DROUTH CONDITIONS BECOMING SERIOUS

Widespread Water Shortage Causes Great Anxiety.

The authorities of Frederick, Hagerstown, Cumberland and Frostburg have taken measures to conserve their water supply. The Potomac river has not been so low in 50 years, and can be crossed, dry shod, at many points below Cumberland. In Washington and Allegany counties, many farmers are compelled to haul water for their live stock, and the drying up of pastures has seriously hurt the dairying business. The condition of the water supply in Frostburg is the worst ever

The drouth is widespread, being worse in some sections than in others. In some of the coal regions of Penna, coal companies have been compelled to shut down for want of water for their washeries.

In the Pittsburg section the drouth is the worst in 25 years, some farmers being required to dispose of their

Advices from Harrisburg state that in many cities and towns in the state, warnings have been issued to boil all drinking water. Everywhere orders have been issued to save water.

Naturally, the fire danger has greatly increased everywhere. With not enough water for household use, there would be little for fire protection, and property owners are warned to observe unusual precautions to prevent fires, both in towns and in timber tracts.

Eastern and Central Pennsylvania seems to be harder hit than Maryland. Conditions at Pottsville, Scranton, Conshohocken, and throughout the Schuylkill valley, are distintely alarming. Fish are dying in the streams, pastures are burned bare, ground too hard for ploughing, and water for house use is extremely limited. The same general conditions exist in New Jersey and Delaware. The Susquhanna river is lower than has ever been known, and falling at the rate of one

On the Eastern Shore of Md., industries in various towns, requiring water, have closed down. In places, also, where electric light current is derived from water power, current for power has been cut off. Water for cooking and drinking purposes, even is becoming very scarce.

Farmers are in a quandary whether to sow their wheat in the dust, or wait, then perhaps be prevented from sowing by a wet spell. Low ground, especially, is not likely to dry out any more this year, should a soaking rain

How to Plant Trees.

If possible, trees should be planted as soon as unpacked, but if this is not possible they should be "heeled in a trench, the roots fully covered with soil so packed as to exclude the air. Trees this way will keep several days, but should not be kept longer.

From the time the trees are unpacked until they are in the ground, the greatest care must be employed to see that the young and sensitive roots are thoroughly protected from the drying effects of exposure to the sun or wind. In particular, the Conifers or Evergreens are susceptible to injury of this sort.

Planting on cloudy days is preferable where there is a choice. Dig the holes before the trees are remove from the trench, or unpacked making them larger and deeper than the roots of the trees require when spread out naturally. If the soil is very poor, make the holes proportionately larger and deeper. Put in enough good rich loam, or top soil which has been kept separate when digging the holes, so that the tree, when held upright will be lower than they stood in the nursery, and spread the roots so that they lie naturally and are not cross-

Bruised or broken portions of the roots should be cut off with a sharp knife, making a slanting cut. Hold the use of bituminous coal, which is the trees upright, fill in with pulver- not subject to the 60 per-cent allotized soil, and compact firmly about ment. the roots. If possible use water to settle the dirt, but where water is not handy, work the dirt around the roots by hand and pack firmly. Fill the holes to the ground level when well compacted. Put a mulch of leaves or rotted manure around the surface, or if not available, rake over the surface pulverizing it to a depth of about an Remember two important points; keep the trees vertical and be sure the roots are well embedded. If the root system has been much reduced, it will be necessary to cut back the crown to maintain the balance between roots and foliage, but in no case should a conifer be cut back at the top.

When all is complete the trees should be tied to a strong set stake, with or without a guard. Care must be taken not to tie the trees tightly to the guide post. A piece of old garden hose is the best tie medium.

Ministers Take Note.

The Ministerial Union of Carroll County will hold its first fall meeting in the M. E. Church, Westminster, on Monday, October 9, at 1:30 P. M. There will be a hearing of the Near East Relief Association, and re-organization for coming year. By or-REV. C. G. LEATHERMAN.

A Great Event Coming Oct. 18-20 in Baltimore.

The Maryland Sunday School Association will celebrate the 80th. anniversary of its organization in the old historic First Methodist Episcopal Church, of Baltimore, October 18-20. The date has been moved forward from November to avoid the rains, and the best have been secured for this Convention.

In addition to the Conference, which will occupy two entire forenoons and which are of inestimable value, a wonderful program has been nearly completed. Dr. G. A. Hulbert, pastor of Brown Memorial Presbyterian Church gives one of the greatest adult Bible class addresses in the United States, and he will give this address as the opening and keynote of the conven-

Wm. H. Ridgway, the iron manufacturer of Coatsville, Pa., known to tens of thousands by his unique weekly contributions to the Sunday School Times, will open the eyes of the whole state as to the relation of business to religion, and especially of great business men to the Sunday School. It has just appeared that only five percent of the members of Congress are not church members.

The wizard speaker, of Washington, Dr. C. G. Chappell of the great Representative Church, which is not large enough to hold the audience, will also speak on an adult topic.

Mrs. Maude Junkin Baldwin, International Elementary Superintendent, who has already endeared herself to Maryland, and has just put forth a remarkable book on elementary work, will lead the elementary work of the convention. Mayor Albert W. Roper, of Norfolk, whose class, it is stated, spends $1000 a month on its activities, has also accepted an invitation to be present.

John L. Alexander, the greatest young people's worker in the world, and the head of the International Sunday School Association staff of young people's work, will be one of the strong characters of the conven-

Dr. Hugh S. Magill, field secretary of the National Education Association and new General Secretary of the International Sunday School Association, will be on the program.

A pageant committee has been at work for weeks to put on a pageant the first night of the convention with the first night of the convention with 185 persons taking part entitled "The Lamp." The membership of this committee insures its success beyond question. They are Mr. Daniel A. Hauer, Mrs. E. A. Bandholtz, Miss Augusta Fenton, Miss Goldie Funk, Miss Marie Staib and Miss May Wharton. In addition to the First M. E. Church, St. Mark's Lutheren Assertices. E. Church, St. Mark's Lutheran, Associate Congregational, St. John's M. P. and St. Michal and All Angels churches have been secured.

Both Turkish and British forces have retired from their advanced positions. If the Greeks can be made surrender some of the territory they have been fighting Turkey over, and if the latter's pledges can be relied on, the present war danger may be in fair way toward settlement.

The news reports, however, are conflicting, and the situation is so tense, and the Turkish attitude so uncertain, that an outbreak may occur any day, and once staged, war would seem to be inevitable. A. S. L. Opposes Greater Representa-tion for Baltimore.

George W. Crabbe, superintendent of the Maryland Anti-Saloon League, said yesterday that the league will oppose the Constitutional amendment granting to Baltimore greater representation in the General Assembly.

"We feel," said Mr. Crabbe, "that should this amendment pass the people of the State will be bartering away their power to control the morals of the Commonwealth. Baltimore has shown in the past an inability or an unwillingness to go along with the counties on issues purely moral in tone, and greater representation for the city will merely increase the op-portunities of its legislative representatives to continue along these

"The amendment would give city three-fifths of the strength of the Legislature, and it will be possible, by combining with four other counties, to control all legislation and appointments. There are certain counties which can generally be counted upon to aid the city in such matters, and we feel that the risk is too great to run.

The forthcoming installment of the American Issue, Maryland edition, will have an article on the subject, said Mr. Crabbe, in which the position of the league will be outlined .- Thurs-

Co-operative Egg-Marketing.

The campaign for the establishment of co-operative egg-marketing Unit No. 1, under the Maryland State Poultry Association Inc. which will include the counties of Carroll and Frederick, and backed by producers controlling a minimum of 250,000 laying hens, was opened with great success at the Fireman's Hall, Westminster, last Saturday night. At this initial meeting more than 16,000 hens up on the perliminary survey cards.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the State Association, held in Baltimore, Monday, October 1st., the Market Bureau of the organization as placed under the managemen President Thoms W. Kemp, with full power to organize Unit No. 1 as well as similar units throughout the state. The following were selected to compose the operating committee to administer the affairs of Unit No. 1; E. Stoner, Westminster; Elmer K. Ramsburg, Frederick; Walter G. Lov-ell, Westminster; Frank M. Payne, Frederick; Robert E. Day, Sykesville; D. F. Shipley, Jr., will be retained as secretary to the operating committee, and H. J. Jones will act as field agent. The meeting last Saturday evening was a revelation of the co-operative spirit that existed among the poultrymen, and indicated that the support of the movement would speedily make it possible to obtain the requisite number of laying hens. Although the regular operation of this unit will not be put into execution until the required number of hens ars signed up, marketing operations will begin immediately, and eggs under the label of the Maryland State Poultry Association, Inc., will be in the markets of New York, Washington and Baltimore in a

All poultrymen and farmers who wish to participate in this unit are urged to get in touch with the office in Room 3, Times Building, Westminster. Manager Kemp is now in New York arranging for marketing facilities at that point and experts are at work making arrangements to open up the Baltimore and Washington markets. Both farm and hennery eggs will be carefully graded and candled if nec-essary, and only a guaranteed product will be put under the label. While the increased returns to the producer can only be estimated at this time, it is safe to say that it will immediately be shown that this co-operative movement will net the participants considerably more than they received under the old system of marketing their product. Suit Against Sup't Crabbe.

Suit for $10,000 damages for alleged libel was filled last week in the Common Pleas Court, Baltimore against G. W. Crabbe, Supt. of the Maryland division of the Anti-Saloon League, by State Senator Millard E. Tydings, of Harford county, Democratic nominee for Congress from the Second district.

The suit followed filing by Tydings of two other suits against Rev. D. A. Foard and Rev. William Pierpont, of Harford county, on the same charge. The direct cause of the suits was the circulation of three letters by Horace Davis, member of the House of Delegates from Worcester county.

The libel contained in the circulation of the letters, it is charged, is that Senator Tydings was intoxicated in Carvel Hall, Annapolis, on a cer-tain night during the last session of The letters were

STRICTER LAWS FOR AUTO DRIVERS

An Opinion that Also Applies to Maryland.

We clip from the Philadelphia Ledger, of Wednesday, an editorial headed "Auto Laws Imperative" that is so clearly applicable in Carroll county, that we give it space.

"Six months' imprisonment does not seem too great a punishment for the individual who, while intoxicated, drives an automobile through the public streets. That was the penalty in-

The Judge touched here upon the root of the question, namely, the large number of persons permitted under existing law to drive motorcars, but who would be excluded from that but who would be excluded from that privilege if fitness and tested ability were indispensable requirements prior to the issue of a driver's license.

In the interest of public safety and of respect for law, a determined and united effort ought to be made at the coming session of the Legislature for the enactment of laws strictly limiting the right to operate motorcars to ing the right to operate motorcars to woman or child to risk the lives of others on the highways. It would seem to be the imperative duty of the Legislature to face this question and of all law-abiding auto owners to see that duty is not evaded."

It remains to be seen whether France can maintain her passive attitude toward Turkey, and "let George" do all the standing up for decency and order over there. going into court in a lawful way and asking for an injunction. The whole procedure is but cheap politics intended to have effect before the November elections.

Fools and Their Money.

There is a very old, but very true saying that "A Fool and his money is soon parted." The fact that makes this saying so familiar, is, that there are so many "fools," and as fast as one crop dies off another comes along, which likewise means that the causes of fool production are continually changing-coming in newer and more attractive forms.

But, it would seem that the stock sale plan should soon die out for want of new fool victims. Old as it is, it hangs on and catches them by wholesale, just as do the pickpockets at county fairs. Back of this sort of fool crop there must be a large percentage of pure ignorance; and of course, an ignorant man is a fool, to begin with, for there is no real sense in being ignorant these days.

Another thing that helps the fake stock salesman, is the prejudice that exists in the minds of those who have a little cash to invest, against home investments offering only regular rates of interest. There is always the ever-present notion that if one wants to get "bargains" he must go away from home to do it. There is an undoubted charm about the idea that one may be smart enough to make "big money," and show the home know better than they, how to pick up something good.

The papers have been full, recently, of stock, bond, and share investments that have taken in thousands of victims, and many more thousands of dollars, many of them drawing their money already invested in bank certificates and savings accounts; all of which leads us to believe that there are yet many other such investments that have not yet shown their true character.

Farm Values.

In a quiet way a good many farms are offered for sale, but it is generally understood that this is not a favorable year in which to sell, and many who desire to sell are simply holding off for better times. With most farm produce bringing low prices, it is but natural that the farms themselves should reflect the value of their crops.

Fortunately, there are not many forced sales of farm properties, and be expressed best in the statement it is a sure thing that eventually the | that railroad executives and mine opbusiness of farming will grow better. "Navy Day" Designated.

Friday, October 27, 1922, has been designated Navy Day. This, at the United States approved by the Navy Department.

The Navy rendered vital service to the nation and to humanity during the World War. No great fleet action was fought to give spectacular emphasis to its vital contribution to the victory. Who Wen, in the Strikes?

Richard Spillane, writer on finanadelphia Ledger, usually gets to the dren. bottom of big questions by short cuts in a very practical and understandable way. He suumarizes the result of the recent Railroad-Mine strikes, as follows;

One highly important feature in connection with the settlement of the coal and railroad strikes does not seem to have dawned upon the public mind. To make the situation clear, it may be well, first, to state what were the points at issue. So far as the anthracite industry is concerned, the men demanded an increase of 20 percent in wages of contract mine workers, $1.00 a day increase in the pay of day men, the establishment of the "check-off" system and an eight-hour day for all kinds and classes of workers.

Anthracite operators, on the other hand, demanded a wage reduction of folks how he was wise enoung to 17 percent.

In the bituminous mines the workers insisted on maintenance of the existing wage scale.

The operators called for a cut in wages ranging from 25 to 40 percent. Now, as to the railroad striks: The shopmen and others quit work in opposition to an order of the Railroad Labor Board, a Government body reducing the pay of machinists and boiler workers seven cents an hour and of various classes of labor from seven to nine cents an hour.

In the settlement of the coal strike the anthracite and bituminous miners resumed work practically on the same wage basis as before the strike.

In the railroad strike the men, as a rule, are to get about the same wages as before the strike. Superficially, both contests might be considered a draw, but, in fact, union labor gained far more than appears on the surface Unquestionably, the belief of employers generally before these strikes was that labor had not borne its share of liquidation and, for sound prosperity, it was necessary to get wages down from the peaks. Today the attitude of employers is somewhat different. It probably would erators are not so insistent on wage national stability as they are that In effect labor dodges liquidation to the degree other elements of business were forced to sustain, and mine operators and railroad executives accept this as a settled fact. It is not unlikely this changed viewpoint of railroad and mine operators will have its influence on the labor question in all branches of industry. In the final analysis labor may be found to have gained more than appears today, but it certainly paid a heavy price in wages lost. If labor leaders wish to do something really constructive they will endeavor to educate workers in ways of thrift. Bankers are authority for the statement that credit use by wage earners' families is increasing and that a large part of the credit is used for luxuries or extravagances and not for articles of necessity. ROOF ADJUSTED TO WEATHER

Comparatively Easy to Regulate Temperature of Houses Constructed of Blocks of Ice.

Changing the thickness of the roof may not seem like a particularly handy way to keep the temperature of the house uniform. Certainly no one would think of doing it in that way in this country. But in the Arctic "shaving off the roof" is the regular thing. Mr. Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the polar explorer, explains in his book, "The Friendly Arctic," just how the Eskimo does it.

If, says Mr. Stefansson, the snow house we were camping in was built at 50 degrees below zero, each block in the wall was then of that temperature and contained what we may unscientifically speak of as a great deal of "latent cold." To neutralize the cold it was necessary to keep the inside of the house for a considerable time at a temperature of perhaps 60 degrees F. Snow is so nearly a nonconductor of heat that, once the "latent cold" had been neutralized, the heat of our bodies kept the temperaheat of our bodies kept the tempera-ture well above the freezing point, even when the hole in the roof was open for ventilation. But if the weath-er became a little warmer than it was when we made camp, the heat of our bodies or the heat from the fire would raise the temperature too high, and raise the temperature too high, and the roof would begin to melt. Then we sent a man out with a knife to shave it anywhere from four to two inches thinner so that the cold from outside would penetrate the snow blocks and stop the thawing.

If the next day the weather turned cold again, hoarfrost would form on the roof and drop as snowflakes on the bed. We would know then that the roof was too thin and send a man out to blanket it with soft snow.

IS NO LONGER "GOLDEN ORB"

French Scientist Makes the Assertion That the Real Color of the Sun Is Blue.

All the daylight comes from the sun, but it arrives here by different ways. The direct light, that which forms the solid rays, has grown weak by its passing through the atmosphere, slightly for the red light, more so for the blue. The diffused light of the sky, where the blue predominates, is made up of all that the direct radiation lacks.

The blue of the sky is taken from the sun itself and the result is that we do not see the royal star under its true color. If by some miracle, which science will perhaps realize, we could rise about a hundred kilometers above the diffusing layers of the atmosphere, the solar disc would appear to us, not white, but bluish, standing out in relief on a black sky, where stars glitter at full noon. In this way it would appear to the "men in the moon" if the moon were inhabited.

And this vision of science perfectly agrees with what we know of the solar temperature. Physicists admit that the radiant surface, the photosphere, is not far from a temperature of 6,000 degrees C. It is, therefore, hotter than the yellowish flame of our gas burners, than the white light of our electric lamps and the electric arc itself, whose color is bluish.

Now, it is known that the hotter a radiant body is the richer it is in blue and violet. Therefore, the sun is blue. -L. Houllevigne in Le Temps (Paris).

Village Fair for Fiancees.

The only town in the world that has an annual "fiancee fair" is Ecaussines, a Belgian hamlet famous for its pretty girls. The village is decorated for the fair-just as it would be for a lace fair, or a cattle fair, or any kind of a kermess. The girls themselves put on their best dresses and wash most cleanly-but undue rouging is prohibited. Dancing is the order of the day, and the stealing of kisses does not constitute a misdemeanor. A speech encouraging marriage and decrying celibacy is made by the mistress of the fair. Provision is made for "courting" by the preparation of nooks and arbors near the fair grounds, where couples may stroll not too publicly.

Signs about the fair grounds suggest to the youth of Ecaussines: "Love, then marry." "Search, and you will find." "Let us marry."

Duck's Claim to Distinction.

The Sheldrake, unlike ducks in general, can walk on land with some amount of dignity, there being an entire absence of anything like a waddle. But this is not its only claim to distinction, for in nesting matters it shows marked individuality.

Its favorite breeding place is in some sandy spot near to, though not always on, the seashore, and it has an especial liking for rabbit-burrows, from which it evicts the rightful owners without so much as a "By your leave." Once the owner is out, he is never permitted to return while Mr. and Mrs. Sheldrake require the house

TURKEY FATTENED ON RANGE

Flesh Gains in Flavor and Tenderness in Way It Cannot If Fowl is Confined.

It is just as important to have turkeys in good plump condition before marketing as it is chickens. However, a good many farmers regard this as a hard job simply because there is considerable misunderstanding as to the correct way to go about the matter.

Turkeys, if taken aright, are easily fattened; in fact, easier than most other fowls. But if turkeys have had free range all summer, you cannot fatten them with any satisfaction in an enclosure. The change will cause them to fret and refuse to eat and thus they will lose instead of gain in weight. On the other hand, if they range too much while being fattened, they will "run off" the beneficial effects of your extra feeding. The right plan is therefore a compromise between these two extremes. Teach the turkeys to come up every evening at least, and then stuff them with all they will possibly eat. You will soon find them ranging at short distances only and coming up even between feeding times, where they should always be able to find some sort of attractive

Don't try to fatten the turkeys on corn alone. A close diet of new corn often results in bowel troubles for the turkeys just as it does for hogs, and a sick turkey is usually a dead turkey. Mix the fattening ration; variety is desirable for several reasons. Equal parts of wheat, oats and corn, make a good ration. Give also an occasional mash feed of equal parts of cornmeal and wheat middlings which makes a very rich feed, especially if a quantity of ground beefscrap-or green cut bone is added.

As the turkey takes on fat, the flesh turns to a rich golden color. If allowed reasonably free range while the fattening process is going on, the flesh gains in flavor and tenderness fattened in close quarters.

PROPER FEEDING BIG FACTOR

No Matter How Good the Breeding May Be, Good Care Must Be Given for Best Results,

Breeding plays an important part in successful poultry operation, but the factor of good feeding and the proper management of the flock plays a far more important part than many poultry keepers have been led to believe. Breeding, no matter how good, can accomplish but little in producing results unless backed by proper feeding and care. The best of breeding will give but poor results if the proper care and feed are not complied with.

BETTER PROGENY BY CULLING

Improvement Made in Flock by Getting Rid of All Hens Except Most Prolific Layers.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) That culling the poultry flock to get rid of all those birds except the vigorous, prolific layers results in noticeable improvement in the progeny is shown by recent investigations at the United States experiment farm, Beltsville, Md. The late moulters selected from a flock of 100 Rhode Island Reds in the fall of 1920 laid seven more eggs per bird during their second year than the original flock as pullets. They were used as breeders the following spring, and the first Red pullets to commence laying in the fall of 1921 were found to be the offspring of these late-moulting hens. Their pullets in a period of seven months have already averaged about two dozen eggs per bird more than the original flock.

But it is not alone in number of eggs that the late-moulters' progeny excel, but also in the value of the product, as the distribution was more even, a much larger proportion of the eggs being laid during the winter months. In the last seven months the daughters of the late moulters not only averaged two dozen eggs per bird more than the original flock, but the value of their product was, figuring at the same prices, about $1.04 per bird more during the same period. It is expected that this margin will increase during the next five months.

FEEDING METHODS FOR EGGS

Methods Adopted by California Community Result in Better Health of Laying Flock.

A mortality of less than 10 per cent for the year among hens entered in the egg-laying contest of Sonoma coun-California, last year is reported to the United States Department of Agriculture by local extension workers, who worked out the feeding formula used in the contest. The health record of the hens entered and their laying average of 176 eggs per hen for the 364 days have led many poultrymen to adopt the management and feeding methods used in the contest. It is estimated that 50 per cent of the poultrymen of the county have changed their method of feeding during the last five years, due to extension work influence.

TRADE-MARK ON FRESH EGGS

New Jersey Organization Making Use of Small Sticker on Produce Sold by Members.

A small trade-mark sticker is now put on all eggs sold by members of the North Haledon Leghorn club in Passaic county, N. J. This organization was formed as a result of a meeting of poultrymen of the community with the agricultural extension agent to discuss the development of the poultry industry in that section. Each member pays two cents per bird owned, 8,000 birds being pledged at the first meeting of the club. All members use the trade-mark and guarantee eggs sold under it.

RECOGNIZE VALUE OF TREES

People Awake to the Necessity of Their Presence for the Proper Landscape Effect.

With the growing interest in forestry, the landscape effect of the trees used for reforesting purposes should not be overlooked. As country homes increase in number, the esthetic features in both cultivated areas and woodlands become more and more important, writes F. W. Kelsey in the American Forestry Magazine. Progress in this direction in the United States may be classified into three distinct periods.

1. The early clearing of the native woods growth with waste and destruction alike of the natural foliage effects and the irreparable loss of the timber supply, without consideration being given to future needs.

2. The awakening to a realization of this suicidal policy as manifested in the conservation movement, which has now become a subject of nation-wide importance. 3. The prospective period when the beauty of the forest growth will in the treatment of forestry land be recognized as an important factor of development in connection with the utilitarian purposes of the forest.

The fact is now everywhere appreciated that a treeless landscape is like a treeless city, an unattractive and depressing sight.

EXTERIOR MUST BE INVITING

What Might Be Called "Approaches" to House Are Worth the Most Careful Consideration.

A comparison of the number of persons who view the interior of the home with the number who view the exterior makes more than evident the importance of artistic and tasteful decoration for the lawn and the outside of a house. The careful execution of a well-planned scheme of exterior decoration is a matter of personal as well as civic pride, and nothing enhances to such an extent both the home and the town as vines, shrubs and flowers carefully placed with an eye to grinder at once in kerosene it may be general effect and suitability in keeping with the size and shape of the lawn and the style of architecture of the building. The beauty of a house or group of buildings can be entirely spoiled or greatly improved by the vines and shrubbery around it.

Every householder is confronted with his own particular decoration problem. He must study the character of his ground, the style of his house, the paths and walks leading to it, as well as take into consideration the in order to get the right emphasis and contrast to bring his own place out and a proper perspective of the whole, 9-29-3t house, lawn and flowers.

Set Good Example.

Show your good citizenship and domestic pride by making your house a splendid example rather than a disappointing exception. Wash your windows; apply paint to thirsty surfaces; clean and renovate your yards; polish your brasswork; see to it that your house looks like a real American home. And don't stop on the outside but make the interior look like new from cellar to attic.

Pruning Roses in Spring. For the production of individual blossoms of greatest perfection, as well as to secure a succession of bloom, severe pruning of cut-flower roses must be practiced, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Where a large number of blooms of small size is the aim, the pruning is less severe. In the spring, dormant roses which have been set in the fall should be cut back, leaving only 2 or 3 stems with 4 or 5 eyes on each. This will leave them 6 inches or less in length.

AUSTRALIAN GOLD MINERS LET OPPORTUNITY GO BY. -Dwellers in the Australian cities seldom are surprised when gold is discovered in the streets of prominent country towns.

At Gympie, Queensland, the local council for years permitted a large bowlder to remain in the principal thoroughfare. It was a relic of the early pioneering days. Timber getters and teamsters used it as a resting place. Children scrambled and played around it.

One day a tipsy blacksmith dealt it a blow with a sledge hammer. As a result the bowlder spilt in pieces, revealing rich veins of gold in the seams and crannies.

Many Australian mining towns were built in a hurry. Expensive structures were erected on centrally situated sites, while the attention of miners and others was concentrated on the fortunes of outlying reefs and claims.

The haphazard treatment of mine tailings was shown in the case of the immigrant who made bricks for his house from the clay thrown from a nearby work-

About a year after he had built his house the immigrant discovered that the bricks were being surreptitiously taken from his outside walls. Hiding one night in his garden, he caught a Chinese in the act of pulling bricks from the growing gap in the

How Term "Buddy" Originated. The word "butty" or "buddy" has always been used by stonecutters for the man who works next to them and helps them in placing and moving their stone in process of cutting, two men always working together in a sort of "train work." As this custom would naturally suggest, stonecutters often call their wives their "butty." The word was probably brought to the trade from Scotland, as most of our early stonecutters came from

How Insects Destroy Poles. The latest enemy of the public utility company is an insect. Blind ant and carpenter bees are engaging the attention of electrical men throughout the country. The insects are causing much damage to electric light poles. They enter the pole below the ground, eating their way through poles all the way to the top. Being blind, they instinctively seem to shun light, and confine their operations beneath the surface. Methods of checking the devastation are being considered.

Bushmaster Probably the Most Feared and Worst-Tempered of the Earth's Crawling Creatures.

The worst-tempered snake in the world is the so-called bushmaster of South America, writes T. C. Bridges in the London Daily Mail. There are three sorts of bushmasters, of which the largest, called by the Indians the "surucucu," is a yellow monster ranging, when full grown, from nine to thirteen feet in length. This creature, which is extremely plentiful in the damp forest, attacks on sight. Without the slightest warning it comes hurtling out of a thicket and drives straight at the intruder. And its bite, to a white man, means a speedy and horrible death. The Indians, however, have some herbal remedy which protects them against the effect of this poison. Last year a man sent on a message from one ranch in Bahia to another did not arrive. Search was made and his body was discovered with a great 'suracucu" wrapped round it.

The brute was killed, and then it was found that the unfortunate messenger's body was one mass of bites. There were literally scores of punctures from the poison-dealing fangs. The "surucucu" has anot r peculiarity which, so far as i shared by one other serpent only. This is that it is capable of making a sound, quite apart from hissing. It is described as a low whistling-a sort of 'phew! Phew!" If one of these crea-vorable resort—its presence can be detected by the sound it makes. The smaller bushmaster is known by the Indians as the "apagafoco." The tures is hidden in a hollow tree-a fa-

name means "lover of fire." Fire, instead of scaring this snake, attracts it, and by campers in wet forest the cooking fire is always extinguished before sleeping. Otherwise the man who goes to relight it in the morning will probably find one of these deadly creatures coiled in the warm embers, and possibly pay for the experience with his life. In the swamps of Brazil and in every forest pool anacondas abound. Of these, too, there are three sorts. The largest is the "dermidera," the greatest and most terrible of pythons. It is black in color, and its native name means "the snorer." This is the other snake which makes an audible sound. apart from hissing, a sound comparable with the loud snoring of a sleep-

One of these snakes has been killed exceeding 60 feet in length, but trails seen in the swamps seem to indicate the existence of still more monstrous specimens.

Even the smaller anacondas will attack man, and it is highly unsafe to approach a forest pool to drink without first taking due precautions. The anacondas lie in the water, with heads just above the surface, silently awaiting prey. The Indians of inner Brazil all speak of another snake which, so far, has not been identified by the naturalist. They call it the "salamanda," and describe it as a sort of boa about 20 feet long, but of enormous thickness.

As They Do It Up North

Ommunication of the contraction of the contraction

By CORONA REMINGTON.

1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate

"Next station's Pennelton, ma'am." Marion Caruthers looked up, nodded to the porter, quickly stuffed the magazine she was reading into her grip and put on her coat and hat. A moment later she was standing on the platform watching the train pull out. As she glanced around she felt like running after the disappearing cars and begging them not to leave her behind. It seemed as if she had severed the last connection with her past, her girlhood life; but in a flash her spirits were up again and she turned quickly as someone touched her on the

"Miss Caruthers?" said a pleasant voice, and Marion saw before her a middle-aged man with bared head. "Yes, I'm she," she smiled back at

"I'm Thompson, the principal of the school where you're going to teach." "How nice of you to meet me," she said. "I'm awfully glad you're the principal because I know I'll like you."

"You're very young, Miss Caruthers," he mused glancing up and down the trim little figure before him. "Yes, this is my first school," she admitted. "And to come so far." "It is a long way, but I've always wanted to see the South, so I took my first chance." "I hope you'll like it; we do. We'll just get home in time for dinner," he continued. "Dinner!" she gasped. "Why, up home we always have dinner at six o'clock." Professor Thompson looked a shade uncomfortable for a second, but he managed to say lightly:

"We're just ordinary folks down here. Guess you'll have to make al-try? Dinner's just ready. I'll show you your room so you can take off your things."

When Mrs. Thompson came back down stairs she and her husband had a hurried word in the hall. "Isn't she attractive!" said Mrs.

Thompson. "What lovely eyes and such a quick, infectious smile." "Yes, but I'm afraid she's too young to manage children in a country high school. Had absolutely no experi-

Their comments were cut short by the entrance of Marion and they all hurried into the dining room.

"Biscuits?" said Marion quizzically at the dinner table. "Up north we have bread-bake Wednesdays and

"I'm sorry we have none," said the professor quietly.

"And you serve string beans with pork," Marion went on in amazement. "I never saw that before."

By the time the meal was over Mrs. Thompson felt that somehow her wellcooked dinner had fallen short of the mark. It was very disappointing-she had worked so hard.

The following day school began and Marion was busy all the rest of the week getting things organized in her

"You know," she said to Professor Thompson that Friday afternoon as they left the building together, "most of the boys and girls I have are old enough to be in the graduation class instead of second year. Up north they would be."

"Perhaps so," he answered patiently. Marion shook her head in discouragement. There were many things she could not quite understand and many more that she could not make them understand. They were nice people and intelligent, but so different. At the first parent-teachers' meeting she nearly had an open tilt with one or two of the mothers. She just could not make them see. And, worst of all, she had a feeling that they were antagonistic toward her and this hurt. At home she had always been fairly well liked, she admitted to herself as she sat in her room and dabbed at the falling tears. They did not understand her. There was only one person in Pennelton who did and he was John Hamilton, the Latin professor.

Fall slipped into winter and the students at Pennelton county high pegged away. Marion had enjoyed the Thanksgiving holiday immensely. Professor Hamilton's mother had invited her over for Thanksgiving dinner, after which they had gone on a straw ride and had supper at a distant inn. It was a jolly crowd. Then there were two dances and Marion had made a decided hit each night. Still she did not feel that she was one of them. There was always a slight coolness about these people that was apt to freeze suddenly right in the middle of a conversation, and without a moment's notice. Southern people were nice, but queer-so queer. No doubt about that.

And now spring had come again and soon Marion would be going back home, and for some peculiar reason she was not sure that she was glad. She had made a success of her teaching and Professor Thompson had been unstinted in his praise of her work.

The parent-teachers decided to give a parting banquet in honor of themselves and to commemorate a most successful year's work. Marion put on her best evening dress and looked her stunningest as she sat beside Professor Thompson at the long table.

Mrs. Burton rose and began to make a speech.

"This banquet," she said, "is in honor of Miss Caruthers. Everything on the table has been prepared by a northern woman we coaxed over from Delton and the recipes all came out of a northern cook book. We wanted just once to do something down south as they do it up north, and-"

"Oh, forgive me," interrupted Marion, jumping up. "I see it all now, but I never realized how tactless it was. That's what's been the matter. What a little beast I've been! Would it help to make amends now if I tell you I love the South and the people and the cooking and everything, and I did so want them to love me. If you ever hear me say up north again I hope you'll run me out of the county. That's what I deserve, anyway."

Flushed and breathless, she dropped into her chair again. "Yes, I'm certain Miss Caruthers feels every word she's said about liking the South and all that," said Professor Hamilton, rising, "because sheshe's going to marry a down-southershe's going to mary me!"

"Jack, you-I never-" But the rest was lost in a round of applause and the banquet table was almost upset as the crowd rushed forward to congratulate the happy couple, while Professor Hamilton congratulated himself on his brilliant coup

EFFECT OF SUN ON PLANTS

Remarkable Power Exercised Has Frequent'y Been Observed by Botanists and Sylviculturists.

Much has been said of the repulsive force exerted by light, especially by the sun's rays. Not long ago some interesting facts were gatherd to illustrate that the solar light may have also an attractive influence, real or apparent. This, however is of interest to botanists rather than to astronomers, as it relates only to the vegetable world. "Heliotropism" and its allied phenomena are frequently the subjects of investigation by botanists. A familiar instance in point is the turning of the sunflower toward the sun. Astronomers have made numerous experiments on this point, establishing the fact that this force is able to act with great power on the direction of leaves and flowers, and even of branches and whole trees. Thus, in the grounds of the Juvisy observatory a tree was once raised to an upright position by the action of the sun alone.

It was a chestnut tree that the wind had overturned against a wall. The roots penetrated anew into the soil and became firmly fixed there. The sun righted the tree little by little. It was possible to note, year after year, the progress of the raising, due solely to the attractive force of the solar rays. It may be remarked that it has always been noticed that plants and trees seek the light-not only the sun but any place of maximum light.

This is a general phenomenon that may be seen in any forest, but sylviculturists attribute it only very indirectly to an attractive force emanating from the sun. They think that the tissues develop less rapidly in the side of the light than in the shadow, where there is greater moisture-hence a curvature of the wood toward the illuminated side. In the second place, the leaves, needing light to assimilate caras, under the soil, the root seeks the point where it may find the proper nutritive elements for the plant .- Philadelphia Record.

Three Venetians.

There are three Venetians who are never separated in my mind-Titian, Veronese and Tintoret. They all have their own unequaled gifts, and Tinto ret, especially, has imagination and depth which I think renders him in disputably the greatest man; but equally indisputable, Titian is the greatest painter, and therefore the greatest painter who ever lived. You may be led wrong by Tintoret in many respects, wrong by Raphael in more; all that you learn from Titian will be right. Then, with Titian take Leonardo, Rembrandt, and Albert Durer. I name those three masters for this reason: Leonardo has powers of subtle drawing which are peculiarly applicable in many ways to the drawing of fine ornament, and are very useful for all students .- John Ruskin.

LOOK FIRST TO THE HOMES

City Beautification Does Not Merely Mean Construction of Immense Public Improvements.

"When we think of city beautification we are accustomed to think of a great park or square," H. Merle Smith said in a speech at Kansas City recently. "We think of velvety stretches greensward, flowers blooming and fountains playing in the sun. If our vision be large, we think of many parks, scattered over the city and readily available to all the people. To some city beautification means a civic center, with noble public buildings arranged in a great composition. The plan of the city of Washington, with the capitol, the White House and the Lincoln memorial related to each other by the Washington monument, illustrates the point.

"But in our desire to do something great and fine to bring beauty into city life we have sometimes overlooked the simple, perhaps the most effective thing. We have forgotten to make our homes beautiful. May I suggest that city beautification, like charity, should begin at home? "'A man's home is his castle." You've heard it said a hundred times. The sentiment sounds a note of independence for the man and his family. It harks back to the Middle ages, the military Middle ages, when rights were obtainable only by the sword. While we may exult in the thoughts that a man is secure in his unfortified home today as he once was in his castle with its drawbridge and its towers, let us not forget that when the creator made man he placed him in a

"The garden home-and all that is required to convert a mere house and lot into one is planting-offers enjoyment in home life that cannot be obtained otherwise. The garden really adds a room to the house. Since no room in the house is left unfurnished the garden will not be neglected.

"The average person thinks of a garden as an expensive sort of thing, one that is within reach of the rich alone. Yet the bungalow or cottage on a 45-foot lot can boast of a garden that is just as worthy the name as the mansion on the boulevard. Given the desire to have a garden, the way always can be found. It is not to be thought that gardening is a simple task. There is real science about it. Experience is the best teacher and work with patience will richly reward everyone who tries."

URGES MORE TREE PLANTING

Forester of the University of Illinois Points to Necessity for Action in Immediate Future.

utility, the tree, once respected above all other inanimate things of the farm, is passing from its high estate, R. B. Miller, forester at the University of Illinois, fears.

A windbreak in winter, a friendly shade in summer, a protection to both man and beast in and out of season, the tree was planted around the farmhouse and wherever else it could do good by the industrious farmer of fifty

But today, Mr. Miller says, he has noticed "that these trees are reaching quite an age and many are leginning to fall into decay, as trees will, in spite of the best of care."

And the question is asked, how will Illinois country lands look in another fifty years unless reinforcements are made?

In his travels over the state Mr. Miller declares he has become convinced of the necessity of calling attention to the benefits which may come from tree planting on the farm, leaving out for the moment the farm woodlot, which should be utilizing the waste land on every farm. In many parts of the state beautiful windbreaks and ornamental trees were noticed, such as Norway spruce, the white pine and the European larch, or tall hedges of cedar.

The Old Gardener Says-

A little water in a garden is worse than none at all. It helps form a bon, move toward the lighted side, just | crust on the surface and coaxes the roots to the top of the ground. If you can give water in abundance it will increase the size and quality of your crops. The moisture ought to reach a depth of at least two inches. There are several inexpensive irrigation devices on the market which are a great boon to the amateur, but much can be done by making little trenches along the vegetable rows and filling them with water, time after time, until the ground is saturated.

> Right City Standard. Writing under the title of "Making Towns Fit to Live In" in the Century Magazine Mrs. Gilman says: "It's time to quit asserting that the home town is the grandest little place on earth and begin to take stock of "Main Street" to find out just how the home town measures up to the standards of a really fit place in which to live."

Set Good Example.

To be effective care must be universal. One sloppy yard can ruin an otherwise beautiful block of homes.

Any one standing just inside the door of 118 could get quite a good look at whoever might happen to be standing just inside the door of 116. Not directly, of course, but because the glass in the show windows was set at such an angle that the young man in 116 was mirrored within the line of vision of the young woman in 118.

"Beast!" exclaimed the young woman in 118 to an audience consisting of herself alone; for Stanley Botash, the sturdy boy who wrestled the ice cream tubs and soda containers, was down in the basement, smoking a cigarette, and he was now her sole remaining retainer.

"Gosh!" ejaculated the young man in 116. "I'm sick of having that that skirt rubbering in here, and then tossing her head like a thundering queen or something! You'd think, by golly, nobody but her had any right to lose their money in a fool business like this!" He glared at the backs of the suicidal price marks on the glass trays and nougats and bonbons in his own show window and at a daintily lettered placard - "Real Ice Cream Soda, 8 Cents"-which, with significant underlining of the word "real," hung in the window next door.

"Here!" exploded the young man in 116, "this has gone on long enough. Right now comes the show-down!" And leaving his establishment to the quite sufficient administration of the red-headed girl just then busily admiring the expanse of her henna ear puffs in the back-counter mirror, he proceeded to violent action.

The violence, however, expended most of itself upon the vicious jerk with which he opened his own shop door. By the time he had taken the two steps that brought his hand to the knob of his neighbor's door his manner was quite formally correct. And by the time he got himself inside he was well-nigh deferential. For after all he was still less than thirty-and the young woman in 118 was extraordinarily pretty as well as being a bit-

Miss Matilda Ives, now standing in discontented contemplation of her immaculate tables and chairs, turned at the sound of the door's opening, and an inch was added to her height and a world of chilly inquiry to her expression as she answered his "Ahemgood morning," with a lofty, "What can I do for you?"

"You can buy me out-that's what you can do," said Willis Masters, "Look here, Miss Ives," he continued, "you know there isn't a chance in the world for two places like ours in this little town, let alone next door to each other-and the way we've been slashing prices leads to the bankruptcy court—to say nothing of selling stuff so cheap that the people are scared to buy it, and everybody but the kids is ing to the Greeks. You butted in here after I got tied up with a lease and spoiled my opportunity to build up a business. Now, I'll give you a chance—take the shop off my hands and you can have it for 60 per cent | blekeeper, of inventory. That's pretty big discounting on four-month-old stuff."

The haughty Miss Ives listened to this hastily formulated proposition without abating one jot or tittle of her air of icy majesty. Then very suddenly, and without the least suspecting that she was going to do it, she plumped down into one of her infrequently used chairs and began to cry. "I never heard any one say such a thing in my life," she gurgled between sobs. I butt in! Why, the very idea! When you know very well I had this store leased before you ever thought of such a thing or started here. And I put every cent I had in the world into it, too! You know perfectly well I can't buy you out. You know I've got to sell, and you are just making a cheap price so you can get the place for half what it's worth, All right, I'll take it. I'd have taken less just to get away from alongside you." The girl punched her eyes with her wadded handkerchief as vigorously as if they had been the eyes of Willis Masters.

"You mean to say you didn't know I had my store leased?"

"You didn't. Old Mr. Westover told me himself that an optician from Massachusetts was considering it.

"Gee whiz! and he told me he had rented your store to a New York woman for a blouse shop! Whenever did you get your lease?"

"March 14, at 10:30." Through tears Miss Ives couldn't help noticing how ingenuously boyish her rival looked. "You win! I signed mine at 11, same day. The old crook!" "Couldn't we sue him or some-

"Not a chance—he's too slick. But say, you'd better buy; I'll call it 50 per cent. Haven't you got some rich relative? You kind of-well, look as if you had a lot of them. And with both those shops you could make the place the swell hangout of the burg." Miss Ives shook her head despair-ingly. Really, she was thinking this hated rival was-well, almost nice. What she said was: "Not a relative. My last one, an aunt, died last year. She left me $7,000—with a string on it. I refused to touch the string. But I'll sell-I told you so before." Masters laughed hollowly. "Me buy? Great Scott! I couldn't raise going at a cent apiece! I soaked my wast possible dollar into this placedo you know why?" he inquired unexpectedly. Miss Ives looked interested. "Because a girl swore she wouldn't marry anybody but a business man!" Miss Ives' interest suddenly diminished. "And now-what do you think?" demanded Willis. "She says I've proved I'll never make a business man—and is going to marry some one else, just because I'm coming a cropper." Miss Ives' interest revived.

"How perfectly horrid!" she said. "Well, I thought it was pretty rotten myself. But I don't know that I mind so very much, after all." Willis was stealing a long look at Matilda's bewitching profile.

The conversation bogged down at this point into a half minute of si-

An idea smote Willis so hard that he jumped. "Say," he exclaimed, "If we can't buy one another out-do you suppose-what do you think-partnership, you know!"

Matilda shook her head ruefully. 'We couldn't ever build up a regular, honest-to-goodness business now without capital. I wish to gracious my Aunt Harriet hadn't been so dictatorial-the old dear!"

"What was that string, by the way?" inquired Masters perfunctorily. "Oh, just an old woman's whim. Well, to tell the truth, she made the legacy payable to me on my wedding

Miss Ives looked up at Mr. Masters quite unconcernedly. He was merely nodding his head repeatedly as if in full sympathy with her unpleasant testamentary predicament. But somehow their eyes continued to meet. Then over the uncommonly pretty face of Miss Ives there spread slowly, like the first whisper of dawn, the loveliest possible suggestion of rose. And into the boyish countenance of Willis Masters there came the surprised, delighted reflection of self-revelation.

"By golly!" breathed Willis, quite unconscious that he was speaking

"Look here!" exclaimed Matilda. jumping up, with the blush at least three tints deeper-and lovelier than ever-"you go back to your own store right now.

"All right, but you and I are going to dinner together tonight and sign up for bigger business!

And from that day to this the proprietors of Travers' Spa at 116-118 Main street, the town's fashionable meeting place and small private mint, have never been able to decide which got the idea first.

ONLY WANTED RIG ONE WAY

Traveling Man Got Gloriously Even With Livery Keeper Who Thought He Was Smart.

The report in the middle West of the United States of a "driverless automobile" station along the lines of the old livery stable, where one might hire a "rig" and drive it oneself, affords occasion for recalling a story about the earlier institution which may serve as a warning to any who and perpetuate this community spirit, would resort to sharp practice. Ac- there are hundreds of plans consumman once said to the proprietor, of a livery stable:

"Ten dollars," again answered the liveryman.

Several days later the traveling man reappeared without the rig and handed the stableman $10.

"But where is my rig?" demanded its owner. "Oh, it is over at Blankville," said his patron. "All I wanted to do was to go over."—Christian Science Monitor. Alphabetical Retort.

After several complaints had been made to him, the vicar of a certain church, says the sketch, came to an opinion that his old sexton was neglecting certain duties.

The sexton, who was not wanting in wit, strenuously denied the charge, and said that he was "not goin' to stand no meddlin' with his affairs."

"But John," argued the vicar, "it behooves everybody to mind his 'p's' and

"Everybody except me," retorted the old man, refusing to be concerned, "I've enough to do to mind my keys and pews."-Youth's Companion.

Landaulet.

Landaulet was applied by the Germans to a four-wheeled type of carriage designed by a firm in Landau. It had a folding top for a compartment seating four passengers. The rear half of the top was made of leather, the front half being semi-rigid and fashioned of wood and glass. The driver's seat, like in the English brougham, was raised above the level of the passengers and not inclosed. The modern motor car landaulet is practically the same as the brougham except that the top can be folded at the rear, converting it into a semi-

PETUNIAS BLOOM TILL FROST

Blossorn One of Sweetest and Plant, Is Most Prolific-Fine for Beds and Boxes.

For porch and window boxes and for gay beds which will hold their display until frost kills them, there is no annual to compete with the petunia, particularly the small-flowered bedding varieties with their myriad

There are wonderful plants with their frilled and ruffled flowers, which are more showy individually, but they lack in freedom of bloom and sheets of color and are better for individual specimens or for beds by themselves.

The bedding petunias make a solid sheet of color. Two of the finest of these, because of the purity and delicacy of their color, are Rosy Morn and Countess Ellsmere, much alike in their delicate rose, white-throated bloom, but the latter is of more rampant growth.

For window boxes three petunias inclined to trailing habits which will droop artistically over window boxes are Balcony White, Balcony Rose and Balcony Blue. There are no finer subjects for porch and window boxes than these three and their culture is simple. A packet of seeds will furnish enough petunias to decorate the windows of a fair-sized building.

They can be sown outdoors as soon as the weather is settled and transplanted very easily about a foot apart and they will soon make a solid mass. They begin to bloom when the plants are small and each inch of growth merely enlarges the blossoming surface. Cut back in the fall and potted up they make fine house plants,-National Garden Bureau.

ALIVE TO COMMUNITY SPIRIT

Few Towns and Villages Throughout the United States Not Awakened by Recent War.

It is a significant fact that the tendency in the United States today is to make the community memorial erected in honor of those who fought, a "living monument" rather than the cold symbol of bygone wars. During the recent war, every community in the United States learned and practiced the real meaning of co-operation or community service, and in many instances the people of a town or village were brought together in common fellowship and work for the first time in their experience. That community spirit ignited under the forced heat of war has flamed into such a steady light that the people do not want to see it extinguished in time of peace. As the most effective way to preserve cording to the tale referred to, a trav- | mated and in the making, to have the war memorials crected assume form of community buildings, where all of the people can meet together for music, art, and social service. Tablets, flags, war trophies and all the other mementoes of war, will be provided, but in addition, there will be facilities for public gatherings and the keeping up of that close co-operation of all the people, so successfully started during the war.

Salvia. The scarlet sage, or scarlet salvia, is a standard bedding plant that keeps the garden bright with color until late in autumn. This plant lends itself to many uses; it makes a good pot plant, does well in window boxes, and is useful for cutting, to give color. Its commonest use, however, is as a hedge or border plant, giving long broad bands of vivid scarlet. On account of its very striking color, caution needs to be observed in using it in this way. It can be most effectively used in small clumps among or against masses of green. Seeds should be sown in window boxes or frames six weeks before the last frost and the plants set outdoors after all danger from frost is past.—United States Department of Agriculture.

Verbena.

The verbena is a low-growing annual with a creeping habit. The flowers are borne on terminal or lethal shoots which lift themselves from five to seven inches off the ground, and when grown in mass the plants will form a mat that in full bloom will give the soil the appearance of having a carpet of flowers. The colors include white, pink, scarlet, blue and purple. The length of stem and the texture of the flower are such that the verbena is of value for bouquets and table decorations. It can be used with good effect in beds, borders, mounds and window boxes.-United States Department of Agriculture.

Oil Stock.

Mrs. Newriche—I've always wanted my husband to be done in oil. Mrs. Newpoor-Poor John was done

WHY=

Region in Canada Is Called "Hell on Earth"

There's a hell on earth up in the Canadian wilds, reports a Canadian government agent who has returned from Fort Norman on the Mackenzie river in far northern Canada. He went there to investigate the new oil discoveries reported in the past few months, and found in many places enormous quantities of burning coal and shale. The air is full of the smell of sulphur and burning coal. At night along the river great cliffs of sizzling molten clay may be seen.

This sounds very Dantesque, but its probability cannot be denied. It is well known that the fantastic and highly colored "bad lands" formations of South Dakota owe their origin and condition to just such a happening. In fact, some of the beds of coal in that region are still burning. Similar phenomena are known in other parts of the world.

Some may marvel that coal and oil are found so far north, even within the Arctic circle, since coal, especially, is known to be derived from plant life which flourished in a tropical or mild climate. The coal beds of the Mackenzie river region, however, are several million years old, although comparatively recent as the geological age of the earth is now generally accepted. At the time they were formed, and also much more recently, the climatic conditions of the earth were very different from now. It is not only conceivable, but certain, that tropical conditions, in the relatively recent geologic past, have existed as both the North and South polar regions.

As to how the fire started one can only surmise. It may have been from lightning, or most likely from spontaneous combustion such as takes place in the coal storage bins quite frequently. The little local "hell on earth" probably has been burning for countless thousands of years and it will continue until burned out or until the air can no longer reach the burning material to supply the necessary oxygen for combustion.

REALLY HELPING OUT NATURE

Why Pillow Is Rightly Regarded as a Necessity to Induce Healthful, Refreshing Sleep.

When you go to sleep your feet automatically become heavier and your brain lighter!

This is because the blood drains slowly from the head into the limbs. If you cannot go to sleep at night it is because your brain is too full of blood, and therefore too active. If you get another pillow, Nature's process will be assisted and sleep will come much easier.

It was for this reason that the custom of using pillows arose. Without a pillow, or with only a low one, the blood has to fight its way uphill, as it were, and insomnia results. What the sleepless really need is a sloping bed, for the upper part of the body being heavier than the lower, it naturally sinks down, and even if you prop yourself up with two pillows your neck is liable to get curved so that the flow of blood is as badly ham-

How Modern Photographer Works.

A very charming method of child portraiture has lately come into vogue in England. The sitters are depicted in fancy costumes, actively occupied in some childish way, such as playing with toys, or petting "bunnies," all most delightfully colored. Several examples of these portraits, with fanciful settings, have been on exhibition in London galleries, and have been much admired.-Popular Mechanics Maga-

How Ships Display Personalities. According to the captains of ships sailing the Great Lakes, each steamer possesses a personality of its own, distinct and individual, which is always recognizable. Something about its whistle, the intensity of its signal lights, the sound of the spray as it glides through the water, immediately identifies the ship even under cover of night. A certain sentiment is attached to all the boats and they attain an element almost human.

Why Invalid Won Honor.

LESSON FOR OCTOBER 8

THE BIRTH AND CHILDHOOD OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT-Luke 2:1-20; 40-52. GOLDEN TEXT—And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man.—Luke 2:52. REFERENCE MATERIAL-Matt. 1:18;

PRIMARY TOPIC-The Boy Jesus. JUNIOR TOPIC—The Boyhood of Jesus. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC -Jesus at Home and at School.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC -The Religious Training of the Young.

I. The Birth of Jesus (vv. 1-7). 1. Time of (vv. 1-3). It was at a time when the Jews were coming under the Roman power. It was a most propitious time for the introduction of the gospel. The whole world was under one rule, making it possible for ministers to go from place to place easily and without molestation.

2. Place of (vv. 4-6). Bethlehem, as the prophet had foretold 700 years before (Micah 5:2). God moved the emperor to enforce the decree of taxation in time to cause Mary to be at Bethlehem.

3. Circumstances of (v. 7). His surroundings were of the most humble sort. The Almighty Creator condescended to take upon himself humanity-to be born in a manger, becoming the poorest of the poor that none might be hindered from coming to Him.

II. The Birth of Jesus Announced (vv. 8-20). 1. To Whom (vv. 8, 9). The shepherds who were watching over their flocks by night. The glorious gospel message was first given to laboring

2. By Whom (v. 9). The first gospel sermon was preached by the angel of the Lord. The angels have part in making known the gospel to lost men. These glorious beings no doubt deeply sympathize with fallen, sin-cursed men.

3. The Nature of the Message (vv. 10-14). It was good tidings of great joy. It was good tidings because the way of salvation was about to be opened for all-Jew and Gentile. So glorious was this news that a multitude of the heavenly host accompanied it with a song of praise. It is through Jesus Christ that God's kindness and good will are made known to man.

4. The Shepherds Witnessing (vv. 15-20). They made a prompt investigation of the angel's message.

III. The Child Jesus Growing (VV. Jesus Christ was divine, but His deity did not interfere with His development as a human being. The processes of his physical, mental and spiritual growth were the same as those of any normal human being: 1. Jesus Tarrying Behind at Jerusalem (vv. 40-43). At the age of twelve years a Jewish child took his place as a worshiper in the temple, for he was considered a "child of the law." Being conscious of His mission when His mother and Joseph were returning from attendance at the Passover, Jesus tarried behind to enter the temple and inquire into the meaning of the ordinances of God's house. 2. Jesus Found in the Temple (vv. 44-47). When His mother and Joseph had gone some distance on their journey they perceived that Jesus was missing and sought for Him among their kinsfolk and acquaintances. Not finding Him there they returned to Jerusalem, where they found Him in the temple. (1) He was "sitting" (v. 46), showing that He was no passing visitor or sightseer. He was perfectly at home in His Father's house. (2) He was "hearing" (v. 46). He was hearing the teachers of God's Word. This shows that He was eager to learn God's will. (3) He asked questions (v. 46). His growing mind was inquisitive. It more than received what was taught: it inquired after. (4) He answered questions (v. 47). His answers showed great wisdom, such as to astonish those who heard Him. Yet we

3. Mary's Complaint (vv. 48-50). She remonstrated with Him for His behavior. To this He replied in a dignified, yet tender manner. He made no apology, showing that He was more than the son of Mary.

should not surmise that He was consciously displaying His wisdom. It was not an exhibition of His divine wisdom, but the expression of the workings of a perfect human mind

suffused by the Holy Spirit.

4. Jesus' Obedience (v. 51). Though He was fully conscious of His divine being and mission, He lived a life of filial obedience. 5. Jesus' Development (v. 52). (1) Mental. He "increased in wisdom." (2) Physical. He "increased in stature." (3) Spiritual. He "increased in favor with God and man."

— THE — CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

- From -Moody Bible Institute Monthly Chicago, Ill.

October 8 The Folly of Procrastination Ecclesiastes 9:10

The modern version of Ecclesiastes 9:10 is "Do it now." It has been well said that the road of "by and by" leads to the house of never. The folly of procrastination may be clearly proved

1-It kills time. We can all make a personal appropriation of the following: "Lost—one golden hour set with sixty diamond minutes. No reward because gone forever." Time lost means less of service and less of reward. Every duty neglected means loss of some blessing that we might

2-It loses opportunities and prevents development. Knowledge and wisdom both are gained through obedience to the Scripture which bids us buy up the opportunities. See Ephesians 5:16. Many Christians wonder why greater opportunities do not come to them. The only reason is because those that do come are not improved.

3-It weakens character. One who is always going to do great things and never begins, soon becomes a graduate in untrustworthiness. He lacks the quality of dependence for which employes are looking and often look in vain. Like the man in the parable, no one will hire him. Failure to do the thing at hand with all our might means failure in the making of a life that counts. Life is made up of little things and procrastination leaves them undone, or only half done.

4—It proves fatal. This is true not only in regard to the things of time and the things that make for character here and now, but also to the eternal things, the things of the Procrastination is soul's welfare. clearly related to excuse making, and that in turn is a close relative of moral cowardice. "Now is the accepted time; now is the day of salvation." Felix delayed the choice which was pressed upon him and suffered eternal loss as a consequence. The counsel contained in the one verse of our Scripture lesson is worthy of adoption as a principle of life. Whether great or small, that which is near and calls for action should have immediate and whole-hearted attention and be done in such a spirit as to glorify God.

WORK WITH DEFINITE OBJECT

The value and the salability of real estate depends upon what? Mostly upon the skill with which it is subdivided; upon the transportation facilities, the utilities and the street system which serve it; upon the parks and recreation facilities available to it; upon its outlook; upon the business and social wealth, and producing capacity to the community; and upon the protection given it against offensive use of neighboring property, says Jacob L. Crane Jr., zoning and city planning engineer and adviser on zoning for the Chicago Real Estate board.

The last of these factors is controlled by zoning. All the others may be controlled very largely by city planning, which deals with all of these way. The real estate business, therefore, like all other business, to a large degree depends on the results of city planning, whenever it is taken up. This explains why real estate men are so vitally interested in the subject, and sometimes!" why they are usually the first ones to Aim to Prevent Fire Loss.

Let the city fire department be as efficient as is that of the district. There still remains much for the average citizen to do in preventing fire. After all, prevention is better than cure in this matter, as in all others. Even as modern medicine is coming around to a serious campaign throughout the nation to prevent illness, rather than cure it after it occurs, so a city may campaign strenuously to prevent fires before they break out.

The responsibility of the individual man, woman or child, therefore, is the crux of the matter. Until, through educating the public in every way possible to the necessity of such prevention, the average person is made to be always on the watch for incipient fires and actively thinking about them. a community is not true to itself along these lines. What greater absurdity, for instance, than allowing a carelessly thrown match to set fire to a great building and then calling out half the fire-fighting equipment of a city, when the active thought of the man who threw the match might have prevented the whole thing?—Washington Star.

Teeth-Grinding and Adenoids.

Among 2,395 collected cases of adenoid growths, Benjamins states grinding the teeth was mentioned in 801 cases. Out of 1,791 personal cases Benjamins found: Snoring, 1,085 times; impaired of hearing, 908 times; catarrh of the upper air passages, 873 times; grinding the teeth, 618 times; aprosexia (inability to concentrate the mind), 566 times; enuresis, 462 times. Removal of the adenoids does not, however, always give relief from these symptoms.

A Question of Rivalry

By A. W. PEACH.

Stanley Murdock looked with somber eyes into the brown, amused eyes of the girl opposite him. "Ruth, you are a puzzle, and I wish you would unravel or unriddle or something else. You know I love you; you let me go some feeling for me, and then-then the cold water," he added gloomily. think a great deal of you. I like to be i palms. with you. You are handsome, and as a rule good company. You do many things the right way, but-" She paused, her baffling eyes studying

He stared at her sharply. "Obstacles or obstacle? Ah, I see; there is some one else. I thought so-a rival -back in the old home town. Won't you tell me about him?"

She mused as she paused before answering. "Why, yes, I might—a little. I like him because—well, he is splendidly unselfish, thoughtful of others and always even-tempered

"He must be getting ready to die with such a record," Stanley said a bit bitterly.

"And always good-natured," she added quietly. "I never heard him say an unkind thing except in defense of kind things."

"Ruth, I beg your pardon. I swear I am sorry, but I can't bear the thought of some one else having you," he said earnestly. "Tell me, isn't there much of a chance for me?"

She laughed softly. "Why do you desire me so much? Yes, Stanley, there is a chance, of course. I do like you, but-well, I guess you under-

He did not understand, however. He simply knew that there was a rival who must be beaten, who must be prevented from winning the brown-eyed, brown-haired girl whose slight but graceful form had walked into Murdock's heart the first time he saw her. Beyond a grim determination to win her from her old home lover he did not go on in his thinking.

The next day a dim ray of light struck him. An error by a subordinate in the office aroused his ire, and a quarrel followed that led to his being summoned into the manager's office. "Stanley, that confounded temper of yours makes more trouble in this office than any other thing. Now you are worth too much to us to fire you, and you know it; but for heaven's sake take a brace. Treat people a bit more decently, and they'll think more of you!" the manager said earnestly.

The phrase that stuck was "think more of you." "That was what Ruth was driving at. Thunder! I didn't realize I was such a nut as that!" he said to himself as he debated the mat-"That home town chap has some thing on me there!"

From that hour he braced decidedly, and he was astonished at the changed attitude of the office toward him, but he was more happy over the change

They were returning from an afternoon together at their favorite beach. things in a definite and comprehensive; She slipped a small hand through his. "Stan, do you know that this is a record day? "You never will be in the future besupport city planning and zoning proj- cause of these hot-headed stunts of mine, Brown Eyes. I am going to gain on that home town chap."

She laughed in her merry way and walked a bit closer to him.

Out of a clear sky, destiny or whatever it is that breaks into a man's way of life and shoves him into the right path, another incident came to open his eyes.

Adjoining the apartment house where he had his rooms was a fine court, cool and comfortable on the warm days. Returning from work one afternoon he found the two children of one of the apartment dwellers playing in his chosen corner. He drove them out with some degree of anger. He was rewarded with the sound of a heated girlish voice saying: "You big brute! You are the most selfish man in the house!" He stared at the flushed face of the young mother. "Selfish!" He heard another voice, girlish like this one, say of his rival-"splendidly unselfish." He rose, called the children back, sat down, and taking the scattered blocks began to erect a fascinating tower. The children slowly drew close to him, and in a few moments they were deeply interested. The mother, harder to win, softened until she

When the playtime was up the youngsters were his friends and the mother apologetic, but Stanley was sober. "I am mighty grateful to you for what you said. Really, I did not realize I was such a chump, but now I see. Here's where I take a brace!" He found it hard, but the effort paid. Unconsciously, his circle of friends widened; men he had learned to avoid because they made it evident that he was not their kind, warmed to him. In a word, the attitude of life took a tremendous change. But the best change was in Ruth.

On that memorable evening she was aking ready a dainty lunch for him, nd she announced: "Stan, I am goig home for a brief visit."

The news sounded like a knell to im. Out of his life and back to the rival he feared. He looked at her quietly; to his lips rose no bitter comment, sarcastic in tone; all that lay behind him in the weeks of determined effort in which he had killed, and for good, the habits that had made him less of a man, served him now.

His silence caught her attention, and she looked up. Perhaps in his face there was the shadow of his longing for her, his great fear that he might lose her, his abiding regret for unhappy things of the past. Anyway he saw the brown, fathomless depths of her eyes clear, and through them glow a steady light. Then she came She studied him gravely. "I do to him, caught his cheeks in her cool

"Stanley, dear, don't look that way. I do love you and you may have me!" Somewhat later he said happily, "I am sorry for that rival of mine."

She laughed, her eyes twinkling to his. "That rival was you-your other self, dearie, thoughtless, selfish, hottempered. There was no other. You won me for yourself from your other self. See?"

WISE LAWS GOVERN UNIVERSE

Stars Pursue Their Diverse Ways Through Eons of Time Without Possibility of Mishap.

The sun is speeding through space carrying its planet family with it at the rate of twelve miles a second, 1,-000,000 miles a day, or four astronomical units a year. And the astronomical unit is the distance from the earth to the sun. In the last 15,-500 years it has traveled as far as light travels in one year. It would cover the distance that separates our solar system from Alpha Centauri, the nearest star, in 68,250 years. Light comes to us from Alpha Centauri in four and one-third years.

Since the solar system first came into existence the sun with its family has probably traveled many hundreds of light years through the universe, the light year being equivalent to about 63,000 astronomical units or 63,000 times the distance from the earth to the sun. Old constellations, or star groups, have faded away and new ones have gradually taken their place, though since the dawn of recorded history the constellations have changed but little in form.

It is evidence of the grandeur of the scale upon which the universe is fashioned that, according to the testimony of the geologists, no destructive catastrophe has overtaken this world of ours for many millions of years, at least, while we have advanced far through the universe. It is apparently a law of the universe that, in general, the stars will pursue their diverse ways for long eons of time without interfering with one another, experiencing collision or serious catastrophe of any kind.

Pigs Don't Like to Fly.

Many strange cargoes are now carried from the terminus at Corydon to the French capital, sharing the machine with some live fowls. Apparently the porkers had no great fancy for flying, for throughout the whole journey the pilot heard grunts and squeals above the hum of the engines.

Fruit and fresh flowers and live lobsters are often included among the cargoes of the skyway. Many of the things that travel by air seem dull, prosaic, and far removed from the romance of flying. Who would think of tinned rabbit or vaseline as he observes a machine gracefully passing overhead?

Few, again, think of a cargo of handbags, shirts, or gold watches, and only the minds of the thirsty turn to cases of rum or whisky. But such things are carried daily by air .- Manchester Guardian.

Awakening of Peru.

A considerable increase in industrial activity is to be noticed in Peru. On the whole, the textile industries have been the most successful since cotton and wool are produced locally in quantities and qualities sufficient to insure profitable results. The only other industries that have attained much importance include the manufacture of cottonseed oil, soap and cocaine. The cotton mills of Peru manufacture principally sail-cloth, filterpress cloth, towels, and some other heavy goods. The total number of looms in operation is 1,015, and the annual production is about 15,000,000 yards. The development of this industry will create a fairly good opening for cotton mill machinery. The woolen industry is also expected to

Lock Saves His Umbrella. The man with the inventive turn of mind had experienced much difficulty in preventing other people from taking his umbrella. One day a ste-

"That's because I have it locked now," said the inventive one. "That girl got to the street, having grabbed an umbrella, and found that the thing wouldn't open. So she brought it back, affecting to have made a mistake. The lock's a simple padlock, with a ring which closes around the end of the ribs."-New York Sun.

TAKE TURNS KEEPING HOUSE

New York Man and His Wife Have Arrangement They Say Is "All to the Good,"

Jones and his wife are a modern couple. Each goes to business and each helps with the housework. It so happens that each works in an office where on alternate weeks their presence is required at an early hour and their quitting time is fixed correspondingly early, says the New York Sun.

"We've doped it out this way," explained Jones. "The week the wife has to get to the office early I get up and get breakfast and after breakfast wash the dishes and make the bed. After that I just have time to make the office. When the wife gets home at night she gets the dinner, so that by the time I arrive everything is on the table steaming hot. The next week, when I have to get in early mornings, we just shift schedules. She gets the breakfast and I the dinner.

"Of course I had to have a little coaching on the cooking at first, but I've got so now I can shake as mean an elbow around the kitchen as any one, whether it's boiling an egg for breakfast or preparing a five-course dinner.

"Some who have heard of the arrangement think we're crazy. But we're happy; so what's the differ-

"COMMONS" ONLY IN NAME

Delegates to Early English National Assembly Belonged Without Exception to Proprietary Class.

As early as 1254 in England, knights were called from the shires to the national assembly to testify to the taxable capacity of their districts. Two from each shire were chosen by the gentry and landowners.

At first the custom had no purpose except the desire of the taxing body to keep in close financial touch with the towns and districts. But soon Simon de Montfort, in rebellion against Henry III, turned it into a gathering to express and discuss grievances against the king. In this way there grew up a representative assembly called the "Commons," which sat and debated apart from the gathering of great nobles and bishops, called the "House of Lords."

The difference, however, was no more than relative. For in this early house of commons there were no common men in the modern conception of the term. They were all men of property, many as wealthy and influential as the great peers, and, indeed, frequently they were the sons and younger brothers of these peers. The really common man in those days had not even a vote, to say nothing of a seat in parliament.

Why They Got Nowhere.

A story that harks back to the Civil war concerns a troop of Confederate mountain volunteers and their colonel. They had been sent for by a certain Confederate town, but before they could arrive the federal forces were in command of the city. The auxiliaries arrived in the night and found the town deserted. Not caring to mix unnecessarily with the Union troops. they turned around and rode out of the town by the first gate and road they found. Before them stretched a fine smooth highway and they took to it for all they were worth. They rode all night without passing any villages or signs of civilization. The countryside seemed not only deserted, but demolished as well. When the sun peeped over the Blue Ridge mountains the colonel drew up suddenly. "What's the matter, suh?" asked the lieutenant. "Dammit, suh," roared the colonel. "we've been galloping around a racetrack all night."-San Francisco Ar-, gonaut.

Lunenburg Gloucester of Nova Scotia. In Lunenburg, the Gloucester of Nova Scotia, the smell of fish is in all and over all. Churches, fish flakes, curing plants, steep hills, bold headlands, shipyards, skilled fishermen and a sightly fleet of fishing vessels, oxen and German-looking faces, figures and names, are the characteristics. The place was settled by Hessians back in George IV's time, and marked traces of the early settlers remain. The housewives are so neat that they even put lace curtains at the cellar and woodshed windows. A prodigious clanging of church bells goes on in Lunenburg every Sunday, for the place has many places of worship.

From Lunenburg come some of the hardiest and most skillful mariners and fishermen in the world, while the fishing fleet and the vessels built here. have a wide reputation.

What the Mouth Denotes.

Suspicion and secretiveness are denoted by a mouth which slants to either side and has lips tightly drawn. while intolerance, arrogance, and other traits similar in character have. as a result of long study, come to be associated with a mouth where the lower lip protrudes. A mouth may not be an infallible guide to character, but that its shape, form, and expression is influenced by thoughts, emotions. and actions is readily acknowledged by those who have made a study of this most sensitive feature.

The Woodsboro baseball team "champions" of Frederick county, will play Taneytown the "Champions" of Carroll county, in Taneytown, this Saturday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, sharp. A return game will be played in Woodsboro, on Saturday, 14th. As this is likely to be the last game of the season on the home ground, a big attendance is desired, especially as there is a small debt unpaid on account of building the grand stand. Come out and give the boys a big benefit.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Basehoar, of Philadelphia, formerly of this place, entertained at dinner, on Sunday, in honor of their son, Lloyd, who was recently married to Miss Elizabeth Patterson. Mrs. Ezra Spangler, Baust Church, who has been confined to the house for about twelve weeks, was remembered on her birthday by her many friends, who sent her many beautiful and appropriate cards for the occasion, for which she takes this means of thanking the many donors. A very striking coincidence is that she received the same number of cards as she is years of age.

Sewing machine repairers are said to be operating in Adams County Their plan is to be given a chance to "look over" the family machine, then remove some small part which they replace with another, and show the lady of the house how badly it is worn. They then secure the job of repairing it, which merely consists in replacing the part removed and going away with a few dollars for

THE SEASON'S SCORE

Taneytown Won, 26 — Lost, 8

Taneytown 7-Thurmont 2.

Taneytown won from Thurmont, at Thurmont, last Saturday, in an exciting, yet in a way a one-sided con-test. Taneytown made two runs in the first and second innings, on a hit and a pair of errors. The score stood 2-0 until Thurmont's half of the seventh, when by bnnching hits they tied the score. Taneytown then went to work in earnest with the stick, and batted out five runs in the 8th. and Freeze, who pitched for Thurmont, did good work until the 8th., striking out 5 men and allowing 4 hits, but his work was spoiled by giving four passes to first and hitting one batter. Bonsack struck out 11 men and passed 2. Taneytown had 11 hits to 7 for Thurmont. Thurmont was strength-ened with players from Frederick and Woodsboro, while Taneytown was minus the help of Drenning.

The game was a very noisy one at times, and umpire Grimes was the object of a lot a wrangling, but with the exception of one decision at first, the mountaineers had nothing to complain of, and that one would have made no change in the score.

Taneytown 13—Thurmont?

The return game with Thurmont, on Wednesday, was a disappointment, after the game of Saturday. Taneytown played without three of its regulars—Fuss, Myers and Small—but Groff and Dunn were excellent substituted. stitutes. Taylor, who pitched for the visitors, was effective in spots, striking out 9 men, but failed in the regularity of his skill; besides, his support was decidedly ragged something like 'steen errors being made by his mates.

Taneytown had a dozen hits, Bonsack making a homer and Groff a 3-bagger. Bonsack struck out only 5, but allowed only 3 safe hits. The game was not played to a finish, everybody being ready to quit after giving the visitors their half of the 8th. inning. The score was— Tanevtown 3-2-3-0-4-1-0-x=13 Thurmont 0-0-0-0-0-0-0=0

Tariff Bill Favors Churches.

Churches, religious bodies and edacational institutions, on the whole are favored by exemptions in the new tariff bill as agreed on in conference and submitted to the two houses of Congress for final approval. Perhaps the most important provision of the bill is that which places on the free list altars, pulpits, communion ta-bles, baptismal fonts, shrines and Statuary imported in good faith for presentation, without charge to and for the use of, any corporation or as-sociation organized and operated exclusively for religious purposes.

Next in importance, is the exemption from duty of all books and pamphlets purchased abroad which are printed wholly or chiefly in languages other than English. This will admit to free entry the Missal, the Breviary and all theological and most of the philosophical works used in seminaries, as well as other standard Latin books, a large proportion of which are published abroad.

A third provision of the bill, as aproved by the conferees, admits the free importation of stained or painted window glass or stained or painted glass windows which are works of art and valued at $15 or more per square foot. All other imported stained glass or stained-glass windows, which either are not works of art or are valued at less than $15 per square foot, are subject to a duty of 50% foreign valuation.

As most of the finer altars and statuary used in American churches are the products of Old World artists, it is estimated that the provision in the new tariff bill will save to present and future donors of such articles many hundreds of thousands of dol-

Perhaps the highest wages for laborers in this country, is paid plasterers in Chicago who receive $26.00 a day for their work. They get it because they demand it, and because there are not enough plasterers to go around on the building operations.

NO. 5406 EQUITY In the Circuit Court for Carroll

CARRIE M. CRUMBACKER, Plaintiff GEO ELMER CRUMBACKER, Defendant.

The object of this suit is to obtain a decree of divorce a vinculo matrimonii of the plaintiff from the defendant and the custody of the parties' two infant children to the plaintiff. The bill states that the parties were married by Rev. Guy P. Brady, at Taneytown on June 21, 1919, that they have both been residents of Carroll County practically all their lives until the defendant deserted the plaintiff. That they have two children, Ralph E. Crumbacker, 2 years old, and Kenneth W. Crumbacker, 1 year old, who are with their mother. That the conduct of the plaintiff towards her husband has been that of a good, true, caste and loving wife, nevertheless the defendant, on the 15th. day of August, 1922, deserted her and left the Stafe of Maryland with one Mrs. Blanche Rineman, with whom he has at divers times committed the crime of adultery, since which the plaintiff has not cohabited with him. It is thereupon this 30th day of September, 1922, ordered by the Circuit Court for Carroll County, sitting as a Court of Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in Carroll County, for four successive weeks before the 6th. day of November, 1922, give notice to the said absent defendant of the object and substance of said bill, and warning him to be and appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 27th. day of November, 1922, to show cause, if any he has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.
