ATTEMPTED ROBBERY OF SAVINGS BANK

Walls of Vault too Strong for Burglarious Attempt.

Some time between midnight Monday night and Tuesday morning, cracksmen made a strong effort to rob the Taneytown Savings Bank. The premises were approached from the rear of the lot, and first the iron bars of a rear window were attacked for entrance, a pipe cutter being used to clip the stout bars, but this was given up as too hard a jcb, the cutter being left on the ground. Entry into the building was made through a grated window into the furnace cellar, from the very narrow passage between the Bank and the drug store.

The wall of the vault was then attacked on the side to the right of the front, and a large amount of plaster and brick removed by a pick and crowbar, until the double frame work of railroad rails was reached, when the job was given up. The tools were left beside the vault.

For some reason the telephone wires were cut, possibly with the idea that they might be alarm wires. No attempt was made on the vault doors. Evidently, the cracksmen were prepared to blow an ordinary vault wall, but the construction of this vault is such that a great deal of time and the use of powerful explosives would be required to crack it, with-out counting the additional time and explosives that would be required to get the cash in the inner safe. So far as has been made public, no one heard the cracksmen, or saw them, though both the building and the street was brilliantly lighted all night. The probability is that the attempt was made after 1:00 o'clock, and that the get-away was made in

A yellow and red striped horse blanket with two holes in it and a black and dark green lap robe, were left with the tools, and were evidently stolen. The pick and crowbar have been identified as belonging to the N. C. R., but no claim has yet been made for the pipe wrench or blankets.

State's Attorney Brown, of Westminster, detectives Hammerslea and Freeman, of Baltimore, and a York detective, looked over the job, on Tuesday.

The following account, taken from the Baltimore Sun, shows up especially well that the bank is well built and secure, and as safe as any building can well be for depositing valuables. In addition, the bank is fully insured against loss by burglary. The "Thirty-odd years ago at Taneytown, in Carroll county, lived me-chanics who knew how to build a country bank that would withstand the attack of a band of twentiethcentury yeggmen. The builders of the Taneytown Savings Bank un-questionably had in mind that some time bank robbers would attack the big vault with dynamite or some explosive.

They built well. A band of yeggmen visited the bank in the early hours of Monday morning. They broke into the building, cut through steel gratings and tore a square yard of brick from the outer wall of the vault. That was why Police Commissioner Gaither sent Headquarters Detective H. M. Hammerslea and R. E. Freeman to the bank Tuesday night to make an investigation. Long years in the detective service indicated to the headquarters men that the case was an usual one if the yeggs failed at their objective.

But the country folk and the officials of the savings institution showed the detectives the like of which they had never before seen. Through the square yard of demolished brick wall the detectives beheld a veritable lattice work of iron railroad rails and beyond the cemented embedded rails was another 12-inch Near by, lying on the floor of the bank, was the double electric Wire, percussion cap and other fittings used by yeggmen of the vaultblowing school. The wire was connected up and ready for insertion.

"I have never seen anything like that vault," said Detective Hammer-"The rails were set vertical and horizontal, the cross sections between the rails being about four inches. Even if a hole had been blown it would have been small and lagged because of the construction. On the other side of the concreteimbedded cage of rails was another brick wall. We were informed that the entire vault was constructed in this manner and that it was the idea of village mechanics and organizers of the bank."

The attack on the bank did not spread beyond Tanevtown until yestorday, but every citizen of the town Who had money or securities at the bank were happier when they learned that the wisdom of the builders of the vault had saved their money and

"Though the home-curing of pork is an old practice, it now seems to be an almost forgotten art on many farms. It nearly went out of style, but as many styles return to popularity so is this one coming back. Many hogs, though they meet the inevitable fate, are saved a long and tiresome journey to the packing house, and instead are the guests of honor at their homes on butchering day. To revive the custom, the United States Department of Agriculture has published Farmers' Bulletin 1186, "Pork on the Farm—Killing, Curing, and Canning," which tells how to butcher a hog properly, and contains the best of the old and some of the new and improved methods. some of the new and improved methods and formulas for curing and canning the meat. Reformed Consistories Meet.

The Consistories of the Reformed churches in Carroll County met in regular session, in Trinity Reformed Church, Manchester, on Wednesday afternoon and evening, Nov. 30, 1921. Dr. Luther Kemp, president of the conference, presided at the afternoon session, at which time topics were discussed regarding raising of benevolent monies; completion of the Forward Movement, etc.

At the evening session, Rev. Dr. Paul Leinbach, Editor of the Reformed Church Messenger, delivered a very timely and inspiring address. Rov. Ness of Baust Church, was the soloist of the evening. Baust Reformed Church extended an invitation to College Park, Md., Nov. 28.-Business men, Congressmen and farm leaders will appear as speakers on the program of the annual meeting of the Maryland Agricultural Society to be held in Baltimore, Jan. 10 to 12, it was announced today by Dr. Thomas B. Symons, Secretary.

Details for the meeting are rapidly being completed by D. G. Harry, president, and Dr. Symons, and while word from a number of prominent speakers is awaited before the program is definitely announced, sufficient replies have been received to assure a program of unusual diversity and interest, it is said.

It will be the first meeting of the Society to be held in Baltimore since The Maryland Tobacco Growers' Association, one of the affiliated organizations to meet at the same time, will bring its members to Baltimore for the first time and is expected to draw a large representation from Southern Maryland. It has been announced that all affiliated organizations, including the State Horticultural Society, the Dairymen's Association, the Vegetable Growers, the Beekeepers' Association, the Sheep Growers Crop Improvement Association and the Maryland To-bacco Growers, will hold their separate meetings in the morning, and that the afternoons will be devoted to joint sessions of all groups.

The newly formed Agricultural Corporation of Maryland and other phases of co-operation, together with legislation and marketing, will form some of the important topics for discussion during the conference.

Gas Tax and the Schools.

The proposed State tax on gasoline, if adopted, may be used in large measure to supply school funds if a suggestion made Wednesday at Annapolis to Governor Ritchie by A. Cook, State Superintendent of Education, is acted upon.

The Department of Education's budget estimate for the fiscal year 1923 is some $4,000,000, an increase of about $1,250,000 over the allowance for the current fiscal year. The dipartment's program having been outlined the problem is now how to get the money.

The gasoline tax just mentioned which Mr. Cook thought might be invoked in the present hour of need, was suggested some days ago to the Governor by John N. Mackall, chairman of the State Roads Commission. Mr. Mackali's idea was that the tax, as a tentative measure, be a cent a gallon and that the proceeds for the first year, which he estimated at above $1,000,000, be devoted to making up a deficit of long standing in the Roads Commission and to constructing State roads through incorporated towns.

The Governor expressed the view that there would be some difficulty in diverting the gasoline tax from roads to schools; but, for that matter, the work-day holiday, as well as the there promises to be difficulty in day for many of the festivities inci- whatever measures are employed in financing the Department of Education on its proposed scale.

PUBLIC EDUCATION WEEK. The President Urges all to help Reduce Illiteracy.

Washington, Nov. 29.—President Harding issued a proclamation today setting apart the week of December 4 to 10, as American education week. during which citizens of the United States are urged to assist general efforts to reduce illiteracy and give thought to remedying defects in the nation's educational system.

The proclamation follows: "Whereas public education is the basis of citizenship and is of primary importance to the welfare of the nation, and

"Whereas more than 5,000,000 boys and girls in America are not availing themselves of our free school advantages and are lacking in that youthful schooling which is so essential to the making of an intelligent citizenship, and

"Whereas the experience of the war reveals vast elements of population that are illiterate, physically unfit, or unfamiliar with American ideals and traditions, and our future strength and security are much dependent on their education and commitment to American ideals:

"Therefore, I, Warren G. Harding, President of the United States, do urge the Governors of the various States and Territories to set apart December 4 to 10, inclusive, 1921, as American education week, during which citizens in every State are urged to special and thoughtful attention to the needs and the aims of the public schools. It is particularly recommended that efforts be addressed to practical expression of community interest in public education. supplied.
"The subject of public education has always been very close to the American heart, and to the fact that it has been made a chief responsibility of local governmental units we largely owe the wide diffusion of educational facilities. It is believed that a widespread and earnest effort at observance of education week would do much to emphasize this feeling of immediate responsibility. Therefore, it is suggested that the pulpit, press, schools and public gatherings be enlisted in behalf of this special effort."

JAPAN DISPOSED TO ARGUE CASE.

Wants to Maintain a Greater Naval Strength.

The only snag in the program of the disarmament convention, seems to be Japan. As was to be expected, Eastern diplomacy does not know how to fall in line with an argument without trying to get something more out of it than first laid on the table, and true to old methods, Japan is holding out for special favors, by asking for a stronger Navy in pro-portion than other countries.

The United States is not crowding Japan for a decision, but the indications are that Mr. Hughes will stand firm for the original program, and that eventually Japan will graciously concur, though plans may be arrived at that will salve the feelings of the protestants.

The Japs especially want to save the Mutsu, a Japanese vessel practically complete, but not entirely so. It is believed that if this vessel is admitted, the Japanese parleying will largely disappear. The Mutsu is a very powerful modern war vessel in every way. It may eventuate that ways and means can be found for allowing the Japanese to keep the Mutsu. If that happens, they certainly will be called upon to scrap other tonnage fully equivalent to the Mutsu's displacement of 33,800 tons. In no circumstances, with the American delega-tion in its present state of mind, could any compromise with Japan be sanctioned which infringed the "Hughes principle" of the 5-5-3 ratio. The United States insists on the principle. It might be ready to acquiesence in re-arrangements of detail.

China is apparently getting a great deal; the probability now being that England, Japan and the United States will get out of China and permit that nation to try to govern and take care of herself, and also that all German rights there have disappeared. There are question of property rights, however, to be settled, and these present difficulties.

"Made in America."

During the period of the war, people when buying turned their pref-erence to merchandise marked "Made in America." The attitude of the public at that time was one of the greatest incentives to the upbuilding and advancement of American industry and labor that a nation could adopt. What has happened to that slogan today? The buying public now finds itself facing counters and shelves filled with merchandies have shelves filled with merchandise bearing the stamp—"made in Germany," "Made in Japan," or some other foreign country. the foreign stamp, is cheapness in head, inflicting a bad wound. Doctor price. Quality appears to be only a minor consideration. The war is only a memory to most of us now, while to many it will continue to be an ever-present thought. The majority, however, have lost to a great extent that marked feeling of patriotism which was so noticeable during the war. The patriotic fervor is there still, but it has not the surroundings now to keep it uppermost in our surety.—Sykesville Herald.

More consideration of the slogan, "Made in America" is what is needcd now in this country. We have been benefactors to the world for a long time, so much so that European and other countries owe us collectively some $10,000,000.000, a debt on which we are not even receiving the payment of interest. Our debtors plead inability to pay. In spite of this plea, nearly all of the European countries indebted to America are able to support standing armies greatly outnumbering any we are able to maintain here. No one has et undertaken the task of explaining this inconsistency.

It is about time we had an "America First" campaign-one that would impress upon the buying public the fact that their power to buy is dependent upon their ability to secure decent employment, and that every time they purchase a foreign competitive product, they are reducing the demand for its American equivalent, and thereby are lowering the demand for labor in the manufacturing of that product here in America.-New York American Cutler.

Education permeated with religion is the thing in which perhaps he is most deeply interested. He told the priests directly that a new school came before a new church, in his es-timation and "if we are to make the children worthy of their citizenship in the church of God and in this republic, then we must see to it that close to the church stands a Catholic school."

The procession, with several bishops, many monsignori, secular priests and members of the religious orders, preceded the service, which was begun with the reading of the papal bull creating Bishop Curley Archbishop of Baltimore, and the Apostolic letter to the people of the archdiocese. Then came the pontificial high mass, with a corn will be a constant. with every available space in sancutary, as well as in front of the altar rail, crowded to capacity. Look Out for Frauds!

Unknown solicitors for subscriptions to periodicals, or other objects, and all unknown solicitors with stories of misfortune, asking for cash contributions, should be regarded with great care, and if possible, their genuineness verified. There are, at this time, more than the usual number of frauds being practiced; and while we would not like to discourage any worthy charity, those seeking it should always be required to furnish easily recognized good credentials. Even just small dona-tions "to get rid" of applicants, is a very unsatisfactory policy.

Selfrrespect is Winning.

The enforcement of law is gradually wearing down violations of the Volstead act. The way of the law, and the way of the transgressor, can not for long run in parallel lines; sooner or later, the law must establish itself and win out, if efforts are honestly and courageously made to establish it. There will always be, of course a percentage of criminally inclined who more or less openly follow law-breaking as a profession, but these are not the ones who have so far been the greatest offenders in

These have been the ones who have been trying to make violations of the Volstead act respectable and justifiable, and who have given encouragement to the professional criminal classes. Newspapers, habitual drinkers in high social position, men in direct or indirect business connection with the liquor trade, and certain debaters over the rights of individuals, have all loaned their influence against the Volstead act, and

It is beginning to be seen that public sentiment—the big end of it is sober. It is opposed to that long list of intemperances that grow out of the use of liquors as a beverage. In other words, the preponderance of respectability and sobriety is against booze, and this sentiment can not be changed by either resistance of the respectable wets, nor by the acts of the violators of law.

A Woman's Party.

A woman's political party would be ways toward establishing the hindsight that a good many already feel, that "votes for women" was a mistake. There would be no more reason for a woman's party than for an old man's party, or a young man's party or for a negro's party, or for any other single class of voters. All are alike citizens of the United States, and have no real right to separate themselves into political groups because of sex, age, or color,

If woman does not feel comfortable as a part of the voting mass, she should have left it be known before asking for "equal rights." CLIMATIC EFFECT ON WOOD

Studies Made in Forest Service Laboratory Have Been of Great Value in Aeronautics.

In the great laboratory at Madison, Wis., maintained by the United States forest service for woodworking experiments a special study has recently men made of the effects of various climatic conditions upon airplane propellers.

In one room, by regulation of warmth and moisture, the climatic conditions of southern Texas or arid Egypt were reproduced. It was found that propellers subjected to these conditions had a fendency to dry out flatten and become unbalanced.

In another room the climate of the Amazon valley was imitated. This caused propellers to warp badly and to change their shape so much as to become totally unfit for use.

It was found that a coat of aluminum leaf did best service as a water proof covering for propellers, which when thus protected, may be exposed to a high humidity for a long time without warping. Leaf aluminum is so thin that from 10,000 to 12,000 layers of it are required to make an inch in thickness. One pound will cover 1.170 propellers, at a cost of 66 cents. -Philadelphia Ledger.

About 300 years ago two skeletons were unearthed near Tournai, France. They have just been identified as Mr. and Mrs. Childeric. The name may or may not be familiar. Mr. Childeric was king of the Franks, the ancient French, in the year 451, when the Franks and their allies stopped Attila the Hun and his invading Chinese armies at the Marne, the same river where the French stopped William the Hun in the great war. Childeric's bats tle determined that Europe was to have a white instead of a Mongolian civilization. Three hundred thousand dead were left on the field. PHASES OF POULTRY RAISING Poultryman Can Save Himself Time and Money by Applying to Government for Information.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Poultry raisers, whether engaging in the business on a large scale or owning only a small flock, will find it to their interest to get in touch with the United States Department of Agriculture when in doubt about the best methods to follow that relating to diseases by the pathological division of the bureau of animal industry.

Many bulletins are available dealing with various phases of poultry raising. any of which may be had free upon application to the division of publications, United States Department of Agriculture. In addition to the regular bulletins there are a number propared especially for boys' and girls clubs and for persons beginning the poultry business without much knowledge of its requirements. A list of these may be had upon application to the same division.

At the department's experiment farm at Beltsville, Md., various rations are being fed to hens to study their effect. For example, in one experiment the hen balances her own ration; in another fish meal is included; in another no wheat or wheat products are used; while cotton-seed meal replaces a part of the beef scrap in another. Comparisons are also made of the effect of the same rations on hens of the egg breeds as compared with those of the general-purpose breeds. Only simple rations of widely available feeds are used.

Hens in considerable numbers are eing tran-nested and matings made to determine the possibilities of differ-ent methods of breeding in increasing or fixing egg production. Matings to fix certain types or characters desired in the flocks also are made. No birds are retained in the flock which have a disqualification that would bar them under the rules of the American Standard of Perfection. The results being obtained indicate that it is possible to combine utility and standard breeding to a practical degree. Any of this information is available for the persons requesting it, and the department is eager to have it used widely.

Boys' and girls' poultry clubs have a wide influence in interesting the children in raising chickens, and in teaching them and their parents the best methods of handling poultry for the production of eggs and meat.

The department is giving special attention to improving the quality of market eggs with a view to overcoming losses estimated at many millions of dollars annually. These studies cover the production of eggs on the farm, and their handling from the farm to the country store. The production of infertile eggs, which are far superior in keeping qualities to fertile eggs, is being advocated.

CURE COLD IN HEALTHY FOWL

Application of Three or Four Drops of Coal Oil in Nostrils of Bird Is Effective.

A cold can be cured in a healthy fowl by an application of three or four drops of kerosene in the fowl's nostrils. Never get it in the eyes. Put enough permanganate of potash in the drinking water to color a bright Dink. This is good for throat infections of all kinds and will usually prevent the spread of the trouble.

GOOD ROOSTS FOR CHICKENS

Points to Be Considered Are Ease of Cleaning and to Prevent Lurking Places for Mites.

Good roosts are to the chickens What a good bed is to humans. About half the fowl's time is spent on the roosts. The points to be considered in putting in the roosts are ease of cleaning, spacing from the back wall and from the floor and smoothness of imber to prevent lurking places for Mash of Bran, Middlings, Meat Scrap and Commeal is Best, Experts Have Proven.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) Valuable results of interest to poultrymen have been obtained by the United States Department of Agriculture in the experimental tests at the government poultry farm, Beltsville, Md., where different rations have been fed to various groups of laying hens for a period of eight years. At this Visitors in Washington wishing to time, more than 1,000 hens and pullets are used in feeding trials of this kind. The pens range in size from 30 to 50 hens, all the fowls being trap-nested during the period under test. During the last three years, the mash which the animal husbandry division and has given the most uniform and best production has consisted of a mixture of 4 per cent bran, 4 per cent middlings, 26 per cent meat scrap, and 66 per cent cornmeal. This mash was the result of experiments where the hens were allowed to select their own mash ingredients. When given free choice of these various ingredients, the fowls consumed the various ingredients in the above proportions. Several pens, both of Leghorns and Rhode Island Reds, of 30 hens each have averaged from 140 to 155 eggs apiece where this mash has been fed. The feeding mixture seems to be especially adapted for Legherns, although it has also given good results with the Reds. The Wyandottes and Plymouth Rocks are inclined to accumulate too much fat when fed this mash, and one somewhat lower in meat scrap content gives better results when fed to these two breeds.

The Wyandottes and Plymouth Rocks maintained on the Beltsville farm are large, standard-size fowls, and the tendency to take on fat on this mash probably did not occur in the case of smaller types of Plymouth Rocks, such as commonly are found on commercial poultry farms. Experiments conducted during the current year in which this mash was modified by the addition of 15 per cent ground oats and the reduction of the meat scrap by 3 per cent and the commeal by 12 per cent have not shown any ndynninge. The evidences are that ground cats added to the ration produces no beneficial results. It pays to vary the proportion of grains in the scratch mixture, from an economical standpoint, according to the market price of these farm crops. present, a scratch mixture of three parts cracked corn, two parts oats, and one part wheat, by weight, is used with this mash.

In previous years fish meal has not proved a more profitable and practical source of protein in the mash than meat scrap, but during the present year the production has been very good where the fish refuse has been used, and as the price of this materiat has decreased, larger net incomes result from its use. Sixty per cent pretein fish scrap now can be obtained for from $1 to $2 per hundred pounds cheaper than 55 per cent protein meat scrap. Innumerable varieties of fish scrap have been fed and no harmful effects have resulted from feeding even fish scrap of varied compositions. some being unusually rich in oil con-Tests in which only 15 per cent of meat scrap was fed in the mash have not resulted in as high production with pullets as where 20 or 25 per cent of meat scrap was used, but with yearling hens the 16 per cent meat scrap has given practically as good production as the higher. With the heavier breeds, it is advisable to decrease the amount of meat scrap during the second year, as such feeding tends to keep the fowls in better breeding condition.

Rats are shrewd pests. You may have them though you don't see them. Clean up their breeding places as much as possible and place the setting hens in protected nests. The advantages of good standardbred stock are being so rapidly recognized that there is a keen demand in every community for breeding stock and hatching eggs from good stock.

The best way to avoid trouble in the flock of fowls in the winter is by having open-front houses. There will be less dampness, fowls will be healther and there is less risk of frozen

LESSON FOR DECEMBER 4

PAUL IN MELITA AND ROME.

LESSON TEXT-Acts 28:1-31 GOLDEN TEXT-I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are at Rome also. For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth.— Rom. 1:15, 16. REFERENCE MATERIAL—Mark 16:18;

PRIMARY TOPIC—The End of Paul's

JUNIOR TOPIC-The End of a Long Journey. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Paul Living in Rome.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC

I. The Shipwrecked Crew on Melita

(vv. 1-10). Through the storm they lost their bearings, and when they were safe on land they learned that the island was called Melita.

1. The hospitable reception of the natives (v. 2). They built a fire and made them as comfortable as possible from the cold and the rain.

2. Paul gathering sticks for a fire (v. 3). This is a fine picture of the world's greatest preacher and missionary not above picking up sticks for a fire. The ability and disposition to serve naturally in whatever way is the evidence of capacity for great commissions.

3. Paul bitten by a venomous serpent (v. 3). With the sticks that Paul gathered there was a serpent. Perhaps it had already curled itself up for its winter sleep, but when the warmth of the fire aroused it it darted at Paul and fixed its fangs upon his hand. The natives expected to see him fall down dead, yet he shook it off, nothing harmed. At first the natives concluded that he was an escaped murderer and that this was retributive justice being meted out to him. When they saw that he was unharmed they concluded that he was a god.

4. Paul heals Publius' father (vv. 7-10). These people are now getting some return for their kindness. When this man of note was healed others came also and were healed. To this they responded in appreciation by loading them down with necessary sup-

II. Paul Arrives at Rome (vv. 11-16). When Paul landed at Rome Christ's charge to the disciples was fulfilled. After three months' stay at Melita, Paul departs for Rome in the ship Alexandria, whose sign was Castor and Pollux. At Syracuse they were delayed three days, perhaps for favorable winds. At Puteoli he found brethren, at whose request he tarried seven days. At Appili-Forum and at the Three Taverns brethren from Rome met him. From Puteoli the news went before Paul's coming, and so interested were the brethren that they came more than forty miles to meet him. This greatly encouraged him, for which he gave God thanks. No one, perhaps, ever enjoyed more close fellowship with God, and yet no man ever enjoyed more and derived more benefit from human fellowship than he. His readiness to preach the gospel at Rome, which he had expressed in the Epistle to the Romans, written from Corinth about three years before, was now realized. He was treated with great leniency at Rome, for he was allowed to hire a house there and live alone except that the soldier that remained his guard was constantly with him. Being chained to a soldier was rather irksome, but yet it gave him a chance to preach to the soldiers which he could not have had any other way. He rejoiced in whatever circumstances, Just so the gospel was preached.

III. Paul's Ministry in Rome (vv.

1. His conference with the leading Jews (vv. 17-22). He did not, as usual, wait for the Sabbath day to speak to the Jews. He only allowed one day for rest. His object was to have a fair understanding with them. When they came he endeavored to conciliate them. He told them that, though he came as a prisoner, he was not a criminal. Though his own countrymen had so sought his life, he did not come with an accusation against them. The result of this interview was that the Jews cautiously took neutral ground, but expressed a desire to hear what Paul could say in defense of a sect which was everywhere spoken against. The fact that this sect was spoken against is no evidence that it was wrong. Many times a thing may be wrong in men's minds, because their judgments are biased. If a thing is right in the sight of God it matters not what men think about it.

2. Paul expounding the kingdom of God and persuading concerning Jesus (vv. 23-31). He pointed out a real kingdom-the Messianic Kingdom with Jesus as the King.

Consecration.

Taking Desperate Chances.

It is true that many contract severe colds and recover from them without taking any precaution or treatment and a knowledge of this fact leads others to take their chances instead of giving their colds the needed attention. It should be borne in mind that every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality, makes the system less able to withstand each succeeding attack and paves the way for the more serious diseases. Can you afford to take such desperate chances when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of bad colds may be had for a trifle? -Advertisement

RECRUITING FOR CIVIL WAR

Woodcuts of the Period Show How It Was Done in the Dark Days of 1863.

An old woodcut in a Madison aveaue picture-store window shows how recruiting was done in City Hall park in Civil war days-1863, to be exact. Over a shanty in the park is a large painted sign with red headlines, which reads, according to the New York Her-

"Thirty Thousand Volunteers Wanted: County bonus, cash down, $300; state bounty, $75; United States bounty, for new recruits, $302. Total to new recruits, $677; United States bounty to veteran soldiers, $100; total to veteran soldiers, $777."

Less this handy sum fail to attract the desired number of patriots, a placard at the left announces that $15 "hand money" will be paid "to any party who brings a recruit," and among the throng of citizens and soldiers about the door one sees at least two recruits, one of them apparently in the last stage of fatigue or intoxication, being haled to the recruiting booth by their fellows.

Peculiar Conditions in Cavern on Tahiti Have Never Been Satisfactorily Explained.

About 27 kilometers from Papeete, Tahiti, is a large opening in the side of a mountain called the Cave of Maraa. It is the reputed burial place of a powerful wizard of old, the spell of whose enchantments still broods over the tavern. The particular manifestation which interests passersby is the impossibility of striking the opposite wall of the cave with a stone, although to the eye the feat seems the easiest of undertakings. Most newcomers laugh at the legend end start out with an easy throw, only to see the missile drop in the water apparently but a few feet away.

Then they warm to the work and exert all the force that is in them, and, at last making slings, strive with all their might to overcome the power of the old warlock; but to no avail. The stones drop ignominiously in the water as if some unseen hand had caught them in midair and cast them down in the center of the cavern. The reason has never been explained satisfactorily.—Chicago Journal.

"A man should strive to bear with the faults of his neighbors," said Mr. Glipping.

"Perhaps so," said Mr. Gadspur, "but when those faults take the form of ever-playing phonographs, one finger exercises on the piano, family, fights, dogs, children and chickens, I don't suppose it is any great sin to heave a sigh of relief when such neighbors move away?"

"No-just so your sigh isn't loud enough to be heard around the block."

The Awakening of John Wade

By WILL T. AMES.

ommunimumining

There are women who, having hung up the image of a man in their hearts, never again take it down. A whole literature has been built upon this theory, a thousand songs have extelled its truth. What the world knows less well, or pretends not to know, is that fidelity to a love secretly enshrined is not the attribute of a single sex. John Wade, in 12 years' time, had never been without the consciousness of Jessica Brandt-and if ever there was an average man John Wade was he.

John was edging on toward forty. He had played out the years of his youth and early manhood as one at whist lays down the cards of a hand which, as the saying is, plays itself. He had worked and been moderately rewarded. He had loafed, wholesomely, and was sound in health. He had made friends-and some had gone and some had stayed. He had always mingled-and mingled now-with his fellow creatures; and he had his roseate moods and his gray ones, his full, interesting days and his less satisfying ones, like everybody. Moreover, he had felt his pulses quicken in the presence of more than one lovely girl or brilliant woman. And he had never seen Jessica Brandt in all those dozen years. But she abode with him, and all the action in his film of life was superposed upon the dim radiance of her presence. For John to have permitted himself to love would have been, he knew, a spiritual sin against the woman in the case, whoever she might be. He had notions about things, had John. The average man is too, and living in a world as different from his own as well might be. Sometimes John laughed at himself. And then, once or twice, he had looked across the table a little wonderingly at Ann. And after he had looked at Ann for a moment he would find himself hurrying to finish his meal and would excuse himself to Aunt Elsie and her stepdaughter and go away quickly. Afterward he would wonder why he did that.

eyes. "It's the case of self-determination with Ann, I'm sure. Writing women are often that way, you know."

"Well, she is human and dear, and It isn't natural!" protested Mrs. Bas-

Seven years ago, at the end of a post-graduate course, Ann Perdue had yielded to her stepmother's insistence that she come home to live. That was the first time she and John had really met, for he had only entered his aunt's household at his mother's death. They were excellent friends from the start. and remained so. Perhaps a year later it was that Ann said to Mrs. Perdue: "Mother, I can't make John fit in with any bachelor type. He isn't selfish, he isn't stingy, he isn't self-deprecatory, he isn't wedded to any fad, he isn't abnormally diffident-and bachelors are usually one or the other. It's interesting." "Going to make copy of him?" laughed Mrs. Perdue. "I wouldn'treally. It wouldn't sell. It's just that he was such a susceptible boy that he expended himself in his salad days and hasn't any affections left to go on. I never saw any one so terrifically in | Farmer Corntossel, "He draws wages, love as he was with Jessica Brandt, but ain't my opinion that he earns to keep the money in the family. I fancy that finished him."

"Jessica Brandt? Of Haredale-on-Hudson?"

"Yes. She spent one summer here with relatives when John was twentysix. They had a tremendous affairbut it ended completely when she went

"She was in college with me," said Ann reflectively, adding after a little, "She was very beautiful-I think the most beautiful girl I ever saw?"

For a while after that Ann studied John with the clever analytical faculty that was beginning to get her work noticed. When she made up her mind about him she ceased to study himor to think about him unduly. She had her work and the power of selfdiscipline. But they were famous John's work had to do with automobiles and took him to the big motor show in New York. That was where ways, It makes her more independ Jessica Brandt lived-in a great house just off Fifth avenue, in the Seventies. John had been in New York scores of times and had always been looking about, but he had never seen her. He had never hoped to more than see her, because it had been a final farewell when the girl, in passionate tears, told him there was no way out of the marriage that her ambitious, desperately financiering mother had arranged with the son of a millionaire. But just to see her-with those wonderfully eloquent violet eyes like none others anywhere! Even today, as he explained the peculiar virtues of the Aircutter Six, he was looking about.

And then he was looking squarely into the violet eyes. For the merest fraction of a second. Because the violet eyes, looking as squarely into his, indicated in that brief space recognition, haughty resentment of his temerity, cold, intolerant snobbery; then passed him by. "Come," she said to the man at her side. She was gone. And all the fantastic, beautiful structure of John's idealism came crashing to the ground in a whirlwind of revelation. "Just one of thousands!" he breathed. "Vain and arrogant and hard as flint. It's all there-in her eyes!'

And so it was that John Wade came home his own man for the first time in 12 years. And because a golden folly had turned to ice in his heart, and because today was no longer blurred by the shadowy outlines of a long ago, he welcomed as never before | the warm, sound friendship of Ann Perdue, and saw as never before the sterling toveliness of her.

It was a matter of weeks. Then he said to her: "Ann, you are clever and wise. Tell me, is the heart of a man worth having, to a woman, after its best years have been wasted on a

She looked up at him, frankly, bravely. "Is the phantom laid?" she asked

"Then let me answer your question. John. Yes. And not in spite of the phantom but because of it. Don't you suppose I know, John? And don't you suppose the dear, blind faithfulness of your love was the very thing that has nade you seem all these years just the honest, truest being in all the world—as you are? You see, John, 1 knew her; and I knew how wondrously pity of it! But I wouldn't have de chining. "Because I know the heart that can love like that, John, can make heaven on earth."

"Thank God, then," said John fervently, "for the night that has made the dawn so beautiful!"

The wise home manager es the children to help with the marketing is giving them training which will be valuable all through life and is lightening her own steps with each new lesson in marketing.

Some of the things to be gained for the child are the study of reliable brands, the value of a dollar, economy and thrift, business methods and a sympathy and interest in the things mother is doing. The first step in good marketing will be a study of brands, as the greater number of foods are now purchased in package or under brand name.

Knowledge of food brands is help ful to the Lusy housewife in many ent in marketing. Her requests for a certain proved brand are met with respect by her grocer, whether given personally or by the child. She is protected against the "just as good" products of unfamiliar names. And her family is saved disappointing food experiments.

Now that ready-to-serve foods play such an important part in the prep aration of everyday meals, the home woman's eyes are opened to the im portance of food labels. When she finds a nationally known brand of uniform high quality she buys every food she can under that one brand, knowing that substitutes are never as satisfactory.

How Great Sentiment Originated.

Charles C. Pinckney was one of three envoys sent by the United States to France in 1797 to settle disputes which had arisen between the two countries. The American grievance was caused by the seizure of American vessels by France. The French grievance was that commercial privileges had been granted to England. Talleyrand, the French foreign minister, refused to receive the envoys, but it had been conveyed to them by secret agents that before any settlement could be reached it would be necessary for the United States to pay a large sum of money, which was, in fact, little more than a bribe. It was then that Pinckney made his famous declaration that the United States had "millions for defense, but not one cent

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

Moody Bible Institute Monthly Chicago, Ill.

December 4 Thy Will Be Done-With My Plans Matthew 6:7-15

Let us gather up the domiannt things in the consideration and review of these topics-"Thy will be done with my strength, with my pleasures, with my mind, with my time, with my money, with my

First, remember the tendency of discussing such matters in a formal way without observing their connec tions and consequences. The peril of dealing with great spiritual truths in a thoughtless or academic way is very real. It leads to hypocrisy and re-acts harmfully upon the life. Not what we profess in words, but the assumptions on which we act determine our faith in God, and our obedience to Him.

Secondly, the acknowledgment of God's right in us is the next consideration. To use the words of Scripture, "We are bought with a price." An intelligent confession of this is necessary, for this truth lies at the very heart of the revelation of God. "Herein is love; not that we love God, but that He loved us and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins."

The clearness with which this is seen usually determines our measure of devotion; and the measure of devotion in turn usually determines the measure of sincerity in the expression, "Thy will be done." "When I came to think over my conversion," "Want to take a chance on an auwrote Count Zinzendorf, "I saw in the death of Jesus, and in the word 'ransom' there lay a profound mystery, a mystery before which philosophy stops short but as regards which revelations, is immovably firm. This gave me a new intuition into the doctrines of salvation. I found its blessings and benefits first in the instance of my own heart, then in that of my brethren and fellow workers in the Moravian church." The motto of this church is, "To win for the Lamb that was slain, the reward of His sufferings." This motto expresses the utmost devotion, and has been manifested in the missionary achievements of the Moravian church.

Thirdly, the assurance that God's will is good, acceptable and perfect, another dominant note in this ables the redeemed soul to say, as did the Saviour Himself, "I come to do Thy will. O God." It also increases with the increased knowledge of God-obtained through His word, and in experience. To know God is to trust Him. To know Him is to discover that He has a thousand keys for every lock. And this in turn leads one into many blessed experiences, and into a growing assurance that He makes "all things work together for good to them that love him'.

Co-operation in service is another of the dominant principles in this The will of God calls for activity and the expenditure of time and strength and money, in order that His Kingdom may come and the day be hastened when His will shall be done on earth as it is in Heaven.

Bride's Thrift Wasted Dowry. Two daughters of a distinguished Vienna family married in 1912. The younger girl wedded an officer and had to have the "caution money" com-

Recently, says the New York World, the mother, a widow, wished to pay in full the portion of the two children to vhom she still owed money. She sent 100,000 crowns to the son in Switzerland, who received 800 francs from the postoffice for the total amount. His sister got 646 francs for the 80,000 crowns due her. The younger girl's 160,000 crowns would have been worth 105,000 francs in 1912.

Pepto-Mangan in Liquid or Tablets a Blood Builder.

Vigor and strength have as their base rich red blood. Blood is rich when there are plenty of red corpuscles. They are the tiny red cells which swim in blood and give it its color. Without red corpuscles blood would be white. When overwork, or straining, or illness weakens the blood, it diminishes the number of red cells Without a sufficient number of red cells the blood becomes watery, the body weak, Vigor and strength fall off, so that physical life diminishes like a fading plant. The physical pleasures of eating and sleeping and exercise lose all attraction. There is no zest in living.

After Gude's Pepto Mangan has been taken for a while the blood becomes rich with red cells. They help to nourish the entire system. With good blood at work there is a great difference in living. Eating, sleeping gists sell Gude's Pepto-Mangan.

Explaining Lunar bands.

Puiseux, the distinguished selenographer of the Paris observatory, some time ago reached the conclusion that the curious rays or bands extending in straight lines away from many lunar craters, such as the celebrated tycho, are produced by the deposition of volcanic ashes carried to great distances by the winds that happened to prevail when the eruption occurred. He accounts for the relative narrowness of these bands which are never more than 20 miles r ad, although their length is someirses many hundred miles, by sup! posing that only the central axis of the deposit has remained, the less dense borders having been destroyed by the denuding forces of the air when the moon had a considerable atmos-

The schooner, however, refused to let herself be swallowed up and got off unassisted. The party in the life boat, fearing to make an attempt to reach shore before daybreak, saw the schooner get off the shoals and start to sea. They set out after her, but she was too fast. A coast guard cutter took part in the chase. After playing hide and seek with her pursuers for a whole day the Newsom was captured. Only two sails were damaged. Our Requirements For New Capital

EW people realize the tremendous demands for new capital by the public utilities of the country in their efforts to serve the public adequately.

It has been estimated that extensions and improvements of public utilities which have been postponed since the beginning of the war now call for the expenditure of one and a quarter billions of dollars.

The Bell Telephone System alone has increased its investment during the past eight years from $750,-000,000 to nearly $1,400,000,000—almost double.

The new capital that will be required within the next few years by utilities and other enterprises will run into staggering figures and only those offering a safe investment and a good rate of return can expect to get a fair share of the capital available.

Realizing our obligations to give our patrons good and adequate service, we must earn enough to attract new capital.

WOMEN JUDGE CHARACTER THE MEN THEY MEET. -it seems that most women can stand anything better than the unshorn look of the unshaven man. It is esthetic pain. For anly a chosen few is there added physical discomfort—as for the little girl who used to wince when her grandfather rubbed his prickly cheek against hers-or for the long-suffering wife of the tensorial tease.

A man doesn't need to be reminded that it's an important factor in his looks. Rubbing a tentative thand over his chin after supper previous to evening festivities, he queries, "Think I ought to shave 'fore I go tonight?" And friend wife invariably replies: "You'd look better if you did."

And, as a matter of fact, men are pretty responsive on the point, from the time when a boy fondly and vainly explores his complexion with a razor till he takes an elderly daily interest in sprucing up his beard.

Would that he were as sensitive on the subject of haircuts. Many women feel strongly on this subject, and even go so far as to let a man stand or fall by the length of his locks. One girl was heard to declare emphatically that she would never marry a man who didn't keep his hair cut short in the neck.

A fastidious woman, however, judges a man's character by his hands clean hands.

Now, a man need be no Beau Brummell to come up to these standards-of grooming rather than beauty, for which many women care little in a man. "I do like a homely man," you'll hear plenty of girls declare; and others in fact insist on it in a husband. "I'd hate to marry too handsome a husband," they say, "he's likely to be spoiled because he gets flattered so much,"

Neither do women want a man to be sissy about his appearance. But women, the world over, admire a man who is well groomed.

Do men prize that admiration and therefore live up to it, or would they indeed be just as well shaven and shorn in a Crusoe island world?-Rhoda Vale in the Designer.

MUCH GOOD IN BRISK WALK

Why Pedestrianism Should Not Be Allowed to Become a "Lost Art" Is Apparent.

The spectacle of a man walking to work in London is classed almost a phenomenon by the London Chronicle, which declares with the underground, the tramcars, the motor-omnibuses, and the suburban trains, Londoners have almost been deprived of the use of their legs as long distance instrunents of movement.

One man was found by the paper, however, who thinks it is time for a revolt against the neglect of the human leg as a means of locomotion, and advocated the formation of "walking clubs" to revive the lost art of pedestrianism.

"He argues that walking is a natural human habit, not a penal device," says the paper, "that it promotes the circulation of the blood, and therefore prevents cold feet and chilblains: that It aids digestion, and thus tends to make the human being less bad tempered; that it prevents the increase of 'adipose tissue,' and so enables a man to wear his suit longer, instead of having to put it aside because the buttons no longer reach the buttonholes: and that it saves money in fares, although there may be a slight increase in the bill for shoe repairs."

Why Milk Is Good for Shoes. Boots and shoes, like their wearers, get tired and need a tonic. Leather subjected to sudden atmospheric changes wears out rapidly. During winter the leather and stitching of a good pair of boots could support a weight of about 1,000 pounds to the inch, without ill effects. In hot, dusty, summer weather, however, the pores of the leather and the stitching, being parched and dry, the flint-like particles of dust eat their way into the leather, cutting it in all directions. One of the best methods of preserving footwear in dry weather is the use of fresh milk. As the milk is rich in natural grease, the pores and interstices of the leather are fed and nursed back to a normal life. By increasing the pliancy of the leather, dust will not penetrate. Instead, it is kept on the outside, where it can be easily wiped off.

Why Collector Gave Up. Joseph Lewis French, anthologist and sonneteer, says that for 40 years he has had the notion of compiling an anthology of the hundred worst poems ever published. Again and again he has started on the work, but inevitably he grows discouraged, because he always finds another poem so far worse than anything imaginable, that he hesitates to seek out the worst bad verses in their retreats. How, he asks; can he be certain he has found the hundred worst? Mr. French says that a highly cultivated taste for literature and the astutest judgment of prosody are required to appreciate properly the worst in poetry.- New York Evening Post.

> > AN OPEN SHOP

(From The Happy Medium) The Labor unions of Chicago have purchased a cemetery where only members of the union may be buried. -News Item.

All his life in a union shop, He'd daily earned his bread; They buried him in a union grave When the union man was dead.

He had a union doctor, And he had a union nurse; He had a union coffin, And he had a union hearse.

They put him in a union grave When he was good and dead; They put a union monument Just above his head.

And then he went to Heaven, But to stay he didn't care; He kicked because he said that some Non-Union men were there.

He went down to the Other Place And there produced his card. Then Satan drew an earnest face, And studied good and hard.

And then he laughed, his hands did rub Till he thought he'd never stop. "Lord bless my soul," said Beezlebub, "Why, this is an open shop," "By the Kian.
