

FREDERICK COUNTY WRITTEN UP.

Fine Illustrated Article on the Heart of Maryland.

"The Transmitter," a monthly magazine issued by the C. & P. Telephone Company, contains a fine article, handsomely illustrated, covering Frederick City and County. The illustrations are artistic and the write-up a model of wide information contained in compact space. Many half-tone views are given of buildings, both new and historic, as well as views of the farming sections, while the early history of the county is comprehensively given, together with incidents of the civil war, of the Barabara Fritchie story it says:

"To an incident of that war, Frederick owes much of its fame—the episode of Barbara Fritchie.

If you are familiar with Whittier's poem, you will remember that Barbara is supposed to have shook a flag in defiance in the face of Stonewall Jackson.

People in Frederick and elsewhere are still debating the matter, and it must be admitted there is some room for doubt. Stonewall Jackson was a stern man. The chances are that he would not have brooked defiance even from an aged woman.

The real facts of the case seem to be that Barbara Fritchie kept her flag flying at all times, whether the town was occupied by Union soldier or Confederate, and that it was not molested. Further than that a careful historian would hardly venture. With a poet, of course, it's different.

Then follows Civil War history leading up to Frederick's claim for indemnity from the U. S. Government, that has been hanging fire for many years. This portion of the sketch is as follows:

"Skirmishes between the Union and Confederate forces took place almost in the very streets. The booming of cannon was a familiar sound to the inhabitants of the little town snuggled down among the mountains.

Only a few miles from Pennsylvania on one side and a few miles from Virginia on the other, it was natural that Frederick should see much of the armies of both sides.

In July, 1864, General Jubal Early came down the Shenandoah Valley with 23,000 men, detached from the Army of Northern Virginia, to threaten Washington and thus divert Grant from proceeding against Richmond.

General Lew Wallace advanced to meet him with emergency forces gathered in the vicinity of Frederick and gave battle at Monocacy Bridge. Wallace was greatly outnumbered and retired to Baltimore, having delayed Early's march on Washington by 24 hours.

Early demanded of the citizens $200,000 in money or goods. The penalty for refusal was to be the destruction of the town. The money was paid over—and the town has been paying interest on the sum ever since."

The city and county is then treated as being the "heart of Maryland," statistics being given of its resources and products; including mention of Emmitsburg, Middletown, Brunswick and Braddock, the whole concluding as follows:

"A short ride of five miles and Braddock Heights is reached, now a summer resort and a rendezvous for pleasure seekers from Frederick. The village is set high up on the hills, from which one can look far down the Middletown Valley, a scene to delight the eye of either artist or agriculturist. To reach Braddock Heights and beyond one does not need to own an automobile. There is an electric line running out of Frederick, paralleling the pike.

Leaving Braddock, the line dips down into the valley and on through Middletown and other delightfully clean and pleasing towns and over South Mountain and finally into Hagerstown.

One cannot view the farms or Frederick County without having a great respect for the people who live there. Of course, Frederick is the principal local market for the products of these farms, particularly the wheat, sweet corn and the garden crops, sheep and orchard fruits are shipped to Baltimore and Washington.

From the early days of the settlement Frederick County has been a wheat-producing section. One who rides through there in early summer has abundant evidence spread before his eyes that wheat is still the big crop.

The farm acreage of the county is divided about as follows: wheat, 94,500 acres; corn, 57,600 acres; hay, 44,900 acres; oats, 3,000 acres; rye, 2,700 acres; potatoes, 2,400 acres.

About 50 percent of the farm income is derived from crops, 45 percent from livestock and 5 percent from other sources, including orchard products.

The income from crops is divided as follows: wheat 27 percent; sweet corn 12 percent; corn, 8 percent; hay, 2.5 percent; potatoes, 0.5 percent.

Dairying is one of the most important industries in the county and every farm keeps a few dairy cows. In 1920 there were 31,000 dairy cattle in the county.

Frederick county is well telephoned, and this applies to the farms as well as to the towns and villages. Of the 5,370 stations in the county, 1,958 are rural stations. There is a telephone for every ten people."

FOR STRICKEN JAPAN.

Further Subscriptions Urged for this Worthy Cause.

For some reason, the response to the call for help for the suffering Japanese, has not yet met with popular response, perhaps due to the report that Carroll County's quota had already been met with funds on hand. We therefore publish the following letter, that explains itself:

Editor Record:

The Carroll County Chapter sent a check for its quota—$700—immediately on receipt of notice, and was the first Chapter in the state to respond with full amount. This was paid out of the funds of the Chapter and branches accumulated by the roll calls.

I am sure there are many citizens who want to contribute to the relief fund and I believe we can double our quota, which was very much smaller than expected.

Was glad you published, last week, that subscriptions would be received at the Record office, and am going to ask that you give the relief fund a little write-up this week, and ask all who are willing to contribute to do so promptly.

H. P. GORSUCH,

Chairman Carroll County Chapter.

The $700, paid out of funds on hand should be replaced and an emergency fund maintained, in order that response to sudden demands can be met promptly, as was done in this case. We learn that offerings have been made, or will be made, through the churches, but the Record will receive such subscriptions as may be handed in during the coming week. The following amounts have been received.

Chas. E. H. Shriner	$5.00
The Record Company	5.00

Accident at Fair Ground.

An unfortunate accident occurred at the Fair Ground, on Thursday afternoon, when the Sea-plane attraction toppled over, while running full speed. It is said that it was carrying about twenty riders at the time, six of which were severely hurt; Miss Naomi Rodkey, daughter of Ira Rodkey; Miss Margaret Halter, daughter of William Halter; Miss Ethel Cummings, daughter of Theodore Cummings; Levine Carbaugh, William Harmon and Frank Sargent. Several others received lesser injuries.

It is said that the contrivance was insecurely erected, the foundation being built up with blocks of wood, and when the planes were set going the guy wires were not sufficient to hold the machine to its base, with the result that the affair toppled over, carrying with it the riders. Those injured were severely cut and bruised, and for a time it was feared that one or two were fatally injured. All are reported to be getting along well. The operator of the affair is reported to have left for parts unknown, soon after the accident.

An Automobile Accident.

(For the Record.)

On Saturday night, in Littlestown, as three little girls were crossing the street in front of Warehime's restaurant, Lillian the 10 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Dayhoff, of Humbert's school-house, was knocked down by a Ford car driven by Samuel Wilson.

The car was parked without lights, and as they just started the car the lights blinded the child. She was picked up unconscious and taken to the office of a physician where it was found there were no bones broken, but a second examination was made by another physician, and it was found a ligament was torn in her right arm, and bruises about the head and face and a sprained ankle. She is improving.

William Rodkey Badly Injured.

William Rodkey, an 80 year old resident of Frizellburg, was struck and knocked down, in Frizellburg, last Saturday evening by an automobile, while he was crossing the street during the return of visitors to the baseball game in Westminster. The driver of the car was a Mr. Mort from Woodboro. Mr. Rodkey had a leg broken, his head was cut and sustained injuries to his body. He is partially deaf and almost blind, which perhaps constitutes the main responsibility for the accident.

Who Says "What's the Use?"

A young man ran for the legislature of Illinois, and was badly swamped.

He next entered business, failed, and spent seventeen years of his life paying up the debts of a worthless partner.

He was in love with a beautiful young woman to whom he became engaged—then she died.

Entering politics again, he ran for Congress, and was badly defeated. He then tried to get an appointment to the United States land office, but failed.

He became a candidate for the United States Senate, and was badly defeated.

Then he became a candidate for the Vice Presidency and was once more defeated.

One failure after another—bad failures—great setbacks. Then he became one of the greatest men of America—Abraham Lincoln.

Who says, "Oh, what's the use?"

CARROLL COUNTY'S BIG FAIR

Great Exhibits, Fine Grounds, Large Crowds,
Successful in Every Respect.

Crowds commenced to come to the Fair on Sunday, to look it over, likely many over 1000 being there during the day. On Monday others came, largely for the purpose of placing exhibits, and in other ways to get ready for the big days to follow. All of the visitors were impressed with what they saw, and the evidence that the Carroll County Fair proposition presents as being a really big undertaking, and one worth preparing for on a much larger scale than attended the opening year. "Seeing is believing" with most people, and the future will find it an established big event in Maryland.

On Tuesday there was fair attendance for a first day, and the weather was not as congenial as it might have been. Still the placing of exhibits was practically completed, and the fair proper settled down to business in preparation for the big days to follow.

The exhibits, in most lines were both fine and extensive. The household exhibits were especially fine, and we should say the building is not more than half large enough. The showing of hand embroidery was quite prominent, making it difficult for the judges to decide.

The poultry exhibit was also extensive and high-class, the building being filled to capacity, and was pronounced by fair goers to be the equal of most of the large and older fairs. The showing of pigeons was a very prominent, as well as attractive feature of the display, which also included doggies and two coops of pheasants.

The Swine and live stock exhibits surprised many, as no such showing was expected. Most of the exhibits were strictly Carroll County stock.

The machinery demonstrations, the automobile show, the various booths containing musical instruments, furniture, stoves, washing machines, housefurnishing goods, and many other articles, were all highly creditable, and equal to like exhibits shown at the older fairs.

The grounds come in for universal praise. There is so much room for everything, and the layout so well arranged that even the largest of crowd can be accommodated without the appearance and discomfort of actual crowding.

Wednesday was a real Fair day and exceeded the expectations of the management. A heavy shower in the evening scared many home, and no doubt cut down the night crowd, but for a second day it was a big success. Automobiles were present away up in the hundreds, and the cars were so systematically packed that there was no difficulty and no disorder.

Refreshment booths and side-show attractions are to be expected at such events, but we think the former were especially well stocked and operated. There seemed to be about everything there that was needed, and the patronage indicated good business.

There was plenty of space left for concessions, and on the whole we should say that what might be called industrial and demonstration exhibits might have been more elaborate and extensive; but they are sure to be, by another year, and the experiences of this year will suggest improvements for the future.

The grand-stand and race track are perfect; indeed, there are no pronounced mistakes in evidence anywhere, and the management deserves the highest commendation for its skill and good work in general, especially as all of the work on the grounds is not yet considered finished.

CONSIDER OUR ADVANTAGES.

Practically every home in this nation has advantage of modern conveniences resulting from development of electricity, telephone, radio, gas and quick transportation.

If service rendered by these utilities had not been made nation wide and their output figured on a quantity basis, not even kings could afford to pay for a fraction of conveniences which the American home has today for a few dollars a month. Electricity, gas and telephone are the greatest servants of American housewives.

In France, the American Commercial Attache at Paris says poor telephone and telegraph service are causing proposals to take operation out of hands of the government and turn it over to private companies.

In Austria, telephone operators on the government system are reported to deliberately slow up calls when refused passes on the government railroads.

In London the telephone is a luxury only for the rich, while in Czechoslovakia it is a case of buy government telephone bonds or lose your phone.

And so it goes, while here in the U. S., there is a telephone in almost every home and it is connected with every other phone in the United States.

What we call household necessities in the U. S. are considered luxuries in Europe. What a monument to American initiative and enterprise.

Is it any wonder American women are noted for their intelligence and beauty, when they have such servants to do their bidding instantly and without complaint.

The presence of "candidates" was a feature of the fair to be expected, though not advertised by the management. Perhaps every county candidate was present on one or more days, and in this way avoided the necessity for many personal visits, and at the same time came into that close-up touch that all candidates like to have with voters, and that beats the "political meeting" for effectiveness. Attorney-General Armstrong, Republican candidate for Governor, and Wm. C. Coleman, Republican candidate for Attorney-General were present on Thursday afternoon.

The crowds were handled in fine style. In addition to a squad of state police, there were men on hand to direct the parking of autos, to act as watchmen at night, prevent congestion at the gates, and to exercise that care in general that means being provided for emergencies; while the directors and officials each had their own work well in hand and well understood.

One of the new things at the fair was the "baby bus" of the State Health Department, where opportunity was given for the examination of children, free of charge, by physicians and nurses of the department. Examinations were made mainly of the teeth, and for adenoids.

Pamphlets showing proper method of treatment will be sent to the families of these, with instructions that their physicians be called in to care for the children.

THE RACING EVENTS.

The judges were H. J. Speicher, Accident, Md.; G. W. Wilt, Taneytown; Mr. DeGordomiere; Clyde L. Hesson, Sec'y.

Tuesday, 2:24 p.m. "S. D." Thomas Hahn, 1st, $180.; "Sid Volo" T. L. Kaltrider, 2nd, $80.; "Daniel Patch" Raymond Wilson, 3rd, $40.

2:30 Trot, "Hale Wood" C. L. Wood, 1st, $120.; "Dan Patch" Albert Hape 2nd, $45.; "June B." H. Derr, 3rd, $15.

Running Race, "Pauchits" Augustus Reggs, "Loulie Love" Mrs. J. H. Ridgeley, Jr., $100 divided.

Wednesday, 2:15. "Duke of Westminster" S. H. Fox, 1st, $180.; "Single Vly," Harry McHenry, 2nd, $60.; "Lady Holiday" T. L. Kaltrider, 3rd, $20.

2:20 Pace, "Miss Jarl," G. N. Hunter 1st, $120.; "Frank" Rendla Martin, 2nd, $45.; "Sweet Time" Raymond Wilson, 3rd, $15.

The races of Thursday and Friday will be reported next week.

Thursday as the expected "big day" was no disappointment. It was all there, due to state roads and automobiles. The crowds kept coming from early morning until mid-afternoon until even the immense area of the ground was almost taxed for auto space, but systematic parking saved the day. The automobile population was the greatest ever seen in this county.

The immense crowd was made up within an area bounded by Harrisburg, Baltimore, Washington and Hagerstown. The only mishap that occurred was the collapse of the sea-plane attraction, a brief account of which appears in another column.

An attraction of the afternoon was a balloon ascension and a parachute landing both of which were successful. Fire works, dancing and acrobatic stunts were other free attractions. A band of music was present each day. The events due for Wednesday night, were postponed until Thursday night, due to rain, and part of the time, no lights. The Fair will continue this Friday, all day and night.

WHO DESERVES THE CREDIT?

It does not require very much foundation to "start something" in politics, so that it was almost to be expected that the so-called "settlement" of the coal strike might set up rival claims for the credit attached to the settlement, and that is just what is being passed around in Washington, where President Coolidge is known to be a candidate for President, and the opinion prevails that Gov. Pinchot would like to be.

Already, the friends of each appear to be fermenting argument directed toward—who ended the strike? The furor has grown out of a message sent by the President to the Governor said to compliment him on the settlement, in which he "co-operated." This is the word reported to have been used, which would seem to indicate at least a division of the credit, while the Governor's friends claim—him to be entitled to all of it.

It looks to us as though the "credit" for the settlement is a doubtful asset to either, for if it is accompanied by an increased cost of coal to the consumer, it may turn out to be a "credit" and a settlement that will be a hindrance, rather than a help, as a political card.

J. Hubert Wade, regular Democratic candidate for State Senator in Washington county, defeated his rival R. J. Funkhouser, "dry candidate" for the nomination, in the primaries.

A crop of "Coolidge for President" Clubs is growing all over the country. Mr. Coolidge is not taking any part in the growth, but it is noticeable that he reads the papers, and has issued no objections.

TEST FOR AUTO OPERATORS.

Middle Western States to Require Strict Examinations.

Representatives of 13 middle western states are to be invited to attend the Conference of Motor Vehicle Administrators, representing state automobile licensing bureaus, to be held in Chicago, at which plans will be made for working out safety-first laws for automobilists and pedestrians. The movement is being fostered by the National Safety Council. The convention is to be called by Fred M. Rosseland, chief of the public safety division of the National Safety Council.

There is a real need, according to the officials sponsoring the conference, for uniform laws of driving to lessen the death rate. One way suggested is to prevent a man who never has handled a car before from buying a machine and promptly setting forth as if he were an experienced driver. This prevalent custom could be prevented, they say, by forcing the dealer by law to see that everybody to whom he sells a car is thoroughly instructed before he is permitted to operate it on the public highways.

Accidents, as a rule do not happen to licensed chauffeurs. They happen to the unskilled drivers. The conference will make plans for uniform laws to govern the licensing of automobile operators to see if they are sufficiently competent mentally to handle a motor driven vehicle. Some form of intelligence test is likely to be devised.

Signs Off the Highways.

An interesting law goes into effect in Minnesota December 1st, whereby bill boards and other advertising signs on the State Highways are prohibited and signs now in existence are to be taken down as it has been found that such signs not only disfigure the landscape but are a frequent cause of accident in cutting off the view. The signs on the roads consist only of those of the road department and those telling of tourist camps in the various towns which have been provided for the many visitors to the State of Ten Thousand Lakes. It is the opinion of the people of Minnesota that the place to advertise is in the newspaper and not on barns and fences, trees and rocks along the highways.

Three Causes of Smash-ups.

"Three faults in driving," says C. S. Mott, vice-president of General Motors, "are responsible for at least 50 percent of automobile traffic accidents. They are (1) Failure to indicate intention of turning or stopping; (2) passing another vehicle to its right, and (3) coming into the traffic stream without proper caution.

"The time to make a signal of intention is before you turn or stop, not while you are in the act. Except in emergency, it should always be possible for a driver to know what he is going to do; and when he does he should always take the 'other fellow' into his confidence. Few things are more maddening, or more dangerous, than to have the man in front of you in the traffic stop suddenly, without warning, and then put his hand out. The sudden, unannounced turn is equally full of danger not only to follow traffic but to the driver who is guilty of carelessness in making it.

"The man who passes the vehicle ahead of him, unless it be a street car to the right is flirting with death. To begin with, he cannot see any signal given by the driver seated on the left-hand side of the car ahead of him.

Returned Missionary to Speak.

Rev. Holly Garner, of the Church of the Brethren, who is on furlough from India, will give a stirring message on India and its needs, at the Bethel, in Uniontown, on Wednesday evening, Sept. 19. Everybody invited. Come and hear the message.

At least 50 Americans are now known to have died in the Tokio, Japan, disaster.

THE COAL STRIKE NOW SETTLED

Operators Forced to Grant Pay Increase to Miners.

The coal strike has been settled on the basis presented by Gov. Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, after the failure of the Atlantic City conference.

In announcing the miners had accepted the Pinchot terms, John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, said the Governor deserved the gratitude of the American people and that full credit for the settlement was due him.

There are eight issues to be negotiated between the operators and miners before a contract is signed. The issues involved are chiefly technical. No difficulty in working them out satisfactorily is expected.

Therefore, there remains only the formality of having the terms ratified before the 158,000 miners of the anthracite fields return to the collieries and production is resumed.

There is not much difference of opinion, that the settlement represents a surrender to the union leaders. While they did not get all asked for, they likely got all they expected, and it looks very much as though the increase in wages will be passed on to the consumer.

The U. S. Coal Commission, that was thought to have something strong to say, and to fix the responsibility for the situation just ended, has instead issued a long series of mild recommendations, not blaming anybody, but suggesting a code for the conduct of arbitration proceedings in future like cases, to be taken up by the President and Congress.

The basis of settlement gives the miners a 10 percent increase in wages for all employees and continues the recognition of the union and collective bargaining and the eight-hour day.

About all the operators get out of the settlement is preservation of the open shop in accordance with the Roosevelt Commission's award of 1902, avoidance of the check-off and early resumption of mining.

Thus the miners, by the shortest coal strike in the history of the anthracite industry, carry off the victory. They obtained but a measure of their demands, but in comparison with the position of the operators they are acclaimed victors.

By the terms of the settlement the public suffers another increase in the price of coal. Governor Pinchot figures that increase at sixty cents a ton. The operators say it will amount to seventy-five cents, with an additional five cents accruing from the operation of the eight-hour day. In definite figures the operators insist the wage bill will be increased some $22,500,000.

In presenting his program, the Governor informed the operators they could and should absorb ten cents of the additional sixty cents a ton and that the remaining fifty cents of the increase should be taken up by the transportation and distributing agencies. By such distribution, the Governor argued, the additional burden would not again fall upon the public.

But no definite plans for such distribution of the increase have been worked out. The operators have given no indication of preparing to absorb the ten cents allotted to them by Mr. Pinchot, and although the Governor has intimated he has a plan in mind by which the transportation and distributing agencies will be required to take up the remaining fifty cents, he has not made clear his purposes in that direction. The operators contend he can do nothing along that line without action by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The agreement covers a period of two years, which carries it past the Presidential election. Gov. Pinchot has asked 30 Governors, as well as President Coolidge, to investigate coal prices and the profits of the operators, and is said to have positive evidence profits have been enormous, and beyond reason.

Prominent Visitors at Gettysburg.

A number of noted Americans visited Gettysburg, over Sunday, among them being Henry Ford, of Detroit; General Pershing, of Washington; Major General Ely commandant of the War College; W. B. Mayo, president of the Lincoln Motor Co., and others. Mr. Ford signed his name on the Eagle Hotel register as "A Henry" in order to escape identification, but his real name leaked out. He was not travelling in one of his famous "flivvers," but in a Sedan of much more elaborate and expensive character.

Physicians Have Prolonged Life.

The average life of the human being has been prolonged from 12 to 15 years as a result of recent advances in medicine and surgery, Dr. Charles H. Mayo, of Rochester, Minn., declared before the Manitoba, Canada, branch, American College of Surgeons. Dr. Mayo expressed the opinion that the progress already made would be surpassed in the years to come.

Dr. Mayo emphasized the need of education as the prime requisite in the battle against disease. "The life of an individual," he said, "could be prolonged by five years if the medical practitioner were consulted every two years after a person passed his fortieth year."

A Date and a Dicker.

With miners' agreements ending always on Aug. 31, or at the eve of the cold weather season, the plea can be urged, indefinitely, that "something must be done" at once to prevent suffering from lack of coal throughout the coming winter. This, in itself, is an unfair situation; it is a club to force compromises, hidden by necessities, especially of the poor, the sick and the children. It is easy to make the plea that somebody must surrender; that it is hard-hearted and conscienceless not to do so, or to let mere business considerations stand in the way.

This same date is on the eve of our state and National elections, and it is unfair for this reason. There is another club hidden back of the anxieties of candidates and parties; another plea for peace that obscures and pushes aside judgment on evidence and merit. The date represents studied force, a calculated time explosion, a prepared situation calling for the use of emergency brakes.

What is the natural—the expected—result? The fear of impending calamity works the shortest cut to ease and comfort. The one-sided compromise in favor of the power holding the clubs, and again we buy peace, regardless in large measure of justice in the situation; and it appears to us that this has been the result in the Gov. Pinchot plan for warding off—not permanently settling—danger of a miner's strike.

"Wet" and "Dry" Again.

We are likely to have another "wet" and "dry" angle to the election of members of the Maryland Senate and House. If the candidates themselves are willing to tag themselves, why not? If a man is so pronouncedly "wet," or "dry" as to make his proclivity an argument for his election, voters have a right to know it, as well as act according to their own estimates of the announced quality on election day.

Just now, however, it is difficult to understand how a "wet" candidate can claim the support of patriotic Americans. Being a "wet" in the face of the eighteenth amendment, is a ticklish position, and one difficult to maintain. Members of a state legislature owe allegiance specially to the constitution of the United States, and must stand for law enforcement, which means "constitutional" law. A man whose personal preferences are "wet" yet who stands four-square for the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment, is hardly the kind of a "wet" that opponents of prohibition will label as "satisfactory."

If he is for the Amendment, as long as it is in force, but would vote to put it out of business, how can he do it, and be strictly honest both ways? No amendment to the Constitution of the United States has ever been repealed, perhaps largely because if a man is pledged to support the constitution, there is no way open to him to honorably violate his pledge.

Earthquakes Needed.

Sometimes an earthquake is required to bring out the best that is in us, as Nations. Suffering and disaster bring us together in company—in bonds of sympathy—for we feel that we are in the presence of a power that awes us—one greater than ours. We need such shocks occasionally; perhaps we also need wars and pestilences, for otherwise the egotism of man might run wild, and forget God entirely.

We also need lesser disturbances than earthquakes to call a halt on united force selfishness. Perhaps we have these, but fail to recognize them. The world—our world—is full of warnings, but we are apt to be too blind to see; we are not strong and pointed enough. We are like Paul on the way to Damascus, and like Paul need a prostrating bolt before we will come to our senses.

The remarkable thing to most of us, is, that so many persistently choose to do wrong things; so many so egregiously selfish that they can think of no better way than to force their selfishness on others, without regard to justice or right; so, there are evidently millions of men who live apart from and in ignorance of the code of righteousness that still influences the major part of humanity.

A real earthquake might easily be applicable to the needs of such people, providing it could be operated without too much suffering for the innocent. At any rate, that is the view one almost indorses when wrong so persistently triumphs, and we wait so long to realize that "the way of the transgressor is hard."

Automobile Courtesies.

The laws governing automobile operation cover considerable space in the statute books, and it is difficult for motorists to remember them all. Often they do not seem to want to remember them. Also there are many local regulations to be obeyed, and there are mighty few if any drivers who run their cars in perfect conformity to public authority.

But there is one respect in which any driver can meet his obligation to the public, and that is by carrying the principles of courtesy and consideration that any gentleman exercises at other times, into his actions while behind a steering wheel.

Many people are quite inconsistent at this point. In the social contacts of life they pride themselves on their good manners. They look with contempt on people who make socially awkward blunders. Yet when they get out on the road with an automobile, their spirit changes. They come tearing down the streets tooting their horns and expect everybody to get out of their way. If they acted in that fashion at a social party, they would almost be kicked out of the house as nuisances.

The motto of a gentleman in a friend's home is "Other people first." He tries to be the last one to go through a door. Now let him show a little of that spirit when he gets out among the automobile traffic. Let him be as considerate for the pedestrian bewildered at a crowded crossing, as he is for the lady for whom he rushes to do little courtesies in the parlor.

If people would drive cars with that point of view, about 95 percent of the accidents would not happen. There would be some comfort for the conservative driver who is almost tempted to sell his car after being nearly run into by a lot of speed maniacs.—Ellicott City Times.

The Rule of Self.

Contentment does not come till a man has brought his own being into subjection to certain laws which through the ages have been slowly formulated and vindicated by the general experience of mankind. Among those to whom the only "red-blooded" way is the way of red radicalism, the thought of any sort of contentment—individual, social, industrial—is abhorrent, and any concept of law, as regulating life, is detestable. They try to pretend that all decencies and dignities were merely ridiculous, all conventions narrow and mean. They look with simulated pity on the "conservatives" who do not follow them beyond all bounds into the wild life which knows no guidance but unleashes self, costs struggle. The rule of self, meaning doing as one pleases, without any care for pain to others or harm to those who are trying to live, is the easy way to take; but Nature plays no favorites, she inflexibly affixes and collects her penalties, and the fool pays. "The sin ye do by two and two ye must pay for one by one."

The moralist is least welcome when he preaches control to the uncontrolled. It is held that the time through which we pass is peculiarly depraved and given to strange gods. So men who thought at all have thought in every period our earth has survived. As soon as an earth began to be populated some of the people were grieved and shocked at the behavior of the rest and started to reform them. It is easy to condemn the reformer and, because certain reformers have fallen, to set them all down as miserable hypocrites. If anything is sadder than the fall of a minister of God, it is those who rejoice over it.

But there must be control, whether the advocates of untamed personal liberty care for it or not. What an unbearable earth it would be if a thousand restraints did not interpose to safeguard the individual! The first kingdom and the last must be that sober rule whereunder a man sets watch and ward on his own nature, as one who says, "For their sakes I sanctify myself."—Phila. Ledger.

"HIKES" GROW IN POPULARITY
City People Every Day Becoming More Addicted to Long Walks Through the Country.

Days of the hike picnic are here. The hike picnic differs from the old-fashioned sedentary picnic in that the picnicers do not sit on the grass, but walk on it.

It is an entirely peripatetic social function, except when those who walk stop briefly for rest or luncheon. These walking clubs now exist in cities all over the country. From the first one in Washington, they have multiplied greatly. New York City has hundreds of them, so that a whole page is devoted in some of the dailies to mapping out and describing "routes" in the nearby country.

Recently, in Kansas City, a walking excursion was advertised on a certain day, to which the invitation was general, and more than 1,000 excursionists were on hand on the bright and sunny morning with which the event was favored.

It might have suggested the beginning of Peter the Hermit's celebrated hike, although this time banners were neglected.

If hikes are to become one of the great outdoor diversions it may not be long until armies move down the country roads armed with sandwiches and tin drinking cups, filling the air with songs and conversational clamor of the populace.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

British Engineers Busy.

Contracts for engines and railroad stocks for foreign and Colonial customers have been booked by British firms in such volume as to keep their engineers and laborers hard at work for months to come. Beardmore and Company of Glasgow have obtained an order for the reconstruction of repairing workshops of Portuguese railroads and are making 27 locomotives and 3,350 pairs of wheels for Indian railroads. Beyer, Peacock and Company, Ltd., of Gorton, Manchester, have booked an order for 30 locomotives from the East Indian Railway company. Beardmore and Company also will make three engines for East Burmah, and the Vulcan company of Manchester is manufacturing 35 locomotives for India. Altogether British engineering firms have recently booked orders from abroad for close upon $10,000,000.

Legislation in Sailor's Interests.

Pilmsoll had at heart the good of sailors when he urged his bill upon the parliament of England. Unseaworthy ships were overloaded, sent to sea and sunk, for the collection of insurance so often that it did not seem a coincidence. The Pilmsoll act was passed, prohibiting vessels loading to a submergence over their load-line mark which was painted on the side of the ship, and which came to be known as the Pilmsoll line. This law reached beyond Great Britain, because it was applied by that government to all ships entering the British ports. While willing to protect her own sailors in such a fashion, she was not willing to give her ships unfair competition by allowing ships of other nations to overload.

HAS GOOD IDEA FOR DIARY

Man Finds Loose Leaf Eliminates Personal Historian's Worry and Is Sure Chronicler.

Arthur Bjinks has at last found a satisfactory way of keeping a diary. More than once he had started off the new year with a nice fresh volume, determined to let not a single day go by without making some entry. And more than once March, April or May have found the diary abandoned and forgotten. Now Arthur is getting along fine with what he calls his "occasional diary," the New York Sun and Globe states.

He explains:

"I found that what caused me to lose interest in other diaries was the feeling that however boring a day I might have put in, I felt compelled to make some sort of entry. No more do I use a dated printed diary. Instead I have a loose-leaf notebook. I write at the top of the page the date of any day which has seen events worth recording and make a note of them. There may be no entries between May 1 and 12 and June 3 on page 13. But that will be because nothing of interest or at least, worthy of note, has transpired between those dates.

"Thus I have a record of keen interest to myself that is not cluttered up with a lot of boring, uninteresting memoranda just because the space was there and had to be filled each night."

CIVIL WAR GAVE RED CROSS

How Fredericksburg Inspired Clara Barton With Idea for the Famous Organization.

The Civil war had scarcely started when Clara Barton voluntarily abandoned her business of teaching school in a New Jersey town and enlisted as a nurse in the hospital of the Union army. From the outset she insisted upon doing duty at the front. She was especially interested in one of the regiments from New Jersey, and before the men in that command went into action she ministered to them in a way that won their gratitude. An incident which she never forgot occurred after the battle of Fredericksburg, say the records. Miss Barton received word that she was wanted at the Lincoln hospital. This is her own simple story of what occurred there:

"As I entered the ward 70 men saluted me, standing such as could, others rising feebly in their beds. Every man had left his blood upon the battlefield of Fredericksburg. My hand dressed every wound—many of them in the first terrible moments of agony!"

That incident is said to have been the origin of the Red Cross, which was organized in 1882, and with which the name of Clara Barton is inseparably linked. She was the founder of the Red Cross and its first president.

Beecher a Horticulturist.

Henry Ward Beecher, the celebrated American clergyman and orator, at one time had considerable fame as an authority on matters bearing on that subject in the pioneer days of western horticulture. He was editor of the Western Farmer and Gardener, and a selection of his contributions were printed in 1859 as a book of nearly 450 pages, entitled "Plain and Pleasant Talk About Fruits, Flowers and Farming." A second edition was published in 1874—a book of nearly 500 pages, containing also articles written for the New York Ledger.

These papers have a higher literary value than is usual in horticultural writings, and are still entertaining and suggestive, says the Detroit News. They are said to have done much to spread the taste for country life and gardening.

Grape Juice Stayed Typhoid.

The grape is the oldest fruit known to history. It flourished on the hillside of Galilee, and in lands antedating Judea it was cultivated. No man knows its first beginnings. The theory of Doctor Mayo is that the skin-clad "doctor" of antiquity conceived the happy notion that the juice of the grape, squeezed out into a rude vessel, might make a satisfactory substitute for polluted water. No sooner thought than done. Grape juice was imbued instead of aqua impura. Presto! the ravages of typhoid were stayed. Grape juice had won its championship as the first substitute for impure water.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Billy's Little Hint.

Billy had a new suit, and the most wonderful thing about it was that there were pockets in the trousers; something he had never had before. He came running to show me how attractive they were. After showing them to me, he said, "N they'll hold anything. They haven't anything in them now, but they'll hold pennies, nickels, dimes, or anything." Needless to say that I saw to it that he had something in the pockets.—Chicago Tribune.

Substitute for Cork.

Notwithstanding all the achievements in practical science there are some indispensable materials, the making of which is still nature's secret and for which no entirely successful substitute has been found. Among these substances is cork. It is possible, however, that nature herself, in this case, offers us a substitute in the wood of a tree growing on the east coast of Lake Tchad, in Africa, which is of even less specific gravity than cork.

Contagious Roup Cause of Heavy Poultry Loss

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
With the approach of fall and wet, cold weather, contagious roup, say members of Iowa State college, is one of the most dangerous diseases that threaten flocks. It causes a heavy loss not only from a high death rate but also from the fact that it interferes with egg production and causes loss of vitality in breeding.

Contagious roup is easy to identify. It starts with a thin watery discharge from the nose and eyes, which has an offensive odor. Inflammation sets in, the birds begin to cough and sneeze, breathing becomes noisy and they frequently breathe through their mouths. The secretions from the nose and eyes change to a yellowish cheese-like mass.

Roup can easily be prevented by avoiding damp, poorly ventilated, overcrowded quarters. To cure a sick bird, place it in a dry, well-ventilated place away from the other birds and give it plenty of fresh water and feed. Every morning and evening remove all the cheesy matter from the eyes and nostrils and dip the bird's head into a solution of bichloride of mercury (1-1,000). This is made by placing one 7.3 mercury bichloride tablet in a pint of water. Hold the bird firmly and immerse the head until the eyes are covered, keeping it there a few seconds or until it struggles.

Poultry Manure Is Most Valuable as Fertilizer

Poultry manure contains fertilizing constituents which would cost 20 to 25 cents as commercial fertilizers. The average night droppings of a hen are 30 to 40 pounds annually. A flock of 100 hens at this rate would produce $20 to $25 worth per year. To prevent loss of the fertilizing constituents, sifted coal ashes may be used on the dropping boards as an absorbent. Wood ashes or lime should not be mixed with the manure. As poultry manure is particularly adapted to gardening, poultry raisers can often dispose of it at a good price. Such management will add a little to the profits from the flock.

Feather-Pulling Harmful in Any Chicken Flock

Feather-pulling destroys a flock. When a cock begins to look as if he were picked on the neck and breast you may then begin to watch for the hen that is doing the mischief; and she should be removed at once, as she will teach the habit to others if she remains with the flock. Feather-pulling is a vice that comes from confinement and idleness. There is no remedy for it, but it may be prevented by so feeding the fowls that they will be compelled to scratch. They should be fed meat and bone-meal, plenty of grass, and a little salt, in their food.

Fowls Lay Majority of Eggs During First Year

Hens lay the majority of eggs during their first two laying seasons, and especially during their pullet year, if they are early hatched. If a hen lays well during her pullet year she should be kept for another year as a breeder. If she lays well during her second year she should be kept for another year as a breeder. The older she is and the more culling she survives the better, for then she has proved that she has the vitality to stand up under long-continued laying, and consequently is valuable as a breeder.

Overcrowding of Fowls Cause of Many Failures

Overcrowding of poultry is one of the most common reasons why success is not had. The temptation to carry a few extra fowls, over and above the capacity of the buildings and equipment, and thereby "increase" the profit, is one of the commonest stumbling blocks to actual success. When this lesson is learned (sometimes it is a bitter lesson) then real profit is more likely to be had.

POULTRY NOTES

Vigorous chicks come from eggs laid by hens of good breeding and vitality.

Don't throw or bury dead fowls where there is a possibility of others of the flock having a chance to eat the diseased meat. Burn them.

Poultry will pay for a lot of milk. Where milk is fed to hens and chicks freely, there is no need to furnish any meat scraps or meat-meal mash.

When you discover that there is something wrong with some of the fowls don't stop your investigations until you have discovered the trouble.

Gapes do not usually trouble turkeys as much as chickens, but turkeys sometimes pick up the gape worms from ranging on soil which has become infected from chicken raising.

Community Building

IMPROVING LOOKS OF CITY

Something Can Be Done in That Direction in Practically Every American Community.

Every indication that American communities are becoming interested in the beautification of their environment is encouraging. Recently we referred to the proposal for an art commission for Grand Rapids, Mich., and we now note the appeal of the Des Moines Capital for the restoration of the "beauty dam" in that city. A town-planning commission makes the proposal, which is intended to protect the water level of the river, which in the low water season shows "an unsightly array of sand bars and stagnant pools."

Our western American towns and cities have grown up chiefly under economic influences, and while many have features of beauty, these are usually almost accidental. If we take a little trouble we can make our towns much more attractive to the eye and thus provide for ourselves and our children a daily pleasure beyond price. There is no reason why our communities, which are now well-to-do, intelligent, and ambitious of progress in the higher things of life as well as in material things, should not greatly improve their architecture, their public monuments, their natural features, parks, streets, and places of recreation. It is well worth while. When you hear of the Grand Rapids art commission or the Des Moines town planning commission you have a new interest and a new respect for these enterprising and prosperous centers of real American life.—Chicago Tribune.

PUT THE BEST INTO HOUSE

No Money Saved in the End by Using Poor Materials—Immense Damage Caused by Rust.

The small home builder has learned a lesson, and that is that poor planning and construction is much more expensive than good architecture and indifferent building. The demand for better home building is spreading, with the consequence that flimsy work will eventually be condemned by all home buyers.

"There is a clearly defined movement back to the substantial and enduring and away from the flimsy type of construction which has been a noticeable feature of much of our construction, particularly in moderate-cost homes, in the last decade," says W. A. Willis of the Copper and Brass Association of the United States.

"The costly results which follow the erection of the type of house that is built merely to sell and not to live in is perhaps no better illustrated than by the amazing fact that home owners in this country spend more than $650,000,000 every year in repairing and renewing rusted metal work in and on their dwellings. The significance of this loss is apparent from the fact that it is greater than the fire loss in residence structures. In all save danger to life rust is vastly more destructive and costly than fire, the more dangerous because rust works so insidiously."

Rules for Better Cities. Believing that an era of better cities is at hand if citizens and traffic authorities will give study to the question, Charles Clifton, president of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, makes his recommendations for city planning. He has sent his views to traffic authorities in several large cities asking for comment and criticism.

Mr. Clifton suggests as a means of improving traffic congestion and hazards in cities:

- (1) More playgrounds.
- (2) Stricter regulations and more scientific study of safety provisions.
- (3) New boulevards.
- (4) Detours for through traffic.
- (5) Parking spaces in basements of office buildings.

Signless Highways.

At Kansas City the County court has ordered the removal of billboards and signs from the county highway, due notice being given as required by the law. It is too much to expect that the example set in that section will be followed throughout the nation.

One is made to wonder, however, what the country would resemble if the highways were cleared of billboards. They haven't been signless since man began to traverse them and towns to spring up alongside them. The chill tonic reminders of an earlier day have led up logically to the dominating varicolored posters of our own day. What our roads would look like without them only the persons with imagination might conceive.—Dallas Journal.

Boston's Wise Move.

THE RIGHT THING AT THE RIGHT TIME

By MARY MARSHALL DUFFEE

THE DAY AT HOME

The value of life is to improve one's conditions.—Abraham Lincoln.

THE custom of having an informal afternoon at home when your friends may be sure of finding you in, shows no signs of waning. Indeed these informal entertainments have taken a great lead over the once popular evening receptions. They are the least expensive and the least exacting of hospitality, and perhaps to those causes may be traced their popularity.

Women who have a large circle of acquaintances have many of these days in the season, while others are content with four. The matter of deciding this question lies with the woman herself. No social correspondence should be sent by the penny post. The husband's name does not appear on cards for informal afternoons at home, but if there are daughters in the house old enough to be in society, then the cards should read: "Mrs. John Green Wood, the Misses Wood," etc.

A large platter should be left on the hall table where guests may drop their cards upon entering the house. No calls are made before three in the afternoon, but at that hour the hostess should be dressed, her rooms should be ready, her table prepared and everything in readiness to receive the guests.

At these informal afternoons, guests enter the drawing room unannounced, but the hostess must rise to greet each newcomer, and she always rises to bid them good-by, even sending them to the door. And the hostess must be very careful to see that all of her guests are properly and distinctly introduced to each other, as with few people in a room it would be most embarrassing not to know the name of the women with whom you are talking.

The hostess makes the conversation general and of interest to all the guests.

When a woman has these informal days-at-home, the friends who come to see her do not have to call again as they do after attending a formal reception. As stated before, informal afternoons at home are simply a set time when your friends may find you in. The hostess then owes a call to every friend who has attended any of these afternoons.

She does not let anyone, no matter who they are, go from her house feeling neglected. A hostess should literally lose herself in making her guests feel comfortable. (© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

On Sunday afternoon the neighbors were quickly summoned to the farm of Wm. Hockensmith, to help remove a cow, which had fallen into a twenty foot old well, while the family was at church. She managed to keep her head above the water until help came, and by means of ropes and planks, ten men brought her to safety; but badly skinned and bruised.

MELROSE.

Notwithstanding the inclement weather up to late Saturday afternoon, Krieger's Union Sunday School celebration was a success. In the evening the grove was brilliantly lighted by an electric plant furnished by an agent. The Carroll School orchestra, composed of a majority of ladies and girls made an impression on the audience, especially the small girl with a cornet, leading in a masterly manner.

The officers and members of Wentz Union Sunday School have decided, now that day school has started, to close next Sunday evening, Sept. 16, starting the last session at 5:30, or earlier, if possible. It will be interesting. A large crowd is expected to be present.

The macadam road between Melrose and Hampstead is rapidly nearing completion, and will be ready for speed traffic before the 1st of October. We say "speed traffic," because it will connect Washington and Baltimore with Gettysburg and the Lincoln Highway. And now, Lineboro is justly asking for a better road. The taxpayers along this much traveled road also justly ask for this improvement.

ROADSIDE TREES IN PERIL

Milwaukee Newspaper Condemns the Vandalism Which Threatens Beauty of Highways.

Here and there the natural beauty of Wisconsin is in constant danger, laments the Milwaukee Journal. In particular trees growing along country highways are frequently cut down or at least disfigured. Billboards, for example, line the roads and mar the landscape and only recently a magnificent maple tree that adorned a trunk highway, which extends westward from Milwaukee, was cut down in order that one of these blatant messages of crass commercialism might attract still more attention.

Billboards, however, are only one of the things that mar the beauty of the highways. An electric power company is planning to despoil or destroy trees along a country roadside east of Waukesha in order to extend a power line. There are few of these tree-lined roads in Wisconsin and their fate is of deep concern to the public. We cannot spare any of our beauty spots, any of the charm of our landscape.

It is indeed a hopeful sign to find that farmers along the road in question are resisting the power company's purpose to substitute poles for oak, maple and hickory trees. It is significant that the company, in discussing a suggestion made by the farmers that it use an insulated cable or erect poles higher than the trees, argues that this course would be too expensive.

On Mount Tamapais.

On Mount Tamapais, overlooking San Francisco bay, is a new sixty-inch searchlight of half a billion candle power—500 times more powerful than the most powerful automobile headlight. Its beams may be seen from a distance of eighty miles in any direction. It is intended to put this giant light to many practical uses. At a designated time it will project a beam straight up into the air so that watches and clocks may be regulated and it can also be made to serve as an aid to aerial navigation at night.

Had a Reason for Sniffing.

Some freight cars on a siding had attracted the attention of a stranger who was sized up by the yardmaster as a detective. The stranger hung around one car so persistently that the yardmaster became uneasy and sent for the brakeman.

"Anything queer in that car, buddy?"

he asked.

"Not a thing," was the answer.

"There's a sleuth sniffing around."

"I saw him. Let him sniff. That's a car of onions."

The Vintage of a Joke.

One can just tell how long a man has been married by the way he gets that old stuff about hooking them up the back, says the El Dorado Times. If he has taken unto himself a wife during the last ten years, or during the reign of the peasant blouse and the one-piece dress, he'll only register a blank look when the once popular gag is pulled, but if he joined the ranks of the Tri Hook'em Upsilonns fifteen or more years ago when tight linings, choker collars, stays and crinoline were in vogue, then watch him chuckle reminiscently but without a pang of regret, however, for the bad old days.

Peat Bogs in Michigan.

Michigan has a large area of peat bogs. It is estimated that about 5,200,000 acres, or nearly one-seventh of the area of the state, is swamp land underlaid with peat. There is peat in Waukegan, Jackson, Shiawassee, Lenawee, Ingham, Lapeer, Monroe, Allegan, Kalamazoo, Livingston and other counties. Experimental work has been done at Chelsea and Capac in connection with utilizing this for fuel and fertilizer.

Union Bridge 4—Taneytown 2.

Union Bridge won the game from Taneytown, last Saturday, by perfect fielding, in what was a fine exhibition except for Taneytown's errors and over-zealous base running. Taneytown had the experience of having had the bases filled twice, but failed to hit when a hit meant one or more runs. Even "Davy" Eline, Taneytown's reliable third-baseman, who made only two errors in 23 games, had to make two more in the 24th game, and no one felt worse about it than he did.

Harned had the best of the pitching points over Shafer, but the latter was ably effective at critical stages. Harned struck out 8 men, gave 1 base on balls, and had 5 hits made off his delivery. Shafer struck out 5, gave 6 passes to first, and had 8 hits made off his delivery. Each pitcher struck a batsman.

Box Score Figures.

We have box scores for 46 of the 47 games played. During the season, the 'official' scorers varied in the matter of hits and errors, showing that scoring is not exact science. The runs given are for the 47 games, while the hits and errors are for 46.

	Runs	Hits	Errors
Taneytown	141	222	79
Westminster	136	215	66
New Windsor	126	198	66
Union Bridge	120	188	52

The odd thing about this tabulation is—and the lesson from it—that Union Bridge has the lowest figures in each group, showing that its low error total—which stands for the best fielding—is responsible for its top standing in games won.

Taneytown played only 1 errorless game, New Windsor 2, Westminster 2, and Union Bridge 4. While Taneytown had 34 hits more than Union Bridge, the result shows that fine team work in the field may be more real value than hard hitting.

Taneytown 2—Woodsboro 1.

Taneytown, with a made-up team, defeated Woodsboro, on Wednesday, 2 to 1. The game was not a strong exhibition of good playing by the locals, and lacked life, almost as though no great effort was made to win. Woodsboro made a strong effort in the 9th, making three hits and came dangerously close to tying the score. Fern Hitchcock played a fine game at short. "Cap" Drenning played with Woodsboro. Patterson was rather wild, but struck out 8 men, while Smith, for Woodsboro, had 4 victims.

Base Ball Notes.

If—the game that Union Bridge claims "forfeited" by New Windsor, had been played, and won by New Windsor, the three leaders would stand 13 won, 11 lost. Anyway, no matter which would have won, it would have left a better all-around feeling if the game had been played as a "poisoned" game due to rain, which it actually was.

Westminster and Taneytown were not "shut out" during the season.

Union Bridge won 2 games from Taneytown by a 2 to 1 score, and one by 4 to 2.

The Westminster Times suggests a "Westminster and Carroll County" team next year in the Blue Ridge League. Why not Westminster alone? We hardly think the other towns of the county would be willing to merge their own individuality in a team that would naturally be counted a "Westminster" team. In other words, we believe that each of the smaller county towns, having grounds of their own, will want to have a team, whether in, or out of, a league—but certainly not in such league as that of this year.

The ideals that The Record had set for a County League, at the beginning of the season, did not materialize. We have only to say, now, that we will not give the same support to baseball, nor as much prominence as given this year, unless a six-team circuit can be arranged, and a set of comprehensive rules and regulations adopted and enforced, as will guarantee cleaner and more "true to name" sport.

Manager Wilson, of Union Bridge, took a day off, on Wednesday, and watched the Taneytown—Woodsboro game. "Frank" is a hard-worker and much of the success of his team is due to his persistent watching the job. Pitcher Shaeffer was also an interested spectator; while King, pitcher for the Frederick Blue Ridge team, batted for Wachter in the 8th. inning.

The closing game of the season will be played in Taneytown, next Saturday, against a "strong team." See notice in local column.

Why She Ran Away With the Circus

By MARTHA WILLIAMS

(© 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Says La Rochefoucauld, prince of cynics: "We are always glad to see others brought to our own level."

This possibly explains the acrid triumph in Mrs. Kelly's voice as she told her elbow-neighbor at the noon prayer-meeting. "It's true as preaching—every word. Dolly Batten has run off with the circus. Sam, my son, saw her get on their train. He'd have spoke to her—only he was too far away. But she saw her—no mistake. And all she had with her was just a handbag; that shows her folks didn't know."

"They'll be mighty cut up over it," the neighbor, Miss Powell, returned. "But I say it's a judgment sent—always holdin' themselves so high and distant, never doing things the rest of us took interest in. Why, to my certain knowledge not one of that family ever sent as much as a pair o' socks to go in the missionary box."

Mrs. Kelly nodded. "And always pipping up about charity beginning at home, as if the dear good men we send out to save the heathen didn't need creature comforts same as the mill workers, only more and worse."

"It's hard to have a thankless child—but I can't be sorry for the Battens, not when I remember how they wouldn't give a rose to be sold at our Christmas fair and sent armfuls of the very finest to the folks that live on the Lane. We'd 'a' given 'em 10 per cent on sales, and that money would 'a' done a heap more for those shiftless, dirty women. I'd never dare to call myself a Christian if I set up what I thought was right against the Bible and the church—" Miss Powell broke in. "A crisp voice beyond her interjected: 'I don't know as Mrs. Batten nor any of 'em called themselves Christians. But I say they'd no need—they showed it so many ways.'"

"I wasn't speaking to you, Mrs. Gee," Miss Powell returned icily. Mrs. Kelly clucked disdain—speech was hazardous with lawless Mary Gee in earshot. Mary moved majestically to the bench in front, grinned joyously, then sighed and began to read her psalm book. Huge, with a heart as big as her body, she was amused, ashamed and sorry to see a triple attendance upon this season of spiritual refreshing. She knew what had drawn her fellow Christians—not zeal, but a keen desire to tell and hear all about this amazing occurrence. Sittings were free, but by usage a pew high up was always left empty for the Battens, until there was no longer hope of their coming. Now everybody looked at it furtively—then instantly glanced away. Mentally everybody was asking, Would Mrs. Batten and Louisa, her stepdaughter, come to face down the family disgrace? A kindly minority hoped they would not, but the mass sat on edge, starting a little at each entrance and turning to stare at newcomers, almost malevolently in their disappointment. Frothy murmurs of reproach now and then boiled up—this was what came of letting circus people play their devil's game in nice, clean country towns.

Commonly a woman led the prayer-meeting. Today the minister had promised to be with the sisters for a special service. But minute dragged after minute, still the reading desk was vacant, there was not even a rustle in the vestry. Mrs. Kelly was on the point of rising to ask, "Why wait longer?" when a figure wholly uncanonical strode rapidly up the aisle, paused at the altar rail and turned a travel-stained face to the gaze of the waiting flock.

"Dear sisters," he began, "Instead of apology let me tell you a story." There a thrill rustled all through the ranks. "Last night around three o'clock," the minister went on somewhat huskily, "I waked from sound sleep to hear Mrs. Batten calling distractedly, 'Meet Dorothy at the station, go with her; you must! Hurry! They are holding the circus train. She will explain.' Naturally I went to meet Dorothy, white and steady as marble, like death indeed, all but her eyes—they were inspired. They had put her in a drawing room. Two of the women were with her—they started to leave her as I came, but she made them stay. 'Frank is dying,' she said clearly. 'Frank Allen—we have been secretly engaged a whole year. He has three hours to live, the doctor said. He must see me before he goes. I will see him, thanks to these good people—it was my only chance!' I knew without telling—no other train till eight this morning, and a car couldn't make the run, with last week's storm taking away so many bridges."

"Later Dolly told me how she had gone at breakneck speed in their car to the station—told her plight to the head of the circus there—he hadn't hesitated a minute—said he'd wait 'till morning if it would help. She had been so sure she had made her mother call me."

"Sisters, if I had never before believed in God, a God of love and mercy infinite, last night would have converted me. Only such a God could put so much of kindness, pity, helpfulness in human hearts. Men and women, they did all they could. Nobody seemed to think of bed or anything but cheering and heartening Dorothy—and making the train go faster. The champion bareback rider brought her flowers and fruit; the train boss slid a bottle of something into her hand—bag, muttering it was good for sickness, and the dancer, who scandalized some who saw her, I am told, wrapped the child warm in something that felt elderdown; then the trapeze expert cradled Dolly as though she were a baby, and the prima donna—it was her drawing room we occupied—sang a lullaby so soft it almost made me sleep. It soothed Dolly—of course she could not sleep—but that mad train, running minutes ahead of schedule, landed us safe—and men and women circus performers and train hands stood outside to see us pass on our way. Dolly looked at the big station clock, whispering huskily: 'They have given me ten minutes more? Think of it! God bless them!' And at the very last it was the trapeze woman who called: 'Remember! You are not to let Frank die!'

"God helping us—we didn't let him die. I married them five minutes after we reached him. Dolly knelt by him holding both his hands tight, pouring the strength, the power of those inspired eyes into him, simply refusing to let him go. I took out the surreptitious bottle—the surgeon snatched it—what he did with it you may guess. Frank had lost blood until he was corpse-like; there was no pulse in his wrists, and not too much in the temples. But in an hour he was less livid; Dolly, still kneeling, began chafing his hands. By daylight she had so far won him back the wise men said he had more than a fighting chance—and I started home to tell her mother everything. I forgot to say her father was away for the week, else I shouldn't have been called upon. Mrs. Batten and Louisa will go to Dolly this afternoon. I had to take a freight train, hence am so late. But I am glad you waited, doubly glad there are so many here to listen. Sunday past I preached a warning against the circus. Now I tell the story you have heard to let you share the light I have received. Please take it home with you and hold it fast. But before you go let us all kneel and pray silently, earnestly to be forgiven our daily sins and misjudgment. We cannot stand too firmly for things true, pure, lovely and of good report, but we may easily be overrighteous."

Those who heard were glad to kneel, velling their bowed heads and streaming eyes. Even Mrs. Kelly had a touch of keen compunction, but I doubt if she ever admitted it to anybody but herself.

PLACE OF MANY MEMORIES

Plaza in the City of Santa Fe, New Mexico, Has Witnessed Historical Scenes.

The hub of the city of Santa Fe, N. M., is the plaza. Close to the plaza cluster many of the historic spots of Santa Fe; indeed the plaza, itself, is a chief one. On this bit of ground it is believed that Onate must have camped in 1605, when the capital was transferred from San Gabriel. And here was the seething center of the famous Pueblo's revolt of 1680, when 3,000 infuriated Indians cooped the entire Spanish population of Santa Fe within the governor's palace opposite, and kept them there for a week. Then the whites made a brave sortie, caught and hanged 50 Indians in the plaza and escaped to old Mexico, their exit being celebrated shortly afterward in this same plaza by the Indians making a bonfire of all Spanish archives and church belongings they could lay hands on. Here 13 years later came De Vargas, the re-conqueror of New Mexico (bearing, it is said, the very standard under which Onate had marched in the original conquest), and with his soldiers knelt before the reinstated cross.

And it was in this plaza, in 1846, during the Mexican war, that Gen. Stephen Watts Kearny ran up the Stars and Stripes and took possession of the territory in the name of the United States. It was the plaza, too, that formed the western terminus of the Old Santa Fe trail—that famous highway of trade that bound New Mexico with Anglo-Saxondom throughout the Mexican regime in the southwest, and until the iron horse and Pullman cars superseded mules and Conestoga wagons.

Wolsey's Good Qualities.

Thomas Wolsey, better known as Cardinal Wolsey, tried twice to be elected pope. He was the most powerful man of his time in England, next to the king. He lived in a most voluptuous manner. His train of servants rivaled that of the king, and was composed of many persons of rank and distinction. But while he dazzled the eyes or insulted the people by an array of gorgeous furniture and equipage, such as exceeded the royal establishment itself, he was a generous and liberal patron of literature, and in the midst of luxurious pleasures and pompous revelings, he was meditating the advancement of science by a munificent use of those riches which he seemed to accumulate only for selfish purposes.

Largest Gold Mine.

The greatest gold mining region in the world is the Witwatersrand district, near Johannesburg, Transvaal, South Africa. The largest producing Rand mines in 1918, with monthly output, were the following: Crown mines, 203,000 tons; East Rand Proprietary, 153,500 tons; Knights Deep, 102,400 tons. T. A. Rickard considers the New Modderfontein the greatest gold mine in the world. In 1916 it was yielding 53,000 tons of rich ore per month, and borings have tested out a continuance of this ore to the total of nearly 20,000 tons. This is also in the Rand district of the Transvaal.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

WITH FLYING COLORS

IF YOU wish in your particular sphere of endeavor to reach a destination of more than ordinary importance, press untiringly forward in all kinds of weather.

Let neither heat nor cold deter or swerve you from your purpose when once you have decided your course. Pay no attention to the sneers of the frivolous. Keep your mind firmly fixed on your resolve and march resolutely ahead.

There will be times when you will be exhausted, footsore and discouraged; when opposing winds beat furiously and you seem to lack sufficient strength to make another step forward. When these depressing periods overtake you, sit down and rest awhile.

Ever remember that to get the best it is necessary to give the best. Do not offend those beneath you with gruff words. Be uniformly courteous. Break no promise. Withhold judgment. Be fair in business and keep off the velvet grass-grown plot of your neighbor.

The perplexities that vex your spirit are familiar to all humanity in all walks of life. No one by any manner of means can escape them, but it is possible for anyone to overcome them.

Use your mind. Be a rational being. By patience, well-doing and faith, turn your threatened defeat into victory. Thousands of noble men and women who have passed this way before you, thus obtained mastery over themselves, scarred outwardly with the wounds of battle, but unblemished within.

Use your hands in righteous work; your eyes to look up to the beautiful arch overhead; your ears to hear good; your tongue to praise God and to cheer and encourage others less fortunate than yourself. Rather than condemn, hold your peace.

Purge your heart of covetousness and hate.

Envy is a useless waste of energy which produces only mischief and misery. The combined envy of the whole world cannot remove a grain of sand or grow a blade of grass. Be charitable, kindly and industrious in whatever field you may be sowing or reaping.

Nothing is impossible to the man or woman who elects to do these things; and he and she will eventually surmount every obstacle and march triumphantly with flying colors to the long-sought destination.

Mother's Cook Book

Ah! what would the world be to us, if the children were no more? We would dread the desert behind us worse than the dark before.

DISHES FOR THE CHILDREN

THE food that is good for us is not always the kind we like; but the following will be found acceptable to most of the youngsters:

Luncheon Bread.

Mix two cupfuls of cooked, warm wheat cereal with a teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth of a cupful of brown sugar, one tablespoonful of shortening, one-half of a yeast cake, mixed with one-half cupful of milk scalded and cooled to lukewarm; mix with the cereal, add three cupfuls of whole wheat flour and put another on the molding board. Knead until smooth. Put into a greased bowl and set to rise. When double its bulk cut down and let rise again. Then cut down and add one cupful each of raisins, dates and nuts broken into bits. Shape in loaves, put into two bread pans and let stand until light. Bake 45 minutes. Let stand for 24 hours before cutting.

Rice Pudding.

Take a cupful of cold boiled rice, two tablespoonfuls each of honey and shortening, one egg yolk and four tablespoonfuls of cold water. Mix well, then add one cupful of pastry flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a little salt, one-half teaspoonful of almond extract and one-fourth of a cupful of currants. Dust the currants with a little flour. Beat well and bake in greased muffin pans for 25 minutes. Serve hot with honey.

Fruit Cookies.

Take three-quarters of a cupful of shortening, one cupful of sugar, two egg yolks and one-half cupful of milk, one teaspoonful of soda, a little salt, one cupful of seeded raisins plumped in steam, one-half cupful of peanuts chopped, the same of currants, candied cherries and two cupfuls of rolled oats, the whites of two eggs stiffly beaten, and two cupfuls of pastry flour. Mix in the order given out in fancy shapes, decorate with currants and candied cherries and bake in a moderate oven.

Buttermilk Candy.

Mix two cupfuls of sugar, one-half cupful of buttermilk, one tablespoonful of butter, cook to a soft-ball stage, add one-half cupful of nutmeats and beat until thick. Pour into a greased dish and mark off into squares.

Mother's Cook Book

Kindness is a language that the dumb can speak and deaf can understand. Telling the truth is a business in which there is but little competition.

SEASONABLE GOOD THINGS

FOR those who enjoy sweet sauces with meats this will be an appealing dish:

Raisin Sauce With Beef Tongue.

To two cupfuls of water add one cupful of seedless raisins, one tablespoonful of vinegar, and one tablespoonful of butter; more vinegar may be added if liked. Add two tablespoonfuls of flour mixed with a tablespoonful of brown sugar, a dash of cinnamon and salt. Simmer the raisins in one cupful of the water for fifteen minutes, then add the other ingredients and when well mixed the other cupful of cold water; let come to the boiling point. Serve with sliced boiled tongue.

Rice and Sausage With Cuban Sauce.

Fry as many sausages as are needed, having ready two cupfuls of boiled rice. To one can of tomatoes add a thinly sliced onion, a little chopped celery, a sprig of parsley, pepper, salt, four tablespoonfuls of sugar, and a saltspoonful of curry powder; stew for twenty minutes, strain, thicken with a little cornstarch mixed with cold water. Heap the rice on a hot dish, lay the sausage around the edge, and pour the sauce over all. Garnish the dish with parsley.

Boiled rice served hot with a hot chocolate sauce is a dessert that is enjoyed by all chocolate lovers.

Honey Rice Pudding.

Take one-half cupful of honey, two cupfuls of boiled rice, one beaten egg, one and one-half cupfuls of milk, a little salt and cinnamon, and one-half cupful of raisins. Mix well and put into a buttered mold, sprinkle with spices and bake in a moderate oven until thick and brown. Serve hot or cold.

Fig Filling for Cake.

Mix two cupfuls of fresh fig jam with one-half cupful of walnut meats, four tablespoonfuls of creamed butter and four tablespoonfuls of orange juice. Mix and spread on the cake while slightly warm.

THE GREAT EVENT

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

INTO each life shall come some great Event,

Obliterating all that was before
And making all that comes inconsequent,
The measure of our life forevermore.

Some episode our whole career inclines,

Some hour of sweetness so surpassing all

It is the truth in all life's faulty lines,
In all the songs of birds the perfect call.

And so that song has summoned even me;

I, who had been busy with so many things,
The small concerns that seemed so great to be,

I have been lifted up on sudden wings.

The night is fair that once was dark and drear,

The day is joyous that was full of care;

The clouds are gone, the sun, the stars, appear,

And now the world is beauty everywhere.

Some alchemy transfigures all the earth,

Toll now is pleasure, once a weary round;

New friends draw near, the old have greater worth,

The wealth of human hearts my heart has found.

Now merrily I climb the hard ascent,
But now the grass is green, the sky is blue;

Into each life shall come some great Event,

And, in my own, that great Event was You.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Luke Helped Paul.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Luke's Contribution to Christianity.

I. Luke the Historian (Luke 1:1; cf. Acts 1:1).

Luke was a writer of great distinction. His style is clear and picturesque. The pieces of writing left us are the Gospel of Luke and the Acts. According to Acts 1:1, the gospel was written to set down in order the things which Jesus began to do and to teach, and Acts 1:3 to show what the risen and ascended Lord was continuing to do and to teach. While here on earth He only began to do and to show certain things, but from His place of glorious exaltation, He is continuing His mighty work by the Holy Spirit through the disciples. Concerning the contents of the gospel, He asserts first, that the source of his information was recorded statements of eye witnesses. He assures us that these statements have been verified by him. Second, that he had made a systematic statement of these facts in order to strengthen the faith of his friend, Theophilus.

II. Luke the Beloved Physician (Col. 4:14).

He evidently was a skilled physician as his descriptions of the diseases which Jesus cured shows. His description of the symptoms of the diseases shows his capability. It was left to the physician to portray with vivid exactness the virgin birth by means of which the Eternal Son became incarnate. He was not only skillful but tenderly sympathetic. This sympathy is shown in his portrayal of the Great Physician in His compassion for the poor, helpless and suffering people. What untold good a skillful and sympathetic Christian physician can do! No one gets so closely into touch with human life as a doctor.

III. Luke the Companion of Paul (Acts 16:9-15).

1. Paul's Need of a Physician. There is clear evidence that Paul had some physical ailment which made the service of a skillful physician most desirable. When the call came to go to Europe with the gospel, Luke joined Paul and became one of his most helpful companions. This is one example of what a faithful Christian physician can do.

2. Luke's Fidelity. "Only Luke is with me." He was no mere far-away friend. He stood by Paul in storm and calm. Paul was now in the cold jail awaiting execution. What a great comfort it must have been to know that this faithful physician was with him. He was with him at Philippi, Miletus, Jerusalem, Caesarea, before Felix and Festus, on the voyage to Rome, with him in the Roman jail, through the Roman trial, and perhaps a spectator of his execution. It cost Luke a great deal to do this, but he no doubt considered it a labor of love, even feeling the call of God as really as Paul. Nothing is known of Luke after Paul's death. Tradition has some interesting things to say, but no word of certainty.

Courage.

Fear God, and take your own part. There's Bible in that, young man; see how Moses feared God, and how he took his own part against everybody who meddled with him. And see how David feared God, and took his own part. . . . So fear God, young man, and never give in! The world can bully, and is fond, provided it sees a man in a kind of difficulty, of getting about him, calling him coarse names, and even going so far as to humiliate him; but the world, like all bullies, carries a white feather in its tail, and no sooner sees the man taking off his coat, and offering to fight its best, than it scatters here and there, and is always civil to him afterwards.—Borrow.

When a Man Gets Angry.

The man of patience and of righteous purpose accomplishes something worth while when he gets angry. Every ounce of his energy is gathered and directed toward a good result. It is the moral steam controlled and made to hit a definite piston that sends this old world upward and onward.

Blind Fanaticism.

The blind fanaticism of one foolish honest man may cause more evil than the united efforts of twenty rogues.—Grimm.

Forgiveness or Sin.

Said General Oglethorpe to Wesley, "I never forgive." "Then I hope, sir," said Wesley, "you never sin."

Forgiveness.

Two persons cannot long be friends if they cannot forgive each other's little failings.—Bruyere.

How Apply Religion to Manners

Proverbs 1:8, 9; Luke 14:7-11

Reverence and humility are the two qualities suggested by our two Scriptures, reverence toward God and the things of God and a humble estimate of one's self.

These two qualities are the outstanding ones in the true Christian life. Whatever else a Christian may have by way of gift or grace, these two will be conspicuously present where the Christian believer is taught of the Spirit and the Word.

The greatness of God in the forgiveness of sins begets a holy fear, as in the case of Peter when the greatness of the Lord was revealed in the miraculous draft of fishes. He was filled with fear, a holy fear, a sense of unfitness which caused him to say, "Depart from me, O Lord!" but this very sense of distance was the precursor to a life of fellowship and service. Later this same disciple wrote the words, "Be clothed with humility." Reverence and humility are very closely associated.

The refining influence of these two qualities are perfectly obvious. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." If he thinks reverently of God, of His name, His church, His day, he will be wise in his method of doing things. His bearing and behavior will be shaped and molded by this inward spirit of reverence for God. "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom," in demeanor and deportment as well as in other matters.

With this spirit of reverence, there will be a humble estimate of self such as makes impossible the seeking of the chief seats and all that sort of thing. Pride and self-conceit cannot live in the same house as humility, neither can undue levity and coarseness dwell with reverence.

It Has Happened.

At the club they were discussing marriage and a girl's opportunities for making a good one. Some contended that a society girl stood the best chance. Others maintained that girls in business life met substantial men every day, and consequently often made excellent matches. Sensational marriages made by ladies of the chorus were mentioned, and then the talk veered around to department stores.

Said one member: "Many of these salesladies are beautiful. Many a girl is married from a department store." "And," chimed in another, "sometimes the store has to take her back."

It is faith that bridges the land of death.

To the realms of the souls departed, That comforts the living in days of death.

And strengthens the heavy-hearted, It is faith in his dreams that keeps a man.

Face front to the odds about him, And he shall conquer who thinks he can.

In spite of the throngs who doubt him.

SUMMER BEST OF SEASONS

Neither Spring, Autumn, Nor Winter Can Compare With the Glory of the Warm Days.

What is the best season of the year? Summer, to most people—though the other seasons, especially spring, have their charms. And the older you get, the more you will like summer, the more you will dread winter.

For summer, with its luxurious growth is symbolic of life at its best.

Spring corresponds to our babyhood. It is the sprouting season, full of hope, dreams, uncertainty, danger of frost.

Autumn is like the waning years of life, when we harvest as we have sown, when we suffer for our negligence and mistakes and are rewarded for our effort. Most of us, when we look backward in the autumn of life, say: "If I only had my life to live over again . . ."

Winter, of course, corresponds to human death, the hibernating of old growth until new growth is ready to sprout and bud.

All three of these seasons are preparatory to or the aftermath of summer. And summer is the period of life—of accomplishment—symbolic of the lives we are living. Lucky are you who have survived the frosts of life's springtime. Your crop of success is started. Till and weed, for autumn of life will be upon you before you are aware. For results, it's now or never.—Chicago Evening Post.

FORGET DEBT TO CERVANTES

Residents of Town Immortalized by Great Writer Have Voted to Change Its Name.

The inhabitants of the little Spanish village of Puerto Lopiche, disdainful of the fact that Cervantes immortalized their town in "Don Quixote," now desire to change its name.

The question was submitted to a vote of the inhabitants and it was decided that Puerto Lopiche should hereafter be called Puerto de San Juan, in honor of the order of St. John, which occupied that district in the Middle Ages.

Several Spanish newspapers have expressed their great indignation at this ingratitude, reminding the villagers of their obligation to the great Cervantes. But apparently the people of Puerto Lopiche remain entirely unmoved by sentimental and literary arguments, declaring that Puerto de San Juan sounds better than Puerto Lopiche. That, they believe, is the prime consideration.

It has been observed that in other places the inhabitants of places made famous by great writers do not always appreciate the honor bestowed upon them. Witness the good people of Tarascon who certainly have no great love and esteem for Alphonse Daudet. —From the Petit Parisien, Paris. (Translated for the Kansas City Star.)

Development of the Horse.

The earliest horse whose bones have been found was a little animal about the size of a dog. He had three toes in front and four behind. Horses seem to have appeared quite early in America, and many, no doubt, walked the very ground you are standing on, many feet below the present surface.

Horses found life easy, and as the years passed their race grew larger. They became more adapted to running on open prairie lands, where hard, firm feet served best.

Now, it is a principle of animal nature that the less surface of the body there is on the ground the better. Horses have reduced their feet to only four hard, hoof-tipped toes, but the remains of other toes still show under the skin.

Heavenly Decoration.

Elizabeth Anne went out in the suburbs with her father to see the new house they were building. One of the workmen was taking them about and telling of the progress they were making, when he remarked: "Well, sir, it will be heaven when the house is plastered."

Elizabeth Anne looked up very much surprised and exclaimed:

"Why, daddy, is Heaven plastered?"

WORLD'S DEBT TO SCIENTISTS

All Sorts of Perils and Privations Dared to Add to the Sum of Human Knowledge.

In the early days of maritime ventures and discovery these ventures would only be undertaken under the lure of gold, the acquisition of valuable new lands and of subjects whose toil and labor, under the lash of the brutal taskmaster, would result in the accumulation of wealth for others. Adventurers there were aplenty ready to risk their lives in the most desperate undertakings. They were brave and reckless, impelled by a strange yearning which is not absent today.

In these days, however, men still venture forth in quest of discovery, daring everything, risking everything, not seeking wealth, but venturing for the pure love of adventure and to do something which no other has done before. What the world owes to these men who go forth because they cannot stay at home, whom peril beckons and toil fascinates, and who look upon death in the quest as a mere incident, if not preferable to dying quietly in bed, can never be estimated.

Men dare for science and not for gold. Men endure all sorts of hardships and perils in order to add their mite to the sum of human knowledge, hoping that some time in the future, in some way unknown to them, the world at large may benefit and humanity be blessed. If there are men who thus will dare, there are also those who will provide the funds, and for the pure love of encouraging researches that may be of value to mankind. If the explorers do not expect to obtain any special rewards, neither do those who put up the finances. It is largely a matter of service, in which each one does his part in the most fitting way and in accordance with the ability of each to do so according to the talent in his possession. —Charleston Mail.

GOLF CREDITED TO SCOTLAND

If Not Original There, the Game Was Brought to a High Degree of Development.

A sport similar to modern golf originated with the Dutch, but the game generally is identified with Scotland. In fact, credit for developing golf to its present standards and handing down its traditions belongs to the "land of the warring clans," where as early as 1457 the local parliament inveigled against its abuse. The word derived from the German kolbe, in Dutch kolf, signifies a club. Kolf is an olden pastime in Holland and Belgium, where is usually played on the ice.

In Scotland golf formerly was solely a "gentleman's game," reserved to few men, whose wealth made great courses possible. These sportsmen observed to the highest degree the ethical and social requirements so dear to the Scotch golfer, and on such a plane the game reached America in 1888. For many years only men of leisure played. The playing of women did not follow for a dozen years. Gradually in city parks golf courses were laid out, and the response of the general public was instantaneous. By 1910 many women were playing, their number constantly increasing until on some courses the sexes are equally represented.

Italian Had "Kick" Coming.

The Italian workman in the backwoods of America was warned to look out for rattlesnakes. He was assured, however, that a snake would never strike until after sounding the rattles.

One day, while seated on a log eating his lunch, the Italian saw a rattlesnake coiled ready to strike. He lifted his leg carefully, with the intention of darting away the moment the rattles should sound their warning. But just as his feet cleared the top of the log, the snake struck out and its fangs were buried in the wood only a fraction of an inch below the Italian's trousers.

The frightened man fled madly, but he took breath to shriek over his shoulder:

"Idiot. Why you no ringa da bell?"

Obtains Picture of Hobson.

A lifelike portrait of the quaint Cambridge carrier, Thomas Hobson, to whom we owe indirectly the phrase "Hobson's choice," has recently been acquired by the British National Portrait gallery. On the canvas appears the date 1623—two years before the death, at the age of eighty-four, of Hobson. The painter is unknown, but he evidently belonged to a school with greater regard for fidelity than technique. How the famous saying arose is known. Hobson's stables were well stocked, but his horses had to be taken by customers in strict rotation. "This or none," was Hobson's rule. The portrait shows a strong face with aquiline nose, firm mouth, and kindly but courageous eyes.

Claude's Waves.

His seas are the most beautiful in old art. For he studied tame waves, as he did tame skies, with great sincerity, and some affection; and modeled them with more care, not only than any other landscape painter of his day, but even than any of the great men; for they, seeing the perfect painting of sea to be impossible, gave up the attempt, and treated it conventionally. But Claude took so much pains about this, feeling it was one of his fortes, that I suppose no one can model a small wave better than he.—Ruskin.

Distinct Telephone Speech

Best results are secured in telephone conversation by speaking directly into the mouthpiece of the instrument. If you try to telephone with your lips turned away from the mouthpiece or while smoking a cigar, your conversation is certain to be indistinct at the other end of the line.

INDISTINCT SPEECH CAUSES DELAY, OFTEN RESULTS IN NEEDLESS MISTAKES AND IS ANNOYING TO THE PERSON TO WHOM YOU ARE TALKING, who may be reluctant to ask you to repeat or to speak louder.

Should you be asked to "Speak louder, please," move closer to the mouthpiece and talk with a full natural tone. Then there can be no misunderstanding.

There is no doubt that DISTINCT TELEPHONE SPEECH PREVENTS ERRORS, MAKES YOUR TELEPHONE CONVERSATIONS MORE SATISFACTORY AND PLEASANT, AND GIVES DEFINITE RETURNS IN IMPROVED SERVICE.

Chicago 28% American.

Chicago is only twenty-eight percent "American" in the strictest sense of the word. The statistics collected by the Chicago association of commerce show that seventy-two percent of the population, or 1,947,376 persons, are of foreign birth or parentage. The Federal census classes all persons born in this country as Americans, but the association of commerce made a finer distinction. Less than twenty-five percent of the white population of Chicago are "Americans," as classed by the association of commerce.

The largest alligator in captivity is thought to be several hundred years old. It weighs 1,400 pounds and is thirteen and a half feet in length. The age is determined by the width of the nose between the eye-teeth. After the reptile is ten feet long, the nose widens one-quarter of an inch for each fifty years the alligator lives. The average adult weighing about 1,000 pounds will yield approximately one and one-half gallons of alligator oil and a valuable hide, which, when tanned, weighs from thirty-five to forty pounds.
