COAL SHIPMENTS FROM ENGLAND.

Will partly Overcome Strike Short-age in this Country.

50 vessels have been chartered to import coal from England and Wales, and it is believed that more than 1,000,000 tons will be on their way to this country by September 1. This is not a large amount of coal, considering the needs of the country; and yet, shipments of this size, in connection with the non-union production, will go a long way toward supplying the shortage. In Indiana, several mines are being operated by the state, under protection of troops. The mines are what are know as "strip mines" and are operated from the surface. Coal production in Tennessee, and in the field traversed by the N. & W. and C. & O. Roads, is reported to be increasing.

It is still held, however, that the operation of the mines is a comparatively simple proposition, and is subordinate to the railroad stike. It is also true, too, that the anthracite situation is by far the most serious, as there is now no probability of a normal supply before cold weather comes, even with an early return to work of union miners, and full operaton of railroads.

Secretary Hoover has worked out plans for apportioning coal, as during war times. These regulations will apply to the whole country, and to all kinds of coal not now in the hands of retailers. The probability seems to be that they will be placed in operation very soon.

It now virtually is certain, unless mining is resumed on a large scale very soon, that some industries, classed as "unessential," will have to close their doors this winter, or at least cut operations to a minimum. This news was brought from Washington by Douglas Gorman, of Governor Ritchie's Coal Committee, and by Frank Harper, executive secretary of the Public Service Commission, after they had seen Henry B. Spencer, National Fuel Administrator.

Little hope of anthracite coal for dwelling house furnaces is in sight, No anthracite whatever l.as been mined this summer, and the normal local reserve of 50,000 tons is nearly gone. If mining is resumed on September 1, the city anthracite supply will still be cut almost in half this winter.

Bituminous coal undoubtedly must be used in households for heating and cooking this winter. That it can be used, though with some inconvenience was admitted generally by coal deal-

"Soft coal can be burned in almost any sort of cooking or heating stove, except an open grate," said Hugh C. Hill, president of the Baltimore Coal burn soft coal will have to pay especial attention to their chimneys and keep them clean. Otherwise there will be many disastrous fires in the Maryland and District of Columbia Approach Agreement.

Reciprocity with the District of Columbia, the dream of Maryland autoists since the severing of the entente cordiale about a decade ago, may be re-established by January 1, 1924, if plans already started come to fruition. If this comes to past it will mean but one set of license tags will have to be used by residents of this State who journey to the National Capital-the Maryland tags.

Negotiations have been going on with the American Automobile Asso-ciation of Washington for some time, with the result that John N. Mackall, State Roads Commission chairman of Maryland, and Henry M. Lucius, secretary of the Automobile Club of Maryland, went to the Capital recently to attend a "reciprocal" conference.

The plan of Mr. Mackall, which has been adopted in Maryland and goes into effect January 1, 1924, to establish a gasoline tax of 2 cents a gallon in lieu of the charge of 60 cents a horsepower for licensing an automo-bile, is thought of favorably by Washington motorists. It is a equitable arrangement, as the automobilist who uses the roads most pays most for their upkeep, the thought is.

The advisory board of the Washington association, headed by Col.
Charles Keller, Engineer Commissioner of the District, passed a resolution indorsing the 2 cent tax, but it would have to be passed by Congess to become operative.

Maryland drivers will not have to go to Washington on trains henceforth to apply for a permit to come into the District to be examined for their papers. Colonel Keller promised Secretary Lucius a permit would be forwarded by mail in future upon proof of having passed the Maryland test. -Frederick News.

A New Mining Company.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers are investing $200,000,000 in West Virginia and Kentucky coal mines which have a capacity exceeding 6,000 tons a day. The Coal River Collieries is the new company and it is owned by hundreds of locomotive engineers throughout the country. They plan to retail the coal to railway men and other workers in the large cities throughout the United States. Miners will be paid adequate wages. and bald heads.

SONS OF AMERICA.

State Camp Session in Westminster, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The State Camp of the Patriotic Order Sons of America met in its 27th annual session in Westminster, on Tuesday and Wednesday, with a good attendance from the 75 Camps in the state. A great deal of routine business was transacted, reports received, state of order considered, plans laid for future operations, officers elected,

A public meeting was held on Tuesday night, that included a memorial service for 70 members deceased during the year. The participants in the program were, Samuel A. Phillips, Sr., Vice-Commander of the Uniformed Rank, New Jersey; Herman A.
Miller, National Secretary, Easton,
Pa.; Chas. B. Helms, State Sec'y, Philadelphia; Prof. W. P. Steinhauser, Past State Pres., New Jersey.

The Memorial service included an address by Mayor H. E. Koontz; Duet and Solos by Rev. M. E. Ness and Mrs. Clayton Myers, with Miss Snader at piano; short addresses by State President Alfred Bowen, of Cumberland, and Prof. Steinhauser, of New Jersey. Roll call of deceased, by State Secretary, Wm. Jas. Heaps; Memorial address, Rev. L. B. Hafer,

The Resolutions adopted concerning the attitude of the order, recited the following;

"That we reaffirm our stand as simonpure, red-blooded, upstanding Americans.
That we oppose, unalterably, in State

That the Bible is God's revealed will to man—the guide book of this Christian nation—therefore, we demand, as an overwhelming majority of Americans are actually or nominally Christian, that the Bible he read each school day, without comment, in all public schools of the State."

The following officers were elected; State President, John C. Davis, Chestertown; State Vice-President, George E. Noland, Sparrows Point; State Master of Forms, Chas. H. Corbett, Hancock; State Secretary, Wm. Jas. Heaps, Baltimore; State Treasurer, Wm. J. Carter, Baltimore; Conductor, Chas. W. Schmidt, Baltimore; Guard, J. W. Anderson, Church Hill: Inspect. J. W. The Senatorial Primary.

The party "organization," as a rule, is on the surface at least—"hands off" in primary contests, and necessarily this is also the rule in the case of par-tisan newspapers. This means that contests "between friends" leaves the voting public very largely to draw their own conclusions, which is all as it should be when the contestants and dividing issues are well known; but, as it happens for nomination for the higher offices in Congressional districts and whole states, this "hands off" policy has its drawbacks, as individuals do not have the opportunity to size up candidates on their own ac

The fact is, in most cases, very few individuals, comparatively speaking, know for whom they ought to vote; and the result is a non-represestative poll of the majority, which means that securing a nomination through the primary plan, instead of representing the voice of the whole people, actually represents the voice of but very few, and many of these not well

Taking the convention plan as whole, and the primary plan as a Theo. F. Brown, et. al, Trustee to whole, the former is altogether apt to Jane M. Bowman, $800 for 18 acres. make the wisest choice. Party organizations, and leaders, of the stripe that always supports the nominees, hardly dare show their preference before the nominations, owing difficulty in getting back into harness for a candidate whom they opposed; besides jangling between leaders is not conducive to party harmony.

Both parties in Maryland, this year, promise to have an uncertain fight on hand, especially for the senatorial nomination, and the average voter has no fountain head to go to for a tip as to his proper course, except such as he may get from local leaders who need not fear to "come out" for one or the other of the candidates. And it is this "local leader" strength that makes it possible for candidates to spend a great deal of money. Not that such leaders are actually "bought," but there are ways of paying for active service that amounts to much the same thing. It is personal "influence" that candidates most need, as but very few of them can hope to be so widely known as to depend on the full knowledge by the public of their personal record, public or private.

Railroad Heads Refuse to Restore Status of Strikers.

Railroad executives, at a meeting in New York, on Tuesday, refused to restore what is commonly called the "Seniority rights" of strikers, which means their full restoration on the pay and pension rolls of the Companies, placing them in evey way, in their old positions, the same as though they had not gone on a strike. The refusal is based on four reasons.

(1) from a point of law; (2) from a point of morality; (3) beis based on four reasons; cause of pledged word to old employees that they would be repaid for their loyalty; (4) because of promises made to new employees. And in general, because any solicitations for labor by railroad managements, hereafter, would not be depended on by employees—their "broken word" would stand in the way.

MUST CLEAN AUTO TAGS. Baughman Begins Another Against Dirty Markers. War

Another war, the second within 30 days, has been declared on motorists who refuse to polish their license tags. This announcement has been made by Col. Austin Baughman, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles.

The first drive against dirty license tags was launched with what was described as "disastrous results to motorists," 146 persons having been summoned to appear in Traffic Court in a single day. The penalty provided for violation of the law covering this offense is a fine of from $10 to

It also is said to be about time for another raid by the state cops, for lightless vehicles, and for violations of the motor vehicle laws, that have increased in frequency since early Spring, as well as for violators of the speed laws who appear to need constant arrests.

The other day a Ford touring car was seent flying along the Gettysburg and Harrisburg highway at 60 miles an hour. It gave all other motorists its dust. Near Harrisburg the Ford was stopped, and some time later numerous and dusty drivers stopped their machines to ask Henry's driver how it did it. Benson Drops Out.

Carville D. Benson has withdrawn as a candidate for the Democratic nomination, in this Second Congressional district, in favor of Senator Milliard E. Tydings, of Harford Co. This was done, so it is said, to avoid splitting up the "wet" Democratic vote, and thereby perhaps letting Frank H. Zouck, the "dry" candidate win. There is still another "wet" candidate, of the 100 percent variety, Mr. Iverson, but somehow he is not considered dangerous. The withdrawal of Mr. Benson is taken to mean the sure nomination of Tydings.

GARRETT AND FRANCE.

Their Campaign likely to Liven up in its Last Weeks.

It seems to be agreed upon that the two Republican candidates for the Senate—Garrett and France—do not contemplate holding many public meetings until the last few weeks of the campaign, and that their time un-til then will be taken up largely with personal tours, and conferences with leaders.

Tom Parran, an experienced campaigner, will take an active part for France, and may be in charge of his campaign. Both principals appear anxious to avoid personalities, as much as possible, and both are said to decry the use of a large amount of

The probability is that at the end the contest will be a hot one, and that neither will have a walkover. Culture of Bees.

A vorous queen bee means success in the bee colony, and likewise a fail-ing queen spells failure. Every suc-cessful bee keeper knows the importance of providing a young queen for his bees every year some time during the month July 15 and August 15. George H. Rea, Extension Apiarist at State College, Pa., believes that regardless of all other good beekeeping methods used, unless a beekeeper looks to this one essential point, his bee venture will turn out to be unprofit-

Mr. Rea has prepared a popular circular on the rearing of queen bees, that gives the honey producer many practical pointers and methods for raising his own queens. Contrary to the general belief, queen rearing is not a highly scientific and complicated task, but is largely dependent on do-ing a few things well, and at the right time. THE RAILROAD STRIKE NOT YET SETTLED.

The President's Suggestions Failed to Bring Harmony.

President Harding's solution for the strike difficulties was announced the first of the week, as follows;

First. Railway managers and workmen to agree to recognize the validity of all decisions of the Railroad Labor Board, and to faithfully carry out such decisions as contemplated by the law. Second. The carriers will withdraw all lawsuits growing out of the strike and Railroad Labor Board decision which have been involved in the strike maybe taken, in the exercise of recognized rights by either party to the Railroad Labor Board for rehearing. So far as indications in Washington today go, there is little reason to hope that the Administration will be able to develop at any time soon a new compromise proposal, or that either the railroad executives or the labor forces will collapse all down the line and pave the way to a settlement of the strike on the terms of either party. The chances are strong that conditions will become much worse. For the present all the evidence is that the Administration is baffled and inclined to be despondent. The executives have demonstated that they will not take the men back to work with their old seniority rights unimpaired. The men have demonstrated that they will not go back to work without those rights, unless they reach such a condition that they must go back on their knees. And Mr. Harding, hav-ing said in effect that the men's position on seniority was right, will find it difficult to locate any new compromise position on the question.

Dodging Responsibility.

In a sense, we are responsible for others, especially for the welfare of the poor and unfortunate; but in the sense in which we write, every man is responsible, first of all, for himself -for his actions, for his omissions.

Recently, we had occasion to note a very limited attendance at an open meeting at which an offering was to be taken for a highly worthy purpose. On the face of the attendance, a lot of good people stayed away to avoid the offering, while perhaps some who attended, gave very small sums because others did so, or stayed away.

Now, in instances of this sort, every person appealed to, having knowledge of the effort, is responsible only for himself, or herself. What "others did," had nothing to do with the question of responsibility. In matters of right-doing, or wrong-doing, alone. Of this number, 399 were individuals are largely self-justifying. There is no such thing as justification by example.

A great many apparently good people-church people-honest folksthose representing social and moral betterment, lamentably fall down when their pocketbooks are appealed to. The idea never seems to appeal to them that the big things are accomplished most easily and surely, by everybody helping. The opinion becomes fixed that there is "too much begging"-its always "money," just one thing after another, and they sagely conclude that they are "tired of it," and no doubt satisfy their con-

But, this sort of reasoning must be based, for its truthfulness, on the coming of a time when one has his debts to suffering humanity all paid. That in return for all his blessings and financial successes, he has paid his full and just share. This time will come only when one's desire for more gain ceases-and that is, never.

We never reach the time when we owe nobody anything. As long as life and blessings last, we continue to be obliged to share them with the less fortunate, and for the good of humanity, for in so doing we return in part our thanks to the great giver of all good, and never reach being paid up in full.

Alien Bloc Still Busy.

The attempt of the alien bloc to break down the all too few American immigration restriction laws has not stopped. The method merely has been changed.

For years the favorite method of fighting proper immigration safeguards was a resort to tearful pleas on behalf of the "oppressed and persecuted of foreign lands." Uncle Sam, being a person of large sympathy and ready trust, was longlooked upon as an easy victim for this cajolery. But a number of things have happened during the last few years which have taught the United States that its sympathy has not always been well placed, and its trust has sometimes been abused.

The passage of the three-per-cent law, restricting alien immigration, brought loud wails on behalf of the "persecuted of other lands." But for the first time in American history, it failed of its effect, and Congress this year strengthened instead of weakened the law.

Whereupon, the alien bloc promptly abandoned its sentimentalist attitude, and sought a new weapon of offense. objected to because it contains so That weapon, the existence of which is just becoming widely apparent, is Gorgeous Turkish Wedding.

A Creosus-like wedding on which $50,000 was spent was celebrated in Stambul recently, despite the general poverty of the present-day Turks. The bridegroom, an Albanian Turk, made a big fortune after the armistice by selling offal. He hired 43 houses for the wedding guests, who were entertained sumptuously for a week. A hundred motorcars and 300 open carriages followed the bride's closed and curtained carriage to a large school building, which he had rented and decorated for extravagant festivities. Each table provided for 300 guests and was loaded with Turkish delicacies.

Experiments Have Shown That in Northern Countries a Certain Amount Is Essential.

According to common belief, cold weather causes plants to become dormant during the fall, while warm weather the succeeding spring again incites new growth. Intensive investigations of Dr. Frederick V. Coville of the federal Department of Agriculture, which have been conducted over a period of ten years, and which have covered every phase of this subject, demonstrate that both of these traditional theories are erroneous. Dormancy in our native trees and shrubs begins some time before the start of cold weather each winter; the appearance of Jack Frost is not necessary for the establishment of complete dormancy. Furthermore, after such a condition of dormancy has developed, exposure of the plants to the ordinary growing temperature thereafter does not arouse them from their lethargy so that they begin growth anew.

Interestingly enough, the Coville experiments show that plants which have responded to the lure of autumnal and winter dormancy will not react properly and resume normal growth the following spring unless hey are subjected during the interim to a period of chilling. A certain amount of cold is essential to stimulating the plant growth.—Scientific

CULLING FOWLS FOR MARKET

To Make Best Possible Returns Every Hen in Flock Should Be Layer-Weed Out Culls.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) Every boy or girl having poultry naturally wishes to earn as much money as possible. To do this every hen should be a good layer. All cockerels, except those kept for breeding purposes, as well as pullets that lack vigor and vitality, should be eaten, canned for home use, or sold as soon as they are large enough, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Selecting or "weeding out" the hens that are poor layers and picking out for market the cockerels least likely to develop into good breeders is commonly called "culling" or culling for eggs and for market.

The best time to cull the hens is during August and September, usually from August 15 to September 15, for at that season it is easier to determine which are the good layers and which are boarders. At that time of year hens which show signs of laying or are laying and have not molted usually are the ones that have been the better layers during the entire season, and the hen that lays best during her first year usually will lay best during her second and third years. She is, therefore, the one to keep. It is not often advisable, however, to keep hens of the heavier breeds, such as Plymouth Rocks, Rhode Island Reds and Brahmas beyond their second year, or the smaller breeds, such as the Leghorns and Anconas beyond the third year, as they seldom prove profitable. You can learn all about the various tests necessary to pick out the good and the poor layers by reading Farmers' Bulletin 1112, which can be obtained by writing to the Division of Publications, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

PORTABLE HOUSES ARE BEST

Make It Possible to Keep Young Growing Fowls on Fresh, Uncontaminated Land.

On a recent visit to a large practical poultry farm, it was observed that good use was being made of a number of portable poultry houses. These were of good size and were on runners made of heavy joists. The runners were braced against each other, so that a horse could be hitched to the front and the house hauled anywhere. This made it possible to keep the young growing birds on fresh, uncontaminated sod, which was always sending up a good lot of fresh grass.

When the movable houses were pulled away from each place where they had been for a few weeks, the rains soon washed the droppings into the soil. This nourished the grass and improved the land. In no case was the sod eaten down till the ground was bare. For small chicks the same plant used small coops on two wheels that could easily be pushed from place to place by hand. In this way they never were troubled with gapes or contaminated soil.

POULTRY NOTES DECEMBER OF CONTO

Look out for lice when your chickens look droopy and sleepy.

Eat or sell off all your surplus cockerels before commencing on the pullets.

The very early pullet is apt to molt in the fall and be no more profitable for laying purposes than the hen.

* * * Put the coops for your little chickens as high in the yard as possible. A knoll covered with grass is preferable; then a sudden shower will not drown them.

Where healthy fowls are used for breeding purposes, and they are housed in properly ventilated and arranged houses, and are fed a proper ration for the purpose in mind, dis ease is practically a total stranger.

Culling Operations in Indiana Standard Bred Hens Show Superiority Over Mongrels.

The week before culling, the standard bred hens laid 2,906 eggs and the mixed breeds 2,547, or 352 less. In culling, 314 standard bred and 355 mongrel hens were removed from the flocks, leaving 773 standard bred and 738 mongrels, or 35 more standard breds. Two owners of

The figures show that among the .087 standard bred hens there were 11 less culls than among the 1,103 of the mixed flocks, and that they laid 359 more eggs the week before culling and 291 more the week after.

CONTROL OF CHICKEN PESTS

Application of Blue Ointment Will Prove Efficacious, as Will Sodium Fluorid.

A study of the life of chicken lice shows that there are a dozen different kinds infesting the same bird. Most of them, however, frequent the rear part of the body at least once in every twenty-four hours where they obtain the necessary moisture for their life and growth. This moisture is obtained from around the vent. This habit of lice would answer one method of treatment, the use of blue

Blue ointment applied around the vent and under the wing of each fowl affected seems to get rid of the lice in a very short time. A piece the size of a good sized pea is plenty for one bird. If the blue ointment is thick and heavy it should be melted so that it can be applied in a very thin layer. It is well to make a second application two weeks after the first, especially if the birds are badly af-

Any of the advertised lice powders and many of the home-made powders seem to work very well. Good dust wallows handy to the poultry house also aid considerably in controlling this pest.

Sodium florid can also be used to control lice. This is a common preparation which can be obtained at any drug store. It is applied by what is known as the pinch method. A pinch should be worked into the fluff of the tail, a pinch under each wing, a pinch on the back, and a pinch worked into the neck feathers.

Regularity in feeding is one of the secrets of success with fowls.

RARE GEMS LOST TO SIGHT

Russian Crown Jewels Supposed to Have Been Disposed of in Small Assortments.

The great collection of Russian crown jewels seems likely to share the mysterious fate of the peacock throne in Delhi, writes Frederic J. Haskin in the Chicago Daily News.

The peacock throne, which cost the Shah Jehan $30,000,000, was a wonderful canopied chair of pure gold incrusted with rubies, sapphires and festoons of pearls, and ornamented with two great jeweled peacocks and a lifesized parrot cut from a single emer-It was a fabulous work of art, and when it slipped out of sight after the death of the shah there was much speculation. Presumably a strand of pearls was lopped off here, a ruby pried off there, and the emerald parparative merits could be considered rot cut into a number of less distinctive jewels. Today a mere throne framework in Teheran is pointed out uncertainly as the peacock throne.

The crown jewels of Russia are supposed to be slipping away in similar fashion. There was no word of any looting when the Kremlin in Moscow, where the glittering jewels of royalty reposed, fell into the hands of the revolutionists. The Kremlin has been guarded by the soviet government. The condition of the treasury galleries is veiled in mystery.

South African papers in close touch with the diamond trade state that $10,-000,000 worth of stolen Russian diamonds were thrown on the jewel market in ten months in 1921-and the crown jewel collection of Russia was particularly rich in diamonds.

SAVED HER PENCIL SUPPLY

Extremely Masculine Office Force Shied Off Busy Stenographer's Shade of Delicate Lavender.

Part of every morning in the Busy Stenographer's life went toward collecting her precious pencils from everybody else's desk. Of course she never could prove these really were her own. The big fact was that at the end of the day her supply was always nil.

Feminine wit met the problem. Of course the men in her office classed themselves as very masculine; went in for striped neckties and checked suits, scorned tea rooms for lunch, but knew every chop house within a score of blocks—real men stuff, you

One morning the Busy Stenographer came in with a new package of pencils. She sharpened them carefully and laid them in readiness on her desk The day sped by. Her pencils were borrowed-but returned. From the far end of the office the office boy cause during the afternoon. "Hey, Miss Blank, isn't this one of your pencils? I thought you might be lookin' fer it?"

At the close of the day the supply was still intact. The color of the wood was delicately lavender.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

He Is Not Yet Crowned.

The news that something in the nature of a tentative offer to the throne of Albania has been made to Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte is a reminder that the Bonapartes have long had a close connection with America. This connection began with the Bonaparte who was made king of Westphalia by the first Napoleon, of whom he was the youngest brother. This Jerome Bonaparte settled in the United States after being exiled from France by his brother, and remained until his appointment as king, in 1807. The present bearer of the name, who has come into prominence, is a great-grandson of the king, and a nephew of Charles J. Bonaparte, who was attorney general in the cabinet of President Roosevelt. It would be odd indeed if a plain citizen of democratic America should now become a European king.

The new wing will be used mainly for the housing of the marine exhibit of the institution, which is very extensive, but which has heretofore been boxed up for the lack of space to properly

Inverted Steam Hammer.

A decidedly novel use of a steam hammer is to make it pull out of the ground steel sheet piling that it had previously driven into it. This was done recently with some piling that had become so tightly frozen in that it could not be pulled out by the derrick alone. The steam hammer was hung upside down from the derrick, and around the hammer four strands of three-quarter inch cable were slung so that they carried below the hammer a clevis that was bolted through the eye of the piling.-Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Magna Charta Draws Visitors. 700 years, Magna Charta remains the most popular British manuscript. Last year 14,000 persons went to the British museum to see it. Americans invariably ask to view the famous charter which insures Englishmen their rights, according to the museum custodians, but other foreigners take more interest in the papal bull, which is displayed next to it.

Heavy green blinds are kept over the precious parchment to exclude the full light rays and thus prevent deterioration, but are lifted to show the charter to admiring pilgrims.

Most persons are disappointed at not seeing King John's signature, according to an official at the museum, but they seem satisfied when they read the script that it was "given by our hand in the meadow which is called Ronimede, between Windlesor and Stanes, on the 15th day of June in the 17th reign of our reign. Women in China.

In the New International Encyclopedia, edition of 1902, the following statement was made: "In China proper not more than 6 per cent of the men and 2 per cent of the women can read an ordinary book." But a great advancement in the education of women has been made during the last twenty years. The Encyclopedia Americana, published in 1920, says: "Until very recently, female education, so far as it existed, was mainly a private or a family affair. Of late years, largely through missionary influence and example, the education of women has made surprising progress, and the tendency is now strongly toward more equality in intellectual training without regard to sex."

Gas Has 2,000 Industrial Uses. Artificial gas is lightening the labors of housewives in the homes of 49,000,000 Americans, and is the "silent partner" of industry, where it has upward of 2,000 uses. The vast sum of $4,000,000,000 has been invested in the plants and equipment. Approximately 4,600 communities now have gas, the mains being equal in mileage to nearly three times the circumference of the earth. It is used in more than 7,000,000 cooking stoves and appliances. 1,500,000 water heaters and 1,000,000 gas heaters and has become so necessary to industry that thousands of manufacturing plants would be forced to close if the gas companies were unable to continue to supply them with gas.

DIDN'T CARRY OUT THE JOKE

Young Man Probably Was Wise in Not Impersonating the "Family Ghost" for Butler's Benefit.

Among the guests at an English place?" country house one Christmas was a young gentleman who claimed to be able to "read character at a glance."

"Now, there's your butler," he remarked to his host. "I've seen little of the man, but I would undertake, by merely playing the family ghost, to frighten him into a fit!" "I don't think you would!" laughed

the host. "Anyhow, you have my consent to try!" The young fellow declared his intention to do so, but as he didn't wish to overdo the thing, he determined to drop a word of warning to the butler. "I say, Briggs," he whispered to that individual on meeting him in the corridor, "you haven't seen the fam-

The New International Manure Spreader is a Money Maker.

The basis of profitable farming is a fertile soil. In farming, as in other businesses, there are poor years and good ones, but the farmer who keeps up the productivity of his soil will forge ahead.

No method of maintaining soil fertility has proved so efficient as the proper application of barnyard manure. It is a foresighted policy to build up crop yields with an International roller bearing manure spreader. Put manure on your fields finely, evenly, uniformly, and economically; the extra fertility will in a short time pay for the International spreader.

Note again these features in International construction; 1. Roller bearings at seven points. 2. Power delivered from both wheels. 3. Double ratchet drive with six feed speeds. 4. Short-turn axle-no pole whipping. 5. Rear wheels track front wheels. 6. Tight bottom. 7. Two beaters and wide-spread spiral. 8. All-steel main frame.

You cannot afford this year to pass up an opportunity to save all the manure and use its fertility in making your farm more productive. See us about the new International manure spreader at your first op-

A Pillar of Salt

By WILL T. AMES

Šzorororororororororor ©, 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

At thirty-one Anne Huntington's closest friends were calling her "The Pillar of Salt." That was because, as birdlike little Rhoda Fellows had phrased it, she had "driven all the sweetness out of her life by standing stock still and looking back, like Lot's wife." The looking back was at a longclosed chapter—a romance now many years in the past.

There was no venom in Mrs. Fellows's description of Anne, only regret -and a little impatience—that a girl as attractive as Anne, "with brains in her head and so much better looking than most," should shut away the fullness of life from herself because of a memory, "even," to quote Rhoda again, "if she did make a mistake in not marrying Lloyd Penning."

"No man on earth is worth it!" exclaimed Myra Hawley, whose adoration of her husband was notorious in the set. "Unless, of course, you're actually married to him," she hastened to amend. "And then you don't have to mope because you didn't, do you?" she added as an ambiguous afterthought. Thus for almost eight years had the friends of Anne Huntington concerned themselves out of their affection and loyalty, with the state of her heart and her prospects of happiness.

At twenty-three Anne's life had opened its arms to love. It was something quite aside from the girl's voli-tion. She was carefree, heart whole, brimming with the joy of being, a normal, happy, enthusiastic young creature to whom the problems of life seemed to lie remotely ahead. Then came Lloyd Penning. And in a day, as if by magic, the girl found the balance of her existence overset. Her life no longer proceeded along the straight line of normality; it revolved dizzily about this new sun.

The women of her set declared Lloyd Penning tremendously fascinating. It was not surprising, they said, that Anne Huntington should fall deeply in love with him. The men protested that there was nothing so wonderful about the young fellow. "Except his hair," qualified Dicky Fellows. "He's got the loveliest hair!" and Dicky rolled his eyes in burlesque ecstasy.

The set had never experienced a more dynamic love affair. It lasted three months. And then, with a crash, it ended. There was another girl, it seemed—a girl who even then wore Lloyd's ring. He had failed to tell Anne about her, and it was this failure, more than the existence of the girl herself, that caused Anne, white faced but implacable, to send him away. He had gone-back to the city whence he came, and back to the other girl.

Anne Huntington took up the round of her life as it had been before. All but its kernel and core of joyousness.

"Look here, Billy," demanded Rhoda Fellows, "why don't you just make Anne Huntington marry you? It's a sin and a shame for you two to go on this way, year after year-neither of you growing a bit younger-when you're the most wonderful match that ever was. Gee! If it wasn't for Dicky and the tots I could wish I were a man myself!

"Rhody," replied big, kindly Will Forbes, "you're a dear, and I love you like a brother, but you don't know much—about your nearest girl chum. It simply can't be done. I flatter myself Anne likes me-she seems to be able to stand my hanging around herand I'd give my-well, I guess you know. But I can't reach her, Rhody. I can't reach her. Somehow I don't believe there's anybody who could. She won't let herself care."

Gay little Rhoda Fellows was very near to tears when Forbes, hastily finding an excuse, took himself off to the smoking room. It was at a country club "afternoon"

It was Mrs. Fellows and Mrs. Hawley, conspiring, who brought Lloyd Penning to town after an eight years' absence. Through an out-of-town guest Mrs. Fellows learned that Penning had grown rich in automobiles and had been widowed for two years. Hawley built automobiles. Urged by Myra, he wrote to Penning about a potential agency, then invited him to the factory. Rhoda gave a little dinner, keeping Penning a secret, and summoned Anne Huntington to the feast.

Anne, lovely, self-contained, arrived as usual at the last permissible minute. "You know everybody, Anne, excepting-oh, yes; including-Mr. Penning," said Mrs. Fellows, trembling inwardly at her temerity, for well she knew how outrageous was this thing she was doing.

"Know me? Anne Huntington? Well, I'll say so!" exclaimed Penning. "Eight years isn't a lifetime-folks don't change much in eight years, do they, Anne?" He had crossed the room and taken her hand, holding it while he

"Perhaps not," replied Anne calmly, with what effort none there knew. "Perhaps less than, just at first, we

"It's going to work!" excitedly whispered Rhoda to her husband. For the visible change in Floyd Penning since he went away, taking with him all the joyousness of Anne's life, was great. It was not that the years had added to his girth; not that the "lovely" hair at which Dicky once was wont to scoff had thinned on top to the point of baldness; not even that the fine chiseling of his features had become a bit blurred. It was rather that the air of knightly deference, the little tricks of manner that "made | unpopular."-Town Topics.

and magnetism of skilled squireship, had been washed clean away from the man, like a coating of varnish, by the acid of time-and of sucess. Dicky said privately to Rhoda: "The fellow's soul has taken off it's dress coat and is in its working clothes."

Rhoda had placed them side by side at dinner. "I suppose," said Penning to Anne in a low tone, "you have heard I lost my wife-that I amhe hesitated at the crassness of what he had been about to say.

"Free again?" "Well, that is what it amounts to, isn't it?" acquiesced Penning eagerly. "You see, Anne, Hollie was a fine girl, a lovely girl; but-well, I never forgot you."

"No," said Anne, abstractedly studying her fork; "no; I'm quite sure you would not.' "I'm going to be here some days," Penning said hurriedly, for the meal was at an end. "You'll let me come and see you, won't you, Anne? May I come tomorrow?"

"I think not," replied Anne. "There are circumstances under which it is merely despicable not to forget old sweethearts-and others under which it is unpardonable folly."

Mrs. Fellows' rising precluded any reply on Penning's part. Two minutes later Anne waylaid her hostess and drew her into the niche in the hall where lived the goldfishes and the bullfinch.

"Rhoda Fellows," demanded Anne, breathlessly, "did you realize what you were doing when you played this awful trick on me?"

"I-I hope so, Anne. Sally Blair told me a lot. And I'm terribly fond of you-and of Billy, dear."

"Then kiss me, you duckling! I shall love you for this all the days of my life! Isn't he awful?"
"Who, Billy Forbes?"

It was the laugh of Anne Huntington at twenty-three that answered. "Now I'm going to run away home, this minute. And Rhody! Tell Billy, like a dear, to come and see me soon!" She was gone. But it was with the happy smile of complete content that Rhoda Fellows, inventing an excuse for her as she went, returned to her guests.

HOPE TO FIND WAR CHARIOT

Excavators Look for Interesting Discovery in the Ruins of Ancient Palestine City.

It was at Bethshan, in central Palestine, that Joshua was checked while leading the Chosen People into the Promised Land, because the warlike inhabitants possessed many iron chariots—the tanks of those days—while the Israelites had none. Excavators hope to find one of these chariots among the ruins of Bethshan.

It was to the wicked temple of Ashtaroth, in Bethshan, that the Philistines brought the headless body of Saul, the first king of Israel, who took his own life on Gilboa close by. They further outraged the feelings of Israel's people by placing Saul's body on the city walls. The body, however, was rescued by the valiant men of Jabesh-Gilead, and buried under a tree at Jabesh, on the other side of the Bethshan was finally conquered by King Solomon, and in the place of the Jewish synagogues were erected. Before this date Bethshan was held by the Egyptians, who adorned it with painted temples and palaces in Egyptian style, and colossal statues.

Second Sight.

This comedy-or tragedy, what you will-has just occurred in a London club. An old and highly popular member had for the past twenty years been almost totally blind. Although he had laughed and drank with his fellow members, all that time he had never really seen them. A little time ago a wonderful eye doctor took him in hand and decided to operate. The operation was amazingly successful. The sight completely returned, and the whole club decided to give the old gentleman a dinner to celebrate the event. The great day arrived and the "boys" were assembled "at 7:15 for 7:30" in the smoking room en masse. The guest of honor entered, saw his boon companions for the first time, murmured "Good G-d!" and staggered out of the door and into a taxi. He hasn't been seen in the club since -London Mail.

Aiming at a Star.

There are tricks to all trades, as has been observed so often, and no one realizes it any better than the parents of adolescent children. One afternoon after school Gladys came rushing into the house calling: "Mamma! Mam-

"Here I am, upstairs in the sewing room," mamma answered. Gladys stormed up the stairs and into the sewing room. "Oh, mamma," she began breathlessly. "Mamma, can I get married and have a husband and a lot of children and everything?" "Why, my child!" gasped her mother. "What can you be thinking of to ask such a question!" Gladys stood a moment in downcast silence. Then: "Well, if I can't do that, mamma, could I have an apple and go over to Mary's to play till dinner time?"

The Unwise Father. "When I was your age," said the stern parent, "I thought nothing of working 12 or 14 hours a day."

"Father," replied the young man with the exquisitely pressed trousers, earnestly. "I wish to heaven you wouldn't mention it. These nonunion sentiments are making you hideously

STAND UP FOR THE TOWN

Here Is a Little Argument in Verse by Writer Who Has Proper Idea of the Matter.

I know my town, and I love my town,
And I want to help it be
As great a town to every one
As it seems to be to me!
I praise my town and I cheer my town,

And I try to spread its fame;
And I know what a splendid thing
'twould be If you would do the same!

I trust my town and I boost my town, And I want to do my part To make it a town that all may praise From the depths of every heart!

I like my town and I sing my town,
And I want my town to grow;

If I knocked my town or I blocked my

That wouldn't be nice, you know!

I think my town is the very best town In all the world—to me! Or if it's not, I want to get out
And try to make it be!
I talk my town and I preach my town,

As I think a fellow should Who has more at stake than to win or For the love of the common good!

I bet on my town, and I bank on my And I think it fine to feel— When you know your town and you love your town—

That it's part of your honest zeal.
I'm proud of my town, I love my town,
And I want to help it rise—
And that's the way to help a town— Not curse it and despise.

REAL BACKBONE OF NATION

Small Town of Infinitely More Importance Than the Crowded and Frequently Thoughtless Cities.

More and more the importance of the small town in the great systems of government and civilization is being realized. President Harding merely gave fitting voice to this realization when he referred to the small town as the "one everlasting anchorage." It is this, and more—a great balance wheel that is forever in motion to keep the social and other pendulums of national life from swinging too far in extreme directions.

National salvation sometimes is to be found in "small-town ideas," which are not always progressive, but which are conceived in second thoughts-and blessed, indeed, is that nation whose people are moved to action only after second thoughts have established themselves! The small town thinks before it acts. Sometimes this is not true of the city, where contributing factors to serious consideration are more complicated, more bound up in the hurrying movement of life. No nation is greater than its average small town.—Florida Metropolis.

Utilities Injure Trees.

the average American town or city is | built by the first sultan of the house ragged and unkempt in appearance, while that of the suburb or small village often is not much better unless the planting has been done under municipal control, and the plantings on a street have been confined to a single kind of tree. The telegraph, the telephone, the electric light and the trolley car have added their share toward the mutilation or destruction of the good trees that were in existence at the time of their coming.

Faulty methods of pruning have caused disfigurement and ruin. "Success follows the careful planting of good trees which are given adequate protection and timely attention," says Farmers' Bulletin 1209, "Planting and Care of Street Trees," just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. "Every tree should be trained to its proper form while young. so that severe pruning will not be necessary later. "To the mutilation of severe pruning has been added the destruction of many trees in centers of business because they excluded a little light, or made the store less prominent, or were somewhat in the way of using the sidewalk for merchandise."

Service Is Thing That Counts.

A merchant should not be a leach on his community. The way to prosper is to realize that what helps the trade territory helps you. Mere gain on the part of a member or business institution is not an asset-it is the service that each one renders to his fellow-men, business associates and the community that counts. If you are going to practice neighborliness try and help your neighbor-be a good neighbor. It is good business. I always figure that if the productiveness of my community is increased my business will pick up.

I don't care if my competitor gets a bigger share—all I want is my share.—Kansas City Star.

Boasts of Dancing Cat.

A little boy in New Brunswick had an old cat that he trained to dance when the boy would whistle. The lad would choose the time when the cat was sleeping at the back of the stove for the performance. Then he would commence to whistle. When the cat heard the whistling she would commence to move as though something irresistible was drawing her and then she would jump on his knee and step. keeping time to the whistling. She would dance until she grew weary if the boy kept on whistling.

"CITY OF KINGS"

Ancient Delhi Well Worthy of Pompous Appellation.

New Capital of India Has Long History Filled With Effort, Tragedy, and Wild Romance.

It as been said as Agra is the poet's city, so is Delhi the city of kings. And certainly there is a sense of pomp and glory that still lingers about the place, an atmosphere of vanished splendors that strikes even the winter tourist who wanders, guidebook in hand, around its mass of ruins and down its stately streets. Even so, as you should see Agra first in the soft, blurred twilight of the day, you should approach Delhi in the broad, brave light of early morning. Entering the town from the Meerut side, when the sun is mounting serenely in a pale, clear sky, making the broad Jumna sparkle freshly, throwing into clear relief the brown, vigorous dhobis who bang their white washing joyously upon the stones, rousing the red, glowing walls of the great fort to cheerful welcome, this is to see Delhi in its most vital aspect, a city of life and busy, worldly activity, always at the center of the history of every age. For, whatever may be said for or against the expensive and troublesome removal of the seat of government from Calcutta, it is at least historically fitting that this ancient town-always at the core of India's history, whether as Delhi, Indraprastha or Shahjehanabad should now again become its capital. The seven Delhis around—scattered in ruin now-represent-each of them -a chapter of history packed with effort, tragedy and romance. Never was a city more teeming with the sense of the press of life, of history inevitably made in the shadow of its red walls Like Rome, Delhi has two distinct pasts lying side by side. In Rome it is the ancient Roman civilization and the past of the Renaissance, in Delhi the old days of invading Mohammedan hordes and the period of undiluted splendor inaugurated by the early Mughals. But unlike Rome, Delhi has always a background of grimness to show to each bright picture, making the sensuous glory of it the more hecticly bright. Therefore, after a cheerful, sunny morning spent among the gold embroideries, the ivories and silks and jewels of the broad and lovely Chandni Chauk—the finest street, some say, in the world-or amidst the imperial, forgotten pomp of the red-walled fort, the quiet of the evening is the time above all others for wandering amidst the fragments of the ancient Delhis. The whole of the neighborhood is strewn with these remains, for although "the seven Delhis" is a picturesque enough term, in sober fact the cities that lie crumbled around the present capital of India number twelve or thirteen, True, of the original city of Indraprastha, built by the Pandava brothers, and said to have been on the site of the present village of Indarpat, no vestige remains. . . . Drive out a few The tree growth on the streets of | miles and you will find Tughlakabad, of Tughlak. . . . Long and ponderous and grim, it lies, once so full of the life and bustle of a medieval court, now deserted by all save the wild peacocks, gorgeous as any courtier of old -who step daintily among its ruins. -Barbara Wingfield Stratford in 'India and the English.'

Chance for Grandpa.

On Memorial day an assorted pair watched the parade, an elderly business man and his litle grandson. The latter amused everyone by his comments on things and his imitation of his grandfather. When his grandfather lifted his hat, the youngster did the same. And then looking at his grandfather said, "We're polite, aren't we, grandpa."

Grandpa smiled and nodded. Then the little fellow saw the former service men in uniform and the Civil war veterans. He looked at his grandfather, sighed and asked, "Ain't it too bad, grandpa, we aren't soldiers?"

Grandpa sighed a genuine sigh. A long study and then the little fellow offered consolation. "I can be a boy scout pretty soon, grandpa," he said, "and when you get a little older, you'll be an 'Onward Christian Soldier!'

This time grandpa didn't smile. His future didn't seem to suit him .-Indianapolis News.

Radio Station on Church Tower.

A radio broadcasting station with a coast-to-coast radius and a tenstory tower are novel features of the First Baptist church, of Shreveport. La., erected at a cost of $500,000, and used for the first time Sunday, April The structure, uniting a main building of four floors and the tenstory tower is large enough to accommodate 7,000 persons. Situated in the heart of Shreveport's business district, its tower dominates the city's skyline. Many small churches throughout the neighboring section have installed receiving outfits to take advantage of the offering of the Shreveport church. Several of them have no pastor, and are able to have sermons only one or two Sundays a month, but radio has now made possible for them the same opportunities offered members of city churches.

LESSON FOR AUGUST 6

THE TEMPLE REBUILT AND DEDICATED

LESSON TEXT-Ezra 3:1-6:22. GOLDEN TEXT—My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord.

-Psalm 84:2. REFERENCE MATERIAL—Haggai 1:

2:23; Isalah 62; Rev. 21:1-22:5. PRIMARY TOPIC—Joyfully Building JUNIOR TOPIC-Rebuilding the Temple.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC
Love for God's House.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC -What God's House Should Mean to a

After becoming settled in the towns surrounding Jerusalem the people were called together for the purpose of reestablishing the worship of the Lord God. The leaders in this movement were Jeshua the priest and Zerubbabel the governor. In view of the fact that the clearing away of the debris of the old city and temple and the erection of the new temple would take a long time, an altar was erected where sacrifice might be offered at once unto God.

I. The Foundation of the Temple Laid (3:8-13).

This was an auspicious occasion and was celebrated with most impressive ceremonies. It marked an epoch in the history of the nation. It brought most vividly to them their bitter experiences in the dark past, and yet pointed them forward to the time of blessing when God's favor would be upon them again.

1. The priests in their apparel (v. 10). In Exodus 39 the priestly garments are described. These garments symbolized their consecration to the Lord's service.

2. The priests with trumpets (v. 10). These trumpets were of silver and were used in calling the people to-

3. The Levites with cymbals (v. 10). These were to furnish the instrumental music of the sanctuary. This was according to the arrangement made by David (I Chron. 15:16-21).

They sang together by course (v. 11). This means that they sang to one another responsively. The one company sang, "The Lord is Good"; the other responded, "For His mercy endureth forever."

5. Mingled weeping and shouting (vv. 12-13). Some of the older men who had seen the magnificent and glorious temple of Solomon, which had been destroyed, wept much when they saw how far short the present foundation came of the former temple. Others were glad of the favor of God which had brought them back and that a beginning had been made in the new house of worship.

II. The Building of the Temple Hindered (Ch. 4). The three perils which put back the building of the temple for some fourteen years reveal the persistent methods which the enemy uses to hinder the constructive building programs of God's people in every age.

1. An unintelligent pessimism (3:12). It was no credit to "priests, Levites and chief of the fathers" to mar this glorious occasion with weeping. Under the circumstances this was a glorious beginning and gave promise of great things for the future. God's promises looked to the future when even greater glories should be to the chosen people than ever had been enjoyed in the days of Solomon. Many today, because things are not quite what they should be, do not go forward with a constructive program, and even hinder those who have the hopeful outlook.

2. Worldly compromise (4:2,3). "Let us build with you, for we seek your God." This is Satan's most common and effective method today. May the courageous Zerubbabels declare anew, "Ye have nothing to do with us to build an house unto our God."

3. Open opposition by the world (4:4-24). When refused a part in the work, open and violent opposition was resorted to. Intimidation and political scheming were used to defeat the building plan of God's people.

III. The Temple Finished (5:1-6:15). Through the ministry of the prophets, Haggai and Zezchariah, the people were encouraged to resume the work of building the temple. They wrought with energy and enthusiasm. How necessary are God's prophets to encourage and urge on the workers in the Lord's vineyard!

IV. The Temple Dedicated (6:16-22). The people were united in this building and came together upon its completion and solemnly dedicated it to God. It was a joyous occasion and they united in the observance of the passover with gratitude to God that He had strengthened their hands in their work.

The Doer of the Work.

But whose looketh into the perfect law of liberty and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deed.—James 1:25.

> August 6 Better Recreation 1 Thessalonians 5:16-24

The first meeting of the month is usually announced as a "consecration meeting." For such a gathering the Scripture verses and the things therein suggested are much more profitable for consideration and discussion than the topic "Better Recreation."
We believe that Christians should play as well as pray, unless the playing interferes with the praying. Without question the Christian should aim to live at his best. Recreation leading to this is most desirable. Recreation leading away from this is deplorable. There is a good deal of so-called recreation that unfits the Christian for the finer things of the Spirit to which our Scripture lesson calls us. For example, we are bidden to "Rejoice evermore." The adoption of this principle and its operation in life would do more to recreate thousands of Christians than any course in gymnastics or athletics that could be devised. "The joy of the Lord is your strength." This joy not only imparts poise and power to the inner life but promotes the constructive forces of the body as well. "A merry heart doeth good like a medicine." It is a great tonic for the whole being, spirit, soul and body. "Pray without ceas-This is an "absolute necessity, an infinite privilege and a solemn responsibility." Do not neglect it if you want to be a robust Christian. everything give thanks."

Thankfulness for mercies extends

Thankfulness for miseries ends them. "Quench not the Spirit." We are guided by the inner voice of the Spirit, the reading of the Word and providential circumstances. When the Spirit speaks to us through the Word and the circumstances of life, listen, heed and obey. To turn aside is to leave the path of duty and as another has said, "every duty neglected means the loss of some blessings that we might have had." "Despise not phophesying," no matter how humble the instrument may be through which the will of God is made known. In other words be teachable. Over against this we must place the next Scripture injunction," "Prove all things." Apply the tests of sanctified sense and the faculties of discernment and reflection, then "Hold fast that which is good." "Abstain from all appearance of evil." That which does not glorify God should be put

The closing verses include the opostolic prayer for preservation for the entire being and the inner assurance of God's faithfulness.

OPPOSED CREAM IN COFFEE

Frenchman, a Century Ago, Ascribed All Sorts of Human Ills to the Custom.

Arsene Thiebaud de Berneaud, librarian a century ago to the Bibliotheque Mazarin, Paris, opposed with ferocity the then comparatively new custom of adding milk or cream to black coffee. The latter, in the author's language, was "consoling, joyful and, I had nearly said, spiritual" in its effects. But let ever so small a quantity of milk or cream be added and the result upon the human economy was most disastrous. Since the dawn of this victous custem preemonia and consumption in the cities had increased one-half and rural communities formerly immune were now beginning to show cases of these ailments.

According to Le Progres Medical, which obtained the above information from a new popular review, La Connaissance, de Berneaud claimed that many eminent physicians shared his opinions. He seems to have had an obsession that all mixtures of fluids were injurious, and extended his proscription of milk addition to tea, chocolate and spirits. Sustained by this preconceived notion, he was able to publish a long diatribe in 1826, in which he accuses cafe au lait of causing almost every derangement known to medicine. But, rabid as he sounds, he was fatuous enough to admit that perhaps 10 per cent of the people might be tough enough to drink cafe au lait without disastrous results.-New York

LOST BY GREAT MISSIONARY?

"Lorraine" Crosses Recently Found in Michigan Believed to Have Belonged to Father Marquette.

Not long ago, writes a contributor to the Youth's Companion, some schoolboys of Delta county, Michigan, who were gathering acorns at recess from a large tree on a hill near the Escanaba river, found some valuable relics that date from the time of Father Marquette.

The boys had climbed the tree and shaken the acorns off. While they were picking them up a large one rolled under a sod. One of the boys pulled up the sod and disclosed four crosses, tarnished with age. Each was standing upright, and the tops, which have rings in them, were close together as if they had once hung from a string. The peculiar shape of the crosses roused the boys' curiosity, and they took them to their teacher, who scoured them and found that they were of solid silver.

They are of different sizes. The largest is six inches long and four inches wide; the smallest is four inches by two inches. All four crosses are elaborately engraved; except for the initials "R. C." the engraving on each is different from any on the rest. The workmanship shows the crosses to be handmade. But, unlike the ordinary cross, they have two horizontal bars. The upper bar, which is shorter than the other, represents the "title" that Pilate ordered to be placed above the head of the Savior. The double-barred cross has several names. It is called the Lorraine, or Jerusalem, cross, because Godfrey de Bouillon, duke of Lorraine, whom the crusaders chose as the first Christian ruler of Jerusalem, adopted it as his symbol. It is called also the archiepiscopal, or patriarchal, cross, because in the Roman Catholic church it marked the rank of cardinals, archbishops and patriarchs. Cardinal Richelieu, as archbishop of Lucon, always wore it.

How did those four double-barred crosses ever come into this country? Cardinal Richelieu's niece, the duchess d'Aiguillon, was much interested in the missions in New France. She made many gifts to the missionaries, among which were some crosses that were to be given to the Indian chiefs as rewards for good conduct and zeal for the faith and for other meritorious things. In honor of her uncle, the cardinal, the duchess had the crosses made with two bars.

There were several missionaries who received the crosses, but Father Marquette was the only one who traversed the region in which the boys made their discovery. It is likely, therefore, that he himself lost them; since the four were together, it is not probable that Indians lost them.

First Message by Wireless.

Sending messages by telegraph and telephone without wires thousands of miles over the oceans is a far cry from sending a wireless impulse the length of a kitchen table. But before Marconi did that others had discovered certain principles which made it possible. Not, however, until Hertz discovered the progressive propagation of electromagnetic action through space was the period of speculation and experiment near its end.

Marconi, then a young man just out of his teens, read of the experiments of Hertz, and conceived the first apparatus for demonstrating the idea At the end of several months he had his idea of such an apparatus complete and a message in the Morse code was sent the length of an ordinary kitchen table on which the apparatus was set up. Out of this initial success the wonderful system of wireless telegraph and telephone communication of today has developed, remarks the Detroit News.

"Resurrection Plant."

During the autumn and early winter several years ago men might have been seen in the streets selling an odd little plant which they called the "resurrection plant." Many and wonderful were the tales told of the plant by these itinerant salesmen to persuade their prospective customers to buy. Most of them either stated directly or else led their hearers to infer that the plants came only from the Holy land, where they were emblematical of the Resurrection. Most of them, however, were Polypodium incarium, the commonest of all the ferns of Florida.

During the dry season the plant curls up into a small ball and has the appearance of being dead. In this condition it will bear transportation well. When placed in a bowl containing a little water its leaves will unfold and assume a bright green color, making a pretty and ornamental plant.

British Race Increasing. The population of the United Kingdom, a little less than 10,000,000 when the century opened, had doubled by the time the American Civil war broke out. In 1901 it was 41,458,721; in 1911 it was 45,221,615. The after-war census for Great Britain showed a population of 42,767,530, excluding Ireland, so that the total for the British isles must now be well over 46,000,000. This steady growth has gone on side by side with a huge emigration. From 1853 to 1920 14,000,000 Britishers left home for places outside of Europe, for the most part British North America, the United States, Australia, British South Africa and India.

Something Off Her Salary.

"I didn't really mean that you are a beast," said the prima donna when the row was over. "You make allowances for my artistic temperament." "I do," said her manager, bitterly, "but if there were any justice in this world I'd make deductions for it."

CHRONICS-BOTH WAYS.

There are chronic "mail order house" buyers, just as there are chronics in everything else. Some folks never get enough of taking chances, and there is the pleasure of getting mail" and seeing what is in it-about like opening "prize packages." And there are, and always will be the go-away crowd, that goes because it can—and likes it. But, there is a way of reducing both crowds, and that is in advertising, and making buying at home more attractive.

Invite folks in an attractive way, and some, at least, will accept the invitation. Just "keeping store" isn't enough. Sugar and coffee-muslin and calico-coal oil and nails-can always be depended on to be in stock; but, tell folks about the other things in stock they don't know about.

Almost everybody, nowadays, wants their patronage to be appreciated, and the advertising storekeeper shows his appreciation of trade, and his desire for more of it.

Some local dealers complain more than others about the mail order business, and there is a reason for itsome stores deserve more business sir! They were so dry, ye see!" A reduction of two cents per gallon in the cost of gasoline was made Thursday by wholesale dealers. The cut in the price from 26 to 24 cents is effective over the entire State, as well as in the greater part of the South. According to the officials of the Standard Oil Company, this action should bring down the retail price of gasoline from 28 to 26 cents per gallon. The State gasoline tax is included in these figures.

THE SEASON'S SCORE

Taneytown Won, 17 - Lost, 3

Taneytown 6-Arendtsville 2.

Taneytown won from Arendtsville, last Saturday, a game that can hardly be rated above the ordinary. Every now and then the game was snappy, but mostly it was nothing to boast of, on either side. Taneytown did not play its full regular team. Both sides had 9 hits each, and 5 or 6 errors each, and the strike outs were 4 for Taneytown and 3 for Arendtsville. The score was: Taneytown 1-1-1-0-1-2-0-0-x=6

Taneytown 7—Bloomer Girls 5.

A made-up Taneytown team wonor more truly elected to score—7-5 in a game with the Bloomer Girls, on Wednesday. As a game of real base ball, it was a joke, but as an attraction, it was a "hummer," as about saw the performance, 65 persaw the per happy over the financial result.
