LAW ENFORCEMENT IN MARYLAND

Anti-Saloon League Campaign to 'Influence Legislature.

The Maryland Anti-Saloon League is prosecuting a campaign in order to bring influence on the Maryland legislature to enact liquor law enforcement legislation. A number of ad-dresses were delivered in the Frederick churches, last Sunday, along this lines. Dr. Crabbe spoke in the M. E.

Church, and said in part;
"The liquor traffic we are fighting has neither conscience, honor nor heart, and for this reason we are forced to use drastic measures to combat it. Progress has been made in this fight. Some time ago the wets were demanding both beer and light wines. They have now found that light wines are a mistake and are asking only for beer."

Dr. Crabbe was shamefully regretful that of all of the states of the union Maryland was one of the which was, as he expressed it, "allied with the bootlegger and lawlessness.' Not to enact and enforce legislation supporting the Eighteenth Amendment, said Dr. Crabbe, was linking Maryland with "bootleggers and murderers."

New York, said Dr. Crabbe, was the sole state in the Union which had repealed enforcement legislation after once having adopted it. He pointed to Massachusetts with pride as being a state, although without con-current prohibition legislation, which had adopted enforcement measures, "realizing," he said, "that not to back up the Constitution of the United States would be to line up with crime and criminals."

Speaking of the purposes of the Anti-Saloon League, Dr. Crabbe said that the organization was now preparing to gather about it the support of the entire state for the purpose of forcing Maryland to enact enforcement legislation. "We are," he said, "no longer dealing with the saloon, but with a gang of outlaws. The saloon has passed. In this place has come the lawless element, an element which this state allows to exist. Pennsylvania has an enforcement governor and Legislature. I predict it will not be long until we in Maryland elect such an enforcement governor and Legislature.'

Dr. Crabbe said that there was a tremendous wave of enforcement sentiment coming out of the West. He said the Eighteenth Amendment is now more firmly entrenched in the life of the American people than at any time in its history.

In speaking of the type of liquor beotleggers are selling throughout the nation, Dr. Crabbe said that of o samples of con fiscated liquor, but two percent was what it was represented to be.

A detailed program for Federal and State action with respect to more stringent enforcement of prohibition is being prepared by President Harding for supmission to a conference of Governors at the White House before the Executive leaves for Alaska on

The first conference of Governors having been largely an exchange of ideas which brought few tangible results, the President intends that the second session shall produce positive measures. It was learned that the President was fully determined to take an extreme stand on the side of enforcement. It was expected that his statement before the Governors would go further even than his recent letter to a New York man. The forthcoming conference, it was said, would leave no doubt as to where the President stands relative to the strictest form of obedience to the Constitution and the enactments of Congress and the Leg-

Proceedings of the Orphans' Court.

An Immense Crowd in Taneytown, and a Fine Program.

Taneytown had an immense crowd of visitors, on Decoration Day, but one of the smallest parades it has ever had. Evidently, lodge members and others, who were invited to parade, left that duty largely to a few of the older members, the young men being largely conspicuous by their absence. The children, however, made a good showing.

After the decoration of graves in the three cemeteries, an excellent program was rendered in the Opera House. Rev. G. Wilbur Shipley pre-sided. Rev. W. C. Wachter, delivered a brief invocation, following music by the Taneytown Band; the singing of "America" followed; prayer by Rev. L. B. Hafer; solos by Rev. M. E. Ness; Rev. Shipley made an appropriate introductory for Rev. C. F. Sanders, who was the orator of the day. The address was a masterpiece, being based on the importance of maintaining the American spirit exemplified by some of our early patriots, and by President Lincoln. The audience was both pleased and instructed by his masterly presentation of sterling truths and facts.

The program closed with a piano solo "Armistice Day Forever" by Miss Anna Galt; the Star Spangled Banner and Benediction by Prof. Sanders.

President J. M. Henry delivered the Baccalaureate sermon on Sunday evening to a crowded house. Dr. Henry selected for his subject, "Christ's challenge to manhood." Selecting his text from Luke 9:62. The speaker was at his best and many pronounced it as a masterly discourse with a ringing appeal to the young men and young women in making the right choice in life.

One of the outstanding features of the commencement program was the Senior play entitled "Daddy Long-Legs." More than 500 people attended the play. It was a comedy possessing high moral and social tone. The players acquitted themselves in a most creditable manner.

At the close of the program President Henry announced the faculty for next year. Four new members are added, Prof. L. H. Brumbaugh of the University of Chicago will head the Department of History and Social Science, formerly held by Miss Carrie Hastings who is granted a leave of absence to attend University. Ruth Leyse will head the Home Economics Department and act as Dean of the women. Miss Leyse is a graduate of Columbia University and sails June 20 for an extended trip to Europe. Prof. I. M. Wagenman and Miss Hettye Myers are added to the staff of the Preparatory School. The President also announced that the beautiful home of C. D. Bonsack had been purchased and will be used for some of the departments. The outlook for a large attendance next session is reported, as a result of the state-wide campaign for new stu-

Woman's Course.

A rural woman's short course is to be held at the University of Maryland from June 18 to 22, inclusive.

The cost of the course will be traveling expenses and $2.00 for maintenance while at the University. It will be necessary to bring two sheets, one pillow case, and blankets for your cot, If you do not want to bring them with you, send them to me by parcel post by June 10 and they will be here when you arrive. Also bring with you notebook and pencil, apron, thimble,

FREDERICK MAN INDICTED FOR DEATH

Martinsburg School Boy Killed by Being Struck by Auto.

Martinsburg, W. Va,,May 30.—William R. Brightwell, of Frederick, Md., was charged with the death of 7-yearold Kenneth Kneisley, a schoolboy, by the coroner's jury which conducted a hearing here last night and found the lad had been killed Monday afternoon just north of the city by "being struck by an automobile driven by William R. Brightwell, who was evidently in an intoxicated condition.'

The jury also found Reno Austin Six, of Frederick, a chauffeur for Brightwell, an accessory after the fact to the death of the lad. Both Brightwell and Six are being held in jail here to answer a half-dozen charges arising from the fatal acci-The State has not indicated what degree of murder it will charge against Brightwell.

Witnesses at the hearing included Richard Steffey and Arthur C. Burns, this city, whose car was brushed aside by the onrushing car just before it hit the boy; Constable Nolan C. The question of whether Brightwell or Six was driving the car when it hit the boy, on which hung the question of who was the principal and who the accessory, was settled in the minds of the jury when Charles Brown said he saw the car stop an eighth of a mile beyond the point of the accident, and the two exchanged seats at the wheel. Six was at the wheel when it was finally taken into custody, and from these two facts it was concluded Brightwell must have been driving when the lad was killed.

Constable Orndorff said he sped after the fleeing car when told by the other officers, who had been called on tween Blue Ridge and Washington the case, and finally overtook them within hailing distance of the Potowithin hailing distance of the Potomac river. Cambridge Bars Sunday Excursion.

Sunday excursion boats, from Baltimore, will no longer be permitted to land at Cambrdge, by action of the city council. An excursion, last Sunday, was so disorderly, that the city authorities have taken this action. Destroying flower gardens, drinking, and other frolicksome personal liberty stunts were indulged in.

The ordinance. Mayor Orem explained only applies to excursion boats coming from ports within the State and not to those from ports in other states, the status of the latter being governed by the interstate commerce

While this is said to have been the first time that decided action has been taken by residents of Cambridge to out a stop to Sundav excursionists landing there, the feeling against such visitors, it is said, has been growing for many years.

COUNTY C. E. CONVENTION. An Inspiring Program Rendered.

Keysville Church, Next Year.

The thirty-second annual one-day convention of the Carroll County Christian Endeavor Union, with delegates present from most of the Protestant churches of the county, was in session on Tuesday, at the Church of God, Carrollton. Morning, afternoon and evening devotional services were conducted by the Rev. J. L. Masemore, of Carrollton; A. G. Wolf, of Silver Run, and J. N. Link, of Smallwood. Carroll county speakers, who dur-ing the day discussed devotional and practical topics, were Merwyn C. Fuss, Miss Eva Logue, Paul Lawyer, Miss Ethel Fuhrman, George Mather, Rev. J. H. Lehman and Geo. R. Smith. Speakers of national or State reputation who had places on the program were State President J. Henry Frick; Carroll M. Wright, State Secretary; Spencer E. Sisco, Dr. Wilson T. M. Beale, Edward S. Hopkins, Rev. Dr. David Hughes, and Rev. E. A. Sex-

Mrs. Elsie Ebaugh Evans conducted the junior endeavor rally service, with an address by State Junior Superintendent, George R. Smith.

The following officers for the coming year, were elected; President, Merwyn C. Fuss, Taneytown; Vice-President, Miss Eva Logue, Deer Park; Secretary, Miss Mary Ohler, Taneytown; Temperance Supt., Mrs. Herbert Richardson, Woodbine; Missionary Supt., Mrs. A. G. Wolf, Silver Run; Junior Supt., Miss Hattie Wil-let, Westminster; Alumni Supt., Frank Stewart, Westminster; Pastoral Counsellor, Rev. J. N. Link, Deer Park.

The Convention of 1924 will be held in Keysville Lutheran Church, the invitation having been extended last

President Fuss on taking his office, made a number of suggestions for the coming year, among which was that of the formation of town, or local unions, where there are several societies, one of which has been formed in Taneytown. The object is, greater cooperation, union programs and general increase in C. E. interest.

President Harding, on Peace.

On Decoration Day, President Harding, standing before the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery, and within sight of the graves of the Nation's dead of other wars, voiced his belief in America's "God-given duty" to work for the outlawing of war.

"I devoutly wish the United States to do its full part toward making war unlikely, if not impossible," said the President. "While I would abhor a pacifist America, I would rejoice to have the United States proven to be unafraid and yet the most peace-loving and the foremost peace-promoting naton in all the world. We have already proven we can have less armament. Let us strive for the assurance that we shall have none of war.

"It is not enough to seek assurance for ourselves. I believe it a God-given duty to give of our influence to establish the ways of peace throughout the world. We cannot guarantee, but we can promote, the peaceful adjustment of disputes; we can aid in the establishment of the agencies of peace; we can be influential in committing the world to the triumphs of peace and make hateful to humankind the spoils of war."

In his expression of the gratitude the Nation must always have for the men who made the sacrifices of war, the President gave a solemn promise that if war did come, the resources of the country, its money, its business and its labor will be conscripted along with its young manhood to make common sacrifice.

"God grant that no conflict will densed Milk Week, and everybody is come again," declared the President, asked to give Borden's Condensed "but if it does come it will be without profit to non-combatant participants except as they share in the triumphs of the Nation.

More Auto Licenses This Year.

With seven months more of 1923 to come, the office of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles has already issued nearly as many automobile licenses for 1923 as it issued for the entire year of 1922.

Records at the office of Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Baughman show that licenses for 177,772 automobiles were issued last year. Until May 1 of this year the records show that 156,-198 licenses have been issued. By the end of next week it is predicted that this total would be increased by approximately 20,000.

The gross receipts from sales of the various licenses issued by the automobile commissioner until May 1 of this year total $2,525.771.35. the entire 12 months of last year the total was $2,824,843.91.

PLAN TO IMPROVE COAL SITUATION.

A Review that Promises Success if All Co-operate.

Officials of the Interstate Commerce Commission, are convinced that they have discovered the solution to the coal problem. Mr. Potter, a member of the Commission says;

"Now, our theory is simply this: If the carriers could arrange to haul 15,000,000 tons of coal a week for a sustained period, thus offering facilities which would be more than adequate to meet the demands, we believe that coal prices would decline, that the weaker mines would be forced to close, that the over-development of the industry would be eradicated, and that the surplus of labor would be forced into other industries where it is urgently needed.

"This might result in driving the first wedge in the vicious circle. With a reduction of about $1.50 a ton in coal, the nation's fuel bill would be lessened about $900,000,000, and of this latter amount, about $200,000,000 would represent the saving to the

"After much study we have reached the conclusion that the weakest point in the vicious circle that sustains high costs of living is to be found in the coal industry. Reduce the cost of coal and you have cheaper coke and cheaper pig iron, both of which in turn, reduce the cost of other products. But more important, reduce the cost of coal and you reduce the cost of transportation, a result which should bring about reductions in the prices of practically every commodity.

"Now, why have we reached the conclusion that the coal industry is the weakest link in our vicious circle? Because that industry has been expanded to meet a demand at least twice as large as that which actually exists. There is twice as large an invested capital in our coal mines as is needed to produce all the coal that the market calls for.

"Likewise, there is twice as large a supply of labor sustained by that industry as is necessary to produce enough coal to meet every demand. This, of course, means that the profit in the coal business has to be figured on the basis of twice the cost the investment really needed; of at least twice the labor cost, and at least twice the maintenance and depreciation costs that would actually be needed if the industry was placed in a position to operate full time.

"In 1910 and 1911 the wage paid for common labor in the mining industry was about $1.25 a day, and it cost the operator 65, 75 or 80 cents place a ton of his product on the cars. Now common labor in the mines is getting $7 and $8 a day and the cost to the operator for placing each ton of coal on the cars is approximate-

"The difficulty in the situation is that the miners are idle a large part of the time. They do not make much, if any, more annually than other forms of common labor, but they have a lot more idle time. This results directly from the fact that the coal industry is over-manned as well as overdeveloped in other lines."

Condensed Milk Week.

Is the life of a little child worth a can of milk, Every resident of this county will be given an opportunity to answer this during the week of June 4 to 10.

This week, June 4 to 10, has been set by the Near East Relief as Conasked to give Borden's Condensed Milk for the starving children for whom the relief organization is car-

The Near East Relief has set this date in response to the call for con-densed milk sent by those in the field, 12,000 cases are needed in one area alone, that in the Caucasus. And this is only one of the sections under the relief organization.

The call is for condensed milk because it can be shipped easily and keeps well. It is food in a condensed form, easily handled and most nourishing. It is especially suited to little ones and it is for these, 200,000 of them, that it is asked. These are children who have no one to care for them, who will literally starve to death unless Maryland does its share in helping by sending condensed milk. But besides these, there are 120,000 orphans in the orphanages under care of the Near East Relief who must be fed regularly. It is for these, children inside and outside of the orphanages, for whom the milk is asked,

Maryland's quota is three carloads Give a can, that will help. But don't stop at that, give a half dozen, a dozen, a case. Order Borden's Condensed Milk through your grocer for the Near East Relief. Borden's matches, can for can. Every can will help in getting the state's quota. Harold F Pellegrin, state director, believes the response will be so generous that Maryland will give over its quota. MR. HEARST ON POLITICS.

Says Republican Party Will Meet Defeat for Presidency.

The Baltimore News, Monday evening, printed an interview with William Randolph Hearst, of New York, on his making a brief visit to New Orleans. This interview, on the political situation, is of interest to Marylanders due to the fact that Mr. Hearst owns the Baltimore American, Rent Profiteering in Detroit.

According to a news dispatch from Detroit, Mich., property owners there are profiteering in the matter of rents, thereby "getting theirs" out of the easy-money big wages paid. Partly as a protest, and partly from ne-cessity, hundreds of families are liv-ing in tents, in the Grand River, district, thus creating a small city. The report says;

Rents in many parts of the city have almost doubled within the last month. This especially is true of modest workingmen's homes, according to officials of the city welfare department, who daily are being besieged by scores of persons ejected from their homes because they could not meet the rent advances of from $35 to $65 and $75 a month.

Refusal of landlords to rent their places to families with children still further complicates matters, welfare officers say. Many of those who have joined the tent colony have planted

Waiting for Prices to Come Down.

The whole country is creating a big unsupplied demand-a sort of appetite-for a great many things-waiting for "prices to some down." Hundreds of thousands of buildings, and extensive additions and repairs, are on the waiting shelf. The same is and improvements of hundreds of sorts. But, if this time of lower costs should come, then what?

In the present conditions of labor scarcity, the wanted buildings could wrench into the works. not be erected because of lack of help. The machinery could not be bought, because it is not yet made. The fact is, the postponed anticipations, if left loose, would merely start another upward rise. So, it isn't so much lower prices that we want, as equalized prices-prices on a fixed basis that are equal, and will stay fixed and equal, for all classes.

It is the continuous agitation of uncertainity, the instability of things, the hold-ups and forced demands, that are making the whole country a gambling shop. What we want, is a sharp and certain stopping point, and a settling down to sensible business. The animals with their feet in the trough, the agitators for robbery, the use of force in taking advantage of necessity, must be known as acts of criminality, and punished as such. We must have industrial decency and peace, and a square deal for just common, unorganized, honest American citizens. Waiting for things to "come down," then not being able to get them, is no solution to our needs.

Fruitless Complaining.

We may disagree with the doctors; but if we do, then what? This applies in a large number of situations. Mere disagreement, without offering something better, is poor recourse. Stating it another way, if our experts are not to be depended on, how can we follow the laity—the men who possess only superficial knowledge, and likely only personal interest?

This is not argument in favor of always taking what is handed out to us, but it calls for a reconstructive, rather than a merely objecting, policy, on the part of the general public. Even a large following of mere objectors, is not a safe crowd to follow. There are experts and experts, and some must be followed, or we go nowhere. The average law, or policy denouncer, is more or less an ignoramus; if not in his opinions, then in his lack of pursuing the sort of leadership that leads to something bet-

One may instinctively have a wise opinion, but unless he is qualified to elaborate on it, explain it, and crystallize a movement back of it, his to outline, enact, and carry into good idea is valueless; because no community ought to want to be merely obstructive and remain at a standstill. For instance, we may complain of school taxes, and road expenditures, but unless we get together an organization, or a following, with definite constructive and improved plans, our complaints are

We must not only build a new policy, but we must take it into court. Laws are not made on street corners, nor in newspaper articles, nor even in voting haphazard against men in cause it has always been a governoffice who come up for re-election. When we testify, we must have positive evidence; and when we knock down and drag out, we must bring in place of it something better and more wanted. And this is a job requiring time, work, and good sense-effective co-operation from the foundations of things up, at a time-and in plenty of time-for the effort to count.

When we complain of conditions existing because of legislative enactments, the point of beginning is not in the legislature, but in the electing a legislature to be. If we let that is, stop our feeble knocking and take to have our public energies wasted in at the right time. The doctors that prescribe for us-and we helped to give them their commission.

Senator Borah has Plans.

The irrepressible, always-ready-tofight, Senator Borah, will present measures at the next session of Congress, aimed particularly against fuel and freight rate situations, and profiteering in the necessaries of life. He

"It is safe to say these measures will be denounced as radical. They may, or may not be found to constiventure to say to those who may ppose them, they should be ready to offer substitute remedies. The pres ent conditions are intolerable. They cannot be permitted to continue.'

Radical, or not, even those who do not admire the Idaho Senator's propensity for objecting to a long string | of governmental policies, will be inclined to listen to him this time, because, as he says, "the present conditions are intolerable," and evidently need rough handling to set them anything like right. There is no doubt about it, there must be a real fight, and somebody must be badly hurt, before the evils that have fastened themselves on the whole country are made to let loose.

As Senator Borah says, if his proposals do not furnish a solution, it true of machinery, plant equipments, is up to somebody to furnish something better. Pussy-footing over a scared about, must stop, and Borah may be the man to throw the monkey

3%___ Extreme, if True.

We clip the following from the Dearborn Independent;

"An editorial from the National Republican recently was commented on and criticised by a writer in the Country Gentleman. The Washington paper announced a rejoinder, and at once received a letter from managing editor of the Philadelphia paper that the contents of the Country Gentleman are protected by copyright, and quotations from them will be considered an infringement. Hence the reply by the Republican to an attack upon its view is impossible." If the above is strictly correct, it presents a novel stiuation. The County Gentleman can comment, on and reproduce, non-copyrighted articles from other journals, yet invoke the law on such as exercise the same privilege with articles appearing in the former.

We think the C. G. must be misrepresented in the matter in some way, as common fairness demands that a privilege exercised by one, should likewise be accorded to another, within the publishing fraternity. Expressing an opinion, then considering a reply to it an "infringement," would be setting a mark that could hardly be sustained in law-copyright, or no

Loyalty to Party.

This is a government of parties because it is a government of the people. Parties are the medium through which the people speak. They are the instrumentalities through which the people work.

The alternatives to party government in this country are one-man government, on the one hand, and political chaos on the other. Those who would destroy party loyalty and break down party solidarity and responsibility would destroy the only system of popular and responsible government we have. They are seeking to replace it with irresponsible government by cliques, factions and groups.

The inaction, indecision and instability which marks European governments today are largely due to the fact that in those governments there is no one party sufficiently virile to maintain itself in power long enough practice any well-defined policy. European governments are at the mercy of groups and blocs which are continually making new coalitions to serve the opportunity of the moment. Ruling ministries exist only by sufferance of those blocs, and in order to continue in power are compelled from day to day to make concessions and compromises which are dictated wholly by expediency instead of consideration for public welfare.

The United States has builded wisely and safely and substantially bement of strong political parties, a government in which the right of the majority party to rule was recognized. The United States has progressed as a government because minori ties, instead of trying to break down responsibility of majority parties, were disposed to hold the majority party to strict accountability for carrying out its pledges. We have progressed as a nation because we have been unusually free from attempts at factional government.

A war weary world just beginning to recover from the moral and economic shock of the most terrible struggle recorded in all human history thus far has been groping for the path that leads to peace, progress and an enduring prosperity.

Men of broad vision have believed that only through co-operation and a spirit of fair compromise for a great common good is the pathway of peace open to the nation. Yet today the world faces the threat of a renewed conflict more terrible possibly than that through which it has passed.

In a state of nature the strong prey upon the weak. The whole course of human history, so far as it has contributed to the progress of mankind as a whole, has been a struggle away from the rule or false might makes right.

Men have discovered that in the long run the rule of might is an economic side, rather than as a result of an awakened conscience, men early learned to set up judges and, later on, crude tribunals of justice, to which their irreconcilable differences were referred. Men found it more profitable to plant corn and wheat than to spend their time beating one another into submission. Out of these crude tribunals have evolved modern courts of Crossing the Sahara.

A wireless message received here from the Citroen caterpillar motor-car expedition which is crossing the Sarousing response in every part of the hara, states that after two days' rest the party left Insalah at dawn on December 24, and by December 28, when the message was sent, had reached the foothills of the Hoggar mountain district. The next stage will be the most difficult of all, the passage of the Tanezruft, or "region of thirst," says a Paris dispatch to the London Times.

> From Insalah the cars passed through great winds. The tracks of caravans which were followed by the party were marked here and there by the dead bodies of camels. BLACKHEAD IS MOST DEADLY

When Disease Appears Afflicted Members of Flock Should Be isolated for Treatment.

The most dangerous and deadly disease that afflicts turkeys is known as blackhead. It is so called because its one outward distinguishing characteristic is that in mature turkeys the heads turn dark. Only the heads of turkeys too young to show red do not turn black. Inside the fowl, one will discover if a post-mortem is held, the liver will be enlarged and spotted, and the large colon will usually be empty while the small one is often crammed with a hard substance.

As soon as this disease puts in its appearance, the afflicted members of the flock should be removed for separate care. Use air-slaked lime, or any convenient disinfectant, freely about roosts and feeding place. In the mash fed to turkeys three to four months old mix thoroughly one tablespoonful of oil of turpentine to each 20 well fowls. Increase the dose gradually to two tablespoonfuls. After a week cease, but begin at once upon reappearance of the disease. Use a proportionate amount for younger turkeys.

Blackhead, unless caught in its very early stages, is usually fatal and only the stoutest poults will recover. The sick fowls require a great deal of attention and in addition to the turpentine in soft food recommended above for the well fowls, the sick ones should have a daily dose of two or three drops of turpentine to each fowl in a small amount of bran and meal mash. The sick ones should be fed forcibly if they decline to eat, and should not be allowed much water to drink. For an infected old turkey, give a tablespoonful of olive oil every few days in addition to the turpentine.

Some say that blackhead is not a communicable disease in so far as one fowl will "catch" it from another. However, the germs live a long time, whether in infected soil, coops, fixtures er what not. Often blackhead is a disease of captivity, of management, or of improper feeding. Improper feeding, in the average case, means everfeeding. The feeding of turkeys must be regarded merely as supplementary to what is obtained on the range and the amount should be regulated accordingly.

PLANNING FOR FALL PULLETS

It is Well to Figure on at Least Five Eggs for Every Fowl Going Into Laying House.

How many pullets are you planning

At this time of the year, according to W. H. Allen, exten in poultry husbandry of the New Jersey state agricultural college, every poultryman should start planning for the number of pullets that he expects to put into the laying quarters next November.

Too often the poultryman finds when he goes to fill his house with pullets. that he has not the number that he needs to fill it, and as a result often carries over too many hens which will not pay him nearly as well from a market egg standpoint as good early hatched pullets.

If one is hatching his own eggs, it is well to count on at least five eggs for every pullet that is to go in the laying house. Figuring on the expectation of a 50 per cent hatch and also on the assumption that for every pullet that is hatched there will be one cockerel, it will take four eggs for every pullet that is hatched.

From records kept by poultrymen a 10 to 20 per cent mortality is to be expected in rearing the pullets; therefore, a good poultryman figures five to six eggs for every bird that is to be put in the laying house the next

POULTRY HINTS

Early to rise and late to roostthat's a good hen.

If you expect the best results in raising chicks, do not use pullet eggs.

Newly-hatched chicks should not have any feed for 36 hours after hatching, and in most cases 48 hours is better.

A good concentrate or egg mash for hens is suggested as follows: One hundred pounds cornmeal. 100 pounds wheat bran, 100 pounds wheat middlings, 100 pounds gluten feed, 100 pounds meat scrap.

A sick hen may be faded like a good layer, but she will lack the vigor shown by a good layer.

A chicken preyed upon by parasites has poor chances to make anything of itself. Blood-sucking insects sap its very life.

If you have no incubator and must use hens for hatching, always choose the gentle hens for mothers of your flock. Put the floppers and all excitable hens in the pen and break them from sitting.

WHY =Research Into Oldtime Civilizations Is Interesting

An American engineer claims to have found two buried cities at the foot of a volcano in Mexico. The cities lie one above the other, separated by a deposit of volcanic matter 60 feet thick. Both towns were peopled by pyramid builders, the peaks of these structures of the older city rising through the lava which covers their bases. The upper town contains some well-carved idols.

Such a find shows again how little is known of the civilization of the western hemisphere prior to the coming of Columbus. The engineer who found these ruins believes that the oldest of them must date back several thousand years. Very likely he is

One hopes that the report will be followed up by systematic exploration, and also that research in the old world will not be allowed to slacken just because the newspapers no longer are carrying front-page stories of King Tut. The civilization of Mexico and Peru, wonderful as they were, died without leaving descendants. Our own culture is derived from the old world, directly from Rome and Greece, more distantly from Egypt, Palestine and Chaldea, with roots reaching back to the Cro-Magnon caves. Researches in such a field never will lack inter-

PROTEST BURNING OF PAPER

Why the Backyard Bonfire Should Be Ended Is Explained by Writer in Thrift Magazine.

At certain times of the year the rummaging of attics and basements yields a harvest of "discards" that are a perpetual problem for housecleaners.

The junk dealers, the back-yard bonfires and other orthodox outlets for rubbish are often selected indiscriminately. The bonfire is a line of least resistance, but is becoming less popular among housecleaners who have been inoculated with the virus of thrift. The waste of debris that has a cash value reaches a colossal yearly aggregate.

For instance, the paper industry of the United States now utHizes millions of tons of waste paper in the manufacture of new paper. This fact, standing alone, may not excite much interest. But when it is added that the biggest problem of the American paper industry is the shortage of waste paper, we arrive at a new conception of the economic waste of bonfires.

A writer in Thrift Magazine goes further, and says that to save waste paper is to save the forests. Every ton of waste paper used in the paper mills means just so much of our forest resources saved for the future.

Why Proverbs Are Preserved. Proverbs existed before books. The Spaniards date their "sayings of old wives by their firesides," before the existence of any writings in their language, from the circumstance that these are in old romance or rudest vulgar idiom.

Undoubtedly proverbs in the earliest ages long served as the unwritten language of morality, as useful arts. Like the old traditions of the Jews, they floated down from age to age on the lips of successive generations. The name of the first sage who sanctioned the saying would in time be forgotten, while the opinion, the metaphor, or the expression remained, consecrated into a proverb. Such was the origin of those memorable sentences by which men learned to think and speak appositely; they were precepts which no man could contradict, at a time when authority was valued more than opinion, and experience preferred to a novelty, says Isaac Disraeli in his "Curiosities of Literature."

How Style Follows Style.

The present popularity of Paisley shawls and designs is merely the repetition of a fad which was started in Europe over a hundred years ago by Empress Josephine. However, the vogue of the Paisley shawl extends still further back in history, says Gertrude Linnell in an article on Kashmir shawls in the Mentor.

The Paisley is merely a machinemade European imitation of the shawls woven by hand in the vale of Kashmir for over two thousand years. In fact, in the days of the Caesars, Kashmir shawls were seen on the streets of the Roman empire.

It is intended for labeling or any other kind of The wheel is about three inches high and has arranged about its rim the alphabet, numbers and punctuation marks. Protruding from the center on the left side is a small knob for turning the wheel, while a spring on the other side runs to a metal brace which holds the wheel in its perpendicular position, shows just where the letter is to strike, and serves as a rest for the hand used in the operation of the device.

IN A LIBRARY

My library,
Was dukedom large enough.
—Shakespeare.

ONCE upon a time young women, unmarried, were enjoined by sticklers on behavior not to visit public libraries or picture galleries or museums unless they were accompanied by a chaperon or escort of some sort -that is, unless they were forced to do so in pursuit of their daily bread. Now our children go to the libraries alone from the time they are able to go anywhere, and there could hardly be a better place for them to spend their time. But they should be cautioned to abide by certain rules of good manners when in a library if they are to be welcome visitors.

In the first place, the rule of silence should be obeyed very punctiliously. And for that reason there is distinctly an advantage in going alone to a library, for then there is no temptation to talk. To go with a friend to a library without some serious intention of studying or reading is certainly in very poor taste. In cities there is always a class of persons who go to the library because it is a comfortable sort of place, well heated in winter and cool in summer, better perhaps than their own homes as a place for an idle hour, agreeable for a nap now and then and not a bad place for a little flirtation. Sometimes you will even see one of these library enthusiasts snatching a bit of cold lunch from a paper bag kept covertly hidden from the vigilant eye of the librarian under cover of a book.

So do not make that sort of convenience of your library. Do not use it as a rendezvous, as a convenient place to meet the young woman whose family does not wish to receive you in the home.

Always remember when you are in to blot out his or her delinquencies, ala library that if you have any questions they should be addressed to one of the persons in attendance. If you do not know how to use the catalogues do not consult another reader, but go to one of the librarians, whose business it is to give just that sort of instruction. If you do not know where to find a bit of information for which you are in search, you are quite at liberty to ask one of the librarians to help you.

Usually women do not remove their hats in public places. That is, it would be regarded in very exceptional taste to take off the hat in a department store or for luncheon at a restaurant; and only when the journey is to be long would a woman remove her hat in a railroad train. But it is perfectly all right for a woman to remove her hat when she is going to read for any length of time in the library. In a large library she may check this with her coat and any other accessories at the entrance door, or she may simply slip it from her head after she has taken her place at her seat. It is extremely inconsiderate, however, to spread one's hat and other personal belongings about so as possibly to be an inconvenience to others. Wet umbrellas should never be carried into a library. If there is no checking desk they should be left in the umbrella rack at the door.

Something to Think About By F. A. WALKER

LARKS ARE SINGING

TO THOSE hopeful individuals who keep their gaze on the towers of Utopia, glinting like gold in the far-off dreamy distance, give thought to the golden rule and put its fine precepts into actual practice, the larks are always singing.

These humans have their trials and difficulties, "even as you and I," but with them all, they manage to wear a smile of content. They go about their duties, however discouraging they may seem, with a cheerfulness that gives inspiration to the discontented and fault-finding souls, frequently losing their way and falling in the mire of despair. They know intuitively when to speak and when to curb their tongues, for they have learned the most difficult of all arts, the art of self-control, which the venerable sages will tell you is the first stepping stone to worldly success and an enduring happiness.

Hope never deserts them, even in their darkest hours.

She holds her blazing torch over her head and bids them follow. So the gloom of somber night is transformed to day, and the trusting disciples move from place to place, confident of their ability to find their way to the hills where the larks are singing and the sky is forever light with glorious sunlight. The world owes a debt of gratitude to these optimistic people which it never can pay, and you and I, being a part of the world, are likewise delinquent and possibly thoughtless of our increasing obligation.

We are too self-centered, too greedy for gain, too faithless.

We brush aside the weak in our pursuit of earthly dross and trample them under our hasty feet, never stopping to look back to see whether we have hurt them. We forget that we all are of one flesh, and if we have injured them, we have injured ourselves.

Every day the Wise Keeper of the Book of Life is calling on some debtor ways hanging over his or her head until the account is paid in full.

If you have canceled your obligation and kept the faith, the day of reckoning will have no terrors, for you will find you are as free and happy as the larks singing in gladness all about you when the dawning is rosy and the air is fragrant with the scent of flowers. Forty Wild Deer on City Lawns. Forty wild deer from the hills are roaming about the residential section of Nyack, N. Y., feeding on lawns and flower beds. Nyack is only "44 minutes from Broadway." Heavy snows in the hills are believed to have sent the deer down in search of forage.

Voices of the Ice.

The winter of the Far North is not wholly silent, although so little life is manifest at that season. The testimony offered by an American explorer makes this fact very clear.

All movements of the ice—the gradual crowding and pressing, bending and pushing, the breaking of masses of snow lying at the "ice foot"—do not proceed noiselessly, but are generally accompanied by certain sounds which are called the "voices" of the ice.

Now one hears a low, singing, spashing or grumbling, alternating with various other noises, cracking and snapping; now it sounds irregularly from a great distance, like a confusion o fhuman voices, the clanging din of a train or a sledging party; or you fancy you can hear the steps and voices of all sorts of animals. There is, it is said, a charm in listening to those sounds on a still night .--

Sunday School at Wentz's School house, next Sunday at 2:00 o'clock. In 1780, Robert Raikes, of Gloncester, England, founded the Sunday School as we know it today.

Recently we found an old paper of 1893, 30 years ago, with the names of large? officers of Wentz's Union Sunday Mash a School, which will be interesting to many of the readers. Pres., John C. Rohrbaugh; Vice-Pres., Rhodes; Supts., H. B. Burgoon, John Kephart and Edward Houck; Secretaries, Geo. P. Wentz and John E. Rhodes; Treasurer, Phanuel Wentz; Managers, Wm. Crumrine, Nathaniel Shaffer, Levi Myers, James C. Myers, Cornelius Crumrine, Jacob H. Sterner and Joseph James. It will be readily seen by those who are familiar with the names, that seven of the above persons have "passed up higher," and one of the men, Edward Houck, is now more than four score and ten—nearing the century mark.

Old Desk Mutely Tells Story of the Fate Which Has Overtaken Once Great Germany.

There is a wonderful old desk with secret drawers, valued at $1,000, in a cultured home near Gramercy park, which mutely tells the story of the decline and fall of imperial Germany, writes "Gerard" from New York to the Philadelphia Inquirer. It was purchased for $4 twenty-two years ago by an erudite Englishman who discovered the treasure in a Berlin cellar, its fine points hidden under a thick coating of grime and dust .

The desk cost $15 in Germany to have it made presentable at that time. Ten years later when it had been domiciled in New York, $60 was expended in polishing its glossy surfaces and cast trimmings and cleaning its hand-made locks.

Now it is again under the tender hands of a cabinetmaker, who indicated for our edification the seven different kinds of wood used to make it: satinwood from India, walnut from Circassia, mahogany from Honduras, ebony from Ceylon, elm from Russia, boxwood from Asia Minor and pine from Norway. Think of the old Germany that was an industrial center that had at its command the raw material of the seven seas! That desk was made during the reign of "Old William," grandfather of "Kaiser Bill," the runaway ruler, who now chops firewood in Holland and ruminates.

In Sad but Loving Remembrance of our dear mether, ADELAIDE C. MILLER, who died one year ago, June 2nd., 1922.

Death has robbed us of our mother, Of one we loved so dear, Taken from this world of sorrow, Safely home with him to dwell.

What grief and pain she suffered here. None of us will ever know, For Jesus took her home with him, Where no tears will ever flow.

A happy home we once enjoyed, How sweet the memory still, But death has come, and left that vacant Which this world can never more fill. Walter Devilbiss and family, of If we could have been with her when she died,

And held her dying hand
And heard the last sigh from her lips.
We would not feel so bad.

I never am without you,
The time is passing fast,
Some day in perfect silence,
I must the river pass,

In life we loved you dearly, In death we do the same, We often sit and think of you, And wish you were here again. We did not want to part with you, But God knew what was best. Some day we hope to meet again, In that sweet land of rest.

Will not take you from our heart, Since death strangely bade us part, But dear mother, all its changes, One sad year with all its changes.

In our hearts your memory lingers, Tender, kind and true, There is not a day dear mother, That we did not think of you. BY HER LOVING CHILDREN.

CARD OF THANKS.

Old and young were there; the news was dis-Joy and sorrow usually came by mail.

The only event that could arouse the town was a fire; then it went mad. The firemen fought one another, rather than the fire, and the townspeople in their misdirected zeal destroyed what the fire spared. I have often admired the foresight of my great-grandmother, who when the hall once caught fire ordered all the doors and windows locked and bolted and told the servants to put out the fire while she took care of the fire department. She did so by pouring boiling water on those who tried to enter the house.

One night when the Central hotel burned a fireman of "Deluge No. 1" the men of the rival hose companies, he was drowned from his positionwhile the hotel burned. Steam vessels were employed at a very early date upon the mail services, for, besides being very much quicker than the sailing vessels, they were practically independent of the direction of the wind, and to a considerable extent of the weather; consequently the regularity of their rassages concussed, and plans were made for the trasted very favorably with the irregular times kept by the sailing vessels. The mail service across the Irish channel, between Holyhead and Dublin, was especially uncertain in the days of the sailing packets, frequently occupying three or four days, and occasionally as many as seven or nine days. All this was altered when in 1821 the steamers Royal Sovereign and Meteor were placed on the service. The advantages were so apparent that steam mail packets between Great Britain and the Continent, and on many other services, were soon established. How the word "packet" came to be applied to a vessel is explained in the dictionary: "Packet, 1. A little pack or small package. 2. MAXIMILIAN FOSTER

Maximilian Foster says of him-self that he writes only when there is no fishing! And fishing is more than a hobby with him, for he has invented a fly that is not only a winner in snaring trout, but has equal merit in catching salmon He will talk to you at length about the piscatorial sport, but he is most reluctant to tell you how and when he started his career as an

I met him first some years ago in Maine, and it took all day be-fore I elicited the following facts: Due to a desire to support himself by writing, he joined the news-paper world for the reason that he believed that the newspapers supplied the best experience. "The young writer," he says, "has little experience of life, but on a newspaper he not only widens his own, but gains a knowledge of other

Mr. Foster's first story, 10,000 words in length and sold to the Atlantic Monthly, was written en-tirely at night in a newspaper office. He was doing rewrite work at the time, and would write down a page of that and then turn to a page of his own story. It was a long and laborious job, but after that first success he sold many stories to the Atlantic Monthly. He has written much fiction which appeared in the leading magazines.

Mr. Foster attributes his success to his eight years of work in the newspaper world, but he has an-other record. During the time we were in the great war he was Unit-ed States government correspondent abroad.

"Mrs. Redmond's Shame," written expressly for the Star Author Se-ries of Matrimonial Adventures, carries its own particular message to the married, MARY STEWART CUTTING, JR.

It was a quarter to eight that morning-a full fifteen minutes past the usual hour-when the door of Redmond's bedrooom opened and Redmond hastily emerged. In the same haste he hurried toward the stairs. He was late, that was all there was to it-late at breakfast: and, as he reached the stairs, his eyes on the hall clock as he brisked along, his absorbed, somewhat boyish face wore on it a look of concern not unmixed with guilt.

"Dear, dear!" he clucked. To be late at one's own breakfast table is, of course, not so heinous an offense; but, as Redmond's haste denoted, the case here was different. Time-and with it promptness-naturally concerned a woman as active and influential as Redmond's wife. At any rate, in the life, the career she had made for herself, Mrs. Redmond long had found it necessary to regulate her day to a schedule, every minute of which was actively employed. She was, in fact, that Myrta Redmond whose prominence as president of the Women's State Civic Federation was statewide, if not national; and with the demands this and her other activities made upon her, it was only reasonable that Redmond should do nothing to conflict with her appointed plans. He was, it seems, the minor official of an insurance company in the city.

An absorbed and reticent, self-effacing person, Redmond seldom if ever came in contact with his wife's official life. Even if he had, however, it's unlikely that he would have made much of an impression on her wide circle of acquaintances, her social and political associates. Among people of affairs, the selected, active set that surrounded Myrta Redmond, he would have been adjudged obscure, perhaps ineffectual-in a word, one they termed "domestic."

That, indeed, was the word. True, once in his wife's career, though it was only once, Redmond had appeared as honorary secretary of a meeting Mrs. Redmond had convened, the original appointee having succumbed at the final moment to a distressing attack of migraine. His shy embarrassment, however-his ignorance, too, of the mere fundamentals of parliamentary law-at once had betrayed his unfitness; and, propelled from one embarrassing blunder into another, the ladies, his wife's associates and herself included. had diplomatically relieved him of the place. The hall downstairs was long and spacious. It was, in fact, in character with all the house spacious not only, but even vast. However, though there were only these two to occupy itthey, John Redmond and his wifethis too, had its explanation. Space, or as Myrta termed it, "scope," Myrta in her active life needed naturally; and it was for this the house had been selected, a habitation suitably roomable for committee meetings, for caucuses and the like. But then, this air of largeness, of "scope," was due not entirely to the size of the structure itself; the furnishings-that, or, rather, the lack of them, accented this; and, as Redmond hastened along the hall, the sight of its present bare emptiness pricked him with another thrust of conscience, a stab. Tonight a meeting, a committee caucus, was to be held. Myrta's candidacy and her campaign for a state office were to be discussed; and already the man-of-all-work, prompt at the task, had begun to move out the chairs, the tables and other furnishings. Later, they would be replaced by rows of folding stools chartered from the local undertaker.

Redmond's concern grew more evident. He was still hurrying; but as he reached the breakfast room and stepped inside he stopped abruptly.

"Hello!" he exclaimed, The breakfast room was vacant. Mrs. Redmond was neither there, nor, as it appeared, had she already breakfasted and gone; and, staring at her empty place, Redmond's astonishment

The day was one of vital importance to his wife. At 8 p. m. the caucus would be called; and from now till then every moment of her time would be taken, planning, arranging, seeing fellow members, marshaling all her forces for the night. The office she sought was that of state supervisor, the peak, the apex of all her present activities and ambitions; and, as Redmond knew too, her candidacy for the place was to be no easy victory. Already opposition had reared its head; and, his air of questioning, his astonishment growing on him, Redmond hurriedly drew out his watch.

He had made no mistake, however. It was a quarter to eight-fifteen minutes past the hour; and again Redmond shot a glance at his wife's vacant place.

He was still standing there, watch in hand and wondering, when the pantry door opened, and a gaunt, angular figure in cap and apron appeared. It was a maid, the Redmond's waitress.

"You're late," she greeted abruptly,

Redmond knew he was. That, however, did not concern him now. Neither was he the more concerned in the maid's brusque abruptness. Of his own choice, Redmond would have preferred a different, less thin-lipped, sere and flint-eyed Hebe to serve him his repasts; but Mrs. Redmond, naturally, had made the choice. The woman, Harriet Lipp, was a protege of hers, a fragment, in fact, of that human social-wreckage Myrta Redmond, in part with her career, made it a habit to snatch from troubled waters and relaunch again in life. The waitress, in fact, owed not only her present place to Mrs. Redmond, she owed also her liberty to her, Mrs. Redmond's influence with the state pardon board having obtained Harriet Lipp's release from a three-years' sentence in the penitentiary. As Mrs. Redmond, however, had pointed out, it was for a crime of violence, not one of ignoble meanness or stealth, for which Harriet had been committed; but of this distinction, a difference in Mrs. Redmond's view, Redmond was not think-

"Where's your mistress?" he inquired.

"Upstairs," the woman answered,

The reply, too, was as blunt, as brusque as it was brief; and, his distaste of her growing, Redmond stared at the woman.

"When is Mrs. Redmond coming down?" he asked

Harriet Lipp's air did not alter.

"She ain't," she answered, and Redmond started.

"She's breakfasting abed," said Harrlet Lipp.

"In bed?" Redmond echoed.

"Uh huh!" repeated Harriet Lipp. Wondering, vaguely perturbed now, Redmond wandered to the table. In the same wonder he drew out a chair and seated himself, the maid watching him with hard, aggressive eyes. It was nothing new, though, that Redmond should breakfast alone. Often. in her full, active life, Mrs. Redmond was up and away even before he had come downstairs. There were days, too, often weeks, when her official duties, public affairs, called her entirely from her home. No, to be alone was nothing new. But now . . . Mrs. Redmond breakfasting in bed. That was

A woman's trick-that breakfast in bed. It was a trick, too, a woman's trick, of a sort that Myrta heretofore would have scorned. The soft, the indulgent, the femininely feminine things popularly presumed of womankind, Mrs. Redmond instinctively and contemptuously disdained. To her they meant but one thing, a confession of sex, of the weakness a confession of sex involved. The parity of the sexes, the abolition, rather, of all sex, that was Mrs. Redmond's watchword. "Here!" Redmond said sharply to the maid, "bring me my eggs and cof-

He sat there, staring at his hands. Something had happened, he saw that; something visibly out of the way. Redmond, in fact, in the twelve years of his married life, had grown, if only subconsciously, too familiar with his wife's ways, her habitude, not to sense that something unusual had occurred to her. Its indications, however, were not merely the otherwise trivial circumstances of her breakfasting in bed; of late he had noted in his wife's usual calm, her somewhat complacent self-restraint, a hint of nerves, of temperament—a reaction as if she labored under some secret weight, a burden. Uneasy, now, a frown puckered on his brow. What had troubled her? he wondered, his uneasiness gaining ground It was rarely, if ever, now, in these later years that Mrs. Redmond confided in the man she'd married. Between the two it was as if the usual marital situation had become reversed -he, not she, the dependent; she the master hand. The change, however, if equitable; for Redmond, if he were the inferior, bent under what virtually was a double responsibility, that or the provider, the one who brought in the living; with that, he, to all intents and purposes, ran the household as well. Of that never mind, however, With all the other calls on Mrs. Redmond there might have been no household, save that John Redmond had stepped into the breach. He had not complained. Overshadowed by his wife, submerged in her growing prominence, the added task John Redmond had shouldered as if a duty, his.

He was not thinking of it now. He was not thinking, either, of how he himself had become submerged, thrust inconspicuously into the background of their married life. Wonder still reigned among his thoughts; and, in their confusion, his mind leaped with a quick informality from one thought to another. It is the way with those who mull things over, solitaries. Something was wrong, wrong with Myrta Redmond; and his mind dwelt on that; something wrong with Myrta.

With Myrta, yes, not just Mrs. Redmond. You understand, no doubt. In other words, there were in Redmond's mind two figures, always two: Myrta, first; then-well, the other, Mrs. Redmond. The two were vividly distinct. Myrta, the one he'd married, had (to him) never changed; she still was the one, the same; but the other, the Mrs. Redmond who'd taken his name, still was using it-she and Redmond were far apart. It was only at odd intervals now, brief and far apart, that the Myrta he'd married came back to him. She was still there, though. She was there now. Trouble . .

A "mere" husband, an appendage. Well, the term fitted well enough. It was queer, though, the twist the moment gave to it. In trouble, if she were, Mrs. Redmond was not merely Mrs. Redmond. He was a husbandyes; and instinctively to him she became transformed. She was Myrta; and as Myrta, his wife, if Myrta needed help

Redmond, startling, had half risen from his chair when the pantry door opened, and the woman, Harriet Lipp,

"There's y'r eggs," she pronounced. Redmond resumed his seat. To Myrta he could have flown, offering aid. To Mrs. Redmond-well, that was

He sat there, mooning. The Lipp woman had withdrawn; and his eggs grew cold within the cup. Mulling it over, his thoughts were now going at full tilt, galloping. In the way with those who moon, who mull, one thing ran into another, piling up in magnitude. If something really was wrong, what was it? A hundred thoughts raced into his mind . . . Politics , , , Schemes . . . Plots for place, for pow-. . With women, women didn't differ much from men. Politics, too, were Mrs. Redmond's daily pabulum. Had she done something? Had she compromised herself? Unwitting had she let herself into something ugly? Vague stories, sinister whispers of politics, public affairs, leaped into his remembrance. Her ambitions he knew He knew, too, that she-that is, Mrs. Redmond-would make no distinction in methods. "In politics no sex" was the watchword of these women, Mrs. Redmond's associates, hers as well, They fought with the same tools as the men. But if Myrta . .

Myrta again-Myrta, not Mrs. Redmond. An exclamation, sharp, explosive, escaped him. Shoving back his chair he rose abruptly.

Harriet Lipp, as if her eye had been glued to the crack in the pantry door, at once shoved it open. "Say, you ain't et y'r breakfus'!"

she barked. Redmond had flung down his napkin on the cloth. He looked at the figure in the doorway.

"What did your mistress say?" he demanded. Harriet Lipp's eyes narrowed defensively.

"Say when?" she countered. "This morning-just now!" rapped Redmond, his temper rising. "Is she ill?" he snapped again.

"No, she ain't!" the woman answered. "Then why isn't she coming down?"

asked Redmond. With direct finality the woman answered him. "She's a-breakfustin' abed," said Harriet Lipp.

That ended it. For a long moment afterwards the hard-featured maid stood there at the pantry door, one hand at her breast, her face strained as she gazed after him. A breath escaped her. The mystery of all this, though, was not revealed to Redmond. Already he was at the stairway hurrying upward. Mrs. Redmond's room was at the front of the house, on the floor above. For years—four years now, nearly five-she and her husband had occupled separate rooms. As Redmond reached the door he paused. His hand uplifted, he made as if to knock, then desisted. Standing there, he put one ear to the panel and listened. It was only for an instant, though. The next instant, without even the formality of a knock, he thrust open the door and stepped inside.

"Myrta!" he exclaimed. She lay there among the coverings of the bed, her back to him; and as he entered, calling to her, she did not move. Along the pillows the masses of her thick, silky hair, like ropes of burnished copper, lay strewn; and above the counterpane a limp, slender arm, girlishly rounded and pink, revealed itself. She was still young, only a year or so over thirty; and now, as Redmond looked at her, her figure among the coverings seemed appealingly slight and vouthful. More than that, though, in its supine pose at the such had happened, was not just moment there was a suggestion of laxity, of helpless dejection that he was quick to see.

She answered him then. It was, however, Mrs. Redmond rather than the Myrta he called who spoke. Nor did she turn. From among the pillows her voice rose, formal and precisethe voice of Mrs. Redmond, the public woman's voice. "What is it?" she inquired.

Redmond paused midway across the room. His air, his look, eager and anxious, altered, too. "You all right?" he questioned.

A pause. She still did not turn, and in the pause he stirred uncomfortably. Then from the bed came her voice, its note, as before, still precise.

"All right? . . . Why do you ask, pray?" Uncertainly, he took a step toward

"Why, you see, you didn't come to your breakfast," he faltered. Again she replied, this time with a change, a note of petulance in her

"I'm breakfasting here," she said. "I know-but the meeting-tonight's -your time," he faltered again.

Another pause. Then, from the pillows the reply. It came slowly, as if, with the effort, ponderously. "There is to be no meeting," said

Mrs. Redmond. "What?" interrogated Redmond. A movement of restless impatience stirred among the pillows. "I have called it off-canceled it." Perplexed, he ruffled up his brows. "You have postponed it?" he in-

There was again a movement among the pillows, sharp, vehement, visibly emphatic.

"I have told you once," Mrs. Redmond said, as sharply; "there is to be no meeting. That is enough, isn't it?"

seh uttered crisply. "Myrta!" exclaimed Redmond. Swiftly he hastened to the bed. In the same haste, the alert alarm bred of his concern for her, he laid a hand upon her shoulder. "Myrta! . . . My dear!" "Let me alone, pray!" Mrs. Redmond directed annoyedly. The hand on her shoulder she shook With the same movement she drew the coverings about her. This, too, she did with a cold, formal deliberation whose dignity was unmistakable. Now, however, wonder, trepidation, too, had the better of Redmond, and he missed the majestic rancor of the gesture. "Myrta, what's wrong? What's happened? Tell me!" he cried.

She turned then, momentarily tense, her features vital with the emotion she still strove to repress. Her voice harsh, she spoke-Mrs. Redmond.

"You, of course, would not understand. It's ended-that's all," she

Redmond gaped. "Ended! What's ended?"

"Everything-for the time, anyway," she replied. "I'm done for, that's enough, isn't it?" "Done for?"

Her lip for an instant curved bit-

"You heard me!" she returned. "You don't suppose for a moment, do you, that I could run now for that office!" laughed harshly She laughed again, the laugh more rasping; and, his jaw dropping, agape, Redmond stared at her.

"Myrta!" Among the pillows she again gave her shoulders a shrug. "Bah! . . . Fancy facing those women now!" The women she meant he knew. They were those other women, her as sociates-public women like Mrs. Redmond herself. Why, however, she could not face them Redmond had yet to grasp. Startled, he caught swiftly at his breath. Then, as he stared down at her, the thought, the suspicion already that morning engendered in his mind, saw in her strained, embittered face the answering echo, an affirma-

Shame! . . "Myrta," said Redmond, his voice thick, "what have you done?"

She looked up at him sharply, tossing from her brow the thick, bronzed masses of her hair.

"What! You mean you don't-don't understand?" "What's wrong, Myrta? Tell me," said Redmond, stoutly. "I'll help you, I'li stand by you, dear. If it's trouble -If even it's wrong-' "Wrong?"

"Yes, if even shame-"

He got no further. A laugh, sharp and intolerantly bitter and disgusted, came from among the pillows. It caught Redmond midway in his words, and left him, like a stranded fish, gasping impotently.

"You dolt, you numbskull!" said Mrs. Redmond.

She told him then. It was to Redmond, too, the news was, as if she, Mrs. Redmond, had reached from the bed and felled him to the floor. He stood riveted. Then into his face, his eyes, leaped the light, transfiguring like a swift burst of sunshine through

"Myrta!" he shrilled. Radiant, quivering to his feet, had he dared he would have reached down and gathered her to his arms.

He dared not, though. It was Mrs. Redmond, her face distorted with the bitterness of her defeated ambitions. that gazed up at him from among the "Pshaw!" she said, her lip curled anew-"you're like all men, all you husbands. That's all you think about! She gave her shoulders another disgusted, embittered shrug. "Go awayeave me; I want to sleep," she said. Redmond went. It was as if he went, oo, treading the mountaintops.

LESSON FOR JUNE 3

JEREMIAH, THE PROPHET OF COURAGE

LESSON TEXT—Jeremiah 35:1-18. GOLDEN TEXT—Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong.

-1 Corinthians 16:13.

REFERENCE MATERIAL—Jeremiah
1:1-9; 18:1-4; Matthew 2:17, 18.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Sons Who Honor

JUNIOR TOPIC-The Story of the

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC Jeremiah, the Courageous Prophet. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC

Jeremiah was one of the last prophets of Judah. He saw the nation go into the Babylonian Captivity and Jerusalem destroyed, after which he went into Egypt. He was a lonely, misunderstood and unpopular prophet. He was most bitterly hated and persecuted. His own countrymen turned against him. He was placed in stocks and then thrown into a horrible dungeon from which he narrowly escaped with his life. The teacher should give a little sketch of his life. The following is suggested:

1. His Call (1:2-10).

2. His Commission (1:11-19).

3. His Sympathetic Heart (4:19). 4. His Great Sorrows (10:15-21).

5. The Divine Power Which Urged Him Forward and Sustained Him

Because he was called upon to prophesy against his own nation and at the command of God urged them to surrender to the Babylonians, he was regarded as a traitor guilty of treason against his own nation. I. The Rechabites' Test (vv. 1-5).

In the days of Jehoiakim, the Lord charged Jeremiah to bring the Rechabites into the house of the Lord and test them regarding the drinking of wine. This he did in a place where the people might behold them, the aim being to teach Judah by example. The father of the Rechabites had given command that they should not drink wine. Their filial obedience put to shame the children of Judah for their lack of obedience. Jonadab, the father of the Rechabites, was only a man but the one whose commands Judah disregarded was the Almighty God, their Creator and Savior. It is God's plan that every man be tested. Being a free agent, he can have character only through testing.

II. The Filial Loyalty of the Rechabites (vv. 6-11).

Though they were out of their own country in the midst of a foreign people they refused to drink wine, declaring that they had been true to the instructions of Jonadab all their lives. It is a fine thing when children remember their fathers and render obedience to their commands.

III. The Loyalty of the Rechabites in Contrast With the Disloyalty of Judah (vv. 12-16).

1. The Appeal (vv. 13, 14). He made the appeal on the basis of the filial loyalty of the Rechabites. He also reminded them that he had spoken to them in person, rising up early to do so.

The Ministry of the Prophets (vv. 15, 16). When the people failed to render obedience to God. he sent to them the prophets, who pleaded with them to amend their ways by turning away from their idols. Matthew Henry Indicates the points of contrast somewhat as follows: (1) The Rechabites were obedient to one who was but a man; the Jews disobeyed the infinite and eternal God. (2) Jonadab was dead and could not know of their disloyalty or correct them for it. God is all-knowing and lives forever and will punish for disobedience. (3) The Rechabites were never reminded of their obligations, but God sent His prophets to speak to His people. (4) Jonadab left the charge but no estate to support the charge, but God gave the people a goodly land and prospered them in it. (5) God never assigned His people a task as hard as Jonadab's, but God's people disobeyed Him while the Rechabites obeyed their father.

IV. Judgment Upon the Jews for Disobedience (v. 17).

God declared that He would bring judgment upon them according to what He had said. Judgment is laid upon those who disobey and rebel against God.

V. Reward of the Rechabites for Their Loyalty (vv. 18, 19).

Because they had been true to the commands of Jonadab, they should always have a representative before God. God has such a regard for fillal obedience that He lets no act go unrewarded.

Lessons from the Psalms-The Shepherd Psalm

Psalm 23:1-6

The Twenty-third Psalm is the most familiar and the most precious of all the psalms. It is preceded by the psalm of the Cross and followed by the psalm of the glory. Much spiritual benefit may be derived from the reading of these three psalms together, for the shepherd care of our Lord is the result of His work for us in death and resurrection and also the guaranty of our future glory.

Christ is the good Shepherd who gave His life for the sheep (John 10:11, 14). He is the great Shepherd raised from the dead by the glory of the Father (Heb. 13:20), and He is the chief Shepherd who shall yet appear in glory (1 Pet. 5:4). In view of this, happy are they who can use the personal, possessive pronoun, as in the first verse of this psalm, and say, "The Lord is my Shepherd." This is the gateway into all the treasures that follow; such an one shall not want. He shall not want spiritual food or rest (v. 2); he shall not want restoration of soul or guidance in righteousness (v. 3); he shall not want companionship, even in death, or de-liverance from fear (v. 4); he shall not want the provisions of grace (v. belongs to the one who can say, "The Lord is my Shepherd."

Valuable Derelicts.

Bobbing up and down on the tossing waves of the North Pacific and destined, sooner or later, to find a resting place on some beach, several hundred auge steel drums of whale oil are the most recent derelicts reported.

The motorship Anvil, the crew ready to drop from exhaustion after days and nights of toil and vigil, its rudder shattered, guard rails torn away, was ferced to throw much of the valuable cargo overboard. The Anvil was completing the homeward trip from Bering sea after a season's trading with whalers and natives.

Each cask of oil thrown away contains 112 gallons and would be a valuable find for a beachcomber. Neah Bay Indians eagerly are watching the offshore drift near Vancouver island for the first of the huge drums of oil which they believe ultimately will reach that locality.

SOUPS AND GARNISHES

Soups will never grow passe, for with too many a soup is the attractive dish of the meal. There are such varieties that he is indeed hard to please who cannot find one to his liking. Vermont Chicken Soup .- Take six cupfuls of well-seasoned chicken stock, add a little grated onion, a head of lettuce shredded and one cupful of peas. If the peas are fresh, simmer until they are done. Beat an egg, add enough bread crumbs to make a paste and shape into balls. Drop the balls into the soup and simmer until well heated; serve hot.

Quick Bouillon .- Cut fine one pound of fresh beef and a slice of fat pork. Put into a saucepan with one cupful of cold water, one carrot, one onion finely minced, and cook fifteen minutes: then add two cupfuls of boiling water. Simmer for an hour, then press through a fine sieve. Season with salt, pepper and celery salt.

Cheese Balls .- Take one-half cupful of flour, half a cupful of milk, a tablespoonful each of butter and cheese. Mix in a double boiler, cook until smooth and thick, add one egg well beaten and cook long enough to set the egg. Set aside to cool. Form into balls the size of hickory nuts, drop into boiling soup, cook five minutes and serve immediately.

Leftover Meat Dish .- Put through the meat grinder two or three medium-sized potatoes, season well, add one small onion also ground through the meat grinder. In a little pork sausage fat cook the potato and onion until well scalded then place in a wellbuttered baking pan with a layer of chopped roast beef and garnish with halves of cooked pork sausages. Bake until the potato and onion are cooked. Serve from the dish. See that all the potato water and onion juice is added for it will be needed for moisture.

TALKS to MOTHERS about THEIR BABIES

By DR. J. M. MASON KNOX, JR.,

Chief, Bureau of Child Hygiene, Maryland State Department of Health.

A FOREWORD

Reprinted by permission of the Baltimore Sun.

N THIS series of talks to mothers it is proposed in the simplest informal way to go over some of the important matters that concern the health of herself and her children, and to point out obvious precautions which should be taken to make this wonderful relationship of mother and child as safe as possible for each.

MEDICAL SUPERVISION

T IS now generally agreed that adequate care of the baby must begin nine months before it is born—that is, it must start with proper care of the prospective mother. If this is true, the following natural query must be answered:

What shall be the first duty when the coming of the baby is Unquestionably the answer should be—consult an experienced

We must realize that this business of being a mother is a serious one at best. One in which two lives are at stake, and surely, it is only right for the husband to provide for his wife, and if necessary, for the community to provide for every woman the best available care at this critical period.

HERE are many needless worries and fears the inexperienced woman has at this time which her physician may quiet. She should look to him for advice and not to the thoughtless gossip of any irresponsible neighbor or relative. More important still, the physician will give the waiting mother a careful physical examination.

Neither mother nor baby can be given satisfactory care unless the physician knows the physical condition of the mother, whether her heart, kidneys and lungs are sound, and she is otherwise well. It is just as necessary to find out whether there is any deformity which may interfere with the spontaneous birth of the baby.

These and similar facts should be ascertained early, so that the proper lines of treatment can be started. The doctor, too, will' help to settle the expected date of the confinement.

N IMPORTANT aid to the physician is the public health nurse. This is especially true in rural communities, where the doctors may not have time to give each patient the minute detailed advice she craves. In these cases the public health nurse is invaluable. As woman to woman she is the waiting mother's friend in need. She allays her useless fears, but recognizes signs and symptoms of danger and calls the doctor in time to avoid trouble. When he comes she is his trusted assistant. This kind of nurse is much too rare in our country districts, but their number is rapidly increasing to the great benefit of the health of

Besides the physician, no person can do as much to help the young mother safely through the waiting period as the public health nurse. It often happens that she first knows the mother's secret and can help her to secure a competent physician and make necessary arrangements for the comfort of the baby.

HERE are certain symptoms which often occur early in the period which sometimes alarm the mother and which should be mentioned. Perhaps the most distressing, although not dangerous one, is nausea and vomiting, known as morning sickness, which more than half the women in this condition have. It is particularly troublesome upon rising in the morning. It may sometimes be relieved by taking a little dry food before rising, such as toast or crackers swallowed without liquid. Many women are relieved by eating several small meals a day instead of three large ones. It is wise to do all one can to ward off the first attack, as the tendency to nausea is easily established. It is wise to keep the mind upon other matters, as brooding upon the discomfort exaggerates the trouble. Out-of-door life and normal interests will help. If the symptom becomes worse in spite of this suggestion, a physician should be consulted.

HE doctor will determine in each case how often he would like to see his patient. He usually will have a report from her each month during the early months, and oftener toward the end of the waiting period.

ORIGIN OF MAYAS UNCERTAIN

Variety of Opinions Held, but No Positive Proof Has Ever Been Brought Forward.

Archeologists have wrangled warmly as to where the Mayas came from. Some said they must have reached Yucatan from the south, some said from the north. The resemblance of their hieroglyphs and some of their architecture and carving to those of Assyria and Egypt led to the conjecture that the founders of the nation were Egyptians or Assyrians. But if so, how did they get to Central America? On the other hand, particular admirers of Maya art, who declare it superior to that of the Egyptians, have advanced the bold theory that the civilization of Yucatan was the parent of that of Egypt-some American Columbus having evidently sailed over and discovered Africa.

And then again the Atlantis fans, who believe with Plato and others of the ancients that a great continent was once overwhelmed gradually by what is now the Atlantic ocean, say that the Maya and Toltec civilizations are no mystery to them, inasmuch as they have esoteric information to the effect that they were founded by culof Atlantis, which they identify with Hill Lent Itself to Building.

A most interesting and picturesque series of additions was added to a home in one of the hillside districts of California. In this case a man and his wife had built quite close to the slope of a hill, but without any thought of additions. Later, when they wished to expand, they discovered that by good luck rather than by good design, the easiest as well as the most attractive direction in which to grow was up the hill. By adding a short inclosed stairway they were lifted high enough to build three most charming rooms. The center one of this group is a living room and in the middle of it, at the back, rises, seemingly out of the ground, a fine sturdy stone chimney with a splendid fireplace.

Daddy Came First.

When I was going to church in the country, I fell deeply in love with the minister's daughter, writes a correspondent. After the sermon one evening I asked her if I could take her home, and was promptly told I could. I had just brought the horses out of the church stable when I met my father. He asked where I was going, and when I told him that I was taking the mintured refugees from the catastrophe ister's daughter home, he said: "After you have taken me home you may Noah's flood and other inundations come back for the minister's daughmentioned in the scriptures of ancient | ter!" That ended my first love affair.

From Every State Come Letters Praising OilPull Dependability

The big outstanding OilPull trait is dependability. And this is a trait that is desirable in any section and under any conditions. A tractor must be dependable. It must start easily in hot or cold weather. It must keep going day after day and year after year. Dependability is worth everything at plowing and harvest time. According to thousands of farmers the and harvest time. According to OilPull is absolutely dependable.

"The Cheapest Farm Power"

Thousands of letters come unsolicited. North, South, East, West—all sections and all farming conditions are represented.

They express the American Farmers' verdict on the OilPull. Dependability is only one feature they discuss. In all of them are mentioned the wonderful fuel economy, remarkably low repair expense, long life. And these are farmers who know the OilPull—who use it day after day and year after year. Their recommendation is better than any story we can tell. They prove that OilPull is built right—that Triple Heat Control, dual lubrication and other OilPull features combined with the strict manufacturing principles of the OilPull produce a tractor that makes money for the farmer.

A Story That Helped.

A banker with wide experience in pulling firms out of the difficulties into which the late deflation had brought them says that his best aid was a certain story. Whenever he said a thing must be done and the owners of the crippled business said they couldn't do it—which happened often-the banker would tell the following story:

"A man was telling his son a bedtime story about an alligator. It was creeping up behind a turtle, with its mouth wide open. Finally it was within reach, but just as its great jaws were snapped shut the turtle made a spring, ran up a tree and escaped.

COUNTY BASE BALL NEWS.

The Record will give a fair amount of space to the Carroll County League Base Ball games, but not to the extent of crowding out more important matter. It will publish the individual scores of games participated in by the four teams, providing they are furnished to us promptly after the games. It will not publish argumentative comment, nor long drawn out write-ups of games, in baseball lingo. As nearly as possible, the news facts will be presented without personal or prejudical elaboration.

Baseball, is a clean sport only as long as it is kept so, locally; therefore, a considerable responsibility rests on managers and players, and on the spectators as well. The success of the new League depends on the maintenance of decency and order, and the absence of gambling and rowdyism, and to this end we there should be a local deputy sheriff in attendance at each game.

We shall continue to give the League ample space, as long as it functions in a manner that entitles it to promotion, which we trust may be throughout the season.

The Record will not be able to have a reporter at each game played away from Taneytown, and must necessarily depend on outside information; but it will be the policy of this paper to give all of the teams fair treatment, and son, of Carlisle: Charles R. Angell will not knowingly be otherwise to any. As four games a week are scheduled, necessarily comment on the games must be brief. The fifth page will contain the baseball news, except for good reasons to the contrary, such as the demands of advertising.

New Windsor, at Taneytown. Taneytown 10-Blue Ridge 9.

The Taneytown League Team and Blue Ridge College, both somewhat patched up, played a rather ragged game, last Saturday, on the New Windsor field. Of the 19 runs, very few were earned. Taneytown tried its new pitcher, Jerry Bock, who had a badly disabled shoulder, and from the poor support he received in the early innings, and his wildness, the score stood 7 to 0 in favor of Blue Ridge at the close of the third. Then something happened, as it is apt to do in baseball. Taneytown bunched a lot of hits and Blue Ridge bunched errors, Taneytown scoring 10 runs in the next three innings. Blue Ridge changed pitchers, but it was too late. Bonsack played in the field for Blue Ridge. The score fol-

Taneytown 11-New Windsor 2.

On Decoration day Taneytown defeated the New Windsor team, at Taneytown 11 to 2. Taneytown used six home players; three Hitchcocks, Drening, Fuss and Dern; and two of last year's regulars, Eline and Small, and Atkinson, a Baltimore pitcher, who took the place of Bock, regular pitcher, who had a sore shoulder. The New Windsor team was made up of Crothers, lf.; Gaffney, ss.; Smith, 3b; Snyder, cf; Gerwig, c; Law, 2b; Dunn, 1b; Peters, rf; Metzger p. and a lot of hits, scored 8 runs. Mr. Ecker, of Littlestown, who umpired, had a hard time of it. Without going into the merits of his work -which was fully as fair as that of the average amateur umpire—the fact was clearly demonstrated that in the games to be played by the league, this summer, the umpires must be given more power, and there must be officers of the law on hand to enforce order. Unless this is done, the chances are that many of the best patrons of the games will withhold their attendance and support.

With the exception of the 7th. and 8th. innings, the game was a fine one on both sides. The score was: Taneytown 3-0-0-0-0-0-0-8-x=11New Windsor 0-0-0-0-0-2-0-0= 2

Heating by Suggestion.

Don't worry about coal prices! Heat your house for nothing by the Sing Sing method. This prison decided to conserve coal by shutting off the heat in daytime. A mighty howl went up from the inmates.

"Too cold to work," they complained.

One of the prison engineers didn't agree. Instead of firing up, he sat down and began pounding with a hammer and chisel on the steampipes. The noise, when it reached the convicts, sounded like the knocking that takes place in pipes when steam is turned on.

"That's better!" they approved. "My, the heat feels good!"

A few of the more imaginative convicts are reported to have begun perspiring. All this time, of course, the temperature had not changed, and the furnaces were cold.

Rich Silver Mine.

One side of a vein of the Keeley mine at Cobalt, Ontario, is plated with a sheet of pure silver, from a quarter inch to an inch thick. This sterling silver is 12 feet long and is exposed for a height of eight feet, and may be higher. It is estimated that eight hours and $25 worth of dynamite will blow out $100,000 worth of silver—five tons of solid silver.

Odd Disposition of Dead.

Natives of the Solomon islands elevate their dead on pedestals. The more respected the departed the more elaborate is his bier. The superstitious natives believe that every person has a ghost that will be as active in worldly affairs as was the corporeal object before death. Sometimes the native dead are cremated. Gifts of food are placed near by. It is "taboo" to pass behind these burial platforms.
