KEPNER ACQUITTED IN FREDERICK COURT.

Architect Charged with Murder Free After Eight Days Trial.

The trial of B. Evard Kepner which attracted such wide notice came to an end on Thursday afternoon, after running for eight days before three Judges in the circuit court for Frederick County. The Judges pronounced the accused man "not guilty."

There was a wild outburst of clapping as the verdict was announced by Chief Judge Hammond Urner, despite the Court's warning that no demonstration would be tolerated.

Then, as the Judges turned to leave the grimy old courtroom the crowd which had filled the room to suffocation, surged forward to congratulate the prisoner.

It was shortly after noon that State's Attorney Aaron Anders finished his argument for the State and sat down amid a thick silence that weighed like a blanket upon the packed courtroom. The verdict was announc-

Anders had kept the promise he had made before court opened Thursday morning and had talked straight to the point, indulging in no flights of oratory.

Leo Weinberg, Kepner's attorney, began by attempting to discredit the State's witnesses. More than once as he talked he would seize the chair before him by the back, lifting it from the floor, slam it back again with a violent bang.

When this had happened several times, Judge Urner leaned forward, and, with an unmoved countenance, "Mr. Weinberg, there is no need for this violence of emotion."

That cooled the speaker for a few minutes, but he grew heated again when he began talking about the atti-tude of the newspapers and reporters toward his client.

"It is a pity," he said, "that Kepner did not commit suicide, as so many of the reporters hoped he would do, so they might have a good story.

Leaving the reporters for the members of the Houck family, he declared that the Houcks were "pressing this that the Houcks were "pressing this charge in order to clear their family name of the stigma of suicide.'

"There is no shadow of proof that that is the case, Mr. Weinberg," interrupted Judge Urner.
"Oh," said Weinberg, "I probably got that out of some of the newspapers"

Another time Judge Urner was forced to interrupt the speaker. Weinberg was speaking of the effect of the charges against Kepner upon the community of Frederick. "The whole country was bitterly aroused by these charges," said the

'There is nothing to show that in the record," objected Judge Urner. The courtroom, which had been packed every day since the trial began, was jammed to suffocation on the closing day of the trial. Men and women waited for more than two hours outside for the doors to be thrown open. One woman, who has been a regular attendant upon the trial, bringing her embroidery with her, completed a set of luncheon cloths upon which she has been working, folded them up and gave her whole attention to the address of Weinberg.

OUR DETROIT LETTER.

Tells of Memorial Services for Pres. Harding, Etc.

Although it has been quite a while since I have written anything for The is nothing happening in this large city, for we run up against something new every now and then. The diffi-culty is to find something to say that will be of interest to the readers of the Record, most of whom are located so far away from Detroit, that I am sure that what happens here, in the

However, there is one subject that I am sure all have been interested in, the past week, and that is the death and funeral services of President Harding. I did not notice in your last issue, that you had any special services, in Taneytown, as were held when Garfield and McKinley were buried, and so must come to the conclusion that the people of the old town and the community surrounding it, were either too busy for such a service, or else are losing some of the patriotism for which they have always been noted. As the papers were full of descriptions of the services at the Capitol and other places, I want to tell you about the one that was held here. It was strictly a commu-nity affair, as religious and political differences were all forgotten for that one hour, when 100,000 people gathered in Cadillac Square and the streets that lead into it. The City Hall was draped in mourning, and a number of large amplifiers were placed in position, so that any one within 500 yards could hear plainly what the speakers said. The Park Band, a male quartet, and a choir of 300 voices furnished the music, while the eulogies were delivered by prominent men in Protestant, Catholic and Jewish faiths. I do not know as I was ever in attendance at a more fitting service, and I have heard hundreds say the same thing. I suppose every nationality under the sun was represented there, and every one seemed to understand the spirit of the occasion, and to enter into it. The solemn music, fine addresses, the three minutes of silence, the sounding of "taps" and the tolling of the bell on the City Hall, all were appropriate, and made a deep impression on all who were

Another subject that is always in season is the weather, or rather in this case, the climate. I think I said once before that we have just two seasons out here-Summer and Winter. After the experience of last year, I am convinced that that is the fact. On the 9th. of last May, we had nine or ten inches of snow, and freezing weather, and just three weeks afterward, some of the hotest weather we have had this summer. You can imagine how long we had to keep our fires burning. And the worst of it now is, we will likely have to start them up again in a very short time. The two big items of expense here, are taxes and coal, and let me tell you they are both sailing high at this time. Since warm weather set in, it has been very pleasant, with the exception of the times, when the mosquitoes get busy. And at this time, let me remark that they have a new breed of mosquitoes out here. When we lived in Taneytown, those pests we had in there usually gave warning by singing their little song, but these out here are a little father advanced in the art of getting a living, and if you are not looking directly at them when they light on you, the first no-tice you have is their sting. They are of a smaller breed, too, but make up in activity what they lack in is size.

We have been enjoying a number of trips out into the country sur-rounding Detroit, and when I say this, I mean 50 to 100 miles as you must go this distance to get away from the city and its suburbs. The land around the city is very flat, having been, I am told, the bottom of an ancient Lake. But when you get some distance out, among the many lakes and the hills that surround them, the scenery is very pretty, and puts one in mind of that near the mountains of Maryland. We find that the seasons are much later here than in Maryland, as the wheat ripens three or four weeks later, and as a rule, the corn does not get as large as Farmers are now busy harin there. vesting their oats, of which quite a lot is raised in the surrounding country, and when not so engaged those near the city are gttting rid of the opening of school in September. produce of their patches, of which, as is natural, there are thousands just in easy selling distance of the city. I said when I commenced this letter that we run up against something new every now and then. A few weeks ago, such an event happened not over a few hundred yards of our house, in the form of the hold-up of a bank messenger, by five armed bandits. They did not hesitate to use their guns, and in a few seconds relieved the messenger of the money he was conveying from the main bank to the branch on our street. There were very few men home at the time, and the town. the robbers went about their business so quickly and effectively, that the women in the surrounding houses, who were first notified of what was going on by the shots that were fired by the bandits, had not time to get scared. They made a clean get-a-way, too, as I have not seen anything in the papers to the effect that they were captured or the stolen car or money

HARDING LAID TO REST. Simple Services Mark all of the Final Ceremonies.

The late President Harding was buried, last Friday, from the home of his father, in Marion, Ohio, with sim-ple ceremonies. In cars behind the simple hearse that carried now this honored leader came President Coolidge and the Cabinet and the friends and close kin. There, too, came Chief Justice Taft and General Pershing. Last to leave the memoried house was Mrs. Harding in black and with veil drawn close, and just ahead of her walked the father, his face plainly showing his grief.

The vault stands ivy wrapped and set back into the gentle hill with little space before it. So the funeral train was halted at a distance and the casket lifted down to be carried to a resting place before the open entrance of the tomb. Already a group of Ser-ators who knew this dead President under the Capitol dome before he passed to the White House were already gathered in waiting in line across the roadway that runs before the entrance. With them stood the comrades of camping days, Ford, back. Edison and Firestone.

Then came Dr. Harding with the snows of his 80 years showing on his bared head, and then the widow walk-ing to her place at the right of the casket with Secretary Christian and the members of the family.

Within the shadow of the doorway of the vault the churchmen took their place, and from the shrubbery that screened them the choir sang "Lead, Kindly Light." The last service for Warren Harding had begun.

Prayers followed, spoken by an old friend of the dead president. The scriptural passages that hearten men in sorrow were read, and again the choir sang. The last hymn of this simple, reverent service was "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and as the softly blending voices came to the last chords Mrs. Harding slowly raised her veiled face and stood as though in prayer to Him above that the dead husband who in a moment would be shut away from her forever might know that peace beyond understanding which God's mercy holds out to humanity at the last. She was brave

PRICE OF WHEAT AND MARKET CONTROL.

Financing Methods, and Charges for R. R. Transportation.

It may have been noted that The Record has been publishing a number of quite lengthy articles on the farm-ing question. This has been done in an effort to give our readers the various prevailing views on the larger subject—for it is a very large one, with many sides to it. The article given here is a portion of an article in the Philadelphia Ledger, from its Chicago correspondent.
"The discussion of the low market price for wheat and the plans for improving the farmers' condition is running its course, like a fever. There is a considerable amount of new crop wheat coming to market, largely from Illinois. The promoters of cooperative marketing say that storage

Samuel R. Guard, director of infor-The Cabinet family came to stand closer at the foot of the casket, with their new chief standing among them. The admirals in gleaming white lined mation for the American Farm Bureau Federation, says the hold-your-wheat movement is no bluff. Locking up 200,000,000 bushels of wheat wheat movement is no bluff. Locking up 200,000,000 bushels of wheat on the farms must bring an advance in price, Mr. Guard says, and he adds that so much winter wheat is being held on the farms in the Southwest that Kansas City market is noticeably short of shipments "to arrive."

The same day Mr. Guard said this, the movement of wheat to the Chicago market was so heavy that the market closed with prices down. But both statements may be true. Sentiment is mixed, according wheat pit authorities. How the market can go up with wheat coming in freely is one question. How it fail to go up with wheat being held back is another question.

Mr. Guard said: "Just such an emergency was in the mind of the Farm Bureau and the Farm Bloc when the Intermediate Credits Act was passed and the Warehouse Act was amended in the closing days of the last Congress. With the Government warehouse receipt in hand, the farmer can borrow money at 5½ percent from the $660,000,000 Intermediate Credit System. The farmers will not sell their wheat at cutthroat prices when they can finance it and

"The Farm Bureau admits the wheat holding movement is a temporary expedient only. The bureau has

Amen." erated into a national body, which will later join with the surplus grain growers of Canada, Argentine, Australia and India for proper grower representation at Liverpool. That briefly is the organized farmers' program for market reform." Standard Oil never conceived anything more daring.

C. A. Markham president of the Illinois Central Railroad, wishes to know "who are the transportation interests." He continues his inquiry

"Out of every dollar they took last year the railroads paid out 44.4 cents for labor. There are about 1,750,000 railway employes. They constitute a good-sized block of consuming capacity of the country. Their wages are used, like the farmers' income, to buy clothing, food, shelter, fuel, education, amusement. A large part of the rail-way payroll finds its way immediately into the channels of trade (all of it eventually does) and a good part of it goes to the farmers.'

After accounting for the remainder of the railroad income in the conventional way Mr. Markham continues: "Since virtually all of the revenues received by the railroads go to pay the costs of the service performed, the 'transportation interests' that exact the heavy toll upon the Middle West are American industries in general. They in turn furnish the farmer with a market for farm products."

"The farmer receives for his products a stated market price made up of many factors, chiefly the operation of the law of supply and demand. The difference between the price at the market and what the farmer might receive for his product at the home station represents the cost of part of the transportation service to the consumer of the product. To say that the farmer pays it would be equivalent to saying that the farmer pays for the milling of his grain into flour, the baking of the flour into bread and the distribution of the bread to household consumers. What the farmer gets for his wheat is the price paid for bread less the cost of all services back along the line, including baking, milling, transportation and so on.

The discussion growing out of dollar wheat and fear for the farmers' profits seems to involve everything within the sphere of political economy. Efforts to settle the problem by considering only one set of circumstances or one class of people will probably not be satisfactory to the other classes. They seldom are."

ITEMS OF CURRENT NEWS.

Matters Affecting the Peace and Prosperity of the People.

Among the news items of the past few days have been several that are apt to be overlooked, and yet are of more than ordinary importance.

There is hope of averting a coal strike on September 1st.

Telegrams carrying a virtual mandate from President Coolidge went forward Monday morning from the United States Coal Commission to S. D. Warriner, chairman of the anthracite operators, and John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers calling on them to meet in North ers, calling on them to meet in New York Wednesday.

As a result there seems to be a possibility of agreement. Officials of the miners' union proposed to the commission to abandon their demand for "check-off" of union dues if the operators would cease their practice of collecting house rent and fuel accounts by the same method. After the conference Wednesday the operators agreed to the proposals in full.

Wage negotiations which broke off two weeks ago between the operators and miners may now be resumd, the operators said in accepting the union proposal.

This mornings News, however, seems to put the matter in doubt.

Diplomatic relations between Mexico and the United States seem about to be resumed as a result of the signing of the Warren-Roa accord by the American Commission's secretaries, L. L. Winslow and J. Ralph Ring, and the Mexican secretary, Juan F. Urquidi, thus concluding a conference lasting thirteen weeks and three days. The record of the conference, comprising the report which Commissioners Warren and Payne will make to President Coolidge and Secretary Hughes upon their return to Washington, is expected to result in the speedy re-establisment of diplomatic relations up-on a basis which heretofore has not existed in Mexican-American intercourse.

An umpire for the claims commissions is to be named by the president of the International Court of Arbitra-tion at The Hague. The record con-tains a promise binding both the American and the Mexican Governments to sign the claims conventions after an exchange of Ambassadors shall have taken place. It is also understood that the representatives of the two Governments have agreed upon a line of policy to be pursued pending ratification of the claims conven-

Crop Conditions in Maryland.

The bulk of the corn is making a quick recovery from the effects of the prolonged dry spell. It is now growing rapidly and is earing well. Harvesting of sugar corn continues.

Thrashing of wheat and rye and cutting of oats in the Allegany Mountain region were further delayed by the showers of the week. Thrashing of wheat, rye, and oats remains unfinished elsewhere over the northern portion of the section.

Pastures show further improvement, and in general are better than at any time since early spring.

Digging of early potatoes has ended generally, except in the Allegany Mountain region. Late potatoes are blooming in the Allegany Mountain region, but elsewhere over the sec tion they are still being cultivated. Sweet potatoes are being dug.

Getting Around Some.

More than half of the value of a and getting away from the job, as it | is just "getting around" and seeing new things and new people, forming new impressions and taking on new points of view. Some people take their vacation by going somewhere, away from the crowd, and just sleeping, or loafing-"taking a rest" as they say, in some quiet out-of-the-way place. Others find more real rest by going where there are people to talk to and new things to see, and find their needed rest simply in enjoying something very different from the or-

One rarely needs as much physical, as mental, rest, and the latter does not necessarily mean absolute quiet. We rest, very often, when we engage in an entirely different activity from that regularly engaged in, which may require a greater degree of activity. It is the "getting around," rather than the mere "going away," that helps.

For one to go away from a school, or an exacting mental job, to attend a course of lectures, or instruction, is no real rest. The man who teaches, or preaches, or writes, or keeps books, is very foolish to be attracted by any sort of mental feast requiring the taking of notes, or close attention and study. So doing is about like a hardworking farmer taking a day off from work to cut wood. The big reason why baseball has such a hold on thousands of people, is not so much the seeing of the game, as it is seeing something so different from regular pursuits, that requires very little exertion of body or mind on the part of the spectator. The game rests him qualities of leadership adequate to the without his realizing it.

The rest comes with the absoluteness of change. vet with plenty of new life and action-just "getting around" among new people and new scenes.

Political Prophets Busy.

Already political prophets are busy with the effect of the death of President Harding on the politics of the county, and incidentally on just how closely President Coolidge will follow in the outlined course of his predecessor. Within a very short time incipient booms of candidates will be launched for the 1924 contest, which is not so precipitate as it at first election itself is only fifteen months in the future.

sentiment in favor of the President as of people would live far beyond their his own successor, as the wise ones will want to hear from him first, as well as see how he fits in his suddenly presented high office, and what he himself may think of it. The new President comes into prominence at a critical time, politically considered, when party lines are twisted and National policies confused in both parties.

Just now, the new President is rather complacently regarded. He is at ing out of sight of creditors. They least not expected to further befuddle political enigmas, and his closest admirers are fully convinced that he is a man of remarkable poise and clearheaded opinions. In a sense, there is an element in his party that considers the atmosphere cleared, and that if it be a fact that Mr. Harding, with his World Court plans, was leading toward further party disunion, the prospect seems to be that this phase of the cloudiness may be cleared up rather they would get more out of life to easily, should his successor conclude not to back the Court idea further.

As President Harding's attitude toward the Vice Presidency set a new precedent of generosity and wisdom, so Vice-President Coolidge's complete identification with the administration of his President stands forth in fine contrast with the conduct of some of his predecessors. Fortunate indeed is the nation in that a man of full presidential size was at hand to take up the heavy duties, the tremendous responsibilities of the Presidency at a time like this, when President Harding fell under the burden too heavy for one of his physical strength. Every word said and left unsaid, every act done and left un-done, by the new President since the death of President Harding has deeply impressed the American people as indicative of strength of intellect and of character adequate to the great task committed to President Coolidge. The National Republican predicts that the American people, who have had no low estimate of the capacity of Mr. Coolidge, will find in him qualities of leadership beyond their expectations. There has never before been a time in our national history when courage and decision were more urgently needed in national leadership. These qualities are the outstanding characteristics of President Coolidge, -a man who thinks much, talks little and acts only upon the basis of matured judgment reached after reflecion and conference.

Patriotism on the part of politicians and people requires that in this great emergency President Coolidge be given opportunity to demonstrate the occasion, which those who know the new President best believe are in him. This is no time for playing politics, for seeking personal advantage, for Collecting Bills.

A dispatch from Des Moines, Iowa, tells of the experience of a girl 19 years old, who started in business as a bill collector and who is making good. She remarks from her experience that there are no real dead-beats but that all people originally mean to pay. Their failure to do so is due to troubles piling up so they can not meet expenses. The secret of success in collecting, she says, is in being persistent, and by keeping at the slow pay folks she finally gets it out of

Bill collecting is commonly called a disagreeable job, but it is someseems, when it is considered that the thing that has to be done, and it performs a great service. Were it not for the pertinacity of the folks who As yet, there is perhaps no strong | chase after delinquent debtors, a lot means. They would pile up expenses with little thought how they were going to come out. A large part of their living would be at the expense of trusting people who let them have money or credit.

People of that type need some one camping on their trail all the time. They get into an indifferent habit of mind, and devise expedients for keepsalve their consciences with excuses for dilatory ways. Now if such folks could be approached by some creditor several times a day, it would have a wonderful tonic effect on them. The necessity for thinking up new excuses, and the remarks of creditors not always of a complimentary nature, would arouse them from their negligent ways.

It would dawn on a lot of them that keep even with the world, and either spend a little less or earn a little more On the other hand, the party must so they could look the community in around corners. All honor to the bill collectors, for such folks are a force

Autos and Churches.

In a talk with a good woman of ed, and regarded with the highest es- Apopka, whose friendship we regard highly, she found occasion to say she regretted that so much automobiling is indulged in on Sunday. We did not argue with her, nor did we try to convince her that she takes the wrong view of the matter. But we sincerely hope that there are not many more of the same opinion. We'll admit that there's no excuse for Sunday "joy-riding," which means reckless speeding and boisterousness and a complete disregard for the rights of others as well as disrespect death of President Harding, it gave for the day we are taught to observe the following, in part, comment on the as holy. But when it comes to using situation, with special reference to the the auto in a sensible way on Sunday, we're for it. And if you'll show us "The National Republican was not anything that has done as much for wrong in its estimate of the character | the church in the past few years as the auto, we'll be glad to know what it is. Today the farmer living many miles from a church can attend services without inconvenience in all kinds of weather. Not only that, but he can take his entire family and be there in the same length of time it took him to get ready in the old days, before we had the automobile. He doesn't have to the discharge of his duties with a | a long, hot, dusty, tiresome ride home to dinner after the service, either, now that he has a car. The attendance at all our rural churches has been greatly Vice President Coolidge's attitude increased by the auto, and the church brought closer to the home of thousands of rural residents all over this ahead in his characteristically quiet broad land. And what would the circuit preacher do, serving six or seven churches, without the automobile.

No, there is no place for the Sunday "joy-rider." But for the man who uses his car sensibly and for the comfort, pleasure and benefit of himself and family, Sunday autoing is not out of place.-Apopka (Florida) Chief.

LEGENDS OF THE UNICORN

Interesting Stories Concerning the Fabulous Monster That Once Were Implicitly Believed.

The unicorn is a fabulous beast, usually having the head and body of a horse, the hind legs of an antelope, the tail of a lion (sometimes a horse's tail), sometimes the beard of a goat, its chief feature being a long, sharp, twisted horn, set in the middle of its forehead. Great strength was attributed to the unicorn in medieval times, and early commentators tell how it had been known to worst the elephant in combat. Though as a rule savage and quarrelsome, even with females, the unicorn at mating-time was said to become very gentle to his mate, which is supposed to have given rise to the medieval idea that the unicorn was subdued to gentleness at the sight of a virgin, and would come and lay his head in her lap, which was the only means by which he could be caught, because of his swiftness and ferocity. The picture of a unicorn on a drinking cup symbolized an ancient belief of the efficacy of the unicorn's horn (sometimes used as a drinking cup) against poison.

Another medieval legend about the unicorn is that when it stopped to drink from a pool, its horn, dipping into the water, purified and rendered it sweet.

Ghosts Their Chief Fear.

Indian mail runners fear nothing but ghosts in the jungle, but not a year passes that does not take its heavy toll of runners in the execution of their duty. It might be a tiger, a swollen river, an avalanche in the Himalayas or a gang of robbers. The work goes on just the same; the mail goes through, whatever happens. So said Geoffrey Rothe Clarke, director general of posts and telegraphs in India, speaking before the Indian section of the British Royal Society of Arts. With the runners, Mr. Clarke stated, the mail was a fetish they would protect at all costs. For wild beasts, floods and dangers of all kinds they would not turn aside. But they would go miles out of their way, even when carrying the precious mails, to avoid an evil spirit whom they suspected of lodging in a tree. Of ghosts they are far more afraid than of the fiercest wild beasts.

Deadly Tropical Spiders.

Several species of poisonous spiders in tropical countries are so large and formidable that the natives give them a wide berth. Probably the most feared of these is the great crab spider, which is as large as a human hand and does not spin a web of any kind. The strength of its legs and talons is phenomenal, enabling it to cling to smooth or rough surfaces with equal tenacity. The bite is very painful, and, although not necessarily fatal, if neglected for any length of time blood poisoning is almost sure to set Graduation of Golfing Maniac.

DECLARES MEN ARE COWARDS

Woman Says They Allow Clerks and Restaurants to Sell Them Things They Don't Want.

Men are such cowards. They are afraid to get off a street car backward. They allow clerks to bully them, to tire them out until they purchase what they don't want to purchase. A man goes into a store and asks for a knitted tie. The gentleman behind the counter says "they" aren't wearing knitted ties any longer; will he look at something else? The man says "no," perhaps grumpily; then looks and finally buys.

But a woman doesn't do that. She says "no" and looks somewhere else, trying and trying and trying to get what she wants, even though her purse may finally compel her to buy the second choice. But she isn't a coward.

Men are such cowards. They enter a restaurant and order a steak-well done. When it comes it is exceedingly rare or burnt; they don't like it and growl, but usually they eat it. Or perhaps they send it back and insist on having another. That second one is worse than the first, and the man knows it, but he thinks he has triumphed, or pretends he has, and thanks the waiter—and gives him a good tip.

A woman doesn't do that. If she doesn't like what she gets she sends it back. And if she doesn't get good service she is very likely not to tip.

Men say that women are cruel. But women aren't cowards. It's the men who are that.—San Francisco Call and

EMBROIDERY IS ANCIENT ART

Has Been Practiced for Ages Among Both Civilized and Savage Peoples.

Embroidery is the art of ornamenting cloth and other materials with the needle. Most of the embroideries made today are usually copies of the ancient

Embroidery is believed to have been applied to skins almost as soon as needle and thong were first employed to join pieces of skins together into garments. In Lapland the natives embroider their reindeer skin clothing with needle of reindeer bone, three of reindeer sinew and applique of strips

Travelers say that in Central Africa, among the primitive tribes there, the girls embroider skins with figures of flowers and animals, supplementing the effect with shells and feathers.

Among the ancient Greek textiles exhumed from Crimean graves are both tapestries and embroideries now preserved in the hermitage at Petrograd. One of the embroideries is attributed to the Fourth century B. C. and is in colored wools on wool.

Hanseatic League in Germany.

The Hanseatic league was a politicocommercial association established in 1241 by certain cities of northern Ger-Germany for mutual benefit and protection. It was organized by Hamburg, Bremen and Lubeck, and ultimately included 85 towns. Its affairs were controlled by a diet called the Hansa, which met every three years, generally at Lubeck, and dictated the policy of the association. In 1348 the league proclaimed war against Waldemar, king of Denmark, and in 1428 against Eric, with 40 ships and 12,000 troops, exclusive of seamen.

The league virtually dissolved in 1620, having been greatly injured by the Thirty Years' war. The rise of commerce in the Low countries during the Fifteenth century also contributed materially to its decline. In 1870 Hamburg, Bremen and Lubeck, the last remaining cities of the league, were incorporated into the German empire.

Chinese Suspension Bridges. The Chinese have been acquainted with suspension bridges from time immemorial. Their most ancient historians write of bridges hung on iron chains or on rattan. Such structures seemed strange to the missionaries who reached China. They called them "flying bridges," and one recounts his horror as he felt the bridge swing beneath his steps as he crossed a deep chasm.

In Europe people ridiculed these travelers' tales and treated the accounts of the missionaries as mere stories. Later on, when they received verification, the attitude of distrust persisted, and the old bridges, dangling on their rusty chains, were held in derision. Then came forgetfulness, and when in 1823, the suspension bridge was introduced in Europe, not on rusty chains, but on new steel cables, people applauded the engineer's amazing ingenuity.

Taking No Chances.

At the club they were discussing the Luxor excavations. The professor said they were of immense scientific interest. The dry goods man remarked that they had started many styles.

"Old things coming back into vogue," suggested the banker. "And this very tendency gives me pause. I guess I'll keep quiet about a discovery I made last week." "What was that?"

"While digging a post hole in my back yard I excavated a wire bustle."

Gas, by All Means.

An elderly woman paid her first visit to the dentist to have several teeth extracted.

"Will you have gas, madam?" she was asked. "Certainly," she replied. "I don't want you fumbling in the dark."

(For the Record.) Thinking perhaps a letter to the Record would be appreciated, I am sending a few lines. I have just returned from a week's stay among my parishioners of a pastorate in Clarion County, Pa., to which I was elected last June. Not having a parsonage, and not being able to procure a house I was compelled to decline the call. This is the second call within a few months that, I found it necessary to decline. Having resigned the Rossville pastorate a few months ago, have been supplying pulpits, and will continue to do so, until I am suitably located. I have been elected Principal of Big Rock public school, and expect to assume my duties August 20, in connection with my ministerial work. Hope I shall have the privilege of coming to old Carroll some Sunday to preach.

Let me say, Clarion County, is made up of energetic and industrious citizens. Farmers do not cultivate the ground on a large scale, for many of them work in the clay and coal mines, which are the chief industries. Many of the miners earn from $200 to $300 monthly. The bituminous coal retails at the mines from 12c to 15c a bushel. Twenty-seven bushels are count-ed a ton. At the clay mines the wages

There are a great many gas wells, in that section of the state, ranging in depth from 2000 to 3000 feet. Many homes use the gas for both heating and lighting purposes. Most of the land has been leased by the individual owner to a Gas Company, for 20 years and the Company must drill a well, on the owner's premises before the expiration of the lease. The land owner then receives from the company $250., and free use of the gas, for domestic purposes as long as he resides on the place. The Clarion people are very hospitable and obliging, and are upto-date, in most every respect. Most all possess the modern conveniences; water in the house, telephone, etc. Every home that I visited had a telephone installed, paying for same $12

Which will you put on YOUR house? Certainly there is no question in the mind of any person as to whether pure, or impure Paint will wear longer, look better, or cover more surface.

Neither is there any question as to whether, or not, pure or impure is an honest claim. On the label of every can containing Paint at all reputable, is the analysis of the Paint, and a list of each ingredients. "Before investing, investigate." You are not buying intelligently unless you do.

If Monarch 100% Paint costs any more per gallon, than any other Paint you know, look for the reason. We do not claim to give you something for nothing, and no one else can honestly do so. Pure Paint is composed of White Lead, Zinc, Linseed Oil and Turpentine Dryer, only. Nothing else (unless coloring matter.)

MONARCH PAINT IS 100% PURE.

It is no more expensive to apply a good Paint than an impure one, and the results justify the use of the best. Better looks, better wear, fewer gallons.

BILIOUSNESS sick headache, sour stomach, constipation, easily avoided. An active liver without calomel. CHAMBERLAIN'S TABLETS Never sicken or gripe—only 25c Base Ball Notes.

The percentage of luck—or what is termed the "breaks" in a game—is very large in baseball. The batting of a ball just 6 inches inside or outside of the fowl lines; the lining out of a hard hit ball, the course of which may be "safe" or unsafe by a foot or more; an unevenness of the ground that may cause an unexpected bound; the effect of the wind on a high fly; the successfulness of a bunt; the chance that happens to place an infielder in a certain spot to take, or miss, a play; the making of a hard safe liner with men on bases; all help to make up a considerable list of pure luck "breaks."

In a small score, the pitchers often get the credit for "wizard" work, when it rightfully belongs to the field ers. The small score is also often classed as a "good game," while as a matter of fact it may be merely an exhibition of weak batting.

A Surprise Birthday Party.

A surprise birthday party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Halter, in honor of their daughter, Rhoda. A very pleasant evening was spent in playing games and music on the piano and violin. Refreshments were served, at a late hour all depart-ed for their homes wishing Miss Rhoda many more happy birthdays. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Halter, Mr. and Mrs. William Marker, Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Spangler, Speculation vs. Investment.

A Louisiana newspaper is responsible for this bit of wisdom;

"The trouble with too many people who have $100. or so to invest is, they are not able to distinguish between an investment and a gamble. They are easily induced by promoters and salesmen to part with their money in schemes that offer them little chance of winning. And when they are 'stung" they are too proud, or too sensitive to public opinion, to come right out and report the matter—so the fake agent or promoter goes unpunished and proceeds to hunt up more

Coolidge An Early Riser.

Washington, Aug. 9.-President Coolidge has spent much of his life on a Vermont farm, and he indicated today that he intended to introduce farm hours at the White House.

This morning, despite the strain of yesterday's funeral ceremonies, by 6:45 he had left his suite in the New Willard Hotel and, accompanied only by Secret Service men, he walked more than a mile to Thomas Circle and back before breakfast. Under ordinary circumstances Mr. Coolidge retires early and frequently is up by 5:30 A. M.

The Perfect Husband

Charles G. Norris

Author of "Salt," "Brass," etc.

Copyright by United Feature Syndicate

There was sullen silence across the breakfast table. Lucy Vallentine bent her head, and unseeing poked at her food. Her husband finished his ham and eggs deliberately, pushed away his plate, and lounging back in his chair, sucked the wind through his teeth with little smacking noises of his tongue. Then he leisurely folded the morning newspaper, rose, took his hat and coat from the closet, and stalked out of the apartment without a word, sharply slamming the outer door behind him.

Lucy sat on, thinking. A look of hopelessness, almost of despair settled upon her face. That was Tom -that was the way Tom acted; they were in for another dreary spell of his surliness! She thought over the thirteen years of her married life; she visioned the thirteen that might follow-the twenty-six perhaps. That was to be her fate: yoked to a churl, uncouth and ill-mannered, who was insensible of how he offended her. And the thought that infuriated her most was that Tom regarded himself as a perfect husband, faithful, good, generous, devoted to her and to his home! It was true enough. In fairness, Lucy had to admit that Tom was generous; he was faithfulness itself; he earned a good salary; he saved; he spent every night and even Sundays at home, and gave her an ample allowance. He considered that by this he discharged his duty as a husband, nobly, and regarded the cause of their constant bickerings, which recently he had chosen to treat in moody silence, as being entirely his wife's responsibility. He never missed an opportunity to point out to her that he had no vices; he did not even smoke. He regarded her sourly as an ungrateful spouse—a cranky, unreasonable, nervous woman, Lucy rocked her head in her hands, and moaned. Tom was so egregiously stupid, so self-satisfied, so blind. She could have forgiven his obtuseness, but she could not forgive his rudeness. Every day of his life he unconsciously affronted her, and almost as frequently did so deliberately. He growled at her, sneered at her, and when crossed, shouted her into silence.

She had rebelled this morning. The incident that had precipitated the whole trouble had been of trivial ine. it always was. had said the cream was sour, and she had casually remarked that she didn't see how that could be since it was the morning's delivery, and then he had shouted at her that he guessed he knew what he was talking about, and that when he said the cream was sour, it was sour. She had said nothing in reply; she had considered his ungraciousness dispassionately for a time, and then in the midst of the breakfast, she had suddenly put her clasped hands down before her on the table, and said her say temperately and earnestly, urging her right to courteous treatment. She was familiar with the look of displeasure that came into his face as he listened, and reaching for an argument that would strengthen her words, she had alluded to Mr. Gray and his wife, who lived in the adjoining apartment, and that had proved the spark to his

For Tom hated the Grays, hated everything about them. The suite of rooms these neighbors occupied was on the same floor as the Vallentines'; an air-well separated the two establishments, and upon this source of light and ventilation a bedroom window of each apartment gave vent. Much that went on in the Gray household could be heard by the Vallentines, and Tom and Lucy listened to the stray words and casual conversations that went on between their unsuspecting neighbors, unabashed.

Lucy loved the way in which the Grays spoke to each other. It was so different from that to which she was accustomed. The man had extraordinary nuances in his voice; it was beautifully modulated, and when he happened to address his wife as "my dear," it was like a caress. Tom chose to ridicule the little intimate things they said to one another, and to imitate Mr. Gray's manner. It made Lucy acutely uncomfortable, for she admired Mrs. Gray, was genuinely fond of her, and was in terror lest Tom should be in turn overheard.

Lucy had had her misgivings as to the decency of listening to her friend's confidential murmurings with her husband, but she assured herself that her motive was not unworthy curiosity. It was merely that she enjoyed with a hungry soul the manner in which this particular husband and wife spoke to one another. It was beautiful, it soothed her, it was like exquisite distant music. She had come to be more or less intimately acquainted with Mrs. Gray since that lady had moved next door. The two women visited one another, made frequent shopping trips together, and sometimes lunched in each other's kitchens.

Mr. Gray was an interior decorator: he was often away for several days at a time when he went to supervise the work on some rich man's country home. He returned home, always, with a trifling present for his wife: a bangle, a pair of silver buckles, a lacquered box, or perhaps only a handful of jonquils. Frequently he took her out to dinner and the theater, and once, to Lucy's positive knowledge, he had inveigled her down town in order to buy her a hat.

That had seemed to Lucy the apotheosis of conjugal devotion. Her own husband had never brought her home unexpectedly a present in all his life. Once in a great while, she induced him to go with her to the theater or the movies. He had never commented on anything she wore, or took the smallest notice of hat or gown.

Lucy, considering her own lot and the happy circumstances that were Mrs. Gray's on this particular morning, said to herself with considerable bitterness that while she was in no danger of coveting her neighbor's hushand, she did long with all her soul for some degree of contentment with her own. And upon these reflections, came Alice Gray, her sweet, composed face free of worry, her serene beauty glowing today with unexpected in-

Alonzo had telephoned, she explained, that he was obliged to go to Boston; he would have to be away for several days, and he wanted his wife to accompany him. Could she arrange her affairs to be ready to leave with him on the late afternoon

Could she? Alice Gray's eyes danced with excitement as she caught Lucy's hand. There was nothing to detain her; she had never visited Boston, she thought it perfectly sweet of Alonzo to want her to go. There was the whole day before her in which to get ready; she needed a new hat, a veil and a bag, and she urged Lucy to come with her and help her pick them out.

Lucy could not resist. She was not small enough to refuse to share this friend's pleasure even though she felt the injustice of Alice Gray's having so much and herself so little. And the bitter feelings of the early morning were forgotten, as she hastily piled the unwashed dishes in the sink to soak, gave an indifferent glance at the unmade beds, thrust head and arms into her trim tailor skirt, and reached for the smart little yellow straw hat which she had only been able to wear once since she bought it, a month before. Later, seated beside her radiant friend on the top of a Fifth avenue bus, the spring sunshine flooding the city, the street gay with fashionably dressed women, she caught something of Alice Gray's exhilaration.

The two women threaded the aisles of department stores, priced fabrics and exclaimed over the novelties. Alice Gray bought a charming hat, the veil, and a neat little handbag with nickel clasps, and Lucy indulged herself in a much-needed electric iron. In buoyant spirits they made a leisurely progress at a late luncheon hour to one of the smart, new French restaurants on Park avenue. And almost in the entrance way, about to pass through the revolving glass doors to the street, absorbed and gaily chatting together, they encountered Alonzo Gray and a handsomely dressed woman. A happy exclamation burst from Lucy and she started forward with a delighted greeting.

"Why, it's your husband-it's Mr.

But her words died on her lips. Alice Gray's fingers closed like a vise upon her arm, and the hand dragged her aside. Something ugly and unpleasant flashed into Lucy's mind. There was a whirling silence, a dizzying moment while her pulses raced, and her breath was still. Then, unconscious and still chatting amiably, Alonzo Gray and his companion passed into the street.

"Two, please-and in the corner. I like those upholstered seats." Alice Gray composedly addressed herself to the head waiter, and serenely followed him into the cool and flower-scented restaurant.

"Come, Lucy-"

Lucy, shaken, bewildered, the significance of what had occurred still half guessed, mechanically obeyed. Mechanically she ungloved her hands, mechanically she pushed stray locks of hair up under her hat, mechanically she ordered. But when the obsequious head waiter had murmured: "Bien, madame," and had departed, she could only keep her eyes on her plate, and sit tongue-tied, fearful of any comment she might hazard, miserably conscious of what must be her friend's humiliation and discomfiture. That unquestionably had been Alonzo Gray, and the woman with him had been-Lucy knew with unmistakable intuition, that the woman was not of her world, or of the world of decent women. Alice had seen it all; she had understood, and had saved Lucy from precipitating a frightfully embarrassing encounter!

"My dear-my dear-" Alice Gray laid her hand on Lucy's arm. "You mustn't feel so badly. I understand what's passing in your mind-but, my dear, you mustn't concern yourself on my account! . . . I know; I know all about it."

Lucy met her friend's unruffled gaze with widening eyes and parted lips. Mrs. Gray smiled at her, a wry, twisted little smile. "Oh, yes. I know all about it, andand I don't care! Alonzo is all that I need in a husband; he is considerate, attentive, deferential; he likes to be | try to love me a little!"

with me, and to have me with him, and he loves me. Oh, yes, he does; he loves me truly. . . There have always been women in Alonzo's life! This one happens to be a clever artist. Alonzo employs her as a decorator. I even know her name. She's Flora Balzanni. You know Balzanni, the opera singer? She's his divorced wife, and is quite promiscuous. Alonzo has been-well, attentive to her for more than a year. Of course, he has no idea I know anything about it, and I wouldn't have him suspect I've learned for anything in the world. You see, he wouldn't want to hurt me, and he would think that if I knew, I would be offended. But I have no more feeling of jealousy for this passing fancy of his than I would have for a good cigar he enjoys after dinner. . . . Oh, I know my views are anything but conventional. I am shocking you"; Alice interrupted herself, smiling a rather hard, cold little smile. "I would shock most women. But I believe altogether too much emphasis is placed upon fidelity in marriage. As long as my husband in no way jeopardizes my rights as his lawful wife, why should I concern myself with what he does outside his home? Frankly, I would rather have him unfaithful to me in an occasional way, as he is, than have him drink himself into besottedness, as many a man does, and bring home to me a throbbing head, a nasty temper, and a rancid breath. Alonzo satisfies me; he more than adequately fulfills his part of life's companion with me. I am thoroughly content; what else matters?"

Her own apartment smelled close to Lucy, when, later the same day, she closed the door behind her. It seemed cheerless, empty, desolate. The mood with which Alice Gray had infected her all day, dropped from her like a cloak suddenly falling to the floor.

She put away her things and set about getting dinner, washing the dishes, whipping the unmade beds together, setting the table. After all, her husband was probably no worse than any other woman's. She made him a pan of hot biscuits, of which she knew he was particularly fond.

At six o'clock, she heard him come in. She heard his creaking steps to the closet where he always hung his hat and coat; she heard him creak his way back to the front room where she knew he had thrown himself down on the sofa, and was reading the evening paper with feet cocked over one hard, upholstered arm. He had no word of greeting for her; he would have none; a dark and sullen silence would enwrap him for days to come.

She put the food on the table at the half-hour, and called him to dinner. He did not stop to wash his face or hands or comb his hair; he came just as he was, sullenly, silently, and hunched his chair up to his place. Suddenly something snapped in her. She screamed; she screamed piercingly; one wild, sharp shriek. She buried her face in her hands, forcing the fingers deep into her eyeballs. Then she began to sob, brokenly, passionately, all the grief pent up in her bursting out in an agony of weeping.

In 13 years, Tom Vallentine had never seen his wife cry. He was startled now-alarmed and shocked. He watched her in pained uneasiness for some minutes, groping about in his mind for some way to check the flood of sobbing that beat upon his ears. It had been a long, long time since he had laid a hand upon her in affection, yet now he was moved by the violence of her grief, and the unfamiliar impulse came to him. He laid down his knife and fork and stared at her stolidly, frowning deeply. He thought of getting up and patting her shoulder; he tried to think of something to say. and in his perplexity began to talk at random. He did not know how to be gentle; he had forgotten how to be tender. The iron bonds of habit were too well forged about him. He had always treated his wife with contumely, and now when he strove to reach her troubled spirit with gentle words, he found himself only mouthing a justification of his actions that morning. Lucy could not suspect that behind the harsh voice, and slow, clumsy words, there stirred within him the first concern for her he had known in years. Only the dogged reiteration of the facts about the cream reached her consciousness. Her sobbing fell silent, but she still pressed her palms to her cheeks, her fingers to her eyes. Presently she was aware he had forsaken the topic of the cream; now it was of his virtues he discoursed.

" . . . I let you live your own life; you go and come as you please; you have your own friends. I never ask you how or why you spend the money every month, and I never let the first go by without depositing your check in the bank! I never question what you do with yourself all day; all I ask of you is to run the house and keep . I don't see how things nice. . you've got much fault to find with me. I don't drink or gamble or smoke; I don't go out nights, and I've never looked at another woman in all my life! Now, some men . . Lucy listened until she could stand no more. With wet tears staining her cheeks, her face convulsed, she suddenly straightened herself and faced him, her lip trembling, her hands half outstretched to him across the table.

"Oh, Tom, Tom," she cried, "I don't care how moral you are. I don't care anything about other women. I don't care whether you go after them or not. Seek them, kiss them, have them anything you like! Gamble, smoke and drink! Deny yourself nothing on my account. I don't care how wicked you are. All I want you to do is to be kind to me, Tom-be kind, be kind! Don't be so ugly and mean to me. And sometimes-just now and then-

MANY LEGENDS OF HIAWATHA

Said to Have Made His Home on Mackinac Island-Why He Cannot Return to Earth.

Some legends credit Hiawatha with having made his home at Mackinac island, and from that point as a center, to have made a new earth around him. According to the story the fight with his father began on the upper Mississippi, and the bowlders found along its banks were their missiles. The south shore of Lake Superior was the scene of his conflict with the serpents. He hunted the great beaver around Lake Superior, and brought down his dam at Sault Ste. Marie. A depression in a rock on the southern edge of Michipicotea bay is where he alighted after a jump across the lake. In a larger depression, near Thunder bay, Lake Superior, he sat when smoking his last pipe. The big rocks on the east side of Grand Traverse bay, near Antrim, are the bones of a stone monster that he slew.

Some legends say that Hiawatha is buried under a mountain three miles long, on the east side of Thunder bay, which, from the water, resembles a man lying on his back. Others say that Hiawatha now lives at the top of the earth, amid the ice, and directs the sun. He has to live in a cold country because, if he were to return, he would set the earth on fire with his footsteps.

AVERS "MISCOUSIN" IS RIGHT

Student of Aboriginal Language Says Our Ancestors Erred in Naming Great Western State.

Following the discussion as to whether the state of Wisconsin was named after the Polish explorer, Tadeusz Wiscont, as authorities in Madison have been told, or whether the name was derived from the Indian appellation to the Wisconsin river, William H. Wheeler, student of Indian lore and aboriginal nomenclature, says the real name of the state should be Miscousin. Mr. Wheeler believes the word Wisconsin is a corruption of an Indian term meaning red stone, which is characteristic of the banks of the Wisconsin river in the Dells region.

Mr. Wheeler lived for years among the Indians of the Lake Superior region, where his father, Rev. I. H. Wheeler, was a missionary. "All over this land," asserts Mr. Wheeler, "the memory of aboriginal inhabitants was sought to be perpetuated by our ancestors by undertaking to apply Indian names to lakes, rivers and streams, but with lamentable inaccuracy, so that it is extremely difficult in most cases to one posted in the language, to identify the name."

Spider Bites.

In the warm parts of Spain and Italy there is a brown spider the size of a chestnut, called the tarantula. A somewhat similar spider in Mexico got the same name from the early Spanish explorers. There is an old story of the danger of its bite and that tarantulas coming North on a bunch of bananas have killed people in the United States. One story that it produced epilepsy and a kind of dancing madness certainly prevailed in the Middle ages. This, it was claimed, could be cured by special music. Many experiments have been made as to the effect of these spider bites. One distinguished entomologist actually allowed various species of spiders to bite his hand. Some of these drew blood, giving a sensation like that of a sharp needle prick. The wounds smarted and swelled somewhat and itched when rubbed, producing very much the sensation of mosquito bites, but no permanent ill-effects fol-

How Urga Got Its Name.

Mongols travel, not along the station road, but directly from one herd of horses to another, where fresh horses are caught and saddled and new owners substituted for those of the last herd. This is called the right of urga. Any traveler having the right of urga can catch horses himself.

It is from this custom, according to one explanation, that the town of Urga, in Mongolia, abode of the Living Buddha, took its name among outsiders. By the Mongols themselves it is always referred to as Ta Kure, "The Great Monastery." The reason the Buriats and Russians, who were the first to trade into this region, called it Urga was because it was the principal destination of all the trading expeditions which crossed the plains by this old method or right of travel.

"Shells?" "Yes, shells. Don't you remember you said you liked turkey with oyster stuffing?"

Something New in Botany. A certain teacher, proud of the way in which she had instructed her class in botany, told the examiner to call on any scholar and to ask whatever question he pleased on the subject.

It happened that the first pupil selected was a newcomer who had attended only two lectures.

Asked to name some botanical terms, he replied: "Please, sir, I know only two-aurora borealis and delirium ity in the distribution of alms. Up to mitted to pass. this time it would seem that the apostles did all the work. In view of such burdens, perhaps some things had been neglected. However, the church proved itself capable of meeting the exigency. A congregational meeting was called; the case placed before the church and church, giving the apostles the necessary time for prayer and the ministry emergencies with Him. sary time for prayer and the ministry of God's word. Thus we see how that the Spirit-guided church was able to solve its own problems, and how church government developed. Just as the deacon's office sprang out of this dissension, so new needs called forth new officers. Among the seven deacons, Stephen had first place. While engaged in his duties as deacon, he sprang into the light as an eloquent and powerful preacher. So mighty was the priests believed.

II. Stephen Before the Council

1-Disputing With Stephen (vv. 9,

Certain foreign speaking Jews took the lead in this controversy. Perhaps the fact that Stephen was a Grecian Jew provoked them to the act. He was more than a match for them while the debate was carried along the lines of reason and Scripture.

2-Charged With Blasphemy (vv.

They trumped up this charge and endeavored to support it by secretly finding and inducing men to perjure themselves in their testimony. Stephen showed in his preaching that God's purpose was progressive and that the policy instituted by Meses should be superseded by the new faith, since this was the culmination of what Moses began. He showed that the old dispensation would be superseded by the new and that the church would come Dut into the liberty of Christ.

3-Stephen's Face Transfigured (v.

He was so completely filled with Christ that his face shone as the face of an angel. It was Christ shining through him.

III. Stephen's Defense (7:1-53).

In refuting their charge he showed by the history of God's dealing with the Jews that they had always resisted Him. Therefore their present attitude was because they were unwilling to move forward with the divine purpose. As pointed out by Stifler four points stand out in his defense:

1. God's dealings with the Jews showed progress. The end was not reached by a single leap but by gradual stages.

2. The temple was not the only holy place. God appeared at different places and at different times. 3. Israel invariably opposed God as

He tried to lead them on. 4. He showed his loyalty to Moses by constantly referring to him. IV. Stephen Stoned (7:54-60).

1.—Looked Steadfastly Into Heaven (v. 55). This was the secret of his calm. If he had looked about him he might have been afraid. 2. He saw the glory of God.

A vision of God's glory can only be seen by those who are loyal unto Him, even unto death.

3. He saw Jesus standing on the right hand of God. The fact that Jesus was standing shows that He is actively interested in the suffering of His faithful witnesses.

4. Cast him out of the city and stoned him.

5. His prayer (v. 60). How like that of Jesus on the cross. Christ so completely filled him that he could thus

6. He fell asleep (v. 60). The Christian's death is only a sleep. This sublime scene must have vitally affected Saul who was consenting unto his death.

> August 19 How To Get On In Life Deuteronomy 8:1-18

In this Scripture, Moses interprets to Israel the significance of their wilderness journeys. The second and third verses are especially applicable in this explanation. "Thou shalt remember all the way which the Lord thy God led thee these forty years in the wilderness, to humble thee, and to prove thee, to know what was in thine heart, whether thou wouldest keep his commandments or no. And he hum-bled thee, and suffered thee to hunger, Boldly for Jesus.

To get on in life, one must understand oneself. This understanding can be reached only by acquaintance with the Word of God. This Word imparts the knowledge of the ways of God with men. It explains the nature and reason of things. It begins with God and it declares that "of him and spirit-filled men of good reputation to administer the temporalities of the church, giving the anostles the poor

All the circumstances of life have one end in view, namely, to bring out the real attitude of man towards God. This explains the underlying reason of the ways of God with men. To yield to Him in the various circumstances of life as they arise is the evidence of a right attitude of heart. It spells submission. ,For all such it is written, "the meek will he guide in judgment and the meek will he teach his way"—His way of forgiveness, of his ministry that the number of disci- cleansing; His way of justifying and ples greatly increased; even many of the priests believed.

As one is taught of God in the understanding of these things, he learns in the best sense of the words, "how to get on in life.

For my part, I am not so sure at bottom that man is, as he says, the king of nature; he is far more its devastating tyrant. I believe he has many things to learn from animal societies, older than his own and of infinite variety.—Romain Rolland.

POINTS FOR HOUSEKEEPERS

To remove fruit stains there is nothing better (and perfectly harmless to cloth) for this purpose than lemon juice applied full strength. Rub it in then rinse in cold water. Lemon juice and salt applied to rust will, when placed in sunlight, remove it at once; if of long standing, two or three applications may be needed. To remove stains from the hands lemon juice or vinegar mixed with corn meal is a fine agent to not only take off discolorations, but will make the hands smooth and soft. When the meal becomes dry moisten it with water. A dish of cornmeal near the sink will be found a great conveni-

Rose geranium leaves laid in the cake tins under the greased paper will give a delightful flavor to layer cake. A leaf drawn through apple jelly adds greatly to the flavor of the jelly.

A good butter maker says-Never let a cloth, be it ever so sweet and clean, come in contact with butter. Pack it in jars and cover with butter paper.

Wash hair brushes in hot water to which baking soda has been added. Add a small handful to a pint of boiling water and when dissolved dip the brushes into it, using care not to cover the backs of the brushes. Rinse in cold water and dry in the sun or a current of air. The quicker the brushes dry the stiffer will be the bristles.

When making ginger cookies, fruit cake, spice cake, or any dark cake, use cold coffee for the liquid. It not only adds flavor, but brings out the flavor of the spices.

Eat apples; they are good scavengers. Apples are said to be good for brain workers as they are rich in phosphorus. They act upon the liver, and as an old saw puts it, "An apple a day keeps the doctor away." Surely such medicine is a pleasure to take. Some one has sald that an apple before retiring is a good thing for the teeth. Nature seems to recognize its value for she is more prodigal with it than with any other fruit. Maxwell lelle

SOMETHING TO BE AVOIDED

Writer in Magazine Declares Club Meal to Be Very Real Danger to Partaker Thereof.

A man died the other day who was so prominent that probably every newspaper in the country printed an obituary, and humbly bowed to the inscrutable ways of providence in taking so good a man,

The writer talked lately with the man's closest friend, who said the untimely death was due to the club habit.

The man loved the club idea. Almost every day and night he appeared at some club affair, and ate too much of unsuitable food! banquet food is nearly always unfit for human consumption. He loved to be called upon to speak, and utter beautiful nothings. He loved to shake hands with the amiable asses who make up the usual club membership, and hear their polite, meaningless words. The man attained distinction late in life, and so loved it that he tried to crowd into his later years all the applause he had missed between thirty and sixty. He was repeatedly warned by physicians and real friends that the club habit was "getting him," but he continued

One day, recently, a large audience gathered at a club affair because this man was advertised to speak. When the hour came for the speaking, a note was handed the chairman, who arose and said: "Gentlemen, I regret that the speaker for this occasion cannot be present; he has just expired from stomach trouble."

Will the vast thousands who belong to the vast number of foolish clubs heed the warning, eat moderately of good food at home, and avoid in future the foolish piffle usually heard in club addresses?-From E. W. Howe's Monthly.

Rhodian Antiquities.

The restoration of the hospital of the knights in Rhodes has been completed by the Italian authorities with their usual thoroughness and good taste. The medieval hospital of the Knights of St. John is an important link between classical, Byzantine and Turkish periods. The chief ward of the hospital is 190 feet long and 45 feet wide. In the time of the knights this ward contained 100 beds for pilgrims and patients. In 1523 the Turks took Rhodes, and the hospital was diverted to other uses. The island of Rhodes is in the Aegean and was famous for having one of the "Seven Wonders of the World"-namely, the "Colossus of Rhodes," which was overthrown by an earthquake. The island was the last outpost of the Crusaders. The occupation by the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem dates from the years 1308-1310. The principal aim of this order was the protection of pilgrims and care of the sick. Italy is to retain Rhodes for 15 years, when a plebiscite of the population, which is mainly Greek, will be taken. The Italians are such colonizers, however, that there is little doubt that the inhabitants will elect to stay under Italian rule.-Scientific American.

Edible Oil Production.

There are many edible and industrial oils in use at the present time and it would appear that most of the available sources of these products have been exhausted. But the investigations of the Department of Agriculture have proved otherwise, that valuable edible oils can be obtained in paying quantities from waste products and from seeds, such as the sunflower, not yet grown to any great extent in this country. Tomato seeds are recovered in large quantities. An oil can be extracted from these seeds which is suitable for food oil. The yield is about 18 per cent of the dry weight of seed by pressing and 20 to 22 per cent if a solvent is used. Oils obtained from brown mustard and charlock are of use in the manufacture of soap and technical products. Oil from the sunflower seed can be used for food and in the manufacture of soaps and Russian varnishes. Okra seed oil resembles cottonseed oil closely and can be used for most of the applications to which the latter is put. Cohune nut oil resembles coconut oil and can replace it for many purposes .- Scientific Amer-

Days of Clipper Ship's Glory. The science museum at South Kensington, London, is advertising for a model of the prototype of the American clipper ship. It is possible that one will be found in some neglected storeroom but not probable that there is anyone now living who could reproduce one from memory. The original clipper was created about a century ago; the type, with some modifications, was in the heydey of its glory during the gold rush to the Pacific coast in the 1850s; it passed out of existence with the building of the railroad across the American continent, except for a few retained for service in the China trade.

Edible Morning Glory. A morning glory that can be enjoyed by those who are not early risers has been found in China by J. F. Rock, plant explorer of the United States Department of Agriculture, and imported for growth in this country. The chief beauty of this plant is that it is edible, its leaves and hollow stems forming a succulent spinachlike food. Edible morning glories are not altogether new to this country, experts say, as our common sweet potato is a cultivated member of the morning glory family which was developed into an important food by the early American Indians .- Science Service.

For forty years farmers have proven that Royster Fertilizer grows more bushels of wheat per acre, makes plumper kernels, and more straw. Ask your County Agent, or the Royster Farm Service Department, what analysis to use on your land, and then insist upon Royster's to guarantee yourself the highest quality materials and manufacture. The name "Royster" on a bag is like "sterling" on silver.

Experiments by the Delaware Experiment Station showed an increase in yield of wheat from 11.5 bu. per acre without fertilizer, to yield of 28.9 bushels per acre with complete fertilizer. Fertilizer differs like seed potatoes. Insist upon Royster's to get the utmost satisfaction. F. S. Royster Guano Company, Baltimore, Md.

By mistake in last issue, the date of the racing matinee at the Fair Ground track, was left out. It should have been Saturday, August 18. The event will begin at about 1:30 P. the shops are not as busy as they were a few months back. This is to be expected in the automobile trade, as July and August are always dull. According to the preparations that are being made, to take care of the expected increase of orders, the look out for plenty of work in the near future, is good. If you were driving on the streets any evening, you would think that everybody had a machine, but from the way Ford and the rest of them are turning out new ones, there must still be a lot of people who use horses or walk. Wages are about the same as the last time I wrote. They are high, according to what they are some other places, but the prices of the things you need in the house takes care of that ,and levels things up.

It is no use for me to say that I was sorry to hear of the death of Seiss, for every one that knew him, was surely as sorry as I was. So many of my friends have passed away since we came out here, that I never get the Record, that I do not wonder whose death I will have to be informed of when I turn to that column. Before closing, I want to say that I am sorry that Taneytown is losing such a useful citizen as it will lose when Rev. L. B. Hafer leaves there. No one knows better than I do just what his absence will mean to the various organizations he is interested in beside his church. Having been associated with him for a number of years in lodge work, and other matters that came up while we were both living in Taneytown, I think I know his worth, and am glad that I have this opportunity of expressing my ap preciation of what his friendship

JOHN J. REID.

A Letter From Iowa.

(For the Record.) Greetings to all, from Rev. John H. Gonso, former pastor of the Church of God at Westminster, Md., who is now engaged in Evangelistic work in the State of Iowa.

Iowa is one of the greatest States in the Union (of course, excepting old Maryland, especially Carroll Co.,) That part of Maryland is the dearest spot on earth to me. I have been here since the first of June, doing evange listic work for Rev. E. E. Hiltebridle Rev. Heltibridle is a native of old Carroll Co., born near Taneytown and came to Iowa 43 years ago. He has been in the active ministry 30 years. Prior to this time, his occupation was that of farming. He has been a very successful farmer, but is now engaged in gospel work exclusive. He has a circuit of 4 churches isolated from his home. He lives in one of the cleanest and most beautiful towns that I have yet been privileged to visit. He has a magnificent home in Grundy Center, county seat of Grunday County, Iowa. Rev. E. E. Heltibridle and Mr. Grant Heltibridle, of Westminster are broth-

I have conducted four successful Evangelistic campaign for Rev. E. E. Heltibridle. He is a man of more than 60 years of age. And is nsc-cessfully serving one of the largest fields that I have ever had the privilege of visiting. When he reaches his last appointment he has made a

> I have been in the west now since the last of April, and I am ashamed to have to confess that I am a little homesick to see dear old Westminster, and thieves to be slower in visiting and meet again with my many friends whom I have learned to love.

I will be delighted again to worship with the little church on Center St. for I had been its pastor for the last 10 years and when I say there is no spot on earth that is so dear to me, many will misunderstand; but there is a reason.

I expect to return home the last of August, and hope to take a few weeks of rest before starting on my next campaign. I will go to Harrisburg, Pa., for my next meeting. I have had many interesting experiences while here in Iowa. To hear the old settlers tell of their tragic encounter with the Indians, would make the hair almost stand on end. We traveled much of the time over the old Hoge coach trails, and being along the Iowa river, there are very many high bluffs. From these high points the Indians would watch and wait to attack the emigrants and the old stage coach drivers. It is indeed very interesting as one listens to these old men as they tell of the habits and customes of the Indians; how they hunted and prepared their food, and how they worshipped. I will bring a snow white flint arrow head, as souvenir, along home with me. There are hundreds of tomahawks and battle axes and much old crockery and Indian mounds where they buried their dead. There are several reservations nearby, where many Indians reside. In all, I have had a great trip, but will be glad to get back home.

JOHN H. GONSO.

Let us Pray.

The "Chief," Major Hall's paper, published at Apopka, Fla., last week, contained the following bit of story, which, if tried, might be effective in

Taneytown. The evening lesson was from the Book of Job, and the minister had just read, "Yea, the light of the wicked shall be put out," when suddenly the church was plunged into total darkness.
