffering incident to pestilence and disaster.

It seeks, therefore, merely to aid organized effort, and to place its organization and its workers alike at the disposal and the service of the community.

In furtherance of such a program the Community Public Health Nurse is destined to play an important part.

One thousand of these-most of them returned army nurses—have prepared themselves for this new crusade for higher standards of physical strength and vigor.

Rich, Red Blood Fights Off Disease and Keeps You Well and Enables You to Work With Pleasure

Serious sickness often comes when you least suspect. You may feel a lit-tle over-tired. You haven't been exposed to contagion, yet all of a sudden you are flat on your back and in for a siege of sickness.

Your blood did not have fighting qualities. It was weak and thin. Your vitality and powers of resistance were low. When you overdo you use up ener-

Don't let yourself get run down. Take that good tonic, Pepto-Mangan. It makes rich, red blood that will resist and rout out disease germs.

THE CHAUTAUQUA.

My boy, Jim, he needs inspirin'—there's a lot of good in Jim But as yet there hasn't much of it been comin' out of him. So he needs some mental stirrn' that will wake him up-in fact, Something broadenin' to set him thinkin' how he oughter act, Something strengthenin' his character, to make him feel he can And he oughter get right busy now to prove himself a man; The best ain't none too good for him, if he will only try, So for him a season ticket I've made up my mind to buy
To the Chautauqua.

My Marthy is a sweeet gal, but she's silly, more or less, Bein' like most other females at her time of life, I guess; She needs something that will broaden out that mind of hers a bit And will teach her this here world ain't just a little chunk of grit; She needs broader education and upliftin' influence; (Without which the sweetest maiden hasn't got a lick of sense.)
And now I've a chance to help her I won't let it slip, you bet,
So for Marthy I will certainly another ticket get
To the Chautauqua.

Why, if I could send my children to a college great and grand Where they'd have the best instructors to be found in all the land For a little old two dollars, and I didn't do it; then I would be ashamed to ever look 'em in the face again! Yet the Chautauqua brings the college to our door, With the biggest brained instructors to be found from shore to shore.

Will I miss it? I don't reckon! Yill I let the chance go by

Just 'cause money ain't too plenty? If I do, I hope I die

'Fore the Chautauqua.

Ma and me? Sh-h! That's a secret. I want that for a surprise That will set the light a-dancin' like when courtin' in her eyes; She's jest set her heart on goin', but I'm as quiet as a rat, Actin' like it was too costly. A season ticket's price—what is that To the pleasure and the good that it'll give us, one and all, Fun, instruction, entertainment! Why the price is lots too small; If it cost us fifty dollars, long as I could raise the pile We would be there every session—so you'll see us, I should smile At the Chautauqua.
