TANEYTOWN'S CHAUTAUQUA A FINE PROGRAM.

Buy Tickets Now and Help Boost the Big Attraction.

We believe there is quite a lot of latent interest in the coming chautauqua, but what we need now to make the affair successful and to make it such a benefit as it can be made, is an interest expressed by the immediate purchase of season tickets.

It will be decidedly to the advantage of the individual, and to the advantage of the committee as well, if all will arm themselves with season tickets thus getting the full list of attractions at the cost of two evening entertainments. The price of season tickets for children is especially low so that whole families may easily attend if they will.

The attractions are of a high order and must surely prove a benefit, as well as a great source of pleasure to those who hear and see them. The list is as follows:

MONDAY, NOV. 22.

Afternoon. Series lecture, Chautauqua Superintendent; Concert, Ballantine Operatic Quintet; Junior Chau-

The period specially devoted to the roll-call is from Armistice Day, November 11, to Thanksgiving Day, November 25; but to-day is the best day for you to renew your help. Have a card in your window, and a new badge for 1921. Half of your dollar will go to the central treasury, and half will be for use at home. No local worker receives a penny out of the funds.

Meeting of Board of Education.

The regular meeting of the Board of Education was called to order in the office of the Board at 10:30 A. M., on Wednesday, Nov. 3rd., 1920. Commissioner Feeser was absent.

The minutes of the previous meeting was read and approved as record-

All bills presented to the Board, with the exception of one which was to be further investigated by a committee consisting of Pres. Wantz and Supt. Unger before its approval, was ordered paid.

The Board, after a very careful review of its financial situation, the present prices of material, and the lateness of the season, deemed it best to postpone work on the Johnsville building until spring, at which time this building will be constructed. And in view of the fact that all the monev allowed in the budget for the Pleasant Gap building has been exhausted, Unger was authorized to in form Mr. A. H. Griffee who has had charge of this work, to take every precaution necessary to protect what has been done there until sufficient funds have been secured to proceed further with the work.

Requests for contributions for the purposes indicated from the following schools were presented. The board contributed Ten Dollars to the amount raised in each case. Walnut Grove raised $10 for Books; Meadow Branch raised $10 for books; Mexico, raised $29.02 for victrola.

The scholarship at Washington College made vacant by Lewin Hitchcock, Carroll County, was given to Everett Nuttle, of Chestertown, for the unexpired part if this year.

The Board adjourned at 12:45. Big Parade in Littlestown.

The Republican's of Littlestown and surrounding townships are planning a big parade for Tuesday night. Nov. 16th. Four bands have been engaged, and delegations are expected from Gettysburg Hanover, Taneytown and Union Mills. Floats and banners this will be one of the largest parades ever held in the town.

TOO MANY ELECTIONS.

Are there any reasons, other than long standing custom, why an election must be held every year? We have no public officials elected every yearall terms are two, four and six years.

Why not make the election of county officials fall on the years for electing President and Congress, and cut our election expenses in two?

We should also like to see the change made because our elections bring out the worst there is in human nature, and because there is an almost centinuous agitation going on between people on account of partisan differences, that often become bitterly personal.

Good citizenship demands a calm exercise of individual rights, and as little as possible of mere partisan contention that detracts from American fel-

Annual elections unsettle the business affairs of both country and community, keeping continuously on the job a certain element that lives largely on "politics" alone, and mixes local and national questions to the detriment of the just settlement of both.

KILLED NEAR EMMITSBURG.

Grant Springer Meets with Fatal Accident Operating Engine.

The bones of his breast crushed and shattered from the blow of the broken steering wheel of his threshing engine, Grant Springer, of near Emmitsburg, died almost instantly Saturday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. Leaving his engine after the accident he walked up a hill with the blood streaming from his mouth, nose and ears. His brother, Columbus, who was nearby, ran, caught and held him. The injured man died in his brother's Springer had just finished threshing for his brother on the latter's farm, near Emmitsburg, and was retruning with his tractor. As he started going down a hill the machine got beyond his control presumably be-cause of the breaking of the steering wheel. The engine upset, righted itself, and then went into a gutter and against the bank.

It is believed that Springer was struck across the breast by the steering wheel when it broke and that when the engine was upset he was thrown beneath it. No one was with him at the time. The bones of his breast were broken and crushed and forced against his heart.

The deceased was 26 years old and was well known in the vicinity of Emmitsburg. He had quite a reputa-tion as a machinist, and had been operating the latest farm machinery for some years. His sudden death was quite a shock to his many friends. He had only recently taken out a $2,000 life insurance policy.

He is survived by his parents, Mr.

and Mrs. George S. Springer, by a number of brothers and sisters, and by a wife and three year old daughter. Frederick News.

It is rumored that he may accept a similar position to the one he now occupies in another city. The Dayton Evening Herald

"As director of welfare work for seven years, Dr. Garland has gained a national reputation. The local department is considered the most comprehensive in welfare activities in this country.

Good Advice to All.

The New York Times, an administration paper, editorially gives the following advice that has the right ring to it;

The State Roads Commission has decided on the policy of covering all macadam roads with asphalt. The work has already begun on a small scale and will be pushed as vigorously as funds in hand will permit. The building of macadam roads has been

The move is an economic one. The cost of maintenance has mounted to 0800 per mile per annum. Even with this large expenditure the results have not been satisfactory. The maintenance fund is derived from motor vehicle licenses. This fund has been $1,350,000 this year. It is possible to divert a part of this fund to the gradual spreading of asphalt over the stone roads. When the work shall have been completed, the maintenance fund will be insufficient as compared with present expenditures.

Sixty-four thousand dollars which the State Roads Commssion had understood would be available for its work during the current year will not be forthcoming as the result of an opinion filed with State Comptroller E. Brooke Lee by Attorney General

Alexander Armstrong. The money was figured by Chairman John N. Mackall, of the commission, as due for this year's maintenance fund from the 1919-20 budget of former Governor Harrington Doubtful of his right to pay it under the law, Comptroller Lee referred the matter to Mr. Armstrong, who has ruled that the Road Commission's view is a mistaken one.

During the present year the com-mission has constructed 130 miles of roads, at a cost of $5,000,000.

An Interesting Herbarium.

Mrs. Jesse P. Garner, of Linwood, has recently become the owner of an Herbarium which was begun in the early fifties (nearly 70 years ago.) Although every page save one is much defaced by time, each has kept traces of what a thing of beauty it

Miss Margaret B. Coyle, who lately left Philadelphia, Pa., to reside in Los Angeles, Cal., writes that the Herbarium was made by her greataunt, Miss Sarah Dunlap. Miss Dunlap was engaged to be married. Her betrothed died. To divert her mind, she took up botany.

(The Biographer of Charlotte Bronte, Mrs. Gaskell, wrote that delightful "Cranford" when in grief for the death of a child.) Miss Dunlap traveled extensively, and many of the botanical specimens were gathered by herself. Her brother, Robert Dunlap, came to the United States and about 1850, (seventy years ago) became President of the First National Bank, Philadelphia. It was while on her visits to him that the U. S. specimens were gathered! In "lady-like" handwriting on one page is told that this Ivy was cut by Keble's own hand, 11th. July, 1854, from the walls of his parsonage, Hinsley, near Winchester. (Keble is the author of 'The Christian Year.") The most interesting specimen is fern from the tomb of Virgil, Naples, 1856. There are flowers from the Righi, (Switzerland) 1855. There is Ivy from Carisbrook Castle, Isle of Wight. (It was a castle before the Romans came to Britian. It was taken by the Saxons, 530. It was the prison of Charles First, 1649.)

There s heather from Lammer-moor, 1856. From Roseneath Castle, Argyleshire, there is a rose, 1853, and a rose bud from Rydal Mount where Wordsworth died. Souvenirs from Wordsworth's grave, Grasmere, Southey's grave, and an ivy leaf marked, Fox Howe, Arnold of Rugby, make up another page.

A rose is from the place near Canterbury where Charles First was married. Other pages show ivy, from Abbottsford, Windsor Castle, Warwick Castle, Kenilworth Castle, Melrose Abbey, the Colleges at Oxford, Westminster Abbey, fern from Loch

The Democratic Defeat Greater Than Last Week.

The Republican majority in the House has grown, this week, the indications being that there will be only 138 Democratic members out of a total of 435. The Republicans will have a legal quorum for the transaction of business should every Democratic member absent himself. What is left of the Democratic party in office, is more than ever from the Southern states. In about six districts, the vote is very close, involving contests and recounts. There should be more exacting laws with reference to the recognition of so-called "new," or "independent" parties. Our ballots are made more than double in size and cost, and voting is greatly more difficult, because the ballots are overrun with names of candidates, for whom very few care anything about. The ballot also contains a blank group of lines and squares, in which may be written the names of others for whom voters may want to vote. There were three of these extra lots of candidates on our ballot this year, all of whom received insignificant votes, not only in Carroll County, but over the state. Why not require the voters for such candi-

than in 1916. In spite of all instructions to the contrary, many voters bungled their ballot by voting for one or more of the electors. Evidently, the worst ignoramuses avoid both the newspapers and instruction rooms. A number of ballots contained no X marks whatever, and one ballot contained an X mark for every name on the ballot except for the Democratic candidates. We regret to say that this specimen lives somewhere in Taneytown dis-

Candidates whom they had blacklisted because of unfavorable legislation, were re-elected, among them Gov. Senator James A. Reed, of Miss-

Ohio may be called the "Mother of Presidents"-but not of Democratic ones, as the record stands.

Now, it is said that "rum" is placed in tobacco. Perhaps the argument may be used as the basis of an antitobacco crusade that is said to be on the cards of the reformers, for something to do next.

The automobile is pretty well loaded down with "appearances of evil," one of the most familiar being its use as a get away medium for stolen liquors, burglars, hold-up men and robbers in general. Mighty is the auto as an accessory, before and after the act, to criminality in many forms.

Mr. Bryan has not recommended himself for opportune wisdom by suggesting that President Wilson should now resign, in order that Congress can at once "place in operation a plan for the United States to enter into an association of nations for peace." Even those bitterly opposed to the President's theories do not wish him to take any such course; moreover, the whole question should rest where it is until the new Senate and House elected by the people, comes into power on March 4, next.

The Election, and Good Times.

Those who expect good times following the election of Harding, are likely to be disappointed, especially if we estimate good times as being a season when we buy at low prices and sell at high prices-have plenty of money and in general live on "easy street." The times, as we see the outlook, must get worse before they can get better. Blaming a previous administration for an unnecessarily large war debt, and placing another party in power, does not pay the debt; but it must be paid, or gotten under good control, before the country can be rid of its present staggering burden of taxes which will compel high prices in many directions before normal before-the-war conditions can be reached.

The period of reconstruction must necessarily last for years, and if the new administration can demonstrate a good beginning within its four years from next March, and so steer financial affairs as to run smoothly and dodge panics, it will do very well indeed. The country must also recover from its own spree of reckless expenditures; it has had a big debauch, and the "day after" is to be reckoned

In some instances, "after the election" hopes have been held up as a time for rejuvenated business, in the event of the election of Harding and Coolidge; but we have little faith that any such result will be traceable to such a cause. We have played, and now we must pay. Perhaps the paying will be the easier and more rapid under a new Republican, than under a renewed Democratic, administration, but such a conclusion is far from being a settled fact.

Business men of the country will unquestionably feel safer under a Republican administration. The fact is pretty well established—but would be difficult to explain—that the Republican party is the best "business" party. There are thousands of Democrats throughout the country who invariably vote for Republican Presidents, but at all other times for Democratic candidates; and this is no mere whim, but a matter of following business and financial precedents. All in all, the election of Harding and Coolidge is likely to have a steadying and sobering influence throughout the country, an influence that is so greatly needed in industrial fields.

The Auto and the Future.

The automobile and auto truck are hundreds of thousands of ownerswho have not already found out this

The indulgences and accompanying habits of the auto, are to be reckoned | must pay a decent price for them. with. Just how much they have interfered with work and business, and added to pleasure and spending, is for the future to show. They have had tremendous effect on "going somewhere" both on Sundays and week days. They have "reduced production" in many lines and revolutionized so many things that the country is not yet aware of the Financial failures and business wrecks are apt to be directly traceable to "too much auto." The very "speed" of them is apt to prove an sults." unsettling influence, and what we call "luxury of travel" has not yet had its cost in newly formed habits clearly

And then, there is the long catalogue of deaths and accidents-the deaths that are so easily called "unavoidable." Will this lead to carelessness as to the safety of human life in other directions? The question is pertinent. The exercise of a habit is not confined to the thing that originated the habit-it grows and extends to others. We are just beginning our experiences with motor driven vehicles, and have hardly commenced to sanely and seriously consider where we are going.

The School and Road Bond Vote.

That only 4865 voters out of about 10,000 who cast their ballots last week, failed to express themselves on the school and road bond issue, is unfortunate. There is a disinclination, always, to vote on such side questions, but doing so is often as important as voting for a candidate. Most of the women voters passed by the bond issue and the amendments contenting themselves, for their first vote, by not making greater efforts than necessary to vote for the candidates. Others failed to vote, either way because they were not informed as to the importance of the issue, which had but little advance publicity and discussion.

Just why the matter was not widely circulated in advance of the election, we do not know. The Record, in common with the others papers of the county, failed to feature the proposition early in the campaign. In our case, this was because of lack of information and assurance that such an issue would be presented, and no public local laws were sent to us for publication. This particular law should have been advertised in every paper in the county.

However, assuming the 4865 votes to have been cast largely by men, and taxpayers, a majority of 529 'against," is worth considering; and especially so when in a few of the districts most in need of schools and roads-and unwilling to wait-the "for" vote was likely considerably increased by non-tax-payer votes. Even in the districts most concerned about school and road betterments, the vote does not seem to us to be strongly conclusive on the "for" side. In Freedom, the vote was 283 "for" and 87 "aginst," while the district cast 810 votes for President; and in Union Bridge, the vote "for" was 168, and 40 "against," while the district cast 460 votes for President. In these two districts, less than half of the others were interested enough, apparently, to vote either "for" or

The Baltimore Loans.

Baltimore voted on four loans at the recent election, and all carried. These loans were widely talked of and canvassed for six months, and opposition was well organized, yet the majorities "for" the loans were decisive. The city government, therefore, announces that it will go ahead with improvements assured of public sentiment in that direction.

Baltimore, moreover, has been backward among cities in the improvement of its schools. Many of its buildings have grown antiquated, unsafe and inadequate, as a recent survey has demonstrated. The last issue of the Municipal Journal, says: "It is to be hoped that conditions generally will soon readjust themselves toward the normal, but too sudden a tendency in that direction might entail a depression that would upset the whole order of things. These high costs will be manifest, especially in the construction of school buildings, but who will deny that the urgent needs in this respect justify immediate action if we are to keep faith with the present generation of school children and the generations to

To say that we should not build new school houses now on account of the high cost of material, or new sewers, or pave our streets, or lay conduits, or develop new additions would be equivalent to saying that we should give up everything in despair because those before us did not have sufficient foresight to have provided for us all that we now need when we find conditions as they are. B: !!timoreans must not lose sight of the fact that we are not the only city in which large expenditures are about to be made for urgently needed improvements and to meet the demands that ante-war conditions have brought about. The advantage in Baltimore in now, however, that the cost of these improvements are to be carried over a long period of time while the taxpayers of many of our rival cities must pay for kindred improvements out of the levy. The principal need among ourselves henceforth is a full realization of the task that is before the loan commissions and a hearty co-operation on the part of the public, the force of which will aid in a very material way in solving the problems and perplexities which they will encounter.'

Serious Results from Colds.

Colds not only cause a tremendous financial loss, but also a serious injury to every one who contracts them, as they lower the vitality and prepare the system for the more serious diseases. It is not at all unusual for people who have serious lung trouble to say "I had a hard cold last win-Why not take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and cure your cold while you can.

HOW-

ANIMALS CAN TELL WHEN NEAR WATER IS MYSTERY. -That animals have a special sense by means of which they can detect the presence of water, even when too far away to be seen, has been proven by a series of interesting experiments carried on in France. Not all animals have this amazing faculty, but several are blessed with it, as has already been discov-

The experiments were undertaken at the suggestion of David Allen, a resident of Australia and a corresponding member, who wrote to the institute of his experiments with sheep and cattle when being driven across country. In a place where the presence of water was wholly. unexpected, he says, the leading animals would suddenly lift their heads and draw long breaths. Then they would abandon the beaten tracks and start running through the bush. Sometimes they would run a mile and a half or two miles and could not be stopped by the drivers, their course invariably leading to a pond or spring hitherto unknown.

The experiments were made on a water rat. First its eyes were blinded by a bandage, and then it was placed in a turntable, which was whirled round until all sense of direction must have been obliterated. Upon being released, without a moment's hesitation it started directly for the pond, several hundred yards Frogs and toads were taken to a distance of three or four miles from water and turned loose. It seemed to take them only a few seconds to locate the water. One blind old toad showed the instinct in the same degree as the others.

The nature or source of this is not yet clearly discerned. The observers have named it the sense of humidity. They believe it consists in a perception of the direction in which the atmosphere contains most moisture. Efforts have been made to discover whether any men possess it but without success.

FROWNED ON EARLY RISING

How Famous Men Regarded Proverb Which Says "Early to Bed and Early to Rise," Etc.

Getting up in the morning was frowned upon by both a famous Englishman and a famous Oriental, according to the Manchester Guardian, which

"Gladstone might well figure in the list of famous men who disliked the practice of early rising. 'I hate getting up in the morning,' he once told Sir Henry Lucy, 'and I hate it the same every morning. But one can do everything by habit, and when I have had my seven hours' sleep I get up.'

"Li Hung Chang held the same views. At the close of his visit to Petrograd in 1896 the Chinese statesman wrote in his diary: 'I have learned that we start early tomorrow morning. This is not to my taste. I would much prefer to begin the journey now and sleep on the train. To arise so early in the morning seems to be a foolish western practice-foolish especially among statesmen, who could so much better transact their affairs at night, when all is quiet and the mind is most alert. But from all I can learn these statesmen and law-givers look for their pleasures at night, going to banquets, theaters and parties. To this I attribute much of the intrigue known to all these courts. Women cannot enter the council chamber or make speeches in parliament, but they work their wits at the parties and operas."

How New York Conserves Health. Nowhere in the world is greater attention given to safeguarding the health of the citizens than in New York State, nor is there any other commonwealth where laws of sanitation are more strictly enforced than here, says a report from the office of the controller of the state of New York. Until the creation of the state board of health, however, about twenty years ago, health regulations throughout the state were generally in the hands of the local authorities. Up to that time the chief expenditures incurred by the state were for hospital work in New York City and quarantine purposes in connection with the regulations of shipping in the port of New York.

The sum first expended by the state for these purposes was $5,000, later increased to $22,500. Afterward $2,-500 was allowed annually to prevent the spread of contagious diseases.

How Motor Hum Effects Partridges. That the hum of an auto motor hypnotizes a partridge, is the conclusion of Game Warden St. Clair Wilson of Houghton county, Michigan. He says that the birds are so paralyzed with fear at the sound of a motor that they cannot seek cover, but remain in position from the time the noise is heard.

On this account the slaughter of partridge undoubtedly will be heavy this fall. It is unlawful to hunt birds from an automobile, but the law does not prohibit a hunter from getting out of his machine to shoot partridge. Consequently if the motor is not stopped the chances of the nimrod getting the partridge are enhanced.

Vast Wealth in Liberia. The Sun and New York Herald a few weeks ago was probably the first newspaper in our country to announce that Liberia, in West Africa, had just come into view as very rich in natural resources, both agricultural and mineral. It is nearly as large as the state of New York, fronts on the Atlantic for about 300 miles and its coast belt is only about twenty miles wide. North of the coast belt the whole country is a vast forest, through which Sir Alfred Sharpe of England has recently penetrated. He has informed the Royal Geographical society of the enormous population of this, till now, unknown forest land and of the unexpected resources, including gold and other minerals, that await development there.

Radio Control for Airplanes.

There can be doubt that if the war had lasted a few months longer we would have witnessed the leading armies employing great fleets of airplanes controlled by radio means. The United States army had progressed pretty far along this line when the armistice was declared. The same can be said for Germany. Now we learn that the French have demonstrated that five or six small and inexpensive bombing planes, without pilot, can be successfully guided by a "shepherd" in a larger plane through the means of Hertzian waves .- Scientific American.

Marriage Promotes Long Life.

Marriage, according to Doctor Schwartz of Berlin, is the most important factor of longevity. Of every 200 persons who reach the age of forty years, 125 are married and 75 unmarried. At sixty the proportions are 48 to 22; at 70 years, 27 to 11; and at ninety years, 9 to 8. Fifty centenarians had all been married.

MONUMENTS OF VAST SIZE

That on Leipzig Battlefield, Though Higher, Less Costly Than Memorial to Italian King.

Leipzig possesses a monument which rises only a few inches short of 300 feet. "The Battle of the Nations" monument stands in the middle of the plain where Blucher routed Napoleon's army. One million cubic meters of earth were displaced to make room for its base. It is surrounded by an enclosure a quarter of a mile wide and nearly half a mile

Next to the Pyramids it is the highest in the world, but it is by no means the costliest. This distinction belongs to the national memorial to Victor Emmanuel II, erected on the Capitoline hill in Rome at a cost of $20,000,000. It took 31 years to complete this huge pile of marble steps, covered with statues, bas-reliefs, and mosaics. Sacconi, the architect, who designed it, died long before the work was finished, but he left models complete in every detail, and his original plans were never tampered with.

Colors Save the Eggs. We have heard a great deal about protective coloration in nature, and when we consider the advantages which accrue to protectively colored eggs we may wonder why some eggs have remained pure white through the ages, why others are of the most conspicuous greenish blue, and why still others stand out by their spotted or speckled patterns, says the American Forestry Magazine. White eggs are for the most part laid by hole-nesting species of birds like the owls and woodpeckers, and since the eggs are well hidden in their dark cavities it has not been necessary for them to develop protective coloration. The bright greenish blue eggs of most of the thrushes, for example, must be hidden in nests which are concealed in dense vegetation and the speckled eggs of the ground nesting sparrows depend for their safety upon the good hiding of the grass-woven nest.

Crossed Wires

By FREDERICK HART

(©. 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) "Hello! Hello! Operator? Let me have Stuyvesant 1122, please. Yes, 1122. No, not Riverside-Stuyvesant! S-t-u-y-yes, that's right, 1122. Yes." Click! The racket at the other end of the wire indicated a subdued activity on the part of Central, and Reed Davidson leaned against the wall of the booth to await what Fate might bring forth. He was embarked on that long and perilous adventure known as "getting a number."

After due delays and much earrack ing buzzings a voice reached him. "Darlington Company!"

"Is Miss Darlington there?"

"Who is this speaking?"

"Metropolitan Agency. I was instructed to speak to Miss Darlington regarding the matter of the J. H. Day

"Oh, yes. I'll put you on her wire." Another short wait, and then in his ear, "Miss Darlington speaking. Who is this, please?" But in the short interval it took for those words to get over the humming miles of copper that stretched between him and his fellow-conversationalist, Reed Davidson had been transformed from a man of business with an important matter to speak of to a wildly excited young man with a mystery on his hands. That voice! But the name was Darlington, and he remembered that her name had been Stratton before-before that June evening when they had quarreled and she had told him-but she didn't understand, he knew. And then he had lost her; and now it was her voice! With a mighty effort he mastered himself. "Miss D-Darlington? He was sparring for time. Yes!" There was a slight shade of impatience in the voice. Evidently Miss Darlington was pressed for time. He forgot the haunting voice, and plunged into the matter in hand. In five minutes it was settled-he found himself admiring the crisp precision with which the woman on the other end of the wire disposed of troublesome details. "Very well-I'll write you a letter confirming this conversation at once. My representatives will call in a day or so. Good-by!" "Good-by!" He hung up the receiver and went out to think. It couldn't be she, of course-not with that nameand yet-the solution burst upon him. It must be she! He couldn't be deceived in the tones even over the wire. But the name-well, that was easily explained. She had married some one named Darlington, and for business reasons called herself "Miss." That was it. And he-well, he had lost her. He returned to the office, sick at heart. His chief greeted him.

"Well, did you put that Darlington matter through?"

"Yes." The tone was lifeless. "Good work! I'll put you on it entirely for the finishing touches."

"No, chief. I don't want it." "But, Great Scott, man! It's a big deal! You stand to make a lot out of it in commissions. And I know you can carry it out to the queen's taste. What's the matter with you? Scared of a woman?"

Pretty close to the mark, thought Davidson; but he merely replied: "I'd rather not handle it, if you don't mind. I-I'm feeling sort of down and out." The chief looked at him keenly for a

"All right, old man. Tompkins can have the job. Better take a week-end off-go out in the country somewhere. Do you good." And he turned again

But it was not country air that Davidson needed. That night he tossed upon his bed, sleepless, torturing himself with the thought of all that he had lost. In the morning he arose, dressed mechanically, ate a tasteless breakfast, and from force of habit wended his way toward the office. When there he was met with a scene of excitement. The chief called him into his office at once.

"Old man, I'm sorry. I intended you to go off today, but, thank goodness, you're here. Tompkins is laid upacute indigestion-and that Darlington matter's got to be settled today. You're the only man who can handle it. Go ahead, put it over, and you can have a week to rest up in. It's tough, but it can't be helped. Be a sport-we need you now as we never needed you before."

Davidson hesitated. It would be agony for him to meet her; but he could not desert the company in its need. He squared his shoulders.

"All right, chief. I'll take it," he said quietly.

"Good man! Tompkins made an appointment with her for 10:30; you'll just about have time to get there. Good luck!"

Davidson left the office and made his way to the subway. All the way downtown he mentally steeled himself against the meeting. In the busy outer office of the Darlington Company he waited; then a girl brought him his card which he had sent in and said, 'Miss Darlington will see you now."

He rose and entered the inner office. The slender girl seated at the big desk at the side of the room did not look up at first, but he knew that he had not been mistaken in the voice -that it was indeed his lost love. The knowledge that she was out of his reach forever made him sick and shaky, but he steadied his voice and

"Miss Darlington, I called to see you about the matter of the J. H. Day account." At the sound of his voice she whirled suddenly, cheeks flushed, eyes shining. Her hands clasped themselves over her heart. Then the flush died, and a deadly whiteness took its place. "You!" was all she said.

"Yes-too late!" Davidson could have killed himself the next moment for uttering those words, but the strain had been too much. That was no way to talk to a girl who had married some one else. He tried to revert to business.

"About that account-" he began, but he never finished. She had reached her arms to him, and he, forgetting all else, held her close, kissing her cheeks, her eyes, her lips and mur-muring old half-forgotten pet names in her ear. In a moment he released her, his face stern.

"You tempted me," he said. "I should not have done this. Youryour husband-"

"Not married?" stupidly.

"No-I went into business when you -when you left, and took the name of Darlington so that my old friends wouldn't find me. I never wanted to see anybody else in the world, except-

"Except me! Why, dear, after what I said that day-

Her lips stopped the words. In a moment she murmured, "Oh, my dear, I knew when I thought it was too late that we never should have quarreled! It was so foolish-and so needlessly cruel. And oh, but'I have wanted you to come back to me. And till you spoke I didn't know."

"But the card I sent in-She showed it to him. He read in w Tompkins." He amazement had caught it up from the desk when hè left the office and used it by mis-

"Poor Tompkins!" he said, between a sigh and a laugh. "I ought to be sorry for him, for he's mighty sickbut I can't help thinking that it was his sickness that let me find you again. May I use the 'phone?"

"Of course." She was mystified. He called his office. "Hello! That you, chief? Say, I fixed that Darlington matter up."

"Good work! Everything O. K?" "You bet! Everything! And say, chief-I'm going to ask for a month off instead of a week. I'm going on my honeymoon."

The Song Birds Hate Jazz.

The Ohio State Journal discovered at its state fair this year that the song bird hates jazz. When musical melodies were played, it says, the scores of canaries and other song birds joined in, or tried to rival instruments, as you prefer. But when the air was jazz, the birds fell silent.

The song birds' protest won't end jazz. Not even the protests of the outraged worker who finds his midnight strident but unmelodious will do that. But it's pleasant to learn that the song bird, whose title to an ear for music has been established since long before men put the strings to harp and lute, is backing up the feelings of a good many of the rest of us, who recognize that what the age likes they must expect to hear, but enjoy, a few votes on their side none the

Tinsel Is Gold

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Morella De Lue was at home. It was rather a dingy room whose keynote was the drab-brown of the conventional cheap boarding housebut there were high lights of color where a gay silk petticoat burst through the swelling curtains of a corner closet, or pink lingerie tumbled carelessly out of a half-open drawer. The wide couch that served as a bed by night was heaped high with gorgeous pillows-and for the rest, there was Morella herself, red-gold hair endowed by nature, sea-blue eyes set beneath a thoughtful brow; a large, sweet mouth that always smiled-ofttime when it wanted to droop with weariness-a tiny mite of a Morella, who could dance like an elf on the brim of the magic fountain, and who could sing cheerily in the dull room as she sewed spangles on gossamer elfin wings that she must wear that night.

Heavy footsteps sounded outside her door, and she heard the plaintive voice of her landlady.

"A gentleman to see you, Miss De Lue-here's his card," The steps wandered away and Morella snatched at the bit of white pasteboard under the door. "Andrew-" she breathed softly, "Andrew Fenton-coming here to see-it's a joke-Nony Waite has played a joke on you and is now giggling in the parlor downstairs." Nevertheless, she kissed the card and tucked It away in her workbasket. In a moment she had changed the kimono for a little gray gown, twisted her glorious hair into a semblance of order and went demurely downstairs to the grim parlor where Andrew Fenton, author of the musical show "The Magic Fountain," was waiting to see herfor Morella was the humblest member of the dancing elves. Sometimes Fenton had talked to her behind the scenes, but this was the first time he had singled her out for marked at-

Andrew Fenton was a clever-looking man of thirty-five, with brilliant dark eyes and a fine mouth that smiled down at Morella's astonishment in a very kindly way.

"It's a glorious day, Miss DeLue," he said. "You looked pale last night -my car is outside and I'm going to take you out to the shore to see the waves dancing in the sunshine-perhaps you might learn some new steps, but I believe you could teach the waves to fly!'

"Angelic man!" sighed Morella, twin roses in her cheeks, feeling like saucy Nony Waite.

Later, when the wheels of the powerful machine crunched a sandy shore and the fresh sound breeze had whipped more color into Morella's lovely little face, Fenton brought the conversation around to the play, Morella's part in it, and finally asked her bluntly what she was doing in New York anyway, all alone at her age. "Born here," said Morella briefly.

"But not bred here," smiled Fenton "Well-we did live in a little country town for years—then mother died and father married again-well, I've always longed for New York and Broadway-isn't it wonderful?" She sighed the sigh of the neophyte. Fenton laughed. "Dear child, what is Broadway?

"Broadway is New York and New York is Broadway-it is life," she blazed defiance.

"Poor child," he pitied. "New York is a display of fireworks-you are dazzled by it. What you call life iswell, three-quarters of the men and women streaming in and out of the brightly-lighted places are country folk dizzy with the lights and the music and dancing-some day, often too late, they wake up."

Morella was a little frightened. In spite of her bravado she had grown to fear the merciless city.

"But I am part of New York," she protested at last. "I help to make it gay with my dancing-of course I know I am only a bit of the tinsel of | rimony."

life-" all the fresh color drained from her face. "I hope you will pardon me -but I read in the paper the other day of your engagement," her voice became halting. "She is very beauti-

"You mean Miss Vare?"

"She is beautiful—but we are no onger engaged, and-" he bit his lip viciously and Morella saw that the nemory of the other girl hurt him.

"I am sorry," she said, and tried to talk of other things, but her voice failed. She could not help thinking about the girl he loved—a girl who was pure gold and not tinsel of the stage. That night as she dressed for the last scene she hated the glittering elfin dresscreature of the hot lights of Broaday. Once someone asked her if she felt ill, but she shook her head and went on smiling, dancing-starry-eyed, beautiful until the curtain rang down, when suddenly she became a weary, draggled elf—the last to leave the dressing room.

Then, as she was leaving, a sweet feminine voice drew her back again. The great empty space behind the stage was vacant, with here and there a dim light burning in a wire cage and Morello gasped as she recognized the charming girl in a rich evening coat, who had an elusive air of belonging to the gold of life.

It was Andrew Fenton's Miss Vare. "I couldn't find a messenger," she said plaintively, "and I wonder if you will be kind enough to find out if Mr. Fenton is here—and take a message.'

Morella was quite pale. She was wearing the little gray dress and hat and her hair was knotted low on her neck. "I shall be glad to take a message," she said slowly, for she was

"Thank you," said Miss Vare, "and, now, please tell him that Miss Vare will be waiting for him in the lobby and that she will drive him home-he will understand-tell him she will wait only five minutes," the sweet voice broke a little, and as she turned away Morella saw a triumphant curl of the haughty lips.

'She looks unkind," thought Morella, speeding on her errand, then she suddenly leaned against the wall and cried a little. She wanted to be gold! All at once strong hands gripped her shoulders and turned her around.

"Why the tears?" asked Fenton "She is waiting for you-hurry-she will drive you home-she will wait just five minutes-I mean Miss Vare," she explained smiling through her

"Is that all?" he asked, searching her face with keen eyes.

"Is it not enough—from her?" she whispered. He put his hand under her chin.

'Morella, shall I go?" "Yes-before it is too late." "And if I would rather stay with

"Ah! I-I-I am only tinsel-" He laughed exultantly and drew her close to his heart. "Beloved elf, don't you know that when love, the alchemist, touches tinsel—then tinsel is

WHERE THE POET IS KING

Versifiers Seemingly Are Much Thought Of by the Sometimes

Poets enjoy great privileges and immunities in Mexico.

They have a story in Coahuila about this power of poets. In the early stages of the constitutionalist revolution some federal troops had been driven from a wood, but a few of the little brown, pajamaed infantrymen climbed into the trees as easily as the monkeys they resembled. So the rebels went about as squirrel hunters. One party surrounded a tree in whose branches the fawn color of a uniform had been observed. Just as the rifles were raised, a brown hand with an oratorical gesture was thrust through the leaves, and a clipped head ap-

"Don't shoot," said the voice with a theatrical modulation, "don't shoot me. I am a poet."

The soldier was the regimental poet, composer of the verses for the folksongs in which are related the progress of the campaign. Almost every regiment in the old federal army had its laureate.

"Come down, Mr. Poet," cried the men below, and they made him recite some of his verses, after which each one of the rebels gave him a good, hard hug.

One may not strike a poet, any more than a woman, whether he is up a tree in Coahuila or occupying a city in Dalmatia.-Leslie's.

What Did She Mean?

The curious effect sometimes produced in telegrams by want of punctuation or the omission of a single small word cannot fail to have struck everyone.

A London lawyer had a woman relative in Scotland from whom he had "expectations." She had been ailing for some weeks, when one morning came a telegram asking the lawyer's wife to go at once as she-his auntwas much worse. His wife accordingly went.

During the evening of the following day the husband received this announcement:

"Aunt Matilda went to heaven at 3:30, returning by 11:50 tomorrow morning."

No Doubt.

"I don't believe there is really one state where all the women want to

Economic Bureau Looks After Electric, Steel and Aluminum Plants.

BUT EXTENSION IS DELAYED

Nationalization of Coal Mines May Have to Wait Change in Makeup of Reichstag-Holding Company Formed.

Washington.—Since the conclusion of the Spa conference, at which Germany agreed to increase its coal output in order to bring the deliveries to France up to approximately 2,000,000 tons per month, there has been renewed agitation among the miners for the nationalization of the mining industry in the hope that better working conditions and pay may be obtained under such a condition than with the mines owned and operated by Hugo Stinnes and his few associate coal barons. Other sections of German industrial life are also likely to be ultimately run by the state, although it will probably be necessary for the German people to elect a more radical reichstag to effect these changes, as the present cabinet is not pledged to any great extension of the principle of public ownership and op-

In the meantime, however, as the result of earlier agitation for government control and operation of the lead-Ing industries, the national economic bureau of the German treasury department has quite a few important government controlled industrial plants to look after, according to a summary of its activities recently published in the German press and quoted from in commerce reports. The most important of the government factories are the arsenals and naval construction yards, which are now engaged on non-military construction. This includes the manufacture of steel, the making of all sorts and descriptions of machinery in large quantities, especially for agricultural and domestic purposes, and the repairing of rolling stock and locomotives. Smallarms works are being maintained as such so far as is consistent with the provisions of the peace treaty.

State in Control.

"In order to consolidate the government interests in these different undertakings a company was formed in December, 1919, called the German Industrial Stock company, with a capital of 100,000,000 marks (nominally $23,800,000; at current exchange, about $2,250,000); the whole of the shares being in the hands of the government. The state thus exercises either full or partial control, according to the number of electrical, electrochemical and other undertakings.

The huge generating station at Zschornewitz, near Bitterfield, belonging to the Electric Plant company, is controlled. It provides the current for the state nitrogen works in Wittenberg, obtaining the necessary fuel from adjacent lignite mines. It has an output of 100,000 kilowatts and, besides running the nitrogen plant, supplies current to the Berlin Electric works, and will shortly extend this supply of energy to Leipsic and the province of Saxony. The Central German Power Works company comprises the central power station at Senftenberg, formerly belonging to the Aluminum works, Lauta, with an output of 60,000 kilowatts; and the Niederlausitzer Power plant, near Spremberg, with adjacent lignite mines, and with an output of 20,000 kilowatts. Up to the present the electric energy developed by these two plants has been utilized in the manufacture of aluminum and nitrogen. In the future it will also be employed to supply electricity for the surrounding industrial districts.

The East Prussia central station. which was recently erected to provide the province of East Prussia with electric power, is controlled, as also is the Alz works, Munich, which was formed in 1918, in conjunction with the Dr. Wacker Alexander company, for electrochemical manufacturing, to utilize the water power of the lower Alz. The output is, roughly, 20,000 kilowatts. The Wurttemberg Rural Electric company was reorganized in 1919 to enable the state, with the consent of the Wurttemberg government, to take a dominant interest in the supply of electricity to the province of Wurttemberg. Great efforts were made during the war to put the manufacture of aluminum on a firm footing, in order to make Germany independent of foreign supplies. Plants were erected and the manufacture started at Horrem, Bitterfeld and Rummelsburg, each factory having an output of 3,000 tons of aluminum per annum. In 1916 the Erftwerk company was taken over by the government and reorganized with a capital of 25,000,000 marks. The branch works of this company, in Grevenbroich (lower Rhine), have been fitted up to produce 12,000 tons of aluminum per annum.

Iron and Steel Mills.

In regard to iron and steel mills the Ilseder Smelting company and the Peiner Rolling Mills company are controlled. These works have a capital of 20,000,000 marks, of which the government holds 25 per cent. The chief features of this undertaking are that the mines producing the ore are in close proximity to the smelting and rolling plant, and that, situated as they are in central Germany, they have an advantage over the competing works in Westphalia in placing their output in adjacent districts. In prewar days their yearly output of ore amounted to 1,000,000 tons.

The Bavarian Lloyd Shipping company in Regensburg with a capital of 16,000,000 marks, a large portion of which belongs to the state, is also repsented on the board of the Government Holding company. The Bavarian Lloyd held a commanding position in transport work on the Danube and neighboring rivers, but lost the greater part of its vessels at the end of the war. Negotiations are, however, proceeding between the different government departments and others interested to put the company once more on a commercial footing. The German ship-salvage company "Odin," Berlin, with a capital of 5,000,000 marks, was originally formed to carry out work in connection with the salvage of transports and other shipping in the Baltic. The company was not very successful owing to the unsuitable methods of salvage adopted. It is now proposed to divert the company's activities to towage and lighterage work. According to a resolution adopted by the German Metal Economic league, reported by the Wolff Telegraph Bureau, the export of 50 per cent of all pig metals coming from German mines during May, June, July and August, is to be permitted. No limit is placed upon the export of all partly manufactured metal products, provided they are not sold at prices under the domestic rates. German manufacturers may import raw metals, if they do not pay more than the standard prices in the world market. German export prices on semi-manufactured iron and steel products have been materially lowered during the last few months. Bar iron selling at 6,336 marks in April has been cut to 4,000 marks per ton for export to Holland and Switzerland and to 3,650 to Denmark. the latter being the same as the domestic rate in Germany. The iron industry is protesting against further payment of export duties.

MEXICO TRIES FARM COLONIES

Government Takes Action to Satisfy the Land Hunger of the Peasants.

Mexico City.—To satisfy the land hunger of the Mexican peasantry, the government is establishing farm colonies in the states of San Luis Potosi and Guanajuato.

Other settlements will be founded as soon as these first two are completely launched.

In these colonies, the small proprietors will live like the Mormons in Chihuahua and Sonora-each community having its own streets, market. garden, mixed school and moving picture theater. Apportionment of the adjacent farm lands will be made so that each petty landholder will literally have his own "row to hoe," thus obviating one of the greatest causes for the many recent uprisings that have occurred in Mexico. Each farmer will be furnished with agricultural implements and seed. These farms will be nontransferable in any form, whether by mortgage, sale or exchange. They may be inherited, however, and are to be free from taxation

It is planned to establish the proposed communities near railroad lines, so that the products will find ready markets.

THIS TOWN LIKES AMERICA

All Men in Spanish Village Plan to Emigrate to the United States.

Madrid.—Every man in the village of Huerta Pelayo, in the province of Guadalajaro, has decided to emigrate to the United States, according to Pedro Martinez Embil, the town clerk, who appeared at the American consulate with 25 companions to secure vises for passports.

He declared the mayor of the town would have decided to go to America had he not been aged and infirm. The families of the emigrants will follow as soon as the men are settled in America.

The number of emigrants from every village and township of the province of Salamanca is increasing daily, recent strikes in the mining districts having caused large parties of workers to decide to leave the country.

LESSON FOR NOVEMBER 14 THE POWER AND AUTHORITY OF JESUS.

LESSON TEXT-Matt. 8 and 9.
GOLDEN TEXT-And Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gos-pel of the kingdom, and healing every sickness, and every disease among the people.—Matt. 9:35.
ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Mark 1:29;

2:12; Luke 7:1-10.
PRIMARY TOPIC — Jesus Forgiving

JUNIOR TOPIC-Jesus Heals a Centu-

The Response of Jesus to Human Need.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC
—Christianity and Physical Needs. In chapters 8 and 9 are grouped a number of miracles which exhibit what the King can do over the chief foes of mankind-sickness, sin, satanic power, death, sorrow and storms. It is fitting that they should be grouped here, following the laws of the kingdom, for they show the King's power to administer the affairs of the kingdom, and produce within his subjects the graces of character set forth in these laws. It will make the lesson too long to attempt to consider all these miracles. It will also be unsatisfactory to confine ourselves to the particular section selected by the lesson committee, so we will select several of the most outstanding ones.

1. Jesus Heals a Leper (8:1-4).

1. This dreadful disease was the most loathsome and hopeless known. In the Jewish ritual it was regarded as a symbol of sin. It was incurable by man. Only the Divine Physician can cure sin.

2. The leper's faith. His cry was most pitiable, but his faith was strong. He fully believed that Jesus was able, but was uncertain as to his willingness to heal him.

3. Jesus' power. He put forth his hand and touched the leper, bidding the disease to depart, and instantly the man was clean.

II. Jesus Heals the Centurion's Servant (8:5-13).

1. The disease—paralysis. In parylsis the victim is helpless and disqualified for service.

2. The centurion's faith. He be-Neved that if Jesus would but speak the word his servant would be healed. 3. The wonderful power of the King. He did not need to go to see the centurion's slave and touch him. but only needed to speak the word and it was done.

111. Jesus Calms the Sea (8:23-27). 1. The King asleep in the stormtossed boat (v. 24). Since the King is the Almighty Creator, he had no reason to fear, and therefore, could well be resting in sleep.

2. The terrified disciples (v. 25). If they had but known him as really the Almighty King they would not have been terrified, for they would have known that no boat could go down with the Christ on board.

3. The King's rebuke (vv. 26, 27). (1) The disciples rebuked for their lack of faith. Instead of looking at the Lord, they were looking at the circumstances. (2) The sea is made calm. The elements of nature are subject unto him.

IV. Jesus Casts Out Demons (8:28-34). After stilling the tempest Jesus crossed to the other side of the sea into heathen territory.

1. Met by two men possessed by demons (v. 28). By referring to Mark 5:1-7 and Luke 8:27 we get a conception of the desperate condition of these men. So fierce were they that no one could safely pass that way.

2. What they knew about Christ (v. 29). They knew that he was the Son of God and that he had come to destroy the Devil and his works.

3. The limitation of the Devil's power (v. 31). Although the Devil is mighty; he cannot even enter a hog without God's permission.

4. Christ's power to deliver from the Devil (vv. 30-32). The demons quailed before him not daring to dispute his power, but begged permission to enter the swine. V. Jesus Healing a Woman With an Issue of Blood (9:20-22).

1. Her helpless condition (v. 20). She had been a great sufferer for twelve long years.

2. Her faith (v. 21). Her faith was so strong that she believed contact with the Master's garment would secure the needed help.

3. Her confession (v. 21; cf. Luke 8:47). Jesus had her make a public confession. It was for her good that he had her make this confession, for faith in Christ unconfessed will naturally weaken.

4. Christ's words of encouragement (v. 22). He told her that it was her faith, not her touch, that saved her.

Proper Amusements.

Thousands of people demand amusements. Thousands of dollars are spent in that behalf. But there is absence of plan, concert, and co-operation. The Devil steps in and takes the profit. The people want but little here below nor want that little long. Why may we not have more of the amusement which strengthens and enlightens? One rich man by his own unaided beneficence might provide healthful amusement for a whole city. Why does not benefaction turn in this direction?-Humphrey J. Desmond.

November 14 "Winning Our Friends for Christ" John 1:40-51

The first verse of our Scripture lesson tells of some one speaking. It was John, the herald of Jesus. What he said will be found in verse 36, "Behold the Lamb of God." John knew Jesus as such, so was able to point others to him, and, win them for Him. His message was simple, but sufficient. It established a point of contact with the hearers, and so impressed them as to impel them in the direction of that One who had been pointed out as the "Lamb of INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC God, that taketh away the sin of the

> What they discovered in Jesus is expressed in part by Andrew in verse 41, "We have found the Messias," or the Christ, the Anointed or the Christ, the Anointed the Prophet, Priest and King of Old Testament prophesies. Andrew had discovered this much in Jesus, and what he had found he was able to testify to. In verse 45 we have the testimony of Philip. It expresses the same general truth, "We have found him of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write.' Then in verse 49, we have the words of Nathaniel, "thou art the Son of > God; thou art the King of Israel."

> From the words and actions of the men in this group we may gather the three essential qualities for the winning of our friends to Christ.

First, a satisfactory religious experience. This is the primary prin-Not what others have said, but what we ourselves have found in the Son of God, determines the earnestness of our effort and effectiveness of our testimony. A vital Christian experience is the pre-eminent requisite for this kind of work. A vague religiousness which consists in the mere attendance at meetings and the observance of the externalities of religion, never produces soul-winners; it is more likely to produce self-righteousfolk, or even hypocrites. Not until we can say

"Thou, O Christ, art all I want,
More than all in Thee I find,"
shall we be able to say to others, "We have found Him." And, oh! what a wonderful find it is! As the stars pale away into insinifeance when the wonderful that it is the service of the sun rises, so do all lesser lights fade when He, the Christ, rises upon our spiritual horizon with "the light that never was on sea or land." Only through an experience such as these men had can we compass the scope and meaning of those four words, "We have found Him!"

The second essential quality in winning our friends to Christ is a knowledge of the Word of God. This group possessed it, at least in a measure. They recognized in Christ the fulfillment of their own prophecies, and they were able to verify their claims concerning Him from their own Scriptures; moreover, they used these Scriptures in winning their friends. A. C. Dixon once said that the open Bible in soul-winning work is indispensable. All experienced workers most cordially assent to this statement. A course in Bible study such as to fit men and women for this special work can be taken through the agency of the Correspondence Department of the Moody Bible Institute. A postal card written to this department will bring the necessary information. All young Christian people who aspire to win their friends to Christ need the equipment that comes from such a course The third essential quality in winning our friends to Christ is that of earnest desire. It is sometimes spoken of as a passion. It is that impelling force which enables us to persist in this kind of work notwithstanding all indifference and oppositon. This passion for souls is greatly needed in the times in which we live. Let us make the words of the poet our own

'O for a passionate passion for souls! O for a pity that yearns!
O for a love that loves unto death!

O for a fire that burns! O for a prayer power that prevails, That pours itself out for the lost, Victorious prayer in the Conqueror's name O, for a Pentecost!"

NOT SO TRAGIC, AFTER ALL

Fair Traveler's Emotion at Seeing Affecting Parting Was In Large Part Uncalled For.

The temperamental difference between a restrained and an emotional race occasionally brings about kindred effects through accident. A lady, waiting for a belated train, witnessed a most affecting parting between an aged father and his son, both Italians. The old man seemed in a frenzy of He moaned, raved, lifted his clenched hands toward heaven and shook them despairingly.

"Poor, poor souls!" she exclaimed, compassionately. "The young man going away to seek his fortune and the old man left behind. I suppose he fears they may never meet again. A common tragedy, but it grips one's very heart." "Cheer up!" briskly advised her companion, who understood Italian. "The young chap is only going to the pext town to visit his married sister and the venerable old person is worried because he loaned him his season ticket and wishes now he hadn't promised to do so. He says he knows the boy will lose it, but, anyway, if he does, he'll break every bone in his body when he gets home. That's all."

HALF OF THE RED CROSS DOLLAR STAYS AT HOME

Special attention is invited by David H. Brown, Director of the Fourth Red Cross Roll Call for the Potomac Division, American Red Cross, which division comprises Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia, that one-half of every membership dollar works at home, the other half being used for national purposes.

Fifty cents of every dollar received from annual membership dues is retained by the local Red Cross chapter for one or more of the following uses as the case may be: 1. To fight disease, and make the community a healthier, safer place for the individual and the family.

2. To teach emergency aid in case of accident.

3. To save the babies and guard the family health by teaching Home Hygiene. Care of the Sick and Dietetics. 4. To give immediate relief to victims of epidemics, explosions, floods, fires or similar calamities.

5. To aid in the care of crippled children, deserted mothers, financial stress, etc. The balance of all dollar membership dues is forwarded to the Red Cross National Headquarters at Washington. National funds are composed principally of voluntary contributions. They include amounts still on hand for uncompleted war projects. There is also included the amounts received from membership dues. These National funds are used partly for relief work in foreign lands and partly for relief work in the United States, including assistance to soldiers, sailors and marines in camps and hospitals; to families of service men; in sudden disasters; for the public health and nursing service and for the development of the Red Cross service program in the United States.

The management cost at National Headquarters and the fourteen Divisions is less than 4 per cent of the total expenditures. Thus when the Red Cross spends, it spends patriotically, conservatively and wisely. In joining the American Red Cross, each member is assured that he or she can do so without misgiving, armed with the knowledge of just where and how each membership dollar will be expended.

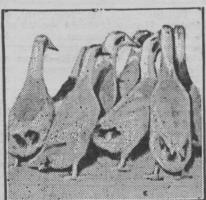

There will be a large number of individuals, who will wish to do more for the Red Cross than to give it a dollar for an annual membership. There are those who will wish to become contributing members, the fee for which is $5.00, and those who will wish to become sustaining members, the fee for which is $10.00. Eighty per cent of the money received from such memberships remains in the chapter. Every member is entitled to a re-

PRODUCTION OF DUCKS' EGGS

Demand at Good Prices Is Limited Except Around Easter-Indian Runner Is Favored.

The demand for ducks' eggs at a good price is limited and not nearly as general as the demand for hens' eggs. The quality of the Southern and Western duck eggs on the average market was poor until people began to keep Indian Runner ducks and to build up a trade in first-class eggs. A good demand for ducks' eggs exists about Easter time at prices usually several cents a dozen higher than for hens' eggs. Most buyers make no quotations for ducks' eggs except early in the spring. Since three ducks' eggs weigh about the same as four hens' eggs, ducks are not as profitable for the production of market eggs as fowls, unless a higher price is secured for the ducks' eggs.

A trade is gradually being established in some markets for fancy nearby ducks' eggs, which bring higher prices than hens' eggs, and the demand seems to be increasing. Pure white eggs are preferred and usually bring the highest price. These eggs should be marketed frequently, as they depreciate in quality more rapidly than hens' eggs, especially during hot weather. The market for eggs should be carefully Jinvestigated by those who intend to raise breeds of the egg-laying type of ducks, such as the Indian Runner, especially for the production of eggs, say poultry specialists of the United States department of agriculture.

—Advertisement A MOTOR TRIP WEST.

We left home on the morning of October 11, by way of Gettysburg intending to take the Lincoln Highway to Chambersburg, but owing to the road being under constructon had to detour by way of Ft. Loudon. We passed through a number of small towns, one of which was McConnells-burg, and the scenery was very beau-tiful; another was Ligonier; both abound in wonderful mountain scenery. After we passed through Ligonier we rounded a sharp curve, and when partly around the curve were held up for probably twenty minutes or more by a force of workmen who were trying to rescue a Ford car from the bottom of the mountain, having taken a plunge of about 100 feet. Although it was pretty well demolished, yet not as badly as you would suppose considering the plunge. As night was fast approaching, we stopped at the next town for the night, Mrs. Laura Reindollar, visited Mrs. which was Youngstown, Pa. We did John S. Bower, in Hanover, one after- not do any travelling after night, especially in that vicinity. As soon as darkness approached it would get so Norman L. Crouse, who has been foggy you could not see to travel, and travelling before eight or nine o'clock the next morning was also impossible; so we left Youngstown the next morning at about 8:30 for Greensburg, which was the next largest city in line. We were met at Turtle Creek by Harold Shaner and mother, and esported to have occurred locally, withcorted by them to their home in Tarentum, Pa., about 40 miles away, where we were delightfully entertained by the Shaner family until Thursday morning. In the meantime we took a motor trip to Freeport, several miles away, to see Mrs. Robinson; a trip to the smoky city of Pittsburg, had some canoe rides, and a motorboat ride on the river, attended the movies and on Thursday morning we Pittsburg enroute to Dayton, Ohio, by way of Wheeling, West Va.

We traveled as far as Hendrysburg Ohio, where we stopped for the night. Left Hendrysburg on Friday morning, passed through Cambridge, Zanesville Columbus, and as we passed Granville, Ohio, we noticed a College there. Thursday was "Armistice Day," but | After we passed the college two students hailed us; we stopped and they asked if we were going to Springfield We said we were going to Dayton, and they asked to be taken along, which we did. We next passed through Springfield, reaching Dayton at 5.15 central time, meaning 6:15 by our time making about a 200 mile run on Friday. As a reward for our kindness in giving the young men a lift, one of the men acted as a guide through the city, and conducted us to the home of James H. Reindollar and family (both well known to our home folks) where we were made feel very much at home. We remained there until Monday morning. On Saturday we went sight-seeing visited the first house built in Dayton which is a little old log cabin, and contains lots of curiosities; next visited the First English Lutheran Church; next the Y. W. C. A. building, and a number of other places of interest, and were delightfully entertained at dinner. Saturday evening, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Freihoffer.

Sunday morning we attended Sunday School and church at the First English Lutheran Church, and had a talk with our former pastor, Rev. D. Frank Garland, which we both enjoyed very much. The Dr. looks fine, and Rev. Wm. E. Wheeler writes that does not seem a day older than he did his new church in St. Louis is ready for dedication, all but the pews; and for dedication, all but the pews; and that a third Lutheran (United) is to Park close by the Soldier's Home, the morning, Oct. 18, for St. Joe Indiana, to visit my cousin, Mrs. Fred. Thornton, whom I had not seen since we were a couple of kids. We left Day-School inspector, visited the Taney- ton via West Milton, passed through Greenville, Van Wert, Paulding, Hicksville, and St. Joe, where we arrived at 5:30 central time just a few minutes ahead of a thunder gust, where another welcome awaited us. We spent one week there, in the meantime going some place every day, and seeing all we could. We made two trips to Ft. Wayne, the county-seat of De Kalb county, which is a city of about 90,000, and a very pretty city, and has some very pretty buildings. We next visited Auburn, the county seat of Allen county, and through the kindness of a friend of Mrs. Thornton, who happened to be Clerk of the Court, we were shown through the court house, which is a work of art and cost $400,000. We visited two apple orchards near St. Joe, one containing 60 and the other 80 acres. We saw them sorting the apples by machinery, packing them ready to ship. At one place we saw 3500 bushels of Grimes' Golden on one pile.

On Sunday, my cousin entertained us at the Swilly Hotel, at Hicksville, for dinner, in company with some friends of hers, who after dinner took us to their home and entertained us during the afternoon, like old friends. On Monday morning,we left for Dayton again, intending to make the run on Monday, but owing to car trouble, and inclement weather, we had to spend the night at Painters Creek, about 25 miles from Dayton. reached Dayton Tuesday morning. After dinner, Mrs. Reindollar took us to the National Cash Register plant, and were shown through the plant from 1:30 until 3:00, then we were shown the growth of the plant from beginning until the present, on canvas, until 4 o'clock. The plant occupies 4 squares, and employs 6000 people; they consume 120 tons of coal a day, have their own dining room, which seats 1200; serve their own lunch to employees, for 40c, and just treat them like one large family. Every one who has the opportunity to visit the plant should do so, and see what a wonderful thing the N. C.

R. Factory is. Wednesday, we visited several of the large stores, one of which was Rike-Kumler Co., where Miss Margie Baumgardner is clerk in the glove de-partment, and which is one of the largest stores in the city; we also visited the Museum. Mrs. Reindollar entertained Henry Freihoffer, wife and son, and Miss Margie, at dinner, 5-2t in our honor. Tuesday morning we started home, yia Columbus and Zanesville, spending the night at New Friday morning, we left Concord. New Concord, via Cambridge, to Wheeling, W. Va., to Washington and Uniontown, Pa., where we spent the night, leaving Uniontown, Pa., Saturday morning, via Cumberland, Hagerstown, and Frederick, arriving home at 6 P. M., Saturday. We followed the old National Trail home, and had fine roads all the way some concrete, some paved, and the worst roads we had on our travels was from Frederick home. From Gettysburg to Pittsburg there is very little farming done; no wheat sown at all, and only small patches of corn, about like we plant in sweet corn for table use. In Virginia and West Virginia the land is used for grazing In the vicinity of Tarenpurposes. tum and Pittsburg, Pa., the land contains coal, and abounds in oil and natural gas wells; and the people work in steel mills. Judging from the piles of coal lying at the mines, in Pennsylvania and Virginia, and the amount being hauled away, coal should not be scarce this winter.

In Ohio, their principal crops are tobacco, corn, and sugar beets.

In the vicinity of Paulding, O., we passed carts on the road loaded with something like parsnips, only larger, and the people were ploughing them out of large fields, and men and women were cutting the tops off with cycles. We stopped and asked what they were. I will never forget the man's smile. He scratched his head, then slowly said: "Gee, but you must be a good ways from home, if you never saw a sugar beet." Then he never saw a sugar beet." looked at our license, and said: "No wonder you don't know, if you are from Maryland." They manufacture the beet sugar at Paulding.

In most parts of Ohio and Indiana the land is as level as the floor; you can see for miles ahead; in some places, near the houses they have groves planted with the trees real close together to break the wind in winter. In Indiana, last year, the wheat crop was a failure, owing to the fly and hard freezing, but the corn crop is a bumper. Although we had some trials with our "flivver," the pleasure more than repaid that, and our trip home from Uniontown to Hagerstown, with the mountains covered with about 2 inches of snow, was great, and we think our home people should all take a western trip and take a few lessons in hospitality.

Jean's Ailment.

Jean, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Santisteban, of Columbus, was playing in a room where her mother was busy and grew very inquisitive. So troublesome did her questions become that finally her mother said:

"Run away and play, Jean. I'm busy as can be, and sick in the bar-

Jean disappeared and was not seen for a few minutes. Then she entered the room again, looking very woebegone and holding her head in both

"Why, what is the matter, Jean," asked Mrs. Santisteban.
"I'm sick," replied the tot.

"Where do you feel sick?" asked the mother in alarm. "Why, I guess I'm sick in the baranswered Jean.—Indianapolis
