AUTO HEADLIGHTS AT CONFERENCE

11 States Will Adopt Uniform Devices, Very Likely.

Regulations governing the use of antiglare devices on automobile head-lights was the principal item of business taken up at the first quarterly meeting of motor vehicle administrators held Saturday in Newark, N. J. E. Austin Baughman, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, attended the conference and said Monday that they expected soon to arrive at some definite basis for uniformity in the laws governing such motor equipment.

There are 11 States now in the conference. They are Maryland, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massacrusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Ohio. The last-named State was admitted at the Newark meeting.

It was pointed out at the conference that the laws governing headlight devices were not the same in the various States.

"For instance," said Mr. Baughman "we might permit an anti-glare device to be installed in Maryland, but the same device would not be allowed in Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Therefore a motorists going North might be arrested for violation of one of these State's laws.

"In about a week or ten days, we will have for the information of Maryland motorists two lists of approved headlight devices. The A list will include all anti-glare equipment permitted to be used in all of the 11 States in the conference. The B list is the same list as is now furnished motorists and includes those devices approved only in Maryland."

Mr. Baughman said that many of the devices approved in this State were also approved in other States, but the information will be given out in order that tourists contemplating going North will be informed as to just what devices they may or may not use on their headlights in the various States.

He stated that the accessory dealers in this State were only permitted to sell such devices as were approved in Maryland.—Frederick News.

Thefts of Autos Increase.

Records for the last four months show the number of automobiles stolen in Baltimore city far above

During October, 1922 only 90 machines disappeared, while in November 127 were stolen, 115 of which were recovered by the police. In December, 116 machines were reported missing. Police returned 97 of them to their owners. Records for the entire year show that 1026 cars were stolen and 951 of that number were later found by the police.

January of this year finds 105 cars stolen, as compared with 84 during the corresponding month of 1922.

If it were not for February being an unusually short month, indications are that previous records would be broken. So far 20 machines have been reported missing, although 17 of that number have been returned.

"The present figures, though not alarming, are above what the department would care to have them," said Chief Inspector George G. Henry today. "Joy rides are responsible for a greater part of the thefts, while bootleggers add to the number. The cars are taken from garages or in front of persons' homes, used for what ever purpose wanted and left abandoned almost anywhere.—Balt. News.

Cannon not Wanted.

The small field piece which had been sent here by the Government and placed in Center Square has been locked in Weaver's warehouse following its return from Hampton on Monday to which place the thing had been taken from Arbegast's field by a numnight. Reports from Hampton state the gun was no more wanted in the square there than here and a committee promptly deposited it in the rear of March's barn. When the field piece was being put Rickrode and several others, who were playing tiddlewinks in Evans' store, ty and current money, and received were scared half to death, thinking the Ku Klux Klan was on a rampage (Bill had to have a bodyguard to take him home, it is said!) On Monday Wm Gilbert was authorized to bring the missing gun back to New Oxford. A petition is being circulated requesting Council to pay no more money toward the cannon. Further developments are expected at Council meeting on Friday evening. No arrests have been reported for removing the cannon from the Square originally, altho $5 reward has been offered for information. Why not ship the thing back to Uncle Sam and be done with it?—New Oxford Item.

"QUITE A LITTLE."

Some Old Expressions in use in Various Localities.

I was interested in Mr. John J. Reid's letter about Maryland and Michigan. I agree, with him that Maryland cuts a small figure away from home. It seems to the North and West, to be a far away place, of not much consequence. I have been frequently spoken to in New York state

You are from Maryland. That is way down. Have you ever seen any snow? Or, I have been to Washington, and looked out of the car windows and saw that Maryland was a very poor state. Traveling on the train is a poor way to see the country. 25 years ago the expression, "Quite a little" was not used here in Maryland. About that time, I drove to New York state with a horse and buggy and stayed over night with a farmer that milked about 30 cows.

I was anxious to make a good showing and asked him to let me milk his best cows. He said all right. He and his hired man, showed me his cows, they said that this cow milked "Quite a little" and that cow milked "Quite a little" &c. I skipped them and took others. I did not get much milk, so I thought they were lying to me. The farmer had a bright little girl who was helping to milk. I girl who was helping to milk, I thought as she was a child she would tell me the truth, but she pointed out the some cows, and said that they gave, "Quite a little" milk. A few days afterwards, I learned what they meant.

A year or two after that, while staying with another yankee, during the evening, he suddenly exclaimed; now, I believe you are from Maryland; I asked why? Because you said, "Right Smart." The man said, a few years ago he was way down South, and they said, "Its a right smart distance," "Right smart corn" the answer to nearly everything was "right

He always heard that the negroes talked funny, but even the white peo-ple said "Right Smart." It was the funniest expression he ever heard. I had to pay him back. So I said that it did not seem to me one-half as funny as "Quite a Little," I said that, "Little" was not much, and that "Quite" made it less. That few, was not many, and that "Quite a few" was a smaller number, he said, I suppose you are right, I never saw it in that light before. I said yes, and you "carry" your horses to water, while we lead ours. You "carry" your milk to the station, while we haul ours. It must make you tired to "carry" your horses, and to "carry" your wagon loads of milk two or three miles to the station.

A few years afterwards, I received a letter from New York state that read something like this. I have seen your milker, and I think, "Quite a little of it," there are "Quite a few cows kept here," if you give me the agency we can do "Quite a little business to-

Who Has the Keys?

A week ago, last Sunday, while going from Emmitsburg to Westminster, R. C. Murray, of Frederick, overtook an auto stalled in the snow about a mile south of Emmitsburg. In assisting the party. Mr. Murray loaned him his keys and a ring, in order to open the link of a chain so he could attach his car and he pulled out. This did the work, but the party drove off with-Governor of Maryland, at the primaries to be held in September. This will Murray would like to have. The stalled car was a large Overland. In addition to the driver, it contained a last fall, when he declined to contest lady, a girl, several dogs, and some rugs and carnet.

JAIL SENTENCES INSTEAD OF FINES.

For Drunken Auto Drivers Before Frederick Court.

Judge Worthington, of Frederick, in charging the Grand Jury, said it would be the policy of the Court to impose jail sentences upon all persons violating the Prohibition law; and that a fine is regarded merely as a sort of "high license," and is in-effective. In his charge, Judge Worthington said:

"There is with us still the bootlegger. I hear from time to time criticism of the Volstead act. With that criticism, favorable or unfavorable, you are concerned. We do not at-tempt to enforce the Volstead law in this court.

"We operate exclusively under the law of the State of Maryland. We have a law here that was passed before the Eighteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution was adopted and before the Volstead act was enacted.

"Our law was passed by the Legislature of 1916 and was voted on by counties, and Frederick county ratified it by a goodly margin, the majority in this county being something over 800. It is therefore a law of the people's own making and as we live under a government that recognizes the rule of the majority, it is our duty, whether we personally like or dislike it, to enforce it."

Big Haul of Whiskey

Liquor thieves secured a large quantity of high proof whiskey-perhaps 100 barrels—by tunneling about 150 ft. from a cellar in a private dwelling at 320 South Sixth St, Baltimore, to the cellar of the Stewart Distilling Co. A rubber hose pipe line was used from the warehouse to the cellar, where a small hole was made through the warehouse floor, and the barrels tapped.

The job was evidently the work of experts in mining, and in drawing out the liquor. The apparently amazing thing about the job is that all of the work, which must have taken a month could be carried on without the residents about the warehouse hearing any sounds, and that the barrels could be tapped and the "goods" made away with, by easy stages, without the guards knowing anything about it. The job is being closely investigated.

Historical Sketch of Carroll.

The Record is indebted to Joseph D. Brooks, of The Sentinel, for a copy of his excellent address on "Early Settlement of Carroll County," which we will file with our collection of local histories. Mr. Brooks deserves much credit for having given so much time and effort to the necessary research for such a historical sketch. No doubt he has a lot of extra copies that can be had on application.

In an Egyptian tomb a vase was found containing honey still liquid after 30 centuries. Cushions on the armchairs found in this tomb were still so soft and well preserved that one could toss them across the room without doing them damage.

The Eastern Shore had an 8-inch snow on Monday, the first snow of this season. The fall was accompanied by a gale in some sections.

PENNSY'S DRY BILL. Pinchot Measure Introduced in the Legislation. Harrisburg, Feb. 4.—The Administration's dry bill, which puts the licensed saloon out of business in Pennsylvania by repeal of the Brooks High

License act and the Woner act, was presented to the Assembly tonight. The bill was introduced in the Senate by Senator Plymouth W. Snyder, of Blair County, chairman of the Law and Order Committee, and in the House of Representatives by Representative Armstrong, of Armstrong County, chairman of the Law and Order Committee of the House. The two bills immediately were referred back to the Law and Order Committees. The provisions of the bill differ but slightly from the digest made public yesterday by Governor Pin-

The act specifies it shall not be unlawful to possess intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes in one's bonafide private dwelling providing such liquor was acquired lawfully prior to the passage of the act.

Attorney General Woodruff explained this afternoon that when liquor is dispensed to guests in a private home that fact cannot be made the basis for the issuance of a search warrant. On the other hand, if liquor is sold to guests a warrant could issue on the fact. It is provided, however, that the burden of proof is upon the householder to prove the liquor was lawfully acquired.

The search-an-seizure clause in the bill provides that a warrant can issue only upon information in writing before an alderman, justice of the peace, magistrate supported by oath or affirmation alleging there is probable cause to believe and there is just and reasonable grounds to believe that intoxicating liquor is unlawfully manufactured, sold, offered for sale, bartered or furnished or possessed in a room, building, boat or vehicle. The penalty clause in the bill provides a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $5000 or imprisonment of not more than three years or both for violation of any its provisions.

County Commissioners of each county are authorized under the bill to provide District Attorneys with suitable storage facilities for all intoxicating liquor seized under the act.

Remarkable Bible Facts.

The learned Prince of Granada, heir to the Spanish throne, imprisoned by order of the crown for fear he should aspire to the throne, was kept in solitary confinement in the old prison at the Place of Skulls, Madrid. After thirty-three years in this living tomb death came to his release, and the following remarkable researches taken from the Bible, and marked with an old nail on the rough walls of his cell, old how the brain sought employment through the weary years:

In the Bible the word Lord is found 1.853 times: the word Jehovah 6.855 times, and the word Reverend but once, and that in the 9th. verse of the 11th. Psalm. The 8th. verse of the 117th. Psalm is the middle verse of the Bible. The 9th. verse of the 8th. chapter of Esther is the longest verse; 35th. verse, 11th. chapter of St. John, is the shortest. In the 107th. Psalm four verses are alike—the 8th., 15th., 21st. and 31st. Each verse of the 136th. Psalm ends alike.

No names or words with more than six syllables are found in the Bible. The 37th. chapter of Isaiah and 19th. chapter of 2nd. Kings are alike. word Girl occurs but once in the Bible. and that in the 3rd. verse and 3rd. chapter of Joel. There are found in both books of the Bible 3,586,483 letters, 773,693 words, 31,373 verses, 1,189 chapters, and 66 books. The 26th. chapter of the Acts of the Apostles is the finest chapter to read. The most beautiful chapter in the Bible is the 23rd. Psalm. The four most inspiring promises are John xiv. 2; Jno. vi. 37; St. Matthew xi. 28, and the 37th. Psalm, 4th. verse. The 1st. verse of the 60th. chapter of Isaiah is the one for the new convert. All who flatter themselves with vain boastings of their perfectness should learn the 7th. chapter of St. Matthew. All humanity should learn the 7th. chapter of St. Luke, from the 20th. verse to its ending.

______ May Have War With Turkey.

The situation in Turkey, if anything, is more critical than that in Germany, as the Turks are holding out against accepting terms of territorial settlement, and have ordered war vessels of the Allies to leave Smyrna harbor. The Allies are working well in harmony, and will open fire on the Turks without hesitation should the latter press the situation

Russia appears to have decided to keep out of the conflict, if one comes at least for the present. England is hurrying war vessels to the scene.

FRENCH OCCUPATION AT A STAND-STILL

Rumored Efforts at Peace through the Industrialists.

German resentment over the Ruhr invasion is growing more bitter, as it becomes more evident that the terms of the war settlement must be met. It is said, also, that this feeling of bitterness extends to England and the U. S. for not taking sides with Germany against the French demands. Notwithstanding this, there are signs that the situation is improving in another way, as industrialists on both sides are trying to make negotiations, looking toward payment of reparations. These negotiations, of course, are being made by private citizens, and not by those who represent either the government, or the military, but in the end they may lead to important results. As yet, the attitude on both sides is one of stubbornness, and the French invasion has not accomplished immediate benefits.

The railroad strike is especially effective, and the German employees seem well supplied with money, while the rails on the main lines are becoming rusty from disuse, and the stations and yards are taking on abandoned appearances. It is understood that France will send a certain percentage of its trained men, in order to move food, and keep up about a 20 percent normal service.

A complication to the situation is a strike among the French coal miners, a radical branch of the organization, demanding increased wages.

The French are reported to have offered a plan for peace, privately, through the German magnates operating the mines and manufactures, by which they would guarantee a payment toward reparations satisfactory

Wife Beater Sentenced.

Waynesboro, Pa., Feb. 8.—In sentencing Samuel J. Gessaman, of Rouzerville, to serves three months in jail on a charge of assault and battery on his wife, Judge Gillam said: "Any man who strikes a woman at any time is a coward, but one who strikes his wife is a beastly coward. It is too bad the whipping-post has been abandoned in Pennsylvania; it might come in good in this case."

In addition to serving three months in jail Gessaman must pay $40 a month for the support of his wife. He was also placed under $300 bond to keep the peace and fined $25. Mrs. Gessaman, a woman of 55 years, complained of abuse at the hands of her husband dating back to December 29, 1921. Gessaman countered with charges that in one of their numerous quarrels his wife had caught his thumb between her teeth and bitten it deeply into the bone.

Three For Mayor of Baltimore.

Baltimore is almost sure to have a three-cornered contest for the Mayor-alty, between Howard W. Jackson, Democrat; present Mayor Broening, Republican, and former Mayor Preston, Independent. Jackson has announced himself for some time, while Broening appears to be the only Republican considered. Mr. Preston has a considerable following, and has been backed by The News for a month or more. Preston will not contest for the nomination at the primaries, but will run Independent.

Mr. Preston in his advance announcement says that if elected he will hve a strictly non-partisan administration, and will work against lawlessness and for the best interests of the city. A Preston headquarters will be opened and an organization effected at once. The Mayoralty election is in May.

Lived to be 117 Years Old.

Charlestown, W. Va. Feb. 5—Jas. G. Sutton, 117 years old, died today at the Kanawha County Farm, where he had lived for the last four years. County officials said that his age had been well authenticated and that he was born in 1806. He was formerly a resident of Lewisburg, but moved to Ohio about forty years ago, returning to this State and taking up his residence near St. Albans about twenty years ago.

"Smoking plenty of good tobacco, chew tobacco, but don't drink liquor," was his advice to questioners on the means of attaining old age.

When Sutton went to the farm four years ago officials said he was wearing three pairs of trousers and efforts to induce him to change this habit, they said, resulted only in reducing the number to two.

Influenza Still Growing.

Influenza and attending diseases are still on the increase, taking the state as a whole. Measles are also first two, and 26 years at the last. increasing. The cases of flu reported are mostly from the city, many of the country cases not being reported. The disease is hardest on young children, and on persons well advanced in age. Considering the extent of the disease, the percentage of deaths s small, especially when proper medical attention is received.

Baltimore is still jailing its drunks who persist in operating automobiles. What is "30 days" to a man after he is filled with bootleg?

DISCOVERY OF FLU GERM.

Doctors Working to Perfect a New Treatment.

It is authoritatively announced that the influenza germ has been discovered by physicians at the Rockefeller Institutes of Medical Research, and that this will mean new forms of attack on the disease, and much to humanity. Dr. Salter chief of the Bureau of Bacteriology, Maryland State Board of Health, says:

"Experiments are now being made on rabbits. Virus is used to develop a protective antitoxin. If this experiment meets with success and we are able to cure rabbits of the malady it is very likely a serum can be produced for preventing influenza in man.'

Dr. John S. Fulton chairman of the Board of Health, said:

"It is a very gratifying piece of proof. It shows that there can be such a specific disease as influenza. Without this proof, we would still be in a position where we would have room for the notion that influenza is the familiar common colds simply aggravated in an unknown way.

'The chances of developing a preventive or cure depends largely on its transmissibility to the lower ani-

World's Largest Hotel for Chicago.

An enterprise that is the embodi-ment of magnitude all its com-ponent parts is the design of the Stevens Hotel, about to be erected in Chicago. This huge structure will be a veritable museum of world's records in connection with other things besides mere magnitude, although this will be its most arresting characteristic, for it will be the largest hotel in the world, containing alto-gether about 3000 bedrooms, or nearly 800 more than the world's present largest hotel. Besides the main hotel itself, there is to be an annex, or service building, which will correspond to what is often referred to as the "back of the house. The hotel with its annex will occupy nearly a whole city block between Michigan avenue on the east, Wabash avenue on the west, Seventh street to the north and Eighth street to the south. The main building will have a frontage of 400 feet on Michigan avenue and a width of 175 feet on Seventh and Eighth streets back to an alley on the west. It will have twenty-five stories above grade and in addition four stories of roof promenade, with an observation tower. On the ground floor the total area will be 70,000 square feet. Above the fourth story there will be three courts facing Michigan avenue and two in each of the north, south and west facades. These upper stories will each have an area of 46,883 square feet.

Below grade there will be a basement for the boilers, engine, pump and fan rooms, and a lower level for ash handling, the ash tunnel being sixty-seven feet below grade. In the basement will be an exhibition hall of 35,000-square-feet area, believed to be the largest hotel exhibition hall in the world.

The annex, or service building, will front on Wabash avenue. It will be 52 feet wide and 189 feet long and will bridge the alley. It will have twelve stories above grade and below it a basement and sub-basement.— The Popular Science Magazine.

Belair Road the Most Used.

By actual count for the past six months, the Belair road out of Baltimore carries greatly more traffic than any other road centreing in the city. It has been claimed that the Liberty road was most used, but the facts show it to actually stand ninth. The test of the roads was commenced in July and continued through Decem-The average monthly use of the Belair road was 2567 vehicles, and 6,528 tons.

Hardware Prices Advance.

New York, Feb. 6-Hardware Age

January sales in the wholesale hardware markets were 15 to 25 per cent better than for the first month of 1922. Price tendencies are still upward, and shortages are hampering sales in some sections.

Reasons advanced for shortages are scarcity of unskilled labor, embargoes and slow freight movements, difficulties of obtaining raw materials and the fact that there was no surplus in warehouses.

The "Over Twenty-one" Style.

Now, it appears that some folks are too lady-like to give their exact age, when applying for registration as voters, and an effort will be made to have the election law amended so that women need only say over "twentyone" when registering. A lot of men, and some women, think it would be a good thing to let the law remaincalling for the exact age-if it prevents a certain class of women from voting, who merely want to change the "style" of the law.

The plea was recently strong for "equal rights" for women, and now the very equality of rights is objected to. The criticism seems to come so soon after, and there is really no assurance that some other "equal" provision of the law may not come up for change in style, and a sort of "latest or two. APPEALS TO LUST FOR GOLD

Term "El Dorado" Lures Today as It Did When Spaniards Sought Fabulous Wealth.

The name El Dorado is Spanish for "the gilded." The term applied first to a South American king said to cover his body annually with gold dust and bathe in a sacred lake, then to a fabled golden city, and finally to a fabled country abounding to an almost inconceivable degree in gold and precious stones.

The legend, the origin of which has never been satisfactorily explained, took many variant forms. while the mythical king and his equally mythical dominions were shifted with the utmost facility from one part of the continent to another. The story fired the imagination of the gold-hunting Spaniards, who expended vast sums in sending out exploring parties, most of which returned decimated by privations, fatigue and disease. The name has since been applied to any place abounding in gold or in opportunities for acquiring sudden wealth, and more to a county in California and a city in Colorado.

MAKE MONEY RAISING GEESE

Success Can Be Had With Small Numbers Where There Is Low Pasture and Water.

The Toulouse and Emden are the most popular breeds of geese in this country. The Toulouse is the largest breed, the adult gander and geese weighing 25 and 20 pounds, respectively, while the standard weights of the Emden are 20 and 18 pounds.

Geese can be raised in small numbers successfully and at a profit on many farms where there is low, rough pasture land containing a natural supply of water. The market for geese is not so general as for chickens, but the demand and prices are especially good in sections where goose fattening is conducted.

Geese need only a house during cold or stormy weather, when an open shed should be provided. One gander is mated with from one to three geese, and the matings are not changed from year to year unless they prove unsatisfactory. When mated, they are allowed to run together in flocks. Toulouse and Emden geese will breed when about two years old. The females are usually kept until they are from twelve to fourteen years old, or as long as they lay well. Sex is difficult to distinguish, especially in young geese. The gander is usually somewhat larger and coarser than the goose, and has a leaner, longer neck and a larger head. The sex is sometimes determined by a critical examination or by the action of the geese at mating time. Large boxes, barrels or shelters are provided as nests for geese, or they are allowed to make nests on the floor of the house. The eggs should be collected daily and kept in a cool place. First eggs are usually set under hens while the last ones which the goose lays may be hatched either under hens or under the goose if she "goes broody." If the eggs are not removed from the nest where the goose is laying, she will usually stop laying sooner than if they are taken away. The period of incubation of goose eggs varies from 28 to 30 days. Moisture may be added after the first week by sprinkling the eggs or the nests with warm water. Goose eggs hatch slowly, especially under hens, and the goslings are usually removed as soon as hatched and kept in a warm place until the hatching is completed.

INDIVIDUALITY OF HER OWN

Different Breeds of Chickens Have Characteristics-Many Do Not Study Their Fowls.

Each hen has an individuality and her own notions and customs. That different breeds have different characteristics, we all know, but many do not study their flock or do not consider it necessary to do so.

Some one suggests that hens which are talked to and made much of will, in turn, be good layers. There is a measure of truth in this; certainly fowls treated with kindness will do better work than those which are never tamed and are frightened at the approach of any one. But don't get the idea that kindness will produce eggs. A hen possessing no laying strain worthy of mention will never repay one's affection by eggs if there are no eggs bred in her.

Secure the breed and strain, add to this a study of the flock, and to this companionship and care, and the results will be satisfactory.

RATION FOR EGG PRODUCTION

Best Feed Is That Suited to Local Conditions-Prepared Material . Is Economical.

In feeding for egg production, the economical feeder wishes to use the grain he has. The best ration is the ration that best suits the local conditions. If one must buy all the feed, then he will probably find the ready prepared scratch feeds and mashes as cheap as buying the varieties of grains and mixing his own. The agricultural colleges have worked out rations which are practical for farm

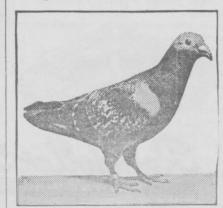

POINTS FOR SQUAB RAISERS

Owners of Successful Plants Always Find Plenty to Do in Winter in Caring for Birds.

Managers of successful squab-raising plants always find plenty to do in winter taking care of their breeding pigeons, seeing they are properly mated, culled, housed and fed. If large plump squabs are to be produced next spring the breeding pigeons must be kept in a good thrifty condition or the percentage of hatch will be low. The problem of growing a large strain of squabs depends on the kind of pigeons you select to keep in the breeding pens. By culling out the small, weak birds, with undesirable color of skin and other such points and disposing of the discarded ones the feed bill will be greatly reduced.

The birds should be looked after closely during the mating season. Odd or unmated males must always be removed from the breeding pens. Pigeons are usually mated at the age of five or six months, and in some cases they are not mated until they are eight or nine months old.

With the increasing demand for plump squabs many of the squabraising plant owners have been laboring to get larger pigeons. The Maltese, the Wing King, the Corneau, the Runt, and the Mondaine have been extensively produced in some sections. Many of the old-time squabraisers cling to the Homer. It is hardy, prolific, a hearty eater, and raises a high percentage of squabs.

The pigeon house should be cleaned once a month or oftener, and then sprayed with some of the preparations that are used to kill lice.

EPSOM SALTS CHEAP REMEDY

Useful to Keep on Hand to Tone Up Poultry Flock That Has Access to Spoiled Feed.

Epsom salts is a cheap remedy to keep on hand to help in toning up a poultry flock that has had access to spoiled feed. The occasional use of the salts is to help in reducing losses from sour crop or indigestion due to overfeeding. A hen that has been cropbound is benefited by epsom salts.

The usual dose is half a teaspoonful for a mature hen. The salts can be dissolved in warm water and poured down the throat of the bird. Then you know the hen has received the dose. She may not eat enough of a mash containing the salts. A flock can be allowed to go hungry about half a day followed by a moist mash containing epsom salts for every bird.

WHY=

Blotting Paper Is Capable of Absorbing Water

Everybody knows that if a piece of blotting paper is dipped edgewise into a saucer of water the water will climb up the paper to a height of some inches above the surface, but few can tell the reason it does so.

Capillary attraction is the name for this power which causes water to rise in an absorbent substance, and the baffling part of it is its apparent sim-

This is just one of those natural puzzles that our greatest scientists cannot solve-yet. Its real nature is no more understood than is the real nature of electricity.

But although we do not know what it is, capillary attraction is a most useful force. It holds the ink in a pen nib and in a fountain pen. By its aid the melted wax in the little crater round a candle-flame rises in the wick to keep the candle burning. So, too, the liquid flows up the wick of an oil or spirit lamp.

Were it not for this force, clothes would become "bone dry" directly they were lifted out of the water. great many of the automatic lubricators for oiling machinery depend entirely on capillary attraction for their action; and a sponge retains the water in its pores by the same means.

Capillary attraction has been suggested as a means of attaining perpetual motion, and some very ingenious devices have been put forward. All, however, have been proven futile by the laws of mechanics.

Finally it is owing to capillarity that soil is able to retain a large part of the moisture it receives as rain, thus preventing the country from becoming an arid desert.

MEASURE MUST BE PERFECT

Why Precise Degree of Accuracy Has to Be Maintained in So-called Standard Bars.

For most of us the knowledge that a meter is 3.37 inches longer than a yard is quite sufficient. We must know as much as that, because the metric system of measures is so widely employed that one constantly finds it necessary to turn meters into feet or yards. But the refinements of modern science demand a far higher degree of accuracy in measurement than is perhaps ever dreamed of in the ordinary walks of life. The pains taken to obtain precise standards of measure are almost beyond belief of one who is not familiar with scientific methods.

Everyone knows that so-called "standard" bars, on which the exact length of the yard and the meter are marked, are in the possession of the governments of the United States, Great Britain, France and other countries, but everyone does not know with what care these standards have been compared and with what patience they have been minutely measured again and again.

Why Styles in Tanks Change. Storage tanks with a smaller diameter and greater height are an important factor in decreasing evaporation, according to a Texas oil company, now busy installing the newer design. The smaller surface of the tank, it is claimed, overcomes to a large extent the usual loss from this cause. Another special feature in the construction is the arrangement of sixteen incoming pipe lines, which are run down the inside to within a few inches of the bottom. This method serves to lessen the evaporation which would otherwise occur with the surface being constantly disturbed by the flowing in of oil at the top. The tanks are nineteen feet high, have a diameter of ten feet, and hold about 10,000 gallons. The old construction, it is estimated, resulted in a loss of about 20 per cent of the contents .-Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Cold, miserable, hungry-looking, bedraggled and disconsolate, the tiny little kitten meowed piteously: hurrying throngs passed by on their way to work; some cast a pitying glance at the poor creature, but of the dozens that went scurrying on none stopped. RESTING PLACE FOR THE ARK

Tradition That Has for Centuries Pointed Out Mount Ararat Is Not Recognized Locally.

The identification of Mount Ararat, with the mountain upon which the Ark rested, is at least as early as the adoption of Christianity by the Armenians. But there does not appear to have existed in the neighborhood of Ararat an independent local tradition of the flood, and the mountain is still locally known not as Ararat, but as Masis to the Armenians, and as Aghri Dagh to the Tartars. The extensive depression through which the Araxes flows, collects the heats of summer, and the warm air from this reservoir which ascends the northern slopes of the mountain melts the snow, Pilot-Fish Sometimes Betrays Shark. In olden times people believed that the pilot-fish used to guide and protect ships. The fish would swim before the ship when all was well, but would disappear, they said, if rocks or land were near, so as to warn sailors. It is a fact that the pilot-fish swims with ships and sharks, but it is not with any intent to guide or protect.

When swimming with a shark the pilot-fish keeps just ahead, and if he finds food, dashes about and flops his tail on top of the water to attract the shark's attention. Then, when the great fish comes up, he shares the meal with it. But often when sailors throw a baited hook over the side of their ship the pilot-fish betrays the shark and leads it to the baited hook.

Oxford.

Passing through the long, small, oblique streets in which the long, gray. battered public face of the colleges seems to watch jealously for sounds that may break upon the stillness of study, you feel it the most dignified and studious of cities. . . , My friend and I wandered forth in the luminous early dusk. We reached the bridge that underspans the walls of Magdalen and saw the eight-spired tower, delicately fluted and embossed rise in temperate beauty—the perfect prose of Gothic-wooing the eyes to the sky that was slowly drained of day.—Henry James.

Bluefish Ocean Glutton.

The bluefish is a rough and ready fighter, but he is a rapacious rascal, as well, and probably more destructive to other fishes than any creature which inhabits the sea.

A school of bluefish will cut through a shoal of henhaden or weakfish with chopping jaws, leaving the water thickly strewn with the remains of their quarry, and then turn round and do it all over again. It is said that he will, following the custom in vogue among ancient Romans, disgorge the contents of his stomach to make room for more.

WAY OUT OF DIFFICULTS

Junior's Offer Not Altogether Bribery, but Certainly Not the Best of Ethics.

Jessie was more than a year older than Junior and of course felt much superior on account of her advanced age. Mamma had gone to town shopping for a few hours and the two children had been left at home together. Jessie felt that all the responsibilities were upon her shoulders and she was very much put out when she found Junior stand-

"Nothing," Junior informed her. "Yes, you are, too," Jessie insisted. "I can see your jaws moving! Junior, what are you eating?"

Farmer Should Give More Attention to Candling Before Shipping

Farmers, merchants, and shippers in the country districts will improve the reputation of the market egg if they give more and more attention to careful candling of eggs before they let them go any farther on the way toward the consumer. TRY Home Town

MOVE IS STEADILY UPWARD

Great Promise Shown for the Future Development of American Cities and Towns.

Neither the accumulation of money nor the sense of power that money brings are among the real satisfactions of life. Those satisfactions come from either rendering the service to one's fellows or enjoying the service that the past has rendered to us. In thousands of ways the poorest of us can render service to others. But the ability to appreciate that service is a different matter. That requires cultivation. To enjoy knowledge we must have a trained mind; to appreciate works of art we must have a trained taste. And if I add to that duce. requirement also a trained heart I shall be well within the truth. The great advantage of Greek and Latin is that those languages present to both mind and heart those ideas and ideals that are the noblest spring of action. School and college, the first-hand study of nature, and the practice of all those virtues which enrich human nature are needed to form correct taste.

No one who has paid attentions to the changes that the past two decades have brought about can be pessimistic as to the future development of the American city along the lines of convenience, dignity and good order, combined with a certain amount of beauty. The day of the uglifler seems past The uncertain element is the presence or absence of good taste. And good taste is the combined product of the Sled, extra good, for sale-Geo. mind and the emotions rightly directed. So that in the last analysis the soul of the city is a keenly developed civic consciousness on the part of its citizens.—Exchange.

CITIZENS MUST LOOK AHEAD

Advice Given to Kansas City Men Applicable to Every Town in the United States.

A city ought to be willing to look at least as far into the future as real estate men do when they draft the terms of a 99-year lease, Charles Moore, the art arbiter of Washington, D. C., said in a short talk before the closing session of the Kansas City realtors' conference.

"A city like Kansas City is master of its own fate," he continued. "The European monarchs of old did some wonderful things-for themselves. We are our own masters and can do what we have a mind to."

Mr. Moore urged Kansas City to do something big, to get beyond "small plans."

"Any plans we make, our sons and grandsons will find too small," he explained. "Yes, and before you die you will find your biggest plan not der," he advised. "Always there is a Raymond C. Hilterbrick. great deal more to do than you can do in a lifetime. Look ahead, not backways, and you won't be downcast at the progress."

Winter Reading.

Judicious reader, when the long winter evenings come round, you have abundance of leisure. Let the poets stand idle on the shelves till the return of spring, unless perchance you would fain resume acquaintance with "The Seasons," which you have not read since a boy, or would divert yourself with Prior or be grave with Crabbe. Now is the time to feel once more the charm of Lamb's peerless and unique essays; now is the time to listen to the honied voice of Leigh Hunt discoursing daintily of men and books .-Arthur Henry Bullen.

The contrivance, described and illustrated in Popular Mechanics Magazine, consists of a spiral spring of brass wire, wound in such a manner that it may be fastened to the side of a racket by its own tension and containing two ball-holding loops.

Keep the City Clean.

"A cheap coat," said President Harrison, "makes a cheap man." In the same way it might be said a dirty town makes a dirty people; a dirty people makes moral and material dirt and decay. It is the duty of all men and women to make their homes and their home towns just as clean and attractive and beautiful as possible. He who falls short in this respect falls short of his duty to God and man, it matters not what else he may do.

Stoat Family in Hard Luck, There is a family of ten young pheasants which enjoyed a miraculous escape from death while yet in their shells. One morning an English gamekeeper came face to face with a stoat bearing one of the eggs; she paid the penalty, and it was then found that all the eggs were missing. He suspended the dead robber in a hedge and set a trap below, in which her mate was taken. Their nest was found near by and among the baby stoats were the missing eggs. A massacre of innocents followed-innocents they were, since not an egg had been touched. The keeper bore the eggs home in his shirt to a broody fowl, who duly hatched the young birds.

How He Left the Court.

A young colored man wearing very squeaky shoes entered a crowded courtroom and proceeded around three sides of the room in an effort to find a seat. Squeak, squeak, squeak-thus went the shoes. The judge was peevish that morning and snapped at a bailiff: "See here, I want order in the court."

"Order-r-r in court," bawled three bailiffs in unison.

"Boss, I didn't walk out. I flew."

The culprit made a hasty exit. "Wasn't that a mistake, Sam?" asked his employer when appraised of the episode. "Didn't your shoes squeak as you walked out?"

One of the Accepted Materials for Afternoon and Evening Dresses. Much Trimming Added.

> Black velvet is certainly one of the accepted materials for afternoon and evening dresses, observes a fashion authority in the New York Times. While it is always good during every winter season, this year it is better than ever, and at all of the collections shown by the smart dressmakers there is a preponderance of black velvet. made up in many and original ways. There is not a great deal of trimming added, for the material is honored to the extent of holding the floor by itself. But the fabric is handled in such a way that in itself it manages to take the place of both foundation material and decoration, too. And many of the gowns made from it are positively beautiful in their expression.

It is one of the newer ideas to use silver cloth with black velvet, and usually the silver takes secondary place, while the velvet holds the center of the stage. The silver is used very often for sashes or for the facings of wide bows. It is used over and over again for facings. Silver ribbons and silver flowers are placed at intervals for spots of decoration. And then there are the silver and white embroideries scattered over the surface of black velvet, to give it a light and sparkling appearance.

Dinner gowns of black velvet are particularly lovely, for they have a semi-formal appearance which is most attractive, and they are even better than the full evening dresses, for they can afford to have a good deal more trimming and to be fuller and more graceful in line—that is, graceful with reference to the quality of the fabric. Black velvet is also extremely good furs, so that the whole wrap takes on that luxurious quality so to be desired for evening wear. White velvet is also one of the favorite materials for evening, and sometimes these two are combined in a most effective manner. A frock of black and white velvet has a little.

embroidered with threads of black and gray and silver in a lacey pattern around the edges of the little coat. There is a fringe of white to make a finish and the costume succeeds in being the most effective of its sort. The wide sleeves are faced in white and the gown manages, chiefly by reason of its contrast, to create a distinctly picturesque appearance.

CRAZE FOR THE OLD STYLES

Headgear Modes of the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Centuries Attract Milady's Attention.

There seems to be a craze for reviving the styles of the Eighteenth and Nineteenth centuries. In hats this is particularly noticeable. The newest chapeaus, the picture sort, are direct copies of some of the luscious hats perched immortally on the heads of Gainsborough and Romany beauties. Once upon a time it was the custom to laugh lightly at the enormous headgear of a Gainsborough belle. Nowadays. however, the garden party hats are almost as large as any which that artist painted.

Coat Dresses.

Coat dresses are heavily braided. This gives the weight such a frock needs. The skirts are usually circular and side panels are almost inevitable.

John Pumpkin

By CLÁRISSA MACKIE

(@, 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) "John Pumpkin's home!" announced

Miss Priddy, holding on to her shabby old garden hat. Her black eyes regarded Elsie with curiosity.

"Who is John Pumpkin?" Elsie struggled to remember—she wondered If he was some one she really ought to recollect at once, Miss Priddy's brother-in-law or some relative?

"Forgotten?" The old lady's tone was acid.

"I do remember! It's your new man of all work!" All the time Elsie was saying to herself, "'John Pumpkin'-I have heard that name—and it has pleasant associations-"

"You ought to know who he is, since you nicknamed him that years ago and made him a laughing stock in the school-and, besides, I haven't any new hired man, and John Marsh is home again, to stay," she ended triumphantly.

Elsie's face was pink with excitement. As she left Miss Priddy's trim garden and walked on in the gusty October afternoon, she could vividly picture a great freckled-faced lad whose shock of thick yellow-red hair had inspired her mischievous little-girl mind and tongue to dub him "John Pumpkin." In spite of the fact that he was the only son of the great Judge Marsh, the name clung to him, and the boy had taken it good naturedly. Elsie remembered that he had called her a "sauce box," and she did not forget his solemn brown eyes as he did so.

As she busied herself about the house that afternoon she found herself thinking more than once of John Marsh and what his homecoming might mean to the folks of Little River. He had graduated from college, had traveled in far countries and had fought in the great war, but Little River had not seen him for fifteen years. The old judge and his wife had died and the big house had been closed for years. Some one had met John in New York and brought the news that he was a lawyer. So the tiny world of Little River forgot John Pumpkin.

"John Marsh is home again," said her mother that same afternoon, returning home from her sewing circle. "They say he is staying at the big "It must be lonely there," remarked Elsie, as she put the finishing touches to the supper table.

"Maria Ellen's keeping house for him, they say."

"I wonder if he was ever married?" "All the other women are asking the same question," said Mrs. Hill dryly. "It isn't likely that a man in his position would look twice at our little village girls! His high position and his wealth and education would lead him to choose a wife in his own social set." "Pooh!" sniffed Elsie, scornfully, as she helped her mother to a piece of frosted cake, "he is only John Pumpkin, after all!" "Elsie!" shrieked her mother, "I forbid you to rake up that old nickname after all these years. Mrs. Marsh never forgave you for it." "Yes, she did, mother," protested Elsie, blushing; "I went and apologized to Mrs. Marsh, and she was lovely about it." "You did? When was tnat?"

"Ever so long ago-before he left the village. It was when he had the scarlet fever, I think."

Mrs. Hill stared. "Scarlet fever? And that's where you caught it—and nearly died?"

"Yes, mother, but I didn't die, after all, and was sorry for all the trouble I made. Speaking of John Pumpkin (just to you dear!) I want a pumpkin from the garden tomorrow to make some flooding the world with light when Elsie Hill opened the gate that led into the vegetable patch. In the distance the great shocks of corn made dense black shadows on the stubbled ground. Now and then leaves drifted down from the trees in a light stirring wind.

Away to the right, down the valley, she could see the scattered lights of the village; even the tall church steeple looked like a black dart against the sky. Somewhere in the near woods whippoorwill throbbed, and there was a scurrying of unseen little things among the dead grasses.

"Witches' night!" laughed Elsie, and then her face sobered. All Hallowe'en, with its fun and frolic, always brought a keen regret that her happy childhood days were gone. On a night like this she would sit on the rail fence and dream about the old schoolhouse on the hill—the fun when the snow was on the ground—the riches of acquired knowledge and the merry fun afterward-coasting, skating and candypulls! She was remembering now, as she walked among the withered pumpkin vines, one October night at a candy-pulling, when some mischievous boy had thoughtlessly tossed a bit of taffy at her and it caught in the golden glory of her curls! It was "John Pumpkin" who had gently removed the sticky mess, bit by bit, with warm water, and who had afterward scolded the culprit all the way home.

"Dear old John Pumpkin," murmured Elsie, as she sat down on a huge pumpkin and stared at the moon. "I expect he's terribly grown up and stand-offish, but he did bave a kind heart-for a boy!" "A-hem!" coughed some one from among the cornshocks.

Elsie did not scream. She was a country girl and used to the surprises of the night, and the demand for pumpkins was great and small boys were

"Is that you, Sammy Smith?" she demanded severely. "Why, no, it isn't," replied a pleasant masculine voice, and out from the shadow of the nearest shock stepped a tall form, bareheaded and dressed as no other man in Little River could

"You startled me," said Elsie stiff-

"You are trespassing-" "Don't say that," he protested, coming nearer so that she could see his ace and puzzle over a strange resemlance to some one she ought to know. 'I haven't been here for years—and I came out to live over the old happy days, and to wonder where my old playmates are! I'm John Pumpkin!' "Oh!" Elsie blushed furiously. "I've been so sorry about that name.' "I know-you risked your life to apologize to my mother—"

"You remember me?" Elsie was amazed. "Elsle Hill-Goldenlocks? Remember how I washed the taffy out-and a little curl had to be cut off?" "I have forgotten the curl-I never saw it afterward," murmured Elsie. "I kept it-I have it now!" he announced bluntly "Why-why-how funny!" she cried tremulously, but somehow she was very glad. 'I put it in my wallet—as I grew older I found a little leather case for it—so I have carried your little curl s-a mascot-a good luck charm, you know," he explained lamely enough. "How interesting! And some day you will return it to me?" asked Elsie. "If you insist—" he returned slowly. "In all the busy years—I have had that one bright reminder of dearly loved playmates. Do you want it,

"No," said Elsie gently. "Keep all your happy memories. Do come into the house now and see mother and father—there are apples—and nuts—"

he helped her over the fence. "I've forgotten my pumpkin!" cried

"One pumpkin at a time-one at a laughed John as he caught Elsie's hand and ran up the path to the kitchen door.

"They were married on Hallowe'en," said Miss Priddy, a year later. "Such | had to buy, it simply reduced the price doings-living in the big house as grand as Cuffy, and she still calls him John Pumpkin!"

Two Ancient Wonders.

The Tower of Babel is the tower spoken of in Genesis as being built by mankind after they came down from the Ark to the plain from the mountain to the East. It was like the later temple tower of Babylon, except that it was being constructed so high that its top might reach heaven. The builders were miraculously prevented by the confounding of their language.

Thus the origin of many tongues. The Temple Mount of Nebuchadnezzar, located in Babylon, was a leviathan in the matter of temple building. A luxuriance of rich tropical verdure rose terrace after terrace and crowned the roof, thus forming a marvelous roof garden, the famed "Hanging Gardens" of Babylon.

PLAN STATE-WIDE BODY TO WORK OUT METHODS TO BOOST AGRICULTURE.

MUCH ALREADY IS DONE

Since the recent meetings at Frederick of the Maryland Agricultural Society and Maryland Farm Bureau Federation and the even more recent conference of agricultural organizations called by Governor Ritchie at Annapolis, farmers all over the State and all others whose financial interests depends in large measure upon agriculture, have been aroused by the Governor's statement that "The Legislature of 1924 should be the Legislature of the Farmer," and are beginning to take stock of themselves and organize their forces so that they will be able effectively to look after their interests in the next Assembly.

Already a State-wide committee is being formed to work out a definite agricultural program to be presented to the Legislature of 1924 and members of farm organizations in every county are beginning to get together in order to send to the Legislature men who will carry out that program. Thoughtful men interested in agriculture, merchants, bankers, lawyers, doctors in every county, as well as farmers, are beginning to realize that they are years behind the general manufacturing and commercial bodies, which long have been organized for tives of railroads, the steel and coal industries, and others have for many years had the influences of their Ritchie's advice and beginning to weld those engaged in business related to need study. agriculture, so that they will be able solve their problems.

The farmers have been unorganized, have long been digging out of the soil the materials which have insured the prosperity of others. The farmer has been going his individual way regardless of the interest he has in common with other farmers. True, the State universities have worked in various ways to increase production, machinery of all kinds has been manufactured to save labor, the carriage of farm products has invited the building of great railroads, captains of industry have secured great sums of money by tax exemption, direct taxes, bonuses; all of which has redounded somewhat to the interest of the farmer, but only incidentally and the farmer never has held a main place in the scheme of benefits from the law-making of legislative bodies. And not only that, but when farmers first began to organize protectively as other great industries were organized they faced prosecution in courts of law. Dairymen who organized in Baltimore were indicted and in Chicago and New York were indicted and prosecuted.

Then came the war. In response to the appeal of the President, farmers increased the number of acres under "And you," finished John Marsh, as cultivation by forty million, and that notwithstanding they sent a million farmers' sons to war. The farmer got better prices for his products, but the cost of everything he bought, machinery, clothing, tools, food, went up. Taxes were doubled. Then came deflation, but instead of reducing the price of labor and such things as the farmer of what he raised to sell. Big industry and labor unions got their leaders on the job, and through the power of their organization retained for themselves much of what they had won during the hour of their country's stress. But what of the farmers? To save themselves they were compelled to sell their grains and live stock in a brief period, and glutted markets and falling prices caused more farm hardships than the agricultural industry ever had known.

Losses that came down on farmers like a cyclone reduced prices of farm products and farm lands and drove thousands of young men from the farm to the cities, cost the farmers, according to careful estimates of statisticians, $8,000,000,000. Such losses to the manufacturing, banking or mercantile interests would have choked the courts with bankruptcy proceedings, filled alms houses and jails, started bread lines in every city, paralyzed building and other city indus-

But the hitherto unorganized farmer, apparently doomed to destruction, like the worm when tread upon, at last turned and began to organize. Congress woke up, repealed the law against co-operative selling and is sure to pass the bill increasing facilities for loans on long time. Western grain men are by co-operation reducing cost of elevator charges, securing advances of money so the grain can be held for the best price, and getting better freight eries are producing a uniform grade of butter and, instead of hat in hand begging the city retailer for a fair price, are now fixing their own prices on the basis of supply and demand.

Everywhere co-operative fruit, vegetable, cattle and sheep growers associations are getting together. The farm bureau, the most powerful farm organization is busy; the success of the citrus fruit and raisin growers of California in maintaining prices above cost of production and long haul, with its high rates, has blazed the

What is the condition now, you ask. The answer: The United States Treasury Department, with unusual opportunities for getting accurate figures, reports the net income of farmers all over the country for the year past as a little less than $185 per farm family. Not a bright picture.

What has already been accomplished in the matter of useful legislation to help the farmer has been achieved through co-operation and organized pressure. The farmer is entitled to at least a fair part of the price paid for his product by the consumer. Maryland will have a session of its Legislature about a year from now. The farmers have a whole year in which to get together to settle upon such legislation as they may need. And by getting together they can get what they need in the way of terminal markets, roads, selling and educational agencies.

Much can be done. Farmers must ubject their individualism for the comnon good and in that way get the things that will benefit each of them. The farmer must organize and it will take some of his time, but he is like the man with the dog by the ear-he cannot let go. He must sacrifice some time to attend meetings, meet with his fellows, plan what is best, so that he may eventually at least get an equal chance with the other interests which are always on the job. The filled milk bill, which is to prevent manufacturing interests taking skim milk and putting cocoanut oil in it and then selling it at a low price at a profit, is important to the dairymen. Congress seems certain to pass the law prohibiting their particular interests. Representa- transportation of such milk. Wisconsin, a great dairy State, prohibits sale in that State. Its sale should be prohibited in Maryland. Experts proved organization felt in Congress and in before the committee of Congress that State Legislatures. And the farmers | it was valueless as food and absolute of Maryland are taking Governor ly detrimental to the health of children. CHAPTER ON SOUPS

For the beginning of a dinner or a luncheon or even a supper dish on a reserved cool, crisp night. there is nothing that quite touches the spot as a good seasoned soup. If one objects to meat soups, there are the vegetable soups; if neither suits, there is still fruit. Cherry Soup .- Take one quart of fresh or a pint of canned cherries, one quart of water; cook and strain. Return to the fire; add sugar and whole cinnamon and whole cloves to taste; thicken with two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, stirred smooth in a little cold water. Serve hot with croutons or with dumplings prepared of choux paste and cooked in the soup.

Philadelphia Fruit Soup.—Take one cupful each of dried apples, pears and raisins. Cover with warm water and soak for an hour, then add two cupfuls of cranberries which have been cooked until tender and pressed through a sieve. Cover with two quarts of cold water, boil for an hour, sweeten to taste, press through a sieve and thicken with two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch rubbed smooth with a little cold water. Cook until the cornstarch is well-cooked; serve either cold or hot. Velvet Soup .- Cook one-half cupful of tapioca in six cupfuls of well-seasoned veal stock. Beat the yolks of three eggs and pour in the soup; stir until smooth and creamy; season with salt, pepper and grated nutmeg. Serve hot with croutons.

Brown Onion Soup.—Peel a dozen brown onions and fry until brown in butter, add two teaspoonfuls of sugar. When brown add four cupfuls of beef stock, bring to the boiling point and serve very hot.

Scotch Puree .-- Put into a kettle one pound of mutton with the broken bones. Cover with three quarts of water and bring to the boiling point. Skim and simmer for one hour. Add six potatoes, two onions, one carrot cut fine. and simmer two hours longer. Season with salt, pepper and butter; simmer 30 minutes, strain through coarse sieve, reheat and serve with

During the past ten years the number of telephones in Maryland has increased 53 per cent. In some cities and towns the increase is 100 per cent.

This growth has naturally been of great benefit to our subscribers. The usefulness and value of the service to the patron in any city, town or community depend largely upon the number of people with whom he can talk by telephone.

The importance of telephone service in the business and social life of a city, town or community makes its growth and theirs go hand in hand as a matter of course. But the Telephone Company's aim is to go further than that—to make its service so dependable and its rates so attractive that it will be constantly expanding to embrace new areas and serve a larger number of people. In this way, its service becomes more valuable to the telephone user.

Not only has its growth been greater in proportion than the growth of the population, but the quality of its equipment and the efficiency of its service has more than kept pace with its

LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 11

THE SPIRIT OF PRAYER

LESSON TEXT- Luke 18:1-14. GOLDEN TEXT—The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit; a broken and contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise—

Psalm 51:17. REFERENCE MATERIAL-Matt. 6:5-15; Luke 15:20-24; John 4:23, 24. PRIMARY TOPIC-How Two Men Prayed.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How to Pray.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC -Prayer that God Answers.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC
-Secret to Prevailing Prayer.

1. Men Ought Always to Pray (v. 1). Prayer is absolutely necessary to the spiritual life. It is to the spiritual life what breathing is to the physical life. Men ought to pray under every variety of circumstance—in times of sorrow and burdens for strength to endure; in times of joy and success for grace to behave aright. Prayer ought to be persisted in even when the answer is not immediately seen. God does hear and answer prayer even when we do not understand the mysteries of delay. II. The Urgent Prayer of a Widow

(vv. 2-8). The picture here is of a helpless widow who was being cheated out of her property rights, coming to a godless judge for redress. Her only means of getting help was to prove the justice of her claim by her persistence. Even this did not gain access to his heart, for he feared not God nor regarded men. He complied with her request in order to get rid of her.

The point here is not that God is like this unjust judge and can be teased into compliance, but rather that if such action can be secured on the part of a godless judge by persistence, how much surer will be the help of God to those who cry unto Him day and night.

The helpless widow pictures the church in this age suffering the deprivation of her rights. It is not the church praying for vengeance upon her enemies, but suing for the possession of her rights by virtue of her covenant relation in Christ. The inheritance of the church will be actualized at the coming of Christ. This is why the truth concerning the coming of Christ is so vital to Christianity, and why such disastrous conse quences follow the loss of the Blessed Hope.

The apparent delay in the vindication of the church may dishearten some and cause others to mock (II Peter 3:4). Jesus' question should be solemn warning against allowing the apparent delay of the coming of the Lord to crowd out our praying. Though many may give up we should be assured that genuine faith will abide, and that the divine promise concerning the coming of Christ shall be fulfilled. We can be sure of God.

III. The Prayer of the Proud Pharisee (vv. 9-12).

I. He Took a Striking Attitude (v. 11). The Jewish custom was to stand while praying, but the word "stood" implies the assumption of an ostentatious position. He was selfrighteous and trusted in himself.

2. He Prayed With Himself (vv. 11, 12). He used the name of God, but it was really a soliloquy. He pretended to be thanking God when really he was rehearsing his own goodnesscomplimenting himself. His whole thought centered in himself. He congratulated himself for (1) his morality (vv. 11). He thanked God that he was not as other men are, such as extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as the publican who was standing afar off. (2) His Religious Merits (v. 12). He fasted twice a week and gave tithes of all he possessed. He thus informed God that he did more than was required, implying that God was under obligation to him.

IV. The Prayer of the Humble

Publican (v. 13). In striking contrast with this supposed saint stood the publican whose shame kept him from even looking up to Heaven, beating upon his breast as a sign of anguish of soul, crying out to God to be merciful to him, a sinner. He took his place as a sinner and called upon God for mercy.

V. Christ's Testimony (v. 14). He declared that the publican went away justified rather than the Pharisee. The one great and urgent need on the part of men is a confession of sin and a willingness to cry unto God for mercy.

The Dull Man.

A dull man is so near a dead man that he is hardly to be ranked in the list of the living; and as he is not to be buried whilst half alive, so he is as little to be employed whilst he is half dead .- Saville.

Losing Aspirations.

Men lose their high aspirations as they lose their intellectual tastes, because they have not time or opportunity for indulging them .- J. S. Mill.

Causes Wonder.

I never wonder to see men wicked, but I often wonder to see them not ashamed.-Swift.

Nibbling at the Balt. I see the devil's hook, and yet cannot help nibbling at his bait .- M. Adams.

> February 11 Lessons from the Psalms Psalms 145:1-21

(The Testimony Psalm) br. Tholuck's introductory note to this Psalm will suggest some helpful divisions. "It is an easy flowing psalm of praise, the effusion of a grateful heart. Verses 1-7 denote the strong impulse of the Lord Verses are toom and blinked her pansy-brown eyes at Uncle Abner. The elderly gentleman looked over his spectacles and frowned.

"Who was that young man, Betty?" "George Farnum. Uncle Abner." gage in the praise of the Lord. Verses 8-13 praise the mercy and goodness as well as the glory and government of God. Verses 14-20 show His mercy to the afflicted and to His children and to a certain extent to every living thing. Verse 21 reverts to the thought of verses 1 and 2." This Psalm is indeed the overflow of a grateful heart, a heart conscious of the majesty and might, the greatness, goodness and graciousness of the Lord our God. This sense of the worthiness of God is an essential quality for worship. The soul of the writer is evidently moved by the knowledge and the memory of God's great kindness and this becomes the theme of his song. It will be profitable for all who participate in the study and discussion of this Psalm to take paper and pencil and make a list of the things that are stated in it concerning the Lord. Seek to discover what He is in His essential being as seen in verses 3, 8, 9, etc.; what He does in verses 14, 15 and following; what are His titles as for example in verse 1. Then after collecting your data proceed to classify all that you have discovered, then compare one thing with another and you will be able to "rejoice as one that findeth great riches." The language of verse 21 will become your own.

What is the secret of such grateful praise as this Psalm contains? Is it not the heart experience of the saving grace of God? What else could produce it? Could an unsaved man write such a song as this? Could a divided heart do it? Could a worldling do it, even though he professed to be a Christian? The answer is, "No." For such a song as this, whole heartedness is required and such a heart as was desired by the more modern hymn writer when he wrote-

"Oh, for a heart to praise my God, A heart from sin set free,

A heart that's sprinkled with the

So freely shed for me."

The making of money, the accumulation of material is to living. Life is something more than these two things, and the man who misses this truth misses the greatest joy and satisfaction that can come into his life—that is, from serv-ice to others.—Edward Bok.

HOMEY OLD-FASHIONED DISHES

Who does not like the good old raised doughnut when it is tender and light? The average doughout bought in the market is tough, indigestible and usually fried in some compound that makes it impossible to get it past your nose. The way the old cooks made such doughnuts was to remove a cupful or two of the bread sponge, add sugar, egg and shortening to it and mix well, set away to rise, knead, roll out, cut and then let rise again. For frying, good sweet lard is used, and when you bite into one of these crisp, brown, tasty cakes they are not at all of kin to the kind you buy.

Norwegian Meat Balls .- Put three pounds of round steak through the meat grinder nine times, add a spoonful of cream at a time to the pulp, working it in well; when moist enough to shape, make into balls, season with salt and pepper and drop into boiling broth to cook five minutes. Skim out and serve with a little of the broth thickened with flour and butter mixed. Pour around the balls. The broth is prepared from the meat trimmings and stringy portions left from the meat grinder. Cover with cold water and simmer until a good broth is formed.

Bread Griddle Cakes .- Take two or three slices of stale bread, soak in cold water until soft, then squeeze dry. Place in a bowl and cover with sour milk. In the morning add soda, just flour enough to make a good batter and fry on a hot griddle. If a tablespoonful or two of melted fat is added to the batter no grease is needed to fry them.

until very light, add one cupful of sugar, one cupful of cream, one tablespoonful of vanilla. Add flour to roll very thin, cut in diamond shapes or tear off the pieces, fry in deep fat, sprinkle with powdered sugar. Other flavoring may be used, such as orange, nutmeg or lemon.

Uncle Abner's Will

By ROSE MEREDITH

Betty Lasher waved her hand as the smart blue car swung around the corner; a straw hat waved good-by as the car vanished. Betty was still smiling when she entered the cool livingyawned Betty, pulling off her bright hat and tossing it on the table. "We had a perfectly gorgeous ride out to the Falls."

"H-hm!" Uncle Abner always cleared his throat when he was about to say something disagreeable. Betty sat down primly on the comfortable old "H-hm," repeated Mr. Cory, sofa. "Am I to understand that you have broken your engagement to Jack?"

Betty twisted the diamond on her left hand and blushed warmly as she raised her eyes to meet the fierce blue ones of her nearest relative.

"Broken my engagement to Jack? No indeed, uncle dear; but Jack is away off in Kansas now, and it is dull -George has been so good to take me

"George is a fine fellow." "Isn't he?" cried Betty with sparkling eyes. "So clever, too, and he's the kindest old thing in the world." "Jack is a fine fellow, too," pursued Mr. Cory, dryly. "We know that," murmured Betty, blushing furiously. She picked up her hat and turned toward the hall. "Elizabeth!" called Uncle Abner coldly, "does Jack know that you have been receiving attentions from George Farnum?"

"I have told him about the rides," said Betty as she marched upstairs, her eyes full of tears. It had been lonesome after Jack's departure for the West to install some special machinery in a large manufacturing plant there, and upon the success of his first commission for his firm depended Jack Monroe's advancement with the great house of Latimer & Latimer. Mr. Abner Cory was a large stockholder in the Latimer works, and he had looked with approval upon Jack's engagement to his little niece. He rather distrusted George Farnum's idleness and riches, although he liked the young man personally and considered that he had the making of a man in him if he would only get to work.

But he wanted Jack for Betty, so he

A few days later Betty sat on the front porch knitting a gay sweater. Inside the library Uncle Abner was talking to his lawyer, Daniel Smith. Their voices rose and fell in endless discussion of stocks and bonds and mortgages. Their tones dropped to a low rumble, and then Betty's wandering thoughts were halted by the sound of Mr. Cory's thin voice, speaking with the slow distinctness that always marked his dictation:

"All the rest and residue of my estate * * * I give and bequeath to my beloved niece, Elizabeth Lasher * * * provided she becomes the wife of George Humphrey Farnum * * *" rumble, rumble, Betty heard no more. She had overheard that Fatiman Bakels.—Beat four eggs much because Uncle Abner had spoken louder, as if to impress his lawyer with the words. I'ale and trembling. afraid of she knew not what, Betty crept away from the porch and ran out to the shady orchard, where she sat down on the grass to think things out, as she had done when she was a small girl.

What a chaotic thing life was! She had always believed that Uzele Abner favored Jack Monroe-and yet he had made his will leaving the bulk of his estate to Betty, provided she married George Farnum-the richest young man in Blessington! What about Jack Monroe?

"Well, what about him?" thought Betty, as she pictured herself proceeding up the aisle of St. Matthew's church on Uncle Abner's arm, if he were still alive, to meet George Humphrey Farnum-George, smiling and blond, the pink of perfection in husbands, rich, handsome, clever and the "kindest old thing in the world." There would be town and country homes, camps and bungalows, travel and the allurements of society spelled with a capital "S." In fancy, Betty Lasher married George Farnum and was proceeding down the church aisle to the familiar strains of the wedding march when something intercupted. A wood thrush high in an old tree sang his evening hymn. Tears came into the girl's eyes. The thrush—she liked to believe it was the same bird-had witnessed her betrothal to Jack-the tender song always made her homesick with longing for her lover. Now she listened with tears running down her cheeks. She would go to Jack now-tonightthey would be married at once and she would work so hard for him. Uncle Abner would leave all his money to George Farnum and welcome.

A very tearful looking Betty walked into the house and ran plump into Uncle Abner in the front hall.

He looked at her over the top of his spectacles. "Well, my dear," he said coldly, "where you have been?" "Sitting in the orchard-it is so cool

there," said Betty, lifting weary brown eyes to his. "George Farnum telephoned to you

. he asked to have you ring . something about a barn dance at Colonel Phipps' place. "Bother!" muttered the strange

Betty, who loved to dance and who could dance the soles from her pretty slippers any time. "Botheration." "You will call him up?" inquired Mr.

Cory. Betty flashed around on him. "Do you want me to go with him?" she asked.

"My dear child, please yourself," said the old man, smiling benignly on her. "It is a beautiful night and-" "I will not go," interrupted Betty feverishly. "I must confess, Uncle Abner, that I was sitting on the porch this afternoon and I overheard a few words you said to Mr. Smith-that about your will-and leaving me some money provided-pro-vi-d-d-ed I married G-george Farnum!"

"H-h-hum!" "Yes, I did, and then I went down to the orchard. I have made up my mind to go to Jack at once . . morrow . . . and get married and we will live in a hut on c-c-canned beans and t-things. Money isn't everything, Uncle Abner, and I do appreciate all your love and kindness to an orphaned girl-but I love Jack-and money doesn't count."

"My dear! My dear!" Uncle Abner patted the bright head leaning against the newel post. "Why-whyyou have made me the happiest man in the world-I was afraid you would marry George . . . and I wasn't sure which one you really loved and so I had Smith call, and I dictated that change in my will on purpose so that you could hear it . . . but it doesn't mean anything. You and Jack are my children and I hope you are coming here to live in my lonely house!" Betty was in his arms now and tears were wetting his immaculate shirt front. The telephone interrupted, and Mr. Cory released her to answer its insistent fingle.

"Oh, George-sorry, but Betty has decided not to go out tonight-we are expecting Jack Monroe home tomorrow-and oh, yes, good-by," and as he turned away from the instrument, he added: "That should teach George not to cut out his best friend-we mustn't tell Jack about it, child, or he will lose faith in George."

"Is Jack coming home tomorrow?" demanded Betty, radiant with joy.

"Here is his telegram-and a September wedding would be just the thing, my dear!" rumbled the old man as they mounted the stairs together. Out in the orchard, in the afterglow, the thrush sang of love trium-

Legend of Sword of Damocies.

According to Cicero, Damocles, a sycophant at the court of Dionysius the Elder, tyrant of Syracuse, having praised in an extravagant manner the blessings and joys of royalty, was reproved by his master in a singularly effective manner. He was seated at a sumptuous banquet and surrounded by all the trappings of royalty, but on looking upwards, in the midst of his pleasures, he beheld a sharp and naked sword suspended above his head and held by a single horse-hair. This sight instantly sobered Damocles and taught him the salutary lesson that the lives of kings are in peril every hour, Few Advance Who Allow Themselves to Become Addicted to the Habit of Dilatoriness.

We probably all know people who seem to be, as they express it, "always in a rush," yet who are always just a little late. They find apparently almost a pleasurable excitement in putting off till the last moment the performance of necessary tasks and then executing them under high pressure. No doubt there is something stimulating in having to accomplish certain results within a given time, but a good many persons in allotting their time seem to mistake the harassing for the stimulating.

Every teacher knows that, if on a Tuesday he assigns a certain task to be completed by the following Tuesday, a considerable percentage of the class will begin work upon it on Monday evening. He knows too that there is a very small fraction of the class who will set to work upon it immediately. He can soon tell which of his pupils are the forehanded and which the dilatory workers. It may be that the forehanded workers will not always do the best work. Some of the dull pupils are sure to be among the forehanded ones; they have found that they have to be, in order to keep up at all; and often among the dilatory pupils there are the brightest minds. But if not overcome, the habit of dilatoriness will eventually slow up a naturally bright and active mind, and the habit of forehandedness, if maintained, will often quicken a dull one .- Youth's Companion.
