INTERESTING LETTER FROM DETROIT.

Comment on Foreigners, Politics and Prevailing Prices.

Almost every time I get the Record, I run across something, either in the news or editorial section, about which I feel like saying something. For instance, France's effort to be re-elected to the Senate, the Bonus, baseball, and a dozen other things. But I do not intend to say anything about any of these things except the first, and very little about that. If I were back in Maryland, I should surely be against France. It makes a man who formerly lived in Maryland, feel ashamed that he ever did so, when he reads of his actions, and my hope is that he will be badly beaten, if not at the primaries, then at the election.

One of the things that was new to me when we first came to Detroit, was the presence here of so many foreigners, as we had back there, only one in the whole neighborhood, a Russian who lived at Wm. Flickinger's I think. But from the very start, we had to associate and deal with persons who could speak very little English or none at all. When I bought our first home, on Newport Avenue, it was from two Belgians, and when I started to work, in the gang of maybe two dozen, there were English, Scotch, Germans, French, Irish, Swedes, Norwegians, Austrians, a Jew, Serbs, Poles, Italians, and maybe a few more nationalities that I have forgotten.

The Serbs were the most numerous and you could always tell they were about, at lunch time, by the odor of garlic, which was so strong it almost made a person not used to it feel ill. The man who "broke me in" as they call learning a new job, was a Swede, and I had a hard time catching on to what he was saying, and told my foreman so, when he put an Englishman in his place, and I am sorry to say, I could not understand him as well as I did the Swede, as he was a genuine Yorkshire man.

A person soon gets used to these things, however, and now we can manage to understand nearly all of them, except when they are too green. There are thousands of good American citizens in Detroit, with names that are unpronounceable, by a native American, of English descent, and a person hearing them spoken by their friends, would be prepared to swear that they are rank foreigners. The ancestors of these good Americans, came from the old country, maybe fifty or more years ago, but the old name still remains. It is true that numbers of them have had their names changed by the Courts, but these are the exceptions and not the rule. So when that list of drafted boys was sent to the Record, during war times, it did not mean that they were all foreign born, nor did the one recently published in the Record as violators of the prohibition laws.

We are having real summer weather just now, today being one of the most uncomfortable days we have had this year. There is one consolation, the season is not so long and usually a few weeks of hot weather is all we get. There are several months of pleasant weather, and a good long winter. But when hot weather comes there are plenty of ways to get away from it, if you can afford it, boat rides, auto trips, the numerous parks, or a summer camp along the river or by some lake—or you can stay at home, and grin and bear it. Next winter, you may be sure that you will forget all about the heat of this summer, and wish for the return of the "good old Summer-time."

Work is still keeping up, and the usual July and August slump has not as yet begun. In fact it seems as if the factories are getting busier, and this in spite of the coal strike, or that of the railroad men. The coal dealers are still stocked up nearly full, and the factories have not pulled much on their reserve stocks. People have not yet begun to buy for the winter, in spite of the efforts of the dealers to have them do so. As to the railroad strike, it is so new yet for us to notice any difference, and business goes on the same as before.

Farmers out here have just begun to cut their wheat, as we noticed last evening on a trip to Mt. Clemens. The difference in the climate makes our harvest 2 or 3 weeks later than yours in Maryland. I notice that the corn does not get as high as back there, and while it matures, the shorter season causes it to grow much smaller, five feet being some height to brag about.

For miles around Detroit, truck farming takes the lead, and judging from the prices they charge for their produce, it must be a paying business. The following prices will give you some idea of what it costs to live out here, although the prices of the absolute necessities of life are not so high. The grocers and hucksters ask 50c a quart for raspberries, and 35c for black ones. Peaches are two quarts for 25c; blackberries, 25c; cherries, 25 and 30c; green corn, 75c and $1.00 a dozen ears. Other luxuries are in proportion. They say that cherries are so plentiful in the fruit country in the north, that they are going to waste, yet we must pay 25c a quart, or go without.

The prospect is for a bumper apple crop, but I suppose prices will be high in spite of this. Two years ago,

MR. ZOUCK A CANDIDATE.

A "Dry" Democrat Will Enter the Primary Contest.

Frank H. Zouck, former chairman of the State Roads Commission, and a resident of Reisterstown, in answer to a numerously signed petition, has announced his candidacy for nomination as Representative in Congress on the Democratic ticket, in this district. One of his leading supporters is John B. Black, Master of Maryland State Grange. Other candidates in the field—all against prohibition—are Carville, D. Benson, Millard F. Tydings, and George D. Iverson, Jr.

Mr. Zouck's reply to the petition was as follows:

"Your letter, in which you request me to become a candidate for the House of Representatives on the behalf of good government, received. I take it that you mean by good government the support of the Constitution with all its amendments, specially the Eighteenth, as well as the enforcement of what is known as the Volstead act. When the 18th Amendment was adopted it sounded the death-knell of the saloon.

Since the abolition of the saloon, the liquor interests, with the aid of the bootleggers, have been carrying on a guerilla warfare hoping to entrench themselves on a beer-and-wine line. In this they are receiving encouragement from a great many representative citizens, who, to my mind, fail to realize that if they are successful, it may mean the selling of intoxicating liquors in every country roadside store and other places, and the last condition would be far worse than the first.

There is a spirit of unrest and disregard for law and order in the land, which is a backwash of the war, and if not checked will produce a harvest that will shake the very foundation of our Government. Every believer in good government must stand firm."

New Bank at Union Bridge.

The Directors of The First National Bank of Union Bridge at a meeting held on Wednesday, July 12, took appropriate corporate action providing for the transfer of the said First National Bank to the Central Trust Company of Maryland, which latter institution will reopen this Bank as a station bank within the next two weeks.

Full announcement of the plans of the Central Trust Company will be made in the next issue of the Pilot. It is understood that the action on the part of the Directors has been approved by the Comptroller of the Currency so that the success of the plan is now assured.

It is felt that the community is to be congratulated upon the action taken by the Directors in that it will bring to this community an institution having the organization and resources of the Central Trust Company, which is one of the largest and most powerful financial institutions in the State outside of the City of Baltimore.—The Pilot.

Lutheran Reunion at Braddock.

The 15th. annual Frederick County Lutheran Reunion will be held at Braddock Heights on Thursday, Aug. 3. The Loysville Orphans' Home Band will be present and render selections. Two addresses are on the program, one by Rev. C. A. Neal, of Gettysburg, Pa., and the other by Rev. W. E. Brown, D. D., of York, Pa. The officers of the committee are Rev. A. E. Cooper, chairman; Spencer E. Stup, treasurer, and William W. Doub, secretary.

The following program has been arranged for the reunion: 1 o'clock, Concert by Loysville Orphans Home Band; reading of Scripture lesson; prayer, Rev. R. L. Lang, Jefferson; solo, Miss Pauline Katherine Poole; reading, Miss Lena Belle Michael; address, "Christian Education," Rev. C. A. Neal, Gettysburg; offering for the Band, and offertory; address, "The United Lutheran Church in America—Past—Present—Future," Rev. W. E. Brown, D. D., York; hymn, Onward Christian Soldiers; announcements, prayer and benediction; concert by band, supper.

Miss Grace Hauver, daughter of Albert Hauver, Foxville, was instantly killed Sunday afternoon when an automobile in which she was riding was struck by the fast mail on the Western Maryland Railroad, going east, at the Deerfield crossing, near her home. Mrs. Ferdinand Hesse, wife of the Rev. Mr. Hesse, pastor of the Lutheran Church, Smithburg, also in the car, narrowly escaped by jumping.

You could go out in the country and pick apples for yourself for 50c a bushel, and as many people were out of work, a lot of this was done, but you could not buy any in the market or on the street, for less than $1.25. So I suppose it will be the same this year. Years ago, before people had so many autos and every farmer a telephone you could go out into the country and buy produce reasonable, but not so now. The prices are the same as in town, and the only advantage is that you get vegetables fresher than you do in the market.

My last letter ran over the limits prescribed by the Editor, and as I do not want to be denied the privilege of getting some of these thoughts off my mind occasionally, (or rather forfeit this privilege accorded me by the Editor, by getting my letters too long), I will close for this time.

JOHN J. REID.

PRESIDENT CALLS ON GOVERNORS.

U. S. Will Protect Workers if the Mines are Opened and Operated.

President Harding, on Tuesday, called on the Governors of 28 coal producing states to invite the operators and miners to resume work, and gave them assurance of protection, if needed. The majority of the Governors have given favorable response, and in a number of states troops have been ordered to the mines.

In a general way, the strike situation, both on the part of the miners and railroad workers, remains in much the same status as last week, both sides holding firm, but it is believed that there will be important developments within another week. The President's message is given below:

White House, July 18.

The proposal of the Federal Government to the United Mine Workers and the various coal operators whose mines are under suspension to submit all questions in dispute to a national commission for arbitration has been declined. The mine workers declined as a body. The majority of the bituminous operators pledged unqualified acceptance. The anthracite operators accepted the principle of arbitration, but made specifications which would not be considered.

I had proposed that the operators and mine workers in dispute should immediately resume coal production under the wage scales and working conditions which prevailed at the time of the strike on last April 1; that every question in dispute should go to a national commission to be composed of three representatives of the mine workers, three representatives of the operators and five representatives of the American public. It was proposed to make the commission the final authority on all disputes until next March, and meanwhile the commission was to inaugurate a searching inquiry into every phase of the coal industry, in order to recommend the way to maintain an understanding between workmen and employers, to promote steady employment and assure a continuous and ample fuel supply.

The failure to secure the acceptance of this proposal for a voluntary adjustment left me no other course but to invite the mine operators to return to their mines and resume activities.

I trust you will find it consistent to second this invitation, if you have not already done so, with the invitation to all miners and operators to resume their work. This invitation should be accompanied by such assurance of maintained order and the protection of lawful endeavor as will give assurance to everybody concerned. I want to convey to you in this message the assurance of the prompt and full support of the Federal Government whenever and wherever you find your own agencies of law and order inadequate to meet the situation.

Your State Government and the Federal Government are jointly responsible for maintained conditions under which free men, willing to work, may work in safety. We are responsible for the production and the transportation of a fuel supply ample for the necessities of the American people and the public utilities which serve them, particularly the railways engaged in interstate commerce. We must have ample coal to maintain industrial activity, we must have the coal necessary to health, security and activity of all the people. I reiterate to you these details because it is important to have it understood how far the Federal Government has gone in seeking a voluntary adjustment. Thus far there has been no challenge of the right of workers to decline employment, or the right of the employers to hire as they elect.

Our present duty is to guarantee security in the exercise of these rights, security in all lawful operations and afford a safe opportunity for that production and distribution demanded by the necessities of the American people.

There has been no Government assumption of a part in the dispute between organized workers and organized employers. I did offer the only available agency which I know to effect a settlement, and these good offices have not availed.

It becomes necessary, therefore, in the name of common welfare to invite production, in the fulfillment of that obligation which attaches to any American industry engaged in providing any public necessity, and to afford security to all men alike who are ready and willing to work and serve the common need. No cause is so important as that of common welfare and there must be the suppression of every unlawful hindrance to the service of that cause. To the task of lawful protection and the maintenance of order the Federal Government pledges to you every assistance at its command.

France with the "Wets."

Senator France has formally inaugurated his campaign for renomination through an address to citizens of Maryland, in which he came out for modification of the Volstead act, and at the same time announced that if elected he would move the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

The Senator regards the Eighteenth Amendment as legislation, and says that statutes should not be written in to the Constitution where a majority of the people may not repeal them. He says that the Volstead act "is unreasonable, extreme, drastic and makes for crime not by the law of nature a crime." He does not indicate what modifications he would make in that enactment, but urges that some be made.

Pennsylvania farmers who are annoyed by deer invading orchards and truck patches, are permitted to shoot them with rock salt.

Drying Up Atlantic City.

The Phila. Ledger's correspondent at Atlantic City, has sent his paper the following special, dated Tuesday: "Determined that the cracks in the Volstead act through which the seepage has kept the resort somewhat 'damp' the last three years shall be closed, more than a hundred Federal prohibition agents, headed by Samuel H. Cone, chief of the New Jersey forces, arrived here this afternoon and began the cleaning-up process.

Rumors that "dry" agents have been making a survey of the city for the last ten days were found to have been based on fact when the raiders divided their forces and made more than thirty-five arrests before nightfall. Two motortrucks followed the agents from place to place, and as the contraband was brought out it was placed in the machines with an armed guard at both ends. Nearly $50,000 worth of stuff was seized. The raids came as a surprise to the cafe men and saloonkeepers, who are reported to have operated more or less openly the last two weeks.

"When we have finished Atlantic City will be as clean as her sands," declared Mr. Cone tonight. He intimated that Boardwalk cafe proprietors need expect no different treatment from that accorded those in the back of the town.

"After we have arrested all of the bootleggers and even while we are doing it proceedings are being instituted to get an injunction under the twenty-second section of the National Prohibition Act against the places as a common nuisance to keep them locked up for a year.

"We are tired of monkeying with Atlantic City. Whether you believe it or not, we are going to make this town dry and keep it dry if it takes 200 Federal agents all the time to do it."

Marriage Licenses.

J. R. Hemm and Cora Baughman, both of Hanover.

Wm. B. Cole and Celia Bernetta Utermahlen, of Carroll Co.

George W. Lindale and Lillian M. Bowers, both of Baltimore.

Clinton C. Riley and Barbara Senft both of Baltimore.

For 12 years a Florida farmer has raised watermelons on 1,000 acres. In all that time he has never shipped a melon but let them spoil in the fields except those he and his neighbors eat. The melons are grown exclusively for their seed, which are sold to planters of Florida, Georgia and other southern states.

LEWIS FOR NEW DRY ACT.

Thinks the Point of Intoxication the Main Thing to Settle.

David J. Lewis, who looms up strongly as the possible choice of Democrats for the Senatorial nomination, has announced his platform, covering a number of issues.

Dealing with the prohibition question, Mr. Lewis devotes himself almost exclusively to the problem of enforcement statutes. He seems to take it for granted that it is idle to think of getting the consent of three-fourths of the States to repealing the Prohibition amendment, and that so long as the amendment is a part of the Constitution, no public official honoring his oath will disregard it.

In his discussion of proper enforcement, he makes the point that the amendment prohibits "intoxicating" beverages, not "stimulating" beverages or even beverages containing alcohol. The essential point to be determined, he thinks, is where a beverage ceases to be merely stimulating and becomes intoxicating. And he holds that a beverage of one-half of one percent alcohol content, far from being intoxicating, is not even stimulating.

Mr. Lewis proposes that the point at which a beverage ceases to be stimulating and becomes intoxicating be established by scientific inquiry—whether it be one percent, two percent, three percent, or more of alcoholic content. Also, he proposes a system of local option, once the point has been established, so that communities may decide for themselves whether they want stimulating beverages.

The Use of Salt.

We have an article from a good friend of The Record, on the use of salt. The gist of it seems to be that the use of salt is largely a habit, and that we indulge the habit much too freely for the good of our health. There are quite a number of statements in the article that have to do with chemistry, and are more or less connected with scientific knowledge of what is, and is not, good for the human body. We think it best, to confine publication to the last three paragraphs.

"Body Scientists claim that 95% of the salt taken into the body, is passed out in 24 hours, unchanged. It is estimated that the average amount of salt per head, is 300 grains, if so 285 grains of salt pass out of the body as foreign matter, non-essential to body building, hence it must be not only waste material in nature's laboratory, but injurious and an enemy to the best health.

If all food was cooked naturally, and the juices eaten with the solids, natural desire would be satisfied, and our craving for salt, limited. The Creator made no mistake in the right proportions for the best for man, beast and bird.

The nearer we live to the natural, the better will be our health, and our expenses will be cut down to the minimum. Just as we learn to know the laws of health, and gladly obey them, we will become healthy, happy and successful, our health is our wealth."

Weather and Crop Report.

The week ending Tuesday, July 18, 1922, was wet, with a mean temperature that was normal. Warm weather, with thundershowers prevailed on the 12, 13, 17 and 18. From the 14th to the 16th, the weather was cool. There was much cloudiness, and the amount of sunshine was below normal.

The weather of the week was favorable for the growth of crops, especially corn, potatoes, tomatoes, gardens, and truck. Pastures are good generally.

Corn continues in excellent condition, and is tasseling.

Wheat and rye are being harvested and oats are headed in Allegany and Garrett counties; elsewhere over the section thrashing of grains continues and oats are being cut.

Digging of early potatoes continues in the southern and has begun in the central counties; early potatoes are maturing in the northern counties. Planting of late potatoes continues.

Early tomatoes are being picked; some scald reported, owing to wet weather. Late planted tomatoes are fruiting.

Picking of early apples continues. Blackberries and raspberries are also being picked.

JOSEPH BILLY, JR., Acting Section Director.

German-Americans for France.

An indorsement of Senator France, that may be of doubtful value, is that of the German-American national conference, held in Chicago, that has passed resolutions pledging support to Beveridge, of Indiana; Brookhart, of Iowa; France, of Maryland; Frazier, of North Dakota; La Follette, of Wisconsin, and Reed, of Missouri, for U. S. Senators. These are mentioned as "Veterans who have fought so valiantly for the preservation of American liberties."

Yellowstone is the greatest zoo in the world. Within its borders are over 20,000 elk; 5,000 deer; 600 moose; 500 antelope; 1,500 bear; 700 buffalo; 350 mountain sheep, and 150 species of birds.

"No Trespassing" signs at this office, 10c each or 3 for 25c, for posting up on trees or fences. Advertising against trespassers, 25c for the season, beginning Aug. 18.

STATE BONUS BILL UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

Court of Appeals Reverses Decision of Lower Court.

The Court of Appeals at Annapolis, on Monday, held the $9,000,000 soldier bonus bill unconstitutional and ordered the decision of the lower court reversed and the case remanded for a writ of mandamus. The court held that the referendum provision of the Bonus bill is in violation of the State constitution, and consequently is void.

The Bonus bill as passed by the legislature was attacked in the courts by H. O. Brawner, a business man of Baltimore, who petitioned for a mandamus prohibiting the bonus question from place on the ballot, this fall. The elections board was defended by Attorney General Armstrong, and Judge Stein of the Circuit Court upheld the validity of the bill. The decision was then appealed.

Just what action the Legion may take, has not yet been disclosed, but it is pretty generally accepted that the decision of the Court of Appeals will end the matter.

Precaution Against Fire.

The following suggestions have been prepared in the form of 14 fire cautions. If these were universally and adequately observed by everyone, the fire waste in the country would be materially reduced. Attention to these apparently trivial things on the part of large numbers of people will result in material reduction of the fire waste.

1—Keep matches out of the way of children. Teach them the dangers of playing with fire.

2—Avoid throwing lighted cigars, cigarettes and matches into waste-paper baskets or other places containing inflammable materials.

3—Make it a point to know how to get out of every building you enter. This precaution may save panic and much confusion in case of fire.

4—Avoid the filling of lighted lamps. Avoid the use of kerosene to light fires. The application of heat to kerosene results in very explosive gases which are very explosive.

5—Provide a sufficient number of metal cans near stoves and furnaces to receive the hot ashes. Provide a different type of can for rubbish—never mix.

6—Avoid toy wax candles. Each year the number of deaths of children produces a sad ending for an otherwise joyful season.

7—Keep greasy and oily rags in tightly closed metal boxes provided in one place for the purpose.

8—Avoid hanging lace curtains and other draperies near gas jets or other open flames. The draft from near-by windows may cause fire quick to spread and difficult to extinguish.

9—Use gasoline, naphtha or benzene for cleaning, if at all, out of doors, and during the day. The liquids quickly evaporate, and the heavy inflammable gases formed quickly settle in spaces below windows and in corners.

10—Place substantial fire resisting guards in front of all woodwork about source of heat. The open flames of gas, kerosene, alcohol and gasoline stoves should be particularly shielded.

11—Keep all open flames away from gas leaks. Explosive mixtures of gas and air are quickly formed at such places, and they only need a lighted match or taper to cause disastrous results.

12—Permit only experienced persons to install or repair electrical fittings and appliances. There are definite rules for wiring, which if known and observed will prevent electrical fires.

13—Avoid placing articles made of celluloid, pyralin, zyonite, fiberoid, visoloid and similar materials, such as collars, combs, toilet articles, etc., upon or near sources of heat, as they are very likely to cause fires. Great caution should also be exercised when articles made of such materials are worn upon the person.

14—Turn the current off after using an electric pressing iron. Avoid leaving portable electric heating devices unattended.

Time to Thin Apples.

A Pennsylvania exchange, writing of the coming apple crop, says: "Now that the June drop is over, apple growers will do well to start thinning those trees that are set heavily to fruit. In the case of winter varieties, a light thinning may be made for the present and the first picking of the fruit in September will then serve as the second thinning. This first fall picking can often be sold to advantage, especially to export trade.

The grower who takes time now to locate his market and lays plans for the sale of his fall and winter crop of apples will be a few jumps ahead of the one who neglects to make any plans for the marketing of his product. Timely preparation will enable the grower to take advantage of any unusual or unexpected opportunities during the marketing season. The next few weeks is a good time to look ahead and see that all the requirements of harvesting, packing and selling are fully met. Packages should soon be placed at the farm so that a large enough supply is on hand for the season."

FRIDAY, JULY 21, 1922.

All articles on this page are either original or properly credited. This has always been a fixed rule with this office, and we suggest the adoption of it by our exchanges.

It is becoming a question of decided importance as to which is the biggest man, officially—President Harding, of the United States, or President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor; and incidentally, the question of which has the biggest crowd back of him, is involved.

The passage of the Tariff bill seems to be doomed to a hold-up until perhaps shortly before the election. An organized "fillibuster," under the guise of the preservation of that dignity and long-standing precedent that prevents closing debate as long as anybody wants to talk, is preventing a vote on the passage of the bill.

It looks to us as though the biggest question in this country, right now, is the labor question as it relates to interference with an ample coal supply and transportation. Such questions as the tariff, the bonus, and the Volstead act—important as they are—might easily be side-tracked and the whole attention of the public and public officials, be devoted to the settlement of the question that overshadows them all.

In more ways than one—if we are at all fair, intelligent and observant—we must conclude that this is a good time to stand by the Constitution and our government. Those who rock little boats are encouraging the habit and justification for those who rock the big boats. There is, after all, something bigger in this country than "personal liberty," and individual "freedom," and it is the peace and happiness of the whole public.

Aggressive Radicalism.

It seems to us, that some hasty conclusions are being reached, these days; conclusions, on being tried out, that leave the basis trouble remain. The diagnosis of public and social problems is not arrived at as easily as in the past, for the reason that surface symptoms can no longer be depended on. In many of our present ills, world conditions must be considered. "The world is getting smaller," we sometimes say, without fully realizing how much truth there is in the saying.

Perhaps we can understand some phases of public affairs and public conscience, if we will recognize the fact that our country is being foreignized. We have become so dependent on the acceptance in America, of majority decisions, and on the innate subservience of Americans to the courts and to authority generally, that we do not fully appreciate the origin and presence of a rapidly growing public spirit against law and order—an un-American invader.

When some of our interests no longer respond to long-time remedies, we make the mistake of criticizing some of the men and methods used in operating these interests. We complain that our leaders are weak, and their ability not up to standard, when in fact the trouble is with the increasing crowd that refuses to be led, or to be governed by the usual restraints.

This is true, both as to matters of restriction and matters of growth. There are things just as hard to stop, as to make grow. The growth of the church, of fraternal organizations, of charitable and reformatory measures, lags proportionately with the restriction of law violations and extreme radicalism. As a matter of fact, when we discuss our local problems, we fail to realize that we are face to face with the great world problem—aggressive radicalism, a foreign importation.

Before we blame our leaders too easily, and unfairly, we must measure ourselves and see what we have taken the time to do in the way of standing out boldly for law enforcement, and against encroachments on public morals. It has become too much the fashion to want to be "liberal-minded" as we call it. We are so afraid of being a "back-number," that we discount many of the precepts that we once held to, and thereby add unconsciously to the force of radicalism that is over-running the world.

Those who berate and sneer at "Blue laws," who countenance disobedience even to the findings of the Supreme Court, who treat lightly—even contemptuously—the constitution of the United States, are as "red" in their influence on the public as the veriest champions of old-world anarchy. This is what is spreading over our own America, and unless real Americans come to their senses soon, and rejuvenate some of their old-time patriotism, this Nation will fall as low in the scale of nations as the lowest in Europe.

Danger of Fanaticism.

We have very well defined opinions as to the "wet" and "dry" question, as a political issue, but we also recognize the fact that our public men should not be chosen, alone, on their attitude on this one question. We are often blind to dangers beyond, simply because we can not see further than the one object immediately in front of our vision. The men we need to elect to Congress are not men safely "dry" but men safe on all great questions affecting this country.

The prohibition issue can be too strongly magnified. We do not believe that the 18th Amendment is in danger, to the extent that a lot of single-track "dry" partisans seem to think. All other qualifications being equal, we should support the "dry" candidate; but a candidate might be very "dry," but very wobbly and unsound on other big National dangers, and in such a case we should select the lesser evil, and vote for the all-around best man.

When people become fanatics, they become unsafe, even though their fanaticism is directed toward a good cause; and this should be remembered at the election this year. The fact is, no truly big man intellectually and morally, is apt to go far wrong on any question, but he is quite apt to decline to tie himself fast to the tail of any one kite.

Country America has to Decide Quickly if it will Defend its Child.

Country America voted prohibition into the Constitution.

In just four months Country America will have to vigorously defend its child at the polls or let the politicians fling it into the sewer catch basin.

And the defense results must be decisive or the politicians will murder the child anyway.

The fact is the wet hosts have not only planned an elaborate and widespread campaign for the national elections on November 7, but they have already put the campaign into action. The dries, generally speaking, are laying back on their oars, blissfully content that "prohibition is in the Constitution."

It sure is, but they are grossly deceiving themselves if they think the wet attack is to be made on the 18th Amendment. The wets' policy is to let that alone and concentrate everything on amendments to the Volstead law.

Such amendments can be passed by Congress by majority vote, and you are going to find the wets, with the big contributions of the distillers, brewers and saloon keepers and the smaller but more numerous contributions of the foreign born within our gates, striving in every debatable state to pledge congressional nominees to vote for "changes" in the Volstead law.

Nor are they going to arouse the lukewarm dry element by demanding drastic amendments to the Volstead law at the very beginning. They will be quite content with 2 percent beer, knowing that if they can make that wedge, 2 1-3 and 3 percent beer will follow in good time. Next will come "light wines," the word "light" being used to deceive, because the lightest wine has 15 percent of alcohol, and very little of it will induce intoxication.

The funny thing about it all is that 2 percent beer, if passed, will be called prohibition, and yet any man can get drunk on 2 percent beer.

The wets have started their campaign with the knowledge that they will elect Congress without turning a hand. Practically every one of the dozen and a half congressmen to be elected from New York city and its New Jersey vicinity will be for "light" wines and beer. Up New York state will send a few more. Pretty nearly the entire delegation from Chicago will be wet. Pennsylvania will send a number of wets to Congress next fall. Then there will be others from cities like Cincinnati, St. Louis, San Francisco, Milwaukee, Boston, Detroit, Cleveland, St. Paul and others.

All in all, the wets can depend on around 75 to 100 members as a certain nucleus. Then, if they can add another 75 to 100 by gum shoe work or by the expenditure of millions of money, they may not have a majority of the next house, but their "bloc" will be large enough for purposes of heavy trading in favor of amendments to the Volstead law.

"The American Press" has taken pains to find out in what states the wets propose to put up their biggest battle. They are leaving the south alone, with the exception of parts of one or two states, because the people below the Mason and Dixie line are pretty generally a unit against booze. There will be isolated cases of wet work in the south, of course, especially gum shoe work.

But it is a different story in the north. You can depend on $300 stiff wet campaigns in Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Kentucky, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Michigan, California, Montana, Minnesota, Wisconsin and parts of Texas and Louisiana.

Country America will probably ask concerning the classes of people who are supporting the wet campaign. The situation, summed up, is about as follows:

Few Americans, comparatively, are out in the open fighting against prohibition, although it is the truth that many Americans in the cities are enjoying the fruits of bootleg work. Most of the captains and lieutenants in the fight that is already raging for a wet Congress, as well as the rank and file, are foreign born. There are millions of them who are bitterly against prohibition, and they and their wives and families can be depended upon to go to the polls this fall to vote for the "right" candidates.

The question is: Does Country America care enough about prohibition to put up the stiffest kind of a fight to nip in the bud this first desperate effort to nullify a part of the constitutional law of the land?

The answer is due on the night of November 7.—The American Press.

Which is Preferable—to be Hanged or Shot?

In Utah there is a curious law, and one that is unique, at least in this country, which gives a convicted murderer the sorry privilege of deciding whether he shall be hanged or shot. One Woods, whose killing of his wife had been proved to the satisfaction of the jury that tried him, made the grim choice this week, and, according to the dispatches, "without hesitation and in a loud voice," chose to face a firing squad.

Whether his preference was based on the notion that shooting is a soldier's death and not disgraceful, as hanging always is, or on a belief or hope that of the two deaths that by bullets is the less painful, the information at hand does not reveal. Probably the former idea was decisive of the man's choice. Nobody knows, of course, which is the "easier" death of the two. Why Utah should offer such an alternative is inexplicable, unless it somehow is related to the comparative nearness of frontier conditions in that State. The pioneers, however, hanged criminals as often as they shot them, and to a wife-killer they would have been likely to do both.—N. Y. Times.

Pity the City Child.

Little Helen is an apartment house child. Brought up in a northwest apartment, the sidewalks have been her playgrounds, passers-by and automobiles her playmates, the patches around trees her only contact with old mother earth.

Of course, there have been trips to parks, and all that, but of nature as an entity she knows little. Like most city dwellers, she has to feel the heartbeat of the universe through stone and bricks.

One day recently her mother took her into the suburbs to visit some friends.

For awhile the child was contented to play in the new rooms. But at last she grew tired.

"Go play in the yard," her mother said.

Helen looked in wonder.

"Where is the yard?" she asked.—Washington Star.

HATS USED TO DENOTE RANK

In China Headgear to the Value of Many Thousands of Dollars is Not Uncommon.

The natives of the Philippines and South Sea islands wear large sun-hats as a protection from the heat. Palm leaves of various kinds furnish the material generally used, but the shapes differ. Some are woven flat and some with a peak. The commonest form in the Philippines is made of palm leaves covered with cane, a cane bandeau giving an air space above the head. The ornamentation of these hats is very simple; no colors are used, with the exception of brown, which is occasionally introduced in the use of hemp.

In China, in addition to the large, peaked coolie hat used as a protection against heat, there is the hat which is emblematic of rank. The social position of a Manchu woman, for instance, can always be determined by the ornaments on her bonnet, often consisting of precious jewels. These hats range in price from a few dollars to as high as $10,000 apiece. One of the most interesting specimens on exhibition at the Brooklyn museum is a hat covered with delicate ornaments of turquoise blue kingfisher's feathers, an imitation of jewels formerly used, fastened to a frame of a stiff black open mesh. These ornaments, which are made with a metal foundation, stand out about half an inch from the hat itself, and are beautiful both in design and color.

Cannibal Plant.

In the Indian territory is a remarkable parasite called the air plant. One will frequently find the ground covered with what seems luxuriant vegetation, for this plant has a rich foliage of deep and abundant green. However, if one lifts one of these little twigs he will find it attached to a strong, woody stem. Continuing to lift it and following it for yards, he will find that the vine is not clinging to anything, but is simply lying upon other plants, and if he follows it its whole length he will come to the other end of the stem, without root and attached to nothing.

Under the plant will be only dead twigs and stems of other vegetation, for nothing can live under this life-sapping vine.

Onions as Medicine.

The Hebrews regarded the onion merely for its culinary value. The Greeks were fond of both onions and garlic, the former apparently used when drinking to increase thirst and enhance the pleasures of the cup. But in palmy days of Rome the two vegetables had become largely the badge of the rabble. In the Middle Ages any well-set table contained a plate of red onions. The chief repute of the onion in medicine was as a diuretic and remedy for dropsy. This belief has persisted up to the present time and it is somewhat strange to find that as early as 1853 onions and a milk diet were pronounced the best remedy for dropsy.

Helping the Judge.

It was his first case, and the lawyer, whose zeal probably outweighed his learning, was arguing a case in a local court.

"My contention, your honor," he said, "is that the lower court made an error because the verdict is against the weight of evidence."

"We can't hear that," said the judge, meaning that even a rising young lawyer's opinion is not evidence.

"Very well, then," said the young man of the law, who entirely missed the point, "if your honor will listen I will speak a little louder."—London Answers.

"You can't come into the building," said the severe man in the uniform. "You're a book agent."

"I'm not," protested the visitor. "I'm a literator. If a man who sells books is a 'reitor,' a man who sells books is a perfect right to be known as a literator."

NO BEST BREED OF POULTRY

Three Classes Recognized Are Egg Producers, Dual Purpose and Extremely Large Fowls.

What is the best breed of chickens? That question frequently is asked by persons who are thinking of taking a plunge in the poultry business. But there is no "best breed," according to Harry Embleton, professor of poultry husbandry at Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical college. "You can find good and poor layers, large and small birds. It is the strain more than the breed that is really the more important thing to consider."

"There are three recognized general classes of poultry," Embleton says, "the small birds or the so-called egg-producing class, the medium-sized bird or the so-called dual purpose class, and the extremely large or the meat class. There is no great distinction between the egg class or the dual so far as the egg production is concerned, for many of the medium meat breeds are good egg layers, and in the small-sized birds which are considered for egg laying only, there are oftentimes found individuals that will weigh from five to five and one-half pounds and these will make a fairly good meat bird."

"Now, in regard to the breed you would like to have, I have first to suggest that you decide upon whether you want eggs primarily or whether you want general-purpose breeds. When you have made this decision pick out the breed which you like best because this is the breed with which you will get the best results. After you have picked the breed that you like best buy your stock or eggs from a breeder whom you know has bred for the things that you desire. This may be egg production or it may be show purposes or it may be a combination. You will find many breeders that have bred for egg production, but their stock may not be worth very much for show purposes. You can find breeders which have bred for show purposes and their stock, in turn, may not be worth very much for egg production. You can find a small per cent of breeders who have combined these two qualities and of course their stock would naturally be worth more because of having this combination.

"But just as a matter of caution—be sure you know the breeder from whom you are buying your stock and be sure that he has the strain of birds which have the qualities which you desire."

INDICATION OF LAYING HENS

Spread of Distance Apart of Pelvic Bones is Valuable Sign of Fowl's Condition.

As a hen stops laying there is a tendency for her to take on fat. This is noticeable in examining the pelvic bones, the two bones which can be felt as points on either side of the vent. When the hen is laying these bones become comparatively thin and flexible. When she is not laying they feel thicker and less flexible, due to the fat which has accumulated there. The spread of distance apart of these pelvic bones is also a valuable indication of whether or not the hen is laying. When laying they are wider apart than when not laying.

DOULTRY NOTES

- Keep charcoal where the fowls have ready access to it at all times.
- See that your poultry runs and coops are clean before the little chicks begin coming.
- The goose is the great holiday bird and finds ready sale on the large city markets at that time.
- Get a supply of the most-needed poultry remedies and keep them on hand for emergencies.
- The sooner eggs are set after being laid the better. There is no such thing as setting them too soon for best results.
- Keep grit and oyster shell before the fowls, also plenty of clean water, and make sure that the fowls are not bothered with mites or lice.

WHITE HOLLAND IS POPULAR

While Not So Common as Bronze It is Widely Raised—Has Many Excellent Qualities.

The white Holland turkey, while not so common as the bronze variety, is nevertheless widely raised and exceedingly popular. People who keep them long enough to get familiar with their qualities and characteristics generally prefer them to any other breed.

The origin of the white Holland is not known, according to writers on poultry, but it is believed to have been developed by breeding white birds selected from other breeds, which appear occasionally as among chickens and are classed as "sports." It seems quite certain that they did not come from Holland or the Netherlands. It has come to the front as a distinct breed since about 1890. The standard weights are, 26 lbs. for a cock; 16 lbs. for a cockerel; 16 for a hen and 10 for a pullet. At the same time any of these classes may be fattened to from three to six pounds above the weight quoted. Six months old gobblers, or cockerels, have been known to weigh 16 pounds dressed for market. The flesh is white and makes fine eating.

White Holland turkeys are said to be the best layers, as a rule, among the turkey family. In some flocks the hens will not go broody or hatch; or, if they do, it will be only after the season is far advanced. Other specimens will want to sit before laying a dozen eggs and some have raised two broods in a season. One man is reported to have owned four turkey hens which laid 264 eggs during the season, while one of them raised a brood in July. Like all other breeds the white birds must have proper care and proper feed to be profitable. Colds, lice and filth and general neglect will be fatal.

MATCHED LUMBER FOR NESTS

Plan to Have as Few Cracks and Crevices as Possible, Built in Portable Sections.

When first in the poultry business we thought that nests made of scrap lumber or small boxes were satisfactory. Now we believe that the nests should be of smooth matched lumber with as few cracks and crevices as possible, says a writer in an exchange. They must never be nailed to the sides of the wall or beneath the dropping boards, but built in portable sections, so they can be easily carried from the house for sunning and spraying.

When we used open nests in some of the houses the birds were constantly roosting on them or bothering the hens while they were laying. After several eggs had been laid in a nest another hen might decide to scratch around in the litter in that nest. This resulted in broken eggs and then it was only a short step to the egg eating habit.

The best nests are built with a small track at the rear where the hens can enter. The eggs are removed by lowering a hinged door in front. These nests are slightly darkened and the hens hardly see the eggs that are laid. There is not much scratching in the litter in a darkened nest. If a soft-shelled egg is laid and broken the danger of the hen eating it is reduced.

The egg-eating habit probably causes as much loss and discouragement as any habit or disease which troubles poultry keepers. The remedy is largely in prevention and this consists in building the right kind of nests.

POULTRY NOTES

- Keep chicks out of the wet grass.
- The boarder hen always jumps her board bill. Give her the crate.
- Geese grow fast, and need no feed in the summer if they have a grassy run.
- Filth causes more sickness than anything else. Clean up and keep things clean!
- Laying hens and hens being fattened for market should not be kept in the same pen.
- A cement floor is considered best for the permanent laying-house as it lasts a long time and is easily cleaned and keeps out rats.

WHY

We Are Able to Perceive the Blue in the Sky

The reason why the sky is blue was found out by Prof. John Tyndall (1820-1893), the famous British physicist. In explaining this, "The Book of Knowledge" (edited by Arthur Mee of Temple Chambers, London, and Holland Thompson, Ph. D., of the College of the City of New York) says: "The sky gets its light from the sun. When the sun is away, the sky is dark. Therefore, the blue of the sky must be somehow thrown to our eyes from something in the sky which keeps all the other colors in the white light of the sun, and throws back the blue; and that is what happens. The sky is filled with countless tiny specks which we may call dust—specks of solid stuff hanging in the air. These are of just such a size that they catch the bigger waves of light, which make the other colors, but throw to our eyes the shorter waves of light, which make blue. If you could do away with all the solid stuff in the air, the sky would be dark, and all the light of the daytime would come directly from the sun. Skylight is reflected sunlight, but only the blue part of it."

ODOR THAT SERVES PURPOSE

Why Certain Flowers Have Perfume That is Designed to Attract Pollen-Bearing Insects.

Who does not know the trillium? All the parts to this flower are arranged in threes—three leaves, three petals, three sepals, and a tri-partite seed case.

Some trilliums stand up clear and white, others bend their heads. Some, like the painted trilliums, grow in clusters of delicate white and purple flowers. When walking through the woods in early spring you sometimes find a purple trillium. Bend down and smell it. The chances are that it smells like carrion.

"Why do you ask me to sniff such a scent," you protest, "odor is all a matter of viewpoint." I answer, "We call some odors perfumes and some stench. A flower has an odor to attract the insects that are to scatter its pollen. The trillium attracts carrion flies. You see plenty of purple trilliums, do you not? The flies do their work well. The odor served. Then what ground have you to call it disagreeable?"

How Turkish Women Are Advancing.

Women are beginning to do the work of men in the near eastern countries, a thing unheard of before the war, according to Mary Mills Patrick, president of Constantinople Woman's college, who has come to this country to raise a fund for three American colleges in the Near East. "Today we are called upon to teach practical subjects," she said. "We have opened a commercial department to train girls for office work. They are in such demand that we can scarcely keep them through to finish a short course. If they have the slightest knowledge of business methods and can speak a little English they are snapped up for office work in Constantinople." Women are also taking up courses in scientific agriculture, she said.

Why Called "White House."

The home of the President was named the "White House" after the home of Martha Washington in New Kent county, Virginia, in which her wedding occurred. Washington had many pleasant memories of that residence and he suggested the building of a "White House" for the Presidents. The house is constructed of Virginia freestone, which is excessively porous, and consequently would be very damp in the interior were it not for a thick coat of white lead, which is applied about once in ten years at great expense.

How Clams Propagate.

Clams are propagated by spawning the same as fish, the eggs being fertilized in the water and hatching quickly; the young larvae known as "veligers," swim on the surface for a few days until, their shells becoming heavier, they sink to the bottom and attach themselves to seaweed or stones; they are then known as "spat." In a year these are an inch long and are old enough to spawn in their turn; the breeding season is in May, June and July. Clam beds are now re-stocked artificially.

Why Theory is Untenable.

Appropos of the combined heat and crime wave in Paris, French psychologists are reviving the old theory that high temperature and crime go hand in hand. They instance the violence and cruelty of the Spaniard, ignoring facts that do not fit their theory. Why not look upon the tyrants and torturers of Siberia as natural products of the frigid air?—Scientific-American.

How Orange Grove is Heated.

Saving the citrus fruit from damaging frosts is the aim of a California inventor who has produced a huge fan, or propeller, which is mounted on a 20-foot tower, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. An electric motor is installed to drive the propeller blades, which are so constructed that they draw the warmer air from above, and circulate it throughout the grove.

How He Broke the News.

"Bill," said the foreman after the accident, "did you break the news to Mrs. Murphy about her husband getting blown sky-high in the explosion?" "I did." "Did you break it gently?" "I did. I told her that Tom got that raise he'd been looking for."—American Legion Weekly.

HOW

SCIENTIST HAS FIGURED LIFE EXISTS ON MOON.

—Observations made from August, 1920, to February, 1921, by Prof. Wm. H. Pickering of Harvard, who is one of the world's leading astronomers and an authority on lunar and Martian phenomena, tend, he asserts, to prove beyond doubt that life exists on the surface of the moon. The professor bases his assertions on a series of telescopic photographs of a crater with a circumference of 37 miles. Hundreds of photographic reproductions have, it is stated, proved irrefutably the springing up at dawn, with an unbelievable rapidity, of vast fields of foliage, which come into full blossom just as rapidly, and which disappear in a maximum period of 11 days.

The plates also show that great blizzards, snowstorms and volcanic eruptions are frequent. "We find," says the professor, "a living world at our very doors where life in some respects resembles that of Mars—a world which the astronomical profession has in past years utterly neglected and ignored."—Cleveland News-Leader.

EXPLAINING GROWTH OF FISH

How It is Possible to Make Accurate Computation Has Been Explained by Expert.

Fishermen often wonder how fast bass and crapple grow. The answer is that it all depends on the quality and temperature of the water and the abundance of natural food, according to Fred J. Foster, superintendent of the government's bureau of fisheries at Neosho, Mo.

A one-year-old crapple in Missouri will be four inches long, a two-year-old one seven inches, a three-year-old one nine inches, Mr. Foster says. Some never get that length and others keep growing until they weigh 3½ pounds or more. Bass average about five inches at one year, eight inches at two, a foot at three, and on up the scale. One fish of the same age and on the same nourishment may weigh much more than another one—just as with people, Mr. Foster points out.

Bass and crapple spawn once a year. The time is during April, May and June.

How Water is "Harnessed."

The great problem of the near future in this country is power—its conservation and economical utilization. In recognition of this fact, we are setting about the business of turning to useful account the energy derivable from falling water. Surveys made by the government have divided up the rivers into sections, and the amount of power each section is capable of delivering has been computed. To develop this available energy, or the bulk of it, for industrial and other employment, is a gigantic job. But we are going at it. Already we have made a pretty fair start; for there are now in the United States 3,116 waterpower plants of 100 or more horsepower, with a total capacity of 7,852,948 horsepower.

How Wind Aids Bicycle Riders.

Various attempts have been made to cause the wind to aid the bicycle rider in driving his machine. In the case of certain American and French inventions an apparatus constructed on the plan of a toy windmill is attached to the machine and geared to the front wheel.

Another contrivance also acts on the principle of the windmill, but its motor, instead of having fans facing a! one way, is shaped like an empty pumpkin shell, with the segments slightly separated and inclined inward.

How Gold Production Varies.

The gold production of Australia has been steadily declining for many years. In 1921 the yield was 759,297 fine ounces, or 189,375 fine ounces less than in 1920. The returns from each state in 1921 were as follows, in fine ounces: Western Australia, 533,727; Victoria, 104,512; New South Wales, 51,173; Queensland, 38,418; Tasmania, 5,472; South Australia, 5,995; total for the commonwealth, 759,257. Ten years ago the yield was 2,720,902 fine ounces, which fell to 1,946,908 ounces in 1915 and to 1,068,102 in 1919.

How France is Rebuilding.

Shell-torn districts of northern France are being repopulated by returning natives, and these have made use of the miscellaneous electrical equipment left there by the different armies, according to Popular Mechanics. Generators driven by gasoline engines have been put in use, and the cellars of ruined buildings, or the poorest wooden huts, are furnished with light and power.

How Holy Sepulcher is Protected.

The Holy Sepulcher in Jerusalem has now been protected against fire through the efforts of Sir Herbert Samuel, high commissioner for Palestine. Latin, Greek and Armenian representatives control the shrine.

How Mistletoe Spreads.

Mistletoe recently has appeared on pine trees in Bavaria, having come from the South. The Alps previously had acted as a barrier, and it is believed that the present introduction is due to seeds carried by the thrush.

NEEDS OF "YOUNG AMERICA"

European Critic Thinks That Youth of Great Republic Suffers From Too Much Freedom.

George Santayana, famous philosopher and writer, in an article written especially in the Forum on "America's Young Radicals," says:

"I have made a severe effort to discover as well as I may from a distance what these rebels want. I see what they are against—they are against everything—but what are they for? I have not been able to discover it. This may be due to my lack of understanding or to their incapacity to express themselves clearly, for their style is something appalling. But perhaps this scandalous failure in expression, when expression is what they yearn for and demand at all costs, may be a symptom of something deeper; or a radical mistake they have made in the direction of their efforts and aspirations. They think they need more freedom, more room, a chance to be more spontaneous. I suspect that they have had too much freedom, too much empty space, too much practice in being spontaneous when there was nothing in them to bubble out. Their style is a sign of this; it is not merely that they have no mastery of the English language as hitherto spoken, no clear sense of the value of words, and no simplicity; that they are without the vocabulary or the idiom of cultivated people. . . . No, it is not more freedom that young America needs in order to be happy; it needs more discipline."

ON EQUALITY WITH HUSBANDS

Filipino Women, Entering Into Matrimony, Become Partners in Future Business Enterprises.

"When a Filipino woman marries she goes into partnership with her husband," said Mme. Sofia Reyes de Veyra, wife of the Philippine commissioner to the United States. "While the men handle the work and employees, the women attend to the finances, act as cashiers, pay the workers and oversee much of the business."

Things are made easy in many ways for Filipino women, she asserted, writes Louise Cattoi in the Milwaukee Journal. Professional opportunities are as good for them as for men. Women are already members of the Philippine Bar association, a privilege not open to British women.

"Married women in the Philippines hold their property in severalty, and are guardians of their own children. Of the property which accrues to a married couple, the wife is half administratrix and there are vested rights which cannot be taken away. It is not unusual for the mother of a family to have not only household leadership, but economic control."

Women's clubs are rapidly growing in the islands, Mme. De Veyra said, and pointed out that already 305 clubs and associations exist, which have formed a federation.

Mme. De Veyra has four children, "as bright, healthy and happy as any mother could wish," as she described them.

'Tis Me! 'Tain't Me!

Now get this—it's good.

Two sets of twin brothers occupy their time in the business life of Indianapolis. One set is Louis and Andrew Hoover, as alike as the acorn on a pair of dice. The other is William and Charles Small, as similar as bananas.

Lou Hoover knows Bill Small, but he doesn't know Charles.

Charles Small knows Andy Hoover, but he doesn't know Lou.

The other day Lou Hoover met Charles Small on the street.

"Hello, Bill," said Lou.

"There you are, Andy, all messed up again. I'm Charlie not Bill."

"Well, you haven't anything on me. I'm Lou, not Andy."—Indianapolis News.

A Serious Matter.

"I suppose," said the cross-examining lawyer, in his snappiest manner, "that you remember the date of your birth?"

"Certainly," said the witness with a bored air. "Every man remembers his birthday."

"A newly born infant has no memory. Now, sir, how do you know that it wasn't a day sooner or a day later, or a week, or a month, or a year than the date you have in mind?"

"Why—er—ahem—I've been told—"

"Exactly. You've been told, but you don't know. Step down. Gentlemen of the jury, this is the kind of witness who has testified against the unimpeachable character of my client."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Forage Crop Pays.

As a result of systematized regulation by the United States forest service, the forage crop of the national forests is now returning an annual income to the federal treasury of close to $2,500,000, says the American Forestry magazine. By a system of range allotments under which nominal grazing fees are charged, the forest service has brought the national forest ranges under practical and profitable administration.

The Pitcher and the Well.

"Did you participate in many engagements while in France?" asked the interested old lady.

"Only five," replied the ex-A. E. F. er with becoming modesty.

"And you came through them all unhurt?"

"Not exactly," he returned sadly. "I married the fifth."—American Legion Weekly.

HAD HEARD IT ALL BEFORE

Mr. Pester's Pessimism Interrupted by Memories of His Grandfather's Remarks Concerning Time's Trend.

"This boasted progress of ours is mere illusion," grins said old Pester Pester. "Corruption permeates our entire social fabric. Selfishness has supplanted generosity. The process of disintegration is going on at an alarming rate. Our sole god has come to be money. Vice is tolerated, and we make obeisance by hypocrisy. Patriotism has disappeared. Waste and idleness abound. Humanity is decaying at heart. Criminality, moral obliquity, class hatred, the destruction of the family sentiment, pessimism and skepticism are evident on every side; and so on and so forth.

"In fact, I would mention that a crisis is at hand, and also that it is a pretty kettle of fish, if I did not recall that my venerable grandfather held practically the same opinion of the world and his fellow men at his stage of the game and there are still in existence letters written by his grandfather wherein is set forth a like estimate of the folks and affairs of his day, and there is a tradition to the effect that his ancestors felt the same way about their own times and associates. And very likely I might run for office on the strength of the awful condition of everything if I hadn't always been fairly respectable and reasonably able to earn an honest living."—Kansas City Star.

KNEW MUCH OF SANITATION

Explorer Points Out Error in Classing People of Old Times as Absolutely Barbarian.

During a protracted stay in Arabia and other parts of the Near East, Col. W. G. Archer of Evansville, Ind., master plumber and field agent of the National Association of Master Plumbers, made a study of ancient sanitation equipment. He returned to the United States only a few months ago and was in this city recently, says a San Antonio correspondent.

"We prate of our great civilization and we discount the ancients, because we know next to nothing of their methods or their customs," Colonel Archer said. "I found bathtubs made of onyx in Babylon and evidence of tubs made of metal and various other kinds of stone. They are identical with those of to-day, with the same openings for letting water in and for letting it out. The Babylonians had sanitation, plumbing and bath facilities practically as we have them today.

"I know a number of Englishmen who are 'digging' in the ruins of the island of Crete, and I recently received pictures of vitrified bathtubs and toilet fixtures that they have unearthed there."

Traces of Old Civilization.

Five miles from Dartford, England, on the old Dover road the modern road-makers are making great discoveries. Just ahead of them is a Roman camp. Under their feet are traces of Celtic, even earlier, civilization.

The biggest find so far has been the skeleton of a woman, six feet three inches in height, crouched with hands clasped in a praying attitude. Clearly not a Roman burial, for the pose is Celtic and there was no trace of a coffin. The skeleton lay where the body was placed, in a hole cut in the solid chalk.

The road makers are keeping careful watch for more of these "finds." Already they have accumulated portions of a Roman tessellated pavement, some characteristic ornaments of the period, and other signs that the area covered by the camp is being approached.

Many Visit Forests.

Value of the national forests for recreation is increasing by leaps and bounds. Six million people visit the forests annually to camp, fish, hunt, hike, motor or rest, from all parts of the United States, says the American Forestry Magazine. Recreational use of these forests represents possibly less than 1 per cent of their total potential use. The rapid increase in the number of people deriving pleasure from the forests is due in large part to their recreational development by the forest service. Over a thousand campgrounds have been set apart and posted and recreational permits have been issued for over 6,000 summer homes, cabins, hotels and club houses.

Sure He Will Find Treasure.

An Irish farmer risked his all on a field of two acres near Mullinger, which, in the ordinary way, would have brought about $200. After brisk bidding he paid $2,000 for it. The farmer who has become the new owner expended his life's savings on its acquisition. He declares his intention of digging over the whole acreage in search of treasure. Some time ago a box was dug up in the field, and was found to contain some Spanish gold coins and a map, believed to indicate the hiding place of more treasure in the field.

They Heard Him.

Brother had the habit of asking for something to eat whenever he happened to be at a neighbor's house, so his mother told him he must never do such a thing again.

The next time he returned from a visit to the neighbor's she asked him if he had begged for anything to eat. "No," he said. "I was just talking to myself about how hungry I was, and they heard me."

We hear plenty of kicking these times, about filling out the assessment sheets left by the assessors. It is a rather difficult matter to determine the cash value of personal property. Many people have furniture that is good, but old style, and if put up at public sale would only bring a few cents; yet answers the purpose, just as well as the most costly furniture. Some say that they would almost be ashamed to put their personal property in at its actual value, yet it is good enough for them.

WAS MARRIED TO BEST MAN

Odd Happening Recorded at Wedding—Bridegroom Willing to Allow Bride Time to Consider.

Not so long ago a strange error occurred at a church wedding. In some way the bride party became confused and at the close of the ceremony it was discovered that the bride had been married to the best man. Further complications arose from the fact that the best man was already engaged to the bride's younger sister. The register had not yet been signed, and there was nothing for it but to perform the ceremony over again. The mistake had arisen through the best man undertaking to make the necessary response for the bridegroom, who was so nervous as to be unable to remember them himself. At a wedding which took place in a country village a few years ago the bridegroom, on being asked the customary question, "Wilt thou take this woman to be thy wife?" scratched his head reflectively, and, turning to the bride, asked: "Will ye clean my boots?" The query was met in the affirmative, and the ceremony proceeded. A laughable incident once occurred at a village wedding. When the bride had reached the church she had forgotten her gloves, and flatly refused to be married without them, adding: "Be quick, lest I change my mind!" Two hours later the bridegroom was discovered seated in the local inn, calmly puffing away at a cigar, waiting, as he explained, to see if the bride really would change her mind.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned.

The average man does not save to exceed ten percent of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he can not be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars.

Biliousness and Constipation.

"For years I was troubled with biliousness and constipation, which made life miserable for me. My appetite failed me. I lost my usual force and vitality. Pepsin preparations and cathartics only made matters worse. I do not know where I should have been today had I not tried Chamberlain's Tablets. The tablets relieve the ill feeling at once, strengthen the digestive functions, helping the system to do its work naturally," writes Mrs. Rosa Potts, Birmingham, Ala.

You will hardly recognize the old car after a coat of this rejuvenating enamel. You'll have the same feeling of pride and satisfaction you have when you wear a good looking new suit—and you've just about doubled its value.' and 'Save money by doing the job yourself. No great skill is required and it's pleasant, easy work. It dries overnight. Next day hear your friends exclaim, "Look at his new car!"'

SOME SMILES cartoon strip featuring a man in a top hat and a woman. Text includes: 'Man in His Attempted Conquest of the Air Has Only Imitated the Feathered Creatures.', 'Now that man has practically conquered the problem of flying, it is interesting to observe that he actually learned this in the same way as did the birds themselves.', 'But birds were originally not birds at all, but belonged to the reptile family, and acquired wings through a long series of changes in the forward part of the body. These reptiles could swim, and this is the nearest approach to actual flying there is.', 'The first fossil bird on record appears to have had quill feathers between the legs and the body, being a combination of bird and reptile. These feathers and tail enabled it to sail through the air. Continued practice of this sailing would have a tendency to affect the scales on the body of the reptile through friction with the air, causing them to split and become fuzzy.', 'Scientists agree upon this, but they do not all stand together upon the question of the probable manner in which flying was first attempted, remarks the Detroit News. Some think that these creatures learned to fly by springing upward from the ground, others say that they started from the top of a tree or hill and sailed downward. It probably was practiced in a downward direction from a height, and the cumbersome creatures gradually learned from moving their wings to steady themselves in sailing downward. Afterward they found that by continued flapping they could also rise.', 'Man, in learning to fly, also imitated the birds in this respect, for he started where the birds did. His first success with the flying machine was in "gliding" from a height downward, and he, too, learned how to start from the ground and rise.', 'Generous. It was the luncheon hour, and Joe was deep in the paper. Along came Jock, the Scot. "Can you loan it to us a second?" he asked. Joe, ever obliging, complied, and Jock cut out the football coupon, and, hearing Joe protest said: "All right all right my mannie; if I win the prize I'll gie ye tuppence."—Answers.', 'Bliss for the Motorist. "In heaven the streets will be paved with gold." "I don't care anything about the paving material," replied Mr. Chuggins, "if only they won't consider it necessary to put up a lot of "One-way" signs.', 'Deep Stuff. Offended Lady—That shopkeeper insulted me. He said he kept everything in his shop I could think of. Policeman—Well, where is the insult, ma'am? Offended Lady—When I looked in his shop it was empty.', 'Good Taste. "Any person of luxurious tastes would rather any day see a game of baseball in preference to one of football." "Why of luxurious tastes?" "Isn't a diamond more of a luxury than a gridiron?"', 'Right Church but Wrong Pew. Movie Director (to applicant for position)—Can you swim, my dear? Beauty—Certainly not! I'm applying for a position as a bathing beauty, not a fish.—Cartoons Magazine.

The New International Manure Spreader is a Money Maker.

The basis of profitable farming is a fertile soil. In farming, as in other businesses, there are poor years and good ones, but the farmer who keeps up the productivity of his soil will forge ahead.

No method of maintaining soil fertility has proved so efficient as the proper application of barnyard manure. It is a foresighted policy to build up crop yields with an International roller bearing manure spreader. Put manure on your fields finely, evenly, uniformly, and economically; the extra fertility will in a short time pay for the International spreader.

Note again these features in International construction; 1. Roller bearings at seven points. 2. Power delivered from both wheels. 3. Double ratchet drive with six feed speeds. 4. Short-turn axle—no pole whipping. 5. Rear wheels track front wheels. 6. Tight bottom. 7. Two beaters and wide-spread spiral. 8. All-steel main frame.

You cannot afford this year to pass up an opportunity to save all the manure and use its fertility in making your farm more productive. See us about the new International manure spreader at your first opportunity.

Red Mask, the Outlaw

By R. RAY BAKER

© 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

When a woman loves a man she will tolerate a lot of things.

Beatrice Dunkin tolerated a lot from Bob Darrell, but the examination paper scandal was beyond the limit of her endurance.

She had deplored his wretched showing as a student and his numerous escapades, and loved him none the less for them, but when he was expelled for pilfering the papers she realized that events had arrived at a climax which made necessary an important decision concerning her future.

It was the most difficult task she ever undertook, but she tried to be sensible. She never could marry a man she did not respect, and certainly she could have no respect for a man expelled from college for the misdeed of which the faculty had found Bob guilty.

So Beatrice informed Bob that their engagement must be terminated at once, and she told him frankly why.

"You have disappointed me, Bob," she said. "I was in hopes you would graduate with honors, that you would settle down and make something of yourself—like your brother. But you've been an outlaw during your entire course and, instead of graduating with honor, you're expelled with dishonor. I could have stood anything but the last, but I can see now that I could never be happy with you. If only you had the industrious traits that your brother possesses you would come somewhere near making an ideal husband, but as it is—well, it is better that we part."

Bob hung his head and bit his lip. "As you wish it, Bee. I don't know that I can blame you. But I want you to know that I did not steal the papers, no matter how much the evidence was against me. And tell me, will you, whether Joe has anything to do with this decision?"

Joe was the brother that had been mentioned. Beatrice had known him and been friendly with him before she met Bob.

"No, not a thing," said Beatrice. "I used to like him, and I do yet, but nothing more. I admire him for his ambition, and have wished you would emulate him, but otherwise he means nothing in my life. It may interest you to know that I intend returning to school myself and finishing my medical course. I will have a career instead of a husband."

"And I," said Bob, lugubriously, "am going out West and get shot by an Indian. You have called me an outlaw and that's what I'll be—an outlaw from the civilized world, roaming the mountains over, soothed by the solitude—until I get shot."

Bob was just about heartbroken, for all of his attempt at levity. Beatrice's reassurance concerning his brother did not convince him, and he was inclined to the belief that she had rather deep feelings concerning Joe. Bob had always been jealous of Joe, and he was more so now than ever. The blow, coupled with the expulsion, was severe. If ever he needed some one to be loyal to him it was now, and yet he could not blame Beatrice for her attitude.

Certainly he could not stay in town, and he did not. He vanished from Beatrice's life, and never a line did she receive from him.

Joe Darrell was graduated with honors, and he, too, went away from the college town. Beatrice resumed her studies and tried to banish both young men from her thoughts, and succeeded fairly well, so far as one of them was concerned. Three years later she received her M. D. degree.

With this degree, Beatrice went West at the invitation of an old friend of the family, Dr. John Fredericks, who was head of a hospital in Scoville, a prosperous town in a mountain mining district. Doctor Fredericks offered her a temporary position as interne in his institution and she accepted.

En route, Beatrice stopped to visit a girl friend at Quentin. This town was fifteen miles from Scoville, and the two places were on different railroads, a situation that gave birth to an auto bus line.

Beatrice took passage on a bus, along with fifteen other persons. Some of these were expressing fear of a holdup, because of the recent operations of a desperado referred to by the newspapers as "Red Mask," because of the colored strip of cloth that concealed part of his features. Others, however, scoffed at the suggestion that the bus might become prey of the bandit, for, argued one, the authorities were hot on the man's trail and he must be in hiding now.

Beatrice paid little attention to the conversation and interested herself in the scenery that flashed past.

On a secluded road in the mountains, where many trees grew on either side, the holdup occurred. The bus came to a sudden stop, and then and there in the road, sure enough, was Red Mask, covering the driver with one revolver and the passengers with another.

One of the women passengers fainted, another screamed, the men's faces blanched and Beatrice—well, she was pale, too, and wished she had hidden what money and jewelry she carried. "Don't be alarmed, folks," said the bandit quietly. "I'm not after your cash. What I want—what I've got to have—is a doctor. Is there a doctor aboard?"

He stood beside the road watching intently through the windows for any sign of resistance. Beatrice hesitated over his request, but not for long. She was proud of her profession, and she was willing to assist even an outlaw if need be.

"I am a doctor," she called. "If you won't shoot I'll come out."

"I won't," said Red Mask, and she disembarked, trembling somewhat. It required a deal of nerve to thus place herself at the mercy of the outlaw, and perhaps she wouldn't have done it had she reflected.

"Thanks, ma'am," said the bandit. "I have to discommode you, but it's necessary. Just enter the woods on the path and I'll follow. I've got eyes in the back of my head, so don't try anything, please."

She followed orders, and he backed after her. Suddenly he turned and ran, caught her by a hand and hurried her along.

"I don't believe they'll care to follow Red Mask," he observed presently, "so we can slow down. Please excuse my queer methods, but it was the only way I could get a doctor."

He led her along the slope to a shack. She was afraid, but tried to conceal her trepidation. He opened the door and asked her to enter.

A man lay on a bunk, groaning. She went, looked down at him and drew back with a start. For the patient was Joe Darrell.

But another surprise awaited. Turning to look at the outlaw, she saw Bob Darrell standing there, smiling grimly, the red mask in his hand. She sent him for water while she opened her medicine case and prepared to wash the wicked wound near the heart.

Could it be possible that Bob, now actually an outlaw, had shot his own brother? The thought sickened her.

Joe's eyes had been closed, but now he opened them and stared wildly.

"Bee," he said huskily, "where did you—I'm afraid I'm done for. The posse trailed me for miles, and they got me all right, though they don't know it. Don't bother about me, I'm finished, Bee."

She feared he was right. She should not have let him talk, but she was interested.

"Bob is a good sort," said Joe weakly. "He found me soon after I—I dragged myself here. I didn't know he was even in this—this region, but he's got a mine out here. He said he'd—he'd better get a doctor, even if—I had to kidnap one. So he took my—my mask and—"

Beatrice gasped. "Then you—then you're not Red Mask?"

Joe smiled sadly, while he coughed convulsively.

"No, I am Red Mask. I was cut out for—a crooked life, I guess. Why, back in college, when I stole the examination questions and framed it so Bob would be blamed, I—I—"

Joe fell back, coughed again and lay still. Bob appeared with the water, but it was of no use then.

An hour later the doctor girl and her "outlaw" walked back along the path to the mountain road—and to a new world.

WHEN WHITE HOUSE WAS NEW

Writer Has Left Interesting Description of Some of the Rooms in Executive Mansion.

Jonathan Elliott in his "History of the Ten Mile Square" gives an interesting description of the White House in the time of Monroe, John Quincy Adams and Jackson.

"The oval room had crimson 'lock' paper, with deep gilt border, crimson silk chairs, ditto window curtains; one great piece of pattern carpet, interwoven with the arms of the United States. Tables and chimney piece were of marble, and there were two huge mirrors and cut-glass chandelier. The enormous east room had lemon-colored paper, with cloth border; four mantels of black marble, with Italian black and gold front; large grates, all polished; a mirror over each mantel ponderously framed; 500 yards of brussels carpet, colored fawn, blue and yellow, with deep red borders; three great cut-glass chandeliers and numerous gilt brackets. The curtains were of light blue moreen, with yellow draperies, a gilt eagle holding up the draperies of each. A cornice of gilded stars all around the room; sofas and chairs of blue damask satin; under every chandelier a rich, round table of black and gold slabs, and in all the piers a table corresponding, with splendid lamps above each."

Few Books in Forecastles. If books are treasures anywhere it would seem that they would be especially valuable at sea. But, speaking of the average seaman, an old-time mariner says that the rarest sight to be seen in a ship's forecastle is a man with a good stock of books. Occasionally, it seems, a sailor does get hold of a good book or two, and it is quite pathetic to see how he will treasure them.

The mariner adds that he was never in but one forecastle that had not a Bible and a copy of Shakespeare, the property of some one who held on to them voyage after voyage; and such books get read at sea, with such a closeness and persistency one may look for in vain ashore.

Sustaining the Interest. "There are many investigations which reveal no new conclusions?" "My dear sir," replied Senator Sorghum, "if every investigation succeeded in answering all the questions it propounded there would be nothing left for posterity to find out, and it would become utterly monotonous."

CAN'T LAUGH AT SMALL BOY

Investigation Shows That Modern Woman's Pockets Contain Wonderful Variety of Objects.

The number of things which a small boy carried in his pocket was once a subject exciting comment. Today a girl of any age usually exceeds the quota of the most acquisitive of small boys.

The articles which fill the feminine handbag or envelope purse are of course vastly different and yet there are certain similarities.

The small boy carried usually a supply of fishing tackle, some string and a hook or two and often a dead angle-worm.

The woman's fishing tackle is different—her bag holds powder, rouge, mirror, a comb and sometimes an additional pair of eyelashes to stick on when she wants to dazzle.

The small boy carried nails.

The woman carries a nail file.

The small boy carried two coins with holes in them and a Canadian penny.

The woman carries carfare usually and her husband's telephone number and office address.

The small boy carried a bunch of jokes cut from the papers.

The woman carries at least a couple of love letters.

The small boy carried a secret missive in which the announcement of a neighborhood cock fight was mysteriously indicated in rubbed red chalk.

The woman carries a bargain sale announcement.

In addition the woman carries three postage stamps shriveled up and damaged, one broken glove clasp, one milk bottle return check, four memorandum slips, four house keys, two samples and several varieties of pins.

The small boy carried a pack of cigarettes.

So does the woman.—Exchange.

BRINGING SANTA UP TO DATE

Modern Child Considered Him Much Too Old to Be Riding Around in an Airplane.

Story hour in the Prospect branch library is an important occasion for the many youngsters of the neighborhood. As it was Christmas week, the usual yuletide stories were being told to the eager group. Santa, as is the custom, was described to whirl through the sky and even past the handle of the dipper with his sleigh and reindeers.

One little precocious miss doubted his means of travel very much and didn't hesitate to criticize. "Santa uses an airplane now," was the more modern version. St. Nick seems to be taken for granted, but a querulous youngster asked: "How old is Santa? He brought my mother toys and things when she was a little girl, so he must be an old man now, and too old to ride in an airplane."—Indianapolis News.

Ask Dad—He Knows!

It was little Ethel's first visit to the post exchange. Her father, a marine corps captain, had dropped in to buy some necessary articles and had taken along his five-year-old daughter for company.

The businesslike private drew a pencil from behind his ear, jotted down the sum total of the captain's purchases, wrapped up the articles in a parcel, gave the captain his change, and proceeded to straighten up his temporarily disordered stock.

Little Ethel watched the brisk movements of the post exchange clerk with the keenest interest, but said nothing until her father was ready to leave. Then she clutched at his coat sleeve and asked, just loud enough for the embarrassed private to hear:

"Say, daddy, is he a merchant marine?"—The Leatherneck.

Wheat History Was Made.

Among the ceremonies to celebrate Armistice day in France was the inauguration of the first of the commemorative boundary stones which the Touring club of France is going to place at the points on all roads of France where they cross the lines of the battle front of 1918.

These stones are in the form of a four-sided truncated pyramid with a pill's helmet, on top, crowned with laurels. On the side are grenades from which more laurels spring, and the principal side, facing the road, bears the inscription, in French, "Here the invader was driven back, 1918." This first commemorative stone was inaugurated at Chateau Thierry, by a representative of the ministry of war, in the presence of the military attaches of all allied countries.

Notorious Prison.

Belem prison, Mexico City, formerly known as one of the plague spots of Mexico, has been renovated and made into a model house of detention by the Mexican government. Schools for the teaching of manual training and the rudiments of education are maintained for the women, and schools for similar training for the men will be installed shortly. Shower baths and fountains have been installed and the meals are wholesome and sufficient. Heretofore, Belem had been notorious for its unhygienic condition and the worst fate imaginable to be meted out to a criminal was a sentence to this prison.—Dearborn Independent.

Easily Settled.

"Last week Cholly was in a dilemma—in love with two girls."

"The matter was easily settled."

"Eh?"

"Neither would have him."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

TOOK ODD BELIEF FOR FACT

Description by Aristotle of Birds That Never Existed Makes Humorous Reading Today.

Aristotle was one of the greatest minds of all time. His philosophical deductions and reasoning powers have never been surpassed, but like many another great genius he often made the mistake of accepting common suppositions for truth. He was not himself an observer, and his dependence upon the observation of others often led him into ridiculous errors. He wrote in this fashion concerning the phoenix, a fabulous bird which never existed.

"The Ethiopians and Indians tell us of birds of varied coloring and indescribable; of the phoenix of Arabia, most noteworthy of all. It is described to be of the size of an eagle, with golden sheen about the neck but purple otherwise, varied with roseate feathers on a tail of blue, and with tufts beautifying the face and a feathery crown and head. Manlius says that in Arabia it is considered sacred to the sun and lives for 600 years. When it grows old it makes itself a nest of cassia and twigs of frankincense. In this it dies. Then from its bones and marrow is produced what seems a small worm, but it afterward becomes a chick."

Of the pelican he wrote: "When they find their young killed by a serpent they mourn and beat themselves upon their sides, and with the blood discharged they thus bring back to life the bodies of the dead."

ROCKS THAT PUZZLED DARWIN

Great Naturalist Could Offer No Explanation of Peculiar Land Off South American Coast.

To the average reader the name of St. Paul's Rocks is unfamiliar. The average geography and map make no mention of St. Paul's Rocks. They are, of course, uninhabited. The little known island or rather group, lies one degree above the equator and 540 miles off the coast of South America.

In the entire breadth of the Atlantic there is probably no land so remote. The Rocks measure only about 1,400 feet in length and some 700 feet in width. There is no harbor worth the name the only entrance being a narrow inlet but a few feet in width. As far as the records show, it has only been visited two or three times in the last 50 years.

The most famous visitor to the Rocks was, doubtless, Charles Darwin, who landed there and made minute investigations. His description of this visit is contained in his book on volcanic islands. Darwin decided after careful investigation that the Rocks were not of volcanic origin. They lie much too far south to have been a part of the fabulous continent of Atlantis. In his report Darwin says that the island was composed of rocks unlike any he had ever seen, and adds that he was unable to characterize them by any name.

Remarkable Mountain of Sand.

In the great desert regions of the Southwest there is a remarkable mountain of sand. The behavior of it mystified the early settlers who in the days of '49 followed the old trail from Yuma to Los Angeles. The mountain was constantly changing form. The first pioneers mentioned it to their friends as a landmark by which they might guide themselves on their way into the new country, but it changed its appearance so rapidly that many of them failed to recognize it, wandered from the trail and were lost in the desert.

People discovered later that it was the strong winds that from time to time sweep across the desert that made the mountain act in so queer a way. When the wind blew it shifted loose sand from one spot to another, built new domes and pinnacles and destroyed others, until within a short time the whole mountain presented an entirely new outline against the sky.

"A Little Learning."

One of the young women knew nothing about football and knew she knew nothing; the other knew nothing about football and thought she knew something. The result was that the couple caused endless amusement among the spectators sitting near them. When the girl who thought she knew something had given tons of inaccurate information to the girl who knew she didn't know much the latter pointed to the field and asked:

"What are those?"

"What, dear?" replied her companion. "Do you mean all those little figures?" They're men, of course."

"No, no! I mean those posts stuck in the ground."

And she pointed to the goal posts.

"Well, fancy you not knowing what they are!" exclaimed Miss Knowall.

"Why, they're football fixtures!"

Peculiar Church "Ceremonies."

Since a Spanish play, produced at the Opera Comique, depicted dancing in churches Parisians believe that dancing in such establishments in Spain is quite fashionable, only they themselves would be against such attractions in France. Nevertheless there exists a church in France where one day in the year—Saint Marcel's day—dancing is allowed in the village church. At Barjols, they kill a calf and cook it in the church and eat it there. After the meal the choir makes way for a local orchestra, which hits up the liveliest fox trots and shimmys, and couples gaily whirl around a floor shorn of its pews and chairs.

Bible Institute of Chicago.)

DANIEL IN THE DEN OF LIONS

LESSON TEXT—Daniel 6:1-23.
GOLDEN TEXT—Who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions.—Heb. 11:33.
REFERENCE MATERIAL—Jer. 38;
Dan. 3; Acts 12:1-19; 23:12-35; Heb. 11:
32-40.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God Takes Care of Daniel.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Daniel in the Den of Lions.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC
—Daniel's Heroic Faith.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC
—Trials and Triumphs of Faith.

I. Daniel the Prime Minister of the Medo-Persian Empire (vv. 1-5).

Sterling worth brought him to the front and kept him there. The new king was keen to discern his worth and to give it recognition.

II. An Occasion Sought Against
Daniel (vv. 4-9).

11. The reason for (v. 4). No doubt that which prompted this effort was their envy and jealousy. The presence of envy always shows inferiority. It is hard for the human heart to forgive those who excel.

2. Failure of (v. 4). Daniel's official record was blameless. They could not even find an error. Envy is still in the world. Those who excel in any line are sure to suffer in some way for their excellencies.

3. The wicked plot (vv. 5-9).

They trumped up a charge on the ground of his foreign religion. They were not careful about their method, just so their end was attained. When surrounded by such hatred only the fear of God can save. Everyone needs that help daily. In spite of Daniel's loyalty the decree was signed by the king which would put him into the den of lions.

III. Daniel's Noble Confession
(vv. 10-13).

Though Daniel knew that the wicked decree was signed he knelt before God as usual. Note the silence of heroism.
Weak men bluster; strong men have little to say.

1. He continued his usual habit
(v. 10). Regular habitual prayer is essential to right life. Habit has an important bearing upon life and especially upon our religious life. He knew that the civil law had absolutely nothing to do with his religion. God's law is first. When the laws of earth conflict with God's laws there is but one thing to do. Laws forbidding to read the Bible, to pray, or to meet to worship God, have no authority over men.

2. Daniel reported to the king
(vv. 11-13). These wicked men watched to find out as to whether Daniel would pray before his God, and when they found that he continued his worship of the true God they went to the king and reported that Daniel disregarded his decree.

IV. The Foolish Decree Executed
(vv. 14-17).

1. The king displeased with himself (v. 14). He labored till the going down of the sun to deliver Daniel. He was conscious that he had been entrapped.

2. The king helpless (v. 15). The proud ruler found that he was a slave.

3. Daniel cast into the den of lions
(v. 16). The king's parting word to Daniel was a poor, feeble excuse for his guilty conscience.

4. The Double Seal (v. 17). This double act shows that one rascal will not trust another.

V. Daniel Delivered (vv. 18-23).

1. Note the contrast between the night spent in the lion's den and the one in the palace. In the palace there was no sleep, no mirth. Daniel's quiet is as a picture of the safety and peace which are the portion of those who trust God and do His will.

2. The king's question in the morning (v. 20).

3. Daniel's answer (v. 22). God's angel has done many wonderful works.
The early Christians despised bonds, stripes and death.

4. Daniel delivered (v. 23). No maner of hurt was found because he believed in his God.

VI. The Doom of His Accusers (v. 24).

They were cast into the den of lions and before they even came to the bottom of the den their bones were broken in pieces. This is an example of re-tributive justice. Daniel's enemies go into the same trap which they prepared for him.

VII. Darius' Decree (vv. 25-27).
Men were to tremble and fear before Daniel's God. As to whether Darius had a change of heart we do not know.

VIII. Daniel's Prosperity (v. 28).

Daniel goes higher into the kingdom and continues in his place of honor even though dynasties change.

Events Like the Globe.

All the great events of this globe are like the globe itself, of which one-half is in the full daylight and the other half is plunged in obscurity.—
Voltaire.

Disconcertment.

After a spirit of disconcertment, the next rarest thing in the world are diamonds and pearls.—BunJere.

To Have a Friend.

The only way to have a friend is to be one.—Emerson.

Grow
2 Peter 3:18

Some one has well said that we cannot grow into grace, but we must grow in grace. This is another way of saying that we cannot grow until we have life. Then growth is the necessary and normal thing. First, the new life in Christ, after that, growth in grace and in knowledge.

The growth here mentioned is twofold. If there is no growth in grace and graciousness, there will be no growth in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour. The condition of growth in knowledge is the exercise of the grace and graces already bestowed.
These must be used in study and service. From this comes the advanced knowledge of Jesus Christ so essential to the progressive Christian.

The agencies in attaining such knowledge are the Spirit and the Word. The Holy Spirit is the spirit of grace. His indwelling makes the believer gracious and transforms into Christlikeness. Inasmuch as the Spirit uses the Word for our instruction and preservation from error, the Christian who would be ever growing must "read, mark, learn and inwardly digest" this Word. It is well to map out a course of study and then persistently adhere to it. "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly." Then there will be such growth as to satisfy the soul and bring forth fruit unto God.

PIT OF REMARKABLE DEPTH

Strong Belief Held in English County That "Eldon Hole" Is Absolutely Bottomless.

Far from habitation, on a hillside
in the moors of Derbyshire, England, lies a dreadful chasm in the rock. The chasm is of no great width, but has a sheer descent to a tremendous depth.
This is the bottomless pit of "Eldon Hole," regarded for centuries as unfathomable. The gap is surrounded by a low stone wall, and a projecting ledge at one end enables the adventurous investigator to peer down into the gloomy depths. For ages the chasm was regarded as a terrible place, popularly supposed to lead directly to infernal regions. A gruesome story relates that 300 years ago a man was lowered into the cleft to a depth of 800 feet. When the unfortunate fellow was hauled up again he was a raving maniac, and died eight days later.
For centuries the place was regarded with superstitious awe and no real attempt was made to find the bottom until about 1700, when one writer stated that half a mile of rope had failed to reach it. As the whole district is honeycombed with holes and crevices, it is probable that the chasm of "Eldon Hole" leads to a maze of underground passages.

Ancient Advertisement.

A drinking cup was recently sold at London, belonging to Sir Arthur Evans' collection, which is chiefly interesting because on it in Greek is an inscription claimed to be the first known advertisement. It runs rather plaintively: "Made by Ennon, let the buyer remember." For the Twentieth century buyer, it is not a question of remembering, but of endeavoring to trace the history of one whose work must be more than 2,000 years old.
Ennon is believed to have been an artist of Sidon, the principal city of Phoenicia for many centuries, and even in the Middle Ages a place of considerable importance. Now it is little more than a village, its glory having faded as completely as the fame of its citizen, whose request, nevertheless, to be remembered, has not remained wholly unheeded.

Would Be Embarrassing.

During the social session of a lodge the other night the expenses were defrayed by levying fines on the various members for real or fancied infractions of the rules.

The forfeits were collected by the sergeant-at-arms.

In one instance, however, the sergeant made no effort to collect the fine, and the chairman directed his attention to the oversight.

Again the sergeant remained indifferent.

Rapping for order, the chairman exclaimed:

"The sergeant-at-arms has refused to collect a fine from Brother Amley.
We will hear what excuse he has to make."

"I—I—I owe him money."—Youngstown Telegram.

Halley's Comet.

Halley's comet, which visits this part of the universe about every seventy-six years, was seen at its best here on April 19, 1910. Prof. Max Wolf of Heidelberg first detected the comet on this visit on September 11, 1909. In the late spring of 1910 it became visible to the naked eye. Between 2:30 in the morning and dawn it was a beautiful spectacle in the eastern sky. The tail grew in length and impressiveness as perihelion was approached, April 19. "Halley" passed within half a million miles of Venus on May 2, and an observed irregularity of tail structure was perhaps occasioned thereby.

JUST RAKED OUT THE FISH

Truthful Old Gentleman Recalls to Mind a Catch That Was Really Worth While.

"It was just such a day as this,"
said the old fisherman. "There was a warm drizzly rain falling, with a light wind from the south, a most favorable day to fish. It was down on the south fork along in the late Nineties that I made the big catch."

"How many did you get?" I asked, as I moved my chair closer, so as not to miss any of the story.

"Well, it was no use to try to count them," said the old fisherman, as he refilled his pipe. "I was raking hay down on a big meadow near the river, when a big school of salmon trout came up, so I just drove back and forth across the river and raked them out, you could see piles of fish for miles on both sides of the river."

"That sure must have been some big school of fish," I remarked.
"Well, that was the most fish I ever seen," he said as he tilted back in his chair and crossed his legs.
"They had to put in new piers under all the bridges on the river; those fish had completely worn them off when they rubbed them coming up the river."

"Were there any very big ones?" I asked.

"Well, yes," drolled the old man,
"some of the farmers along the river used the backbones of the largest ones to stake their beans on."

"I suppose the ribs formed a ladder to gather the beans with," I said.

"Yes, that's right," said the old man as he plodded down the hill.—Washington Star.

FIRST TO CROSS CONTINENT

Sir Alexander Mackenzie Made Adventurous Trip With a White Party in 1792-1793.

The first white man to cross this continent by a route north of Mexico was Sir Alexander Mackenzie, a Scottsman, who rose high in the service of the old North West company, which was amalgamated with the Hudson's Bay company in 1821. Mackenzie was in the Far West when he planned his trip across country to the Pacific coast. In the autumn of 1792
he led his party far up the Peace river, where they built a post and wintered.
On May 9, 1793, the party set out, passing up the Peace river, through the Rocky mountains, across to the Fraser river, which was followed down stream for some distance, and then across country through an unexplored region, until the party came out on the Pacific coast. Mixing a quantity of ver-million with melted grease, Mackenzie wrote on the inland side of a high rock rising from the shore these words to mark his visit: "Alexander Mackenzie, just from Canada by land, the twenty-second of July, One thousand seven hundred and ninety-three. Lat.
52 degrees, 20 minutes, 48 seconds north." Mackenzie then retraced his course and returned to the East.

Conservation of the Birds.

Entirely apart from the economic are the ethical and aesthetic phases of the question. Does not good citizenship demand that all possible measure be taken to conserve, perpetuate and increase all the beautiful and useful creatures of the earth? The fauna no less than the flora of a country are among its great treasures to be cherished and protected for the generations to come, as well as for the delight and enjoyment of that of the present. In any country as more persons turn back to nature for recreation and entertainment, the appreciation of natural resources increases and a kindlier spirit is manifested toward the birds. This quickened interest in all phases of bird life finds expression in organized effort to promote their well-being as well as in the individual effort to attract and cherish through kindliness these delightful ornaments of park and lawn.—Exchange.

Pathetic Picture of Author.

In the first chapter of Edmund Gosse's "Impressions" he recalls a strange pair in a victoria he often met in the course of his walks from the northwest of London toward Whitehall in and after 1876. The man, prematurely aging, was hirsute, rugged and satyrlike. That was George Henry Lewes. The woman was "a large, thick-set sybil, whose massive features, dreamy and immobile, somewhat grim when seen in profile, were incongruously bordered by a hat, always in the height of the Paris fashion, which in those days commonly included an immense ostrich feather." That was George Eliot. The contrast between the solemnity of the face and the frivolity of the headgear had something pathetic and provincial about it.

Invented Railroad Tickets.

Thomas Edmondson, an Englishman, deserves our thanks. It is not very amusing to stand in a queue at the railway depot waiting for your ticket, but your wait would be far longer had not Edmondson invented the ticket printing machine.

Previous to this invention, a paper ticket had to be filled up by hand for each passenger; in still earlier times the name and address of every traveler was entered in a book. What a slow process it must have been!

It is pleasant to be able to record that, unlike some other inventors, Edmondson profited fairly well by his discovery. For a license to use his patent he charged yearly $2 per mile of railway. Thus he did not, as people say, "do badly."

THEY ENJOY THE GAME.

There is a vast amount of psychology manifested in the buying-away-from-home habit; but the mere matter of mind side—is not often considered.
The most people think it "good business" to shop around, especially to other towns, and never think that the people in these "other towns" are doing the same thing, and they are no doubt just as sure they "save money" by it.

There is a group of people who regularly go from Smithtown to Podunk —10 to 15 miles—to buy. One might easily think that the Podunk folks are mighty fortunate in having such good stores, and such low prices, and are saved the time and expense of going away? But, isn't it funny? The Podunk folks are just as sure that it pays them to go 20 miles to Yorktown and they go, and are no doubt happy.
Does this end the hunt? No the Yorktown expert buyers go to Eureka, and the Eureka wise ones to Parisburg, and there is no end to the hunt.

Largely, this is the sort of mind-play that causes the bargain hunters to employ lots of time. We do not say "lose time" because buying is largely a pleasure. Women folks, especially, will fuss over it, and opio-nize excitedly about prices, and profits, and assortments—but, they like it.
Really, it isn't so much saving, or thought of saving, that influences the buy-away folks, as it is the playing at the game.

Then, there is the following along the same idea, by those who help Uncle Sam to run the Postoffice business by contributing to Postoffice revenue —more psychology acting on the brain through picture description, and pleasurable imagination and anticipation.
Well, somebody is pretty sure to be mistaken in the ways of playing the game for somehow the one sure place for matchless bargains, and the acme of satisfaction, has never yet been agreed on.

There "ain't no such place" but many folks like the make-believe of playing at finding it.

TANEYTOWN LOCALS

Brief Items of Local News of Special Interest to Our Home Readers.

Jacob Buffington, of New Oxford, is visiting at Mr. and Mrs. James Buffington's.

Edward S. Harner is building a two story addition to his Baltimore St. dwelling.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hoagland and two children, of New York, are visiting at D. W. Garner's.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy A. Ourand, of Washington, are visiting Mrs. Ourand's mother, Mrs. Mary Crapster.

The next game of ball here, will be on Saturday, 29, with Arendtsville. Following that, the game with the Bloomer girls, on August 2.

The brick work on D. J. Hesson's store building, is nearing completion. It is expected that the building will be ready for occupancy about Oct. 1.

Mr. and Mrs. H. J. D. Hagan, Mrs. Elizabeth Hagan, Miss Mary Hagan, and Chas. Hagan, all of Frederick, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Hagan.

The business office of the Record is not likely to be open, on Saturdays, during the summer, after 3:00 o'clock—especially if there is a game of baseball scheduled.

Harry L. Feesser, Wm. E. Burke, Chas. B. Kephart and Harry Ecker took the Civil Service examination in Westminster, last Saturday, for Postmaster of Taneytown.

The gunners licenses have arrived and the gunners can get the same by making the proper application for the same at any time they chance to be in Westminster.

Misses Mildred Annan, Mabel Leister and Elizabeth Wilt, underwent operations for the removal of tonsils this week, the first named at Frederick, and the latter at Md. University Hospital.

Misses Emma and Sarah Groves, Chas. Kramer, wife and daughter; Henry Nesky and wife, all of Baltimore, spent Saturday and Sunday with their brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Kramer.

"Rooting" may be established accompaniment of baseball, but the loud-mouthed personal kind is very objectionable to many. One can applaud good plays and encourage the home team without acting the "rough-neck."

The game of ball, on Wednesday was the "13th," game for the home club—perhaps explaining the shut out. Taneytown also shut out Union Bridge 3-0, on June 14, so honors are about even. Taneytown has won 10 and lost 3 games.

Mrs. Mary C. Ohler, who lives with a daughter, Mrs. John Aulthouse, made a mis-step, last Sunday, in front of her home, causing her to fall down the steep slope of the lawn and roll into the gutter. Fortunately, she was not seriously injured.

While cranking his car, Saturday afternoon, Merle Baumgardner, received a very painful accident caused by the engine back-firing. The crank struck him a terrific blow on the left side of his head, causing great pain but fortunately no fracture.

Strange. The Westminster baseball club played a game in Taneytown, on the 12th. They brought along about 15 players, and more than that many "rooters," yet all of them went back home and forgot to report the result of the game to the Westminster papers. Poor sports.

A heavy electrical storm in Frederick county, put our electric lights out of service, indoors and out, on Tuesday night. The current was also off part of Monday. As the use of electricity becomes more general, so does its absence represent greater inconvenience. The Company should increase its "trouble" force.

Paul Hahn, son of Charles Hahn, was arrested here, on Sunday by Deputy Sheriff, Allen Bartgis, of Frederick, and lodged in jail, on a charge of forgery of the name of Nelson Summers, of Woodsboro, on three checks—two of $40.00 each and one for $13.00—cash at the Central Trust Co., Frederick. Hahn denies the charge.

A Long Time Ago.
"I say, my boy," said a sportsman to a lad who had been placed in a field to scare the birds away, "have you seen a rabbit running this way?"
"Yes, sir," was the reply.
"How long ago?"
"About three years last Christmas," Scotsman.

Taneytown 8—Hanover B. C., 0.

The Hanover Boys' Club played the opening innings of a game, last Saturday, as though it might win. A very close decision in the 3rd. inning perhaps robbed it of a run, but at no other time in the game had it a chance. At the end of the 6th. the game stood 2-0 Taneytown and up to this point the Hanover pitcher had the best of it, as Bonsack was taking things easy.

In the 7th. Taneytown commenced to hit the ball and added 3 more runs to the score. In the 8th. Drenning came into the game, batting out a home run and scoring two others. He had not played earlier in the game owing to a finger hurt in practice. Poist taking his place at short, and substitute Boyd going to right field, where the latter played a good game. The fielding of the home team was almost perfect. The score follows:
Taneytown 1-0-1-0-0-3-3-x=8
Hanover 0-0-0-0-0-0-0-0=0

Union Bridge 5—Taneytown 0.

Taneytown lost to Union Bridge, on Wednesday, by the score 5-0. Mr. Grimes, of Emmitsburg, umpired. Taneytown did not lose on account of any remarkable pitching by Mr. Jett, who had only 4 strike-outs, but lost by batting only easy flies and short grounders. Union Bridge earned its runs on hard drives, and a few errors at the right time. One of the runs, in the 8th., was on a doubtful decision at home plate.

The game was won in the second inning when the visitors scored 3 runs, every man having his turn at the bat. This was unexpected, because in the first inning Shaeffer, for the home team, struck out three men. Bonsack came in the game in the 5th. and had five strike-outs in his four innings, but Taneytown could not recover from its trance. The club was also weakened by the absence of Drenning, both for his playing and his inspiring presence. The score was:
U. Bridge 0-3-0-0-0-0-0-2-0=5
