

MANY AUTO VICTIMS WITHIN A WEEK

State Highways Encourage Speed, and Death Toll Results.

William G. Hollinger, of Hanover, a student at Gettysburg College, was fatally injured late Saturday night on the Lincoln Highway, west of Lancaster, when a Packard car driven by Walter S. Plowman, of Hanover, side-wiped a heavy truck, cutting the automobile in half. There were five passengers in the car, all college students who were returning from witnessing a foot-ball game between Gettysburg and Lehigh.

All of the occupants of the car were more or less injured, and were taken to Lancaster Hospitals. Hollinger died shortly after being admitted. Randall Mullen, of Toronto, Canada, sustained a fractured skull, and Plowman, the driver was seriously injured. The car was running at 30 miles an hour, when they encountered another car with bright lights going east, which momentarily blinded the driver, and immediately after, a large gray truck without a tail light loomed up before them, and before the auto could be switched aside it struck the projecting driver's car.

Albert Palm, colored, of Hanover, Pa., was instantly killed, early last Saturday morning, when the automobile in which he was riding turned turtle on the Gettysburg-Harrisburg road, midway between Heidlersburg and York Springs. The car struck a heavy piece of wood that was carelessly left lying on the road by some motorists who had stopped there previously, to repair some tire trouble with their car.

When the car occupied by Palm and four other colored persons struck the piece of wood, it swerved to the side and struck a concrete culvert, turning the car over on its top. The car was being driven by Palm's son-in-law, James D. Moore, who, with his wife and two other occupants, were injured. The car was likely going at a high rate of speed.

John P. Nichols, of Cambridge, Md., was instantly killed at Warwick, near West Chester, Pa., Sunday morning, when an auto in which he was riding left the road and turned over. The driver escaped with minor injuries. Nichols was on his way from Wilmington, Del., his business headquarters, to Reading, Pa.

One child was killed and 12 persons were injured, 5 of them seriously, when the automobile truck in which they were riding, on Sunday, was struck by a locomotive of the Western Maryland Railroad. The accident occurred at a crossing at Glen Morris, one mile from Reisterstown. The child was Minerva Webster, 7 years old, 1411 S. Hanover St., Baltimore.

Three residents of Tacoma Park, Md., were killed on Monday, when the automobile in which they were coming to Washington was struck by a Baltimore & Ohio train at the Lamond grade crossing. The dead are: Samuel D. Coe, 35; Herman Steiner, 20; Miss Dorothea Hoogland, 25.

Mrs. John W. Rentzell, Middleburg, was treated for severe lacerations about the head and face at the Annie Warner hospital, Gettysburg, the injuries resulting from an automobile accident on the crest of the hill at Heidlersburg on the Gettysburg-Harrisburg road Sunday morning at 8 o'clock. The Carroll county woman was an occupant of a light touring car driven by her husband. She was discharged from the hospital Sunday evening.

According to reports, Cleo Smith, Newcastle, Indiana, in a big touring car was driving toward Harrisburg and near the brow of the hill in Heidlersburg attempted to pass another machine going in the same direction.

As he was in the act of doing so, the light car driven by Rentzell appeared over the crest of the grade, traveling toward Gettysburg. Both drivers attempted to pass without colliding, but failed.

The Eddie Plank Garage, Gettysburg, was notified of the accident, and sent a trouble car to the scene. Both machines were brought to that garage. They are badly damaged. The Rentzell car had been driven only 200 miles, but the owner sold it to a mechanic at the garage for $65 after the accident.

Bound to a Tree Four Days.

John W. Snyder, 40 years old, of near Hagerstown, while driving his automobile on the Western pike early Monday morning, a man hailed him and asked for a ride. Snyder assented and the man entered the automobile. A short time later, the man drew a revolver from his pocket, forced Snyder to relinquish the wheel and climb into the rear of the automobile. The man then drove to the woods, where, after robbing Snyder of $40 he bound him to a tree and drove off. He was not found for four days.

Snyder's condition is said by physicians to be serious. He is suffering from lack of nourishment and exhaustion. The authorities have a good description of the bandit.

AUTO MISSES THE BRIDGE.

Carload of Colored Folks Plunge over Embankment into River.

Late Thursday night, as a carload of colored folks were returning from the Hagerstown Fair, to Westminster, the driver failed to make the turn at the approach to the covered bridge over the Monocacy, at Bridgeport, and went over the embankment throwing the six occupants out, some of them into the water. Five of them were more or less seriously hurt.

The car, a big Packard, must have been running at high speed, and the curved approach to the bridge was seen too late to avoid. The most seriously injured was Halbert Dorn, who had his skull cut and perhaps slightly fractured; his mother, an aged woman was scalped above the left eye, had fractured ribs and was cut about her limbs, a grand-daughter was also considerably cut and bruised.

As indicating the high rate of speed at which the car must have been running, it appears to have made a clear jump of about 36 feet from the bridge wall before it touched the ground, when it turned over and made another plunge of the same distance into the bed of the stream where it now lays, upside down, a complete wreck. After the accident, the parties were brought to Taneytown, about 11:30, and received surgical treatment, and then left for Westminster about 2 o'clock this morning. The whole party met with a miraculous escape from death, or greatly more serious injuries.

This is a danger spot on the road, especially at night, and to a driver unacquainted with the situation. This old one-way bridge—one of the few covered bridges yet remaining on modern roads—rests on high foundation walls, and is approached on a curve at each end. It is one of many bridges that need replacement by an open, wide structure, and guard rails.

Of Interest to Automobilists.

The variation in the efficiency of the brakes when on a long trip is due to several things, but the condition of the brake lining is perhaps most important. Sometimes the lining will become polished, in which case the brakes will not be very efficient. In other instances the lining may be "roughened up," in which case the brakes will suddenly begin to be more effective. Generally speaking, the dragging of the brakes or long application of them down long grades will cause the lining to become polished, whereas a few sudden applications of the brakes will rough up the linings. Road dust and water will alter these conditions.

That an engine will sometimes heat up on a hill for lack of oil, depending largely upon the position of the pump, the type of oiling system and the condition of the oil? The pressure on the bearings during a pull uphill makes greater demands upon the oiling system, and if the bearings do not receive the proper amount of oil they will heat up, and perhaps stop the engine.

That the flickering of the oil pressure gauge when descending a steep hill is simply due to oil in the crankcase flowing away from the oil pump in cases where it is located at the rear of the engine? There is no particular danger if the pressure is affected in this way, since the engine is usually under its own power in descending such hills, and therefore, does not need a constant high pressure of oil to its bearings.

To clean spark plugs, soak them in a mixture of alcohol and kerosene over night. Then in the morning the carbon can be wiped off with a clean rag. Because of the highly glazed surface of the plugs, emery cloth or sand paper should never be used. When the glazed surface becomes roughened, the plug quickly fouls and stops firing.—Commercial World.

Struck by Bicycle and Killed.

William A. Roberts, aged 56 years, this city, was fatally injured when he was struck and knocked to the ground by a bicycle ridden by C. B. Booker, this city, aged 17, Thursday evening about 7 o'clock.

Roberts was walking along the left side of the road on the Baltimore pike near his home on Hamilton Avenue, and Booker was riding on the right side, it was said. It being dark and Booker's bicycle not being equipped with a light or bell, neither Roberts nor Booker saw the other coming, it was stated. The bicycle struck Roberts in the stomach and the force of the impact threw Roberts back on his head with such force that he suffered concussion of the brain.

Shortly afterward Ingomar W. Albaugh, this city, who was returning to his home, passed and saw Roberts lying by the roadside with his head in Booker's arms. Mr. Albaugh, together with Booker, placed the injured man in his machine and rushed him to the Frederick City Hospital, where he died about 9:30 o'clock.—Frederick News.

Holding that it is the automobilist's duty to slow up when old persons or children are near his line of travel, a Detroit judge denied a motion to dismiss the complaint of negligent homicide against a careless driver whose car ran over and killed an elderly woman. The defendant's attorney moved to dismiss the complaint because no criminal intent was evident in his client's actions. Testimony showed that the woman stepped off the curb into the path of the defendant's car. The judge held it is the duty of the driver to stop when children or old persons are in the way.

A COMMUNITY CREED.

I believe in my community—its people and its institutions. I believe in the integrity of my fellow citizens; that each should have fair compensation for the service he renders in the community. I believe that the community can progress only as its varied industries thrive and prosper. I believe that community prosperity can result only where there is unity of purpose on the part of the people. I believe that community progress can never exceed the individual progress in the community. I believe in community loyalty; that every citizen should always speak well of his community, his neighbors and the various institutions of the community. I believe that every person has an individual responsibility in his community. I believe in conserving the community's resources. I believe in patronizing home industries, home business, home institutions. I believe in purchasing home needs at home, of my friends and neighbors so far as possible. I believe in general community co-operation—better agriculture, better business, better roads, schools, churches and society.

I THEREFORE RESOLVE—that henceforth I shall do all reasonable within my power to further the best interests of my community.—National Community Magazine.

RULES FOR FRESHMEN.

College Tribunal Adopts Rules for "Freshie" Students.

The Sophomores of Gettysburg College have adopted some new rules applying to the conduct of Freshmen, according to the latest issue of the "G-Book," which covers wearing of the "dink" throughout the academic year; no smoking of cigarettes; cheerful performance of all athletic work; refraining from walking with hands in pockets; keeping strictly on the walks and paths on the campus; wearing only black socks and neckties, and refraining from "dates."

As punishment for the violation of any of these rules and customs, the following penalties have been provided:

Freshmen shall be required to wear large wooden or metallic "dink" for violating the rule pertaining to the wearing of the official yearling headpiece.

Offenders who walk on the grass may be required to weed out dandelions or do other menial work about the campus. If a Freshman walks on the grass his attention must be called to it immediately and the penalty stated by the person who shall then report him; otherwise he cannot be penalized.

For wearing insignia contrary to regulations, Freshmen may be denied the right to wear watch fobs during their first year and in addition may be subject to assigned work from the chairman of the disciplinary committee of the Student Council.

A Freshman may be required to wear hideously colored trousers, if he wears white ones; he may be forced to wear a small horse collar, if he fails to wear a black tie. If he does not wear black socks, he may be required to wear a placard stating the nature of his offense.

For smoking cigarettes, the offender may be required to write a composition of 500 words on the subject; "The Evils of Tobacco." This composition then must be read in public.

For failing to uncover when entering any of the buildings on the campus, the penalty may consist of helping the janitors sweep out the halls, or other cleaning.

If the offending Freshman is seen in company with a girl, he may be obliged to wear a bonnet, apron or other clothes of a woman.

For failing to remain seated in chapel until the upper-classes leave the building, the offender may be compelled to carry a small chair around with him for a certain length of time.

In order to enforce the penalties specified, a tribunal consisting of two Seniors, three Juniors and four Sophomores has been named by the Student Council, which shall be responsible to the faculty for any actions of the tribunal.

C. Irving Kroh, Ill.

C. Irving Kroh, the well known cancer, of Silver Run, was taken to Md. University Hospital, last week, and was operated on, on Tuesday, for acute appendicitis and complications. Mr. Kroh's condition was regarded as serious, but he stood the operation very well, and hopes are entertained of full recovery.

Maryland C. E. Union.

The 32nd. annual convention of the Md. Christian Endeavor Union will be held October 16, 17 and 18, 1923, at Cambridge. Six hundred delegates are expected to attend, and the state officers are planning to make this convention the best ever. There will be inspirational talks, conferences, addresses and special speakers on all phases of C. E. work.

Baust Church Renovated.

Baust Church has been extensively improved by the installation of electric lights, frescoing the walls, varnishing and painting inside and out. A new hot water heating plant has been installed in the parsonage, the sexton's house repainted, and the property in general improved, at a cost in all of about $2000.00.

The American Federation of Labor went on record, on Thursday, as being opposed to Senator Underwood, of Alabama, as candidate for the Democratic nomination for the Presidency; also against Senator James W. Watson, of Indiana.

THE HILL WINE CASE.

Petition for Injunction Filed Before Judge Soper.

The case against Congressman John Philip Hill, of Baltimore, for violation of the Volstead Act, in manufacturing wine, at his home, took a new turn, on Thursday, when U. S. District Attorney Woodcock filed a petition for injunction in the U. S. District Court to restrain Hill from manufacturing and having in his possession, wine, contrary to law.

Judge Soper has signed a temporary injunction in which Mr. Hill has 20 days to file his answer. Attorney Woodcock has issued a lengthy explanation of his course, instead of placing the matter before the Federal Grand Jury, in which he says, in part:

The case of Congressman Hill is unusual for two reasons; first, the high position he occupies and, second, that he admits freely the acts the Government contends violate the law. The first reason entitles him to no consideration in this court beyond that given any other person. The second reason inclines one to believe that he may be seeking, sincerely, a judicial determination of the question whether what he has done is a violation of the law, rather than that he is deliberately breaking the law in the hope that he will emerge from the prosecution a hero or a martyr.

It was my intention, originally, to lay this case before the grand jury. More mature consideration, and continuing through the week, has convinced me that, since the facts are substantially admitted, and the question primarily one of law, it would be more proper to lay it before the judge whose province it is to determine questions of law than before a jury whose province it is to determine questions of fact. I have, therefore, asked for an injunction as provided in Section 22 of the National Prohibition Act. This will allow Congressman Hill his day in court and a full opportunity to present his case.

Every hour, somewhere in the United States, a man's life is taken. There were more than 9,500 "unlawful" homicides in this country in 1921. One of every 12,000 Americans is murdered every year, whereas the figure in Europe is one out of every 634,000. A prominent writer states, "When a prospective assassin in America is about to pull the trigger, he knows that he will have three powerful friends if he commits the deed. These three friends are Sentimentality, the New Psychology, and Technicality. So he pulls the trigger and takes his chances."

NO LABOR PARTY.

The A. F. L. Votes Against Separate Political Party.

The American Federation of Labor decided, on Tuesday, not to form a political party—to "stay out of politics"—the vote being almost unanimous, some 24,000 in a total of about 28,000. The underlying idea no doubt was, that the movement would be stronger by bringing influence to bear on both parties, and thereby save the big expense of maintaining a separate organization.

The convention, held in Portland, Oregon, however, made it clear that the A. F. L. had political convictions, both denunciatory and constructive. It scored so-called anti-trust legislation (not of the Union Labor variety.)

The convention endorsed the executive council's declaration against the Sherman anti-trust law, the Clayton law and the law creating the Federal Trade Commission. It charged that the Sherman law originally intended to exempt labor organizations had been so construed that industrial combinations, which were originally the object of attack by the law, have escaped and the law has been turned against organized labor. The report stated that legislation to take the place of these measures would be sought.

Government by injunction was termed a "cancer in the body politic," removal of which was urged in a resolution adopted.

The ship subsidy was characterized in a report of the resolutions committee as a "raid on the nation's treasury," which opposition of the American Federation of Labor had aided in defeating. The report on ship subsidies was unanimously adopted.

The convention declared strongly in favor of an adequate soldiers' bonus.

The National Cathedral, Washington.

Washington, September 10.—Preparations are being made here today for the completion of the National Cathedral of the Protestant Episcopal Church. Although four million dollars has already been contributed, only the apse of the great edifice on Mount St. Alban has been completed. It stands today higher than the Washington monument and overlooks the whole city. Recently, however, the Washington chapter of the church decided to push the work on the whole Cathedral, so that it may be completed within five years.

The National Cathedral, although started during the administration of President McKinley, is really a fulfillment of President Washington's dream of a "church for national purposes" which was provided for in the original plans of L'Enfant for the national capital. From the time that President McKinley attended the first open air services at the Cathedral, every President, scores of cabinet officers and foreign diplomats and thousands of members of the Senate and House, have been present on historic occasions at the Cathedral, from the ceremonies following the conclusion of the Spanish-American war, to the religious services in connection with the Conference on the Limitation of Armaments.

When the last stone has been placed and the Cathedral opened, it will be one of the largest and finest church buildings in the world. Surrounding the foundation and apse, which are now complete, are the National Cathedral School for Girls, and a similar school for boys, a bishop's house, a library which is to be the most complete religious library in America, and an amphitheatre which today accommodates 25,000 persons.

The next mammoth ceremony to be held at the Cathedral will be a public service on September 29, in connection with the consecration of the bishop-elect of Washington, the Rev. Dr. Jas. E. Freeman. The amphitheatre is being prepared for a great outdoor service in connection with the consecration services.

Deadhead Died.

Harry Woods, of the Wellington (Kans.) News went to a church supper a few years ago to which he had been given a "free" ticket. As he neared the portals, he heard one good sister whisper to another, "Here comes one of those deadheads." Reflectively he ate his chicken wing and returned to his office and got out his trusty pencil. He found he had given that particular supper just $8.45 worth of advertising and in return therefor had received one chicken wing and the name of "deadhead." Since that day he has collected cash for all church suppers and other pay-socials, has never accepted a free ticket to anything and he also gets the choice part of the chicken.

Perhaps you have never heard them call YOU a "deadhead" but they probably have. Moral—Other people place no higher value on your services than you do yourself.—The Jayhawker Press.

The Oklahoma legislature, the meeting of which has been attended by exciting scenes for the past month, is now in session by proclamation of the Governor; but instead of first taking up the operations of the Ku Klux Klan, as recommended by Governor, has started proceedings looking toward the impeachment of the Governor, for malfeasance in office.

The Japanese excel in stonecutting. Nowhere in the world will one find more beautiful and perfect granite cutting, which, together with the perfection of its setting, makes the workmanship a delight to view.

PRESIDENT URGES CAUSE OF EDUCATION

His Proclamation Terms Ignorance
Despotism's Support.

Washington, Oct. 11 (Capital News Service).—National Education Week will be observed, beginning November 18. This event is supported by all friends of education, but is especially in charge of the National Education Association, the United States Bureau of Education, and the American Legion, which have co-operating with them more than a hundred national organizations pushing the cause of education.

President Coolidge has issued a proclamation, calling upon all American citizens to support the cause and observe the celebration. It says in part:

"With the adoption of the Federal Constitution and the establishment of free governments in the States of the Union, there was reason for broadening the opportunity for education. Our country adopted the principle of self-government by a free people. Those who were worthy of being free were worthy of being educated. Those who had the duty and responsibility of government must necessarily have the education with which to discharge the obligations of citizenship. The sovereign had to be educated. The sovereign had become the people.

"Every American citizen is entitled to a liberal education. Without this there is no guarantee for the permanence of free institutions, no hope of perpetuating self-government. Despotism finds its chief support in ignorance. Knowledge and freedom go hand in hand.

"In order that the people of the Nation may think on these things, it is desirable that there should be an annual observance of educational week.

"Now, therefore, I, Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, do hereby proclaim the week beginning on the 18th, of November next as National Education Week and urge its observance throughout the country. I recommend that the State and local authorities co-operate with the civic and religious bodies to secure its most general and helpful observance, for the purpose of more liberally supporting the educational facilities of our country."

"The Right of Way."

A writer in the Baltimore Sun, of last Sunday, in commenting on the large number of deaths due to motor vehicles, brings in the question of "right of way" as it applies to pedestrians, and in the course of his letter, says:

"In this connection, the tremendous increase in the number of automobiles in use in this country, and the really alarming increase in the number of accidents—avoidable and unavoidable—occasioned thereby, make it worth while to broadcast certain truths which seem to be ignored by very many owners or drivers of these cars. A New York magistrate, emphasizing the prior right of pedestrians to the use of the streets, recently declared: 'Pedestrians are not required to cross streets at the usual crossing, although they should exercise greater care when they do so elsewhere. It is not enough for an automobilist to blow a horn. When pedestrians are endangered the automobile should stop.'

So far from the truth is the assertion of many automobilists that they have at least as much right to the street as the walkers, that they need to reflect upon and realize their true status, as recently defined by competent legal authority. Magistrate House, of the New York Traffic Court, puts it very tersely thus:

As a matter of fact, nobody has any inherent right to run an automobile at all, astonishing as this statement doubtless is to many people. The courts have held that the right to operate a motor vehicle is a privilege given by the State, not a right; and that privilege may be hedged about with whatever limitations the State feels to be necessary, or it may be withdrawn entirely.

The distinction should be borne in mind; the pedestrian has an inherent right to the use of the street or road; the automobilist's privilege, not right, is granted by the law."

A consignment of oak was sent to Europe. It was found to be wormy and there was no market for it until the consignor happened to visit an antique furniture factory. The manager of the factory was busily engaged in manufacturing "antique" grandfather clocks, boring the wormholes by hand. He was very glad to buy the wormy oak and paid a much better price for it than for sound oak. A profitable connection was established between the exporter and the antique manufacturer.

The candidates, this year, will have the burden of getting the vote out, as there appears to be a remarkable degree of lack of interest, perhaps due to such a multitude of other things to do, aside from getting interested in elections. The election of county officials ought to be considered very essential and important "work," even ahead of our usual occupations, but somehow it does not stand in that position.

The prediction is made that there will be 24,000,000 automobiles in the United States by 1932, more than double the present number. Already, large cities are talking of two-story streets, and more streets; while country roads, and streets in towns, will need to be widened. By that time, the undertaking business and hospitals will have to double-up, in order to handle their increased patronage.

What Dollings investors will get, is uncertain. As yet, there are too many "ifs" in the way, and too many tangled threads, and one guess is about as good as another. In the meantime, the expense of adjustment and investigation is going on, and it is reasonably to be presumed that these will come out of the box first. On the whole, it will not be wise to expect to buy this winter's coal out of what comes back.

We do not know when it is coming; but, some day, there is going to be an end to advancing labor costs and prices of manufactures. Organized labor, more than any other one agency, is responsible for high costs everywhere; and the trouble is bound to come when the products of labor remains untaken at present prices. Somebody is buying everything that is manufactured, and "paying the price," and as long as this continues, there will be no lower prices.

The Volstead Act evidently needs some "fixing up," or at least some clarification, especially with reference to home-made wines and cider. We have always considered this portion of the law unnecessarily arbitrary, as well as practically impossible of enforcement, and to some extent this has brought discredit on the whole act. Let us have a reasonable law and clear interpretation of it, and the enforcement of the whole will be much less difficult, while the "wets" will have a good "talking point" destroyed.

All Working Together.

Interests are often combined when they do not seem to be, especially as they relate to employer and employed. It is difficult to understand, at times, why a boss should be so particular concerning what appears to be trifling details, and why he may become aggravated with a workman, as the latter may think, "over nothing." But, the chances are the boss is concerned over building up a business, and reputation, and knows that this depends on complete efficiency, and a perfect finished product.

The employee is vitally concerned in this, if he cares for "his job," not for the sake of pleasing his employer, but the sake of giving him more orders, that stand for more work—more business. The careless employee, therefore, may easily put himself out of a job because of jobs not coming in through the managerial end—because of displeased customers. There must, therefore, be a co-operation, and pride for good work, from the business manager on down to the humblest employee, because all have part in the perfection of work turned out.

There is no place, anywhere, in a reliable business establishment, for a poor mechanic, nor a habitual mistake maker; and the same is true of the economical side of a business. Any slacking of work, or lost time, or work needing to be done over, counts in the expense of doing business. It is just as essential that work be economically done, as well done. If expenses can be kept down, profits are increased, and naturally, the ability to pay better wages.

No matter how the various details of a business may be approached, there is a close common interest attaching to every cog in a producing force. When this is fully known and observed, and when the one is justly appreciative of the work of the other, the chances are that there is always a proper understanding, and mutual trust existing between them. When either party can see only one side, and not care greatly for the other, naturally there is conflict.

The Whole World Kin.

The recent terrible disaster in Japan has brought to light, very pointedly, that after all the whole world acknowledges kinship, when properly startled to a realization of the fact. It is true, that we have reached the stage when earthquakes and the most terrible catastrophes are needed to bring Nations to their senses; but "the brotherhood of man" is not yet extinct, in spite of a pessimism and selfishness that exists as never before.

It is an undeniable fact that the tendency, everywhere, is toward a hard-boiled resistance toward peace, harmony and fraternal relations. We find it everywhere; in church, state, society and business. We are rapidly becoming chronic resisters of harmony, and boosters of "our own way." We are having a repetition of Egypt's plagues, without recognizing them as such.

The truth here first stated, was recently very nicely and clearly stated in an address by Prince Tokugawa, of Japan, at Tokio, on the occasion of a luncheon given by him in honor of our Ambassador Woods, General McCoy and American Red Cross workers, when he said:

"Our pride has been humbled by a visitation the like of which has seldom befallen a prosperous nation," he said. "Our hearts have been chastened and our imagination clarified. We are thus enabled to see in a new light the eternal realities of life.

"One of the great truths which has been brought to our minds forcibly is that no disaster can occur which does not bring some compensation in good, and the greater the disaster, the greater the good. What could be more impressive than the great wave of sympathy which has swayed the hearts of mankind in all parts of the world for the stricken people of Japan?"

"For the moment one noble sentiment unites the whole civilized world, East and West, regardless of race or religion. Such stirring of noble sentiments cannot fail to produce profound results favoring human fellowship and solidarity. If so, the thousands of our fellow countrymen, who were buried under falling debris or consumed by raging flames have not died in vain."

The Sesqui Centennial.

The Philadelphia Ledger offers the advice that a big commercial and industrial Sesqui-centennial celebration of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, is not what Philadelphia, or the country, wants. It says the public is not interested, and that the "Exposition" idea is playing out. Moreover, the public is not receptive to the paying out of vast sums for such purposes, especially in times like the present.

The Ledger, however, is strong for a celebration of the anniversary on a large scale, but not after the exposition plan. It says, in fact, that there must be such a celebration, and will be, covering perhaps a month, but not a whole summer. It says;

"The commemoration of the signing need not be ornate and expressed in terms of millions of dollars' worth of plaster, excavations, greensward and exhibitors' floor space. It can be done without devastating Fairmount Park and piling up therein a group of flimsy structures to melt and crumble under the brief rains and suns of a single summer.

Philadelphia can provide a dignified celebration without following that familiar groove and without harassing the sister States of the Union or troubling the Nation for vast and continuing help. To do so, however, it must make new plans, turn its back on extravagantly ambitious schemes that are now impossible because of pressure of time, modify the scope of its dreams and make use of now existing facilities."

"He Don't" Is O. K.

No country newspaper editor will defend so-called bad grammar—or ungrammatical expressions—even though he makes a slip once in a while himself. Nevertheless, we have to say that the editor who takes to heart the frequent high brow condemnations of the rough and ready English found in many of our newspapers, should forget it.

The English language is a language of evolution. It changes with every generation. That which was correct in expression 200 years ago was not correct 150 years ago. What was correct fifty years ago, is not correct today. And, shocking to relate, the high brow pedant is right now saying things every day of his life that a hundred years from now will be bad grammar.

Once in a while we see the words "He don't" in a country paper. It is historically correct English.

Lots of people say: "It is me." That is historically correct English. So is "Between you and I."

We have no less an authority than Prof. Thos. R. Lounsbury, of Yale, noted scholar and expert on the English language, for this. Prof. Lounsbury, understanding the evolution of English, understanding how certain expressions of long ago came down to the common people of today, looks lightly upon such slips. To him they are history making.

The pedants and high brows number less than 1 percent of the population. They do not make the English language. The evolution of the English language is in the hands of the mass of the population, the common people, and their textbook is the newspaper.

Therefore, Mr. Editor, if you make a slip once in a while, take notice "on it," as Captain Cuttle would say, but don't worry over it. You are simply performing your part in the evolution of the language we speak.—American Press.

Oklahoma as a Horrible Example.

"Lie down with dogs; get up with fleas," is an ancient aphorism, and it is as true in politics as in any other field of human activity.

Oklahoma nominated and elected a Socialist demagogue governor, and are now paying the penalty in a disrupted party and a disorganized state.

The leather-lunged political quack who goes around bellowing about his love for the people and his mission as an emancipator of the down trodden masses from the rule of plutocracy, will in practically every instance, entrusted with power, turn out to be just a cheap exploiter of the people and greed seeker after pelf and power. He is willing to assert anything or promise anything as a candidate and as an official he will usually turn out to be just as dishonest and untrustworthy as he was in his candidacy.

Walton, of Oklahoma, has gone back on every promise he made during his demagogical campaign for governor, in which he rallied to his standard every radical in his state. He has betrayed every promise he ever made to anybody, and as a result is repudiated by most of those who elected him and has had, in desperation, to seize upon an entirely new issue to save himself from being tried and removed as governor by a Democratic legislature for notorious betrayal of trust.

Before Walton was governor he was chief of police, then Mayor of Oklahoma City. He now lives in a $50,000 house, and rides in one of the most expensive makes of automobiles he says both of these evidences of wealth were presents from admiring friends. He has issued 259 pardons and paroles to penitentiary prisoners since the first of the year, some of them under known circumstances which have caused no end of open talk.—Gettysburg Star.

Drying Up Philadelphia.

Governor Pinchot's drive against the saloons in Philadelphia offers those who believe in enforcing the law their first real chance to help make prohibition effective. At the same time, it promises the first real test of the prohibition law itself in this State. Heretofore enforcement could not be anything but a poor sort of joke, because there was not physical possibility, with the force available, of closing all the saloons, and closing a few simply concentrated trade elsewhere. A means has been found by which, so far as can be foreseen, it will be possible to dry up all known sources of intoxicants at practically one time.

It is, however, a large and difficult undertaking, beset with many practical difficulties, and the Governor will need, as he deserves, the full support of every law-abiding citizen. It would be a decided novelty to have "prohibition" in the real sense at last. Until we have it, completely and effectively, it will not be possible for the people at large to form a reasoned judgment on a law long on the statute books but never yet obeyed.—Phila. Ledger.

LAW NOT STEVENSON'S FORTE

Popular Writer Was an Advocate by Profession, but Early Abandoned the Occupation.

Robert Louis Stevenson, the famous Scottish novelist and essayist, was an advocate by profession—member of the Scottish bar—but he never practiced. He hated the law—or at least the practice of it—and abandoned it for literature as quickly as he could. At the bar in Edinburgh, Lord Shaw of Dunfermline (then Mr. Thomas Shaw, advocate) had an interesting view of Stevenson as an advocate. He writes: "I remember seeing him, with his very white wig and his glossy dark hair, his complexion of an ivory pailor, and his gleaming dark eyes. A few days after Stevenson went to the bar he had got a guinea, sent to him with 'instructions.' His sole duty was to ask the judge for intimation and service of a petition of the party against whom it was directed. All he had to do was to stand up at the bar and utter three words interrogatively: 'Intimation and service?' But he was a mass of nerves, and these three words he could not utter, and he besought his friend to go into court and make the little motion for him. I never heard of his earning another guinea as an advocate."

Mirage in History.

A mirage is an optical illusion, by which images of distant objects are seen often as if inverted, below the ground or raised in the atmosphere. It is frequently observed on the western plains of Canada and the United States. "The phenomenon is best observed in the Egyptian or other deserts, and the inverted images so much resemble these made in water as to create the illusion that a lake is really near. The mirage was known in ancient Jewish times. It is mentioned in Isaiah 35:7: "And the parched ground shall become a pool and the thirsty land springs of water." The Fata Morgana, what sailors call the "loomings," the Flying Dutchman, the Enchanted Island, Cape Flyaway, etc., are all produced by the mirage.

Held Commanding Position.

A countryman was in charge of a couple of live hares, which he was conveying by rail. He had to change at a station and wait some time.

To pass the time he took the basket in which the hares were confined outside the station and put it down in the road. The lid had been tied down loosely, and one of the hares managed to get out.

The man rushed after it, but all to no purpose; and just as he got back the other hare jumped out and ran away in the opposite direction.

The countryman made no attempt to follow, but, pointing first one way and then the other, said: "Do you go there and do you go there if you like. I've got the tickets."

Sheep's Important Place in World.

One man alone could not look after a whole flock, so the first shepherd called in others, who lived in scattered huts or in caves, far apart, to assist him, offering in return a share of the wool and the meat that were now so easy to obtain. And so at the edge of the pastures the first villages grew up. Thanks, largely to sheep, human society came into being, and with it came laws and customs for the benefit of the little community.

The next tremendous step was the discovery of how to spin wool into yarn and weave yarn into cloth, which paved the way for manufactures and commerce.

Just Like Home.

Of course, the fez was prominent in Constantinople. An American tourist admitted that he had not thought of the people as being so progressive. He was asked what he meant.

"What a lot of Shriners there are," was his explanation.

Old King Tut

That old Egyptian king may have been the big man of his day, but he has been dead 3,000 years, and there have been a good many changes since he had charge of things.

We now ride through the air like a bird, speak through the air like gods, go under the sea like the fish. We do all these things and hundreds of others that would have startled King Tut in his day. And banking keeps pace with progress, too. The treasures of the old King's tomb haven't earned a cent, because they were buried all this time.

ODORS LIKED AND DISLIKED

Wide Variety of "Tastes" in Smells With Which Every Person is Well Acquainted.

When 63 barrels of wine were emptied recently into New York gutters a crowd of 700 people stopped to watch—and sniff.

The bouquet of wine is one of the few odors which are appreciated by almost every one. Others are the smells of new-mown grass, coffee, spices, bacon, hot buttered toast, seaweed and, of course, most perfumes and all fruits and flowers.

Kings and beggars alike have commented on the ecstasy to be obtained from the odors of cooking. Curiously enough, this is largely due to the fact that smelling and tasting "overlap."

The "taste" of tobacco is often due to sight rather than either taste or smell. There is not half the enjoyment to be obtained from smoking in the dark as in the light. Blind men usually prefer stronger tobacco than those who can watch the curls smoke. Some use tobacco strongly scented.

Incredible as it may seem, there are people, too, who cannot even distinguish between tea and coffee when their eyes are shut.

Tastes differ because the pleasures derived from smells differ in almost every individual. Some like the smell of tar; others hate it. Some revel in the smell of a bonfire; others deliberately avoid it.

There are a host of other smells which to some are a delight and to others unpleasant. Among these are camphor, musk, creosote, carbolic, furniture polish, fresh paint, petrol fumes and the musty odors of old books.

GET FREE MEDICAL SERVICE

All Seamen Have a Right to Treatment by Radio While They Are on the High Seas.

The far-flung cry for help—"S. O. S."—has long since, even before the World war, focused the attention of peoples the world over on how wireless has tremendously lessened the dangers that befall men who go down to the sea in ships. Few, however, even the master mariners, realize as yet that all seamen have a right to medical service by radio while at sea.

Surgeon General H. S. Cumming of the public health service emphasizes that "even the expense of calling the service by radio from away out at sea is borne by the radio companies, without expense to ship or sailor." This medical service is really a sort of subsidy to merchant ships and sailors. A century and a quarter ago, when Congress established the public health service, under the title of the marine hospital service, it directed it to render medical aid to every American seaman who applied for it, and that for this each seaman should pay 20 cents a month. This was in 1798. In 1870 the tax was doubled. In 1888 it was abolished. Since then all such aid has been rendered free.

Few Phones on African Farms. Farmers' telephones are practically unknown in the British colonies of South Africa, according to a recent report to the Department of Commerce from the American vice consul at Capetown.

"There is scarcely any telephone service in the rural districts," says the report, "and the question of its development in these districts is one of great importance to South Africa. There are thousands of farmers living in places far removed from railways and telegraphs who are practically isolated from the rest of the country. It has been suggested that telephone service in rural districts might be developed as it was in Canada . . . where . . . individuals were permitted to erect and maintain telephone lines." At present, the vice consul reports, "the telephone system in the Union of South Africa is owned by the government and operated by the department of posts and telegraphs."

Busy Berlin Thieves.

Burglars are so numerous in Berlin, Germany, that they are stumbling over each other. The city's plain clothes men have just discovered a case in which two gangs of thieves happened to be on the same "job" at the same time, and came face to face outside the residence they were about to loot. A brief consultation between the rivals resulted in plundering the place, on the understanding that the spoils would be split evenly. Teamwork made it possible to remove jewelry, silverware and linen to the value of 15,000,000 marks in the course of a few minutes.

Wanted "Big Boy."

Although we have only lived in the neighborhood a few days, my husband has become acquainted with the little boy, about five years old, who lives next door, by playing ball with him once or twice.

We had just finished dinner the other evening when this youngster came to the back door and said to me: "Will you please tell that big boy that lives here that the fellow he plays ball with is waiting for him to come on out."—Exchange.

Ice Cream for Dessert.

My most embarrassing moment came while I was a student at college. I was working my way through by waiting table at a sorority house. Occasionally we would have ice cream for dessert, and sometimes a portion or two would be left untouched. The other waiter and I, in our youthful insatiability whenever that delicacy was involved, were accustomed to hasten into the dining room as soon as the girls had left to look for such spoils of our trade. On one such occasion we hurried in, and found a splendid portion untouched. We began to divide it, and just then the dining room door opened and the girl who had been called away to the telephone returned.—Exchange.

Climbers.

"The Notmuch family are great aspirants for social honors, are they not?"

"I should say so. Why, they're such climbers that they have even named their youngest daughter Ivy."

MELROSE.

Alfred Rhodes, wife and children, Hannah and John, and Mrs. Anna Metzler, of near Columbiana, Ohio, spent several days visiting his sister, Mrs. J. Albert Zepp and family, last week, after visiting in "The Valley of Virginia" for several weeks, in his native home state.

Last week, Mr. and Mrs. Smith, of Florida, camped in Wm. Bankert's meadow. The visit did not cost Mr. Bankert any food, for man or beast, as they came in a touring car. The car was so built and arranged that the occupants had plenty of food, eating their meals and sleeping comfortably in their tent car. Mr. and Mrs. Smith have had an adventurous life, touring the plains, and states making and selling perfumes and other articles. He has been studying and putting into practical use an electric light generated by water power.

Apples are plentiful. Our farmers are disposing of their large crop at from 30c to $1.00 per bushel.

We were privileged to hear an excellent discourse on Sunday morning by a student of Gettysburg Theological Seminary on "Temptations," taking for a basis of his remarks "How Jesus was tempted." In our estimation, people of the present age are too much engrossed with their struggles for pleasure that they consider "temptations" only annoyances, instead of a lesson for our spiritual welfare.

Quite an enjoyable birthday surprise party was held at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Walker, on the Granville Leese farm, on Monday of last week. About 175 of his friends filled the house and spacious lawns with their good wishes and merriment. Many of his "old home" friends from near New Freedom were in the crowd. After people began to arrive, Mr. Walker, anticipating trouble, dived under the table, knowing that was the proper place for the time being. Your correspondent does not know how old he is, but the number of years must be between 21 and 50. The big cake and the big bouquet of flowers were also in evidence. An enjoyable evening was spent in games, social conversation and music. Mr. Walker did not have the opportunity to talk to each of his many friends, but he appreciates their remembrances just the same.

KNOW WHY YOUR HEAD ACHES.

Sick headache is not a disease but only an indication that you have allowed your bowels to become clogged up—constipated.

It tells you that you are bilious—that your blood is impure, your kidneys are not working right and that worse may follow if you don't look out.

There's a way to stop headaches—get rid of the cause. Dr. Thacher's Liver and Blood Syrup has been successfully used for correcting stomach and liver troubles for nearly three quarters of a century and is still doing it.

You owe it to yourself to try Thacher's. If the first bottle does not give satisfaction your money will be refunded. You can get it in Taneytown from Robt. S. McKinney, Druggists.

WAR IN IRREGULAR MANNER

Guerrillas Have Never Been Recognized as Part of the Armed Forces in a Controversy.

The term guerrilla is applied to armed bands who, on the occasion of foreign invasion or civil war, carry on an irregular warfare on their own account. This class of fighters belongs particularly to Spain, where from 1808 to 1814 they were systematically organized against the French, whose operations they very seriously embarrassed. The country itself also suffered from them. Many of them, particularly Mina's band, joined Wellington, and, after having undergone a course of discipline, rendered signal service as regular troops. On the conclusion of peace large numbers were organized into robber bands. In most of the civil wars of Spain since 1820, guerrilla warfare, especially in the Basque provinces, played a prominent part. In the Civil war of the United States, bands of guerrillas committed depredations on both Federals and Confederates.

Remarkable Oak Grove.

A member of the forestry service states that near Champaign, Ill., there exists an isolated oak grove, about three miles long by one mile broad, and that this is indeed a peculiar phenomenon. It is known as Burr Oak grove and is surrounded on all sides by open prairie, being situated at a considerable distance from the nearest stream, whereas all the other forest tracks in central Illinois lie along the larger water courses. It is believed from the character of the trees in the grove that it "migrated" into its position, from the northeast. It lies on a large glacial moraine, formerly, it is believed, covered with similar trees, and has been protected from forest fires, which have destroyed the remainder of the wooded area, by the water standing in the low grounds scattered throughout the grove.—Washington Star.

'Twas Said

"Arriving home at 3 o'clock in the morning, he wandered into the living room. His wife came to the head of the stairs. 'What are you doing up at this hour?' she demanded.

"Just considering having the house wired for wireless," was his happy thought.

And "happy thoughts" are what you will find in the host of things we have that are made with an idea in them to save time, labor or money. Hardly a week goes by but what we add something new to the many things for the housewife, the working man, the sportsman, the autoist—things that we have discovered to be worth while using and well worth buying. ## LINK WITH HISTORIC PAST

"Spear Thrower," Relic of Early America, Indicates Common Culture in the Country.

A "spear thrower" or "throwing stick," found among the implements of the prehistoric people of America in caves in the Ozark mountains in Missouri and Arkansas, may be an important aid in lifting the mystery which enshrouds the ancient cultures of the American continents. The throwing stick is the only article so far unearthed which furnishes any connection between these people and others which have existed on this continent. The weapon is extremely simple, consisting of a round or flat stick one to two inches in diameter and about 18 inches long, notched at one end and perforated at the other, with sometimes one, sometimes two holes. Into these holes the prehistoric man thrust his fingers, affixed his short-shafted stone-headed dart to the notched end, raised the stick over his shoulder, and by means of a quick, jerking movement of the arm hurled the dart at enemy or game.

Close adaptations of the weapon are found among the ruins of prehistoric American civilization extending from Peru far north beyond the Arctic circle. The weapon seems to have been universal to all climes of the western hemisphere and to all periods, even down to the present day, when it is still in use among the Eskimos of the Arctic, and the Tarascan Indians in the Patzcuaro lake region of Mexico. It furnishes a possible missing link between the prehistoric civilization of the western half of the continent and those of the extreme East.

Deer One of the Family.

At Matamoras on the east bank of the Penobscot, where a supply depot is maintained, there is a tame deer which enters the house occasionally and eats food from the table. The deer prefers to sleep in the open at the edge of the woods, but during the day plays around the dooryard of the farm, following a dog, of whom it appears to be fond, wherever the animal goes. Several times when the deer has been in the house and has wanted to go out it has leaped through a window, taking out sash and glass with it.—Portland (Me.) Press.

VARIOUS GOOD THINGS

RECIPES for a nice salad or a good filling for sandwiches are always usable.

Tomato Jelly Salad.

Take a can of tomatoes, three stalks of celery, a small cupful of cold water, a small onion, a piece of bay leaf, three cloves, salt and paprika to taste. Soften three-fourths of a package of gelatin in the cupful of water. Cook the other ingredients together one hour and pass through a sieve. Add the gelatin and stir until dissolved. Pour into individual molds and put in a cool place to set. Serve with lettuce and mayonnaise dressing. This jelly may be cut in various forms and used as a garnish for meats.

Mock Crab Sandwich.

To a quarter of a cupful of grated cheese add a quarter of a teaspoonful each of salt, paprika and mustard, a teaspoonful of anchovy paste, a tablespoonful of chopped olives, a teaspoonful of lemon juice and two tablespoonfuls of creamed butter.

Arcadia Salad.

Mix one cupful of diced grapefruit with one and one-half cupfuls of diced celery, one cupful of diced pineapple, one cupful of diced avocado and one cupful of seedless raisins soaked in one-half cupful of cider or orange juice for several hours; add one cupful of diced orange just at the last. Line salad bowl with lettuce, cover with mayonnaise, after heaping the salad in the center. Garnish with red and green peppers and ripe olives.

Worthy of Her Great Brother.

Betty Washington Lewis is pictured as more than a sister to the Father of his country. She was "consoler, comforter, advisor and friend," according to Virginia authority. Her husband, Col. Fielding Lewis, a man of means and position socially and politically, gave his sword to his country, not alone, but sacrificed his fortune to supply the needs of soldiers.

Community Building

BELIEF IN ZONING GROWING

Figures Show That More Than Fifteen Million Americans Now Live in Such Communities.

More than 15,000,000 Americans live in zoned cities, towns and villages, according to figures compiled by the division of housing and building of the Department of Commerce. This is about 27 per cent of the urban population of the nation, and indicates the growth of the movement for the "city beautiful" throughout the United States. The department reports that on January 1, 1923, there were 109 zoned communities in the United States as compared with 55 on January 1, 1922.

The largest zoned city in the country is, of course, New York, while the smallest zoned village has only 131 inhabitants. New York city has been zoned since 1916, and at present 81 per cent of the population of New York state lives in zoned communities. Second to New York comes the state of California with 71 per cent. Minnesota is third with 58 per cent. New Jersey is fourth with 57 per cent, and Utah is fifth with 55 per cent. In the number of communities zoned, New Jersey leads the country with 31; New York is second with 17, California is third with 14, and Illinois is fourth with 10. Twenty-two of the fifty largest cities are now zoned.

As a rule, the zoning regulations provide that the city, town or village be divided into districts and that certain districts be set apart for residential purposes and others for manufacturing. The laws cover the height of the buildings and the percentage of the land they are to cover. This keeps the garage and the factory out of the residential districts, making for cleanliness and more sanitary as well as more pleasant surroundings.

HAVE DESIGN IN PLANTING

And It Is Well to Have Trees and Shrubs in Place Before the House Foundations.

Never plant without a plan. It will cost you less in the long run. Your home will be more beautiful, your planting permanent, your house and lot more valuable. Don't make the mistake of waiting until after your home is built before planning and planting. It is important not only to locate your house properly on the lot—you should plan the walks, garden, borders, etc., before the house foundations are in and immovable.

Don't forget to observe nature's way of arranging shrubs, trees and flowers. In the woods you seldom find trees growing in straight lines, stiff and formal. Study the margins and outlines of woods and thickets. You will notice indentations, bays and openings which give you beautiful pictures and vistas.

Don't overlook the soft edges, strong, yet harmonious contrasts which nature provides so abundantly. Don't permit your planting to obstruct the sunlight and ventilation of your home.

Don't needlessly cut and prune trees. A good tree on your building site may be the key to a successful planting plan. A good tree, ten years old, is worth many dollars. Keep it and care for it.

Time to Plan Is Now.

There is scarcely anything in the smaller places that may not be changed, the city planner finds. For example, in the smaller cities, railroad approaches may be set right; grade crossings eliminated; water fronts redeemed for commerce or recreation, or both (Chicago is doing fine work in that direction); open spaces may be acquired even in partly built-up sections; a satisfactory street plan can be carried out and adequate main thoroughfares established; public buildings can be grouped; a park system can be composed for gradual and systematic development. "All of these elements of a city plan," says Mr. Nolen, expert city planner, "are indispensable sooner or later. They may be had in the small city with relative ease and slight cost."—Collier's Weekly.

Homes Reflect Community.

The future history of America will be shaped in large measure by the character of its homes. If we continue to be a home-loving people we shall have the strength that comes only from a virile family life. This means that our homes must be attractive, comfortable, convenient, wholesome; they must keep pace with the progress made outside the house. As is the home, so is the community and the nation.

Realty Course Popular.

Real-estate courses are growing more popular in nearly every part of the country. All the largest cities have one or more of these courses going, and they are attended not only by prospective salesmen but also by investors and prospective home owners.

Every Day, in Every Way.

A scientist says that man's skill is even more highly developed in his descendants. According to this, Babe Ruth's grandson ought to be a mighty sweet ball player when he grows up.

GOOD-NIGHT MESSAGE

The patter of tiny feet was heard from the head of the stairs. Mrs. Kinderby raised her hand, warning the members of her bridge club to be silent.

"Hush!" she said softly. "The children are going to deliver their good-night message. It always gives me a feeling of reverence to hear them. Listen!"

There was a moment of tense silence, then: "Mamma," came the message in a shrill whisper, "Willie found a bedbug."—Ithaca Journal-News.

Nothing Was Lent.

The caller looked flushed and indignant. "Are you the society editor?" she inquired.

"Yes, madam. What can I do for you?"

MAPPING THE EUROPEAN SKY

Work of Photographers, It is Believed, Will Be Productive of Highly Important Results.

An ambitious scheme to map the entire sky of Europe is being carried out under the direction of the British weather bureau. The bureau, as a preliminary to the larger undertaking, has already successfully mapped the sky of France. Professional weather observers, as well as amateur photographers, in all parts of the continent are to be asked to assist. The work is intended to help the science of meteorology, the progress of which in recent years has been due in no little measure to the synoptic cards on which are reported simultaneous observations made at different stations. It is thought that even more important results and much more useful data will be obtained from synoptic photographs of the sky. The photographers will be asked to co-operate on lines much the same as were adopted in mapping the sky of France, an undertaking that was completed a month ago, and the results of which are now being analyzed. Exposures will be made daily, probably over a period of a week or two, twice a day, once at 9 o'clock in the morning and again in the afternoon. The photographs will be sent to the national weather bureau, where the causes of the weather conditions at the time will be retraced from them.

Avoid Habit of Worrying.

Worry is a form of friction. The task of the expert in life is to run his machine with the maximum of activity and the minimum of friction. If he stops or slows the machine, because he cannot otherwise deal with the friction, then life has beaten him. The general human tendency is to stop friction by partially stopping the machine—especially after what is loosely called "success" has been attained. Real success in life is the full smooth-running exploitation of the whole machine with daily satisfaction to the mechanic. And nothing else is real success in life.—Arnold Bennett.

Their Good Quality.

A new governor was about to be sworn in and had invited some friends from his home town to witness the ceremony. They were plain people he had known in his youth. A pert miss who knew the successful candidate intimated that his friends were not very smart looking.

"They are a few old friends," responded the governor. "Just a few tried and true old friends. They may not wear so much paint, but they'll wash."

Bribing the Dentist.

Robert had a baby tooth to extract and he walked bravely up to the chair to have it done, but just before I got my instrument he said gravely: "I want to ask you something first. I brought my best marble shooter to give you if you don't make it hurt." You may be sure he got a careful extraction.—Exchange.

WRITES OF LIFE IN PERSIA

Cutoms and Costumes Were Something of a Shock to Observant American Visitors.

Arthur Sherburne Hardy writes interestingly of Persian costumes in "Things Remembered." He describes that of the ladies of the court as "a caricature of the costume of the corps de ballet, a dress which had captivated the shah's fancy when visiting Europe," and which spread generally through the upper circles of society. As to the costumes in general, the streets of Teheran offer none of those brilliant color effects which dazzle the eye in India, Mr. Hardy says.

Among other national peculiarities which the author found it difficult to become accustomed to was the apparent complete disregard of the passage of time, and the popular disregard of the importance of punctuality. He tells some interesting things about Persian rugs, some of which, he says, receive treatment as regards dirt which would shock a New England house-keeper. For the Persian spreads his rug wherever he may happen to be, to rest, to eat, to say his evening prayer. The gloss which comes with age he attributes to his bare or stockinged feet.

Riches of the Ruhr Basin.

The Ruhr basin in Germany, extending 32 miles to the east of the Rhine, and practically the center or headquarters of industrial Germany, is one of the richest coal and iron regions in the world, remarks the Detroit News. It has the second greatest coal field, is the seat of the great Krupp works (at Essen), and contains a number of other manufacturing towns. Ruhr not only takes the lead in Germany in the production of iron and steel implements and machinery, but it also produces great quantities of salt and textiles. With only 40 per cent of its coal fields being worked, the Ruhr valley before the World war was producing 90,000,000 tons of coal a year, and it also produced 5,000,000 tons of pig iron.

The valley is naturally of great importance—both from an industrial and from a military and a strategic point of view.

Isolated From the World.

Lonely St. Kilda, one of the out-Hebrides islands, with a population of 75, is just nine months behind the news of the world. When the West Highland steamer Hebrides started for St. Kilda on May 19, she took a big consignment of newspapers, periodicals and books to help the fishermen and their families catch up with the news, or to get acquainted with some of the latest best sellers. For many years the number of inhabitants has remained about the same. During the war the Germans destroyed a wireless station there, and since then the St. Kildans have had no connection with the outside world other than the very infrequent visits of the good ship Hebrides.

He Knew That Love Was His

By A. W. PEACH

(©, 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The first words that struck through to Langley's dim consciousness were spoken by the old mine physician, "Doc" McPherson: "Now, son, you keep quiet. You ran into a blast in gallery 54, and it made a bad mess of you!"

Next Langley felt as if his head and shoulders were a mass of seething flame—there the burning blast had struck home. He next discovered that his head was heavily bandaged. Full consciousness came. "Doc, how badly am I hurt?" he asked quietly.

There was a little silence, then the gruff voice said as quietly, "Your face has been knocked four ways to windward; your eyesight may be lost."

"And I can just hear what you are saying; that means my ears are affected?" Langley finished.

"Son, I know you well enough to know it won't do to lie to you. You're right. Now, we are going to hustle you to the city, where better hands than mine can look out for you. When you get on your pins again, come back. We'll miss you."

That was all there was to it. In the long hours of that journey Langley had time for thought—not of himself, but of the girl he loved and whom he expected to marry that year. As was his habit of mind, he went frankly to the issue. He knew how ugliness of any kind in life or in nature offended her, arousing in her an instinctive revulsion.

"I must get a look at this phiz of mine; if it is as 'Doc' said, I know what she will feel," he thought to himself.

At the city hospital, after the physicians had examined him, he asked for a mirror. It was refused him. The shortness and sharpness of his repeat-would hate to introduce him to new friends, see him about, appear on the street with him, see for a lifetime the sudden horror in the eyes of strangers—the realities against the rainbow of a vow given in a moment of stress.

The weeks went by. Once a surgeon removed the bandage, and Langley realized they were waiting to see if sight were returning. He shook his head. Darkness was about him.

Through the long days of silence and shadow he came to another decision, calmly, without fret or fuss. He had arranged signals with his nurse so that he could keep track of the time. He knew that between two o'clock and three he was alone—at night. He knew where the window was, and he remembered that the sounds of traffic had been far below. It would be a long drop, but a sure one. "Cowardly, perhaps, but it's going to take more nerve than anything else I ever tried," he mused to himself. By asking for this or that he followed the hours and the presence of his nurses. Then came the time there was no response to his request. He drew himself from the bed, sagged with startling weakness, and hitched along to the window. He felt of the sill and tried to raise himself. Always strong, and proud of the fact, his overwhelming weakness angered him. With shattered self-control he tore the bandage from his eyes, striving to see just how far he failed to pull himself up.

With the rip of the bandage, he became conscious of two tremendous, stunning miracles: One that he could see dimly enough to recognize his surroundings; one that some one had seized him in straining arms. He turned slowly with weakness, and found, beyond doubt, beyond question, he was looking into the face of Arley.

She was in a nurse's uniform, and it dawned upon his whirling mind that she had been on guard through those weary weeks as one of his nurses, using her war training to aid him. He could see her—he could see her—that day the surgeons had not tried him to see if he could!

He knew she called for aid; and then she kissed him repeatedly, hungrily. The bandage about his ears, loosened by his efforts, slipped, and he knew he could hear faintly. He realized the tragedy that had been near because of his surrender; the surgeons were saving his sight and his hearing; but sweetest of all were the faint tones of Arley's voice as she said again and again, "My dear! my dear!" And it suddenly came to him that there is a love that does last until death comes with parting, that lives through all changes of disaster or defeat, faithful and constant, as the stars; and, sweetest of all, he knew that love was his.

At the city hospital, after the physicians had examined him, he asked for a mirror. It was refused him. The shortness and sharpness of his repeated request secured action. He was given the mirror. He couldn't see clearly, but the glance was enough. His face was an offense. No girl could be asked to look at that face for a lifetime.

Through the long watches of the weary night he reached his decision. Arley would be faithful to him, but she, with her beauty, was worthy of beautiful things. She might marry him out of high resolve and pity, but the years would bring reality. He would release her.

In the morning he asked for a stenographer and through his bandaged lips he dictated the fateful letter. His falling ears caught the girl's startled remonstrance, but she went on writing. He pledged her to the mailing of the letter, and when she had gone he settled himself back at peace. He had learned in rough mining days, when danger was ever near and life now and then must be taken at the chance, that one of the great lessons all must learn is that of resignation.

The deadly inflammation began to get in its work. Gradually the voices about him and the noises died away into silence, but not until Arley came to his side. Her voice was a whisper, begging him to change his mind, vowing that she would marry him still, but he, wiser in the ways of men, was obdurate. He had seen his face; he knew how hideous it was. When she pleaded with him, at his stern order the bandages were removed from his face. His straining senses caught her faint cry that ended with her lips upon his seared ones.

The days began their eventful march. The voice of his nurse died away, the various sounds he checked until they passed; and he knew his hearing was gone. Next, how about his eyes? After resignation there is peace. Each day that his eyes were unbound for treatment, he was conscious that his sight was going.

Arley came once more, but only once. Langley smiled in his silence and darkness. She thought she could be happy with him, but later how she

MANY DESIGNS OF FIREHOSE

Present System, Which Is Considered Almost Perfect, Is Result of Systematic Development.

The first firehose was invented in 1672, and consisted of a narrow strip of leather with the edges riveted together so as to form a tube. Leather firehose of this type was first made in America in the year 1808, in Philadelphia, says a writer in the Engineering and Mining Journal-Press of New York.

Rubber hose was first produced in England, about one hundred years ago. It was made by braiding threads of rubber on a core of rope coated with molasses and glue. It was then treated with chemicals so that the rubber threads became incorporated, after which the core was removed by boiling.

The next type of rubber hose appeared about 1859. It was made by weaving cotton yarn into a flat strip, coating it on one side with rubber, and then turning it on a mandrel and riveting the edges together as in leather hose. Sometimes hose was made with two piles of this sort, each ply being riveted separately.

After this, in 1877, came the invention of the loom for weaving a seamless tube of cotton, which made possible the type of cotton rubber-lined hose now extensively used as firehose.

Last of all was developed the idea of coating fabric with a rubber compound, cutting it into bias strips wide enough to make several plies, attaching a flat strip of rubber at one side to form the outer cover, and then winding the whole thing around a rubber tube on a rod or mandrel of the desired size, permitting the adhesive power of the rubber to hold the various plies together without the use of rivets. This efficient method is now in general use.

Treated Only One Part of Body.

Among the early Egyptians the human body was divided into 36 parts, each of which was thought to be under the particular government of one of the aerial demons, who presided over the triple divisions of the 12 signs. The priests practiced a separate invocation for each genus, which they used to obtain for them the care of the particular member confided to their care. When any part of the body was diseased, a cure was effected by invoking the demon to whose province it belonged.

Perhaps this is the reason why the different parts of the body were assigned to the different planets, and later to different saints. It undoubtedly accounts for the fact that an Egyptian physician treated only one part of the body, and refused to infringe on the domain of a brother physician.

Community Building

SELECTING SITE FOR HOME

Practically Impossible to Give Too Much Thought to Matter of Such High Importance.

Before you build it is necessary to have a parcel of ground. Too much care cannot be taken in the selection of a site. Remember, it is the spot on which you and your family will spend many years, at least that is the general supposition, for the building of a home is usually one of the highly important happenings of one's life.

Location determines the character of house and it has much to do with the family's happiness and health. If the person contemplating building a home will observe the following suggestions when buying or selecting a site he will save himself a lot of future trouble and at the same time make an investment that will increase rather than decrease in value. Here are the suggestions:

Buy only in a section that is high, dry and healthful.

Locate in a neighborhood that is likely to increase in value and always be desirable for homes.

Ask about the water supply; where the water comes from, if the local system is modern and whether the supply is plentiful.

Churches, schools and stores should be convenient.

Find out if the section has all modern subsurface improvements, sewers, for instance.

What is the tax levy? Compare it with previous rates for years.

Why the increase or decrease if any?

Are gas and electricity easily obtainable?

Does the site need much grading, seeding or planting?

What are the transit or transportation facilities?

What is the traveling time to place of business?

What is the expense?

If the property meets these conditions satisfactorily, then you may be sure of your selection.

GUILTY OF BOORISH CONDUCT

City Newspaper Condemns Visitors to Rural Districts Who Leave Trash and Litter Behind.

Wayfarers are constantly violating the hospitality of those who afford them pleasant spots for spreading their basket lunches and eating them beneath the welcome shade of spreading trees. It is bad enough to be obliged to endure such uncivilized practice in the city; it is worse when inflicted on rural districts less able to defend themselves against ill-mannered intruders.

Motorists who leave smeared scraps of paper, greasy boxes and scraps of picnic miscellany behind them after finishing their lunch are not only indulging in boorish indifference to the rights of others but are helping to destroy their welcome afield. Owners of rural homesteads have a perfectly proper resentment against tourists who camp on or near their premises and, departing, leave such offensive evidence of their slovenly habits. Such conduct is utterly inexcusable.

Only the minority of motorists, of course, are guilty of such practices. But the offensive minority are likely to prejudice country dwellers against the whole increasing tribe of tourists. Against this minority the majority should set itself firmly, determined to eradicate an evil that threatens all alike.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Organization Necessary.

In the beginning was organization, and organization was man's, and through organization man worked his tortuous way from savagery to civilization. Latterly, we have discovered anew this ancient highway of life. We have become intensely conscious of organization. And so it has come about that whenever anyone suggests a task to be done, someone arises to remark: "Let us organize." We have labeled our generation, "an age of organization," and have laid our hands upon the most solid truth we know—that men make progress and gain more abundant life by working together and not alone.—Exchange.

Suggestion From Buenos Ayres.

In Buenos Ayres, one of the most beautiful and fastest growing cities of the world, the owner of a lot is given a reasonable length of time to decide how he will improve it. Then he must either build or make a garden.

There might be a suggestion here for Los Angeles. It would tend to remove some of the unpleasant evidences of our "growing pains."—Los Angeles Times.

Vines Everywhere Appropriate.

Besides being appropriate on porches and on trellises against frame houses and on the walls of brick or stone houses, vines are also appropriate on fences, arbors and pergolas, or on summer houses connected with the pleasure grounds or outdoor living sections of the grounds.

Excellent Motto.

This summer, next summer and henceforth let us all "clean up as you go!"

LESSON FOR OCTOBER 14

ISRAEL, A MISSIONARY NATION

LESSON TEXT—Exod. 19:1-6; Isa. 43:9-11; Isa. 45:20-22.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests and an holy nation."—Exod. 19:6.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Kindness to His People.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Why God Chose Israel.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Mission of the Chosen People.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Israel's Missionary Call.

I Israel's Exalted Position (Exod. 19:1-6).

The descendants of Abraham had now become a multitude and the time had come to organize them into a nation. In order to enable them to see what a wonderful privilege was theirs, God displayed His majesty on Mount Sinai. In His message to them, He gave them a look backward and forward.

1. A Review of Their Past History (v. 4). He reminds them of what He had done to the Egyptians when He brought them out of their cruel bondage, and that His divine care over them had been as that of an eagle over her young. He had not merely brought them out of Egyptian bondage, but unto Himself. God's salvation is not merely deliverance from sin, but a union with Himself.

2. Promises of Future Greatness (vv. 5, 6). On condition of obedience to His voice, and faithfulness to their covenant obligations, He promised them a peculiar relationship to Him. This relationship is three-fold:

(1) The Lord's Peculiar Treasure Above All People. This is the treasure of Matt. 13:44. If this is recognized, the parable is quite clear. Failure to allow Scripture to interpret Scripture results in confusion.

(2) A Kingdom of Priests. "A Kingdom whose citizens are all priests living wholly in God's service and ever enjoying the right of access to Him." In this kingdom there is united sacerdotal privilege and royal dignity.

(3) A Holy Nation. A nation set apart for the work of God. Realizing this, they would be impelled to a standard of living which would be worthy of their high calling. Separation from sin and a positive stand for the right would always be demanded. The failure of this chosen nation is largely the explanation of the world's distress. Had Israel shown the nations the way to go, they would not have gone so far into sin.

II. Israel's Pressing Obligation (Isa. 43:9-11).

1. God's Challenge to the Heathen Nations (v. 9). They were asked to assemble their witnesses to see if they were able to make known the future as God had done through the prophets of Israel. They are either to make good their predictions or to acknowledge the truth as declared by God's prophets, namely, that God is the only God.

2. Israel, God's Witness (v. 10). This nation had been brought so clearly into touch with God, had so many times experienced His mighty hand to deliver, that they were competent witnesses. Not only the nation was a witness, but the prophets from that nation had so many times witnessed and their predictions were so completely fulfilled that the whole world knew that God was the one and only God and Savior. The only way the world can know that God is a forgiving God is through the witnessing of His redeemed people. How sorely this testimony is needed! How miserable has been Israel's failure!

III. Israel's Message (Isa. 45:20-22).

The message which Israel was to give was that God was the Savior of all the nations. Israel misinterpreted and misapplied this message. They claimed Him as their God and denied Him to the heathen. Though they have thus failed and the world is in darkness because of it, one day they shall go to the ends of the earth with it, and the result will be the ushering in of the Golden Age of which men of all ages have dreamed.

1. The Idolatrous Nations Are Invited to Draw In.

2. They Are Challenged to Bring Their Reasons for Worshipping Idols in the Light of the Fact That God the Savior Was the Only God.

3. They Are Given an Invitation to Look Unto God. They were not asked to do something to be saved, but to look to the Savior. Sinners today need only to look to Christ. What a wonderful day when Israel shall declare this message to all nations in the power of the Holy Spirit!

THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC

From
Moody Bible Institute Monthly
Chicago, Ill.

October 14

What My Denomination Is Planning for the Future.

Luke 4:16-21

In order to make the discussion of this topic profitable, leaders of the meeting should get in touch with the pastor, or with the denominational headquarters, and ascertain what the denomination's plan for the future are. Then it would be well to compare these plans with the Scripture lesson and see whether there is harmony and similarity of purpose between the plans of the denomination and the purpose of the Lord as expressed in this Scripture.

Does my denomination give the same place to the Bible as the Lord Jesus Christ did? That is, is the Bible the very word of God, and as such, inspired and authoritative? Evidently our Lord used it as such. He never questioned its integrity, supremacy, or authority. Indeed, He confirmed it again and again.

Note carefully His purposes as announced in the Scripture lesson. It is six-fold, yet may be summed up in the first part of the eighteenth verse, "The spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor." The word "gospel" means good news, which is much more than good advice. Man gives good advice freely to the poor, but God sends them good news. The difference between the good news and good advice is this—good news emphasizes something already done—good advice puts the emphasis on something that one is to do. Something has been done for us, the belief of which enables one to pass from death unto life (John 5:24; 1 John 5:1). Just what this is may be seen in 1 Corinthians 15:3, 4. The facts recorded in these verses constitute the gospel, or good news. The greatest burden that any soul carries is the burden of its own sin and the sense of separation from God. Anything that delivers from this burden may be regarded as a gospel indeed. There is deliverance in knowing that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, and in that death He met every requirement involved in our transgressions. When this is seen and believed, it changes the whole life. All the other things announced in the Scripture lesson naturally and inevitably follow—healing for the broken hearted, deliverance for the captive, sight to the blind, and liberty for them that are bruised.

All our personal and denominational plans ought to be directed and controlled by this great declaration of the divine purpose found in the Scripture lesson. Unless this purpose permeates our plans and programs, we shall labor in vain, for no Christian movement has ever succeeded unless supported by a fervent evangelistic purpose. With this as the hub in the wheel, we may proceed to put in the spokes and all the other necessary parts of personal and church work.

MAY SUPPLANT MORSE CODE

American Army Officer Said to Have Devised New Alphabet Superior to That in Use.

A vista for the extension of communication by radio, land lines and cables has been opened with the announcement of the invention of a new universal alphabet by Maj. Gen. George O. Squier, the chief signal officer of the army.

The new alphabet, hailed as the greatest advance in the science of communication in many years, is 2,655 times faster than the international Morse code now universally used. It is designed to supplant the latter, which was invented eighty years ago. The Morse code, General Squier said, is entirely out of date and unsuited to telegraphy as known and practiced today.

The principle upon which the new alphabet is based is that the dots and dashes occupy equal lengths of time and no consecutive signals are of the same sign, and the limit of legibility for each letter of the alphabet is practically uniform.

General Squier's other lines of research have developed results of profound importance in a technical, non-spectacular way, and other nations have recognized his scientific eminence with a bundle of honors and decorations. He is a fellow of the Physical Society of London and a member of the Royal Institute of Great Britain, a Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, and, at home, a member of the National Academy of Sciences, a Distinguished Service medalist and a frequent winner of the Franklin medal.—New York Herald.

Got His Berries Easily.

Two neighbor girls and I went black-berrying. It was a very warm day and we worked hard, getting our pails full. The berries were fine, so we carefully hid our picked berries under the bushes and filled our pails. When we came to get our first berries we found that someone had emptied our pails and taken our berries—who, we did not know. A few months later the man who had stolen them told the girls' brother how he had found black-berries hidden under the bushes in a certain grove and that he thought it such an easy way to get berries that he didn't stop to pick any others.—Chicago Journal.

THE RABBIT STORY

MRS. RABBIT was having a bothersome time with her children. It was time for them to be asleep and here they were wide awake. "If you do not close your eyes and go to sleep you will not be up with the sun for a run in the woods before Mr. Dog is out," she told them, tucking them in once more.

"It will be clear by morning," said Mrs. Rabbit. "I am certain Mr. Moon-man will clear away the clouds just as he did for Miss Twilight in the story."

"Oh, tell us about it, Mother, do," cried all the little bunnies, "and then we will go right to sleep, we promise we will."

Mrs. Rabbit sat down beside the bed and all the little bunnies kept as still as—well, as still as little rabbits—and their mother began the story.

Once upon a time up where the Sky-folks live Mr. Moon-man one night heard a sound of weeping, so he peeked behind a cloud and there he saw pretty little Miss Twilight all curled up in her purple-pink robes crying very hard.

"Oh, Tell Us About It, Mother, Do."

"What is the matter?" asked Mr. Moon-man kindly. "Have you lost your candles?"

Little Miss Twilight lifted her pretty face. "Oh, no, Father Moon, it isn't that," she said, showing him a basket filled with candles, "I have all of the candles here ready to place in the blue sky."

"But every night now for a week so soon as I place the stars—I mean the candles—all lighted in their places along come those bad little Rainclouds and put them out.

"I know that all the earth children think I have forgotten to do my work and perhaps they will look for the lights to be placed in the sky again. Oh, dear, I am unhappy."

"Well, well, dry your eyes, Twilight," said Mr. Moon-man. "We will see what can be done about those mischievous Rainclouds. I am rather tired of having them in my way, too. Now you run along home and get your candles lighted, and if I am not very much mistaken you will be able soon to place the candles in the sky, though it is too late for the earth children to watch you at your work."

Mr. Moon-man went sailing along the sky and every Raincloud that he met went scudding away. For they knew Mr. Moon-man would call on old Wind Witch for help and she would come with her broom and sweep them all away if they did not run; and she wasn't very careful where she swept them, once she started clearing the sky.

So off they ran to their home on the top of a high mountain and went to sleep, leaving the sky clear for Mr. Moon-man to shine in.

Pretty soon along came Miss Twilight, though of course she had changed her gown now, and no one could see her as she took the candles from the basket on her arm and tucked them in the deep blue sky until every star, as we call the candles down here on earth, was twinkling in its place.

"Thank you, dear Father Moon," said Miss Twilight as she tripped away and Mr. Moon-man promised her that the next night when she lighted the candles she could wear her beautiful Twilight robes, and let them trail along the earth below as she ran.

And that was the way Mr. Moon-man sent the rain clouds scudding home once upon a time, and if you are good little bunnies and go to sleep I am sure he will do the same thing to-night and in the morning you will find the sun is shining.

But all the little bunnies were fast asleep and Mrs. Rabbit tiptoed out of the room and closed the door behind her.

Shall cheer
Some grieving wight,
And light
Him on his way
Today
And bring relief
All gain 'twill be
To me,
And I'll not care
If there
Be those who sneer,
And jeer,
Because they find
My lines not suited to their kind.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

BETTINA

BETTINA, curiously enough, has no etymological connection with Betty, as is generally supposed. It is an Italian feminine name which was derived from the old verb beo, to bless, and later, with the word benedico (to speak well).

Beata and Beatrix were the early forms of the name and in Diocletian's persecutions, the Christian maiden who drew the bodies of her martyred brothers from the Tiber and buried them, afterward sharing their fate, was called Beatrix. Her relics were enshrined at Rome and her fame spread broadcast. Dante further contributed to the prevalence of the "blessed" names by making the love of his youth, Beatrice Portinari, the theme of his "Vita Nuova" and his guide through Paradise.

Bona, another form of the name, was used by the daughters of the Counts of Savoy, and in the House of Luxembourg, and came to the throne of France with the daughter of Johann of Luxembourg, the blind king of Bohemia. In Spain a Visigothic nun was canonized as Benedicta and partly in her honor and partly through the fame of the patriarch of the western monks, Benedictus, her name became the popular and accepted form in the Latin countries. Italy, producing a Benedetta, straightway contracted it to Bettina, a form which England and America adopted and popularized.

The ruby is Bettina's talismanic gem. It promises her courage and power and the attainment of wealth. Thursday is her lucky day and 5 her lucky number. The lily is her flower. (© by Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.)

YOUR HAND

How to Read Your Characteristics and Tendencies—the Capabilities or Weaknesses That Make for Success or Failure as Shown in Your Palm

THE HAND OF AN ARTIST

IF THE person whose hand is under examination is to win great distinction in some field of artistic endeavor, and also, perhaps, riches in such life work, inspect carefully the mount of Apollo, at the base of the third or ring finger, for a star. If there is a plainly marked star there, it is a very favorable sign. Some authorities on chironomy hold that the same distinction is conferred by a star on the mount of Jupiter, at the base of the index finger.

When the line of the head, the lower of the two main lines crossing the palm horizontally, ends in a very decided droop, it is a mark of the great imaginative power that is so necessary in many lines of artistic work. The same thing is seen in a well-developed mount of Luna, which lies on the outside of the palm, well down toward the wrist.

Sometimes the line of Apollo, which runs up the palm into the mount of Apollo, is strong, clear and well marked. This is an especially favorable indication for an artist. When the line is branched or broken, it shows too much scattering of the energies.

MEN YOU MAY MARRY

By E. R. PEYSER

Has a Man Like This Proposed to You?

Symptoms: A voice like an angel—and slim little figure. You were crazy to meet him! He gave a lecture on poetry one evening in the Town Hall. He has wonderful eyes, his speech is superlative. He hung around the town for a few weeks—gave you a book of poetry, told you how many places he lectured and where he was going, how much he has been plagued by women inviting him to meals. "If I went where I was asked I'd be like a stuffed snake at the zoo," he often said.

IN FACT

He is in great demand. Prescription to His Bride: Absorb oil of contentment when he is off "on a tour." Give him his neck—or he will snap the bridle (e).

CALLED IN ERROR

Your telephone rings and on answering, the operator asks "Number, please?" Your bell rang, so you feel someone wishes to reach you and you cannot understand why the operator answers in the same way as if you were making a call.

In this case, the operator who answered you was not the one who rang your bell. It may have been rung by any one of the operators in your exchange. The operator who answered you did not know that your telephone had been rung, but was responding to the signal that appeared when you lifted your receiver.

Usually such a "call in error" occurs because the party calling abandons the call; i.e., hangs up the receiver before the called subscriber has had an opportunity to answer.

"Calls in error" cause great annoyance. Telephone users can assist in preventing them by waiting until the person being called has ample time to answer the telephone. When the called party answers, if you do not want to talk or if you have asked for a wrong number, explain it to the person answering.

TANEYTOWN LOCALS

Brief Items of Local News of Special Interest to Our Home Readers.

Due to favorable weather, farmers have been making good progress on their fall work, considering the scarcity of help.

Charles A. Foreman will build a double dwelling, this Fall yet, on his East-end lot.

At the election of Directors, on Monday night, the present Board of Managers of the Carroll County Fair, was re-elected. This was no doubt on the basis that "one good term deserves another."

There is certainly a remarkable demand in Taneytown and vicinity, for help of all kinds—both mechanics and day laborers, as well as female help. No one can complain of not having plenty of work, at very good pay.

Grant Bohn met with an accident, last week, when drawing the rubbers to his farm wagon while going down a hill. The horses started to run, and attempting to stop them he was thrown down and is reported to have had one leg fractured.

Last Friday evening, two flying machines landed in a field along the Westminster road, near town. One of them had lost his way, and was merely following the other to find out "where he was at," and as the leader ran out of oil, and had to land to fill-up, the two got together. One of the planes was from Texas, and both left for Washington.

(For The Record.) Those who spent Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Moser, were: Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sprinkle and Atwood Hess, of Gettysburg; Mr. and Mrs. Harner Fissel and family, Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Reaver and family, Miss Clara V. Ralph Myers, son of C. Edgar Myers, while hanging electric light shades from the top of the scaffolding in the Lutheran Church, Wednesday afternoon, was thrown through the scaffolding to the floor 16-ft. below, due to a board breaking under his weight. In the fall he struck his head on the scaffolding, rendering him unconscious, and in landing he fell on the backs of the pews with such force as to break two of the backs. He received a broken rib, a bruise in his head, and was otherwise bruised and hurt. He made a miraculous escape from very much more serious injury. He has been resting fairly well since the fall, and unless internal trouble develops, will be around again in perhaps about two weeks.

Delmar Riffe came home from the hospital, on Wednesday evening, and is getting along fine.

"OLD MOTHER HUBBARD."

(Last page editorial, following the style of some of our big city dailies—with apologies for the imitation.—Ed. Record.)

Old Mother Hubbard on one occasion is reported to have gone to her cupboard in search of food for her dog—as the historian says—for a "bone." It further appears that the dog was "poor," and that, because the cupboard was boneless—"bare" in fact—the said dog was naturally minus the necessary with which to appease his hunger.

Now, there comes in a statement in connection with the incident that seems to call for inquiry. "Mother Hubbard went to the cupboard," that is clear, but the historian further says, "when she got there, etc." How long was she on the way? There may have been needless delay; at least, some time between her starting and her arrival must have elapsed, for otherwise it would have been unnecessary to amplify the statement by saying "When she got there." For an ordinary trip to this particular kind of cupboard we would say "went to the cupboard to get a bone, but found none." So, the bone must have been there—and she knew it was—at the time of starting, for otherwise she wouldn't have "went." The question then arises—who, or what, abstracted the bone from the cupboard, and caused the poor dog to "get none?"

Now, there is no evidence that Mother Hubbard was not a normal old lady. Her dog was likely a normal dog asking for something to eat—not necessarily a bone, for a "poor" dog would naturally prefer something more nourishing. Neither is there any evidence that she merely meant to fool the dog by pretending to show her good intentions. So, we must conclude that she really felt liberally disposed, to the extent of "one bone." But, "when she got there" it was too late—the "bone" was gone.

Where the bone went—who abstracted it—is not essential to the purpose of this comment. It is a combination of a "dog" and "gone" bone story that might be carried out in further detail. The point we desire to make, is, that Mother Hubbard must have procrastinated. She started out with a good intention, but was too long getting her intention and its beneficiary together, and the world is still full of such examples.

It very often happens that by just fooling around, we let our "bones" get away from us. We think of performing kind acts, but something else intervenes, and by the time we get back to a belated effort toward performance, it is too late—the opportunity has passed—and the "poor dogs get none." So the moral of all this is—when we start to do a good thing, let's go right to it.

All Serene.

The Florida beach and blue sea looked inviting to the tourist from the North, but before venturing out to swim he thought to make sure.

"You're certain there are no alligators here?" he inquired of the guide. "Nossuh," replied that functionary, grinning broadly. "Ain' no 'gaitors hyah."

Reassured, the tourist started out. As the water lapped about his chest he called back:

"What makes you so sure there aren't any alligators?"

"Dey's got too much sense," belatedly the guide. "De sharks done skeered dem all away."—American Legion Weekly.

Cornerstone of the Capitol.

Washington, D. C.—A Masonic ceremony of profound interest and importance to all members of the Ancient Fraternity, took place September 18, 1793, when Brother George Washington, then in his second term as President of the United States, laid the cornerstone of the Capitol of the United States in the new city of the Union that bore his name.

Now, in September, 1923, exactly 130 years later, Masons are re-evaluating with the most reverent feelings the ceremonies significant of that memorable occasion when the Father of His Country, wearing the apron and regalia of a Past Master, laid the cornerstone of the imposing edifice that stands for America, Americanism—a monument to our highest ideals of liberty and freedom as well as one to Architecture, Masonry, and Art.

The ceremonies, in which the immortal Washington played a conspicuous part, were among the most important that the Masonry of the young Republic had to that time experienced and, according to the newspapers of that day, one of the most impressive Masonic processions known to the Fraternity marked the occasion, one long to be remembered by those witnessing the event.

The whole assemblage stood awhile in solemn order, we are told, while the artillery discharged a volley. The Grand Master delivered to the commissioners a large silver plate with an inscription thereon which read:

"This Southeast cornerstone of the Capitol of the United States of America, in the City of Washington, was laid on the 18th. day of September, 1793, in the thirteenth year of the American Independence, in the first year of the second term of the presidency of George Washington, whose virtues in the civil administration of his country have been as conspicuous and beneficial, as his military valor and prudence have been useful in establishing her liberties; in the year of Masonry 5793, by the President of the United States, in concert with the Grand Lodge of Maryland, several lodges under its jurisdiction, and Lodge No. 22 from Alexandria, Virginia.

"Thomas Johnson, David Steuart and Daniel Carroll, Commissioners; Joseph Clarke, R. W. G. M. Pro. Tem; James Hoban and Stephen Hallate, Architects, and Collin Williamson, Master Mason."

The plate was then delivered to Washington, who was wearing the apron and sash made for him by the Marquis de Lafayette, the wife of General Lafayette. Properly attended by the Grand Master and the three Most Worshipful Masters, he descended to the cavernous trench and amid a great solemn hush the President of the United States laid it on the stone, on which was later deposited corn, wine and oil. The whole congregation joined in reverent prayer, which was succeeded by a Masonic choir chanting honors and a volley from the artillery.

MODERN ART

Artist—I owe my great success to a cow, to be frank with you.
His Friend—Ah, so the picture that made you famous was one portraying a cow?
Artist—Not exactly. I was painting a landscape in the country and a cow licked most of the paint from the canvas. I called the result "An Oyster Calling to His Mate," and here I am.

Miscalculations.

"Did you hear about Old Man Coyne going to the wall?"
"You don't say? And it was his daughter who married Duke Nottingham, about two weeks ago!"
"Yes, think of how surprised that duke will be when he hears of himself marrying for love."

Accidents in the United States during 1922 exacted a toll of approximately 75,300 human lives, an increase of nearly 2,000 over the estimated number for the previous year, a committee report declared Tuesday at the National Safety Congress. The report credited the automobile with the largest entry in the annual accident mortality budget—14,000.
