

ELECTION COST $1.35 EACH VOTE

Some Interesting Facts from County Statement Figures.

The primary election of 1921 cost $5387.68 and the general election $9,117.92. Deduction from this total the sum of $520.00 candidates' fees, and the net cost of the elections for the year amounted to $13,985.60. These figures from the published county statement are interesting.

By deducting candidates' fees from the cost of the primary election, we have as the cost of the primary $4867.68. Then taking the total primary vote for five candidates for clerk, 6227, it is demonstrated that the cost to the taxpayers was 78 cents for each vote cast at the primary.

Taking the total vote cast at the general election, for Clerk of the Court, 10,448, and the separate cost of the general election, we find that the cost to the taxpayers for each vote cast was 87 cents.

Then taking the total cost of the two elections—primary and general—$13,985.60, and dividing by the total general election vote for Clerk, gives a total cost of $1.33 for each vote cast at the general election. These figures do not count the sum of $1002.80 spent for "Supplies, Ballot boxes, etc" which would make the actual cost of each vote approximately $1.35.

This figure of cost per vote may be higher than former years, but not greatly so. In an article in the Record commenting on the same cost in 1916, the cost for that year was $1.25 per vote. So, since the operation of the primary law, and especially since the operation of our present cumbersome election laws, we have been paying a big price for the primary privilege—the past year $4867.68—largely to settle ambitions between would-be candidates, and without any compensation that we can figure out, to the taxpayers.

The records show that under our old election law—in 1897-1899—the cost per vote was 33c and 42c respectively. Think of the good old days when the average annual cost of elections was approximately $3500., for as many votes cast as now! In 1899, when 8213 votes were cast, the cost per vote was but 42 cents. If the same expense had been in force, last year, our election cost bill would have been only $4388.66, or $9597.44 less than the actual cost was.

But, this would be going backward to the old benighted times when county conventions "picked" candidates, and when one X mark voted a "straight" party ticket. Evidently, we prefer to pay high taxes, and complain, rather than protest in the right direction against unnecessary expenses. Trying to disfranchise a few negro voters—which the new law has not successfully done in Carroll—and trying to prevent "bossed" conventions—equally a dead letter—have demonstrated themselves to be very expensive political schemes.

Poultry Show Committees.

The business men are going to have equal consideration with their fancy sister at the Maryland Mid-State Poultry Show, November 14 to 18, at the Armory, Westminster. A Standard Production Class has been arranged and a special judge will pass on the egg-production efficiency of the candidates. It is the intention of the management to establish a thoroughly scientific and practical demonstration of the possibilities of the domestic fowl as a money-maker.

At a meeting held in Westminster, August 17, it was decided that the entry fee for single specimens would be fixed at $1. Word was received that the Agricultural College of the University of Maryland in conjunction with the Extension Service would stage an exhibit and the Junior Exhibit for Carroll County was placed in the hands of County Agent Fuller.

Following is the full personnel of the management of the show: Geo. Edward Knox, President and acting manager; Capt. John N. Weigle, vice-president; Herbert G. Mathias, secretary; Dr. Lewis Wetzell, chairman executive committee; Edgar E. Yingling, treasurer; Roy C. Hook, superintendent Frederick W. Fuller, junior department.

Committee of arrangement: Wade H. D. Warfield, C. Irving Kroh, Milton P. Myers, H. J. Jones, Wm. C. Frock, E. R. Howard, Walter G. Lovell, T. J. Kiler, Miss Lillian Shipley, E. H. Senseney, Chas. H. Fisher, Robt. E. Day, L. D. Maus, Thos. Shoemaker, Roy Smith, Arthur Turple, Wm. E. Eckenrode, E. W. Pickett, John H. Snyder, M. H. Kelly.

Fair Crops in Russia.

This year's wheat crop in Russia will be ample for its local population, making the situation much better than for several years. It is expected that the amount left for seed will be sufficient to greatly increase the acreage for next year. There are also good crops of oats and barley, as well as rye and buckwheat.

At last, a rooster has hatched an egg. The event occurred in Tennessee. After a battle of three weeks with the hen, and all of the eggs being broken but one, Mr. Rooster became the proud father of one chick which he is now "bringing up."

CARROLL COUNTY FAIR.

The Twenty-third Annual Fair to be held September 12-15.

The catalogue and premium list of the 23rd. annual Carroll County Fair, has been issued. This will be the last fair held on the present ground (Ober's Grove) as plans have been made to have the new grounds along the State Road ready for the 1923 Fair. An artesian well has been sunk, a race track will be graded, baseball diamond laid out, etc., as well as modern Fair buildings erected.

The catalogue is chiefly interesting because of the premium list, as there are no set daily programs of addresses. Each day will have its special features and free amusements, and perhaps later announcement may be made concerning the days. A band of music will be present, each day; Taneytown, on Tuesday; Mt. Joy Township, on Wednesday; Westminster, on Thursday, and Detour, on Friday.

Friday will be especially a day for children, with games of ball and various contests. The program for the day can not be definitely given, but the object is to make it a great and popular closing day—a rally for young and old.

The catalogue gives the Rules and Regulations concerning exhibits, information with reference to engaging space, special prizes, etc. The premium list has been appreciably increased.

Coal Miners' Wages.

The Georges Creek coal-operators, last week, posted notices offering the old scale of wages for mining coal, but declining to recognize the union. Meetings of miners are now being held declaring against a return to work without a signed agreement with the operators, and urging workers to stand firm for the union. The operators charge that the miners broke the last agreement, but this is denied.

Under the wage scale offered, common laborers at the mine can earn $7.25 a day, and pick miners from $10.00 to $14.00 a day. The operators believe that these wages, for men several months out of work, will prove too attractive to be resisted. All that is needed in this district, is recognition of the union.

150 Picture Brides from Greece.

New York, Aug. 17.—The steamship Megali Hellas, from Greece, yesterday brought 150 Greek girls who will be married here to men whom they never have seen in many cases. The marriages were arranged by the girls' parents.

Indignantly declaring that the "picture-bride system should be stopped, several American women passengers protested to immigration officials.

But the Greek girls who were able to speak English halted these protests. They said that conditions were so bad in their native land that they preferred to take the risk of connecting with a poor mate in America to remaining in Greece. The ship which docked at Brooklyn, brought 1,480 passengers.

Blacksnakes are the most efficient natural enemy of the ground mole. For this reason they are used on the golf greens of Pennsylvania and are never disturbed. The snakes work only at night, are harmless to mankind and do not hesitate to go into the mole's borings to discourage that animal's operations.

Meaning of "Seniority Rights."

There is a great deal of confusion in the public mind concerning the "seniority rights" of railroad employees. To state the matter concisely, seniority in each class of railroad employees means that those who have served longest in the continuous employ of a railroad stand at the head of the list in the order of their length of service. Standing at the head of the list means that they have first call upon promotions, desirable transfers and continuous employment.

For the classes of men now on strike the seniority rules were promulgated by the United States Railroad Labor Board on November 29, 1921, in addendum No. 6 to decision No. 222. The chief provisions are:

"Rule 17. Employees serving on night shifts desiring day work shall have preference when vacancies occur, according to the seniority.

"Rule 18. When new jobs are created or vacancies occur in the respective crafts, the oldest employees in point of service shall, if sufficient ability is shown by trial, be given preference in filling such new jobs or any vacancies that may be desirable to them.

"Rule 27. When it becomes necessary to reduce expenses the hours may be reduced to forty (40) per week before reducing the force. When the force is reduced, seniority as per rule 31 will govern. In the restoration of forces senior laid-off men will be given preference in returning to service, if available within a reasonable time, and shall be returned to their former positions if possible.

"Rule 29. When reducing forces if men are needed at any other point, they will be given preference to transfer to nearest point, with privilege of returning to home station when force is increased, such transfer to be made without expense to the company. Seniority to govern all cases."

From the above rules it is clear that the employees whose names stand toward the head of the lists of their class have by reason of that seniority these valuable privileges;

(1) Choice of the opportunity of shifting from night work to day work.

(2) Choice of desirable vacancies or new jobs when created.

(3) In case of reduction of forces, assurance that they will be the last to be laid off and the first to be taken on when forces are increased

(4) When forces are being reduced at one point and maintained or increased at another point, the opportunity of filling the vacancies at the other point temporarily without losing their rights at their regular place of employment.

The striking railroad employees insist they should be taken back and given all the above mentioned seniority rights which they lost when they voluntarily left the employ of the railroads. The railroad executives insist that when the striking men return to work they should not be given back the above mentioned seniority rights, but should take their positions as new men.

HOLD-UP AND MURDER.

Occurs in Broad Daylight, on a Street in Baltimore.

Baltimore bandits shot and killed William B. Norris, treasurer of the Hicks, Tase & Norris Co., building contractors, and brutally assaulted Frederick W. Kuehe, a book-keeper of the firm, in broad daylight, last Friday morning, at Parke Ave. and Madison Sts., while they were carrying $7,263 pay-roll cash to employees of the firm, from the Commonwealth Bank to the office of the Company on Madison St.

There were five bandits in the party, who drove up to the curb in an automobile, shot and killed Norris, knocked Kuehe senseless, seized the packages of money and made a getaway on the crowded street. There were dozens of witnesses to the tragedy.

The police department got busy and made numerous arrests. At this time, three of the five men seem to have been caught, as well as several others implicated with the gang. Frank J. Allers, one of the five, has made a confession, charging Walter Socolow, of Baltimore, with having done the shooting, John L. Smith, as the man who attacked Kuehe, James P. Hart who mapped out the tragedy, Charles P. Carey, a general confederate, while he, Allers, drove the car. Socolow and Hart are still at large.

Ten Thousand Dollars reward has been offered for information resulting in the arrest and conviction of the bandits, $5000., by The Sun; $2500., by the Fidelity & Deposit Co., and $2500., by four others.

The Japan Advertiser.

The Record has received through the courtesy of Senator Weller who is now in Japan, at a reunion of the class of '81 U. S. Naval Academy, a copy of the Japan Advertiser, published in Tokyo, in the English language. The class, with the Secretary of the Navy, was received with the highest honors, and entertainment provided by the most distinguished men and women of that country.

The paper is profusely illustrated, and compares favorably with the large papers published in this country. Senator Weller will return via China, the Philippines, Guam, Honolulu, San Francisco, San Diego and the Panama Canal. The Senator has been President of his class for over 25 years.

BY THE COMMITTEE.

Convicts "Strike" for Peaches.

Three hundred convicts in the New Jersey state prison went on a strike, Sunday night, because the portion of peaches served for dessert was so small. "We want peaches" was their slogan, which is not far removed from the strike cry in general—more "peaches."

THE RAILROAD SITUATION.

Grows Worse rather than Better. Government Operation.

The Railroad executives are firm against reinstating men, with their "seniority rights" unimpaired. Some of the Western roads favor making individual terms, yet profess to stand by the Eastern roads on the seniority matter. (See article elsewhere on the meaning of "seniority rights"). The union leaders say they see in this an attempt to "smash" the unions.

Acts of violence appear to have been growing, this week, against railroad property, but mostly in the far south, and northwest. Fear is growing that unless there is an early settlement, the strike leaders may not be able to control the more violently inclined. So far, there has been comparatively little damage done.

All hope of settlement has not been given up, but it is feared that the worst is yet to come, and nobody seems to know in what form the "worst" may be. It is now believed that the President will again go before Congress, and ask full authority, even to the extent of government operation; but it is not clear just what "government operation" might mean, nor where it might lead to.

Flag Covered Casket Not Permitted to Enter Church.

Funeral services intended to have been conducted in the Hernly Mennonite church, at Manheim, Pa., over the body of Private Hammond K. Gible, killed in action in France in 1918, were not held there because the minister, the Rev. John Snavely, declared it was against the rules of his denomination to admit to the church coffins bearing any decorations. He said he was willing to conduct services if no decorations were placed on the coffin. The American flag is understood to be the "decoration" in question.

The soldier's mother, a member of the church, consulted Dr. D. W. Martin, commander of the Manheim American Legion Post, named after Private Gible, and the services were held at the United Brethren church, the coffin being covered with the American flag. Legion members in Lancaster and at Manheim are stirred up over the incident.

This committee comprises a number of academic, political and labor leaders and professional men and women from all sections of Germany. Straw votes will be taken in various cities to sound public sentiment.

PROHIBITION WILL STAY.

So Says Prohibition Commissioner Haynes, in an Address.

Ocean Grove, N. J., Aug. 17.—Federal Prohibition Commissioner Haynes in an address prepared for tonight under the auspices of the New Jersey Council of Churches, prophesized that the Eighteenth Amendment would never be repealed or modified. He appealed to the country to support, in the elections of this year, candidates who have "come out wholly and patriotically on the side of law and order."

The Commissioner expressed belief that the Nineteenth Amendment, in giving women the ballot, had made it sure that the Eighteenth Amendment and the legislation for enforcing it would live on forever without change. He advised his audience to discount 98 per-cent. of all remarks and reports of a doubtful nature referring to prohibition law enforcement work unless they were sure of the newspaper printing them or the person giving them utterance. He said his appeal, upon taking office 14 months ago for the press, stage and screen to lend their aid to the great problem of enforcement had brought pleasing response.

Editorial and news writers have responded to the appeal in a very satisfactory manner, and most editorials are now strong for enforcement," he said. "The cartoonist has ceased to ridicule, and practically every cartoon in newspapers and magazines is supporting enforcement materially, and the great mass of people are helpfully reached by this means. Correspondents and reporters are now handling prohibition news in a straightforward fashion. Now come the theaters, with the heads of vaudeville circuits issuing orders restraining performers from making any humorous reference to the Eighteenth Amendment.

"Every good American citizen, whether native born or adopted, recognizes that he has entered into a contract to observe the laws and to contribute to the best of his ability to the support of the fundamentals of the Government. If the sacredness of contract is not observed in commercial and industrial relationships, at once business becomes chaotic. If the sacredness of contract of capital with labor or labor with capital is not observed with sincerity, at once there is chaos. If there should be a general disregard for the sacredness of contract by our citizenship with the Government, nothing but anarchy could result. In other words, stable civilization is built upon the foundation of covenants and the keeping of them. "The difficulty is not altogether with that group of our population which may have sprung from foreign shores. There is also some difficulty with a certain group of citizenry, made up of respected business and professional men, who have been slow to realize that there is just one question involved in prohibition law enforcement—and that question is for or against the Constitution of the United States.

The "Strike" Mania—and Eggs.

This strike mania has not spread, thus far, to the great American hen. She has been working full time and, where artificial light has been provided, overtime for the last year, and has asked nothing more than board and lodging.

Never, apparently, has she operated on a higher scale of production, for there is a whaling big stock of eggs, fresh and storage, today. The price of eggs has declined radically in the last year.

If Mr. Gompers doesn't send out some business agents to unionize the poultry slaves there is no telling what will happen. Everybody may have eggs for his breakfast in the morning. One of the first things the business agents probably would do would be to brand as "unfair" those plants that use electric light and thus deceive the hens. They are. But the hens don't seem to mind it.

Hens virtually refuse to lay eggs except during certain months of the year, but the particular time the hen chooses for a vacation depends largely on the climate of the place where she happens to be located. Therefore the "fresh egg" is being produced the year round in one section or another of the United States.

The actual age of an egg is said to be relatively of much less importance than a number of other factors that affect its quality. An egg forty-eight hours old that has lain in a wheat shock during a warm August rain and then has been in a warm kitchen probably would be unfit for food, while another egg kept for eight months in a first-class cold-storage room would be entirely edible and of fairly good quality.

A good eatable egg must be carefully guarded from the time it is laid against excessive moisture, heat and strong odors. Temperature is the most important factor affecting the interior quality of the egg, and unless its other surroundings have been unusual the egg which has been under low and favorable temperature throughout its career will deteriorate but slightly and will remain a good, usable egg for a considerable period.—Richard Spillane, in Phila. Ledger.

Considering the large number of hold-ups of messengers carrying large sums of cash for pay rolls, the question arises—why not pay employees with checks?

COAL COMMISSION PASSED BY HOUSE

The Soft Coal Miners are Beginning Active Operations.

President Harding, last Friday, delivered a message to Congress, based chiefly on the coal situation, and calling for legislation that would give the government control of the fuel industry, but no specific recommendations were made for additional executive power to deal with the partial paralysis of the railroad situation.

In his message the President outlined four specific propositions upon which he wants that body to legislate without delay. In the first place he wants a Government commission created for a sweeping and searching inquiry into the coal industry in the hope of evolving a plan for the permanent stabilization of that basic business.

In the next place he proposes "some form of temporary control (by the Government) of distribution and prices" to protect the country during the coming winter against profiteering and fuel distress.

In that connection he suggests "immediate provision for a temporary coal agency, with needed capital to purchase, sell and distribute coal which is carried in interstate commerce."

Finally the President asks that Federal courts be given jurisdiction over outrages committed against foreigners, as in the case of two aliens who were among those murdered at Hermin, Ill.

Both Senate and House acted in a halting way, on the message, pretty clearly demonstrating a "let George do it" preference, with the underground opinion that it would hardly be worth while to ask for any drastic anti-strike legislation at "this time," which means, before the election in November.

On Thursday night the House passed a bill 319 to 55 creating a Federal Coal Commission to obtain all facts possible relating to the coal industry. Both miners and operators were denied representation on the commission; 24 Republicans voted against, and 24 Democrats for, the bill. There was no pronounced opposition.

More than 50 per-cent of the soft coal miners are working in Illinois. An agreement to end the strike has also been reached in Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas and Oklahoma.

The anthracite situation remains a stand-off, neither side being willing to make a move, but apparently both ready for peace.

The Maryland Fuel Distribution Committee promises enough coal, through the winter, in small lots (likely bituminous) but that nobody will be able to fill their cellars at one time. Many thousands of tons of Welsh coal on their way to Baltimore; this coal is said to be an intermediate, between our anthracite and bituminous, and can easily be used for all purposes.

45,000 miners in central Pennsylvania have been notified to return to work, at once, and operators are rushing plans for big production.

Stultz Trial, August 29.

Judges Urner and Worthington have fixed August 29 and Rockville, for the trial of Wm. A. Stultz for the killing of policeman John P. Adams, of Frederick. The prisoner has little to say, to his counsel, or anybody. His personal affairs are being settled up, and the sale of his effects, levied on by the Sheriff, will be held this Saturday.

The Civil Service Commission has reported in favor of two aspirants for Postmaster at Westminster, passing satisfactory examinations—Lloyd D. Schaeffer and Harry M. Kimmey. The office pays a salary of $2800, a year.

All references to prohibition, whether serious or humorous, have been ordered stricken from jokes, songs and patter contained in the acts appearing on the Keith vaudeville circuit. This ban includes the affiliated B. S. Moss and Proctor circuits, and practically makes it impossible for actors to refer to Volsteadism on any variety stage in the United States. A like order has been in effect on the largest Western vaudeville circuit, the Orpheum, for some time.

William I. Norris, Democrat, has been requested to retire from the U. S. Senatorial contest, but has declined. It is also rumored that David J. Lewis may be asked to drop out, and that he too, will decline. The object of the leaders is to avoid a primary fight, and leave Wm. Cabell Bruce a clear field.

Our Minded-ness.

Some people are eye-minded, and some are ear-minded. There are also some who may be said to be stomach-minded, and some just plain selfish-minded; but, the best of all is to be R-I-G-H-T-minded. Most people are just eye and ear minded—influenced most by what they see and hear—and never work their minds, except the least possible in order to get by, as fairly intelligent.

Being right-minded, requires effort. More than that, it requires actual courage and self-sacrifice; because, we must consider self, and our easy inclinations as subordinate to what may appropriately be called, the general good. In other words, "being good" is attended pretty generally with abnegation, which accounts for its scarcity.

Was it Andrew Jackson who said, "I would rather be right, than be President?" That is the sentiment that counts, and it is worth greatly more than is commonly accorded to it, so strong are human inclinations. We are all materialists, and take but little thought of what influence directs our minds; in fact, we are hardly sensible that there is such an influence, and adopt policies without much effort to weigh them.

So-called "Beauty" Pictures.

It is said, in extenuation of the many more or less immodest, if not actually immoral, features of daily newspapers, that circulation managers indulge in such features, not from choice, but as a means of gaining "mass circulation;" that is, more circulation. If this be true, then the very liberal and continuous display of "bathing beauties," "movie stars," and contestants for "beauty prizes," must help furnish this "mass circulation" through desire to see their supposed charms of face and figure on the pictured page.

There may have been a time when a portion of the general public would part with their cash, especially for the purpose of regaling their vision with naughty pictures of this class; but hardly now. The average man would be very unobservant, indeed, if he did not see, practically every day, actual living moving pictures enough of this sort, without buying them in a daily in mere black and white; so, this circulation boosting must actually come from the fair ones themselves, who want to gain a larger audience than the average bathing shore, or street parade, presents.

If this be true, then, the fathers and mothers of the country are very lax in parental discipline, if not actually particeps criminis in the very much overdone illustrating orgy that nauseates—as we believe—more readers than it pleases. Unfortunately, those who dislike the extreme commonness and vulgarity of the "nude in art" have no chance of contributing their share to loss in newspaper circulation, thereby more than balancing the mass gain, unless they want to engage in the prohibition of reading the news of the day that is still fit to read.

The Minimum of Work.

The minimum of work, for the maximum of pay, is a country-wide effort these days. Boiled down to brass tacks, that is what all high labor costs mean, and it is the foundation for strikes—big pay and short hours—big pay and restricted production.

In another, and equally understandable sense, the sin of covetousness prevails as never before. What has for ages stood for favorable opportunity, good luck, fortunate investments, and unquestionably the pressing of individual advantages—one, or all of these—has inspired others to reach the same happy consummation by short cuts and new expedients.

Hard work, never a wanted condition, is being resisted and resented as never before, and the success of many in "getting away with it" has inspired multitudes of followers, and little regard for the right or wrong of the pursuit. The old Biblical rule that man shall exist by the "sweat of his brow" is being contested. That some may live in ease and luxury—even when so doing is legally and honestly arrived at, no longer prevents coveting the same desirable condition. The fact that some live on "Easy Street," no longer passes as an unattainable condition, but is trailed and sought for in hundreds of varieties of hunts, regardless of the laws of honor, morality or righteousness.

Individual initiative and effort no longer has as its proper basis hard work, close application, and strict economy. It is much too slow a prospect, and too far to reach the prize. The main thing, now, is to "get there," and to do so quickly and by short cuts, law and honesty being negligible barriers to an amazingly large extent.

The man—especially the young man—who still pursues the working and earning plan, making progress by slow stages and economy, is not the examples of success that stands out as the pattern. "Working and winning" has been displaced by winning, with as little work as possible—or none at all.

A Political "Dodo."

The following editorial comment, by the Baltimore Sun, on the contemplated resignation of Mr. Knight, of Ohio, from the House, because he was "licked" in the Ohio primary for the Republican nomination for Governor, is pretty good reasoning, in the main. Mr. Knight was snowed under because the people of Ohio preferred to stand by the President, rather than by Mr. Knight's "progressivism" and because they also preferred to stand by the Volstead act.

Mr. K. evidently declines to play, when he can't have his own way, which is pretty good evidence that he is a misfit, in Congress, and is better out, than in. However, the Sun puts it this way.

"Representative Charles L. Knight, of Ohio, is going to resign his seat in the House because he considers his failure to win the Republican nomination for Governor at the recent primary equivalent to a party repudiation of the principles for which he stood. In the campaign for the nomination he made a straightfight fight against the policies of the Harding Administration, including those relating to the Volstead act, the tariff and ship subsidy, and as he was defeated he interprets the primary as an emphatic suggestion to him by his party that he has no right to represent it at Washington or anywhere else. Being a progressive from conviction and not merely for political profit, he feels that he should give up his seat in Congress rather than his principles.

Mr. Knight is not simply that rara avis, a politician with an ingrowing conscience. He seems to be a political dodo a species of unselfish statesman supposed to have been long extinct. We cannot recall another case like his within the last two or three generations. When, within the memory of the oldest inhabitant, has a member of the House of Representatives given up his job simply because his application for another had been turned down by his party? Representative Knight exhibits an astounding fastidiousness that must excite the scorn of all practical party men. The precedent is unseemly and dangerous. They must naturally feel either that a writ de lunatico inquirendo is in order or that the fellow is engaged in a sharp game of advertising.

Perhaps he is; but we hope for the sake of Ohio and of the country, which have few known types of this sort, that he is as honest as he would have us believe him to be. And he will show himself none the less intrinsically honest if he reconsiders his decision to bow to the supposed will of his party and serve merely as a private in the ranks. Mr. Knight's political morality appears to be of a high grade, but his reasoning on this subject seems to be defective.

In the first place, as a Congressman he represents the Democratic as well as the Republican constituents of his district. The primary registered only the mandate of Republicans. In the second place, the vote of his successful Republican opponent for Governor represented only part of the Republican mind. In the third place, if Mr. Knight's convictions are a matter of political conscience, if he thinks their triumph essential to the welfare of the country, he should not abandon them because of a supposed adverse party majority. He has identified himself with progressive leadership in Ohio, as Senator Borah has done nationally at Washington. There is far more justification for a progressive bloc in the country and in Congress than for any other kind. What Mr. Knight should do is not to surrender to the party machine, but tell it he has just begun to fight.—Balt. Sun.

Blaming the Housewife.

Living costs have been slowly mounting and the people have been asking the reason. Now it is answered—the fault is with the American housewife. Yes, that's it. That is the testimony of some large dealers in foodstuffs at some of the world's principal markets. How? Oh, she will not buy except the prices are of the highest. To cater to her whims, dealers have two or three prices on vegetables and fruits, all the same quality, but she insists on paying the highest price. Of course the dealer doesn't see anything dishonest in this procedure of his—he must gratify the buyer.

And the woman who has sometimes spent half her morning in shopping around to save a few cents on her list, is to be the "goat." She will not buy at reasonable prices, no indeed. She has so much money to spend, you know, that she simply insists that the dealer charge her an inordinate price so as to take her money. And such nonsense is soberly put before the public for the truth. It may be that there are a few such marketers, but millions of women who are struggling to make the weekly pay envelope meet the weekly bills will indignantly repudiate any such charge. They are too anxious to save even a few cents to make purchases until they have found the lowest prices.—Ellicott City Times.

This Amazing Country of Ours.

As the trans-continental traveler traverses the United States he must marvel at the greatness and vastness of our common country. Its illimitable plains, its stupendous reaches of desert, its towering mountain chains, its teeming cities, its majestic rivers, slow rolling to the sea, these tell a story of a national heritage unsurpassed on earth. One can but feel elated that he possesses citizenship in a nation that has proved itself able to dominate and reduce to orderly and productive civilization this vast empire.

One who returns from such a journey may well feel a certain wonder that this great area is so well unified as it is. Over in Europe, there is a patchwork and angry tangle of conflicting races and nationalities. The people travel a few miles and find themselves among alien speech, as a result of which jealousies and misunderstandings grow.

On our side, what a contrast! The man from Boston walks the streets of Los Angeles and San Francisco, and it seems amazing that though 3,000 miles from home, all these people speak the same tongue, wear the same clothes, and entertain about the same ideas as his home folks. It is the most marvellous example of unification ever attained in world history.

To preserve the harmony and co-operation needed for national welfare, each section must feel concerned about the welfare of every other. The people should read the newspapers from other sections more freely. Our folks here in Frederick should frequently send copies of The News to relatives and friends in distant States, so they could know what our people are talking about. All problems should be considered from a broad and national point of view, in the effort to promote the public welfare as a whole, and care for the genuine needs of each section.—Frederick News.

Cause of Appendicitis.

When the bowels are constipated, the lower bowels or large intestines become packed with refuse matter, that is made up largely of germs. These germs enter the vermiform appendix and set up inflammation, which is commonly known as appendicitis. Take Chamberlain's Tablets when needed and keep your bowels regular and you have little to fear from appendicitis.

A Helping Hand.

My sister and I were on the boat which was to take us up the river when I remembered an important telephone message I ought to have made. I hurried off the gangplank, up the street, and into the nearest drug store. As I returned the last passengers were going aboard the boat.

"Where is your ticket, miss?" asked the white-ducked official.

"Where, indeed! I dashed back to the drug store. Fortunately, my purse was where I had left it.

But when I reached the boat again the plank had been taken in.

"It's all right, miss," said the grinning negro porter on the wharf. And before I knew what was happening he had picked me up and thrown me lightly over a foot or two of water into the arms of a sailor on the boat.

ANCIENT PEOPLE A MYSTERY

Excavations on Site of Askalon and Gaza May Throw Light on Philistines.

A further attempt is to be made this summer to solve the "mystery of the Philistines."

Professor Garstand, the archeologist, has returned to Palestine after his visit to England and has started to mark out sites for further excavations.

During the past two years the professor and his assistants have been engaged in making exploration on the sites of the ancient cities of Askalon and Gaza.

This season trial explorations are to be made upon a series of "tells" (artificial hill mounds, the debris of successive cities near the two sites of Askalon and Gaza. Little is known of the national history of the Philistines, and it is the object of the new excavations to get at the problem of this mysterious race.

Professor Garstand considers that it would be too prolonged and expensive a business to dig through the great depth of Graeco-Roman buildings to the deeper layers in which lie the Philistine remains of the city of Askalon, so that the excavations will be outside the walls of the city. A good deal of pottery has been discovered and a few weapons which may have been used against King David.

Many theories have been advanced as to who the Philistines were, and from whence they came, but it is generally believed their origin was in the neighborhood of the island of Cyprus. Reference is made to them in the pre-Mosaic period, but for at least 3,000 years they have remained a mystery.

MEXICANS TAKE TO "MOVIES"

Popular American Amusement May Yet Take the Place of the San-guinary Bull Fight.

The movie is displacing the bull fight as the popular amusement of Mexico.

"The motion picture undoubtedly holds first place in the amusement field of the Chihuahua consular district," says Vice Consul Ott in a report to the Department of Commerce.

"From one small, unpretentious circus tent installed in Chihuahua city some ten or fifteen years ago the business has grown until today there are in the consular district 15 permanently established movie houses where pictures are exclusively shown, with a number of legitimate theaters giving occasional exhibitions.

"This development occurred partly during a period of revolution, when it was no uncommon thing to have the performance interrupted by firing on the outskirts of the city."

Ott says that the upper classes demand emotional dramas and melodramas and the peons prefer western thrillers and slapstick comedies.

American machines are used exclusively, European makers having failed to sell a single projector.

Odd African Bush Tribe.

The strangest people in the world, according to Mrs. Harry Kaigh Eustace, who is here on her way to England and Africa, are the women of a bush tribe in the Gordonia desert, central southwest Africa.

These women, she says, have developed glands in the back in which they store water, like camels. When they drink a great deal of water, the glands make them appear deformed. After a few days in the desert, with little or no water, their reserve supply is absorbed and they look normal. They can go without water longer than a camel.

Mrs. Eustace, whose husband is a big game hunter, is English, and has spent 12 years in Africa shooting big game with camera and gun. She is preparing for her ninth expedition, and is in New York after a visit to San Francisco.

She says snakes are really affectionate when you get to understand them, and make good pets.

Bruce Balcome's Rival

By ANNE RICHARDS

© 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

It was an attractive room, this nest in the big apartment building which was home to her, and one knew that she loved it, seeing the affectionate look with which she gave it greeting. Throwing her hat and coat over the couch, she accepted the invitation of the bright-cushioned gray wicker chair and opened the letter which she had picked up on entering.

"My Dear Miss Denslow—A friend of mine, a writer, is to be in Cleveland for a few weeks, and I have given him a letter of introduction to you, knowing that you will furnish him the best there is in the stenographic line, and also that the acquaintance will be mutually agreeable. Bruce Balcome is a most interesting companion, a man I know you will like.

"Trusting that success is still with you, I am, yours very cordially, "RUSSELL WEBSTER."

"Russell Webster does not know that business belongs on Commerce street, and has no place in this sky tower of mine," and, laying the letter on the table, she commenced the preparation of her evening meal, a task she enjoyed as thoroughly as any housekeeper with all the appurtenances of housekeeping.

Eleanor had left home some years before, resolved to build up a business as public stenographer, and success had rewarded her efforts. She now had a business that kept mind and hands well occupied. For several years she had lived in a boarding house. Never safe from intrusion, even when in the supposedly sacred precincts of her own room, her dream had been of a cosy apartment where no one could intrude.

Then, too, she longed for the dainty furnishings which are not found in a boarding house. For Miss Eleanor loved two things, artistic surroundings and solitude. She mingled with crowds during the day, and when night came found her own companionship the most congenial.

Three months previous to this time her dream had taken material form, and the novelty had not yet worn off the pretty apartment which she entered each night with a sense of almost childish delight. The tiny kitchen was a playhouse, the gas range a toy stove that would do real cooking, and the mistress of it all was as proficient in the art of preparing tempting meals as in the work of her downtown world. A gate-lane table with snowy cloth and blue china, a low bowl of pink roses in the center, relieved the brown rolls and butter, juicy steak, potatoes and apple jelly, borne in on a tray from the kitchen.

The forenoon was passing, typewriters clicked and Eleanor was busy at her desk when the door opened quietly to admit a young man of dignified bearing.

"Miss Denslow?" "Yes."

Eleanor was on her dignity in business hours.

"I have a letter of introduction from Mr. Russell Webster."

So little thought did Eleanor give to business during home hours, she had forgotten the letter of last evening. She read the note, asking, "Can I be of service to you?"

"I would like to dictate a few letters and wish to make an appointment for each forenoon. May I have a private room?"

"Certainly, Miss Folsom," she spoke to an assistant. "Mr. Balcome would like to dictate."

There was a trace of disappointment on the countenance of Mr. Bruce Balcome as he followed Miss Folsom. For several days Miss Folsom was assigned to him. This did not suit him in the least, for he had been told that he would find Eleanor Denslow a congenial companion, and he had looked forward to meeting her. He had been attracted at once and congratulated himself that he had brought a letter of introduction, so that the acquaintance might progress rapidly. But it did not progress rapidly. It did not progress at all. The acquaintance had commenced with a how and a few words, and a how without the few words was all he was getting now. This would not do. He was a young man of determination, and the dignified aloofness of Miss Eleanor served only to make him more desirous of knowing the young lady inside that business shell.

The next morning he opened the door and walked directly across to Miss Denslow, greeting her with a smiling "Good morning. I hope you are disposed to grant a favor today. I wish to get out an unusual amount of work before tomorrow. Would it be possible for me to engage your services this evening? I can always do better work when the noise of the day is stilled." With a calm exterior he awaited her reply. Eleanor heard his request with surprise and looked at him closely, trying to see if there was anything more than business in this suggestion.

"I am not in the habit of extending my office hours into the evening."

The answer was neither what he hoped for nor what he feared. Eleanor never knew how it was that she consented to return to the office that evening. Neither did she know how it had come to be a regular thing for her to dine with Mr. Balcome twice a week, returning to the office for an evening's work on his book.

The time was not all spent in dictation. Many interesting points came up to be discussed. Of course, when they stayed late Mr. Balcome could not allow her to go home alone. One evening they stopped work earlier than usual. Eleanor did not know that he had so planned it. When they reached the apartment, Mr. Balcome said:

"It is too late to go to the theater and too early to go home. I think you will have to be kind, and invite me to come in, Miss Denslow."

She could not refuse, so for the first time the gray and rose nest was invaded by a man. That night Eleanor sat long in the gay cushioned chair, thinking back over the days to that first time when Bruce Balcome had walked into her office and into her life. She could not remember when she had commenced to think of him as other than one of the many customers who went in and out of her office. How had she let down the bars that separated her business and her home life?

A few nights later she found a box of roses at her door. Burying her face in their sweetness, she smiled a note.

"My Dear Miss Denslow—I am going home tomorrow."

She read no further. "Going home—going home—without a word." She clenched the note tightly in her hand. "Then he does not care. And I thought—I thought—" She dropped her head on the table, her feelings too deep for tears. Was it true? Had she read it right? Slowly she raised her head, dreading, yet longing, to see the words again. Her fingers loosened on the note. Yes, but there was more. Perhaps he explained. She glanced along the lines:

"Your assistance has meant much to me, and I shall miss our evenings together. My hope is that you, too, will miss them, and that your evenings will be so lonely you will be ready to give me a warmer welcome when I return than you did at our first meeting. I look forward to spending next Saturday evening with you, and I shall not come to dictate, but, if your smile of welcome invites, to ask for something. Yours always, BRUCE BALCOME."

"Yours." He had underlined it. Had their companionship meant as much to him as it had to her? She would know soon, but how could she wait? It was a waiting time filled with glowing hopes. She walked home at night as in a dream, cooked her dinner in a dream, and as she sat down to it pictured a blue-eyed companion opposite.

Saturday came at last, and even the room itself seemed to wear an air of expectancy. The pink rosebuds which showed their blushes against the soft gray of the vase must have been responsible for the rose flush on the face of the room's occupant, a flush which deepened as steps sounded outside and a firm hand knocked at the door. She could not move to open it. Another knock, then a voice, "Eleanor," and, as she drew the door back, the dream figure that had been haunting her room vanished as Bruce Balcome stood before her, a question in his eyes.

"Eleanor, I hope you have been lonely this past week, as horribly lonely as I have been."

Her eyes spoke for her as they looked into his, and he drew her to him closely.

"Dearest, do you know what a frigidly cold greeting you gave me when I first met you. As a punishment I am going to compel you to a lifetime of greetings of this kind," and he lifted her face to his in a greeting such as only lovers know.

Two months later Eleanor stood in the rose and gray nest alone, for the last time.

"Goodby, little nest. I loved you, but you have a rival. He has stolen me away from you. I am sorry to leave you, but, oh, so glad to go with him, anywhere."

The "Doctor" Wine.

How many have heard of the famous Moselle wine for invalids, called the "doctor"? It got its name about six hundred years ago from Boemund, archbishop of Treves, who was ill of a fever and given up by the doctors. Then into his castle one day marched a sturdy farmer with a little cask of wine on his shoulder from his three-cornered vineyard at Berncastel.

"Whoso drinks of this wine must straightway be well of fever," he announced, and the sick man begged for a drink of it, liked it, took more and got well. "I will never be without that best doctor in mine old age," said the thankful archbishop and left order that 20 casks of that useful wine should go into his cellar every year afterward, for sick purposes.

HOW

SQUIRRELS ARE USED TO WORK FOR GOVERNMENT.

—In conducting its extensive experiments to discover the best way to reforest waste lands or burnt-over forest lands the forest service has need of large quantities of forest-tree seeds, especially of the cone-bearing varieties. Since these trees do not bear evenly every year, it is necessary for economic reasons to ascertain in advance what species will furnish good seed crops each year, as well as to undertake the gathering operations in regions where the cones are likely to be most abundant. For these reasons information is collected as to the bearing and conditions of the trees in different parts of the national forests, sometimes as much as two or three years in advance. This is possible because many of the species of pines take from two to three years to ripen their cones.

When lumbering is proceeding at the time of seed-ripening it is a comparatively simple matter to gather the cones from the felled trees. But when the trees are to remain standing it is sometimes a rather difficult task to get the cones without climbing the trees. A great deal can be accomplished with hooks or knives attached to long poles, but the forest rangers have learned to make use of nature's own seed-collectors for their purposes. Plenty of cones are found in the seed stores of the squirrels. This seems to be a very economical way for Uncle Sam to obtain his forest seeds.

Not only is this method convenient, but it has the further advantage of furnishing the best seeds. The squirrels apparently place in their hoards only high-grade cones. Moreover, the squirrels put their supplies away so early that it is possible for the foresters to come back to the squirrels' reserves after the cones still on the trees have opened up and scattered their seeds. The red squirrel is the best collector; in many of the best of this species it is possible to find from eight to ten bushels of cones of good quality. The average quantity found in a single-cache is about two bushels. Other animals also store away seeds and cones, especially chipmunks and wild mice.

STORKS MAY BECOME EXTINCT

How Practice of South African Farmers Works Havoc With the Dutch "National Bird."

For centuries the stork has been the "national bird" of the Dutch. The majority of Dutch farmers erect nesting platforms for these well-liked birds. The stork is altogether desirable, and inasmuch as stork meat is not good eating the species has not been molested by sportsmen. Yet for several years the storks of Holland have been becoming fewer and fewer. Only recently has the reason been discovered.

The Dutch storks winter in South Africa. In the Transvaal, where, by an odd coincidence, most of the people are of Dutch descent, the farmers have been waging war against grasshoppers by covering their fields with poisoned bait. The grasshoppers eat the poison, the storks eat the grasshoppers. Thus there is a high mortality rate in the stork family, and if it is not checked both Holland and the Transvaal will soon be storkless lands.

How Engineering Tests Are Planned.

A small river upon which engineering tests can be performed will be created at Washington by government engineers if a bill introduced in Congress by Senator Ransdell of Louisiana is passed. Engineers believe that the scientific side of river hydraulics has not kept pace with the research and experimentation which has accompanied other branches of engineering, and they are urging the laboratory as provided in the Ransdell bill.

The recent disastrous floods of the lower Mississippi, the threatening attitude of the Colorado river and other periodic floods in this country are factors that are calling attention to need of more extensive study of flood control.

How Big Vessel Was Salvaged.

One of the most novel and ingenious instances of salvage was provided at Folkestone, England, some time ago. A vessel caught fire, and was sunk deliberately close to the quay. She turned over on her side, and the only difficulty that presented itself in the salvage operations was the question of how to get her righted. This obstacle was overcome by attaching wires to five large locomotives on land. These, when all was ready, pulled the ship over.

On another occasion, a sunken vessel was cut in two while under water, raised to the surface, fitted with new bulkheads, and brought home to be fitted together again.

How He Might Reach Him.

"Several men are ahead of me, but I'm very anxious to see Mr. Grabco and I can't wait."

"Well?"

"What had I better do?"

WHY

Aspiring Youth Should Never Wait on the Years

Sir James Barrie's recent call to "Youth" to assert itself raises several interesting points. It is said that years bring wisdom, and that wisdom is the result of experience. It would therefore seem that "youth" should leash itself in until it has learned wisdom. But to set against that view there is the record of many who have won imperishable laurels while still lacking years and all the latter are supposed to bring, observes a London Answers writer.

Byron began to write his great "Childe Harold" when he was about twenty. Keats wrote "Endymion" at twenty-two. Milton wrote "Il Penseroso" at twenty-nine. Richard Brinsley Sheridan wrote "The Rivals" at twenty-three, and the immortal "School for Scandal" when he was but twenty-six. Robert Burns was only nineteen when he wrote "John Barleycorn," and Dickens was but twenty-four when he wrote "Sketches by Boz." "Pickwick" followed at twenty-five, "Oliver Twist" at twenty-six, "Nicholas Nickleby" at twenty-seven, "Barnaby Rudge" and "The Old Curiosity Shop" at twenty-nine.

Shakespeare wrote many of his best plays—"Richard III," "The Merchant of Venice," "A Midsummer Night's Dream," etc., before he was thirty-two.

Scores of other examples could be given, covering other professions and arts, and the result is to show clearly that Sir James Barrie was quite right. Youth should never wait on the years.

The best in the world, whether it be in literature, sculpture, painting, etc., has been the gift of youth. The only exception to the rule seems to be in the realm of statesmanship. There, the older you are the better you are.

WILL DEVELOP NEW POWERS

Why Aviation Is Likely to Bring About a New Type of Mind in the Human Race.

Will flying result in the evolution of a new type of mind? asks the London Daily Express.

Capt. L. de G. Sleeking, a distinguished flying officer, answers the question in the affirmative in a remarkable article on the "Psychology of Flying" in the current issue of the English Review.

"Flying," he says, "is an unnatural state for man. There will be noticeable in future generations an evolution of a new type of mind whose tendencies and capabilities can be directly traced to the fact that they and their fathers have flown about the sky, and remained in the upper air for many hours in their lives."

"High up in the clearer air the mind seems to be purged of certain glutinous structures. It revolves with an altogether unprecedented velocity and perfect precision. The idea of death is regarded with unconcern. With this comes a certain recklessness."

"The memory in some instances becomes dulled and incapable of calling up a clear picture, but the general effect of constant flying is to stimulate and strengthen the mind."

"Such qualities as intuition and telepathy will develop more quickly with the influence of flight into powers as much as the command of the individual as hearing and tasting."

Why Wrist Watch Is Dangerous.

Be careful not to bind the strap of your wrist watch too tight. Several cases of neuritis in the fingers and hands have been traced to this cause, says Dr. John S. Stopford in the Lancet. In one case, he explains, a tender point was discovered on the dorsal surface of the styloid process of the ulna, and pressure in this situation caused pain to radiate from this point into the dorsal cutaneous branch of the ulnar nerve. There were no signs of paresis or atrophy of any of the intrinsic muscles of the hand, nor were any trophic changes found. On discarding the wristlet the discomfort gradually disappeared, it added.

Why Birds Should Be Protected.

All through the winter months our forests are searched, tree after tree, by nuthatches, titmice, creepers, winglets and woodpeckers for eggs and other hibernating forms of insects, says the American Forestry Magazine. As spring advances, as buds open, as tiny caterpillars and grubs emerge from the egg, come the hosts of arboreal birds—sparrows, thrushes, warblers and others—sweeping through the woods in migration. Under normal conditions they destroy something like 90 per cent of the tiny caterpillars hatching upon the external parts of trees before these caterpillars become large enough to attract notice.

Why White Wheat Flour.

It being known that present methods of milling white flour take out of it the vital principle which contains the vitamins, it is often asked why whole wheat flour is more extensively used. Dr. L. Emmett Holt of New York gave one of the principal reasons in a discussion at the Washington congress of physicians and surgeons, when he said that white wheat flour can be kept for months without deterioration, while whole wheat flour spoils within thirty days.

Why He Didn't Like Jobson.

"You don't like Jobson?" "No." "What's wrong with him?" "He reminds me of Bolshevik. If Jobson owes you $10 he'll agree to pay the $10 if you'll lend him $20."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

CHINESE CITY WORTH SEEING

Hong Kong, Though in Control of the British, Is in a Way Peculiarly Oriental.

The recent visit of the prince of Wales to Hong Kong has drawn attention once more to that island, known by its residents as the "Island of Sweet Waters."

Great Britain obtained Hong Kong 80 years ago, by the treaty of Nanking, and though she took care, in 1888, to lease nearly 400 miles of the adjacent Chinese mainland, in order to make this outpost more secure against attack, the Far East has come to think of Hong Kong less as a British fortified naval station than as a commercial port, admirably administered by a British governor, serving South China.

Victoria, the city, stretches for four miles along the northern shore of the rocky island and faces the Kowloon peninsula, separated from it only by a narrow strait only half a mile wide. Above the city rises the famous Peak, where the lucky people have houses, high up out of the heat, and whose summit can be reached quite quickly in a miniature train that is hauled up its steep sides like a lift, and initiates the visitor into one of the classic examples of relativity for while one is in it, the houses clinging to the hill all seem to be stuck on sideways and in imminent danger of falling off into the abyss below.

The view from the Peak is exquisite, especially at dawn or before darkness falls.

Down below all is bustle and noise. The streets are thronged with hundreds of jostling Chinamen, and the native part of the city, by night, lit up with lanterns and gay with open shop fronts, is a stimulating welter of color and strange sounds, and peculiar, baffling odors.—Montreal Family Herald.

PRAY BEFORE STARTING WORK

New and Excellent Custom Spreading Among Business Men in Country's Financial Center.

The church that is located in the business district of a city is developing a new form of use. Within the past year Trinity church, standing at the Broadway end of Wall street, New York, and having a great curb market immediately behind it, finds a steadily increasing number of business and professional men in its pews from 8:30 to 9 o'clock of each week day morning, except Saturday. There is no service at this hour, and no ministers are about. It is immediately before a busy day. A year ago there were not enough men in the pews at this morning hour for the sextons to take note. It is to be remembered that at all hours Trinity has people in its pews, regardless of services.

Recently this morning custom has grown, until at present the numbers in pews at 8:50 o'clock will reach forty to fifty. They never bring in newspapers or books. They do not come to read or to rest. They come in, kneel, and pray. Then they go out and to business. No invitation ever was given, save the general one of opening the doors to all people and making all pews free.

New Cattle Feed for Army.

Compressed forage, composed of pure oats and other grains, pressed into bricks made with a binder of molasses, has been successfully developed at Camp Lewis. The bricks are 12 inches long, 6 inches wide and 1½ inches thick. Perforations make it possible to break up the bricks by hand if only portions are to be fed to the army horses or mules. With the new compressed feed, it is pointed out, a horse can go into battle carrying its rations as the soldier carries his own. Tests were made on 50 animals at Camp Lewis, and all but four took readily to the new compressed feed, according to the report of the chief camp veterinarian. With the exception of two of the animals, all gained weight and maintained their working efficiency. No sickness was observed. One stallion gained 46 pounds in 30 days.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Famous Forest of Zurich.

Out of every 100 square miles in Switzerland 17 are covered with forests—the result of a policy now centuries old.

The municipal forest of Zurich, famous throughout the world, has been producing timber continuously during the last 600 years. Crop after crop has been grown and marketed and new crops started.

It is a common saying in Europe that "Switzerland holds her mountains up and her taxes down" with her forests. These forests, largely municipal, protect farms and towns by preventing landslides. In addition they pay dividends which materially reduce tax levies. Moreover, it is her forests, as well as her mountains, which make the men of Switzerland strong and self-reliant. It is her forests, too, which help to attract and charm tourists.

Permanent "Umbrella."

A new kind of umbrella is the broad "bungalow hat" worn by a material checker in a shipyard of Portland, Ore. It is made chiefly of wood and measures 35½ inches long by 21 inches wide. It has a supporting frame which rests on the shoulders, and it is studded by straps which connect with a chest belt, and a wooden strip which extends down the back. Its purpose is to protect not only the wearer but also his tally sheets in stormy weather.

HAD THE SNAKE HYPNOTIZED

South African Native Surely Exercised Some Kind of Influence Over Big Python.

Many powers are said to be possessed by the African native which those of the Occident find it hard to credit. Here is a story of "Muti," or hypnosis, as performed, according to a reliable informant, upon a huge python. The narrator says:

"I was in the veld when the herd boy, very excited, came to me with the story of a big inyoko, 'quite near.' I saddled up, took the shotgun, and went back with him. After covering some 200 yards, I asked where the snake was. 'Quite near, baas,' we covered a mile, which meant that the herd boy must have left the snake quite a time, possibly half an hour. I pulled up. 'The snake won't be where you saw it last, it's no good my going farther.' 'Yes, baas, come, it is there.' 'How do you know?' 'I made him stay fast, baas—I put muti on him.' So we went on, and quite two miles from where I had started, the boy pointed up a small valley. 'He is there, baas,' and sure enough there was a python lying straight out on the grass and quite still. I shot it, and then turned to the boy: 'Now tell me why did the snake remain like this.' The boy picked up a twig from a bush, ran it between his lips, and stuck it in the ground an inch from the snake's nose. 'I do so, baas, and the inyoko, he lay still. He no move.'"

The reptile remained with its eyes fixed cross-wise on the small twig before its nose. The distance from the stable was quite two miles, so that the python must have been staring at the twig for a full hour before the farmer reached it.

FOND OF ODD ORNAMENTS

Savages of New Guinea May Be Picturesque, but Their Society Has Its Drawbacks.

The Kaja Kaja savages of New Guinea, who have a reputation for bravery and are powerfully built, paint their foreheads red or black with white circles around the eyes. Their nostrils are frequently adorned with the claws of birds of prey or the tusks of wild pigs. From the lobes of their ears the most extraordinary variety of objects may be suspended. M. Neyens describes one warrior who proudly wore an old coffee pot as an ear ornament.

The bodies of the natives are usually tattooed with figures in relief. The tattooing necessitates a painful operation in which the patient, stretched on the sand, is literally basted with a sharp bamboo instrument, after which the numerous slashes are filled with a sort of clay.

The Kaja Kaja never bathe; instead, the body is rubbed with a variety of oils which give off an insupportable odor, augmented, it may be added, by the decomposing skins which they wear as arm decorations.

Flowers That Are Weather Prophets.

We hear a good deal of birds and animals as weather prophets, but are apt to overlook the wonderful little barometers which grow at our feet in the fields.

What does daisy mean? Nothing but "day's eye." The daisy opens wide for a fine day, but when rain is coming wraps up its center and protects it by means of folding strylike outer petals over the central, tubular florets.

The dandelion has a similar habit. Best known of all such prophetic plants is the scarlet pimpernel, the "poor man's weather glass," which is really a capital barometer. If it opens wide in the morning, you can safely bet against rain before night. When chickweed flowers are fully open, you are safe from rain for many hours, but when on a seemingly fair morning the tiny blooms are slow to disclose themselves, then it will rain before sundown.

"Bird of Passage."

The earliest use of the term "bird of passage" is found in eighteenth book of the Natural History of Pliny the Elder (23-27 A. D.), where he says: "The bird of passage known to us as the cuckoo," and the term has since been applied to birds which migrate with a season from a colder to a warmer, or from a warmer to a colder climate, divided into summer birds of passage and winter birds of passage. Such birds always breed in the country to which they resort in summer, that is, in the colder of their homes.

The term is said to have been first applied to sailors by Bacon, who declared that the uncertainty, the instability and fluctuating stage of human life was most aptly represented by those sailing the ocean.—Exchange.

Curious Chinese "Copy Book."

A curious kind of copy book is used by Chinese children. The ideographs are so complicated that a youngster cannot copy them freehand, but must begin by tracing them from a model, as American children trace maps. An ordinary copy book such as is used in the lower grades has no space for the children to write. The pages are entirely covered with copy. Eight characters are generally shown on one page, each in a square, and each made about ten times the size of ordinary writing.

Over this copy is placed tracing paper and the character is drawn as accurately as possible.

The books are written in black and corrected in red ink by the schoolmasters.

A Surprise Party.

(For The Record.) On Monday evening, Aug. 21, a surprise party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Winter, in honor of their daughter, Carrie. Games were played, and music by the piano, and singing. At a late hour all were invited to the dining room, where the table was laden with all the luxuries of the season. At a late hour all departed for their home wishing Miss Carrie, many more happy birthdays, and that this would long be remembered.

Those present were; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Winter, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Morningstar, of Marston, Md.; Mr. and Mrs. Tolbert Shorb, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Shriner, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ohler, Mrs. Jacob Baker, Mr. Edward Winter, Mr. and Mrs. Newton Hahn, near Keymar; Misses Carrie Winter, Hazel and Lovella Birkenstock, of Baltimore; Ethel Shorb, Grace Hahn, Catherine Ohler, Mildred Ecker, Marian Hahn, Catherine Hahn; Messrs Ernest Ecker, Wilmer Garber, Raymond and Eugene Eyer, George Hahn Bobby Morningstar and Paul Hyser.

Making a Lawn.

The use of a light sprinkling of nitrate on the lawn is the best and quickest way to produce a luxuriant stand of blue-green sward early in the season. The action of the nitrate of soda may be noted if a lump of the nitrate is dropped on the lawn. In a short time it will be observed that there will be a tuft of thicker, ranker growth about this spot. The main design in sprinkling nitrate upon the lawn should be in even distribution.

Funny Things in Newspapers.

As a starter, we quote from the DuBois, Pa., Courier;

"WANTED—Officers to clean, by a young lady. Call Bell 183 W."

We presume she would like to begin with a major.

In New York, where the girls are so changeable, we find this, in the esteemed World;

"WANTED—Young girl, colored half time."

The news items are also funny at times. Frinstance, read this in the Lafayette, Ill., Journal-Courier;

"Miss Dorothy Hack of Crawfordsville is the guest of Miss Doris Hitch."

This is said to have appeared in a Philadelphia paper;

"The ladies of the Plum Street church have discarded clothes of all kinds. Call at 44 North Plum street and inspect them."

His wife wouldn't let him.

"Ug-gle-guggle-gluck," said a Flathead Indian, up near Mt. Harding, to G. L. Caswell, of Iowa.

"What's he mean?" asked Caswell, and the camp foreman said "That's 'Good-bye' in the Flathead language."

"Carbolic acid," said Caswell, pleasantly, and this time the camp man asked for an explanation.

"That means 'Good-bye' in any language," said George.

"What makes our girls run around so?" asks a worried minister in Helena.

"I don't know the answer," says Col. Wiggins, of Alabama, "but may be they're out hunting for mother."

The strangest thing we've seen in a newspaper yet, however, was a recent account of a lady escaping from a hotel fire in a cheap, plain nightgown, instead of "lacy lingerie." We next expect to hear of a motorist insisting that he was to blame for an automobile accident.

It remained for a Kansas paper to tell us what a "mugwump" is. To wit: "A man sitting on a rail fence, with his mug on one side and his wump on the other."

The fur-lined bath tub, however, goes to the Iowa Falls, Pa., Citizen, which winds up a notice for revival services with, "All sinners are urged to assist in the choir."—National Editor's Argus.

Same Old Story But a Good One.

Mrs. Mahala Burns, Savanna, Mo., relates an experience, the like of which has happened in almost every neighborhood in this country, and has been told and related by thousands of others, as follows: "I used a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy about nine years ago and it cured me of flux (dysentery). I had another attack of the same complaint three or four years ago and a few doses of this remedy cured me. I have recommended it to dozens of people since I first used it and shall continue to do so for I know it is a quick and positive cure for bowel troubles."

Funeral services will be held at St. Joseph's Catholic church, Taneytown, on Saturday morning, at 10 o'clock.

In Loving Remembrance of our father, JAMES C. WHITE, who died one year ago, Aug. 23, 1921.

In a far and distant graveyard, Where the trees and branches wave, Lies our dear beloved father, In a cold and silent grave.

We did not know the pain he bore, We did not see him die, We only know he passed away, And could not say good-bye.

Oh, the memory of that day, When we knew Daddy was dead, Many a bitter tear we shed, We little thought his death so near, But God knew all, and thought it best to take him home.

By his children, JOHN JR. and STEWART C.

LET ME LIVE.

Lord, let me live today
From start to close,
In just the kindly way
Which friendship knows.

Let me be thoughtful, too,
And generous here,
Keeping in all I do
My record clear.

Lord, let me live today
Full to my best,
No hurtful thing I'd say,
Even in jest.

Keep me from scorn and hate
And petty spite,
Lord, let my soul be great
From dawn to night.

Lord, let me live today
From malice free
Let me in work or play
Unselfish be.

Let no one find me proud
Or harsh or cold,
Too silent, or too loud,
Afraid or over bold.

Lord, let me live today
A friend to all
Who chance along my way,
Though great or small.

And when at last the sun,
Now rising high, shall set,
Let there, in all I've done,
Be no regret.

A new Foreign Pest.

College Park, Aug. 18.—The Japanese beetle is on its way to Maryland with the time of its arrival depending upon whether it hops a ride in a automobile or wings its way more slowly by natural methods of transportation, according to Ernest N. Cory, State Entomologist, who recently visited sections of New Jersey where the insect has succeeded in establishing a trans-Pacific colony.

While both State and Federal quarantines are in force in the heavily infested areas of New Jersey and Pennsylvania, the beetle has steadily been extending its territory since it was first discovered in 1916, says Mr. Cory.

The spread has been due chiefly to the rapid propagation of the insect, he says, but the chief danger of its introduction into new territory lies in the possibilities of its being carried by automobiles from the infested areas. It is difficult to see how Maryland can escape the invasion, even though the Federal, Pennsylvania and New Jersey officials are doing all they can to keep the pest within the present limits, he declares.

"The Japanese beetle is about the size of the ordinary potato beetle but slightly longer," says Mr. Cory. "Its head and thorax are shining bronze green in color. Its wing covers are brown, edged with green, and two distinct white spots mark the lower part of the abdomen below the wing covers. The insect is particularly injurious to apple, peach, cherry and shade trees but feeds vigorously on more than 200 different plants. The grubs, which develop from the eggs which the beetle lays in the ground, feed on grass roots and do serious injury to lawns, golf courses, alfalfa and clover."

"As many as 276 beetles have been taken from a single apple," says Mr. Cory, "which means that a large apple may be completely covered by the insects. They usually remain until only the core of the apple remains, or in the case of peaches until nothing but the seed is left."

A spray consisting of four pounds of arsenate of lead to fifty gallons of water will largely prevent damage by the beetles, according to Mr. Cory, but is not practical for orchard fruits as two applications about two weeks apart would have to be made just about picking time. The spray also results in a concentration of the insects on unsprayed foliage, according to Mr. Cory.

HOME TOWN HELPS

TO DEVELOP "SAMPLE TOWN"

No Really Great Problems to Be Solved in the Establishment of Model Community.

When we have studied our existing towns, generalizing from numbers and showing the best we have done so far; when we have taken hold with a will to make such improvements as we can in our stubborn, old-established towns, a great new social service can be done by developing a "sample town."

This sample town should appear to be a perfectly ordinary industrial town, preferably with some new factory with its employees placed where it could have land or water communication with the rest of us. It should have an agricultural base in the surrounding country, as any town does after a fashion. Then the problem to be worked out would be the economic balance between local supplies, which save in transportation, and such imported supplies as might save in other ways.

A good kindergarten and school ought to have 20 children at least, properly to use two first-class teachers. To keep up that average number of children requires about 200 women, since about ten women is the average number required to supply one child a year. Two hundred families means about a thousand persons, a good number to base our calculations upon; and 200 houses, grouped about their necessary public buildings, form a very pleasant little village.

One central building, economical, but beautiful, could house many of these. All should be grouped conveniently about a pleasant little park.

The economic problem to be worked out is something like this: How few persons out of our 400 adults are sufficient to do work not immediately productive, such as cooking, teaching, preaching, keeping the store and the library? How much must be earned by those who produce raw materials or manufactured articles for sale, in order to support the whole group? At how little expense can heat, water, light and service be provided to such a group?—Charlotte Perkins Gilman in The Century.

IDEA IS WORTH EMULATING

Public Spirit Shown by Citizens of Michigan Village Should Be Incentive to Others.

At the next resort and tourist meeting the name of the village of Montague should be inscribed as the Abou Ben Adhem on the good book. Along the lake is an excellent park space which Montague has decided to improve. But the innovation is the way this village has gone about it.

A legal holiday was declared, and almost every man in town hustled down to the park with shovels and rakes, drays and trucks, filling in low ground along the shore in preparation for a big tree planting at other similar holidays in the near future. And all the ladies served their sons and squires and sweethearts with hot coffee and sandwiches to keep them on the job and unfatigued. It was an arbor day de luxe. More of them are scheduled until the park becomes something tourists will talk about all the way up and all the way back.

If every town which could be a thing of beauty instead of a main street and scatter of sheds would go in for the spirit of Montague and for a good, healthy spell of tree planting and general cleaning up, Sinclair Lewis would be in line for a fine session of back talk.—Grand Rapids Press.

Proper Care of Hedges.

If you have a privet hedge which is showing the effects of age you can renew it by cutting it back hard. This seems like drastic treatment, but new wood will soon begin to grow, and within three years your hedge will be as fine as ever. You can cut it back to within a foot of the ground without doing any harm, but as soon as it begins to grow again it ought to have a good dressing of well-rotted manure or a liberal application of pulverized sheep manure, dug into the ground. Many people let their privet hedges grow too tall for best effects. They look most attractive when about three feet high, especially if they are kept well trimmed so that they always have a symmetrical appearance.

Individualism First.

In all worth-while community building, men and women must function as individuals before they can function as communities.—L. H. Bailey.

"Now that you are rich, John, your son seems a fiend for jazz."
"Yes."
"Think he'll ever be able to earn his own living?"
"Yes, I think he may develop into a pretty fair snare drummer."

Home Hunters Take All Except Ghost.

It was a haunted house in a gossip neighborhood, relates the New York Herald. Residents assembled daily and talked in muffled tones of spirits and queer noises. With such advance advertising the real estate agent found it difficult to get a "prospect" near the house. As a last resort he decided to have the place redecorated and to install new electric fixtures and plumbing.

The work had scarcely been completed when the agent heard a "live one" had visited the property. Rushing off to the caretaker he inquired breathlessly: "Is it true that someone has taken the house?"

"No, sir, not yet," replied the caretaker, "but they've taken the fixtures, piping and doorknobs. Perhaps they'll come back for the house."

Plain Jane Dare

By ROSE MEREDITH

© 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

"Jane Dare is the plain one of the family," people usually remarked when the question of beauty arose. "Celia is lovely, Abigail is fascinating, Emma is a little witch—but poor Jane with her brilliant hair and dull eyes is hopelessly plain!"

Jane knew it, and resented it, but kept her hurt feelings hugged to her own bosom. If one cared enough about her to unlock the plain portals of her heart and soul—so be it! She was the middle one of the family of four motherless girls, and she was the housekeeper, the home maker. The others had careers. Jane couldn't be spared for a career.

Celia had a voice—Celia was musical—she had worshippers by the dozen. Abigail was a high school teacher, and Emma was a trained nurse.

"Jane is a wonderful cook—a perfect housekeeper!" Celia would praise. "Wonderful!" Abigail would echo. "Perfect!" chimed Emma.

Jane was happy most of the time, but she did long to do things—great things—meet interesting people; sometimes she thought wistfully she might have been a writer, if she had had a chance for development. However, she did sell some recipes, and carefully prepared articles on home making to some of the women's magazines, and her prestige rose in the family.

One winter Celia became engaged to the minister. Shortly after that Abigail attracted the attention of Professor Rodney of a near-by college, and Emma might have married any one of her patients any day!

"Jane would make some man a splendid wife and housekeeper—she is wonderful," Celia would sigh.

"Wonderful," Abigail and her professor would echo.

"Perfect," Emma would add, thus placing her laurel wreath on Jane's red hair.

"Rubbish!" Jane would groan dismally.

Today Jane was in a state of inward revolt. Celia had telephoned that she would bring the minister home to

"O—mercy!" she gasped, as she gained speed. In a scurry of flying sand, clutching her basket, book and sweater to her breast, she tobogganed down the slope and ran plump into a solitary man who was sitting on the sands staring at the far horizon.

"Gracious—child—what do you mean, little girl?" He picked Jane up and shook her a little. "That's a dangerous thing to do. Once when I was a kid I was sliding down that bank and it dislodged a great boulder. The thing came down and crushed one of my little playmates—broke her arm!"

"Dan Barton—oh, Dannie, do you remember that, and how you waited on me hand and foot until I was well again?" Jane was brilliantly alive now; her clear, pale skin was flushed like a sea shell; her loosened hair framed the exquisite oval of her face, and her eyes were the color of the bright blue sky.

"Jane Dare! You have grown into a—" He paused breathlessly, as if searching her face for traces of the little playmate. "Has any one ever told you—" Again he stopped, and Jane blushed still deeper, wondering why he spoke that way when every one knew that she was just plain Jane Dare.

"Sit down and tell me all the news," he urged, and Jane did so, hardly able to meet his intense blue gaze. No man had ever looked at her in that way before, but she had seen the minister look at Celia, and Abigail's professor. Suddenly she felt sorry for them all. "I must go home and serve dinner," she exclaimed penitently; and she told him the whole story while they enjoyed the lunch she had brought in the basket. Dan told her how he had planned to spend the summer with his mother in the old house, and how he would commute to and from the city.

"I shall see you often, Jane Dare," he told her as they went slowly through the old woodland path that wound up to the cliff, and the wood road and the orchard, where the blossoms dropped like a bridal veil on "plain Jane's" ruddy hair. They came into the dining room, blissfully happy, and all unaware that they were so.

Everybody stared at Jane with the sparkling blue eyes, the bright hair, the rose-tinted cheeks. And they saw their old friend, Danny Barton, whose coming had brought about this transformation.

"Never say 'plain Jane' again!" muttered the minister to his betrothed, and no one ever did!

NOVEL STYLES IN MALEKULA

Women of Big Numbers Tribe at First Sight Looked More Like Walking Haystacks.

I have never seen human beings more wretched than the women of the Big Numbers tribe on the island of Malekula in the New Hebrides. At first sight they looked like walking haystacks. They wore grass dresses, consisting of a bushy skirt that hung from the waist to the knees, a sort of widow's veil that was thrown over the head and face so as to leave a tiny peephole for the wearer to look through, and a long train that hung down the back nearly to the ground. A more cumbersome and insanitary dress was never devised, says a writer in an exchange. It was heavy. It was hot. Worst of all, it was dirty. Every one of the dresses was matted with filth. I did not see a single pig—and there were dozens of them rooting about inside and outside the houses—that was so dirty as the women of that village. I afterward found that for women to wash was strictly taboo. From birth to death water never touched their skins!

I got my cameras ready, but the women hid in the houses and would not come out to be photographed. Finally Nagapate, the great chief, commanded them to come into the clearing, and they crept whimpering out of the little doors.

Nagapate's wives were as wretched as any of the other women. We had heard from the natives at our headquarters on the island of Vao that Nagapate had a hundred wives, but there were only ten of them. We presented them each with a string of beads and a small glass jar of cheap candy. They did not even look at their gifts. They wanted only to get the ordeal over and to escape. During all our stay in the village the poor, browbeaten wretches never got up enough courage to look at us. Their lords and masters felt our skins and our hair and our clothes, examining us with embarrassing freedom. But whenever we came upon a woman, she squatted down and hid her face behind her grass veil.

Protest.

But how can one toil at the great task with this hurry and tumult of birds just outside the open window; I hear the thrush, and the blackbird, that romantic liar; then the delicate cadence, the wiry descending scale of the willow-wren, or the blackcap's stave of mellow music. All these are familiar—but what is that unknown voice, that thrilling note? I hurry out; the voice flees and I follow, and when I return and sit down again at my task the yellow-hammer trills his sleepy song in the noonday heat; the drone of the greenfinch fills me into dreamy meditation. Then suddenly from his tree trunks and forest recesses comes the green woodpecker, and mocks at me, an impudent voice full of liberty and laughter.

Why should all the birds of the air conspire against me? My conscience is with the sad human species, with hapless and erroneous humanity, now with that inconsiderate, wandering feather-headed race, Legan Pears Smith.

HOW

ENGLISH ENGINEERS ARE EMPLOYING SEWAGE GAS.

—Gas produced from sewage is being used to run engines at the sewage disposal works of Birmingham, England. Experiments made by John D. Watson, chief engineer, have proved successful, according to reports transmitted through consular channels. The sludge from the sewage, after it has undergone a certain amount of sedimentation, is fed into a septic gas producing tank, which is furnished with an air relief valve. The sludge is not aerated before it is used. The gas thus obtained contains about 60 per cent of methane or marsh gas, and is of big calorific value. It averages as much as 675 British thermal units per cubic foot, which compares very favorably with coal gas with 600 British thermal units per cubic foot.

Mr. Watson calculates that two tons of sludge will produce the gas required to give 150-horsepower hours, and that the total power available at that particular station could be raised if necessary, to 6,000-horsepower hours daily. The gas produced at the plant is employed in driving a 25-horsepower gas engine, which in turn works a centrifugal sludge pump. The exhaust from the engine is passed through pipes traversing the septic tank to supply heat and hasten the formation of gas. Samples of gas taken for analysis in cold weather had a higher calorific value than those taken in warmer weather, a fact which would seem to indicate that a warm climate is not essential for gas production.

FICTION WRITERS AS SEERS

How Oldtime Tellers of Tales Predicted Marvels Which Today Are Merely Commonplace.

A most amusing and voluminous book could be written around wise men's forecasts, beginning with those of Mercurius, in the year 1240, described many future marvels. His prognostications caused skeptics even of the Eighteenth century to smile in derision, yet, in the Twentieth century they are only simple and commonplace realities.

There could be cited Cyrano de Bergerac, the Marquis d'Argenson, Jules Verne, and a score more, without forgetting Emile Souvestre, who foresaw more than one of our conquests in his book, "The World in the Year Two Thousand."

Here is what can be read in one of the last novels of Champfleuri, "Le Jardin du Roi" (The King's Garden) about forty years ago: "A day will come when science will project her light into the interior of the human body and clearly see there just as we see the pebbles on the bottom of a brook."

Thus, a little less than twenty years before its discovery the author of "Fayance Fiddle" foresaw the X-ray. Truly, it must be conceded that fiction writers are often seers.

How Entire Town Was Moved.

Residents of Cedar Falls, a mountain town 40 miles from Puget sound, were terrorized recently when the entire place moved eleven feet toward Cedar lake. Should the slide continue it will mean the loss of all property and the abandonment of the town site.

It has been found that the clay formation upon which the foundations are erected lies in a slanting rock strata of extreme smoothness. There is really nothing but the weight of the clay subsoil to keep it balanced.

The winter's deep frost and a supposed earthquake shock may have been the cause of the earthslip. As every section of the town moved exactly the same direction and space the only damage was a few broken window lights.

How Nature Made Test.

A reinforced concrete arch of 86 feet span, forming part of a highway bridge constructed the year before last at Herkimer, N. Y., was submitted to an unexpected and severe test when the work of concreting had been completed only 12 hours. Owing to heavy rains during the deposition of the concrete, the water in the river spanned by the bridge rose about five feet, washing out or undermining the supports of the centering and carrying away part of the latter to such an extent as to leave the arch entirely without support, save that afforded by the molds in which the concrete had been deposited. Notwithstanding the sudden strain so imposed on the concrete, no injury was caused in any part of the arch.

How Fashion Slays Monkeys.

The dictates of fashion have exerted a strong demand for black and white Abyssinian monkey skins to be used for trimmings, particularly in Paris. The supply of skins is very limited and not more than fifteen to twenty thousand can be obtained in a year, says Consul Cross at Aden, Arabia, in a report to the textile division of the Department of Commerce, without unduly raising prices and exterminating the monkey. The price at Aden has been fairly steady, the cheaper grades selling at 45 cents and the more expensive at 90 cents.

LESSON FOR AUGUST 27

NEHEMIAH'S PRAYER

LESSON TEXT—Neh. 1:1-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—The effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much.
—Jas. 5:16.
REFERENCE MATERIAL—Ex. 32:30-32;
1 Sam. 7:5-11; Matt. 9:37, 38; Acts 1:12-14; Eph. 3:14-21.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Nehemiah Talking to God.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Prayer of the King's Cupbearer.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Prayer as a Preparation for All Undertakings.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Prayer and Power.

I. Nehemiah Learns of the Distress of the Captives (vv. 1-3).

1. When (v. 1). Twentieth year of the reign of Artaxerxes (2:1).

The month Chisleu corresponds to our December. It was while performing his duty as cupbearer to the Persian king. While in this important position there entered into his heart a desire to honor God and do good to his people. A young man can be true to God in any position in life if he sets his heart on Jesus Christ and communes with Him by prayer and study of God's word. A man may be elevated to a high position, prosper in business, and yet live a life unspiced from the world.

2. By Whom (v. 2). His brother Hanani and certain men of Judah brought him the news. His inquiry shows that though he was prosperous he did not forget his unfortunate brethren. We should never let our success and well-being shut out sympathy for the oppressed and suffering.

3. The Nature of the Distress (v. 3). The wall of Jerusalem was broken down. Its gates were burned with fire and the remnant of the captives were in great affliction and reproach.

II. Nehemiah's Sorrow (v. 4).

The news of his brethren's distress greatly moved Nehemiah. He sat down and wept and mourned several days. He fasted and prayed before God. God's people are so essentially one that the affliction and shame of one is the affliction and shame of all. No one will ever do much to help a distressed people who does not deeply feel their desolation. Nehemiah's sorrow was not the kind that says "I pity you" and goes on in ways of selfishness without making an effort to help. True pity expresses itself in an effort to help.

III. Nehemiah's Prayer (vv. 5-11).

He knew where to go for help. He took the matter upon his heart to God in prayer. The first and best way to help others is to pray for them. Nehemiah did not merely pray; he left his place at the Persian court and journeyed to Jerusalem and took hold with his own hands. Our prayers and tears must be translated into definite action if we would be of real help to others. Note the characteristics of this prayer.

1. Its Worshipping Spirit (v. 5). He recognized God as the great and terrible One, the Lord God of heaven. True prayer shows that spirit of worship.

2. Its Ground (v. 5). It was on the ground of covenant relation that he besought God. On this ground all who are in Christ Jesus can come and plead before God.

3. It Was Persistent (v. 6). He prayed day and night. God is pleased when His servants are persistent in their pleadings with Him. Those who understand the covenant relation will be importunate in their petitions.

4. It Was Accompanied by Confession of Sin (vv. 6, 7). In this confession he mentioned definitely his sin (v. 7). We should specify the sins which we have committed. Most people when praying are too general in their confessions.

5. He Pleads God's Promises (vv. 8, 9). In our praying we should remind God of His own words. It is when His words abide in us that we can intelligently pray (John 15:17). If we would be successful in our praying we should fill our minds with God's promises.

6. He Pleads Relationship (v. 10). He reminds God that they were His children by redemption. Those who are in Christ are God's children by redemption through His precious blood. The child has a claim upon its father. God's children have a claim upon Him.

7. It Was Intercessory Prayer (v. 11). With intense earnestness he definitely prayed that God would give him favor before the king in order that he might be enabled to help his people. The king's favor was needed in order to enable him to help his brethren. God is able to move the heart of a heathen king and thus further His own cause by means of the prayer of a humble servant.

The Cunning Man.

God's Love.

Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God.—1 John 3:1.

THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

August 27
God's Out-of-Doors
Psalm 8:1-9

This is a psalm of adoration in which the Lord is worshiped and praised for the manifestation of His glory. This glory is seen in nature and in man. The contemplation of the one leads to consideration of the other and both together lead to wonder and worship. God often calls us in His Word to consider His works and ways. "Consider the lilies of the field." "Consider the ravens." "Consider him that endured contradiction of sinners against himself." "Consider one another." The word means to think or meditate upon, to observe, to wonder at, and in the hearts of those instructed of the Spirit this leads to worship. Behind all, and in all, and through all is the infinite and eternal One. The pure in heart see Him and adore.

It is easy to over-estimate the power of nature. This is frequently done by those to whom the salvation of God is unknown in experience. Mr. Emerson says, "In the woods we return to reason and faith. There I feel that nothing can befall me in life, no disgrace, no calamity that nature cannot repair." This is an exaggeration for there are calamities in the inner life that might befall one even in the woods and which nature could not repair. It would require the touch of God in Christ to do this. In the Court of the Seasons at the San Francisco Exposition these words were written, "For lasting happiness we turn our eyes to one alone and she surrounds you now. Great Nature, refuge of the weary heart and only balm for the wounds that have been bruised. She hath cool hands for every fevered brow and gentlest silence for the troubled soul." Plainly this is another exaggeration in which nature is deified and the Lord of nature ignored. It is through God and His work within our hearts that we come to see the beauties of nature and to enjoy the great out-of-doors.

Enforce Federal Bird Law.

Among the convictions obtained by the United States Department of Agriculture during May for violation of the Migratory-Bird Treaty act were one in Illinois, involving in killing of a gull, fine $25 and costs; one in Virginia, involving the sale of a heron, fine $25; two in Kentucky, involving the hunting of ducks from a motor boat, fine $25 each and costs; two in Florida, involving the possession of ducks in close season, $25 each; two in Oregon involving the hunting of ducks after sunset, fine $25 each; one in Oregon, involving the killing of a band-tailed pigeon, fine $25; two in Arkansas, involving the sale of ducks, $20 each; one in Florida, involving the killing of ducks in close season, fine $50; one in Virginia, involving the sale of ducks, fine $100; and one in Louisiana, involving the sale of ducks, fine $100.

Effect of Daylight on Plants.

Investigation of length of daylight on plant life conducted by the United States Bureau of Plant Industry indicates the importance of this factor in its development. Formation of bulbs is induced by excessively long days, while formation of tubers commonly results from excessively short days. This deposition of carbohydrate in relatively condensed or dehydrated form as a result of an unfavorable light period indicates marked loss of power to utilize the products of photosynthesis in elongating the stem or in developing flower and fruit, a condition well exemplified in the stemless or leaf-rossette form of foliage development. The opposite change toward the optimal day length or stem-elongation may rescue typical annual plants from impending death and effect more or less complete rejuvenescence.

How She Did It.

Two housewives were exchanging confidences as to their help. "What I can't see," exclaimed the first, "is how you manage to get so much work out of Ruth. I can't do it. She gets your work done much quicker than mine, and does it just as well or better, too." "Well," exclaimed the second housewife, "I just put jazzy pieces on our electric player piano all the time she is working. Simple, isn't it?"

Nevada Natural Wonder.

"The Devil's Postpile" is located in the Sierra Nevada mountains on the middle fork of the San Joaquin river. The "pile" is a mile long, half as wide, and 400 feet high. The odd formation whence its appellation is derived is not everywhere in evidence, cropping out only in certain places. The most striking columns constitute more than 1,000 feet of its western face. They rise over 100 feet above the talus—a vast heap of broken "posts" accumulated through the process of weathering. How far downward they extend is a matter of conjecture. The columns in this amazing bluff are arranged in rows as regularly as the pipes of an organ. Almost perfect prisms, they are fitted together like cells in a honeycomb, and really look as if carved by human hands. These columns range from 14 inches to more than 3 feet in diameter. Most of them are pentagonal, whereas elsewhere the general shape is hexagonal.

DOES NOT LIVE ON NECTAR

Department of Agriculture Corrects Misapprehension About Food of the Humming Bird.

There are some misconceptions about the humming bird, the smallest of the bird race, but there are many misconceptions about other birds. However, the Department of Agriculture desires to correct a very popular misunderstanding as to what the little humming bird eats.

Speaking through its biologists and its ornithologists, the department says that, contrary to almost universal belief, the humming bird does not live upon the nectar of flowers, though nectar forms an important part of its diet. The bird will hover in front of a cobweb, picking off insects and perhaps the spiders entangled on the net. They will capture food on the wing, after the manner of the flycatchers. Stomach examinations show that a considerable part of the food of the bird consists of insects, with sometimes a very little of vegetable matter. The rubythroat is the only humming bird which inhabits the eastern part of the United States, and it is more or less common everywhere in that region. It eats concentrated sweets, but its favorite animal food is spiders. Gnats or small flies are eaten.

KILLED ENEMIES BY PROXY

Many Races of Savages Had Implicit Faith in Their Power to Bring About Death.

Sympathetic magic used as a means of wreaking vengeance upon an absent enemy was believed in and practiced by savages in widely separated parts of the world.

The principle on which the theory was based was that like produces like, or that by hurting an image of a man you would thereby hurt him. The Ojibway Indian desiring to harm an enemy made a little wooden image of him and ran a needle through its head or heart. Or he shot an arrow into it, firmly convinced that his foe would at the same instant be seized with a sharp pain in a corresponding part of his body.

A Malay charm consisted in making a wax image of the person marked for destruction, in which were some of his hairs. The figure was scorched over a lamp every night for seven nights with the following words: "It is not wax I am scorching, but it is the liver, heart and spleen of So-and-So that I scorch." After the seventh time the figure was burned and the victim was then thought to have died.

Monarch Admired American Poet.

Louis I. King of Bavaria, was one of Edgar Allan Poe's greatest admirers.

A writer for the Figaro chanced one day to leave by mistake the proofs of an article on Poe where it came to the attention of King Louis. The king sought the writer to question him. "Until then," runs the description of the scene that took place, "the king's manner had been quiet and gentle almost to effeminacy, but the moment Poe's name was mentioned he became all eagerness and animation. His magnificent eyes lit up, his lips quivered and his whole face was beaming and radiant. 'Is it a personal account of him?' he asked, referring to the proofs. 'Did you know Poe? Of course you did not though; you are too young. I cannot tell you how disappointed I am. Just for a moment I thought I was in the presence of someone who had actually known that most wonderful of all writers, and who could, accordingly, tell me something definite and authentic about his inner life.'"

Punish Flirts With Death Penalty.

Flirts are not tolerated in Zululand on the east coast of Africa, according to Olaf Linck, Danish author and explorer.

The Zulus usually kill men when they make advances to married women. The status of women has greatly improved, the explorer found. The high cost of living has had the effect of limiting the practice of polygamy to the extremely rich. In former years a man could purchase a wife for eight oxen, but now the price has gone up to almost twice that number of animals. Parents are adopting the expedient of disposing of their marriageable daughters on the installment plan, the terms generally being two oxen down and the remaining at fixed intervals. If a husband defaults on his payments there is a law which provides for his going to work in the service of his father-in-law until the value is covered.

The Cheerful Robin.

It would go hard with the birds if their case were left to be decided upon argument alone. But robins are their own best advocates, says the Detroit Free Press. They come in the spring—vandals that they are—and start a deeply planned campaign to cultivate everybody's friendship. The deep woods know them not; they never skulk in the bushes nor flee the presence of man. Instead they choose the lawn for a hunting ground, build their nests even on porches and window sills, and never let the sun go down without a song delivered from the most conspicuous perch on the place. The robin's cheerfulness is irresistible; his neighborliness compelling. It is absolutely impossible not to like him when he offers such convincing proofs every day that he likes men.

THE RECORD'S Buy-at-home Campaign

The Normal American Community is not an aggregation of individuals more or less preying on each other, and distrusting each other's honesty. Whoever thinks it is, is not to be trusted himself. We need more of the spirit of real neighborliness, and "pulling together."

ORNATE COIFFURE OF GEISHA

Headdress of Japanese Dancing Girl Is Expensive and She Is Careful of It.

Probably the Japanese geisha has erected her hair into the most elaborate coiffure that fashion has accepted for one of her modes in any country in the world. Except that it is more ornate than that of the average woman of Japan, the geisha headdress, in general structure and line, in its use of silver and gold papers, of artificial flowers and jade or coral hairpins, expresses the conventional Japanese idea of what woman's crowning glory should be like, says Asia. She requires a professional "kamigama" to do it for her. Naturally she does not feel that she can afford to pay 10 or 20 cents every morning for this adornment of the outside of her head; so at night she props her neck on a tiny hard pillow—made of porcelain or wood—and takes care to keep her coiffure in as good order as she can.

The long black hair is oiled so that not a single strand shall be out of place, and the final effect is that of a carved black lacquer frame around the delicate yellow of the face.

LET'S ALL TRY

The intent of this "Buy-at-Home" effort has been to bring about greater co-operation between seller and buyer, locally. It is a combined invitation from home business men to home consumers, and this invitation naturally carried with it the assurance of fair treatment; because, no one can succeed in business, nowadays, without it.

Whether we realize it, or not, all of us need neighbors and friends and --storekeepers, farmers, mechanics, day workers, all together, make up the home team. Whether it will be a "pulling together" team, and friendly, depends on all classes. Let's all make a try at it!

THE SEASON'S SCORE

Taneytown Won, 16 — Lost, 7

Taneytown 1—Hanover 4.

Taneytown visited Hanover, last Saturday, and dropped a game to the Hanover B. C., score 4 to 1. Taneytown played substitutes in place of Drenning and Fuss, while Hanover had its best team. The game was a good one, under the circumstances, even if "we" lost. The series with Hanover now stands 2-2.

Taneytown 3—Union Bridge 4.

Hunting for a "wizard" pitcher lost another game to Union Bridge, on Wednesday, 4 to 3. After the game was lost 3 to 1, Bonsack was put in, in the middle of the 5th. inning. After that, Union Bridge made but one hit and no runs. A good many patrons of the home team, who do more for it than "root," have been wondering for some time why Bonsack isn't left pitch a game against Union Bridge, instead of using him only after games are already lost? What Taneytown actually needs is a safe hitter or two, rather than a new pitcher.

The game was a good exhibition, except in the third inning when Taneytown had a case of "rattles," allowing two unearned runs. Delucas, for Union Bridge, struck out 5 men; Bonsack 6 and Shafer (?) 1. Umpire Grimes, on balls and strikes, gave general satisfaction, but his close decisions on bases appeared favorable to Union Bridge. The score was— Taneytown 0-0-0-1-0-1-1-0-0-3 Union Bridge 1-0-0-3-0-0-0-0-x-4

Mosquitoes Dislike These Odors. Where mosquitoes abound, a preparation combining one ounce of oil of citronella with four ounces of melted vaseline should be rubbed on the face and hands. Persons who object to the odor of citronella could use this: castor oil one ounce, alcohol one ounce, oil of lavender one ounce. Both preparations were used by workers in the Panama canal zone and gave great relief until the extermination of mosquitoes was undertaken. Neither preparation should be allowed to get into the eyes.
