

MILL BURNED AT UNION BRIDGE.

Westminster Firemen Make Quick Response to Call.

The Engleman mill, at Union Bridge, with its equipment of machinery and a quantity of feed, was completely destroyed by fire Wednesday night, about 9 o'clock. The loss is estimated at from $15,000 to $25,000, reported to be fairly well covered by insurance. The fire is supposed to have originated from a short circuit electric current.

The Union Bridge Fire Company was unable to handle the situation, due to lack of water, and a call was sent to Westminster for their engine. The big La France truck, containing 23 firemen, made the trip of eleven miles, and was throwing water on the building, within 18 minutes after leaving Westminster.

The mill had been closed for repairs, very little work having been done for about a year, but work had been resumed the day of the fire, after new equipment had been installed. The mill was owned by J. W. Jordan, of Union Bridge, and H. R. Mentzel, of Baltimore. The building was erected many years ago, and was known as the Engleman mill, from one of the former proprietors. The dwelling of Mr. Mackley, nearby, was damaged to some extent.

Barbara Fritchie Relics.

An interesting collection of relics, formerly owned by Barbara Fritchie, are on exhibition in the Patrick street window of Harnes's drug store. The relics were loaned by relatives of Dame Barbara and others, and have attracted much attention.

Prominent among the collection is a sewing table, small chair, shawl and embroidered cap, knife and fork, rocking chair, mixing bowl, cane and sewing basket. A check on the Frederick County Bank, payable to Mrs. B. Fritchie and signed by Dr. Albert C. Ritchie, executor of J. C. Fritchie, is loaned by G. Mantz Besant. The check is for $25 and Dr. Ritchie, the signer, is the grandfather of Governor Albert C. Ritchie. The bowl was presented to Mrs. Fritchie by President George Washington, when he was a guest at a quilting party at Mrs. Kimball's Inn, this city, in 1791. This interesting relic was loaned by Mrs. Hallie Birely Sweet. Mrs. Ezra Houck, Jr. loaned a silk dress and Mrs. D. Chas. Winebrener, a carving set.

A duplicate of a silver spoon, sent to Mrs. Harding, wife of President Harding, by the Barbara Fritchie Memorial Association, with a picture of the heroine's house engraved in the bowl, is also among the collection. Upon the receipt of the spoon, President Harding wrote a personal letter thanking the association and adding "how glad Mrs. Harding is to have this souvenir of the interesting incident in the history of Frederick." The spoon is being used on the White House tea table. Many of the relics were loaned by Mrs. John H. Abbott, Miss Eleanor Abbott, Mrs. Devilla Brish, Mrs. Hanshaw and others.—Frederick News.

What are "Dead Letters?"

Many thousands of letters go to the Dead Letter Office each year. A "dead" letter is one that can neither be delivered to party addressed, nor returned to sender. We "dead" our letters because in some way—perhaps absent-mindedly—we address them wrong, or our writing that seems plain to us, is not plain to mail officials; or the party addressed may have removed.

There are dozens of causes that help to make letters "dead." No envelope containing the printed address of the sender ever goes to the Dead Letter Office—if it can not be delivered, it is always returned to the sender, no matter whether a return request is printed on the envelope or not.

Why not be sure your letters will not go "dead?" Take advantage of our special $1.00 offer, found in this issue, as dozens of others have already done. If you prefer it, you can have all envelopes, instead of part paper and part envelopes.

Annan, Horner & Co., Bankruptcy.

Testimony in bankruptcy proceedings in the case of the banking firm of Annan, Horner and Company, Emmitsburg, was taken before Arthur D. Willard, referee in bankruptcy, at the office of the latter, Friday morning of last week. After two witnesses had been examined the proceedings were postponed until April 27.

A number of witnesses and creditors of the bank were present. The object of the proceedings is to ascertain the assets of the bank, and to have the trustees turn the assets into cash for the benefit of the creditors. Attorney General Alexander Armstrong, John S. Newman and Vincent Siebold are the trustees. Members of the banking firm were also present.

The firm was adjudged a bankrupt some time ago, and suits were filed by creditors seeking to recover their deposits.

Boys Athletic Meet.

Saturday, May 19, is the date set for the Carroll County Athletic meet, for boys. The meet for Frederick county will be held Friday, May 11.

SUNDAY SCHOOL RALLIES.

A Campaign for Increased Enrollment in County.

The Carroll County Sunday School Association is planning a series of eight District Rallies for the Sunday afternoons of April and May, to be held at places and on dates as follows:

April 8, Taneytown, Reformed Church, Taneytown district.

April 15, Uniontown, Methodist Protestant, Uniontown district.

April 22, Silver Run, Lutheran, Myers district.

April 29, Deer Park, Methodist Protestant, Woolery's district.

May 6, Manchester, Reformed, Manchester district.

May 13, Greenmount, United Brethren, Hampstead district.

May 20, Taylorsville, Methodist Episcopal, Franklin district.

May 27, Keymar, Lutheran, Middleburg district.

It will be seen that the districts are taken numerically, leaving out Westminster, which is taken care of by the county convention, and that an effort is made to reach churches in which similar meetings have not recently been held. If necessary to make changes in place or date, due notice will be given.

There will be one session beginning at 2:30 and closing at 4. A campaign will be begun to increase the membership enrollment of Carroll County Sunday Schools 10%, and a handsome felt banner, suitably inscribed will be presented to each school making such a gain.

A similar drive will be made to establish Cradle Rolls and increase their membership where already existing, and another beautiful banner will be awarded each cradle roll superintendent building up a membership equal to 15% of that of the main school.

These matters and many other items of Association work will be described, and sample banner will be shown. The same program will be given in each district. Rev. J. Walter Englar, president; George Mather, secretary; Rev. C. W. Walck, of St. Paul's Reformed Church, and a select quartet of musicians from Blue Ridge College, will compose the team that will undertake this work.

An effort will be made to reach the remaining districts of the county by a similar campaign in the Fall. It is hoped that superintendents, pastors, district workers and Sunday School folks generally will co-operate in this and do all possible to make the campaign a success. Representatives should be present from every school in the district in which the meeting is held.

No appeals for funds will be made, but an opportunity will be given to make a free-will offering for Association work.

MISS HOOKER WINS SUIT AGAINST SUN.

Damages Assessed at One Cent instead of $100,000.

Mrs. Donald R. Hooker, President of the Just Government League, who brought suit against the publishers of The Baltimore Sun, on the charge of having misquoted her with reference to her opinions concerning marriage, was given a verdict in her favor, on Monday evening, by a jury. Suit had been brought for $100,000, while the verdict was for one cent damages.

The verdict is regarded as a "great victory" by Mrs. Hooker and her colleagues, as it carries with it the substantiation of her claim of libel, and that truth was on her side. The one cent damages against the Sun likely carries with it the payment of the costs in the case.

The suit lasted about two weeks, and was instituted Feb. 24, 1922, two days after the alleged libel, the occasion of the suit being the Sun's report of a meeting of the Just Government League, at which Mrs. Hooker had made an address expounding her theories regarding marriage and sex, in which she was quoted by Miss Scarborough, reporter for the Sun, as having justified the marriage of white women and colored men, providing love was present.

Two witnesses—one besides Miss Scarborough—testified to the correctness of the report, but most of the other women called as witnesses swore that she said nothing of the sort she was quoted as saying. Malice on the part of the Sun was also charged, but this was denied and attempts made to show that every effort had been made to be fair to Mrs. Hooker.

Clean up, and Paint Up.

The Record is not interested in anybody's paint, nor in any dealer's sale of paint. In a general way, it is not particularly interested in whether buildings are painted or not; but, especially in so far as the "home town" and community is concerned, it does like to say a word, now and then, for the best interests of all concerned; and there is no one more important interest that concerns the protection and preservation of buildings, and their good looks and sale value, than that they should be kept well covered with paint.

Cleanliness, paintliness and good business, go together. There is never such a condition as paint "costing too much," when buildings need it. It always "costs too much" not to paint at such times. Good paint never injured any building, and even poor paint, is better than bare boards. Letting a building go without paint, is like letting it die—just like neglecting care of the life of anything of value.

Last year was a busy "painting up" year, and this year should be another; and next year, the cost of painting will be more, even if the cost of paint and labor should be a little less. It's all your business, of course; there is no law compelling one to preserve his buildings; but, don't be a slacker—"clean up and paint up."

The front and back yard, sidewalks, fences, are all apt to be out of fix, following the winter. A few nails, a little straightening up, a few flowers—just a careful "cleaning up," will cost little, but add greatly to value, comfort, and looks. Why not?

Struck by Falling Tree.

Guy Lemmon, residing about a mile from Silver Run, Md., met with a most serious and painful accident about noon, Thursday, March 15th. While assisting his brother, Oscar Lemmon to fell some trees on the farm of Milton T. Bowman, of Silver Run Valley, a large tree which they were in the act of cutting down fell unexpectedly and in the opposite direction from which they had supposed it to fall and before Mr. Lemmon could reach a safe distance a large branch of the tree struck him a glancing blow and pinned him to the ground producing a concussion of the brain and a laceration of the scalp which required 14 stitches to close, besides fracturing a number of ribs and causing bruises and abrasions over his body. Had it not been for the presence of his brother who extricated him by removing the limb, it is possible that the accident would have proved more serious.

Electricity for Pneumonia.

A new treatment for pneumonia is being tried out, that is said to be very successful. The new treatment is said to relieve congestion by electrically producing bodily heat, and by driving blood to the affected organs. It was first used during the world war, and has just been introduced here. Nine cases have been treated at a Hoboken, N. J. hospital, and all recovered rapidly.

Orders for 75 locomotives, to cost approximately $75,000 each, have been placed with the Lima Locomotive Works of Lima, Ohio, and the Baldwin Locomotive Works of Eddystone, Pa., by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. The new locomotives are said to be of particularly heavy construction, with 10 driving wheels, but with the weight distributed to permit rapid progress even under a heavy load.

W. M. STRIKE CONTINUES.

Will Hold Out Against the Contract System.

Hagerstown, March 22—A fight to a finish is planned by the Western Maryland Railroad shop employees who went out on strike on March 25, 1922, according to an announcement following a meeting here today at strike headquarters, when a resolution was passed continuing the strike until an agreement is reached between the company and the men. The same resolution has been passed at other points along the system.

Plans are also being made for a mass-meeting and parade here on Monday night to mark the first anniversary of the shopmen's strike on the Western Maryland system. On March 25, 1922, the railroad shopmen went out on strike over the Western Maryland system as a protest against the installation of the contract system.

While some of the strikers have gone back to work, strikers claim that the vast majority have remained out and will remain out until the contract system is abolished and satisfactory settlement made with the railroad officials.—Balt Sun.

Farm Bureau News.

The Carroll County Poultry Association held its annual meeting Saturday night. The old officers were retained until new by-laws and constitution could be drawn up.

A complete report of the 1922 Mid-State Show was given. The Association is in good standing and plans were made to hold the show this fall.

Tentative plans were made to take care of the boys and girls who apply for eggs. The eggs will be given to clubs only, six or more boys and girls in a community constituting a club. The project will be carried over a period of one year, instead of until November as in the past. Twenty-five eggs of standard bred birds will be given in exchange for forty-five eggs marketable eggs, the second best cockerel. The cockerel will be considered the annual due and entitle the club members to a Junior membership card, which carries all the privileges of the Carroll County Poultry Association.

All applications for eggs should be sent to the County Agent at once. Help will be given to organize a club in any community in the county.

Union Bridge local held a very interesting meeting Saturday afternoon. County Agent Fuller discussed the question of selecting seed corn. The first year, care is used in selecting seed corn with special attention to root rot; the yield can be increased from on the average of 13 bushels, the second year only 7. These figures have been secured by Mr. Oldenberg in Root Rot Demonstration all over the state the past two years. This local has made rapid progress in getting under way. They have bought their spring fertilizers, planned demonstrations in corn, dairying, especially milk records and pure bred rises.

The Finkburg local of the corporation, met at the home of Mr. W. W. Yingling, at Sandyville, Tuesday night. Spring fertilizers, potatoes, and corn were discussed. Mr. Oldenberg, of University of Maryland and County Agent Fuller took part. The Farm Bureau came in for its share of the discussion with very favorable results. A meeting will be held during the week of April 16, at which time, we hope most of the farmers of first precinct will sign up.

Verdict Against C. & P.

Hagerstown, Md., March 22—Harry G. Miller of Cumberland was awarded $10,000 damages by a jury in the Circuit Court here yesterday afternoon in his suit against the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company for personal injuries. The jury deliberated one hour.

Miller contended that on November 27, 1921, the wheels of his automobile became entangled in fallen wires of the company on the road between Cumberland and Hancock. As the result of the entanglement he lost control of the machine, causing it to plunge down a steep embankment. Miller claimed that he was permanently injured about the head, face and eye.—American.

Many Divorces in State.

Only four States and the District of Columbia have less divorces than Maryland. There is one divorce to every 20 marriages in this State compared with one to every 1.54 in Nevada.

Such are the conclusions reached in an article quoted in a weekly magazine. Georgia, New Jersey, New York and North Carolina have fewer divorces than Maryland. The District of Columbia has only one divorce to every 91 marriages.

The far western States have more divorces than those farther east, the table shows. Virginia, West Virginia and Delaware, Maryland's neighboring States, show one divorce, respectively, to every 11, 9 and 20 marriages.

Marriage Licenses.

Joseph E. Strevig and Naomi G. Babylon, Westminster.

HARDING BOOM FOR NOMINATION

Attorney General Says his Nomination and Election Sure.

Perhaps with his consent, but without his personal statement, the campaign for the renomination of President Harding is under way. Until the exact truth is known, many who think they understand the Harding temperament are of the opinion that the consent of the President—if any has been given—does not extend farther than to a "trying out" of public sentiment; and that in case there is reasonable doubt as to this sentiment being largely pro-Harding, he will not enter a hard primary fight for renomination.

Friends of the President, backing the movement, say if the party can not win with him, it can not win at all; and that the refusal of a second nomination would be the equivalent to a repudiation of his administration which has been a trial of the party, rather than one of the President himself.

The Harding boom has been launched by Attorney-General Daugherty, from Florida, which gives it semi-official standing, but it promises to be sufficient to clear up the political atmosphere, so far as the President's party is concerned; and also to precipitate activity along the same line in the Democratic party, that has no one distinct outstanding figure for the same honor.

As yet, anything like a Harding walk-over is not assured. Many feel that the proposition is much too early, and that the situation will be much clearer after the November elections, and the assembling of the new Congress. There are also some who think Mr. Daugherty's initiative has been a tactical blunder in Mr. Harding's interest, and are not assured that Mr. Harding himself, is back of it.

Mr. Daugherty said he took responsibility for the announcement that the President would again run for the office "without any special authority from him, because I believe the country will demand his re-election."

No campaign will be actively launched, however, Mr. Daugherty declared, until after the meeting of the Republican National Committee in December.

Probing Price of Sugar.

Washington, March 21—Demands now being made for an investigation of sugar price fluctuations "are about a month behind," Secretary Hoover said today, adding that such an inquiry had been instituted by the Government on March 4.

The Secretary said he was convinced there was no economic justification for high prices of sugar and that the Department of Commerce and other Governmental departments were investigating into conditions in Cuba, under authority of a law passed by Congress authorizing inquiry into combinations of foreign producers of import commodities.

"As I have repeatedly stated there is no economic justification for the high price of sugar as there is an estimated world surplus," Mr. Hoover said. "Mr. Manly is about a month behind the times in his proposed investigation into the rise in price. Under authority of Congress to investigate combinations of foreign producers of import commodities, its Department, as soon as appropriations were available on March 4, instituted an investigation into the situation in Cuba. As the Department has no jurisdiction in domestic questions of the kind, I informally suggested to the chairman of the Federal Trade Commissions that it should undertake this end of the matter."

Decrease of Horses in 10 Years.

Washington, March 20—Man's chief beast of burden—the horse—has decreased in numbers in the world at large about 11 percent in the last ten years. Figures made public by the Department of Agriculture show a falling off in the total in eighty-five countries from 116,500,000 to 103,550,000.

The decreases occurred largely in Russia, where the decline was nearly 50 percent, and the United States, where the total has dropped from 23,145,000 in 1914 to 20,559,000. Russia's total in that year of 34,700,000 has dwindled to 18,507,000, giving this country the greatest number. Against decreases also reported for the United States, France, Germany and Japan offsetting gains were shown in Argentina, Canada, Spain and the Scandinavian countries.

There was a slight decrease in the number of mules and asses, of which this country's total of 5,898,000 is the largest.

Close of Sale Season.

Notwithstanding the outlook for a short crop of Spring sales, the Record closes the season with the advertising of over 70 public sales during January, February and March, only a few less than last year. Taken as a whole, the prices realized, while ranging below those of recent years, have been satisfactory for good stock and implements.

PLANTING IN "SIGNS."

Scientists Say the Moon has Heat and Influences Weather.

Planting time is close at hand, and again the planting in certain "signs" will influence some, while others do not have any faith at all in signs, whether they be "up" or "down," or in "the dark of the moon," but will plant in the ground, when it is ready.

But science says the moon does influence weather. It is no idle superstition to plant crops in the dark of the moon, declares science. When the moon is new, it is on the average the coldest time of the month. The two or three weeks which follow just after have good chance of being on the average warmer, thus permitting seeds to get a good start in a warming soil, and so lose none of the growing days of summer, according to Selby Maxwell, a writer on scientific subjects.

The moon does not confine its influence alone to Springtime; it affects the climate at all seasons of the year. Scientists know a little about how it does it.

It seems that the moon produces a deep seated swing in the temperature, or about 12 degrees in summer, and 14 degrees in winter. The month would always be coolest at new moon and warmest at full moon if it were not for the fact that the moon's heat has a plane, just as though it were an astronomical body.

Every object in the sky has an orbit, which if it were visible would look like a flat ring. The earth has one about the sun. When the sun appears to cross the plane of the earth's orbit we have what is called the equinox. The earth is tilted to the plane of its orbit. This produces the seasons. The moon's heat also has a nature which corresponds to seasons.

Last year the "equinoxes" of the moons heat occurred on February 17, 1922, and August 21, 1922. At these times the moon's heat was constant, and because it was vibrating in its plane, instead of across it, the weather we had was more or less constant. The last "equinox" of the moon's heat occurred on January 15, 1923. This was also a period of steady temperature.

The Cold Wave.

The storm and cold of the first of this week was general throughout the country, from the far northwest to the extreme south. The cold was extreme, and with heavy snows in the northwest, caused much suffering and some loss of life, as well as delays to traffic.

The damage throughout the South, from North Carolina to Texas, was great. There was some loss to early vegetables and strawberries, while peaches are reported to have been at least 50 percent killed south of Virginia. There was no loss to fruit in Maryland, as the buds were not far enough advanced.

Pour Liquor into Sewer.

New York, March 21.—Down to the sea in sewers today went 15,000 quarts of liquor, poured into the gaping mouth of a manhole at an East Side corner by a police whisky demolition squad, while hundreds of cheering, jeering and sobbing folk looked on.

At the appointed hour for the pouring the crowds were so great that reserves were called to hold them in check. Nearby roofs were crowded as the neck of the last bottle was severed. A hurdy-gurdy jazzed the toper's dirge, "The Alcoholic Blues."

Indians Still in the U. S.

The U. S. Department of the Interior is authority for the statement that there are still 371 parts of tribes of Indians in this country, with a total population of 340,917.

At the present time 59,500 of these Indians are attending schools conducted by the Government. Nineteen thousand Indian children go to boarding schools, 5,500 to day schools and 35,000 to the public schools. In addition 6,420 Indian children are enrolled in mission schools at the various reservations. There are also 78 hospitals and sanatoriums maintained by the Department of the Interior for the Indians.

The last issue of the Congressional Record (March 15) for the 67th Congress, contains 204 pages, largely of windy speeches and "leaves to print." The issue is estimated to have cost $10,000, or $50.00 a page. At this rate Senator Heflin's denunciation of the Reserve Board, a "fillibuster," cost $2500.00, and other speeches from $500.00 to $1000.00. We should say the issue was "hardly worth it," except as a specimen of how "big things" are done by Congress, at Uncle Sam's expense.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon has been presented with a smokable 5-pound cigar made of choice Havana tobacco; 28 inches long and 12 inches around. It was presented by the Cigar Manufacturers of New York, and sent to Danville, Ill., in a special hand-made cedar box. It is said to be the largest, real cigar, ever made.

A hotel at Middletown, Del., that has been in business for 150 years, recently sold at $15,000. It had previously sold as high as $55,000, and once at $35,000. Prohibition and automobiles are given as the cause of the present valuation.

We do not know how such things get doped out, but "it is said" that President Harding is likely to meet William Jennings Bryan, while in Florida, but is not likely to meet James M. Cox, although both are down there, handy.

Now, it is going to be a question for debate—why Porto Rico is doomed to be "dry," while the Philippines are to stay "wet." Both are "territories" of the United States, and both are "possessions" but there seems to be difference in the degree of possession, that is difficult for the layman to follow.

The Baltimore News, in promoting an annual "spelling bee" is to be commended. The fact is, it would be a greatly better thing if our schools actually taught spelling by giving it greatly more time and attention, as though the art of word construction was of real importance. The "three R's" still remain the foundation of a practical education, even though our school officials seem to belittle them, and correct spelling is an essential accompaniment of two of these "R's."

There is a little friendly scrap on hand between the new Governors—Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, and Smith, of New York—over the question of the distribution of power from the Waters, of Niagara, or rather from "boundary and navigable streams." Gov. Pinchot intimates that his state wants to live in "peace and harmony" with its northern neighbor, and invites mutuality; while Gov. Smith says his state can attend to its own business without outside advice or interference, or words to that effect. Not too much of that, brethren!

A Serious National Problem.

The farmer vote promises to eclipse the labor vote, for the first time, in a Presidential campaign, in 1924, as a class vote to be catered to by candidates for President and Congress; and unless these two great followings manage in some way to pool their interests, there will be sharp competition between the two for vote getting and candidate electing, which means careful stepping in many states and Congressional districts by the candidates themselves.

And the situation as a whole means more to the country than the measure of the success of either group. At best, the outlook stands for a contest for "class legislation" rather than for legislation of the majority of all the people, irrespective of occupation, and that is the serious—the dangerous—feature of the trend of the times.

Years ago, we used to hear of north against the south, protective tariff against free trade, capital and monopolies against the masses, imperialism against democracy, and various other questions on which public sentiment divided. But, more recently unionized labor has come to the front as a political force, and is still there, while in 1924 we will likely have the farmer in politics in greater force than any other predecessor.

The whole trend of politics is wrong. Government and legislation in this country should not be specially in favor of any particular class, or business, but for all classes and all occupations. We lose our composite democracy—our boasted policy of majority rule embodying the greatest good to the greatest number—when we engage in contests between selfish business interests, and the whole ground plan of original constitutional government by the people and for the people, is endangered.

The National politics of the near future, therefore, represents a very serious problem; not merely one of new and great interest, but one of a new danger to our whole political structure, not yet encountered and solved.

The Increase in Taxes.

The people of Maryland are largely to blame for the increase in taxes. In fact, it is but true to say that taxes in Maryland have not increased so much, nor are they as high, as in most other states; and in all states the people have voted taxes on themselves. There is no mystery about it, nor much to complain of, for as long as we demand state roads and modern schools, and as long as wages and all sorts of expenses range high, there is nothing to do but put up the money for them.

We said in the first sentence, the "people are to blame," and in a way, this is true. There is too much money invested that escapes taxation, and it escapes it by the sufferance of the people—not otherwise. Everybody ought to pay taxes on what they are worth (in expenses property at least) no matter whether the amount be great or small, tangible or intangible, in lands or merchandise, or interest bearing securities.

We have always been of the opinion that mortgages and judgments, as well as interest bearing bank certificates, should pay a fair tax, and that there should not be an exemption law on household goods exceeding $200.00. This opinion has not been changed during the past few years when taxes have been mounting, but it has rather been strengthened.

Too much of the burden of taxation rests on visible property, especially real estate, and such property not only pays the bulk of state and county taxes, but in addition it bears the taxation (or expense) of insurance, rapid depreciation, and other overhead expenses.

Every person, owning any class of property, ought to be a taxpayer to the extent of his or her rightful ability. A system of just taxation is no hardship on even the poorest, for the burden would be only in accordance with ability. There ought not be "tax free" investments for state and county purposes, nor should there be so many opportunities for tax-dodging. In fact, we believe there ought to be an income tax, on those who do not pay taxes otherwise; as there are large numbers of wage earners who own practically no property, but earn greatly more money than those who do. The fact is, an income tax is, in many respects, the fairest tax for all to pay.

Where Local Weeklies Pay.

A good many very excellent people appear to hold the erroneous opinion that the average local weekly newspaper office owes its life and prosperity (?) solely to local patronage. That its sole business is to publish local news, serve the local field exclusively, and never indulge in a policy of any sort that comes in conflict with local interests.

It is true that few, if any, local weeklies could exist without considerable local support and good will; but, given that, it is still true that no such paper could exist, for long, wholly on the local support it receives, and that if it calmly depended on this, it would "go broke," or struggle along as a horrible example of misplaced trust.

The wrong opinion as to the business status of a local newspaper, is one of long standing. It is an opinion that has left in its wake thousands of offices throughout the country whose plants and bank balances are not worth as much as they were twenty-five or fifty years ago. It is an opinion that fails to take into account the thousands of newspaper employees who have spent a life time and have hardly made a decent living, without considering a surplus competency.

Every local paper, whether desirous of doing so or not, must accept foreign advertising, and go out into the open field for job printing. Like any other business concern, it "must go after" business. It is "local" only in the sense that it must have a plant and a home favorably located, so as to be the centre of a reasonably good field for work, and then make a fight for the needed additional support that the local territory does not voluntarily supply. That is the local newspaper job, as it actually exists.

But, to most rules there are exceptions. There are county weeklies, completely local in their revenue, that are wonderful financial successes. They do not accept away-from-home advertising nor job printing, and always boost local interests exclusively. Every home within the radius of each local territory contains a paid in advance subscriber. Every individual removing from the home neighborhood, is a subscriber. There are no "paper borrowers." Every local business concern, advertises liberally, every week in the year.

Every piece of job printing needed by local patrons, is bought at the home office. Every church, school, society and fraternity, insists on paying full regular rates for their announcements. Every citizen is a booster, in every way, for the home town paper. Where are these papers located? The answer is—in fancy's realm—fairy-land.

Gov. Pinchot's Triumph.

Governor Pinchot has every reason to look upon the decisive vote of two to one by which the Senate passed the Prohibition Enforcement Bill as a signal personal triumph. That vote sets at rest whatever doubt there may have been in the minds of the Governor's friends as to his ability to carry through his program against the forces of political reaction. He won because he was in the right.

What he asked of the Legislature in this matter commended itself to the sober justice of the people as right and necessary. He disdained to employ the old tactics of the wire-pullers and the log-rollers to gain his ends. He made no promises, held out no lure of jobs or preferment to win support for the Enforcement Bill.

This result, therefore, is doubly significant and should give new heart to the decent people of Pennsylvania in their fight against political corruption, extravagance and inefficiency in the conduct of public affairs. It should stimulate all friends of good government to stand firmly behind Governor Pinchot in his purpose to bring to the administration of the State Government those principles of straightforward dealing, businesslike management and thoroughness and system that are indispensable to success in any other department of human endeavor.

Every influence that could be marshaled against the Enforcement Bill has been employed to halt the measure in the Senate. That body was regarded as the stronghold of the old political alliance between the machine and the liquor trade; and the defeat of the bill there would have strengthened the hands of its enemies in the lower branch. In his conduct of the fight for the bill and in its successful outcome the Governor found complete justification of his faith in the triumph of the right and in the potency of popular support against even so formidable an alliance as that of liquor and politics.

Philadelphia may well feel humiliated that in the final line-up between those who upheld the principles of obedience to law and its honest enforcement and those who tried to maintain the fiction of control by licensing the saloons, only one of the Senators from the Philadelphia districts—Dr. Woodward—voted with the Governor and the defenders of the State's honor. This is what might have been expected when it is remembered that the senatorial elections were generally allowed to go by default and the nominations left to the allies of the liquor interests.

This conspicuous success won by Governor Pinchot in his first serious test of strength with the Legislature fully justifies him in his reliance on the latent power of popular opinion to enforce its judgment on unwilling legislators; and it also justifies his refusal to listen to the tempters who have persistently tried to deceive him into the belief that only by bargaining and trickery could he hope to gain his way. He has fought in the open and he has won. He has kept his pledge to the people. And Pennsylvania is again convinced that it made no mistake when it commissioned Gifford Pinchot to clean up the mess at Harrisburg.—Philadelphia Ledger.

End of An Old Graft.

The agricultural appropriation bill has passed both houses of congress, and without any provision for free seeds to be distributed by our congressmen. Hereafter the distribution will be in direct charge of the agricultural department, as it should be, and the congressman who has always used the seeds to make himself solid with the folks back home, and who has burdened the mail by sending them to people who had absolutely no use or desire for them, will now have to hunt a new graft.

The way congressmen used the free seeds meant a waste of thousands of dollars a year. But is served as a sort of vote-getter and friendship maker for some of them, and that was what they needed. The citizen who now wants government seeds can secure them by addressing the Department of Agriculture at Washington. He doesn't have to be slighted simply because the congressman distributing the seeds happened to be elected by the opposite party, as has often been the case under the old system of free seed distribution.—Ellicott City Times

LUCK IN LIVES OF MUSICIANS

Some of the Greatest Seem to Have Had Lifelong Fight With Untoward Circumstances.

Musicians who wait like Mr. Meyer for something to turn up may have a long time to wait. Luck both good and bad unquestionably plays a part in every man's career. Many of the world's greatest musicians were born unlucky and suffered in consequence. Though he never knew it Schubert was, as they say in the West, "plump unlucky." He thought he was in luck whenever he got a square meal, and was always rejoicing whenever he got enough paper on which to transcribe the musical ideas teeming in his brain. He was distinctly out of luck, the world owed him something more than music paper on which to write immortal songs.

Wagner had to wait about forty years before his luck broke. He never really emerged from obscurity until a lunatic saw what others failed to see, and Ludwig of Bavaria, a crazy king, gave him a chance. This was indeed luck, but Wagner prepared for it by writing masterpieces.

Mendelssohn was lucky before he was born. He selected the right parents and was born rich. He was unlucky, however, in being born at the wrong time. He died too soon, broken-hearted over the death of his sister Fanny, from a nervous disorder. Had he lived in modern times the chances are that his life would have been saved.—Montreal Family Herald.

CLOCK GAVE DEATH WARNING

Peculiar Circumstance Reported From New York, and Another From Liverpool, England.

The family clock seems to become such an intimate part of the household that superstitious stories regarding its movements—especially in times of death or peril to the owner, find ready credence. Among the strange tales is one of a clock that gave warning of the death of its owner. In a certain merchant's house in New York there stood a clock that had been going steadily for many years. One day it stopped at twelve o'clock. At twelve o'clock precisely the merchant died in the hospital and at the same moment his mother also died of grief. There was apparently nothing wrong with the clock and no reason for its stopping. Another somewhat similar case occurred in Liverpool. A man who was a builder by trade, kept a small clock on his mantelpiece. At a quarter past eleven one morning the clock suddenly fell to the floor. When picked up it was still going and had apparently received no injury. When the builder came home a little later he told his family that at a quarter past eleven that morning he had fallen from the top of a building, but had escaped without hurt.

Diamond Figures in History.

Thomas Pitt, the grandfather of the great English statesman who finally drove Napoleon the Great from power, made the fortune of his house, however, by the sale of the Regent diamond to the regent of France early in the Eighteenth century, the price of Orleans paying more than half a million dollars for it. The stone also made the fortune of Napoleon, as the directory pledged it to the Dutch government in 1800 for 6,000,000 francs, thereby raising the money with which Napoleon conducted the great campaign which won him the battle of Marengo.

How Ground Affects Wind.

A curious instance of the effect of the shape of the ground upon the wind blowing over it was noted by a Frenchman experimenting with kites in France. When a north wind floated the kite the latter kept its balance easily, but when the wind came from the south or southeast the kite pitched and bobbed in a very irregular manner. The explanation was furnished by the character of the surface over which the wind had passed. Coming from the north, it had a plain country to blow over, but coming from the south and southeast it passed over broken hills, which set it into irregular puffs and undulations.—Washington Star.

Origin of Navajo Blankets.

The origin of the famous Navajo blanket is picturesque. At the time of the Spanish conquest, the Navajo tribe of Indians was too insignificant to be mentioned. It grew, however, rather rapidly, and in raids upon the Pueblos took many of the latter prisoners. From these (the Pueblos had long been weavers of native cotton) they picked up the textile art; and then stealing sheep from the Spaniards, they inaugurated the weaving of the woolen blanket.

Only the women of the tribe were weavers, and in the early days did it largely as an artistic recreation, just as the women of civilization do embroidery or tatting.

Original Funeral Floral Pieces.

Marie Lloyd, a favorite English comedian, was stricken dead while on the stage in the midst of her number. The crowd attending the funeral was so great that traffic was seriously interfered with. There were more than 500 floral offerings, many of them unique. For instance, one represented a panel of white flowers in which the music of her closing notes were worked out in violets. One of her favorite songs was "The Empty Cage," and one of the floral pieces represented the empty cage with the door open and the bird flown.

HATCHING EARLY PAYS BEST

Pullets Should Be Mature by November 1 and Begin Laying—Maturity May Be Hastened.

While some pullets may start laying early in the fall and molt during late fall or early winter, and not resume laying until spring, this will not be characteristic of the entire flock.

With the general farming breeds, such as Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Rhode Island Reds, Langshans and Orpingtons, little trouble will be had with fall molting of pullets unless the birds are hatched extremely early. By what is termed early hatching is meant not later than May 15. It takes about six months to mature a pullet of the above mentioned breeds. With special care and management and in some flocks where they have been bred especially for egg production, this may be hastened to a little over five months, but on the average it will run between six and seven months. All pullets should be hatched so as to mature and ready to start laying by the first of November. With Leghorns and the smaller, quicker maturing varieties one does not need to hatch quite so early, as with these birds maturity can be obtained by the first of November with later hatching. After very careful observation of poultry conditions throughout the country.

Hens Take Good Care of Chicks Even When Confined.

Substantiated by experiments in the experiment station and others, it has been found that June and July hatching either from the standpoint of egg or meat production is not as profitable as the early hatching. In some instances where the season is backward and plenty of shade can be afforded, and vermin can be controlled by rigid sanitation methods, June and July hatching can be made profitable.

INSURE FERTILITY OF EGGS

To Produce Hatchable Eggs, Breeding Stock Should Be Well Fed—Exercise Is Essential.

Early hatches are desirable when one has facilities for caring for the little ones, and when proper fertility can be secured in the early eggs. Naturally, eggs will hatch better in the middle or late spring, but with proper care the fertility can be insured earlier. Breeding stock that is kept in the open air will produce hatchable eggs earlier than those that are tightly housed. In fact, such results can be obtained from stock housed in open front or scratching shed houses.

To produce hatchable eggs, breeding stock should be fed liberally but forced to exercise freely. Some meat and bone are necessary in addition to grain feeds scattered in the litter. It is believed by some that mash fed hens do not produce good hatching eggs, but there seems to be no foundation for this opinion, as experiments have proven that there is no difference between such eggs and those produced by hens fed entirely on whole grain and meat.

POULTRY NOTES

A hen will not lay eggs, no matter how well she is fed, unless she has the egg-making material.

Light in the poultry house is one factor which cannot be overemphasized.

Set only uniform eggs of average size. Small, misshapen eggs and extraordinarily large eggs do not hatch as well as the eggs of average size and texture.

Dampness is fatal to success with fowls, but clear dry quarters do not have to be warm. Sudden changes of temperature are to be avoided and the flock should be kept from chilly winds or storms.

Geese can be fattened by forced feeding with noodles and this is often done for the highest class markets.

Oyster shell and grit must be before the flock at all times. The oyster shell furnishes the lime for the egg shell, while the grit takes the place of the hens' teeth.

The last important thing to remember if good results are expected, is to keep the poultry house clean. This includes the dropping boards, nests and, most of all, the floor.

Our roads are in a very bad condition, and the question generally asked is, "Which is the better way to go?" We have again fully realized the folly of spending money making dirt roads, because they will not stand up to the heavy traffic of today. True they do very well as long as it does not rain, and where there is very little travel; but on a road like the Gettysburg-Taneytown road, where heavy machines are daily traveling, it is simply throwing money away to put a little ground in a big mud hole, or rut; because the first heavy machine that goes through opens it all up again.

In Sad but Loving Remembrance of our dear father,
DAVID CROUSE,
who departed this life today one year ago,
March 23, 1922.

Dearest father thou has left us,
And thy loss we deeply feel;
But to God we offer all our grief
Who can all our sorrows heal.

A father dear, a father kind,
Has gone and left us here behind,
Cease to weep for tears are vain,
And father dear is out of pain.

Oh father dear can it be?
No more thy look of life we see?
Those eyes that never are closed in death
We'll think of till our latest breath.

Not long ago he filled his place,
And sat with us as of old,
But he has run his mortal race,
And never can return.

Farewell, farewell our father dear,
Life is sad without you here,
Oh, may we meet in heaven above
Where all is joy, and peace, and love.

By his daughter and husband,
MR. & MRS. ELWOOD NUSBAUM.

Tribute to Geo. A. Shoemaker, 3rd.

Kindly permit me through the columns of your paper to express my sorrow on the death of our friend, George A. Shoemaker, 3rd., as he was known to us as one of the kindest dispositions, he was a year in the weary of earth and its toils, calmly folded his tired hands upon his breast and sweetly passed into the joy of his Lord surrounded by his devoted parents, and his aunt Blanche, of Hagerstown.

Just as the sun was raising behind the Eastern hills on the morning of February 17, 1923, as a tired child leans upon its mother's breast, so he pilloved upon the bosom of his Savior, calmly closed his eyes to the scene of this world to open in the great beyond where they shall never again grow dim.

Nearly four years ago he came to my house in Hagerstown, sick, having a leaking heart. We kept him for seven weeks; he got fairly good again, but the last attack took him away at the age of 14 years, 2 months and 11 days.

May his life be such an inspiration to us that we may live that when our time shall come to join that innumerable caravan which proceeds to that mysterious realm where each shall take his chamber in the silent halls of death, that we may go not as the quarry slave at night, scourged to his dungeon, but, soothed by an unfaltering trust, approach the grave as one who wraps the drapery of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams.

J. S. MOATS,
Hagerstown, Md.

CARD OF THANKS.

I wish to express my sincere thanks to all friends and neighbors who so kindly assisted during the illness and death of my wife.

TIME TO PLAN FOR GARDEN

Not Too Early to Determine Just What to Plant and How It Will Be Laid Out.

Succession of bloom in the flower garden is a most important factor in garden planning. Study the annuals carefully before ordering seed and in laying out your garden to discover which come into bloom first, and which are late bloomers.

Phlox Drummondii and poppies come into bloom within a few weeks after planting. Asters we also know cannot be counted on for a display until the last of the summer. Snapdragons also require a long growing season before they give their best display. Marigolds start blooming when small, especially the French varieties.

It would not be advisable to plant a garden with varieties all of which need three months or more to produce their best display. It also would be equally inadvisable to plant all early flowering sorts, which would bloom a few weeks after planting, and then go to seed. It is a simple matter to study out a collection of annuals which will give blooms practically the whole summer from early June until killing frost.

The annual pinks give fairly early bloom and are lasting. Verbenas, if started early, may be depended on for a long display. Pansies, if started early, will brighten the last of May. Calendulas are reliable all-summer bloomers, especially if given a flying start.

Salvias reach the height of their brilliant scarlet towards the end of summer, but give fine bloom by July from early sown seed.

The flowering tobacco, Nicotiana, are stately plants for the back of the border, and give a long display. The majestic castor bean, finest of the tropical foliaged annuals, which make a growth of ten feet in a season, ought to be started in pots in the house or a hotbed to get them up in the air by July.

Nasturtiums, both the dwarf and the climbing sorts, start into bloom by the last of June if sown by May 1.

CALLS FOR SELF-SACRIFICE

Improvement of Community Conditions Necessarily Involves More or Less Work and Service.

Work and service always are to be linked up in efforts to improve community conditions and to build a better city. Time that might be employed profitably in one's own business and energy that might be turned to good account in personal affairs must go into these undertakings for the benefit of others, the public generally. The situation is not frequently enough realized, either by those who connect themselves with public benefit efforts or by the public. Often it is the case that a movement laudable and necessary comes to nothing because many of those who start it do not see the work ahead for them if it is to be pushed to success.

Often citizens find fault with a movement and with those who sacrifice their individual interests in connection with it. This condition makes community progress difficult and slow. It makes some of the best citizens hesitate to lend themselves to the most unselfish and public-spirited undertakings.

Doing Away With Ugliness.

Louisvillians seeking an outlet for their civic aspirations might take a hint from the Citizens Anti-Ugly Protective association formed in Kansas City for cleaning-up and beautifying the town. Seven prominent citizens financed the organization, which aims to rid the city of defacements on sidewalks, highways, alleys and buildings.

Tattered placards and out-of-date advertisements already have been removed from walls through the efforts of the new organization. Joseph Meinrath, a retired business man, started the movement by spending money for paid newspaper advertisements, enlisting through this method six other persons of means. The organization then was incorporated.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

United States' Forest Land.

Including burned and cut-over areas and abandoned fields that once grew timber, one-third of the soil of the Union is forest land, says the forest service, United States Department of Agriculture. Three-fourths of this land lies in the Mississippi valley and eastward to the Atlantic coast in the states having the densest population and the largest consumption of timber products.

Weller Would Be Horrified.

The British government is quite anxious to restore the manhood which it lost in the war, and for this reason it has been encouraging the marriage of young widows. Much success has attended this policy, with the widows marrying in a number as high as 2,000 a month. The public policy has been to give a year's pension to every widow who remarries. The government can well afford to do this, since when the widow marries naturally her pension ceases.—National Tribune.

TRACE ORIGIN TO SANSKRIT

Term "India" Believed to Have Been Derived Through the Greek and Early Persians.

Best authorities agree that "India" is the abstract form of a word derived through the Greek from the Persized form of the Sanskrit "sindhu," a "river," pre-eminently the Indus. The word has become familiar since the British acquired India, and is now officially recognized in the imperial title of the sovereign. "The natives of India can scarcely be said to have a word of their own by which to express their common country," says the Encyclopedia Britannica. "In Sanskrit, it would be called 'Bharatavarsha,' from Bharata, a legendary monarch of the Lunar line; but Sanskrit is no more the vernacular of India than Latin is of Europe.

"The name 'Hindustan,' which was at one time adopted by European geographers, is of Persian origin, meaning 'the land of the Hindus,' as Afghanistan means 'the land of the Afghans.' According to native usage, however, 'Hindustan' is limited either to that portion of the peninsula lying north of the Vindhya mountains, or yet more strictly to the upper basin of the Ganges where Hindi is the spoken language.

"The 'East Indies,' as opposed to the 'West Indies,' is an old-fashioned and inaccurate phrase, dating from the dawn of maritime discovery."

What is there about the goat that fascinates children? The animal is not particularly intelligent, performs no tricks, admits of no close companionship and yet neither dog nor cat, nor monkey, nor donkey, nor feathered fowl nor finned fish can compete with it for popularity among the very young.

The goat gives milk, but this is scarcely a consideration to the juvenile mind; and, besides the billygoat is notoriously preferred to the nanny-goat.

The answer appears to lurk in the whiskers. Whiskers are potent accoutrements. Many a sage would never have been known as such had he been clean shaven.

The goat is indisputably one of the funniest looking animals this earth supports. No one can look at a goat in the eyes and refrain from revivrant cacklings. Those eyes are so serious—so cynical—they blend profound wisdom with profound ignorance, and the mixture is utterly ridiculous. You never know whether a goat is laughing at you or gaping in bewildered awe.

Perhaps this mystery is part of the enchantment the goat exercises over children. But the whiskers appear to be the better explanation.

Peachblow

A Marital Extravaganza

BY

RUPERT HUGHES

I first met Rupert Hughes several years ago. I sat next to him at a dinner. Mr. Hughes was then, as now, very much in the limelight. But Mr. Hughes did not talk at all about his own work. He asked me about mine, and told of how, once, when he was an editor, he had cut an author's story in a moment of stress to fill an exacting space, and how that author had minded. His feeling still, though this had happened years before, was one of real regret for that author's chagrin.

It is that quality of understanding the other fellow's feelings that gives him such a large hold on the American public. I asked him last winter when he first began to write, and he said at the age of seven and that he had been at it ever since. A short time after he left Yale he had six months' experience on a newspaper. After that he had been an editor on various magazines until a little more than ten years ago, but that during those editorial years he had done a great amount of writing at night.

His output has been enormous. It is impossible to chronicle all of his successes in short stories, novels, plays and moving pictures. He is also the author of a musical encyclopedia. It seems incredible that one man could do so much! And yet he was intensely interested in the idea of the Star Author Series of Matrimonial Adventures and at once agreed to write the story that follows.

"Peachblow" is an extravaganza on marriage. It has, none the less, an underlying suggestion for both husbands and wives.

MARY STEWART CUTTING, JR.

I

Even if it had not been set down in Holy Writ for a fact, there would be no escaping the truth of: "To him that hath, it shall be given."

In our dictionary "him" of course, includes "her." Which is more than he is able to do outside the dictionary.

This is a bit of a story of a her that had—and therefore got.

The Lord himself, they say, was surprised when he saw her. Her earthly father was so stunned with pride that he called her "Peachblow." And with good reason. She was born just about the time when the Peachblow vase was exciting the world.

The unknown genius who was the author of that masterpiece never dreamed when he put it in the fire that it would come out so wonderful.

And so the mysterious Potter who places souls in the furnace of human bodies was enchanted and amazed by the curious, unforeseen, unintended beauty of this girl when she was born. They had selected the name of Ellen Anne Green for her before they saw her, but afterward they called her Peachblow.

Such a peculiar luster she had, with the glow of a glaze, yet the aura of a mist, that the Potter longed to show her how he loved her by endowing her with some intentional gift surpassing even the fortuitous charm she brought with her out of the kiln of mystery.

So He gave her a power He had never even granted Himself—that of annulling what had been and making it as if it had been. He authorized her and empowered her to change her mind and try again from the start! She could rub out the past and do it over again!

She learned of her awful power only by accident and not until she had passed through the animal whims of childhood, and the parent-obeying, teacher-obeying custom-obeying years.

Then she found herself in the world of grown-up women. They were thinking of matrimony.

Some were not married and wanted to be, but dreaded it and could not find a satisfactory mate. Mates were admirable, adorable or advisable, but rarely all three at once. The women who were married seemed to be forever pointing out what martyrs they were and how well they stood it; or else were longing to try a new form of martyrdom with somebody else.

Peachblow longed for the joys, the sorrows, the burdens of home. She wanted to do her share in the world; to multiply, and all that sort of thing.

"Love is so glorious a thing that I think I'd like to be loved by the loveliest lover in all the world."

She cast about for the person most worthy of that distinction.

The man who seemed to be the leading lover in respect to quantity and quality was known to all the world as Claude Winsor. So she said:

"I think I'll marry Claude Winsor." Her father and mother exclaimed aloud:

"But he's a movie actor and he's married."

"The first argues skill," she mused; "but the second is an obstacle. I do wish he had never been married."

There was an audible click and buzz, a peculiar jolt in the universe, a dizzy feeling as if someone had thrown the world into the reverse gear, then set it back in high. The family said:

"That's funny! Did you notice anything?"

Then they forgot it and returned to the popular sport of denouncing the motion picture people and crediting them with inventing more novel sins than situations.

Peachblow was blue for several days, and then she chanced to read, in the newspapers, this:

"Mr. and Mrs. Claude Winsor announce that a curious error has been made in the public attitude toward their relationship.

"They have never been married; never have lived together, never have been anything but friends, which they still are, and might not be if they had been married."

"The children that used to play in front of their bungalow are the children of a neighbor."

"Aha!" quoth Peachblow. "I will marry this bachelor." And immediately began to pack her trunks. She told her father to get her a stateroom to Los Angeles and her mother to come along.

Her parents indulged in mental pinwheels when they heard her decision.

But nothing could change Peachblow's mind. She went out to Los Angeles, and sent one of her photographs to Mr. Winsor with a request for an interview. That photograph was letter of introduction enough, and she was invited to call at the great man's studio.

When she stood before his eyes, he said:

"Do you want to go into the movies?"

"Well," she said, "I'm going to marry into them."

"Indeed? And who is the lucky man?"

"You."

"Really?"

"Uh-huh."

Being used to the silent drama and hating superfluous titles, he said nothing, but took her by an elbow, her mother by an elbow, hurried them out to his car, ran them to the nearest parson and said "Shoot!"

For a time the marriage was happy and she revelled in the luxury of being loved by an expert. But then he went back to his profession, and mortification set in.

Peachblow found herself the chattel of a husband who left her arms early in the morning and hastened to the arms of other women; who fought for them, pursued them, risked his life to save their lives, gazed into their eyes with an ardor that transfixed all beholders; who faded out of every picture with a dying duck look of undying affection for some highly artificial beauty—and then came home at night worn out with love and wanted to go to the American Legion prize-fight.

After a few months Peachblow sent for her mother and father and listened to their "I told you so's" with great patience.

They agreed with her that life with such a husband was impossible and engaged the best divorce lawyer in Los Angeles. While they were bawling the inevitable newspaper horror, the headlines, and all the hideous details of divorce, Peachblow felt a renewal of her occult power.

"Divorce nothing!" she said; "I'll just forget him. I'll just unmarry myself quietly, and erase my memory from his mind."

She said this in the very presence of Mr. Winsor who had called with his lawyer to confer with Peachblow, her parents and their lawyer, John Elphinstone.

As soon as Peachblow spoke, a curious look came over Claude Winsor's face. Again the earth jolted and spun backward, then raced forward once more.

"It's nothing," said Mr. Elphinstone, "but one of our little California earthquakes. Quite nothing at all."

He slipped his arm about Peachblow to sustain her, and found the attitude singularly comfortable. Together they watched Claude Winsor staring at them with a look of bewilderment. Then he bowed and said:

"Pardon me, I entered the wrong set—house, by mistake."

He staggered out and the next thing he knew he was sitting on his porch dandling his baby before his original wife while the publicity man took snapshots for the magazines.

Mr. Elphinstone clung to Peachblow until her father intervened and said:

"What right have you to stand there embracing my daughter as if you were announcing your engagement to her?"

"And why not?" said Elphinstone.

"I see no objection," murmured Peachblow who felt a sudden emptiness in her life. "After all, who could make a better husband than a lawyer?"

And so in a short time expensively engraved cards conveyed the information that Mr. and Mrs. Greene announced the marriage of their daughter Ellen Anne to John Elphinstone, Esquire.

II

Those who have experienced it, say that there is nothing like being the wife of a lawyer. For a time Peachblow agreed with this in its simplest implication; then she amended it to:

"There's nothing like it because nothing else could be so bad."

She had a husband who tore himself from her society of mornings and went forth to do battle for women clients over whose wrecked lives he waxed so eloquent that his tears were rivalled by those of the jury and strong judges bent their heads and wept secretly on the papers where judges make idle marks to pass away the time.

Elphinstone not only spent hours upon hours in his office with exquisite clients whose hands he patted, and whose charms he expatiated on before the courts, but he came home and told his wife about it.

He wrote briefs as impassioned and as full of imagination as any scenario and then acted his own continuities with fiery enthusiasm. His cases often took him to distant cities and it was not always convenient for Peachblow to go with him.

There was such a strain upon her natural jealousy that she had to consult a physician, Dr. S. Q. Lapius, who had a charming bedside manner and soothed her by suggestion rather than by knife or nostrum.

After one notorious lawsuit in which Elphinstone wore himself almost to a wreck by his defense of a wayward lady who had bankrupted her husband and then sued him for alienation of her affections, Elphinstone came home to find his mother and father-in-law and the physician trying to restrain Peachblow's hysterics. When Elphinstone approached her solicitously she covered into the bosom of the doctor and screamed:

"Go away; you are no longer a husband of mine; in fact, you never were."

Elphinstone was seized as by invisible hands and haled backward to his own office where he awoke with a splitting headache and a strange gap in his memory.

Peachblow, once more miraculously restored to maidenhood, said:

"After all, a doctor is the world's most useful citizen. I believe I should enjoy being a wife to one."

"Barkis is willin'," said the physician, who was unusually well read for a doctor. He persuaded another physician to take care of his patients and went away on a bridal tour of all imaginable bliss.

III

When he came back Doctor Lapius found that his overworked substitute had let his patients get well, and he had to buckle down to the task of restoring them to a state of profitable disorder.

He had his office in the parlor of the home and this made it necessary for Mrs. Peachblow Lapius to entertain her friends in the upstairs living room.

The acoustics were such that she could hear what went on in the office. The halest and heartiest women constantly entered the parlor in a state of acute distress and after long murmurous consultations went away so much better that Peachblow grew frantic with suspicion. She remembered all too vividly how gentle and soothing her husband had been with her when she was another man's wife. And she wondered, till her wonderment grew to be a bitter conviction.

Worse yet, he was the slave of the telephone. At no hour of the day or night was he safe from the hateful summons to hurry to the rescue of some distressful patient. In nine cases out of ten it was a woman, and in no cases out of ten was Peachblow ever urged to come along.

She so lost her taste for material medicaments that she longed for spiritual help, and went to her rector, dear Dr. Clarence Yost, to confess her misery.

She was set upon a divorce, but he was horrified at the thought.

"Now an annulment would not be so bad," he urged.

"All right, it's annulled," said Peachblow grimly.

And Doctor Lapius found himself back in bachelorhood. But Peachblow had come to depend upon Doctor Yost. He lived in such an exalted sphere and such a comfortable parsonage that she decided to share both with him.

IV

To her intense confusion Peachblow discovered that the feminine portion of the congregation took her marriage to their dear rector as a personal invasion of their rights.

For a time the attendance fell off noticeably. But gradually the lonely women returned to their pews. Next they resumed their habits of bringing their woes to their spiritual adviser.

These were genuine woes beyond the reach of scalp or tonic, but Peachblow could not regard them as anything but a hypocritical excuse for weeping on her husband's shoulder and clinging to his rescuing hands.

Whether or not she did the women a cruel injustice, the effect on her nerves was manifest. At last in a crisis of unhappiness, she stormed:

"I'm sick of all the professions. I'm going into trade."

She unwished herself from Doctor Yost and he once more assumed all the charms of an unwedded clergyman, eligible and available.

V

A merchant was Peachblow's next first husband; handsome junior member of the firm of Wanfield & Son, at whose great department store she had long run up bills for her father to protest against and pay.

But when she called at his office she found him so surrounded with stenographers, buyers, mannish, cloak models, designers and other women customers and aides that she could hardly get to him.

His heart was given to providing as many women as possible with beautiful garments and embellishments of every intimate sort, with perfumes and ribbons and lipsticks and what not. He thought about fashions and he was so weary of feminine charms and their enchantment that when he came home to his Peachblow he left at once for one of his exclusively male clubs in order to keep his sanity.

A small shoe shop man was Peachblow's next experiment. But when she went by his store and peeked in at the window, she always found him kneeling before some woman, or trying to crush a No. 6-E foot into a No. 4-A shoe; and she simply could not endure it.

VI

A plumber she married was forever pattering about other people's homes in the most personal cranities; and she gave him up.

An iceman followed him through her much-trodden heart, but he, too, had his kitchen doors to visit.

Discouraged by her inability to find a husband in town who did not have to spend a large part of his time and attention upon other women, Peachblow resolved to marry some homely old farmer who lived in a solitude.

Ezra Hepple was the happy man—for a time. And he was so content with Peachblow's society that he would not even keep a hired girl to cook for the hired men.

He rose at 4 a. m. and bragged about it. He woke her up to brag about it. The fact that he had gone to sleep at dusk did not abate his pride. The only poetry he knew was something ending with "healthy, wealthy and wise." She knew he was neither wealthy nor wise, but she was afraid he was healthy.

Her jealous little soul had its wish at last.

But a wish ceases to be a wish as soon as it is achieved. Like the candy in the bon-bon dish it is apt not only to turn sour but to wreck the appetite as well.

Peachblow's latest installment in her serial husband never cast an interested eye on any other woman. But this curiously made his interest in her unimportant; robbed him of suspense and her of the drama of anxiety. He was unskillful, uncouth, illiterate in femininity.

No other woman cast an eye in his direction. But that was because he had nothing attractive about him. And the man who is unable to interest any other woman is unable to interest his wife.

Poor Peachblow, having no rivals to fear and having a husband who made no perilous comparisons, began to neglect herself. Her beauty wilted from lack of attention. Her incomparable complexion began to yield to farm food and farm labor in farm weather. She sighed: "It doesn't seem to make much difference what man a woman marries; every one of the brutes has his own specialty in being impossible."

By this time Peachblow had so disorganized the machinery of the universe, that the world was in the garage half the time; and all the angels exhausted.

It is not such an easy matter for even the angels to keep everything going, especially when it goes backward frequently. There was talk of a strike in heaven and celestial society was profoundly disturbed. The oldest angels were forever talking of the last big revolution when Lucifer and his whole party were thrown overboard.

But how was the dreadful situation to be changed? The Lord did not want to cancel one of his own generous gifts to one of his most beautiful creatures. But heaven was ceasing to be heaven for all its deserving tenants.

At the height of this dreadful cosmic crisis Peachblow in a frenzy state of despondency, while slaving in her kitchen, chanced to catch a glimpse of herself in the casual mirror in the round bottom of a big dishpan. She had long ceased to consult her own looking-glass.

The vision that stared at her from that tiny surface shocked her into a sorrow too deep for hysterics. She meditated on her own image:

"Every husband is worse than every other husband. A woman might as well stick to the first wretch she happens to marry. I was luckiest when I had the most lovable of men, and I wish I had him back again, movie actor though he be."

"This hateful power of mine has been my ruin. It's best to let nature take her course. The one thing I most wish had never been is my ability to make things as if they never had been."

As she exhaled this last sigh, a distinct earthquake was registered on every seismograph in the world. The heavens shook, at first with surprise, then with delight.

Peachblow herself was shaken. She found herself staring at a dishpan as if under a hypnotic spell. She heard her husband's voice from the dining-room door. It was the voice of Claude Winsor, the star surprise of the cinematic firmament. The world might share his silent beauty with her, but his voice belonged to her:

"What on earth are you doing in the kitchen, my darling? It's no place for such exquisite grace. And besides I see that there's a ton of fan-mag that you haven't answered. You haven't autographed any of my photographs for me in ever so long. We've got to get busy or we'll lose our little public."

With a cry of rapture she flung her arms about his universally admired neck and rejoiced in the fact that at least a hundred million women of all ages and races about the globe would have been glad to poison her for her enviable privilege.

The moral, if any, has to do with leaping out of the frying pan into the fire. The moral is ancient; the fire is the same old inextinguishable blaze of discontent. But the frying pan is forever new. Each one of us furnishes his or her own frying pan. Selah!

LESSON FOR MARCH 25

REVIEW

JESUS THE WORLD'S SAVIOR

GOLDEN TEXT—This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners.—1 Timothy 1:15.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Favorite Story of the Quarter.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Favorite Lessons of the Quarter.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Luke's Picture of Jesus.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Lessons From Luke's Gospel.

The method of review must be determined by the grade of the class, by the test of the teachers and by the nature of the studies of the quarter. Three methods are suggested:

(1) Centering in the Topic—Jesus the World's Savior. This method is suggested by Doctor Crannell.

1. The World's Liberator.
  - a. From Diseases. Lessons 1, 5.
  - b. From "Legalism." Lesson 1.
  - c. From Pride. Lessons 2, 6.
  - d. From Selfishness. Lessons 2, 5.
  - e. From Prejudice. Lesson 7.
  - f. From the Sinful Past. Lesson 7.
2. The World's Teacher.
  - a. About Sin and Salvation. Lesson 3.
  - b. About Human Duty:
    - (i) To Others. Lessons 2, 4.
    - (ii) To God. Lessons 5, 8, 9.
    - (iii) To State. Lesson 9.
    - (iv) With Money. Lessons 4, 8, 9.
  - c. About Prayer. Lesson 6.
3. The World's Sacrifice.
  - a. Sacrifice Faced, Accepted. Lesson 10.
  - b. Sacrifice Rendered. Lesson 11.

(2) Modern Applications of the Lessons. This scheme calls for reports by members of the class to whom assignments were previously made. This is taken from Peloubet's Notes.

Lesson I. "What should we keep of the old-time Sabbath?"

Lesson II. "Why is it hard to be humble today?"

Lesson III. "Are our churches really open to the prodigals?"

Lesson IV. "What should our rich men do for our Lazaruses?"

Lesson V. "Men and women who deserve much gratitude and receive little."

Lesson VI. "What may we reasonably expect from prayer?"

Lesson VII. "Why is it hard for a modern business man to be a Christian?"

Lesson VIII. "How the church should utilize its average members."

Lesson IX. "How can we get our church members to give as much as they should?"

Lesson X. "Things that Christians do not grieve enough over."

Lesson XI. "How the message of the cross might be brought to all men in a generation."

(3) The Central Teaching of the Lessons:

Lesson I. There is no malady of man connected with soul or body which Jesus cannot heal.

Lesson II. Unselfishness will move one to humbly take the lowest place in life, esteeming others better than himself.

Lesson III. God is longing and waiting to welcome to His bosom the vilest sinner who comes with contrition of heart.

Lesson IV. The one who lives only for this life shall surely suffer agony and torment in the life to come.

Lesson V. Ingratitude is common to the natural heart. The Lord expects those who experience His salvation to give Him their love.

Lesson VI. Those who pray to God in the right spirit shall surely get the blessings sought.

Lesson VII. The supreme purpose of the coming of Jesus Christ to the earth, taking upon Himself our humanity, and dying on the cross was to save lost men.

Lesson VIII. Upon those who have not been faithful in the use of gifts the Lord shall execute judgment at His coming.

Lesson IX. We are responsible to God, but God measures our gifts by the extent of our ability.

Lesson X. Bitter agony was suffered by Christ when He bore our sins.

Lesson XI. In Christ's death a full price was paid for our sins.

What God Remembers.

"I," says God, "will remember." How sweet to think of what God will, and what He will not, remember! He will remember His own covenant, but He will not remember His people's sins. The cross, which ratifies the former, puts away the latter.—C. H. McIntosh.

God's Offer.

Back of our ignorance and uncertainty God stands with His offer of wisdom and guidance to all who will ask it.

No Truer Picture.

The Lie.

Sin has many tools, but a lie is the handle that fits them all.—O. W. Holmes

THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

Moody Bible Institute Monthly

March 25

Educational Missions at Home and Abroad.

Acts 19:8-20

Educational missions as seen in the nineteenth chapter of Acts is a very different matter from educational missions now. As a result of Paul's teaching for two years in the school of Tyrannus, all who attended heard "the word of the Lord Jesus." This word was authoritative, powerful, redeeming, regenerating, accompanied by the evident approval of God who wrought special miracles by the hand of Paul, thereby accrediting His servant as His representative.

In many of our educational institutions today, even those supported by missionary funds, "the Word of the Lord Jesus" is not taught but questioned. It is not inerrant but faulty; not authoritative as from God, but limited as from man; while Christ Himself is often degraded to the level of mere man; and "miracles"? No, never. That would upset the evolutionary theory on which most of our education both at home and abroad is based.

For this reason thousands of the Lord's people who are scripturally intelligent and discerning, can neither give their money or support to those whose philosophy and teaching pervert the gospel of Christ. Being compelled to choose between the unproven and destructive theory which has never saved any one, and the gospel of God's grace which has saved every one who has believed it, they unhesitatingly and inevitably choose the gospel method. Having discovered in that gospel of the shed blood of Christ for sin, an unfailing remedy in their own case, they are immovably committed to its propagation and its defense.

To gather Christian converts together in schools and colleges and give them Christian education commands the loyalty and support of every true Christian, but to spend missionary money in teaching an unproven theory which is destructive of everything distinctively Christian, calls for unsparing criticism and unceasing opposition.

Excellent Remedy for Constipation.

It would be hard to find a better remedy for constipation than Chamberlain's Tablets. They are easy to take and mild and gentle in effect. Give them a trial when you have need.

Let us be better men!
Let us find things to do
Sane and sweeter, yet
Higher and nobler and true.

COME TO DINNER!

The housewife who has members of her family with flagging appetites which must be catered to, is not so fortunate as she who has husky ones and the only problem is to furnish quantity; however, in all homes such times will come and it is necessary to meet these conditions with a reserve of ideas which will give variety to the meals.

Potatoes are the common staple food and with the three or more hundred ways of serving them we should reasonably expect to have them prepared in other ways than baked and boiled and mashed and fried. The following is a way to serve them which will appeal to the appetite and give a pleasant change:

Spanish Potatoes.—Boil potatoes as usual, using the small even-sized ones. In the serving dish which is hot, put two tablespoonfuls each of butter and finely-minced onion, turn in the hot potatoes which have been drained and shaken over the heat, to remove all moisture, salt and chop the potatoes, turning and mixing them well with the butter and onion. Serve hot, at once.

Cabbage is one of our good winter vegetables, available throughout the year—is rich in vitamins, mineral salts and furnishes bulk which is needed to cleanse the alimentary canal. Twice a week is not too often to serve cabbage; oftener is better. Cabbage is more valuable uncooked. It is good as a salad, as cold slaw, or cooked and served with a dressing of butter, milk and a few crumbed crackers.

A most tasty salad, which is simple, cheap and easy to prepare is this:

Cabbage Salad.—Chop one small head of cabbage with one medium-sized onion. Fry a slice of salt pork cut into very small cubes, pour over the fat, reserving the browned cubes for garnishing the top of the salad. Season well with salt and pepper, and into the frying pan add a little vinegar; when boiling hot pour over the cabbage which has been well-mixed with the fat. The amount of fat and vinegar will be determined by the size or amount of cabbage used. The dressing should be enough to season and moisten well with none to drain away.

HOW

YELLOWED PIANO KEYS MAY BE MADE SIGHTLY.

There is nothing more unsightly than to have the white ivory keys on a piano turn yellow in spots, which is due to perspiration of the fingers in the summer time and to a slight oiliness of them in winter. An experimenter claims that he has found that the original whiteness can be restored by using a weak solution of nitric acid and water, says the New York World. Put one ounce of nitric acid and 12 ounces of soft or distilled water in a bottle having a rubber cork. If the latter is not handy, an ordinary cork dipped into melted paraffin wax will do.

Be sure to pour the acid very slowly into the water and stir it with a stick. Do not reverse this proceeding or the acid will fly up into your eyes. In using this solution, pour a little of it into a glass dish; then dip a brush into the liquid, wiping off the surplus on the edge of the dish.

If no brush is handy, tie a piece of cheesecloth on a stick and use that; in fact, cloth on a stick makes a very good brush for this work. Apply the solution sparingly to the stained keys, taking care that no acid get on the black keys or woodwork. Then rub the surface lightly with a piece of cheesecloth to remove the stain. Next wash off all acid with a piece of flannel dipped in clear water and wipe with a dry cloth.

CLING TO PRIMITIVE CUSTOM

How the Modern Arab Takes His Coffee, as Told by American Consular Official.

Coffee houses in Aden are crowded day and night, says Consul Raymond Davis in response to an inquiry from the Department of Commerce on the market for percolators, but they have shown no improvement in the methods of preparing cups that cheer but do not inebriate.

The Arabian method of coffee making, as described by the consul, requires the use of small clay mugs, made locally, which cost 6 to 12 annas each. In one corner of the shop a charcoal fire is kept burning and on it are placed the mugs containing water, powdered coffee and sometimes a little ginger and sugar to be brought to a boil. As soon as it comes to a boil the coffee is consumed, with or without sugar, and always without milk. The coffee-house price is one-half anna a mug. Patrons seem to be satisfied with this primitive method, and cafe proprietors say it would cause too much trouble and take too much time to familiarize the servants with the modern coffee machine.

How Temperature Affects Fish.

Fish are very quick to feel a change of temperature in their native element, and sudden cooling or heating of the water is very injurious to them.

A hot summer has been known to drive herring to find cooler waters at a distance. Some years ago a fearful storm raged along the eastern coast of North America. After it had subsided the sea was strewn with millions of fish, a fish like a cod, but attaining a weight of 50 pounds or more. A vessel was sent to discover the cause of the strange phenomenon. It plowed straight ahead for 150 miles and estimated that an area of 5,000 square miles was covered with dead fish. It was discovered that the storm had brought icebergs in its train, and the consequent great cold had proved too much for the fish, accustomed as they were to warmer waters. The cod has an objection to sudden changes of climate, and if put in colder water than that to which he is accustomed will be numbed. Experiments have been tried to acclimatize English salmon in Tasmania, but the difference in temperature has caused these experiments to fail.

How Fuel Supply May Be Increased.

Researches have been made in France with respect to the use of grape pommace as fuel. Moreover, attention has been invited to various kinds of material that might be used in this way to a good advantage, and the calorific power of which possesses considerable value. It has been found that grape pommace, when well dried, is an excellent fuel and has a good heating quality. In the researches mentioned, it was demonstrated that the substance dried at 115 degrees centigrade shows 4,400 calories.

It is also shown that as this substance has shown resemblance to dried peat, it can be used in suitable producer gases, and it has an advantage over peat in that it can be dried rapidly. Combustion allows of recovering most of the phosphorus compounds and potash contained in the ash, and only the nitrogen is lost. A ton of well dried pommace has the same heat value as 0.4 ton of coal. By this estimate the annual "ine production in France of 1,250,000,000 gallons represents at least 175,000 tons of coal, so that the interest of this application is considerable. Pommace of other fruits could no doubt be employed.

How to Sidestep Depression.

"Acquire an enthusiasm," advises some old writer. "You cannot be enthusiastic and unhappy at the same time."—Boston Evening Transcript.

WHY

Proper Study of Insect Life Is Important.

How far can flies travel, and what determines the direction of their flight? They have occasionally been reported many miles offshore; but in such instances it may have been the winds rather than their wings that were responsible for the long-distance transport. In the course of a series of investigations of insects affecting the health of man and animals, the bureau of entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture has sought definite knowledge regarding the question just raised. Thousands upon thousands of marked flies, notably the common house fly, screw-worm fly and the black blow fly, have been liberated, so as to ascertain the direction and speed of their travel. The maximum distance or speed from the point of release as recorded for the common house fly was 13.1 miles. The dispersion was in all directions from the point of liberation.

Modern progress in medicine has shown again and again how important a knowledge of the habits of insects is for human welfare in general and many public health problems in particular.

It is obviously futile to plan anti-fly or anti-mosquito campaigns with reference to small localities if the insects concerned can readily be disseminated from far beyond the boundaries of the places under control. Efforts to eliminate insect breeding places in order to relieve a particular region may be entirely nullified if neighboring breeding grounds are near enough to keep up the supply of the offending insect.

GUIDE SEARCHERS FOR HONEY

Why Some Flowers Have Far Greater Attractions for Bees Than Others of Like Species.

Do flowers use rays not visible to the human eye to attract insects to them? Certain insects can spot ultra-violet light that cannot be seen by man, and some blossoms, in addition to their ordinary brilliant hues, vary in the kind of short light rays that they emit.

Prof. F. K. Richtmeyer of Cornell university told the Optical Society of America, meeting at the bureau of standards in Washington recently, that these invisible rays may guide pollen-bearing insects to the flowers in their search for honey. Giving signals in rays shorter than the deepest violet that we can see brings the flowers the pollen that is necessary to it in producing seed. Experiments made by Professor Richtmeyer on Colorado flowers show that flowers apparently differ in their reflection of ultra-violet as much as in their visible colors.—Cleveland News-Leader.

How Game Is Being Exterminated.

A Loucheux Indian, trapping east of Macpherson, on the Arctic coast, caught 120 white foxes last winter, besides other game, which he shot or found in his fox traps. The foxes alone netted him $4,200, while a white trapper, C. Norberg, trapping at Baillie Island in the Arctic, came out with a catch of white foxes valued at $15,000. Charles Klinkenberg, a Dane, who has lived in the Arctic for 40 years, takes in 1,000 white fox pelts at this trading post yearly, and as white foxes are fashionable, and have increased in value from $10 to $50 within three years, the Arctic fox will soon be as scarce as the sable and sea otter.

Why He Missed the Train.

A certain absent-minded Stanford professor lived in the country and each day he commuted to the university, riding to and from the railroad station on his bicycle.

One afternoon, when his classes were finished, he started home, but being engrossed in deep thought, he forgot to mount his bicycle and walked to the station, a mile away, pushing it along at his side.

Arriving at the station he saw his train just pulling away from the platform.

"How exasperating," he exclaimed. "Had I not been bothered with this confounded bicycle I could have caught that train!"—Judge.

Why They Sympathized.

"The American boy is all right, after all," remarked the man who Sunday tried his skates for the first time after a long illness. He had been a good skater, but now was slow and awkward. A half dozen boys tore down the pond and stopped in front of him. "Just learning, mister?" asked one at the top of his voice. "Been sick," he replied. The boys held a consultation and offered to contribute their combined experience to help him learn to skate again. When the boys found out that his illness was caused by injuries suffered in France, in the World war, they held up instruction until they heard the story.—Detroit Free Press.

Flies Ninety Miles Without Pilot.

The pilotless airplane, with which the army air service has been experimenting for some months, recently made a number of successful flights of more than 90 miles. The automatic control, consisting of a gyroscope and an arrangement of bellows similar to those used in piano players, is said to be more accurate and dependable than a human pilot. The tests proved it was possible to drop bombs from this plane, on targets on or off the ground, with great accuracy.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Killed by Smothering and Exposure

FARMERS FIND TRAGEDY IN THEIR OWN FIELDS

There will be a terrible tragedy enacted in many a grain field in this country in the next few weeks.

Millions of grains of wheat, rye, barley, and oats will be drilled by careless old machinery and be smothered to death because they are buried too deep in the soil without any opportunity to respond to the warm touch of spring rains and sunshine. Other millions of kernels will be left on top of the ground, uncovered, to die of exposure in sun and wind.

It is a tragedy—for the farmer who owns the land and looks for a crop. Just take out your pencil for a moment. A bushel of wheat averages 600,000 grains. If you plant one bushel to the acre and every grain makes one stalk and head, you will have an average of nine meshes per head with two grains per mesh. That makes 18 grains per head or 18 new grains for every one planted.

BUT—every grain should have three to 15 stools which produce full heads. If you got only three stools, you would have three times 18 or 54 bushels per acre from one bushel of seed; four stools would give you 72 bushels.

Do you get it? No—the U. S. average is 13 bushels; the farmer who gets 30 bushels is exceptional. What is the matter? You are killing your seed by smothering and exposure. You need a Moline Monitor Grain Drill—the best that any farmer can buy.

Unless you plant right, you cannot reap. It takes just as many bushels to pay for raising the crop, regardless of the harvest. If you want profits—"velvet" when threshing is over, let us show you our Moline Line.

ALSO—we can save you money under "The Moline Plan" which cuts out waste in implement distribution and passes the savings on to you.

The Cost of Telephone Service

Telephone service has become of such universal use as to justify it as one of the various items which go to make up the household's budget.

That its cost has not mounted to the extent of the other items is shown by the following comparison of per cent increases in costs throughout the United States since the year 1914, taken from the reports of the National Industrial Conference Board.

	Per Cent Over 1914
	1920	1922
House Rents .....	58	65
Clothing .....	166	53
Fuel .....	66	81
Sundries .....	85	72
Food .....	119	40
Maryland Telephone Rates..	23	23

This table shows that in 1920, the period of highest prices, the increase in the cost of telephone service over 1914 was less than a fourth of the average increase in the cost of the other items; and now, with prices largely stabilized, the increase is less than one-third of the increase in the other items.

The usefulness of the telephone service to the patron in a city, town or community depends largely upon the number of persons with whom he may communicate; in other words, the value of telephone service increases as the number of telephones increases.

In some places in Maryland since 1914, the number of telephones has increased as high as 100%; in the entire state the increase has been 53%. In other words, the increase in the value of the telephone service to the user in Maryland has greatly exceeded the increase in our rates.

TANEYTOWN LOCALS

Brief Items of Local News of Special Interest to Our Home Readers.

Harry B. Miller is recovering from his recent attack of very serious illness.

Robert R. Fair, of Baltimore, spent Sunday, with his mother, Mrs. Daniel H. Fair.

Richard S. Hill is visiting his daughter, Mrs. Conover, at Centre Mills, Pa.

Mrs. Theo. M. Buffington is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Lurie I. Yohe, of Baltimore.

Fern Weaver and mother, of Baltimore, were visitors to town, the first of this week.

The health of the town and community is now about normal, for this season of the year.

Charles D. Bankard has returned home from Springfield Hospital, where he had been under treatment.

The Basehoar & Kump store-room is now occupied by Harris Brothers, with a stock of general merchandise.

Clearview School under the direction of their teacher, Miss Mary Ohler will give an entertainment and social, on Friday evening, April 6, 1923.

Baltimore Street needs several complete sweepings. We do not have the old-time mud, but a "Spry cleaning" is just as much needed as it ever was.

For ages we have heard the expression—"Life is uncertain." True! But, in Taneytown just now the word "light" can be used instead of "life," with equal truthfulness.

Rev. A. Stewart Hartman, who preached in the Lutheran Church, last Sunday, taught school in Taneytown, over 50 years ago. The only one of his former pupils that he recognized in his audience, was Burgess S. Miller.

A children's public play ground would be a fine thing for Taneytown. It would cost something, but, it would be worth a lot. Usually, Taneytown is a tail-ender in such projects, but Taneytown has a big lot to learn, in some ways.

Wm. H. Flickinger sold 20 acres of land along the State Road to Paul Formwalt, for $200.00 per acre. Mr. Formwalt will erect buildings on the land, likely this summer. Mr. Formwalt is to be congratulated on securing this very desirable tract.

Last week, we again ran out of extra copies of The Record. We can never tell how strong the demand will be for extras—sometimes as deaths takes a lot of them. The safest plan for regular buyers, is to subscribe for a term, and be sure.

The many friends of Miss Eileen Schwartz were sorry to hear of her sudden death at Springfield Hospital, on Tuesday. Before her mental disturbance she was one of the most popular young ladies of Taneytown. See regular death notice elsewhere.

In early Spring the young man's fancy naturally turns to baseball; and as the back lots are soggy, the temptation is strong to play on the street. But, there is a town ordinance against street ball playing, in the interest of public safety, and it should be observed.

Curtis Eckard and wife entertained on Sunday: Henry Eckard, wife and daughters, Jessie and Grace, and son Clinton, all of Baltimore; Walter Eckard, wife and son, Ralph; Charles Eckard, wife and daughters, Helen and Edna, and sons, Earl and Roy, and Miss Bessie Welty, of Detour, and Blanche Eckard.

The Telephone Co., will give another exhibition, this Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at Shriner's Theatre, under the auspices of the Parent-Teachers' Association. There will be no admission charge, but an offering will be taken. The pictures will be along the line of the former one given by this Company, but different. The public generally is invited.

New Windsor appears to want the State Road Commission to take over the streets of the town that would connect up state road ends, thereby building an improved street for the town at the expense of the state. Our advice to the New Windsor folks is, that the proposition is not the glittering prospect it seems to be. At any rate, it will be wise to investigate the whole matter very completely before turning over the streets to the state. Taneytown did not do this—and paid heavily for it.

During the service, candles, with one exception, are extinguished to remind us of the desertion of Christ by the apostles and disciples. When all the lights have been extinguished, the 50th Psalm is recited as an earnest of our grief at the death of Christ. The noise made is to recall the upheaval suffered by nature at the death of its Author, while the return to its place of the only candle remaining alight signifies the Resurrection of Christ.

Campbor & Hydrastis Fine For Sore Eyes

It is surprising how QUICK eye inflammation is helped by campbor, hydrastis, witchhazel, etc., as mixed in Lavoptik eye wash. One lady whose eyes were weak and watery for three years was helped AT ONCE. Another case of red, inflamed eyes was also benefited. One small bottle Lavoptik usually helps ANY CASE sore, weak or inflamed eyes. Aluminum eye cup FREE. R. S. McKinney, Druggist.

Remembered.

Blinks, after inviting his friend Jinks to dinner, was telling him about the remarkable memory of his little son Bobby.

"And do you think he will remember me?" asked Jinks.

"Remember you? Why, certainly he will."

An hour later they entered the house, and after Jinks had greeted Mrs. Blinks, he called Bobby over to him.

"And do you remember me, my little man?"

"Course I do. You're the man that pa brought home last year, and ma was so wild about it that she didn't speak to pa for a week."—Mobile Register.

Back Yards.

Our house front may be shining with varnish and with paint, Our windows all may glisten in the sun;

We may sweep and dust and clean till ready 'most to faint, And hang up brand new curtains one by one;

But if our back yard's cluttered with rubbish and with dirt, Soiled milk bottles and old tomato cans, Our neighbors, when they look from their windows, may be hurt

By a view of broken glass and rusty pans.

A beautiful green lawn is a charming sight to see, With robin redbreast tripping here and there,

But if the weeds are carried back and thrown down carelessly In great untidy heaps our neighbors stare

And make unkind remarks about the nice effect and grunt At the way things in our back yard appear;

They care little how we beautify our property in front, If it's full of piles of rubbish in the rear.

"Always put your best foot foremost," grandmother used to say, And maybe to a great extent that's true;

But we ought to move the other foot as fast along the way, With no worn spots or run down heels to view.

"Love your neighbor as yourself" is a better rule today, For you'd like him to assist you in your plans;

But your neighbor will not love you, and will look the other way, If your back yard's full of dirt and old tin cans.

The Pneumonia Month.

March is a typical pneumonia month and usually gives a high rate of mortality for the disease. After a long and hard winter the system loses much of its resistance and people grow careless. When every cold, no matter how slight, is given prompt and intelligent attention, there is much less danger of pneumonia. It should be borne in mind that pneumonia is a germ disease and breeds in the throat. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is an expectorant and cleans out the germ laden mucus and not only cures a cold but prevents its resulting in pneumonia. It is pleasant to take. Children take it willingly.
