JOHN W. GARRETT WILL OPPOSE FRANCE

Unanimous Choice of Republican Conference, Wednesday.

John W. Garrett will oppose Senator France in the primaries, in September, as a result of the Republican anti-France Conference held at the Rennett, in Baltimore, on Wednesday. The conference was composed of 45 members, and was strictly private. Baltimore city, and 15 counties were represented, and 5 counties represented by proxies not voted.

Almost every one had one or more candidates to suggest and the unanimous ballot for Mr. Garrett came as a surprise. Blanchard Randall mentioned Edwin G. Baetjer, Phillips Lee Goldsborough and Mr. Garrett. David A. Robb, State Senator, suggested Mr. Goldsborough or Mr. Garrett. W. W. L. Seabrook, of Carroll county, preferred Mr. Goldsborough.

Other speakers were Mr. Baker, Henry B. Wilcox and Charles W. Main of Baltimore city; Paul S. Selan, of Montgomery county; C. W. Messenger, of Caroline county; F. Dale Adkins of Wicomico county, who substituted for Walter B. Miller; Miss Pearl Eader, of Frederick county; Mrs. A. Lincoln Lyon, of Harford county; Cooke Orrill, of Queen Anne's county; M. J. Wimbrow, of Worcester county; Daniel Randall, of Anne Arundel county, and Mr. Tilghman.

Mr. Garrett accepted the committee's decision, declaring the man selected by the conference would win. He said he would at once open headquarters and throw his whole energy into the fight from now until the primary election.

Daily Vacation Bible School.

We reproduce from "The Parish Visitor," published in the interests of Baust Reformed Church, a portion of an announcement concerning a daily Bible School to be conducted at the church, during the first two full weeks in August.

"This school will be conducted under the leadership of Rev. and Mrs. Ness. It will be inter-denominational and all of the children of Baust church community are invited to attend. The school will be conducted on the same plan as our public school. Sessions beginning at 9 A. M. and continuing to 11:30 A. M. No afternoon sessions. Sessions from Monday to Friday. Credits will be given for regular attendance, neatness of work and general deportment.

One of the crying needs of our day is the proper training of our young in christian religion and morals. We are seeking to meet this need by our D. V. B. S. We are fully aware of the sacrifice it will mean to many of our people; thinking especially of those who live from three to five miles from the church. But the goal of the school, the vitalizing of the christian religion in the hearts and minds of our children, will more than justify what small sacrifice we will be asked to make in sending our children to our first community Bible school."

Elias O. Grimes Dead.

Elias O. Grimes, 84, died at his apartments in the Westminster Hotel Wednesday night after an illness of a few days. For many years he was agent of the Western Maryland Railway in its early history and until a few years ago he was president of the Westminster Savings Bank. He was a member of the board of trustees of Western Maryland College and a director of the Carroll County Mutual Fire Insurance Company. He was also a member of Door to Virtue lodge of Masons. Mr. Grimes was a widower and is survived by one son, Oliver Grimes, Jr., attorney-at-law of Baltimore. He will be buried on Saturday morning from the Methodist Protestant Church, of which he was an active member.

Wm. F. Cover Retires from Business.

(For the Record.) An unexpected, but quite natural, event occurred in Keymar during this week, it being the retiring of Wm. F. Cover from the general warehouse business (including contracting and building) of which he has been sole owner and manager during the past 30 years.

Mr. Cover's withdrawal includes the sale of all business property, warehouse, ground, lumber sheds, stock and fixtures, together with the unfinished contracts in Frederick, Lewis and Feagaville. Mr. Cover will finish the buildings at Ladiesburg, Emmitsburg and Union Bridge.

The terms of the sale are personal and private, but it is understood to involve an amount of about $60,000. The business will be continued under the name of "The Cover Lumber Co., with W. N. Cover as partner and general manager. W. N. Cover is a young man of rare business ability and continued prosperity is expected.

A Dictionary Bargain.

A good-as-new copy of Webster's International Dictionary, 1918 edition, price $16.00, can be had at our office for $7.00. Never handled except in a dictionary holder. As we have but one copy, the first comer will get the bargain.

WOULD YOU LIKE TO KNOW—

Pointed Paragraphs from J. T. W., Toronto, Canada.

That some public school teachers are trading off with teachers in England, for a year. Good idea. Why not more generally practiced?

That we have here on exhibition, a Giraffe 18 feet high, said to be the tallest animal in the world now known. That a 14 year old Chinese boy covered a course in English in 8 months, that usually takes 4 years. Last October he could not speak English?

That a Vancouver Goat yields two gallons of milk daily. Some goat? That 25,000 forest fires were started by careless campers, in 1921, causing a loss in forestry of millions of money?

That motor cars are being equipped with high power radio sets and they can talk and listen to music from broad-casting stations, as they madly whirl along the highway?

That motor camping stations are pretty well established all over Canada?

That one enterprising motorist pulls a trailer on which he grows all needed vegetables for his travelling family?

That the Church of England is revising her Book of Common Prayer, cutting out all that offends the exquisite tastes; and correcting the Ten Commandments. Some job, but I guess they will get through; but I am not sure they will get through when God comes to correct them?

That in a public meeting in Jerusalem, of 140 persons present, 35 languages were spoken. A missionary would need some tongue to speak to all that gathering, as at Pentecost?

That there are over 20,000 broad casting Radio stations in Canada and the United States; and over 20,000 transmitting stations, largely the result of two months growth?

That no home is better than its women; and no Nation is better than its home life; the destiny of the Nation hangs on the Purity of the home life?

There are fewer unemployed this month than last; but there are some who do not want to be employed. They prefer to live by faith, while the other fellow lives by work?

That women are being ordained to the office of Rabbi, to officiate in the synagogues. Are we back in the days of Deborah, when there were males, but not a man?

That the Cow Boy is safe while sleeping, by coiling his hair lariat in a circle around him. Snakes, lizards, centipeds, gila monsters and other poisonous beasts, will not cross it?

That girls who accept motor rides from strangers, do it at their peril? That there are about 8 times more motor accidents, than from the Street cars, on the average per month?

That there are over 150,000 claims daily made to Insurance Companies in the United States alone for damage caused by electric irons, not being turned off.

That there are 30,000 motor cars in Toronto. Life and property are jeopardized in the mad rush. On the 7th of June I was trapped by a woman backing her car on me, and others closing in from back and side; and my poor bike was smashed to smithereens; I escaped, but for a nerve shock and a twinge in the back? Thankful.

Funeral of Pastor's Wife.

Mrs. J. F. Bowersox, wife of the pastor of the Salem Lutheran Church, near Westminster, was buried on Tuesday of this week at the home of her parents, East Prospect, York Co., Pa. A service was conducted at the parsonage in Westminster, on Tuesday morning, by Rev. A. G. Wolf, of Silver Run, a former pastor and long friend of Rev. Mr. Bowersox. He was assisted in the service by Rev. L. B. Hafer, of Taneytown, and Rev. John B. Rupley, of Westminster, the latter delivering a short address.

After the service the remains were taken by way of York to East Prospect, where Mrs. Bowersox had been brought up, and where a service was conducted in the United Evangelical Church, of which the deceased had been a member, and of which Rev. Mr. Bowersox was a pastor before his reception into the Lutheran ministry. The same ministers, with the addition of Rev. I. C. Shearer, pastor of the church, conducted the service, the sermon being delivered by Rev. Mr. Wolf.

Mrs. Bowersox was a young woman, and had been in bad health for some time. Recently she was taken to a hospital in Baltimore for an operation, which was ineffectual to prolong her life. She is survived by her husband, a baby boy two months of age, and four step-children. A large number of the members of Krider's and Leister's churches, which compose the charge, attended the funeral, quite a number going all the way to the place of burial.

200 Pheasants Distributed.

Through the Game Committee of the Forest and Stream Club, of Westminster, 200 Chinese Ringneck Pheasants were distributed throughout Carroll County on the 10th. These birds were hatched with hens at the State Game Farm, Gwynbrook, Maryland, and reached here in fine condition.

There is a fine of $25.00 for killing one of these birds and it is to be hoped that the law will be strictly enforced.

HARDING'S PLAN FOR COAL QUESTION

The Plan Indorsed by Public, but not by all Interests.

President Harding, on Monday, issued what is practically an order by the Government; that the coal mines be immediately opened, on the old basis of pay, and that a settlement of differences and questions of rates be settled later by a commission composed of three members selected by the miners, three by the operators, and five by the President. That all decisions of the commission be binding, and that a new wage scale be determined by August 10, if possible.

The proposal seems to be acceptable to the public, and more acceptable to the miners than to the operators. Neither side has as yet accepted it in full and there is a disposition to quibble and delay, the operators declaring that it will be impossible for any commission to arrive at intelligent conclusions at any early date.

The Philadelphia Ledger, usually gives clear-headed advice on big public questions. It had the following to say on the subject, the day before the action of the President was announced, that may, or may not, have been based on advance information. Anyway, the two opinions coincide, except as to the make-up of the Commission. The Ledger says:

"The public, directly or indirectly, must settle this strike. It cannot make up its mind and render any decision in the case of the miners vs. the operators until the facts are laid bare.

Since we are not far away from a coal shortage, since the public interest is paramount, the Administration should insist that the miners go back to work and that they be paid on the basis of the wage scale ending March 31, 1922. This should be no more than a temporary arrangement, lasting only until the Nation can gather the facts upon which to base a settlement that will be fair and just to the men, the management and the public.

These facts should be gathered by a National Commission, named by the Government, clothed with all the necessary powers and made up of men whose honesty, capacity and public spirit could not be questioned. On this commission there should not be a miner, or mine chief, or any representative of labor, organized or unorganized. Nor should there be on that body a coal operator, mine owner, holder of mine stock, capitalist or any one else whose interests anywhere or in any way tie up with the business of mining.

This commission should be the public's commission. Always just in the long run, this same public should do the investigating and publish the facts as it finds them. These findings need not be recommendations necessarily; possibly they should not be, but they must reveal the facts as they are. Then the public, sitting as a court of last resort, can make up its mind in fairness and justice to both mine labor and mine capital when they lock in disagreement.

We need to know about investments, leases, royalties, costs, profits, variations in working condition, coal sale and distribution. We need facts and not selfish statements from interested parties as to mine over-development, over-manning in the industry and the reasonableness of present coal freight rates. If invisible profits exist, we must discover them. If miners are getting too much, we want that proved. If we are not paying too much for coal, we want present coal prices justified by what we find for ourselves and not what is handed out to us as gospel.

Then, when miner and operators sit down to their biennial or perennial quarrel as to wages, we shall have the facts that will enable the Nation to umpire fairly and with reason. The evidence on both sides of the case will be at hand.

Carroll County S. S. Convention.

The annual convention of the Carroll County Sunday School Association will be held in Alumni Hall, Westminster, Friday, July 28, three sessions, morning, afternoon and night. The program prepared is the strongest yet presented, and when the many splendid conventions this association has held, are recalled, that is saying a great deal.

Among the speakers will be Dr. Charles Ellis, of the editorial staff of the Sunday School Times, of Philadelphia, and Dr. Hugh Cork, who is prominent in many activities of the International Sunday School Association. These men will have real messages of helpfulness and uplift. The state officers will also be with us.

The music will be in charge of Mr. Irving Mack, of the firm of Hall-Mack Co., noted music composers and publishers, of Philadelphia, and he will be accompanied by B. D. Ackley, author and composer of many of our most popular hymns, and also pianist for Billy Sunday in his great revival meetings. All will want to hear these men.

Every school in the county is urged to send as many delegates as possible. Bring box-lunch, which may be enjoyed on the college campus. No lunch will be served by the committee this year, as heretofore. 1,000 delegates are wanted and expected at this greatest gathering of its kind in our county.

FIRE LOSSES IN MARYLAND.

Annual Report for the Year 1921 by Causes and Counties.

The Fire Investigating Bureau for the State of Maryland, has made its first annual report covering the year 1921. There were 1614 fires in the twenty-three counties of the state, not including Baltimore City, involving a loss of $1,412,417.53. The property covered carried insurance of $5,411,660.08. There was a decrease in loss, as compared with 1920, of $372,285.47.

By causes, the following is the order of the main ones:-

Pictures of the Near East.

Persons who have been interested in the work of Near East Relief, and all others who are interested in knowing conditions that prevail in various parts of the world, should attend the service in the United Brethren Church of Taneytown, on Sunday evening, at 8 o'clock. Mr. D. A. Mitchell will deliver an address that will be illustrated by lantern slides showing the latest photographs from that region of the country, and showing what has been done with the money and clothing that we have sent for this cause. Everybody is cordially invited. The offering of the evening will be given to this work.

Masonry not Connected with the Ku Klux Klan.

Any connections between the Ku Klux Klan and Masonry in this State is vigorously denied by Warren S. Seipp, Grand Master of Masonry in Maryland.

"As everyone knows, Masonry stands primarily for law and order as set down in the Constitution. I can definitely state that there is absolutely no connection whatever between the Ku Klux Klan and Masonry," said Mr. Seipp. "In fact, I do not want to get mixed up in any controversy with them."

"I can also say definitely that the Klan has not been interfering with the prerogatives of Masonry in this State. Until they do and the matter is drawn to my attention officially, I can say nothing more."

Mr. Seipp's attention was drawn to the remark of a clansman at a recent initiation at Brunswick that all the candidates were Masons and that the majority of clansmen there were Masons.

"I look upon such a remark as only an individual boast," Mr. Seipp said. "I don't know conditions up there, so I can't discuss the subject."

Emmitsburg Lutherans Vote Repairs.

At a specially called congregational meeting of the Elias Evangelical Lutheran church, Emmitsburg, held recently, the congregation voted to point the walls of the old stone church, paint the steeple and exterior woodwork and paint and fresco the interior. Committees have been appointed and the work of renovation will begin at once.

They further voted to lay the cornerstone of the chapel to be known as the Reinwald Memorial chapel, in honor of Rev. Charles Reinwald, D. D., the former pastor, who faithfully served the Lutheran church of Emmitsburg for a period of 27 years and seven months—exceeding in point of time that of any former incumbent.

This work is in addition to a handsome new parsonage only recently finished.

Due largely to the increase in enrollments at Mt. St. Mary's and St. Joseph's Colleges, the Emmitsburg Post-office has been advanced from third to second class, going into effect July 1st.

RAILROAD STRIKE NO NEARER END.

The Situation Largely Unchanged During the Week.

The Railroad situation has not improved during the week. Hundreds of trains throughout the country have been discontinued, but a more or less satisfactory service is in operation. The employment of non-union shopmen is progressing slowly.

The Postoffice department is mobilizing a fleet of 50,000 motor trucks for the purpose of handling the mails, if necessary, and U. S. troops are also being held in readiness for dispatch to wherever their services may be necessary.

Numerous acts of violence have occurred throughout the country, the most of them being of minor importance and directed chiefly against strike-breakers. Apparently, efforts at bringing about peace have largely been dropped on both sides. There is a strong probability of the strike extending to clerks in the offices, and to maintenance of way men.

Transfers of Real Estate.

Charles C. Rickell and wife to T. N. Rickell, $10 for 4320 sq. ft.

Charles I. Masenimer and wife to Wertheimer Realty Co., $5 lot in Manchester.

Jacob J. Bankard and wife to Lloyd C. Devilbiss and wife $10 for 10 acres

Mt. Airy Masonic Temple Association to Mt. Airy M. E. Cavalry Church, $10 for lot in Mt. Airy.

Washington I. Ridgely and wife to Ernest C. Ridgely $1 for 39 acres.

Washington I. Ridgely and wife to Louisa R. Ruby $1 for 2 1/2 acres.

Washington I. Ridgely and wife to Margaret E. Blunt, $1 for 1 3/10 sq. per.

Margaret E. Blunt to Washington I. Ridgely and wife, $1 for 1 8/10 sq. per.

Nettie V. Maxwell and husband to Marian I. Shipley and wife, $1 for 1 acre.

Nora C. Gorsuch, et. al. to Westminster Mill Body Co., $2000 for two tracts.

George E. McGuigan to Clifford Hahn and wife, $800 for 1 acre.

Carroll County Agricultural and Fair Association to Charles E. H. Shriner, $10 for 40 sq. ft.

Sarah E. Houck to Ella M. Blizzard $5 for small property.

Lydia P. Quigly and husband to Louis C. West and wife, $10 for 15200 sq. ft.

Bee Causes Auto Accident.

West Chester, July 11.—Mrs. Ernest Taylor, Pirc street, was seriously cut on the face and head yesterday in an automobile collision on a road near Odessa, Del., and her husband, who was pinned in the wreckage of his car, was bruised severely. Three children escaped injury. Both the injured persons were brought to their home here after the accident.

A bee stung Mr. Taylor, who was driving the car, causing him to run into a truck loaded with young persons from a picnic ground. The truck went through a fence.

Picture of Christ Escapes.

Allentown, Pa., July 11.—St. John's Reformed Church was almost destroyed by fire today. The damage is estimated at $50,000. The fire started between the roof and ceiling and was due, firemen believe, to a smouldering timber set on fire by a painter's torch.

Recently the congregation voted $35,000 to renovate the church. Fifteen thousand dollars had already been put into improvements, all of which were ruined by fire or water. The $15,000 pipe organ is damaged beyond repair. An oil painting of "Christ in Gethsemane" escaped, although everything else surrounding it was ruined.

The cornerstone of the church was laid in 1867. The Rev. A. O. Reiter is the pastor.

American and Foreign Wages.

According to Chairman Fodney of the Ways and Means Committee of the House, he has just obtained from the Department of Commerce the latest reports of wages paid skilled mechanics abroad. In Germany they receive 45 cents a day, in France $1.35 and in England, $2.20, while in the United States, between $4 and $6 a day is paid.

Proceedings of the Orphans' Court.

Monday, July 10th, 1922—H. Scott Roop, administrator of David J. Roop, deceased, received order to sell stocks and bonds.

Frederick W. Shuey, administrator of Rebecca Shuey, deceased, settled his first and final account.

Martha A. Chew, executor of Arthur C. Chew, deceased, settled her first and final account.

Tuesday, July 11, 1922—Charles O. Ogle, guardian of James F. Hardy, Norris R. Hardy and Marie Hardy, settled his first account.

The tax-rate for Somerset county has been fixed at $2.15, bringing the total tax to $2.50, an increase of 68 cents, and the highest ever levied in the county.

THE COUNTY EXHIBIT.

How to Prepare Articles for Exhibition Purposes.

We hope you are planning to help in your community exhibit, this year. Our County exhibit at the Armory, this year, will be Nov. 1, 2, 3 and 4 if possible. All of the woman's exhibit except baked goods and butter, must be entered Tuesday morning. Nothing will be received after 12:30 o'clock.

We are going to make a bigger feature of the exhibit this year, and use standard jars. The standard jar for all fruits and most vegetables will be the quart glass-top jar, with wire bail or the Thrift jar. Asparagus, peas, corn and lima beans should be canned in pint jars. These are the only jars that will be given 100 points on the container.

Preserves should all be in pint glass top jars, of white glass, if possible and pickles in quart jars. Jelly should be put in the regular tapering jelly glass, about 3 1/2 inches tall, of plain glass. Use paraffin as well as metal top.

You can readily see how this will improve our exhibit. Most women have several types of jars, but one could easily select a dozen glass top ones to use for exhibit. Take special care packing, and put up one or two of each kind of fruit and vegetable. See what a great variety you can have.

We advocate the use of the steam pressure cooker for canning peas, lima beans, corn, asparagus and meats. If you have not a steam pressure cooker we advocate the cold-pack method of canning. If you wish a bulletin, call at the County Agent's office. Please do not bring any products put up with an acid, or commercial compound.

Danger From Automobile Gas.

The State Department of Health has issued a warning of the dangers from automobile gases. The warning is as follows:

Investigations made by the United States Government show that gases dangerous to life are frequently present in the exhaust gases from automobiles. These gases are often present in sufficient quantities to produce disagreeable symptoms, or even cause death. The effect of these gases is produced very quickly, usually before the victim realizes the danger.

Observe the following precautions at all times:

1—Always open the garage door before starting the engine.

2—Do not allow the engine to run for any length of time in a closed garage.

3—Do not work near the exhaust of a running automobile engine.

4—Special precautions as to ventilation are necessary when in garage pits.

5—When the exhaust is used for heating a closed car, the system must be free from leaks.

Persons overcome by exhaust gases from automobiles and gasoline engines should be removed to fresh air and artificial respiration performed until a physician arrives.

P. R. R. to Electrify Lines.

The Pennsylvania Railroad within the next few years will do considerable work in electrifying certain parts of its system, which will require the expenditure of millions of dollars. Previous to the setback in business; plans had been made for the extension of the electric system on the New York division as far east as Bristol and possibly through to Trenton. The line between Philadelphia and North Philadelphia is now partly electrified, and the extension will be made from this point east.

Owing to the increase in business between Philadelphia and points on the Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington road, it is likely that one of the early sections to be electrified will be between Philadelphia and Wilmington, and then as the business warrants, there will be further extensions to Frazer, on the Main line to West Chester to the main line of the Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington.

It is stated that in all probability the first electrical work to be done will be from Altoona to Conemaugh over the Allegheny Mountains. It is asserted by the operating department that one of the large electric locomotives will be able to pull a heavy train over the mountains, whereas now it takes two to three locomotives to do the same work.

Archbishop Sails for Rome.

With a number of clergy and laymen at the pier to see him off, Archbishop Curley, of Baltimore, last Thursday sailed for Rome on board the steamship Conte Rosso, bound for Naples and Genoa.

The Archbishop told reporters his first duty was at Rome, where he would seek audience with Pope Pius XI. "My plans," he said, "are not at all definite. I have only three specific things in mind—my visit to the Holy Father, a trip to see the Passion Play at Oberammergau and then a trip to Ireland."

According to present plans the Archbishop will remain abroad about six weeks, planning to return to America the latter part of August. Accompanying the prelate are Rt. Rev. Mgr. Edward A. Pace and Rt. Rev. Mgr. Louis R. Stickey, rector of the Baltimore Cathedral.

The Tariff Wrangle.

The new Tariff Bill is having rough-sledding in the Senate. Between the desire to secure a great deal more revenue, the avoidance of retaliative tariffs from other countries, and the satisfying of all interests in this country, the sponsors of the bill are having anything but an easy time of it. Besides, the usual fight between protection and free-trade policies, as partisan campaign cries, is much the same as heretofore, with the difference that the South is breaking up somewhat in favor of "protection" while the purely agricultural sections of the West is clamoring for more free-trade, with incidental local protection.

It is the old game of every interest wanting to get something out of it, and of natural conflict between these interests. As the Record has repeatedly stated in the past, the framing of a tariff bill, should, if possible, be taken out of partisan politics. It has not, and never has had, any business there. At the very best, it must be a composite of compromises; and should be also a composite of features protective of American interests in general, as nearly as any big scheme of taxation and revenue producing can be that.

Of course, anti-administration Senators—radicals like Borah, La Follette and Norris—oppose the administration's bill. They would, on general principles, have found features to oppose, even had the bill been written in any other terms. They are objectors from habit, and do not want to agree with any plans not sponsored and originated by themselves; and Democratic leaders feel much the same spirit to be incumbent on them, in order to carry out a consistent party policy.

Senator Johnson, who normally belongs in the trio of Republican Senators mentioned, appears to have been "seen" in the schedule on California fruits and other products, and is thereby temporarily in the "good boy" class, so will reserve his "Bull Moose" proclivities for other lines of party obstreperousness.

The Right to Work.

The recent decisions of the Supreme Court, and of President Harding's administration holds, that non-unionists have a right to work, and be protected, without being classed as "scabs," or "strike-breakers," is in line with common sense even though not fitting the gospel of labor unions. In effect, the "right to work" stands for the "open shop"—for the right of unionists and non-unionists to work side by side, under the conditions individually preferred by each.

As every man has the right not to work, or to bargain for the price of his work, there does not seem to be much real argument as to the right of others to work at the price he elects to take, whether fixed by himself, or an employer. This is labor unmonopolized, pure and simple—labor as an individual commodity—to be sold as one sells property—on the best terms possible.

Sooner or later, this view of labor must prevail. Labor is a commodity, with a market demand and market value, much the same as merchandise on the shelves of a store, or the products of a farm, or the demand for industrial efforts. Absolute price-fixing is an impossibility, for long-term periods, whether for labor or merchandise.

Why Newspapers are so Unsatisfactory to Many.

Lewis Harper, a writer in "the Dearborn Independent" has an exhaustive article in the last issue of that paper, on the general subject of the public's dissatisfaction with the daily newspapers, and bases his conclusions on the assertion that "dependence on advertising receipts costs loyalty to readers." His figuring, of course, do not apply to country weekly papers which do not to anything like the same percent depend on advertising revenue, and can therefore "afford" to be more representative of—let us say, honest and unselfish public sentiment. We regret that we can not give the article in full, but reproduce the following, as fairly showing the argument used, which is no doubt fairly correct.

The public is dissatisfied with the newspapers. It feels that it is not getting a genuine article, certainly not getting what it thinks it wants.

As usual, it will be found upon investigation that the reason the public is not getting what it thinks it is entitled to, is because it is not paying for it. It apparently was not, and is not willing to pay for it, so it is getting an inferior substitute. The newspaper buyer pays only two or three cents for his paper. It is safe to say that the production cost of few American newspapers is less than 10 cents a copy, most of them average higher, some a great deal higher. The newspaper receives only 50 percent of the purchase price, the rest goes to the distributor. So the newspaper reader is paying directly for only 10 percent of the cost of the article he buys—often less than that.

Right here we come to the economic fallacy which is at once the cause of the newspaper's failure to function properly and the public's lack of faith in the newspaper's independence. Indirectly, as a member of the consuming public, the reader is paying for the newspaper's by-product—advertising. And, unlike nearly every other manufacturing industry, the newspaper business is living mainly on its by-product. This is the source of its weakness—the cause of its readers' uneasy distrust. The tax levied upon the public by the newspapers is deceptive like all other forms of indirect taxation.

Without realizing it the public is paying an increased price for nearly everything it consumes because of advertising costs. Advertising constitutes from 75 to 90 percent of newspaper earnings. The newspaper no longer owes its readers for its principal means of support. It is no longer under special obligations of loyalty to any reader clientele. It does not need loyal friends and believers in its veracity or its policies, as much as it needs advertising revenues. Advertising rates and revenues are based primarily on the quantity of circulation a newspaper has to sell. Hence, the main objective of the newspaper publisher is mass circulation. If that can be obtained by honesty, truth-telling and public service—well and good. But if there are any easier ways or short cuts, then the temptation to adopt them is great indeed.

On analysis, most of the complaints heard about the newspapers—sensationalism, sex psychosis, demagoguery and the like—will be found to trace back to the quest for mass circulation which is the basis of advertising sales value. This will also explain why the number of newspapers has so greatly diminished, and why there are no longer small groups of newspaper readers in every city or state who "swear by" this or that newspaper, or this or that editor. The quest for mass circulation also has resulted in the loss of that intimate touch between the editor and the reader which still remains the strength of small-town journalism. It has forced the newspapers to deal in generalities, to treat only of "big" events, "far-away stuff" or to descend to topics such as sex, which are capable of being understood by the largest numbers of people, without regard to their cultural status.

If readers were able to segregate themselves into classes and buy newspapers to meet their special wants, they could get quite excellent specialized journals for 10 cents and upward, but when they are compelled to buy in the mass, because advertising revenue is dependent on mass circulation, they are forced to pay for a whole lot of stuff they don't want, because the other fellow demands it.

The public demanded cheap newspapers and good newspapers. To supply them the publishers were compelled to develop their by-product of advertising revenue they were forced to seek mass circulation. No more perfect illustration than the economic spiral can be found than this basic fact of publishing economics.

The quest for mass circulation, forced by the public demand for cheap papers of high quality, has finally reacted to produce cheap newspapers both in price and quality—using the word cheap not in its money sense—for it is a fact that some of the most expensive stuff published is the least intelligent, both in execution and in appeal.

The Same Everywhere.

JULIA HAD SAID SOMETHING

Sam Was Forced to Admit That His Better Half "Chatted About Dem Clothes."

Courtenay Dinwiddie, executive of the National Child Health council, told the following story at the meeting of the Monday evening club. It belongs to the great fund of family stories of which each home has its share.

His family had a colored woman of the name of Julia, who did the wash, according to Mr. Dinwiddie, her husband transporting the clothes to and from home. One night he started with a big bundle of freshly washed clothing. It had been raining and there were puddles along the street.

The unfortunate man slipped, the bundle hit the street, opened up, and its contents went into a mud puddle. Needless to say, he couldn't deliver the wash, and he hated to take it back home. But he was forced to "face the music."

A week later the colored man showed up at the Dinwiddie home with the clothes spick and span. The family, of course, had found out what had delayed their wash and were prepared for Sam.

That worthy, however, did not say a word about his mishap.

"Sam," asked a member of the family, "didn't Julia have anything to say about the clothes when you had to take them back?"

Sam grinned. "Julia—she done chatted quite a while about dem clothes," he said.—Washington Star.

AVIATION NOT HIS OBJECT

Swede Had His Own Reason for Rejecting Offer of That Particular Brand of Liquor.

Stephen Hunter Love of Salt Lake City, prominent in the beet sugar industry of Utah and a member of the food administration during the war, was in Washington for the sugar hearings before the finance committee of the senate. Mr. Love has a great gift for story telling, and is particularly fond of Swedish stories, his imitation of the Scandinavian dialect being well-nigh perfect.

It seems that recently a picturesque old Swede employed in one of the sugar mills thought to himself, that he would not mind having a little drink or two after a particularly hard day's work. So he hid himself to a boot-legal of his acquaintance.

"You got any that squirrel whisky, Yohn?" he asked.

"No, I haven't Sven," replied the liquor merchant, "but I can give you a little old crow. How 'bout that?"

Sven thought for a moment; then he shook his head. "Nay-da," he said. "Ay don't want to fly: Ay just want to hop a little."—Washington Post.

Health Habits for Children.

Health instruction and its result in the formation of habits, is the subject of a daily record of health habits for every child in the schools of Washington, D. C., according to the United States bureau of education. Blanks are marked after the morning daily inspection by the teacher. Each school day a mark is given for the pupil's observance of such habits as brushing the teeth, carrying a handkerchief, keeping a good posture, taking thirty minutes physical exercise. Thirteen health habits are noted. At the end of a month a rating is given to correspond with the daily record, and the sheet is sent home folded around the report card, to be signed by the parent and returned. It is expected thus to secure the co-operation of the home in inculcating health habits. Children showing extreme neglect are referred to the school nurse.

It Sounded Excessive.

An Indianapolis accountant, who is of English birth, says that when he arrived in the United States several years ago, he did not propose to permit himself to be imposed on.

When he landed he gave his hand baggage to a porter to carry to a hotel. When he reached the hotel, he asked the porter what the charge was for carrying the baggage.

"Two bits, sir," was the porter's reply. "Now look here," said the traveler, "I'm not a green Englishman like you think I am. I know your tricks. I'm going to give you 50 cents and you'll have to be satisfied with that. It's all you get."

Emotional Old Fighter.

Tex Rickard told the other day of a dinner that was given to old Bob Fitzsimmons at a cafe in Fourteenth street. The bunch got together and bought the warrior a huge, non-pavement silver loving cup. Johnny Pollock presented it. After about the tenth whisky—they drank them straight those days—Pollock flashed the cup on the emotional old fellow. Fitz stared at the big and gleaming thing. Then he glowered at Pollock and yelled: "Now, dammit, you've gone and made me cry!"—New York Correspondence of the Kansas City Star.

Find Pure Amber Deposit.

What was formerly considered dross in the mines of the Coalmont collieries, Nicola, B. C., has been discovered to be pure amber, the first deposit of the kind ever found on the North American continent. The discovery is credited to E. S. Oliver of the Oliver chemical process syndicate. It was formerly believed to be resinite. There are large quantities of the amber.

AMERICAN TREES IN GREECE

New Verdure for Barren Hills Around Athens Expected to Influence the Annual Rainfall.

Mrs. P. Martineau, the expert on floriculture and tree planting, has just returned to England from a visit to Athens, where she has been advising the king and queen of the Hellenes in the culture and laying out of gardens. She has spent a good deal of time in California and has found that the drought-resisting trees and flowers of that country are particularly suited to Greek soil.

The queen has formed a small society among her friends with the object of furthering tree planting in the country. All the streets of Athens have been planted with pepper trees, the light green foliage, of which, with clusters of berries, is very effective. The pepper tree, an evergreen, is a native of California. Another tree seen there is the maritime pine, with which the queen hopes to clothe the hills of Greece as far as possible. Some of the small hills surrounding Athens are already covered with this drought-resisting tree, which is particularly suited to a soil which is practically lime and dust. The maritime pine grows very quickly, and Mrs. Martineau thinks that the covering of the hills around Athens may have the effect of bringing more rain.

Incident Boys Will Long Remember.

Trapped in the center of a railway bridge spanning Tessopec creek, Pa., two boys, each aged twelve years, miraculously escaped death when they laid down between the rails and took chances with a limited train on the third rail system of the Wilkes-Barre and Hazleton railway, passing over them. They won, for the train went over them in safety and the boys were unhurt. The train came upon them so suddenly and either end of the bridge was so far away that to attempt escape by running would have meant death. To have jumped thirty feet into the creek would have been equally perilous. The engineer saw the boys and signaled to them to lie down between the rails. The boys cuddled as close as they could to the ties, turning their heads sideways, shut their eyes and prayed.

Ideal Hoosier Town.

Jimmie Blue, former Hoosier, now of Denver, says Mount Comfort, Ind., is the ideal town. A hungry tramp dropped off in Mount Comfort one bitter cold day. A diligent house to house canvasser availed him nothing. Cold and hungry, he walked to the intersection of the Big Four and Cumberland pike. He looked east, west, north and south, then cast his eyes on the ground, a forlorn expression on his face.

The constable noticed him and, walking over, ventured to ask what the trouble might be. The tramp answered, "Well, I've been in about every town in the country, but darned if this ain't the first place I ever saw that was finished."—Indianapolis News.

What the Reds Are Kicking At.

"You know what a difference a shave and a haircut make in your thoughts," observes the philosopher of the Type Metal Magazine, discoursing of social problems. "You sit in a barber's chair, tired and depressed. A half hour later you get up, cheerful and optimistic, refreshed in mind and body. Suppose you shaved about once a week, bathed every other week, slept between dirty blankets in a room with five other men, ate greasy, badly cooked food, and worked in a shop that never had a thorough cleaning. You might join the 'Reds' and protest against the government, but you would really be protesting against dirt and bad food."

Fate in an Ash Can

By A. W. PEACH

© 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Mary turned her back upon him and looked out of the window into the dusk-filled street. Her fingers picked at the curtain, but her mind was busy. She was almost ready to turn and fly into his arms—why did his mere presence stir her so? But she kept herself in hand and listened.

"Tomorrow I go to New York. In the morning I am sailing for London. If you love me, ask me to come back as soon as I complete my business for the firm. If you do not, I may not come back for years. I can stay as the firm's agent—I will have nothing to come back for, you know," he said, his voice ending with a light note of amusement.

She turned upon him and looked at him thoughtfully. Tall and slim, he stood before her, his dark blue eyes resting tenderly upon her. But that note in his voice—

"Stanley, I do think so much of you—so much—but something always holds me back. You are so—so inclined to take things lightly, and I don't want to be taken lightly—never, never! No—please don't touch me! There seems to be so little you regard seriously—many things that I do; and I don't want to intrust my life to you—and yet"—her voice broke—"I do!" She stayed his quick effort to fold her in his arms.

"Please give me time. I'll write you—to your hotel in New York—my final decision. I'll write if I will marry you; if I don't write, then you'll know."

He nodded. "Yes, I will know," he added easily, completing her unfinished sentence. "But, remember, if you write, the letter must go out tonight."

Into the Ash Can She Hurlled the Letter.

If you do not write, my dear one, you will never be bothered by me again—though I know I shall never forget you!"

When he had gone, she went slowly to her room, face to face with the decision that meant more than any other decision she would ever make. She sat down at the desk and mused. His easy ways of disposing of matters of right and wrong, his offhand decisions, his careless attitude toward much that she thought deserved care—all had combined to make her wonder.

A knock on the door was followed by the appearance of one of the girls in the house.

"Hello, Mary, Mary, and what are you doing—being contrary? Say, I saw Stanley here. He is one bonny specimen of a man. But, honest, honey, I hope you won't marry him! I feel guilty for introducing him to you," Bertha said soberly.

Mary looked keenly at her old friend. "Well, I am to decide in the next half hour—"

"No!" Bertha's face was pale.

"Yes!"

"I—I wish you wouldn't!"

Mary smiled. "Bert, have you something you want to tell me and yet won't?"

The other sat in silence, the laughter gone from her eyes and face. Then, after a little, she spoke:

"He is attractive, but there is something—but I can't tell you."

Mary's hands grew cold on the desk. She knew the stanch little comrade of years would not mention gossip. "Bert, this is serious. I am doubtful about Stanley, but only a little, and if you know anything tell me. I do want to be happy with him—or without him!"

"I know this," Bertha answered, her face pale. "He writes letters every now and then to a girl in his old home, and I know he has gone to see her. He doesn't dictate them to me—but I happened to glance at one on his desk, and it was a loving affair."

"You see, he's that way. You're sort of a cold beauty that challenges a man like him!"

Mary smiled faintly. "Perhaps—but he has a right to care for some one else. We are not engaged."

"I know," Bertha answered, "but just the same, it would be better, if he loves you so, that he leave others alone."

Mary's comment was a little cry—"It would be better—it would!"

"But, oh, honey, I can't talk about it any more—I hope—well—good-by!"

Mary turned to the desk once more. Out of the minutes of thought came the final decision. He was trusted and liked in the great importing firm; he had the respect of strong men; surely he would be true to her if he was so them.

She wrote the letter, slipped on a coat and went out to the mail box. On her way she passed a house where rumor had told of scandal and heart-break, and she paused, the cold question rising in her heart: "Suppose that might happen to me? Must I run the risk?" Her imagination loomed. She knew she could love one man and one only. The risk! No, she would not take it. Into the ashcan that stood beside the post, ready for the night collectors of refuse, she hurled the letter and rushed back home. She passed a belated errand boy and a tall man who stared at her curiously.

In the seclusion of her room she fought the old, old battle of the human heart torn between longing for happiness and fear of it. Sleep came in the end if peace did not.

The next morning dragged with weary feet. She could picture Stanley watching for his mail and her familiar notepaper. Then, hope gone, standing in silence and despair—perhaps. For she suddenly realized that he was strong—strong in the way of men who take life lightly because they do not fear it.

At noon, sharp with climax, her world turned over. First, Bertha, with tears in her eyes, explained that she had found out that Stanley's girl at home was a maiden aunt, who had cared for him in his youth, whose personal business he looked after and whom he had called in his boyhood "dearest," as he called her so in his manhood. One of the girls in the office had taken his dictation when he was very busy, and had solved the mystery.

Then came a gray messenger boy with a word that left her dazed. The letter that she had dropped in the ashcan must have reached him. Over the ocean waters the steamship's wireless had thrust his brief word of love into the air, and the silent space had winged it to the city and to her door.

Then a tall man had stopped at the house, called for her, and explained that the night before he had seen her drop something into the ashcan, which a boy ahead of him had taken out and dropped into the mail box. "The unpardonable act of a mischievous boy," he called it.

Mary's reply left him mystified—her reply and the tears in her eyes. "He rescued my happiness from that ashcan."

Cats Not Mentioned in Bible.

The cat is not mentioned in the Bible, although the Israelites were long dwellers in Egypt and must have seen and known it in its most favorable habitat.

Shakespeare knew well the value of the cat, for he refers to it many times in his plays. He makes Antonio in "The Tempest" say of the proletariat that "they take suggestion as a cat laps up milk." He makes Claudio say that if Benedick had just a little more mettle than a cat he could kill care. Shylock makes reference to the cat in the trial scene, to the effect that as there is no firm reason to be rendered in the case of the "harmless necessary cat" as to why people get mad at it and hate it, so he will give no reason why he hates Antonio. Hamlet says, "Let Hercules himself do what he may, the cat will mew, the dog will have his day."

New Idea for Lighthouses.

It has been suggested that lighthouses should have warning bells under as well as above water, because in a storm sound travels farther under water than through the air. Experiments, both in England and this country, have proved that a bell struck under water can be heard at a long distance in the hold of a ship. One investigator, who has been exploring the air, has made some interesting observations on the best methods of signaling by sound. By applying a parabolic reflector to a speaking trumpet, he is able to send the waves of sound in a straight, compact beam, resembling in its directness a ray of light.

Brain Work.

Hard thinking—concentrated brain work—makes more drain on the body than hard, physical labor. It is more unnatural and less healthful.

At my club, a medical friend was telling of an experience in Philadelphia, where he formerly lived. An inventor had been offered $1,500 by a manufacturer, to perfect a new device. The inventor worked from 6 p. m. to 6 a. m., and accomplished his task. He found that during those twelve hours he had lost twelve pounds in weight.

Brain workers should get some regular physical work. Also plenty of sleep.—Los Angeles Times.

The Idealistic Attitude.

"Are you sure your ideas about politics are practical?"

"I'm not supposed to be practical," replied Senator Sorghum. "My part of the proceedings is to tell people that if they will be good they will be happy, and leave the practical details to my campaign managers."

Singing the Old Songs.

"Ah, for the old days!" sighed the old-fashioned young man. "The girls of today are not at all like our mothers used to be! I'll bet you don't know what needles are for!"

He glanced with admiration at the modern girl.

"I do, too!" she flashed. "They're a phonograph!"—Wayside Tales.

HOW

NATURE'S SYSTEM WORKS TO PROTECT THE SKIN.

—Few things are more destructive to the tissues of the human body than strong sunlight. The harm is not done by the light visible to the eyes, but by certain rays that it contains. These are called ultra-violet rays, and are quite invisible. They cause sunstroke, soreness of the eyes and blistering or inflammation of the skin.

Scientists have found that the only thing that will stop their passage is a layer of yellowish or reddish color, which acts as a kind of filter, absorbing the ultra-violet rays and allowing others to pass. Red spectacles cannot be used because red rays also are injurious to the eyes; but nature has provided the Southern race with an effective skin protector in their color, which is really not black, but a dark reddish brown.

Beneath the skins of all men is a supply of a substance known as chromogen, which, under the action of the ultra-violet rays, turns into coloring matter or pigment. The pigment has four stages—yellow (white men), dark yellow (Chinese), red (American Indians), and brown (Indians and negroes). In white men the pigment has lost much of its power to respond to the ultra-violet rays, but strong sunlight still causes the skin to protect itself by assuming the color known as sunburn. Even the freckles whose presence on her nose so worries the pretty girl are an instance of Mother Nature's protecting hand.

The pigment of negroes, however, has become so susceptible to the influence of light that even those born in cold climates are black from birth to death. Once blackness of the skin has occurred it is very persistent. If negroes settled in Lapland, it would need many thousands of years for their descendants to change their color.

MAKE USE OF POISON GAS

How Deadly Invention Has Been Utilized for the Service and Benefit of Mankind.

"A result of the war" has come to be an acceptable explanation for everything from the shortage of homes to the high price of "hooch." But the proverbial silver lining is still on the job, in one instance at least. Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering points out the savings to different government departments due to the chemical warfare service in its peacetime activities.

Developed during the war for the manufacture of poison gas, this branch of the service has turned its energies to peacetime activities and is using the same deadly fumes for the extermination of harmful insects for the agricultural department; measurement for the bureau of standards of the flow of gas in large meters used in the natural gas fields; and the destruction of locusts for the insular bureau in the Philippines and of rats in the sugar cane fields of Hawaii. The savings reported for the chemical warfare service of the army total $224,431.

Why Some Bacteria Are Useful.

Not all forms of bacteria are causes of disease. There are certain bacteria which produce changes in dead organic matter, such as rotting trees, leaves and bodies of animals, and these changes make the elements of the decaying bodies again available as food for plants. Certain bacteria, too, make the nitrogen of the air available for growing crops. Still others, which feed on the dead remains of plants or animals of the sea, are in turn eaten by larger, but still minute, forms of life. These are then eaten by still larger animals, and so on, until we get to forms of life that we can use as food ourselves, such as shrimps, fish and oysters.—Popular Science Monthly.

How to Care for Piano.

Keep a growing plant in the room and so long as your plant thrives your piano ought to, or else there is something wrong with it. Try it and see how much more water you have to put in the flower pot than in any other room. Some people keep a large vase or urn with a sopping-wet sponge in it near or under the piano and keep it moistened just as a cigar dealer keeps his stock. They keep this up while the fires are on.

How You Should Breathe.

In correct breathing, air should enter as well as leave through the nose. The lining of the nose secretes a layer of mucus which catches fine dust particles before they can enter the nostrils also filter out the coarse dust particles. Furthermore, the long, narrow nose passages warm the incoming air before it reaches the lungs.—Popular Science Monthly.

Why Geese Fly "Wedge" Shape.

Why do wild geese while flocking fly "wedge" shape? is a question asked in the nature notes. Simply because they can't fly any other way. While the flock has one general leader, each individual goose must steer for himself, and so he flies just enough out of line with the bird ahead so that he can see the course with both eyes. This throws the flock into V formation.

Increase Your Crops With a New International Manure Spreader

THE POPULARITY and fame of the International roller bearing Manure Spreader is due to one thing—and that is sheer merit. The record of this Spreader has shown that it is a highly profitable investment from all points of view. Those features which create its special value are of practical interest to every man on the farm.

1. Roller Bearings—Roller bearings at 7 points—the only spreader so equipped.
2. Double Ratchet Drive—Walking beam transmission from main axle eccentric and extra large ratchet wheel give easy, strong, steady feed. Box tapered to eliminate friction on both sides. Six feed speeds.
3. Oscillating Front axle—Auto type, permitting short turn. No pole whipping.
4. Power; Both Wheels—Power is transmitted from both ends of the rear axle—beaters and wide-spread driven from one wheel and the manure feed from the other.
5. Wheel Track—Rear wheels track with the front wheels, lightening draft.
6. Tight Bottom—There is no clogging, jamming apron, because the spreader has a tight bottom. Spreads anything.
7. Two Beaters—Two all-steel beaters with chisel-pointed square teeth work from both top and bottom of the load.
8. Wide Spread—The spiral behind the beaters give the manure a third beating, and spreads it finely and uniformly beyond the wheels.
9. All-Steel Main Frame—Wood box sides hold only the load.

Let us show you the International Manure Spreader and explain its superior features. Call on us at your first opportunity.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned.

The average man does not save to exceed ten percent of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he can not be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars.

KEYSAR.

Mr. and Mrs. George Deberry, entertained, on Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. James Fox, of Arlington; Mr. and Mrs. William Ohler and daughter, Catherine, of Taneytown; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fox, Mr. and Mrs. John Ohler and son, Mr. and Mrs. Newton Hahn and daughters, Grace and Marion, and little Edith Fox, of Baltimore.

Russell Boyd and sisters, Dorothy and Rose, of Mt. Joy, were visitors of Edgar Miller and wife, Sunday.

Misses Roseanna Seitz, Mary, Fannie and Pauline Bollinger visited Miss Ruth Stambaugh, on Sunday.

BILOUSNESS AND CONSTIPATION.

"For years I was troubled with biliousness and constipation, which made life miserable for me. My appetite failed me. I lost my usual force and vitality. Pepsin preparations and cathartics only made matters worse. I do not know where I should have been today had I not tried Chamberlain's Tablets. The tablets relieve the ill feeling at once, strengthen the digestive functions, helping the system to do its work naturally," writes Mrs. Rosa Potts, Birmingham, Ala.

MARRIED.

ROYER—MULLIGAN.

Miss Nellie Royer, daughter of Mrs. Emma E. Royer, of Westminster, and Rev. Thomas C. Mulligan, of Baltimore, were quietly married in the Chapel of Westminster Theological Seminary, Tuesday, July 11, by Dr. H. L. Elderdice.

The attendants were Miss Margaret Royer, a sister of the bride, Miss Ada Englar, of Taneytown, and Rev. Geo. Ports, of Baltimore. After the ceremony the couple left for a trip to Rockaway Beach, Long Island. Rev. Mulligan has a charge in Baltimore.

Mrs. Mulligan had been teaching for several years in the High School at Taneytown and Emmitsburg.

CHARLES HENRY REAVER.

Charles Henry Reaver died at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Reaver, near Union Bridge, on July 13, 1922, aged 2 years, 9 months, 6 days. Funeral services will be held Saturday, meeting at the house at 10:30, services at the house by Rev. W. O. Ibach, interment in Union Bridge cemetery.

Death was due to an accident in handling a hoe, the blade of the hoe fracturing the skull.

A LOVER OF PICTURES.

"Do you get much pleasure out of your splendid art collection?"

"No," said Mr. Cumrox, candidly.

"If I have any spare time I don't waste it gazing at paint and canvas. I go to see a film."

BUYING SECOND-HAND JUNK

If not every man then every other man in New York city is mad as a March hare about the desirability of owning somebody else's old junk. While he neglects to take care of what belongs to him already he sallies forth under the sway of an irresistible impulse to collect the cast-off props of another man. This is true, too, of women.

It is grossly unfair, of course, to leave the idea that what they collect so avidly and search for so earnestly is trash. Strictly speaking it isn't. Neither is it entitled to be put into the antique class. It is just old stuff, with more or less good left in it. But it seems to attract this odd portion of the populace simply because it is second hand. Are those who buy so little certain of their own sense of selection of new goods that they want something upon which the stamp of some other person's approval has already been visibly set?

If not that, why is it that junk and rummage relics do so surely find cash buyers? It is not because they are cheap, though most would say if they were asked to give a reason. Watch these collectors closely. The rummage sort of goes to their heads, and they buy and buy as long as they have money.

TAKE DELIGHT IN MANIKINS

Venetian Children Prefer Antics of Marionettes to Any Moving Picture Show.

Fashions in entertainments never change among patrons of the resourceful Tony Sarg in New York, nor yet on the shores of the Adriatic, homeland of the marionettes. The Venetian child wouldn't give a pin for movies while he has the beloved jointed manikins of his ancestors to execute their wonderful maneuvers and spout the speeches of Romeo and Juliet or one of Hans Christian Andersen's fairy tales or—yes, or—some exciting episode in the detective career of Sherlock Holmes.

Thursday afternoon is the triumphant time of the marionette all over Italy, for Thursday, not Saturday, is the school holiday, and childhood's dearest delight is to witness the drama of the dolls, a New York writer states.

Venice has the best public performance. The dolls are about four feet high. Any necessary number of characters are placed on the stage and their entrances, exits and antics are managed by the man above, who does the wire pulling and who puts the speeches into their mouths. All sorts of plays are given, and the ordinary type of Punch and Judy show is less common than fairy tales and Shakespeare on children's afternoons.

Frigate Bird's Endurance.

For pure and unadulterated impudence, lack of principle and of all virtue, the frigate bird is pre-eminent.

These birds must be endowed with prodigious powers of flight. They are often seen hundreds of miles from land, appearing as mere specks in the sky.

After hovering almost motionless for a considerable time they take flight in ever-increasing circles in the direction of their island homes, which have of necessity to be reached ere the setting of the sun, unless the faculty of sleeping on the wing is possessed by them.

I have never met or heard of a man who has seen the frigate bird rest on the waters of the ocean over which it delights to wander.

Next to the albatross, I enter the frigate bird for the aeronautic endurance stakes.—Buffalo Express.

Engineering Triumph.

By the use of out-of-the-ordinary methods engineers charged with the difficult task of enlarging the bore of a series of much-used railway tunnels were able to carry on their work without interfering with the movement of trains, which in some cases totaled sixty-seven a day. The problem of the engineers was to enlarge these passageways to a minimum width of sixteen feet on a tangent, and seventeen feet on a curve, and a minimum overhead clearance of 22 feet, and to line the bores with reinforced concrete, all work to be done without interruption of traffic. This situation was met by the construction of steel forms twenty feet in length, which were mounted on tracks of their own, so that they could be moved along as fast as the concrete had set. Instead of delivering the concrete by any of the more usual means, it was decided to deliver the concrete pneumatically, the material being blown through a pipe by machinery, located at a convenient point outside the tunnel.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

A Word for Mothers-in-Law.

A Pennsylvania preacher blames mothers-in-law for 75 per cent of the matrimonial disasters and refers to them as "mother-out-laws." We venture to say mothers-in-law and fathers-in-law have done more to prevent matrimonial shipwrecks than all the law and the gospels, asserts Capper's Weekly. The old folks know the reefs and how to steer by them, and they wish the young folks to have a prosperous and reasonably happy voyage. Mothers-in-law and fathers-in-law are the beacon lights of the matrimonial sea. They shine on every dangerous shore and certainly the world never had greater need for them than at present.

KNOW LITTLE ABOUT AMERICA

Traveler Tells of Odd Beliefs That Are Prevalent Among Even Well-Educated Europeans.

Austin Stack, minister of home affairs in the former cabinet of Eamonn de Valera, tells of some of the curious impressions regarding life in the United States still prevailing among Europeans. "Among other curious beliefs is that every one who lives in America, particularly in the Western states, must be a cowboy. I find that many people habitually refer to residents of the Far West as 'cowboys' in a figurative sense, and I suppose that accounts for part of the notions that are circulated."

Mr. Stack recounted a story told to him by a friend from Butte, Mont., who was entertaining a visitor from Europe. The visitor expected to see the streets of Butte built and peopled along the lines shown in the erstwhile popular western movie, and his best noticed that he seemed to be constantly on the lookout for some one or something.

"Finally," Mr. Stack said, "the visitor turned to his host and asked: 'But where are all the cowboys?'"

"Oh, they are never seen in the daytime," the other replied. "They are very shy. They only come out at nights, like the fairies."

And the visitor believed it, Mr. Stack claims.

WHY PEOPLE "BREAK DOWN"

Burden as a General Thing Was Not Too Heavy, but the Load Was Put on Wrong Place.

People are breaking down in health all the time. And as the business man, the housewife and the student fall by the roadside the public dolefully exclaims: "The load was too heavy!"

As a matter of fact people break down, not because the load they are carrying is too great, for in nine cases out of ten they could carry more than they are asked to, but because they don't know how to get the load on.

Dr. Joel E. Goldthwait writes in the Designer. They put the pack on in the wrong place and then the human machine is used in such a way that a great deal of their energy is required to overcome what would mechanically be called friction.

When the nation's young men and women have been taught to use their bodies correctly and are standing up straight many of the problems facing the country today will have been solved. There will be fewer instances of break-down in the mill and the office and the home. People will carry their loads easily. The development of their bodies will make it possible for them to know the fullest joy that life can give.

The Hated Profiteer.

"Everybody hates a profiteer," said Secretary Hoover at a Washington banquet, "and everybody knows where the profiteer will go to when he dies."

"A millionaire profiteer was carried off by indigestion, and his employees attended the funeral in a body. By the terms of the will the profiteer was buried in a strange manner. He wore his newest frock coat, his largest diamond ring and his costliest platinum watch. Furthermore his best cane was buried with him, and in his mouth was his newest set of teeth, the set with the gold plates."

"I understand all this business," said one of the dead profiteer's employees. "It's for show. But I can't understand about the false teeth. What's the sense of it?"

"The sense of it," said another employee, "is easy to see. How would the boss feel when he got to the weepin' and wallin' and gaspin' shop if he hadn't a fine set of teeth?"

Haughty Stare Cowed Leopard.

A planter in Tanganyika Territory, South Africa, walking along a footpath, fell into a big game pit in which a leopard had been trapped. Neither the beast nor the man could get out again, so the planter was "up against it," but remembering what he had heard of the power of the human eye, he fixed the leopard with a haughty stare.

"By this means and by making strange noises, I kept the animal at bay until a friend appeared and shot it," he said.

Others who heard of the affair, and who know the planter very well, point out that he is a lean and slender man, not likely to attract a leopard unless the latter was indeed hungry to a desperate point.

Economy.

"Now, dearie," said his wife, "let's deposit that check in the savings account and imagine we haven't got it."

"Where will I deposit this bill for the new hat you got last week and imagine I haven't got it?"—From Judge.

Loud-Speaking Reproducer.

A new dictaphone reproducer has been invented which is claimed to be far superior to present instruments of its class. The volume of sound can be altered by shifting a small lever, and increased to such a degree, it is claimed, that head receivers are not necessary.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Great Stuff.

"Gonna put Hamlet in the films?"

"Can get some great effects with the ghost."

"Huh?"

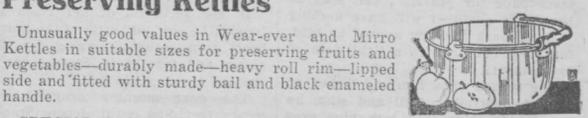

"Look at the way he can fade in and out."—Judge.

For Preserving Time. EXULT WHEN FOX IS KILLED

It is no uncommon sight in the country to encounter a poor countryman carrying a fox—dead, of course—in his arms, and calling with it on farmers and landowners in the neighborhood, says London Answers.

He usually conveys it to the back door and displays it proudly to anyone who will listen to him; then, having described graphically what a fierce and destructive animal the fox was before his death, he begs for a small gift of money.

The custom is very ancient and is called in many parts of England, "begging the fox." The idea is this: Foxes, especially in nonhunting districts, are one of the farmers' greatest enemies, and the knowledge that one of these creatures has been destroyed—especially the female fox—is indeed good news to the farmer. As a consequence, should any poor cottager be fortunate enough either to shoot or to trap a fox, he carries his victim for miles round the countryside and displays it.

He expects a reward from each farmer he visits and is very seldom disappointed. The gifts vary from sixpence to as much as 5 shillings, and one day on the road "begging the fox" can easily yield the lucky laborer 4 or 5 pounds.

The skin is also, of course, his own property, and for this he can sometimes secure as much as 25 shillings in the market of the nearest town.

BACK IN PALEOLITHIC TIMES

In Paleolithic times, before the Atlantic burst in at Gibraltar, bands of white men often came down from what is now Russia. They followed the Euxine river, along the present bed of the Aegean sea, skirting to the west of a lake that washed the shores of Crete and entered Africa near what is now Tripoli. They were savage men who carried stone axes, stone-tipped lances, and huge maces. Their eyes were blue, they had long beards, and wavy red, copper, or sandy hair. They brought their families with them, whole groups trudging on by wood and glade.

Horses to them meant only animals to be killed and eaten, never to be tamed or ridden. When one of their loved ones died the whole group stopped and together they heaped a cairn of stone and earth above the body. The custom of building funeral tumuli was common in their native Russia. That land is still dotted by innumerable burial mounds, extending eastward far into Siberia. In Egypt the kurgan grew to be the pyramid.

FOLLOW QUEER OLD CUSTOM

Good Friday Ceremonies That Have Foundations in Charity Are Still Maintained in London.

One of the queerest customs to be seen in the queer old city of London is observed on morning of Good Friday, when 21 widows of the parish pick up as many bright silver sixpences, fresh from the mint, from a flat tombstone in the churchyard and receive as many hot-cross buns.

Rahere, the founder of St. Bartholomew's, away back in the Twelfth century, who is credited with having been a merry jester in his unregenerate days, may have laughed at the continuance of a custom the origin of which nobody understands, not even the generous-hearted gentleman who hands out the sixpence and the buns, or the thankful ladies who receive them.

The custom is "ropt in mistry," as Mr. Yellowplush would say, but it goes on year by year. One story is that a lady who passed away in the earlier years of the Reformation, anxious that masses should be said for her, and knowing they could not be said publicly, left money for that purpose to be distributed every Good Friday. She hoped that the poor widows, as they picked up the sixpences from her tombstone, would offer a silent prayer on her behalf.

KNOW THAT BEFORE.

"Don't you know that the population of London is more dense than that of New York?" remarked the Englishman.

"Of course I do," replied the American. "I have often tried to make a Londoner see the point of a New York joke."

CAN'T PLAY WITHOUT FOOD.

"Let's invite the Dobb's in to-night for a game of cards."

"Dear me, no. I haven't got anything to eat in the house."

EXPANSION

"What an unusually large mouth he has."

"Yes, it reaches from ear to ear, and his ears appear to have been set back, in order to make room for it."

WHERE HE LEARNED IT.

"Goodness, gracious, where did you ever hear such language?"

"I was in the car with Pa the other day when the traffic cop bawled him out for missing his signal."

A WORDY AFFAIR.

"Senator, would you be so kind as to tell me in two words just what is behind this Shantung controversy?"

Encouraging a Bard.

"I can't use this poem of yours," said the editor of the Chiggersville Clarion.

Not Worth While.

Husband—That's a foolish habit you women have of carrying your purses in your hand when in the street.

SAD FATE

Cake of Soap—What caused Mr. Sponger's demise? Toothbrush—He was caught in a shower and before he could remove his collar and tie, he swelled up and choked to death.

Egocentric Idealism.

How oft the egoist has said In good old days of yore, "If I am warm and fully fed, Why should the world ask more?"

Ma's Suggestion.

"Mother, I got to find out something about the Philippines. Can't you help me?" "I'm too busy now, child. Better get the Bible and read St. Paul's Epistle to the Philippines."

The Modern Kick.

"My boy, John, says he gets mighty poor food down at college." "Yes? William hasn't complained yet about the food, but he says the gasoline is fierce."

NOT A PROFITABLE FAMILY

"So you've lost that family you've been attending for several years," said one doctor to another.

Worth Knowing.

"My dear," said Mr. Bibbles, "I don't want to object to your friends, but Mrs. Wopit is quite impossible."

On Duty.

"Some of those street beggars are pathetic looking objects." "Not more pathetic looking than the men who hang about the entrances to auditoriums and wait to escort their wives home from highbrow lectures.

CUPIDITY BINDS A WAY

Never.

The dietitian's broth came in, I gave a whoop, "Mother made nothing quite so thin And called it 'soup'."

Lesson in Business.

"Pop!" "Yes, my son." "What is a gardener?" "A gardener is a man who raises a few things, my boy."

The Living Present.

"Your name," exclaimed the admiring constituent, "will echo down the corridors of time." "I don't demand that much," said Senator Sorghum, much affected.

Reducing His Ego.

"What's the cause of this traffic congestion?" "A man who is the power in the community is having an argument with a traffic policeman."

Family Economy.

"So you are going to have your boy study law?" "Yes," answered Farmer Cornstossel. "Josh is always gettin' into some kind o' trouble and instead of hiring lawyers for him I might as well teach him to perfect his ownself."

SHARING THE HONORS.

Visitor—So you are going to speak a piece in school? Bobby—No; only a piece of a piece. I'm in a dialogue.

The World's Show.

I wish that taxes they would out Until the lot were ended. But I'd like to be a deadhead. But The free list is suspended.

The Modern Idea.

"The man who is always ready to seize an opportunity is great." "Yes, but the man who can seize what somebody else has made out of an opportunity is greater."

Strictly Biz.

"Party just asked to be directed to a lady barber." "After a flirtation, I suppose?" "No, this was a bearded lady."

Question.

"My rubber plant is ailing." "Well?" "Should I take it to a druggist or a florist?"

On Limitations of Leaving.

Stella—Great questions are being settled by conferences. Bella—Then why don't they hold one on how to keep cooks?

TEST OF AN INTERVIEW

"Did I report your remarks correctly?" asked the interviewer. "Yes," replied Senator Sorghum. "I expect to read them with pleasure when I get time."

Porch Swings Automatic Refrigerators Save Foods Porch Rockers

Refrigerators are not bought these days as they used to be, when all we wanted to know was whether an "ice box" was "big enough" to hold all the things we wished to chuck into it.

Today we are modern. We want to know if a refrigerator is or is NOT an "ice-cater"; we want to know if our foods will keep COLD, sweet and wholesome for the entire family; we want to know that we are getting not only the most scientifically-built but the BEST-built, and the MOST-ECONOMICAL refrigerator on the market. Also we want a "good-looking" refrigerator.

That's why we recommend The Automatic

We are also Agents for the Famous White Frost, the all-white round Refrigerator. We also handle two lower priced lines—four lines in all—so you can buy just what you want, to suit your purse.

Jim Takes His Lunch

By JANE OSBORN

© 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Aunt Sally Stone had come to spend a few months with her nephew, Jim Leroy; and therein lay advantages and disadvantages for Jim. It was pleasant to think that one of his own kind would sit across from him at dinner in the dining room of the apartment hotel where he made his home. It was not so pleasant to have to burden himself with the duty of telephoning to Aunt Sally when he would be half an hour late. It was pleasant to think that his socks would be regularly darned and that all missing buttons would be replaced on his shirts. It was not so pleasant when Aunt Sally became solicitous and inquisitive regarding Jim's matrimonial prospects. There was not a girl's picture on his bureau or desk. There were no feminine letters in the mail or in Jim's coat pockets. Nor did Jim have any evening engagements save those he explained as of business importance.

All this solicitation was tiresome. Even more tiresome did Aunt Sally become concerning Jim's lunches. She figured out from the results of persistent questioning just how much it must cost Jim to buy his lunches at a restaurant. She estimated how much this would amount to in a year. Then at breakfast one day Aunt Sally said, beaming:

"Jim, I found out that they put up lunches here for the boarders. And they don't charge for them. You know you pay for lunch whether you eat it or not. You're entitled to it. So I told the waiter to have yours put up with the rest." Then Jim saw with a sinking heart the manila paper bag, large and bulky, beside Aunt Sally's plate. "Here it is, Jim. Don't forget it."

Jim offered a few objections, but in vain. So he started off with his bag of lunch. It seemed childish to deposit it in an ashcan on the way to the subway. Besides, there was a strain of thrift in Jim's makeup that had for a moment responded to Aunt Sally's figuring. His salary did not necessitate greater economy than he now practiced, but he would at least give the plan a trial. It would give the men in the office something to tease him about.

Once He Asked Miss Baldwin.

However, the lunches did not appeal to Jim. Cheese sandwiches became rather dry and tasteless by twelve o'clock. Jim was strongly of the opinion that the lunches were put up the night before. It was not easy to eat a tough-skinned orange at his desk. The cake crumbled and he found vestiges of it among his papers all the afternoon. But Jim continued to carry his bag of lunch though he no longer ate it. Aunt Sally would be with him only a month more. He preferred not to raise any strong objection.

Jim's habit was to lay the bag of luncheon beside his desk. One day he was so busy with outside business through the first hours of the day that when he returned at about three it occurred to him for the first time that he had had no luncheon. He had no time to go then, but he was hungry, and it occurred to him that even one of those cheese sandwiches would be palatable. And that was when he noticed for the first time that his lunch bag disappeared before lunch time. Once he found crumbs on the floor. Another time the bag remained but the lunch was gone—all save the banana.

"Apparently my lunch eater does not like bananas," thought he. That was about the only clue he had to work on. The problem was really interesting. At times it troubled him to think that anyone working for the concern of which he was a junior partner and from which he drew such a satisfactory salary should be so badly paid as to be willing to eat those tasteless lunches, especially when to do so necessitated considerable stealth. Obviously the culprit—if to take a lunch that would otherwise be thrown in the trash basket was culpable—watched the door of his office carefully in order to get the lunch when he was away.

Jim studied the faces of the office boys, trying to single out the one with the bluntest most pinched expression as the probable lunch snatcher.

When he spied on the boys a little but found that they were all in the habit of lunching at a little Greek lunch counter around the corner. Never had he been known to eat in.

Once he asked Miss Baldwin, who took his dictation, whether she had any suspicions on the subject.

"Don't think," he said, "that I object at all. Whoever takes it probably knows that I don't want it anyway. I am only concerned to think that anyone working here has such a flat purse as to need such a tasteless lunch. I'd take it up with the salary committee if I thought we didn't pay enough."

Pretty Molly Baldwin looked reflectively at the end of her pencil, and her eyes were lowered. "Don't you think that there might be some one who—well, some one who had enough money to spend who still liked to be economical? She—he might be helping some one at home, or saving, or something, and so might be glad to eat the lunch that would otherwise be thrown away. It costs forty cents at least to get lunch even at a cheap place, Mr. Leroy, and forty cents a day for five days a week is two dollars, and two dollars a week for a year is a hundred dollars."

Jim was looking out of the window and really said nothing. But Molly said, "What did you say, Mr. Leroy?"

"I was saying, or, rather, thinking, that you were a girl after Aunt Sally's heart. I never knew anyone else who figured things out that way, but apparently you do, too."

Then, as there seemed to be nothing else to do, Molly left the room, or started to. As she went Jim called her back. He had always admired the girl—such a good sport in work, so efficient in her own particular duties, so even in temperament. Yes, and she was really very pretty. Aunt Sally would thoroughly approve of her.

"Did you call me back?" asked Molly, who had been standing for a moment while Jim was reflecting.

"I asked if you would go to lunch with me," said Jim, surprised at his own quick decision. "I thought we could talk over some business."

On the list of "Specials for Today" on the menu of the restaurant where Jim and Molly lunched was written "Banana Shortcake."

"Won't you have some of this?" asked Jim, pointing to the menu that Sally was studying.

"Oh!" said Molly with a little frown, "I can't endure bananas."

When Jim returned the untouched bag of lunch was standing beside his desk. His work as a detective was progressing.

Within the two weeks that followed Jim Leroy took several occasions to study his suspect. He took her to dinner, then to dinner and the theater and properly called at her house.

"As Jim expected, the confession came without grilling. It was the night Jim was taking Molly home from the theater that after many false starts and a blush or two she told Jim that she had taken the lunches. "Only I never ate the bananas," she added. "I don't like them."

"You suggested," said Jim in reply, "that possibly the lunch eater needed to save money to help support a family or to save for some good purpose. Your family does not seem in need of help. What in the world are you saving money for?"

"Every girl who works ought to have money saved to buy furniture and things," said Molly frankly. Then she stopped, wishing she had not been so frank.

"Are—are you thinking of being married?" said Jim with difficulty. "I did not know you were engaged."

"Oh, I'm not engaged—of course not," said Molly in confusion, "but most girls are eventually."

They had reached Molly's front porch by this time and Jim stayed Molly's hand before it touched the bell. He took the hand tenderly in his and watched to see whether her expression showed resentment. Seeing none, he took courage.

"Would you care—could you—do you think you'd care to become engaged to me?" And before Molly pressed the button that summoned her watchful mother to the door she had said yes to Jim's query.

Edinburgh Placed Ban on Golf.
In the fifteenth century the Scotch people were so mad over golf that parliament in Edinburgh placed a ban upon it, decreeing that the game "be utterly cryit down and nocht usit." And for half a century after that the Scottish parliament continued "pickin' on" the popular game.

Over a hundred years later the town council of Edinburgh decreed that nobody should "be sene at ony pastymes or gammis withn or without the town, upon the Sabbath day, sic as Golf, Archerie, etc." And in the Seventeenth century three guilty wretches who were caught playing golf on Sunday "in time of sermone," were condemned "evrie one of them to pay half a merk and mak yr repentance ye next Sabbath."

Where Luck Changes.
"I understand Cactus Joe held two straight flushes last night."

"He did," replied Three-finger Sam.

"Pretty lucky."

"Not a bit. One straight flush is lucky, but two in the same evening is a sure sign that you won't be invited to no more parties in Crimson Gulch."

Cause for Alarm.
"You're not eating much, Jim," said the host ironically as the guest passed his plate for the third helping.

"No," answered the other, "I've lost my appetite."

The host looked frightened. "Gee!" he explained, "I hope none of my other guests will find it."—Boston Transcript.

DREAD BAD SPIRIT

Patagonia Indians Have Peculiar "Religious" Belief.

Idea Growing Always More Powerful Has Caused the Tribe to Become Devil Worshipers.

A traveler, signing himself "H. H. P.," who has been journeying in Patagonia, at the extremity of South America, tells the following, peculiar story, observes the Montreal Family Herald.

It is the hour before sunrise on the pampas. To all sides stretch the waving steppes of coarse grass. In the center of the scene are five toddlers, the skin dwellings of the nomadic Tehuelche Indians of Patagonia, the tallest race on earth, pitched not far from the slow-flowing stream.

As the light strengthens, and almost at the same moment, from each tent there issues an Indian, bearing in his hand a newly lighted torch. He dashes with screams and shouts to the back of his tent, waving the torch and making as if he would drive somebody away.

And the "somebody" whom he is attempting to drive away is the Guallichu, the spirit of evil.

Of course, the interesting thing is to consider how such a custom arose. The Tehuelche religion is quite simple. There is a good spirit and a bad spirit. The good spirit made all the meat and fat-bearing animals for the food of his people, but having made this effort he turned over in the great cave where he lives in the mountains and slept.

But the Guallichu was of a different temperament—he stayed awake and he set all the evil animals to plague the Indians.

Thus far we can trace no belief. Beyond that it is a more serious matter. More and more terrible grew the stories that were told of the Guallichu's power and more and more did he gain ascendancy over the lives of the more imaginative Indians, until at last they became devil worshipers, and their whole lives were made up of an attitude of terror toward this dreadful power.

Every strange footprint which the Indians saw they put down to the Guallichu. When the glaciers layed in the mountains and flung their ice upon the waters of the upland lakes the Indians said, "It is the Guallichu who is groaning in the mountains."

And so they became a race of devil worshipers. It is probable that most devil worship has had a beginning of this kind. Here we have a people cleanly and kindly, whose imaginations became warped by the contemplation of the spirit of evil.

The savage as a rule is not in any way imaginative—he needs something from the outside to make him so—the darkness, great storms, the black forest clinging upon the mountains—these things excite in him unusual thoughts, and as sure as they do so surely does devil worship begin to creep in.

Generally when devil worship begins there are to be found individuals who claim the priesthood of the devil. Curiously enough, this has never been the case among the Tehuelches—their attitude toward the Guallichu is perfectly sound. They drive him away if they can and they propitiate him if they can, but in neither performance do they call in the aid of the witch doctor.

Large "Freight" Airplane.

A freight airplane whose "hold" is large enough for freight trucks to be wheeled about inside for loading and unloading has been designed for use on the London-Continental airways. This airplane has many unique features. The body of the machine actually breaks in two when loading, the rear-half with the rudder and tail plane folding back at right angles to the "hold," thus providing a door the full size of the machine. The back of the "hold" is hinged and lets down, forming a gangway up which laden goods trolleys can be wheeled right into the airplane. It has been designed by Mr. Folland, of the Gloucestershire Aviation company, designer of the machine which won last year's Aerial Derby, and recently flew at a speed of 212 miles an hour. The top wing is so thick that sufficient petrol and oil to supply the airplane's 360-horse-power engine for a 600-mile flight can be stored in tanks inside the wing. When loaded the freight airplane will weigh two and a half tons and will be capable of flying at 104 miles an hour.

Golf Ball Insurance.

The beginner at golf, although he may not be able to drive his ball very far, generally gets it into the rough sooner or later and manages to lose a good many of the expensive little spheres.

At one of the country clubs near New York the caddie master is doing a nice little business insuring balls. For 50 cents he agrees to replace with balls in good condition any that are lost. His caddies are well trained, and in most cases he comes out ahead, for he gives his patrons second-hand balls which have been found on the links and repainted. Their cost, to him is practically nothing.—New York Sun.

Flighty, What.

Galey—What's that frock made of, Ida?

Mrs. Galey—Airplane silk, old dear. Don't you think it enhances my loveliness?

SIEGFRIED'S SWORD IN BERLIN

Weapon Had Long Been in German Capital, Though the Hero Was Really a Belgian.

The theft of the sword from the statue of Siegfried in Berlin raises the question. What has Berlin to do with Siegfried's sword or with Siegfried himself? That hero was no Prussian, but rather a Belgian—at any rate, a Netherlander—and it was a Burgundian princess that he married. In his day the Burgundians were an obscure tribe and scarcely heard of in Burgundy and along the Rhine.

Moreover, the difference in character makes it hopelessly incongruous for the Prussians of today to exploit Siegfried as one of their national heroes. Hagen of Troneje would be more fit, chosen at the moment when he treacherously murders Siegfried, when he steals Kriemhilde's fortune or when he brutally slays the infant Ortlieb. But Siegfried was honorable, Siegfried was brave. Siegfried was chivalric, Siegfried was not a Hohenzollern.

To exploit Siegfried and his Balming as emblematic of Prussia, or indeed of the Germany of today, is gross impertinence perhaps. It is well that the sword is gone. The statue itself should follow it into retirement from a place where it does not belong.—New York Tribune.

Now Believe London Is Dead.

The Danes are at last convinced that Jack London is dead. A rumor had been widely circulated among them to the effect that the American author was living a secluded life on a South sea island and would not emerge until he had finished a momentous novel. A young Dane returned to Copenhagen the other day, fresh from San Francisco. He said he had taken a walk with Mrs. Jack London, near the London's California home. Coming to a boulder, he leaped over it. Mrs. London said: "Do you know what you have just done?" The Dane confessed his ignorance. "You have jumped over my husband's grave," she said. The Dane apologized for his seeming lack of respect, took the next train for South Brooklyn, and embarked on the Oscar II for the Danish capital, where he related his experiences. Jack London's Danish publisher, Herr Martin, said: "I never did quite believe that rumor."—New York Evening Post.

And Now the "Finale-Hopper."

That section of Manhattan called the Acropolis of America, extending from Riverside drive to Morningside Park, has a new designation for ultra-modern girls—"finale-hoppers." They are the young women who are a year ahead of the present or think they are doing now what the rest of their sex will be doing at some time in the future.

A finale-hopper is never in style. She is a trailblazer, a pathfinder. She anticipates style. As soon as what she is doing is taken up and adopted by the crowd she drops it and turns to something else that is absolutely new. That applies to music, art, dancing, dress and even slang. She is ever on the still hunt for anything fresh that has never before been done or known.—Raymond G. Carroll, in the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Improving on Nature.

I plucked an autumn leaf in the park and took it to the studio. Showing it to the man with the wonderful relatives, I said: "How's that for an imitation leaf made out of a very fine grade of leather?" "Le-seeit!" asked the man with the wonderful relatives. Passing his fingers over the tinted surface, he remarked: "My uncle used to make imitation leaves." "I suppose," I queried, "that they were much better than this one?" He looked at me in pity and sneeringly said: "I'll say they was!"—Exchange.

Valuable Weather Predictions.

Forecasts recently issued by the British meteorological office predicted ten days of fair weather, probably a record for long distance weather prediction in England. No doubt wireless figured largely in this innovation, which, if found to be tolerably reliable, promises much for the agriculturist and others.—Scientific American.

Fast, Clean Threshing Is the ONLY Cheap Threshing

Time is valuable at threshing time. You want to get through with the job with the least loss of time to your men, horses and machinery. Advance-Rumely's 80 years' experience in building threshing machinery assures you of the best as well as the speediest threshing machinery built.

Here Is What You Need—

Rumely IDEAL

Saves thousands of dollars for farmers every threshing season. Due to features perfected after 80 years of Rumely Ideal service, it does a clean job. Nothing is left in the grain to cause dockage. Fast; has big capacity; easy to operate; serves for a lifetime; and needs uncommonly few repairs.

We will gladly go to any reasonable lengths you may suggest to explain and demonstrate the unusual features of these superior machines.

The Oil Pull engine operates hour after hour at the same steady work-devouring speed. Operates on lowest fuel cost—at lowest upkeep cost. Average life over ten years. Engine never overheats. No time lost refilling radiator or because of overheated engine. Guaranteed to burn cheap kerosene successfully under all conditions and at all loads up to full rated brake horse power.

LESSON FOR JULY 16

THE HANDWRITING ON THE WALL.

LESSON TEXT—Dan. 5:1-31.
GOLDEN TEXT—God will bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil.—Ecc. 12:14.
REFERENCE MATERIAL—Gen. 19:1-28; Exod. 14:21-31; Ezek. 31:1-14; Acts 12:20-23.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Daniel Tells the King of His Wrong-Doing.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Belshazzar's Feast and Fate.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How to Enforce the Judgment Against Strong Drink.

I. Belshazzar's Impious Feast (vv. 1-4).

1. Who attended (vv. 1, 2). Belshazzar, his wife and concubines and a thousand of his lords.
2. Behavior thereat (vv. 3, 4). (1) They drank wine; they engaged in revelry. (2) They committed sacrilege. In their drunken revelry they drank wine out of the sacred vessels which had been taken out of the temple, of the house of God, which was at Jerusalem. When men are under the influence of intoxicating liquors they lose all regard for sacred things. (3) They worshipped idols. They prayed to gods of gold and silver, of brass, of iron, wood and stone.

II. The Handwriting on the Wall (vv. 5-16).

1. The time of (v. 5). It occurred in the same hour in which they were engaged in their drunken revelry.
2. The effect upon the king (v. 6). He was greatly disturbed; he was seized with consternation. "The joints of his loins were loosed, and his knees smote one against another."

3. The king's behavior (vv. 7-16).

(1) He called forth astrologers and soothsayers, offering rewards of gold and position (v. 7-8). Their utter inability to interpret the writing left the king even worse perplexed. (2) Daniel brought at the suggestion of the queen (vv. 10-16). The queen here was perhaps the wife of Nebuchadnezzar who remembered Daniel's service in interpreting his dream. For that reason he was sent for and promised great reward.

III. Daniel Interprets the Writing (vv. 17-28).

1. Daniel's address to the king (vv. 17-24). He brushes aside his promised gifts (v. 17). He would not have his speech limited by the king's gifts. 2. The interpretation of the writing (vv. 25-28). (1) "Mene" means "numbered" (v. 26). "God hath numbered thy kingdom and finished it." (2) "Tekel" means "weighed" (v. 27). "Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting." (3) "Peres" means "divided" (v. 28). "Thy kingdom is divided, and given to the Medes and Persians."

IV. The Judgment Executed (vv. 29-31).

In that night was Belshazzar slain and Darius the Mede took the kingdom.

The Chaldean dynasty ended with Belshazzar. So we may interpret this whole scene as pointing to the conditions at the close of the times of the Gentiles and as adumbrating the prevailing conditions. Let us note:

1. The stupidity of men. They, like people today, would not learn by example. Nebuchadnezzar's fate should have deterred Belshazzar from such frivolity.
2. The magnificent splendor. This great feast was characterized by pomp, display, parade. How characteristic of this age!

3. Luxury. The famous hanging gardens of Babylon were a noteworthy example. Signs of luxury today are on every hand.
4. Licentiousness. The king with his wives and concubines. This is notoriously prevalent today.

5. Blasphemous sacrilege. And may not the sacrilege of today be in excess of theirs, expressing itself in (1) a profession of religion for pecuniary gain, social and political preferment; (2) use of the pulpit and of the ministry for display and notoriety, even for the propagation of false doctrine; (3) uniting with the church, attending the communion, so as to cover up secret sins; (4) the use of the Word of God to give point to a joke; (5) denying that the Bible is God's Word, making it a book of errors, myths and legends; (6) sneering at the Virgin birth, repudiating Christ's deity and setting aside His vicarious atonement.
6. Drunken carousals. The handwriting is on the wall. God will not endure this forever: His judgment shall fall. Conditions in the world indicate that the time is drawing near. Are you ready?

Aspiration.
What we truly aspire to be, that in some sense we are. The mere aspiration, by changing the frame and spirit of the mind, for the moment realizes itself.—Mrs. Jameson.

Binds Volume of the Week.
Sunday is the golden clasp that binds together the volume of the week.—Longfellow.

Injuries.
Slight small injuries and they become none at all.—Palmer.

THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

From Moody Bible Institute Monthly Chicago, Ill.

July 16
Aarnest, or Triflers
Amos 6:1-8; Ecclesiastes 12:13; Matthew 12:36

We are not concerned with triflers in the world, but triflers in the church those who have preferred the name of Christ, but have never taken the matter seriously. Inasmuch as there seem to be many of this kind, we may well seek for the cause or causes. The three passages given for the Scripture reading will help us at this point; in fact, they show clearly the reasons why triflers exist.

1. They have no sense of need. In the words of Amos, they are not grieved for the affliction of others. Possibly the need of others is not known. It may be that the triflers have never heard that in this world of ours more than one-half of the people have not heard the name of Jesus, or, having heard, they have forgotten that there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby they must be saved. Ignorance of facts and decay of faith largely account for the absence of that sense of need without which there can be no earnestness of purpose or of endeavor.
2. They have no sense of duty. The passage in Ecclesiastes speak of this. It sums up the whole duty of man in the words "fear God and keep His commandments." The true children of God must assume this as a duty. In so doing they will find the task to be a delight. "His commandments are not grievous." Although we are under grace and not under law, yet we are under the lawgiver of whom it is written, "He worketh in you both to will and work for his good pleasure."
3. The sense of accountability to God. There is a day of judgment. See and weigh carefully the last of our three Scriptures. This of itself should fortify against the sin of trifling. The matter of judgment is not a mere theological idea. It is a fact asserted by Him who never trifled. Let us face frankly the statement of Scripture, "Every one of us shall give account of himself to God."

CROMWELL HAD LIGHTER SIDE

Incident Recorded of Him Seems to Prove That He Could Enjoy a Practical Joke.

It is told of Oliver Cromwell, the English leader and soldier, that he had a great love of fun, which he would indulge often at the expense of others, according to the impulse of the moment. An example of this trait is shown in the following incident. Cromwell had a very beautiful daughter, and at the time he came into power in England one of his attendants took a fancy to this young lady. One day Cromwell went into his daughter's room and was surprised to see his page on his knees making a declaration of his love to his daughter. "What does this mean?" demanded Cromwell.

How to Make Discoveries.

"Never refuse to see what you do not want to see or which might go against your own cherished hypothesis or against the views of authorities. These are just the clues to follow up, as is also and emphatically so the thing you have never seen or heard of before. The thing you cannot get a pigeonhole for is the finger point showing the way to discovery." This advice to scientists and others was given in a lecture by Sir Patrick Manson, the celebrated British physician who discovered that malaria is caused by mosquitoes. Sir Patrick died a few weeks ago.

How France Honors Actors.

Election to the Comedie Francaise is the highest honor that can be paid an actor. It is an association of French actors devoted to producing French stage classics. Twenty-four members or "associates" divide the profits, half of which are received in cash and the other half invested against the time when they retire. Forty "pensionnaires" work on salary until such time as they are made associates. The company receives a subsidy of $50,000 a year from the French government.

Punishment.

She was only three years old, but she was very vain. After all, age has little to do with vanity. Her governess found her the most difficult of the three children to manage, and the whole family was surprised when they discovered that the young girl who was hired to wheel the baby out in the park could manage her as easily as if she were a model child.

Books Centuries Old.

Some of England's oldest art treasures, from Durham cathedral's monastic library, were recently brought to London and placed on view at the Victoria and Albert museum. Most of the work in northern English of the earlier Anglo-Irish schools of Lindisfarne and Durham, and the examples of calligraphy and illumination range in dates from the Seventh to the Fourteenth century. Among the manuscripts are two traditionally attributed in the Middle Ages to the venerable Bede, but this ascription is not now accepted. There are, also, several of the books given to the monastery by the Bishops William de St. Carlisle (1080-1096) and Hugh de Pulsey (1154-1195). Three of the four volumes of Pusey's Bible, as one of the most splendid in existence, are included in the exhibit.

Why Children Need Sunshine.

The medical research council finds that the metabolism of children exposed to sun and air at the Trelliar hospital is nearly 40 per cent above that of children kept within doors, says the Scientific American; also that at the seaside the body heat production is increased five times by paddling along the shore, and from eight to ten times by swimming.

Why It Won't Work.

Lord Robert Cecil has introduced a bill in parliament to extend the vote to women under thirty. The attention of the authorities has been drawn to the extraordinary fact that there are practically no women in the country between the ages of thirty and forty.—Punch, London.

WHY Visitors to East India Sometimes Offend Caste Pride

In the face of the debasing beggary one meets with at every turn in India, the inviolate pride of caste offers constant surprises. A man who would beg bakshish from you with whining servility would scorn to accept food polluted by your touch. He would throw it away if your shadow had contaminated it. I remember a wonderful morning at Benares when I was being rowed up and down the Ganges at that early golden hour when thousands of pilgrims from all over India crowd the steps leading down to the river, singing religious songs as they cast garlands of orange flowers out upon the breast of Mother Ganga, and descend and immerse themselves in her sacred water. As our boat glided along close to the bank, I saw a holy man with Ganges mud smeared over his face, sitting cross-legged in a little temple and eating rice out of a brass bowl. He happened to glance up, and with an expression of startled horror seized his bowl and jumped back to the farther end of his narrow stone shelf. It was only then I noticed the shadows of the rowers and myself passing horizontally across the floor where he had been sitting. On another occasion, the very courteous English resident of the native state of Jaipur was taking me through the Jaipur model prison. When he came to inspect the kitchen arrangements, the Indian superintendent pointed out that one end was partitioned off so that the food of the high caste prisoners might be cooked apart from that of the others. Even then, it had to be carried through the same court, and so a man always walked ahead, sprinkling the ground with sacred Ganges water in order to insure purification.—Gertrude Emerson in Asia Magazine.

WHERE COMPASS IS AT FAULT

The ordinary magnetic compass has one great fault; its needle does not point to the north pole, but is always some distance to one side or the other of the true North line. Further, this deviation varies from year to year, and it is seldom the same in any two parts of the world. This kind of compass, too, is liable to be upset if there are metals or magnetic substances in its neighborhood. The latest instrument carried by all great ships is called the gyro-compass. It consists for the most part of a heavy wheel turned at very high speed by an electric motor. The axle of the wheel is so mounted that it can turn in any direction. If its axle can swing on its mounting, a heavy wheel rotating at high speed will point always in the same direction. The gyro-compass is set while the ship is in harbor, and no matter how much the ship rolls, or what turns she makes, its wheel remains faithful to its original direction. Owing to its jointed mounting it does not follow the movements of the ship.

How to Make Discoveries.

"Never refuse to see what you do not want to see or which might go against your own cherished hypothesis or against the views of authorities. These are just the clues to follow up, as is also and emphatically so the thing you have never seen or heard of before. ### THEY ENJOY THE GAME.

There is a vast amount of psychology manifested in the buying-away-from-home habit; but the mere matter of mind side—is not often considered. The most people think it "good business" to shop around, especially to other towns, and never think that the people in these "other towns" are doing the same thing, and they are no doubt just as sure they "save money" by it.

There is a group of people who regularly go from Smithtown to Podunk—10 to 15 miles—to buy. One might easily think that the Podunk folks are mighty fortunate in having such good stores, and such low prices, and are saved the time and expense of going away? But, isn't it funny? The Podunk folks are just as sure that it pays them to go 20 miles to Yorktown and they go, and are no doubt happy. Does this end the hunt? No the Yorktown expert buyers go to Eureka, and the Eureka wise ones to Parisburg, and there is no end to the hunt.

Largely, this is the sort of mind-play that causes the bargain hunters to employ lots of time. We do not say "lose time" because buying is largely a pleasure. Women folks, especially, will fuss over it, and opinionize excitedly about prices, and profits, and assortments—but, they like it. Really, it isn't so much saving, or thought of saving, that influences the buy-away folks, as it is the playing at the game.

Then, there is the following along the same idea, by those who help Uncle Sam to run the Postoffice business by contributing to Postoffice revenue—more psychology acting on the brain through picture description, and pleasurable imagination and anticipation. Well, somebody is pretty sure to be mistaken in the ways of playing the game for somehow the one sure place for matchless bargains, and the acme of satisfaction, has never yet been agreed on.

There "ain't no such place" but many folks like the make-believe of playing at finding it.

TANEYTOWN LOCALS

Brief Items of Local News of Special Interest to Our Home Readers.

Miss Grace Arthur, of York, spent several days last week with her cousin, Mrs. John Hockensmith.

The Record has a copy of the latest Webster's International Dictionary, that can be used for reference at any time, by any one who calls at our office.

Mrs. Chas. H. Mayers, of Littlestown, and daughter, Mrs. Margaret Hart, of Rochester, N. Y., spent Wednesday on a visit to relatives in Taneytown.

Mrs. Ida B. Koontz, of Philadelphia, is visiting friends and relatives in this vicinity, and does not expect to return to Philadelphia before September 1.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wright, of Philadelphia, and Mr. and Mrs. John Cox, of Washington, were recent visitors at the home of Mrs. Stott and Miss Anna Galt.

Mrs. Kyle, wife of Dr. Allan Kyle, the noted surgeon of Houston, Texas, and Mrs. Gallagher, of Baltimore, are summering at Linden Farm with Mr. and Mrs. George Clabaugh.

Fern Hitchcock batted a ball out of the grounds, at Laurel, Del., on Monday, making a home run. Unfortunately, the bases were empty and his team lost the game, 2 to 1.

Russel Frock, of the Hoffman Orphanage, son of Albert Frock, Gettysburg, Pa., underwent an operation for appendicitis, Monday, at the Annie M. Warner Hospital, and is doing very well.

All who want Advertising Fans for the Carroll County Fair, should place their order this coming week. Our prices are based on mass orders, and a single freight shipment. Late special orders will be charged with expressage.

Mrs. David A. Warner and daughters, Grace and Mary Elizabeth, spent the past week-end with her father and family, Samuel Clingan, Jerry Clingan, of Kump, and Mrs. Sophia Clingan, Taneytown, also spent Sunday at the same place.

Miss Ada R. Englar attended the wedding of Miss Nellie Royer and Rev. Thomas C. Mulligan, in Westminster, on Tuesday, an account of which appears elsewhere in this issue. Mrs. Mulligan was a popular teacher in Taneytown High School, several years ago.

Wheat has been coming to this market, this week. It is generally inferior in quality; small in the grain and light in weight, averaging about 56 lbs. It is mostly free from cockle and garlic, but for some reasons not known did not mature.

The assessors have commenced their work. Our understanding is that they will assess real estate, and that owners of personal property will assess themselves, under oath, through the use of blanks. The last assessment was in 1917.

Lewis Harbaugh, of Hagerstown, aged 22 years, was drowned last Sunday afternoon in Antietam creek, having been stricken with cramps while in mid-stream. He was an expert swimmer. Medical men say that bathing, after eating a full meal, is very dangerous. A large number of like drowning cases have been reported, this Summer.

A lady reader suggests that The Record pursue a campaign for a reduction of the mosquito pest. The mosquitoes themselves are giving, nightly, all the evidence required; and no campaign that we might pursue would likely represent more than wasted effort. We have tried such experiments, many times, and know. The trouble is, the enforcement of the necessary restrictive, or clean-up, measures, would make some folks angry; then those engaged in enforcing the measure, might "lose business" "Rah for the skeeters!"

As Geo. K. Duttera and daughter, Miss Virgie, were driving in their car on the Emmitsburg road, last Saturday, the car was struck at Mrs. David Vaughn's place by a passing car carrying license No. 126-656 and thrown off the road against Mrs. Vaughn's fence. The car contained five persons and was driven by a woman. It struck the hub of the front wheel of the Duttera car, and as a result of the collision with the fence the windshield was broken. The passing car, as is often the case, cut around too short. Mr. Duttera was liberal, and accepted $10.00 in settlement of the damage to his car. Fortunately, both cars were running moderately, or more serious damage would have resulted.

Miss Arella Arnold, of Westminster, spent a few days with Miss Eva Demmitt, near town.

For several weeks, measles have been moderately prevalent in town, among children.

Mrs. Susan Naill, wife of Frank Naill, died June 29 in her 79th year, at Bentonville, Arkansas. She was a sister of Mrs. H. D. Hawk.

Wednesday was the hottest day of the Summer, with the mercury between 95° and 100°, and Thursday was a good second, at a few degrees less.

Elias O. Grimes, who died on Wednesday, in Westminster, was well known to some of our old citizens. As a boy, he lived some time with Henry Reindollar.

A game of baseball will be played on the Taneytown ground, on Saturday, with the Hanover Boys' Club. Next Wednesday, the Union Bridge Club will play, also on the home ground.

Hauling stone for the Keysville road commenced on Friday. The section of road from the Taneytown and Keymar road to the Middleburg district line, is to be surfaced with crushed stone, likely with the idea or ultimately improving the road on to Deatur.

Taneytown 8—Hanover 1.

Taneytown won an easy game, last Saturday, over Hanover Wire Cloth. The visitors were clearly outclassed but played with the gentlemanly spirit that marks all of the Hanover teams playing here. The visitors made a fine triple play in the 3rd. inning, and two doubles in the game, but their pitcher was weak. No less than 7 were given base on balls, once with the bases full forcing in a run, while Mart Hitchcock, who pitched the first inning, had 1 strike out, Bousack 10, and Fuss 1 in the last inning. The Hanover pitcher failed to score a strikeout. The score was:

Taneytown 4—Westminster 2.

Almost perfect fielding by the home team, and numerous errors by the visitors—chiefly wild throws—enabled Taneytown to defeat Westminster, on Wednesday, 4 to 2. Shaeffer, of Reisterstown, pitched for Taneytown, Bousack playing at second base, and for 6 innings was very effective. In the 7th, the visitors found the ball, and scored two runs, and in the 8th, were given two passes to first, when Bousack relieved Shaeffer and at once proceeded to seal up the game by striking out three men, and blanking the score for the 8th and 9th.

Westminster was strongest in batting, but lost this advantage in errors. Had it not been for the latter, the game might have stood 2 to 1 in favor of the visitors. Notwithstanding the great heat, the grand-stand was crowded and there was a good sized crowd back of the wires. The score was:

There were two men named Brown in a certain village. One lost his wife and the other a boat at the same time.

The vicar's wife called, as she supposed on the bereaved Mr. Brown.

"I am so sorry to hear of your great loss," she said sympathetically.

A Real Mental Test.

We heard a little story the other day which we would like to see tried on those mental efficiency fellows. If cleverly introduced it might take some of them down a peg. A group of clubmen were talking and the subject of dreams came up. Presently one said, "I remember reading of a dream so vivid that it was fatal to the dreamer. A man dreamt that he was living in the days of the French Revolution and was one of the victims led to the guillotine. When his turn came and the big knife descended, the shock to his nervous system was so great that it killed him; he never woke up."

This brought out various exclamations, such as "Most remarkable!" etc, but not one of the listeners discovered the flaw in his story. He waited a few minutes and then said: "Well, boys, you're a smart lot, I must say, to swallow that yarn. How in the world could anyone know what that man had been dreaming about if he never woke up?"—Boston Transcript.

Table Manners.

A Texas father was dining with his son in a Texas hotel, and in the course of dinner the son got into an argument with a cowboy. The cowboy called the son and offensive name, and the young fellow grabbed his knife in his fist and started around the table to be avenged.

But his father seized him by the coat-tails. "Ain't ye got no table manners?" the old man hissed. "But, pop, ye heered what he called me, didn't ye?" "Yes, I heered all right, but that ain't no ground for yer forgettin' yer table manners. Put down that knife and go at him with yer fork."—Detonator.

Tree Fruit Prospects.

College Park, July 10, 1922—Tree fruit prospects in Maryland and Delaware were a good deal better at the close of June than a month ago, notwithstanding the "June drop" was heavy in some of the best-producing counties of both States.

Because of the frosts late in April, a very short crop of the major fruits was looked for in these States, especially in northeastern, northern and Western Maryland counties, where fruit in the valleys and lowlands sustained heavy frost damage. In southern Maryland and on the Eastern Shore and in Delaware, tree fruits generally are turning out somewhat better than expected, though nearly all of these crops will be considerably below average. Pears are particularly short in both States.

According to estimates made by the Crop Reporting Board of the United States Department of Agriculture, based on a large number of growers' reports of an average date of July 1, the prospects are summarized for Maryland.

Apples: Condition about 45 percent of a normal, or full crop, forecasting a probable production of about 1,373,000 bushels against 225,000 last season and 2,161,000 bushels, the average production for the last ten years (1912-1921). A commercial crop of about 229,000 barrels is in sight.

Peaches: Condition about 45 percent of a normal, forecasting a probable production of about 412,000 bushels against 59,000 last season and 679,000 bushels, the average production for the last ten years (1912-'21).

Pears: Condition about 45 percent of a normal forecasting about 224,000 bushels against 35,000 last season and 412,000 bushels, the average of production for the last ten years (1912-1921).

The Weather and Crops.

The temperature for the week ending Tuesday, July 11, was slightly below normal, with no day of excessive heat. Sunshine was near the normal, although showers occurred on several days. Rainfall this month to date has been excessive, especially during the first five days, and thrashing is being delayed. The wet weather has caused slight damage to wheat in shock; numerous reports of sprouting have been received.

The weather of the week was excellent for the growth of crops, especially corn, potatoes, pastures, gardens, and truck crops. Fields are as green as in the Spring of the year.

Corn has made rapid growth, and is exceptionally large for this date. It is generally in excellent condition in all counties, and some is tasseling. Oats are being cut on the Eastern Shore. They are ripening rapidly and harvest is beginning west of Chesapeake Bay, except in Allegany and Garrett Counties, where they are heading and filling.

Digging of early potatoes continues in southern counties. Early tomatoes continue to ripen; some scald reported. Late planted tomatoes are in bloom or fruiting.

J. H. SPENCER, Sec. Director.

Marriage Licenses.

A Way to Save Him.

Willy is a little scamp. He goes from one piece of mischief to another so fast that his mother is worn out and nervous from the strain of continually extricating him from his predicaments. The last straw was an incident that occurred while they were visiting at grandma's.

Was it mischief or just curiosity that led Willy to stick his head between two rods of the banister? It was when Willy tried to get his head out and couldn't that the trouble commenced. He raised his voice (and the neighborhood). The entire household rushed to his rescue—mother leading, with grandma a close second. They tried in every way possible to extricate the boy's head, but without success. It must have expanded during the moments of its imprisonment.

When grandma, with her usual presence of mind, ordered, "Get me a saw, quick!" mother broke down completely: "Oh, grandma, will we have to cut his head off?" "No," answered "gran," calmly, "Just the banister rod."—Chicago Journal.

English Archbishops.

There are but two archbishops of the Established Church of England in England—the archbishop of Canterbury and the archbishop of York. The former is the first peer of England next to the royal family, and has the title of his grace given to him, and likewise most reverend father in God. He is styled lord primate of all England and metropolitan. The archbishop of York has precedence of dukes and great officers of state, except the lord chancellor. He is called his grace and most reverend father in God, and styled primate of England and metropolitan. The archbishop of Canterbury has a stipend of $15,000 ($75,000 a year), and the archbishop of York one of $9,000 ($45,000).
