RESOLUTIONS ON CHIEF JUDGE THOMAS

Action of the Bench and Bar of Carroll County Court.

The following formal resolutions and acknowledgements on the life and valuable services of the late Chief Judge William H. Thomas, were made by the Carroll County Court, on Monday.

Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God, in His infinite wisdom, to remove without warning from our midst on April 26, last, William H. Thomas, for twenty-two years a Judge of this Court, and for the last sixteen years Chief Judge of this Judicial Circuit; and

Whereas, During this period of time his simple life and unassuming manner rendered him always readily accessible for consultation, he being ever found a sympathetic listener, by those who sought him; and in the performance of his judicial duties he had such faith in the majesty of his position and conscientious appreciation of its obligations, as to enable him to hear all litigants with patience and gravity, and pronounce the judgment of the law with strict adherence to its fundamental principles; and

Whereas, In his untimely and sudden death the members of the Bar have lost a sincere friend, the County, not only a wise and impartial Judge, but a Christian citizen, whose life and moral rectitude furnished a model for us all; and the State, the services of a jurist, whose opinions, delivered in clear and faultless English were always a fair, true and simple application of the settled principles of our law; therefore

Be it Resolved, That in the death of William H. Thomas the members of the Bar, the County and the State have suffered a severe loss which the passing of time will be more justly appreciated; and the sorrow and grief which we, his friends, feel is beyond adequate means of expression. And he it further

Resolved, That this resolution be spread upon the minutes of the Court, an engrossed copy thereof be sent to his sorrowing wife, and copies to the County papers; and that as a further tribute to his memory, this Court adjourn for the day.

GUY W. STEELE,
WM. SEADROCK,
MICHAEL E. WALSH,
THEO. F. BROWN.

Associate Judge Forsythe paid a touching tribute, mentioning his sixteen years of association with Judge Thomas, during which time he had the great value of his wise counsel, loyal support, and magnetic friendship. "He was one of nature's rare gems. His name stood for honesty, integrity, ability, virtues admired of men in every walk and station of life."

We regret that lack of space prevents giving Judge Forsythe's testimonial in full, as well as other remarks that were made. Chief Judge Parke said: "The resolution presented, the admirable tribute of Judge Forsythe and the addresses made by the Bar on this sorrowful memorial occasion appropriately and eloquently express the emotions evoked by the tragic death of the late Chief Judge William H. Thomas."

In the prime of life when his judicial training and experience had added to his natural ability the final elements for the just, prompt and wise discharge of the grave and onerous burdens of the judicial office, Judge William H. Thomas died, and the full measure of his loss is too recent for an appraisal by those who are yet under the shock and sorrow of his death.

It is, however, at least manifest that the Bench has lost an accurate, careful and impartial Judge, and the State a son whose life was the exemplification of civic and private virtues moving in orderly and dignified association to the fulfillment of every private and public obligation.

The mind of Judge Thomas worked in unison with the settled principles of law, and rebelled against any departure from precedent and authority. His conservative nature and instinctive caution compelled him carefully to investigate the record in every cause and then deliberately apply the law to the mastered and coordinated facts. The result was that his decisions are distinguished by an accurate exposition of the facts involved, a clear statement of the issue, and a sound, cogent and able application of the law. He was an excellent jurist.

Judge William H. Thomas sat in this Court for more than twenty-two years, leaving a clean, honorable record, the memory of a gracious personality, actuated by the highest conception of an exalted office, and with all his talents consecrated to its demands. His complete surrender to every implication of duty, and his noble life will be a standard for emulation in this Circuit.

The Resolution will be entered on the minutes of this Court, and sent to his bereaved family and published in the papers of the county, and as its final tribute this Court will now adjourn."

Taneytown Homemakers' Club.

The regular meeting of the Taneytown Homemakers Club was held Thursday, May 15, at 2:00 P. M. The subject of the meeting was "Value of Eggs in Nutrition." At the April meeting of the club we decided to hold our meetings on Thursday, during the summer, instead of on Saturday. Please notice the change of day.

Home Demonstration Agent.

Hotel Braddock will be reopened for the season, May 24, in charge of M. J. Croghan, who has operated the hotel for five years. The opening of the hotel will mark the beginning of the season at Braddock Heights.

LAWS AGAINST GAMBLING.

Their Enforcement Urged by W. C. T. U., and County Ministers.

On Monday afternoon, May 12, in the lecture room of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Westminster, there was a joint meeting of the Carroll County Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and the County Ministerial Association. Mrs. Philena Fenby, County President of the W. C. T. U., presided and after conducting a short devotional service, presented the reasons for calling the meeting, which are as follows:

First, that there might be brought about a better observance of all laws, but most especially the law against gambling in all its forms—slot machines, raffling, children soliciting chances on the street, and from door to door. Also, the law against bootlegging and Sunday foot-ball. These laws are being constantly and most flagrantly violated and because these violations go on, lawlessness and crime are steadily increasing in our County and State.

The meeting was attended by representative citizens from all parts of the county. Before adjourning the following resolutions were unanimously adopted.

Resolved, That we, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Carroll County, and the Ministerial Union of Carroll County, in joint assembly, do hereby congratulate his honor, Judge Francis Neale Parke, upon his selection as Chief Justice of the Circuit Court of this district (which we take the liberty to say we believe to be a very wise choice) also that we hereby express our confidence in him as our Chief Justice and pledge our support in every practical way in his efforts to uphold the laws of the State and County.

Resolved, That we hereby express our appreciation for the efforts of our State's Attorney, Theo. F. Brown, in his endeavor to enforce the laws of the County and State, and to cleanse the moral atmosphere of the County, and promise him our support in every practical way.

The Vote by Districts.

On a practically uninfluenced vote, and without much information as to the "wet" and "dry" inclinations of the two Republican candidates for Congress, the "drys" made a 3 to 1 showing in the county, as follows:

Average Price for Potatoes.

The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture has compiled the average prices received by farmers for potatoes, for a period of ten years, and finds the average to be $1.14 per bushel, the lowest price, 63c, having been in 1915, and the highest, $1.65, in 1918. The prices covered the average for each year, as well as for ten years. These averages no doubt apply to Maryland as well as to Pennsylvania.

The Japanese bar natives of Korea, China, Mongolia, Siam and Java from settling in Japan.

FLOODS AGAIN CAUSE GREAT LOSS

Western Maryland and West Virginia Twice Flooded in 6 Weeks.

The continuous heavy rains the first of this week, reached flood proportions in the already heavy-hit sections of Maryland, in the neighborhood of Cumberland, and further west in the Piedmont, W. Va., section. Severe damages are reported from Cumberland, Piedmont, Kitzmiller, Harpers Ferry, Westernport, Blaine, and the Georges Creek section in general.

The Elkins division of the W. M. R. R., was badly damaged, practically all of the track relaid in the flood of several weeks ago, washed away, and must be replaced.

Cumberland again had streets flooded to the depth of 18 inches, and basements flooded. A temporary bridge over the Potomac, near Westernport, that had just been erected at a cost of $10,000 was washed away, a distance of 5 miles.

Damage to roads, telephone and light lines, and to cultivated farms, was extensive and covered a wide area.

The B. & O. R. R. suffered heavy losses by wash-outs between Cumberland and Martinsburg, as well as west of Cumberland.

At Harper's Ferry the water was seven feet higher than in the flood of 6 weeks ago. As far east as Washington, the water reached the level of that of the Johnstown flood in 1889, and in the Washington vicinity hundreds of houses were flooded. At Harper's Ferry, the water on Shenandoah Street was 6 feet deep, and many residents had to leave their homes and seek safety on the hillside.

The C. & O. Canal, by the two floods has been so greatly ruined that it will hardly be placed in operation again, as the cost of doing so is estimated at hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The bridge at Harper's Ferry connecting the Maryland State Road with West Virginia, collapsed in part, one span having fallen, and another unfit for use.

Second Annual Eisteddfod.

One of the greatest events of the school year in Carroll County transpired last Friday night, May 9th, with the rendering of the musical program given by the various high schools of Carroll County in the Second Annual Eisteddfod. The event took place in Alumni Hall, Western Maryland College. The assembly room was filled to its capacity and many people were unable to find even standing room. The number of contestants seated on the stage numbered nearly four hundred. The adjudicators were Prof. John Denues, Supervisor of Music, Baltimore, Md., Organist and Choirmaster, Grace and St. Peter's Church and Dr. G. Herbert Knight, head of organ department, Peabody Conservatory of Music, organist Mt. Vernon Place M. E. Church, Baltimore, Md.

At the completion of the contest, the choruses and orchestras combined under the direction of Miss Gertrude Morgan, Supervisor of Music, who was responsible for the organization and development of the entire contest, in rendering "America Triumphant" as a climax to the contest. Such a treat as the rendition of this piece by a chorus of nearly 400 and a good strong orchestra was an occasion offered to music lovers, probably never before experienced within the borders of Carroll County.

The greatest number of points was won by the Westminster school. The awards of the Judges were as follows:

Orchestra, Westminster High School; Girls' Chorus, Union Bridge High School; Boy's Solo, Earl Lippy, Westminster High School; Mixed Chorus, Westminster High School; Girl's Solo, Marguerite Dornheim, Mt. Airy High School; Boys' Chorus, Union Bridge High School.
The entire contest was of a high order. Every one taking part having done extremely well, and as Prof. Denues said when called to the stage, "It was wonderful."

COUNTY AGENT'S LETTER.

Various Items of Interest to Farming Communities.

As a result of a number of tests the average germination for seed corn for this year is only 80%. A large acreage of corn will be planted this year and unless good seed of known germination is used and planted accordingly a poor stand can be expected.

Three root rot demonstrations have been started. The seed was selected with reference to the discoloration of the cob as well as to a good live germ. This work was put on by Mr. Oldenburg, crop specialist, University of Maryland and County Agent Fuller.

A trip has been planned to inspect the methods of growing and handling asparagus in Cecil county. S. B. Shaw, Horticulturist University of Maryland has made arrangements with County Agent Radebaugh to take in the different methods of growing and the types. This will be a very interesting and profitable trip to all asparagus growers of the state.

The Carroll County Delegation will leave Westminster at 6:00 A. M., Thursday, May 22. This will give us time to travel to Elkton to join the rest of the party at 10 A. M. Notify County Agent, Fuller if you will be a member of this party.

The Guernsey breeders have organized a county association. The main purpose of this association is to boost the breed in the county. Plans are under way for a big showing and special features at the County Fair in September.

A second clean milk campaign will be held in Carroll during the next two weeks. The meetings will be started at 8:15 P. M., and will be made as brief and to the point as possible. The following program will be put on:

Milk regulations, Dr. J. H. Schrader, Chief Bureau of Chemistry and Foods; Milk consumption, Miss Isabelle Cobb, Home Demonstration Agent for Carroll County; Milk production, Frederick W. Fuller, County Agent for Carroll County; "Sir Lacteus," The Good Milk Knight, a good movie.

Weather and Crops.

The week ending Tuesday, May 13, was featured by a 5-day wet spell, from the 8th. to the 12th. inclusive, which was marked by heavy rains. These rains produced flood conditions in the small streams and rivers of Western Maryland. The weekly rainfall over the section was close to the normal amount for all of May in many localities. Baltimore recorded 3.16 inches for the week, and Washington 3.34 inches; 4.00 inches or more was recorded in portions of western Maryland. Cool weather persisted.

Wheat, rye and grasses improved markedly and all are in good to excellent condition, though making slow growth. Wheat is now heading in the southern counties, while heading of rye has extended northward to the border, except in Garrett county. Seeding of oats was interrupted in the Allegheny Mountain region; elsewhere over the section oats are up, and they are doing nicely.

Apple trees are coming into bloom in Garrett county. They are blooming in Allegany and Washington counties and continue in bloom in north-central Maryland. Apple blossoms have fallen off in southern Maryland and on the Eastern Shore. Peach, pear, plum and cherry trees are blooming in the Allegheny mountain region; these trees are shedding or have shed their blossoms elsewhere over the section. These fruits are setting over the southern Eastern Shore. Strawberries came into bloom in western Maryland, except the Allegheny Mountain region, and continue blooming over the remainder of the section. Fruit prospects are excellent.

Planting for corn and corn plant were interrupted by the wet spell that began on the 8th. The amount of corn already planted is not great. General corn planting will be late. Planting of early potatoes and peas was interrupted also in western Maryland. To the eastward of the Blue Ridge Mountains early potatoes are now coming up generally and peas are up and doing well.

Tomato and tobacco plants in beds are doing well. Setting out of tomato plants has begun in the southern and central portions of the section.

The season is about two weeks behind the normal. Warm, sunny weather is needed.

J. H. SPENCER, Section Director.

While hunting rabbits, John Hukaby, 14 years old, of Colgate, Oklahoma, uncovered an old skunk hide wrapped around $10,000 in currency.

RAIDING THE U. S. TREASURY

Vetoed Seem Likely to be the Course of President.

There are four major measures about ready to parade themselves before the president, daring him to exercise the veto power, the most of which are admittedly strongly filled with "politics" of an anti-Presidential election character. They are—

"The Tax Revision bill, which is now expected to produce $161,150,000 less than the existing tax law, if the Senate rates prevail.

Soldier Bonus bill, which will cost somewhat more than $100,000,000 the first year and more than $3,000,000,000 in time.

McNary-Haugen Farm Relief bill, which provides for Government credit in the sum of about $200,000,000 as a starter.

The bill increasing the pay of more than 300,000 postal employees at an initial cost of something like $120,000,000.

In addition, there are other bills of like character totaling something like $50,000,000. Last week, the President vetoed a pension bill involving perhaps the ultimate payment of $500,000,000. The bonus bill is the only one of the four mentioned that has reached the President, but the tax bill is practically finished, and will come next.

Strong pressure is being brought before the President, both ways. He is being urged to sign the bills and place the responsibility up to Congress; and just as strongly urged to veto the whole lot, and go before the country for re-election on his stand, as a good business proposition. It is confidently urged by financial experts that the bills, if passed, will wipe out the present surplus, and cause a Treasury deficit of $500,000,000 and postpone indefinitely a real reduction in Federal taxation.

The Senate came within one vote of over-riding the Presidential veto of the Pension bill, on Tuesday, that carried $245,000,000, and 16 Democrats voting to sustain the veto is all that saved the day. Senator Bursum, of New Mexico, at once introduced a new bill, slightly modified, and will try to rush it through the present Congress, with the thought that the new bill will pass over a veto.

Game Killed, Season 1923.

At the close of the hunting season of 1922, the State Game Department mailed a questionnaire card to every licensed hunter in this State, requesting them to fill in the amount of game killed and return same to this Department. In 1922, we mailed 62,000 cards, and received 13,705 replies. In 1923, we mailed 61,922 cards and received 11,512 replies, which showed a decided decrease. The persons filing their report with this Department, show that 355,891 pieces of game were killed, which is less than one-fifth of the cards mailed, therefore, we estimate the amount of game killed in this State would reach 1,500,000 pieces at least.

We have placed a very conservative estimate of the value of the different species killed, which shows a total of $150,531.70, and taking the same estimate as to the number of pieces killed, we estimate the value of game killed during the season of 1923 would amount to at least $750,000. The kill of bob-white Quail shows an increase over last year of 4726, however, a decrease is shown in the number of rabbits killed over last year to the amount of 22,206. During the Spring of 1924, we purchased and liberated in the covers of this State 18,553 cotton-tail rabbits for propagation purposes, which we feel will show good results during the season of 1924. Game killed was as follows:

Partridge or Quail.....	66,626
Ruffed Grouse.....	1,697
Woodcock.....	3,050
Rabbit.....	106,587
Wild Turkey.....	498
Squirrel.....	64,369
Wild Ducks.....	59,252
Wild Geese.....	1,773
Wild Brant.....	259

County Home-makers' Meeting.

There will be an all day meeting of the Homemakers Club of Carroll County, Friday, May 23. The morning session will be held in the County Agent's Office. The meeting will be called to order promptly at 10 o'clock, and will be given over to business.

The afternoon session will be held in the Star Theatre, at 1:30 P. M. There will be a University of Maryland program. Dr. Woods, the President of the University, and Miss Stamp, the Dean of Women, are the principal speakers. Students from the University will furnish a musical program.

President Coolidge vetoed the Soldier Bonus bill, on Thursday. The bill is believed to be sure of passage over the veto, the only doubt being in the Senate. The veto was based purely on financial and taxation grounds.

THE AMERICAN LEGION.

Why World War Veterans Should Become Members of It.

1—It is the only all-inclusive service man's organization. Any person serving in the armed forces between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, is eligible and no one else.

2—It is the largest and most representative organization of the World War veterans. Its paid membership has averaged 700,000 to 1,000,000.

3—The Legion has been responsible for the majority of the legislation for the disabled of the War.

4—It carries on continuously an active organization to aid the disabled ex-service men.

5—It is largely responsible for the carrying of the work of the Veterans Bureau to the ex-service persons of Maryland. There is now established a policy of having a contact man visit regularly all cities and towns of Maryland to help adjust all claims.

6—The Legion carries on welfare at Evergreen, Perryville and Foster Clinic. It is actively at work helping to secure an adequate appropriation to establish an adult training center for the blind veterans at Evergreen and is also working to secure better facilities, environment and training at Perryville.

7—The Legion initiated and is mainly responsible for the Veterans' Relief Fund of $25,000 per year passed by the Legislature for the benefit of our disabled and needy comrades.

8—The Legion has carried on the bulk of the work for Adjusted Compensation, and is largely responsible for the passage of this legislation.

9—The Legion is recognized as one of the Nation's greatest stabilizing forces for law and order, and is always working through educational and Americanism methods to keep our country thoroughly American.

10—The Legion fosters the spirit of patriotism and tolerance. It called the Flag Conference in Washington and is teaching flag etiquette to all America.

11—The Legion raised an over-seas Grave Memorial Fund of $200,000.00 to provide for all time that the graves of our comrades overseas be properly decorated each Memorial Day.

12—The Legion has initiated and supported legislation to have a universal draft of all services and resources in case of another emergency. This should help prevent future wars and insure our Nation against slackers and profiteers.

13—The Legion helped to prepare our National Defense Policy and supports the present Army of the United States which is composed of the Regular Establishment, the National Guard and Organized Reserves. It also encourages the R. O. T. C. and the C. M. T. C.

14—The Legion is organized for God and Country and has the following preamble to its constitution which is its creed:

"For God and Country we associate ourselves together for the following purposes: "To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America; to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a one hundred percent. Americanism; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, state and nation; to combat the autocracy of both classes and masses; to make right the master of might; to promote peace and good will on earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of justice, freedom and democracy; to consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness."

Rural Women's Short Course.

College Park, May 12.—The rural women's short course, which last year drew more than two hundred farm women to the University of Maryland for a week of instruction and entertainment, is to be repeated this year during the week from June 16 to 21, it has been announced by Miss Venia M. Kellar, State home demonstration agent, who is arranging the program.

Courses of instruction will be similar to those of last year. Some additions, however, have been made and it has been necessary to divide the courses into two groups to provide advanced work for those who attended the previous course and are expected to return this year. Enrollment is being cared for in each county by the county and home demonstration agents, who will forward the applications from their respective counties when completed.

Miss Kellar has already been assured of large representations from several counties while many of those who attended the course last year have announced their intention to return, indicating that the enrollment of last year is likely to be surpassed. In allotting rooms in the dormitories on the campus, age will be given the preference, and women over fifty years of age, who are willing to admit it, will be assigned to the girls' dormitories.

Monday, June 16, will be devoted entirely to registering the incoming representatives. The following morning at 8:30 o'clock the courses will begin. Numerous entertainment features are being planned, including a sightseeing trip to Washington. The courses will include instruction in foods, house furnishings, clothing, landscape gardening, organization and parliamentary law, household management, millinery, health, poultry and home dairymonging.

T. B. SYMONS, Director.

Charges against Senator Wheeler and Congressman Zihlman, heard before special committees, have not been sustained by the evidence.

Camps for Young Men.

The Record has not given publicity to numerous requests received to encourage military training camps
for young men between the ages of 17 and 24 years, to be held between July 1 and 30th., for the reason that we think the average young man can be better employed, and because especially at this season of the year,
young men are needed to help get rid of the work of the busy season
for farmers.

Unquestionably, these camps will furnish exercise and perhaps valuable training for young men—give them a good healthy vacation—and perhaps most of the young men who
may respond would not, in any case,
help out with the summer's important work; but just the same, we feel that it is not a job that should be encouraged by the country press.

It would be a fine thing, we think,
if young men in the cities and larger towns would seek employment on farms during the summer. It would do them as much good, physically,
as well as represent reasonable financial income, and be of benefit to the whole country in relieving the scarcity of help for ordinary labor.

We are paying greatly too much attention to vacation and camping jobs, and not enough to using our time and effort where it is most needed. We do not, therefore, intend to promote the announced advantages the "wonderful opportunities"
of these "young American" camps.

"Flaying" the President.

It is a common occurrence now to see a headline in a newspaper announce that a stand made by President has been "flayed" by Congress,
or by some Senator perhaps, when
the fact is that only an opinion of his
has been disagreed with. Somehow,
the "flaying" of the President leaves
the impression that he has very wrongly taken a position for some selfish motive, and needs to be held
up before the country as an offender
who has received merited punishment.

Such words as "anger" "resentment" and "indignation" used against the President, or against his announced judgments, it seems to us, represents stretching the rightful liberties of the press, and tends toward arousing a partisan feeling, or an antagonistic sentiment, that hardly
has place in proper American debating ethics.

Perhaps never before in the history of politics in this country, has the President's job been as difficult as just now. More big questions are put up to him, and more aggressive
"bloes" are behind them than ever before. This is the situation in a general way; and just now, in addition,
there is the special incentive to load
him down with pre-election verdicts
that will operate against his election,
or which are engineered with that purpose in view.

The whole country is "fighting mad"
politically and industrially; there is a radicalism afloat that makes old party lines much like ropes of sand; there is a union of disunion, and tearing down attacks against, as well as to construct, governmental policies, that knows no decent limits in the use of either words or methods, in Congress
or out; hence, "flaying" the President is merely part of the game.

Just now, the old foreigner sentiment of being "against the government" is having full sway, and the present President is the chief point of attack; but, with Mr. Coolidge eliminated, and with a Democratic President and Congress, the strife would still go on. President Wilson had much the same experience, and neither Presidents Harding or Coolidge helped the situation. And so it will be after March 4, 1925, no matter
who heads the government.

Suspicion With an Object.

That public sentiment is difficult to measure, and that "investigations"
of public and private acts on suspicious evidence, does not always injure public officials, has been abundantly shown in the past. Even when damaging evidence is more or less
well founded, it is quite apt to react against those who produce it, likely because of the tendency there is in American audiences to produce sympathy even for criminals.

At any rate, these charges seem to act very much like the "eleventh hour" stories that in years past were often circulated about candidates for election, too late for them to be denied, or explained. This expedient
has been such a well known failure,
that as a "political trick" it has gone into the discard; for evidently the judicial sense of the public is strong that every fellow shall have a
"square deal," and a fair trial.

Evidence of the suspicious sort has a great deal more power, after, than before, an election—when the case
can be prosecuted for the case itself,
and not to produce injury to a man's chance for election. This may, at times, represent the wrong way around, and let an occasional unfit man win; but more frequently, we believe, it represents justice against unfair and manufactured attacks.

The same is true of the circulation of detrimental reports concerning
private character, when a reason exists for doing so, and the reason is fairly plain. When busy-bodies, and common tattlers tell stories about their neighbors, they rarely have the effect planned for, simply because the public, as the jury, usually requires
more than mere hearsay, unsupported evidence, on which to form their verdicts. And it is best that this is true, even if thereby there are a few mistakes made.

Tammany Candidates.

Somebody has dug into the political archives and finds that during the last seventy-five years the state of New York has had but three Democratic candidates for the presidency,
that two of them were defeated,
while Grover Cleveland, the successful one, was a bitter opponent of Tammany Hall. It will be interesting to note the reaction of the Democratic party to Governor Al Smith,
another New Yorker who is a candidate for the presidency and who is an idol of Tammany and has the backing of the powerful political organization.

It is political history that when Tammany backs a Democratic candidate he is defeated. How will it be this year? American Issue does not believe Tammany Hall is any more in the good graces of the Democratic party today than it was in the past.
The pet of Tammany is doomed.—
American Issue.

A Safety First Summer.

The Safety Institute, of New York,
is sending out warnings in the form
of advice to parents everywhere that
the season is upon them demanding extra watchfulness over the conduct of their children, especially those of the more tender years. Of an approximate 20,000,000 children given
liberty by the end of the school term,
the Safety Institute estimates that 5,000 will be killed, and 100,000 suffer
injuries of varying severity during the vacation period. These figures are based upon the ratio of other years, and in the absence of some special caution by parents, may be verified by the records at the end of August.

The Institute offers the suggestion
that a little time devoted to a special training of the children against
the more common risks will be rewarded by better results than an attempt at mere watchfulness alone.
According to the Safety Institute the larger number of lives lost are from fire, drowning and automobiles, and the most dangerous age is fixed at seven years. It is about that age, according to reports that children are
first freed from close parental restraints and watching, and stumble
into dangers against which curiosity
and ignorance has not been warned.—
Frederick News.

Proper Basis of Taxation.

If there were better understanding of true fundamental principles of taxation there would be less occasion
to find fault with the tax situation.
The basic cause of our taxation troubles is the popular belief that taxes
should be levied in proportion to ability to pay. This principle has never been strictly applied anywhere for two reasons.

One is that it is impossible. The other is that even if it were possible
a strict application would be ruinous. It is not possible because most taxes, other than on land values, can be shifted. Taxes on merchandise,
for instance, are shifted by the merchant onto his customers so that in the long run consumers pay for more than their share and producers and middlemen much less. Taxes on houses are shifted by the owners onto tenants who are thus compelled to pay their own taxes and their landlord's also. On the other hand, if it were not possible to shift taxes this way, trade and industry could not stand the burden.

So in trying to apply a wrong
principle the whole tax system has been made a bad mess. This will not be improved by institution of a state
income tax as the State Tax Revision Commission has suggested, for this would work in practically the same way as the general property tax. If the state is performing services
worth paying for—and it is—these services should be paid for by those getting the benefits in proportion to value received. That is the common sense business principle on which our tax system ought to be based.

The value to an individual of the state's services cannot be properly measured by his possessions or income. These may be due to entirely different causes than state activities.
Cost of production is the most important factor in determining values
of labor products, so there is no fair reason for taxing them. But state activities affect land values which
but for the state would hardly exist.
So these afford the proper basis.—
Md. Tax Reform Association Bulletin.

Radio Talks to Farmers.

Radio broadcasting stations in some states are sending out on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of each week, tabloid talks on agriculture, the last word of the scientist and the scientific farmer expressed in crisp
and interesting form.

When it is considered that with proper methods of agriculture and
with proper preparation of the soil,
the revenue from farms might be doubled, the value of the movement is quite apparent. Agents of experiment stations preaching this doctrine of scientific agriculture are making much headway, but the dissemination of such knowledge requires ceaseless effort and constant pounding. The tabloid talks by radio thus come to the assistance of the county agents
and the farmer.

The radio station will present these facts not only to the farmer, but to the boys and girls on the farm. It will aim to make the farmer appreciate to the fullest extent his investment in his acres.—Industrial News Bureau.

Maryland Schools and Politics.

For more than a century Maryland
schools have been in politics, and they are deeper today than they ever were before, but the people do not realize it.

Beginning in 1808, Frederick College, of Frederick, Maryland, was the recipient, for more than a hundred years, of $800,000 per year, and this continued until this school closed its doors, a few years ago, and ceased to exist.

For so long a time that few if any know when the thing started, St. John's College, Western Md. College,
Washington College, and Maryland Agricultural College, now the University of Maryland, and others later, have each been feeding fat on the earned increment of the people, until higher education in Maryland in order that it might maintain at ease, these failures
in education, that have not seemed able to exist by their own worth but have sapped the very vitality of the State and given back little indeed for the favors received.

At first this State Aid was intended primarily to enable the institutions
receiving help to educate teachers for the common schools, and under that guise for years, St. Johns College, Western Maryland College, Washington College, and the Maryland Agricultural College each received a full
paid up scholarship from each county,
and each legislative district of Baltimore City, carrying all expenses of tuition, board, etc., in all, more than a hundred collegians a year so educated,
and in addition to this, a great number of free tuition scholarships have been awarded ostensibly to help those unable to pay their full expense.

If these free scholars had all entered the teacher's profession as they should have, and had stayed at it as they were morally bound to do, there would not today be schools enough in Maryland to offer employment to the army of teachers thus created. But instead of that it is a question seriously to be asked, if even one percent of those so educated are now teaching in Maryland schools. For those who were so aided, who are now teaching and who received this aid, we have the profoundest respect, but for all others
we believe they should be held up to the contempt of our citizenship unless they paid back to the State every dollar they received.

We know of one case when a poor
boy after passing the highest grade
in the examination, came near losing out because a politician, well able to educate his son, demanded the scholarship. We helped the poor young man get his scholarship, and know all the facts in the case.

We know another case of a tuition scholarship now being used, where a poor girl was a competitor, while the one who won the scholarship was sent
with her mother by her affluent father
on a vacation to Florida immediately
after the scholarship was won.

Should taxes be levied from you and me, that people who can afford to send their daughters on vacation to Florida might get free scholarships from the State funds?

We do not object to educational aids
to the worthy who may need it, but we believe all this aid to higher education
is money spent in the wrong direction.
The whole business of this State Aid
to higher education is honey-combed
with political subterfuge and intrigue
and is an offense to decency.

The ignoble spectacle of the University of Maryland in the last Legislature in its attempt to force millions of dollars above the several millions that were offered in the Governor's budget
will remain an unpleasant reminder
for a long time to come.

We shall have considerable to say in the future on this point. If those running departments of the University of Maryland spent more time in teaching and less in trying to create an educational monopoly at the States expense
they would not need this graft of State Aid to carry on their enterprise
which is merely a private monopoly in which only those running it are the beneficiaries. More Anon.—Sons of America for May.

Lost Diamonds From Teeth

His dentist "misappropriated" three diamonds set in the bridgework of his teeth which he had worn for thirteen years, Tom Cheek, negro politician of West Oakland, testified in his suit to recover the cost of the jewels from a dentist.

Cheek said he had the dentist remove the bridgework containing the three stones and left it with the dentist to be repaired. When he returned to the dentist's office to get the bridge, Cheek said, the diamonds had been removed. The dentist asserted there were no diamonds in the bridgework left with him.—San Francisco Chroni-

ton suburbs, says the Boston Globe.
She cannot cook and she is not used
to American methods of housekeeping.
When finally her mistress asked in ex-

"Teckla, is there anything you can

"Yes, missus," she replied, in all

Our Relations With The American Telephone and Telegraph Company

THE Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company has an arrangement with the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, the parent Company of the Bell System, under which that Company renders to the C. and P., in common with the other Bell operating companies throughout the country, many essential and valuable services.

This plan is necessary and works for true economy. The payment to the American Telephone and Telegraph Company is in no sense a royalty but a reasonable payment for services actually performed.

The Services

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company:

Maintains a great research department for the study of every branch of the telephone art. Here are developed and made available to the C. and P. thousands of improvements and inventions, many of them covered by patents, which make for economy and progress in furnishing telephone service.

Provides engineering, legal, accounting and financial advice necessary to the conduct of the system.

Furnishes all telephone receivers and transmitters used by subscribers, and exchanges them when they become obsolete or unfit for service.

Why the Arrangement is Necessary

The C. and P. must have the benefit of every helpful new method and invention to keep abreast of the developments in the telephone art. Further, the plant must be designed and operated in harmony with the plants of all the other Bell operating companies, so that every C. and P. subscriber may be able to talk throughout the length and breadth of the nation-wide Bell System.

This is made possible only by a centralized staff of experts working in co-operation with the staffs of the C. and P. and other Bell operating companies.

Why it is Economical

It is obvious that one collective staff of engineers and other experts working on the fundamental problems of all the Bell Companies costs less than for each company to build up its own staff, even if this were feasible.

Thus at a reasonable cost, the C. and P. Company is provided with many essential services which it would be powerless to perform for itself, and others which it could obtain only at costs which would be prohibitive.

Under this broad general arrangement, the whole history of the Bell System is marked by a long series of important improvements which have effected large economies. Indeed it has been and is still the mainspring in the development of the telephone industry.

While the relationship is a proper subject of inquiry, and has met with general approval by many of the state regulating bodies and the courts, we are anxious that our patrons should understand the arrangement as being in the true interests of telephone users.

SMALL HOME ORCHARD PAYS

Fruits of Some Kind Will Grow Almost Anywhere—Transplant in Fall or Winter.

A small home orchard often is worth much to the farmer who is wise enough to plant one. Every farmer, whether he be owner or tenant, should have an orchard. Fruits of some kind will grow most anywhere. Fall and winter transplanting may be done or trees may be set in the spring.

Probably there isn't a physician who doesn't have a few charity patients as well as those who can, and do, pay their bills, and one of these gave a good laugh to the attending nurses at the hospital.

"Lord, sir, it ain't a bit of trouble," replied the woman affably. "It ain't a bit of trouble to put your name in along with the others."

Revival services have been in progress during the past several weeks. Owing to the very inclement weather they have been slightly interrupted, but in spite of bad weather and almost impassable roads, the attendance has been fairly good. On last Sunday morning, William Forney, an aged veteran of the Civil War, died at his home, in this place, from the infirmities of old age. He was in his 91st year, and is survived by his wife and two daughters, Mrs. Reindollar, of York, and Mrs. Withers, of this place. Funeral services were conducted at the Lutheran Church, on Tuesday afternoon by his pastor, Rev. L. K. Young, after which the remains were taken to Gettysburg for interment.

On Tuesday evening Rev. T. W. Null and Miss Mary Rohr, teachers in our public school, attended Revival services with the school in a body. As the children approached and entered the church, they sang "Onward Christian Soldiers," during which time the congregation remained standing until all were seated, after which Rev. Ritter made a short address of welcome to teachers and pupils. Opening church services were then commenced by the singing of several hymns followed by the scripture reading and prayer, after which a most excellent and very forceful sermon was delivered, which in its entirety has been pronounced a model sermon for the occasion, and was highly appreciated by the school and the entire congregation.

Tommy had received strict instructions to ask no questions, and Tommy tried hard to obey. But childish curiosity won, and he suddenly and loudly inquired:

"Mamma, do Mr. and Mrs. Brown still play in the band? Will they play us something when tea is over?"

"Why, Tommy, Mr. and Mrs. Brown don't play in the band. Why do you ask such a question?"

"Because," said the terror, in disappointed tones, "I heard you tell papa that Mr. Brown played second fiddle to his wife."

There was music after tea and Tommy was the drum.

Baking Is Attaining Dignity of a Profession

The ancient calling of the baker is no longer a mere craft but is rapidly assuming the dignity of a scientific profession to which an increasing number of college and university men are turning every year with the purpose of making it their life work, says Dr. H. E. Barnard of Chicago, founder of the American Institute of Baking.

Doctor Barnard, who is a nationally-known expert in food chemistry, was in Los Angeles recently primarily to take part in the program connected with the city's bread week. He is the head of the training school for bakers conducted in connection with the American Institute of Baking and is also the secretary of the American Bakers' association.

Doctor Barnard said that when the training school for bakers was established in Chicago it was a surprise to the men behind the enterprise to discover what interest was displayed by men who had specialized in chemical lines in the institutions of higher learning.

"We had a greater number of applications from college and university graduates than we could take care of," he said, "and the students we turned out are all men possessed of a high degree of technical training."—Los Angeles Times.

Airway 7,000 Miles Long

The French air ministry has promised financial support for what experts declare will be the world's richest airway from the point of view of the volume of express, mails and freight carried.

Promoted by the Societe Aeronautique du Sud-Ouest this airway covers a total distance of nearly 7,000 miles, starting from Paris and going via Bordeaux, Lisbon, Casablanca and Dakar across the Atlantic to Pernambuco, Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires in South America, says the London Mail.

In the initial working of the scheme, mails and goods will be carried between Dakar and Pernambuco in the 25-knot steamers of the Compagnie Sud-Atlantique, but designs are already in hand for huge multiengineed seaplanes which will make the ocean crossing and enable loads to be airborne right from Paris to Buenos Aires.

Desert Hero Learned Marriage Was Subduing

Mrs. Rosita Forbes, English traveler, who recently paid a visit in his native haunts to Raisuli, Morocco's bandit chief, who died recently, relates in the New York Times a story concerning the way a desert Romeo was tamed, and how he was made wise in the taming.

The Romeo, a big, strong and handsome tribesman, rode better, shot better and was just about a better man all around than his fellows, when one day the sheriff, Raisuli, thought he would confer a favor upon him in recognition of his prowess. The sheriff asked him what he desired.

KEPT THE "NAILS"

How Trustees of Early Yankee Church Solved Problem.

Boston Merchant Made the Mistake of His Life When He Wrote "No Errors Rectified."

In one of the older churches of New Haven there is a quaint and beautiful baptismal service set of silver, and not less quaint is the tale of how the old church came by it.

The year that Yorktown fell the trustees of the church decided that the frame building must have repairs, and sent to Boston for six kegs of nails. In course of time the kegs arrived on one of the huge and slow-moving freight wagons of the day and were duly delivered to the carpenters.

Nails in those days were scarce and expensive, each one being the handwork of a blacksmith, and, as a consequence of the methods followed in their manufacture, the smiths usually turning out a hundred or so on days when they had nothing in particular to engage their attention, they were apt to be very irregular in size and degree of perfection. The delight of the chief carpenter was, therefore, great when, knocking in the head of one keg, he found the nails of remarkably uniform size and indicating the best workmanship and material.

"Ye were in luck, deacon," he remarked to one of the trustees who had been present to give receipt for the six kegs, "for these be Spanish nails, made at Toledo. Belike they were taken from some Spanish ship by a sea rover."

He began to beat in the head of another keg and uttered an exclamation of astonishment.

"These be n't nails, deacon!" he gasped, his eyes staring.

They were not. The keg was full of Spanish silver dollars.

"So I see, Master Thomas," the deacon remarked quietly. "Suppose you head up that keg again, and I will call a meeting of the trustees to discuss this matter. We must write to the Boston merchant concerning it."

The meeting of the trustees was duly held that very day, and long and earnest were the arguments. What was the proper course for them to follow? Should they simply write the Boston merchant that one of the kegs had been found to be full of silver dollars? The church was poor and the deacons were Connecticut Yankees to the bone. It was obvious that the Boston merchant had obtained the keg in some unusual manner and it was a logical assumption that he had paid for it on a nail value basis, as he had sold it.

Then uprose one who might have done mighty things in finance had he lived a century and a half later.

"Let us," he suggested, "write to this merchant of Boston town simply the facts that there was an error in shipment." And so they did.

In time came the merchant's reply. He said that he had bought the kegs from a privateersman; that they were sold as bought, and that "no mistakes could be rectified."

And there is no doubt that the deacons chuckled somewhat dryly as they ordered the silver dollars of Spain melted down and cast into that service which can be pointed out today to the youth of New Haven as an example of—of, well, something.

Seeing by Wireless Is Near, Says a Scientist

Edmund Edward Fournier-d'Albe, inventor of the optophone, which enables the blind to read through their ears, and the tonoscope, which makes speech intelligible to the deaf, has added his prophecy to those of other scientists who recently have forecast the early achievement of television—seeing by wireless. Dr. Fournier-d'Albe consented to be quoted as saying:

"I believe television will be accomplished this year. I'll stake my whole scientific reputation on it—I'm certain of it."

He envisages a time a few years hence, says the New York World, when explorers equipped with television cameras will make possible the projection on moving-picture screens in European and American cities the scenes attending their climbs, say of Mount Everest, or their polar explorations, or even the examination of the ocean's floor by means of submarines. Doctor Fournier-d'Albe is credited with sending the first photograph by radio.

Street Paving Would Circle the Globe Twice

If the modern paved streets of 290 leading American cities were merged into a single great highway 18 feet wide that highway would more than twice encircle the globe, according to the first national survey, the results of which have just been announced.

The survey shows that with an average of 18 feet of width there are 53,974.8 miles of paved streets in American cities of 10,000 or more population. This mileage by far exceeds that of every other country in the world.

These 290 cities, which include all but three of the cities of 10,000 or more population and which comprise 65.8 per cent of the 53,998,385 urban population of the United States, report a total of 601,653,547 square yards of pavement. Of this 469,463,141 square yards, or 78 per cent, are of the types higher than waterbound macadam. These higher types in turn comprise percentages of the total types higher than waterbound macadam as follows: Asphaltic types, 53.9 per cent; brick, 21.9 per cent; stone block, 11.6 per cent; wood block, 3.3 per cent; portland cement concrete, 5.5 per cent; tar macadam, 2.5 per cent; miscellaneous, 1.3 per cent.

Tragedy in Lumber Town

There is no more pathetic story in the history of northern Michigan than that of the deserted village of Jennings, 12 miles northeast of Cadillac, in Missaukee county, says a Cadillac correspondent.

Jennings was founded some 35 or 40 years ago by Mitchell Bros. company, a sawmill, flooring and chemical plant established there, also a large general store. Hundreds of persons came direct from Sweden to the village, where they were employed in the mills of the company. But when the last giant maple was cut and the hills and valleys in the vicinity were bare of raw material for the saws and planers the company tore down the big mills and moved the machinery to Cadillac, where larger and more modern factories were erected. The 100 or more residences owned by the company were moved intact to Cadillac, also most of the privately owned houses. Today there are only a handful of former inhabitants left in the once prosperous and happy village. The chief occupation is yarning of the early days.

These old men and women will tell the inquiring stranger that "Jennings was the best town in the world," excepting possibly in some cases the old home town in Sweden. Sons and daughters would gladly bring them to Cadillac or to other cities to which they moved in the march of progress, but Jennings is their world, they prefer to live and die there.—Beloit News.

"My Home Town"

In the concert hall of the Seamen's Church institute of New York city a motley crowd of Scandinavians, Englishmen, Slavs, Italians and Americans, white and negro, were singing at the top of their lungs.

They had sung with some fervor before, when the words of familiar songs were flashed on the screen, but this was the song that really stirred them to enthusiasm:

Not here, not there, it's fifty miles from nowhere, but it's my home town.

Not here, not there, but I'm all set to go there.

So I'll make a break and take a look in the mirror.

Where's my hat? Where's my coat? Where's my leather bag?

Send my trunk to the place written on the tag.

Not here, not there, it's fifty miles from nowhere, but it's my home town.

"As you see," says the lookout of the institute, "this is pretty bad poetry and the music was hardly better; but as these men from the far corners of the earth sang about their home town with that curious ring in their voices it almost brought tears to the eyes. A universal note had been struck."

Wills Paintings to City

A wealthy favorite son has willed a collection of nearly 1,500 oil paintings to the city of Philadelphia. Included in the catalogue is a group of eighteen canvases from the brush of the delightful French landscapeur, Jean Camille Corot. This is said to be the largest and finest assemblage of Corots in this or any other country. Such a gift cannot but elevate the artistic perceptions of a community. When people become bewildered in the chase for dollars it is fine to be diverted for even a moment to that which is beautiful in art. Municipal libraries and municipal art galleries are the hope of a higher civilization.

Strip Protects Grass

To accommodate persons waiting for cars and to preserve the small lawn between the sidewalk and the street, a Buffalo (N. Y.) contractor put a strip of concrete fifteen inches wide inside the curb. The "platform" became popular and served to attract attention to the house, a two-family affair so constructed that the front entrance to the lower flat was from the main street and that to the upper apartment from a side thoroughfare.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Down Lavender Lane

By CLARISSA MACKIE
(©, 1924, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Renton left his bicycle hidden among some bushes beside the road, and turned toward a small brown house where some women were cleaning house, their vigorous labors having brought them into the front yard. Rugs, well beaten and clean, were airing in the sun, mattresses and featherbeds were taking their turn at a cleansing when the young painter walked through the gate, hat in hand, his painting kit under his arm.

"Good afternoon, ladies," he said, "my name is Renton—Benjamin Renton, and—"

"We don't want to buy any books today," interjected Mrs. Stephen Howe, a big-boned woman with hard eyes. "I haven't read the last lot yet!"

Another woman giggled. "Why, Aunt Lucretia, of course you couldn't read those books, they were in French!"

Mrs. Howell grunted impatiently. "Well, I didn't have time to read 'em, Gracie, as you very well know—even if they were in French, which I don't understand and don't want to. But I do understand the ways of book peddlers—and, young man, you will never sell any books here!"

Benjamin Renton smiled pleasantly. "I haven't anything to sell, madam; I am just inquiring my way."

"My land! and me so uncivil!" she reddened with embarrassment.

"Can you tell me how to find Lavender Lane?"

The three women stared at one another with inquiring glances.

"Lavender Lane—there's Green Lane, and Smith's Lane, and that runs down past Cynthia Elliott's, and—"

"Aunt Lucretia!" interrupted the young woman who had spoken before, "there's lots of lavender—wild lavender—grows in that lane!"

"That's the place, then; I thank you very much, indeed. Am I on my way there now?" replacing his hat.

"It's real near—across the road, and turn down by that old twisted cedar."

Renton waved his hat in gay farewell as he moved away. Across the road near the old cedar was where he had hidden his wheel, and he decided to leave it there for awhile. "Lavender lanes" were apt to be rutty and full of stones.

This lane proved to be all that his friend Randall had described. Evidently it was not much traveled for the grass was thick and green, a faint depression showing the marks of wheels. The banks sloped up to fields hedged with catbrier, woodbine, poison ivy and wild honeysuckle. On the sloping banks of the lane were myriads of spikes of wild lavender, marching like a blue-clad army! There were bounding bays—sweetly pink and innocently bold, and the intense blue of chicory. He wanted to paint it all—he would go the length of the lane—there would be a brook gurgling down below—and more lavender—and then the field suddenly ceased and he came to a little house set in a garden of lavender—there was a fresh clean fragrance, reminding him of days when he was a little boy at home, and his mother would make bags of white net and fill them with sweet lavender and put them in the drawers of her linen closet—

He closed his eyes and dreamed again of other days. When he opened them again, the scene had changed a little.

The "lavender house in the lavender garden," as he called it, was still there, of course, but the house was white, and while sweet lavender ran riot at one side, on the other side of the house was a garden where other flowers flourished luxuriantly. There was a large table on the "lavender side," where a girl was spreading lavender flowers out to dry. She was a pretty girl, with wavy brown hair and brown eyes, and she wore a lavender dress and frilled white apron, just as if she, too, belonged to the sweet old house and all the lavender flowers with their homely old-fashioned memories.

Memory!

That was what troubled Bennie Renton as he leaned on the fence and watched her graceful unconscious movements. Stirred as he was by the beauty of the picture, and possibilities of making a picture of the lovely lane, something else, away back, was disturbing his peace of mind.

Gradually, it dawned upon him that he had seen all this before—he had dimly seen the lane and the house—and the girl—and he seemed to know intuitively that soon she would break into a low song—her voice was deep and thrilling—he knew it would be! And he knew that someone else belonged in the picture—an elderly woman with white hair, who walked with a cane, and who would be wearing a delicately tinted shawl about her thin shoulders. What was it the girl was singing? A song, popular during the great war, but little sung since because of its heart-breaking sadness. "Flanders Field—the poppies grow—"

A side door opened and the elderly woman came out—he was expecting her—she wore a lavender shawl—and she hurried across the grass to the girl.

"Doris, darling, don't sing that—it breaks my heart—"

"Mother, I am so sorry—it seems to bring Perry—nearer—"

There was a hushed silence as they stood, with tear-filled eyes.

The young man at the fence removed his hat and turned away with troubled face. Perry—Perry—Flanders Field—why, that was where he left his buddy—Perry Smith!

The weakness of sudden surprise caused him to drop down on the bank among the sweet-smelling herbs. He fumbled in an inner case wrapped in oiled silk. How many weary months—years—he had carried that case which he received from the hand of Perry—dying—a hero there in France—and he had promised to deliver the package to Perry Smith's mother—in a town named Lavender Lane. Perry's identification tag had been missing in some unaccountable way, so his friends could not be traced, but Renton had been untiring in his efforts to find the right Smith. But there were thousands of Smiths in the home state, and Perry had been a reticent fellow save when they talked evenings—between the firing—and then there were snatches—all about the little house, and sweet lavender, and the mother who wore pretty shawls and the sister with the wonderful voice. Bennie Renton had nothing in particular to tell as his home background—parents dead—few relatives—an artist by profession with some success in his particular field—and then the war blotting out everything. This casual bicycle trip had brought him to the very door of Perry's home—perhaps!

He went along to the front gate, opened it, and walked down the path, then, as the women turned and approached him, he crossed the grass until he, too, stood among the lavender flowers.

"I came to inquire if Mrs. Smith lives here?" he hesitated.

They both smiled. "I am Mrs. Cynthia Smith," said the older one.

"My name is Renton—Benjamin Renton—he stopped short because they were looking eagerly at the bronze button in his coat lapel.

"You wanted to see me on business?" asked Mrs. Smith, noting his confusion. "Won't you come into the house? It is hot in the sun."

"Please stay out here—I can say it better—he used to talk about the lavender garden—and the little house with roses on one side and lavender on the other, and in the winter snow all over everything." His young bronzed face was very tender as he spoke of his comrade.

"He means—our Perry," whispered the mother brokenly. "Oh, did—you know him—of course you knew him—he called you 'Rennie'!" she cried.

The girl put one arm about her mother and Rennie unconsciously gave her the support of his strong shoulder. It thrilled him to have the feeble old form leaning on him—at last he had a home and a mother—he knew that he could not leave them—if they needed him. He gave them the package and went away, to come again and again, until the day a year later when he married Doris and became in truth Mrs. Smith's son, but the son in France was a common memory that bound them all.

Renton's picture—Lavender Lane—perhaps you have seen it—has brought him fame, and some fortune. But they still live in the little white house in the lane.

Many Noted Men Have Been Born in London

There has recently been a considerable amount of discussion regarding London's small share of great men in proportion to its population. For this reason, London Tit-Bits gives a short selection of London men who have added to their city's prestige.

Going back to the Fourteenth century, we find Chaucer, who was born in Thames street, and, later, Spenser, a native of East Smithfield.

Then there was John Milton, born in the parish of Bread street, off Cheapside; Thomas A. Becket, whose effigy graced the first seat of the city of London, and Miles Coverdale, of Threadneedle street, who made the first translation of the Bible.

From Cheapside we have the poet, Robert Herrick; while Michael Faraday, scientist and electrician of world renown, came from Newington.

Old Broad street boasts of Cardinal Newman, author of "Lead, Kindly Light," the greatest hymn of modern times, John Keats, Samuel Pepys and Thomas Gray were all natives of London.

To decide who are Londoners is often a very difficult job, for although a man may have been born in the country, as soon as he lives and works in London he seems to become a Londoner automatically.

Young Rainbows

Everyone knows the rainbow that hovers over waterfalls. To see a Swiss torrent come down in a steady pour of milky white, half hidden by its trembling filmy wrapper of violet and rose-color and blue! What a joy!

Once and once only I saw a thousand rainbows together at play; it was on the sea near Jersey, a day of brilliant sunshine. The high wind whipped up the lively waves that ran in a hissing live-green multitude each topped in white foam; and the hollow of every wave was filled in with a young curled rainbow. Gay, inexpressibly gay it was; far as the eye could see, the young rainbows played where shadow should have been.

She Didn't Know

A woman went into a chemist's shop and said: "I want some distemper, please."

"Yes, madam," replied the assistant. "What color did you want?"

"I don't know," said the woman. "But the dog's a black-and-white one."

Resident of Pennsylvania Declares Dr. Thacher's Liver and Blood Syrup Overcome Rheumatism
of Five Years' Standing When All Else Had Failed.

Following numerous most astonishing reports regarding the usual value of Dr. Thacher's Liver and Blood Syrup in restoring health and strength to the weak and ailing, comes a remarkable statement from Miss Emily Baldwin, of 1534 Broad St., South Greensburg, Pa.

Miss Baldwin declares that this celebrated prescription ended an agonizing case of rheumatism that had resisted all other treatments for five long years and adds that, in her opinion, there is nothing to compare with this medicine.

With such statements as these, coming from people who have no interest in making them other than to benefit fellow sufferers, it is easy to understand why Dr. Thacher's Liver and Blood Syrup is rapidly becoming a sensation.

Miss Baldwin makes no extravagant claims, but simply tells in a straightforward manner of her suffering and the relief she has secured. Her complete statement follows:

"I just can't express my gratitude for the wonderful relief Dr. Thacher's Liver and Blood Syrup has brought me," declares Miss Baldwin. "All my awful rheumatic pains are gone after taking only two bottles and I am feeling so well and happy, it seems too good to be true."

"The fact is, I was in the clutches of this wretched rheumatism for five long years and although I tried treatment after treatment, I just seemed to always be getting worse instead of better, until I began taking Dr. Thacher's Liver and Blood Syrup."

"Any change in the weather, even, would put me in the bed suffering something awful, and at night I felt so miserable and was in such pain that it was impossible for me to sleep much of the time. Then in the morning I was so tired and exhausted that I just dreaded another day. I tell you I know what it is to suffer. "This went on, as I said, for five years and then I saw where Dr. Thacher's Liver and Blood Syrup was recommended for rheumatism and so I decided to try it, not believing, however, that it would help me much. Just imagine my delight when, after taking two bottles, I was able to be up and about."

"I didn't stop taking this grand medicine then, though, but kept it up, and now I am doing all my own housework and feeling simply fine. I would certainly advise everybody who is suffering like I was to get some of this wonderful Liver and Blood Syrup."

The fame of Dr. Thacher's prescription is spreading like wildfire and people suffering from the many troubles caused by improper working of the liver, stomach and bowels and those who are simply in need of a general tonic to build them up are flocking to the drug stores to get a supply of this much talked of medicine.

All good druggists are selling it with the distinct understanding that if Dr. Thacher's Liver and Blood Syrup does not bring relief their money will be returned to them. For sale by R. S. McKinney, Druggist.

ISAIAH AND THE ASSYRIAN CRISIS.

LESSON TEXT—Isa. 36, 37.
GOLDEN TEXT—"God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble."—Ps. 46:1.
PRIMARY TOPIC—How God Answered Their Letter.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Isaiah and the Boastful Assyrian.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Isaiah's Faith Saved a City.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Isaiah's Service to His Country.

I. The King of Assyria Invades Judah (Isa. 36).

1. Rabshakeh Meets a Deputation From Judah (vv. 1-21). Rabshakeh was a representative of Sennacherib, the king of Assyria, whose mission was to induce Judah to surrender. In order to accomplish this he:

(1) Tried to bully them into submission (vv. 4-9). He taunted them with their weakness and told them that Egypt was a broken reed that would not only fail of support but even pierce the hand that reached out to it. He challenged them by offering 2,000 horses, if they could not furnish riders for them. If they could not furnish this small number it would be futile for them to attempt to withstand the great Assyrian army.

(2) He asserted that it was useless for them to put their trust in God (v. 10). He even declared that the Lord had sent him to destroy Judah.

(3) He tried to create a panic among the people (vv. 13-21). Fearing a panic among the people the deputation of the Jews urged Rabshakeh not to speak in the Jews' language. Taking up the suggestion he spoke loudly in the Jews' language, warning them against trusting in Hezekiah.

(4) He promised them plenty in another land similar to their own (vv. 16, 17). He urged them to make agreement with him and upon his return from Egypt he would take them to a land of plenty, but the people were loyal to Hezekiah, for they knew that the cruel Assyrians could not be trusted.

2. The Deputation Reports to Hezekiah (v. 22). They rent their garments doubtless in fear and dismay over their perilous condition, for the crisis long before predicted by Isaiah had now come upon them.

II. Hezekiah's Behavior (Isa. 37: 1-35).

1. Resorted to the House of the Lord (v. 1). This is a sure resort of God's people in time of distress (Ps. 73:16, 17; 77:13). This action was prompted by faith, for God had promised that those who in time of distress resorted to His house would be heard by Him (II Chron. 7:15, 16).

2. Sent Isaiah (vv. 2-7). The logical and natural thing for the king to do under such circumstances was to send for God's prophet. The prophet sent back words of encouragement to Hezekiah, assuring him that God would bring deliverance.

3. Hezekiah's Prayer (vv. 14-20). Rabshakeh, who seems to have withdrawn from Jerusalem for a little while, now returns from Sennacherib with a letter warning Hezekiah against trusting God for deliverance, assuring him that he would be deceived for no god was able to stand against the Assyrian army. He spread the letter before the Lord and prayed.

(1) He recognized God's throne, making it the ground of his plea (v. 16).

(2) He recognized the peril which threatened the people (vv. 17-19). Sennacherib had indeed laid waste the surrounding nations, but that ruin resulted because the gods of the nations were not real.

(3) He asked for deliverance (v. 20). He desired that deliverance would come in such a way as to vindicate and honor the Lord.

4. Isaiah's Message to Hezekiah (vv. 21-35).

(1) That Sennacherib's sin was blasphemy against the Holy One of Israel (vv. 21-23).

(2) That Sennacherib had forgotten that he was an instrument in God's hand (vv. 24-28).

(3) Judgment upon Sennacherib was imminent (vv. 29-35). Deliverance would soon come and that through the energy of the Lord of hosts.

III. Destruction of the Assyrian Army (vv. 36-38).

The angel of the Lord went forth and smote in the camp of the Assyrians 185,000 men, so Sennacherib was turned back by the way he came. He did not enter Jerusalem and after this defeat he went back to Nineveh to live and while there worshipping in the house of his god he was assassinated.

God's Holy Day; What It Is and Why
Exodus 20:8-11; Mark 2:27, 28

"Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." This means to keep it separated from other days, to make it a different kind of a day. "The Sabbath was made for man," made to meet his need—his need for rest. The law of necessary rest is manifest all through God's creation, and especially in man.

From Dr. Howard Agnew Johnston we quote the following words: "The fourth commandment is not intended to enjoin worship. That suggestion is presented in the first two commandments of the decalogue. The fourth deals with the necessity of rest on the part of man and beast. It is no arbitrary law, but rests in the nature of things. In the year 1822, the British government, under the leadership of Sir Robert Peel, instituted a series of tests running through two years, to discover whether men who rested one day in seven should prove superior to those who did not observe the rest day. After two years those who worked six days only out of seven, had accomplished more of a total product, were far better in physical health, and maintained a higher moral and intellectual tone. The test involved two thousand men. Similar tests were made with horses, and they proved that those that worked only six days and rested on the seventh, accomplished a larger total of work done and maintained far better conditions of health."

We need to be on our guard against those who deprive us of this one day in seven that the goodness of God has provided. The people who are constantly demanding liberal ideas about Sunday, are the people who are making money by the present disregard of the proper uses of Sunday. Some things are necessary on Sunday, but beyond the necessary things, the day should be sacredly guarded against the inroads being made upon it by money seekers and pleasure lovers. It will need courage in order to preserve this priceless boon both for ourselves and the generation to come.

Wife Regretted Giving Old Letter to Spouse

The man's mother had given the man's wife a love letter which she found hidden away in a mass of old papers. It had been written to the man when he was a boy and the writer was his sweetheart, aged fifteen years.

The man's mother laughed when she handed it to the man's wife, and the man's wife laughed when she handed it to the man.

But the man did not laugh. "Aha," said the wife in her merry way, "see how the past rises up against you."

The man took the letter and slowly unfolded it and softly read it aloud:

"Dearest boy," he read, "I'm afraid you are mad at me because I walked with Johnnie Nicholson yesterday to school, but it wasn't my fault at all. You know I love you, dearest boy, a thousand million times more than I could love Johnnie, and when you look cross at me it breaks my heart. Ain't you going to take me to the school picnic Saturday—'cause if you don't I can't go. I cried when I wrote this—that's why it's spotted. Don't make me cry any more, dearest boy."

The man looked at the letter for some time. His gaze softened and he sighed.

"That was the real thing," he murmured, and he carefully folded the letter and turned away.

And then the man's wife was sorry she had given the letter to the man.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Cartoon in Punch Aided Wilkie Collins to Fame

Wilkie Collins was the son of William Collins, a successful landscape painter, and was brought up in comfort. After school at Highbury the family went to Italy for three years, a useful part of the experience of a future novelist. On return to England Wilkie was articled to the tea trade, and later graduated in law, being called to the bar in 1849, but he soon abandoned this for letters.

A life of his father was more noted for its anecdote than for its literary finish. Other books followed, and his great success came in 1860, with "The Woman in White." There were feeble imitations on all sides, with women of all the colors of the rainbow rushing into print.

Punch paid the book an inimitable tribute in which an absorbed stout man turned, startled at the question from a woman in night attire: "And pray, Mr. Tompkins, how much longer are you going to sit up with that 'Woman in White'?"

Collins was henceforth hailed a master in his own craft, highly paid and the idol of thousands of readers. His skill in titles was no mean asset, as in "No Name," "The Frozen Deep," "The Moonstone," "Blind Love," and "The Dead Secret."—Toronto Globe.

Community Building

Scientific Planning for Healthy Growth

A committee of twenty-one meeting at the City club in Chicago to draw up specifications for a metropolitan planning commission forecasts a Chicago of 8,000,000 population extending, roughly, from near the Indiana state line to a point near the Wisconsin line. We believe that is no wild dream. It is a possibility, if not a probability.

But whether or not Chicago proper ever extends its present boundaries, there can be no doubt that definite, scientific planning is essential to insure healthy and continuous growth. The Chicago Plan commission has worked with admirable good sense and efficiency. But problems of modern city life which have arisen since its inception have greatly complicated its task. The automobile traffic and the tendency to concentrate both businesses and residences in high buildings convenient to a central district impose a new duty upon city planners.

We are inclined to be archaic in our ideas. Athens and Rome and Constantinople were planned and built upon one level. American cities, constructed many centuries later, have hardly advanced from that.

In Chicago, with the limited exception of elevated railroads, the Michigan avenue two-level street, and tunnels beneath the river, we are still on the one-level basis of ancient Athens. New York has gone a step further with the subway, and eventually we will have that. But even that will not be enough.

There can be no adequate planning for a modern great city which does not provide for more than one level for traffic. Chicago knows it, but that is not enough. It must act upon the knowledge. New York knows it, and is acting. Steps are being taken there to provide a third level of transportation, for pedestrians, above the ground. The entire city has been zoned, with groups of architects in charge of the various districts, to work out this plan. The colossal plan of adding some 4,000 acres to the lower end of Manhattan island includes the construction of three street levels—one for heavy vehicular traffic, a second for passenger automobiles, and a third for pedestrians.

Chicago must come to it. The committee of twenty-one may properly plan for a city fifty miles long and of 8,000,000 population, but it should not neglect to plan first for a city of our present area, but three or more stories high in so far as its streets are concerned.

School for Sick Pupils

A special hospital school, maintained as part of the regular school system of Minneapolis for children who have tuberculosis, is described in the January number of School Life, published by the United States bureau of education. Children excluded from the regular schools on account of having this disease are required under the compulsory education law to attend this school if they are able to travel to and from school every day by street car. Regular work of the eight elementary grades is offered, and pupils may be transferred to this school or back to a regular school without loss of standing.

Classes are held in open-air rooms, which are kept at a temperature of 45 degrees. The children wear Eskimo suits in the classroom. Two light meals and a full meal are served during the day, and after the full meal the children have a sleeping period. "Sun-lamp treatments" are given every morning. Children requiring hospital treatment for a short time are placed in a ward and are attended by a physician and a nurse.—Chicago News.

For Civic Improvement

It is the plan of the Federal Council of Citizenship Training to co-operate with the many non-governmental agencies, public and private, which are engaged in seeking to improve citizenship throughout the country. It has begun to work out the means of such co-operation.

It is estimated that there are about 2,000 national agencies which are applying themselves today to the problems of social and civic improvement. There are other thousands of local agencies engaged in the same kind of work.

If these agencies can be brought to work together along only a few lines, it is felt that the impetus given to the movement for better citizenship will be increased.

The American National council, of which President Harding was the honorary president and Frank A. Vanderlip the acting president, will co-operate in every way with the governmental agencies in the crusade now launched.

Pet Names Given Cities

"Little old New York" is the pet name of the commercial capital of the United States. It is neither "little" nor "old," but these words are used in their affectionate sense. The pet name of Boston in the United States is "the Hub." This is a little more malicious, and is used more by outsiders than by Bostonians. It is generally held that the latter regard their intellectual city as "the hub of the universe," the city around which all other cities revolve.

Tying Cast Iron Into Knots Is Now Possible

Tying gray or white cast iron in knots is now made possible by a new process invented by Alex. K. Schlaap. The process is very simple, consisting in heating the cast iron to a temperature shortly above the critical temperature of 1,600 Fahrenheit, while protecting it in a muffle surrounded by a gas flame and open at the top. As soon as the gray cast iron reaches the proper temperature the muffle and its contents are removed from the furnace and allowed to cool in the open air. The whole operation requires about 45 minutes, starting from cold cast iron.

The method has been in continuous use for a year, chiefly for the purpose of softening gray iron castings for machining purposes, and especially for making automobile piston rings. The most noteworthy characteristic is the combination of pliability, ductility, malleability, and resiliency. In its resiliency the heat-treated metal most resembles steel, since it shows this property both before and after distortion. For example, a thin bar might be coiled up into a spiral and used as a spring, although, of course, not nearly as strong and resilient as a tempered steel spring. It is worthy of note that this annealed cast iron does not warp on standing. Samples of annealed iron have stood for several months without changing shape by as much as one thousandth of an inch, as compared with unannealed castings of the same metal and pattern, which have warped.—Iron Age.

"Possibly"

"Then I'm to tell the firm," the bill collector said, making a memorandum in his book, "that you'll probably settle the account next week?"

"Well, I'd hardly put it like that," answered the other, hesitatingly. "Probably" is a pretty strong word. Better make it "possibly."

Cities Join In Health Crusade Through Clean-up Activities

"Brighten the corner where you are!"

This is the message being broadcast by cities and towns in the United States and Canada, in an effort to have dirt attacked as a community problem to promote health.

Sanitarians declare a city is only as clean as its homes, and that mothers should remember that the immaculateness of their nurseries may be made dangerous for their babies by rampant dirt from unclean places. It is pointed out that diseases bred in dirt are no respecters of persons.

Revival of the venerable, but slightly obsolete, custom of spring house-cleaning, and the extension of the ancient rite outside the walls of the house to back alleys and vacant lots, until there is a vast succession of Spotless Towns, is no mean undertaking.

Municipalities, women's clubs, civic and industrial organizations everywhere are preparing for clean-up activities. The Mayor of St. Louis once summarized the lasting benefits of such efforts by saying: "Paint a neglected back yard or vacant lot with the green of grass or shrubbery or a thrift garden or publicly commit to a thrifty other useful purpose and it will not revert to its former disorderliness. Otherwise it inevitably and speedily will do so."

In urging every municipality to proclaim its annual Clean-up week, the Welfare Division of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company is instructing its twenty-thousand agents and its visiting nurses in 3,955 cities and towns to lend a hand. It is educating its policyholders which comprise one-seventh of the combined populations of the United States and Canada just how they can help to make their home towns a safer place to live in and a healthier place for their children.

If the suggestions are followed, the rats will find that many happy homesites under the rubbish heaps will be unavailable. The malarial mosquitoes will wander far from their erstwhile habitations to find an undrained puddle in which to breed. The house-flies will find many manure heaps missing when they come to lay their eggs and there will be far less danger of disastrous conflagrations starting in the waste and refuse heaped in the forgotten corners.

Here are the eight outstanding things suggested by the Metropolitan as a foundation for a clean-up crusade:

1. Have all rubbish removed from your cellar, back-yard and area-way, and placed in barrels or boxes for removal. Arrange to have it taken away.
2. Clean hallways of all obstructions. Ventilate damp cellars and closets.
3. Beat all carpets and hangings. Scrub floors and wash all wood-work.
4. Clean all windows and keep them open to fresh air and sunlight.
5. Ask your landlord to repair leaky roofs and plumbing, broken walls and ceilings.
6. Report stagnant pools, refuse and other nearby nuisances to the Health Department.
7. Do what you can to see that vacant lots are cleaned of all refuse, tin cans, boxes and other litter.
8. Compliance with these suggestions and with efforts of the Health Department will make your city a healthy and pleasant place for your children to grow up in.

TANEYTOWN LOCALS

Brief Items of Local News of Special Interest to Our Home Readers.

Fern Hitchcock and wife, of York, spent the week-end in town with their home folks.

When anybody gets off the usual, "This is a fine day," wait until evening before you say "yes."

Mrs. Chas. H. Mayers, of Littlestown, visited her brother, Dr. F. T. Elliot and family, last Sunday.

The P. O. S. of A. have under consideration plans for erecting a flag staff, at the Soldier's Memorial.

Miss Viola Slagenhaupt who has been living in Harrisburg, has returned to Taneytown, for a time.

Attention is called to a closing agreement, in another column, entered into by business firms in Taneytown for the summer season.

Mrs. John E. Harman was taken to Frederick City Hospital, Tuesday night, and operated on for appendicitis. She is improving very nicely.

Misses Anna Null and Anna May Fair, Franklin Fair and Elwood Baumgardner, attended a Sunday School Convention in New Windsor, today, Friday.

Minor improvements in properties are going on, all over town. This is as commendable as the building of new houses—taking good care of what we have.

Ruthanna, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Eckard, was taken to Johns Hopkins Hospital, last Sunday, for observation and treatment for some unusual ailment.

The Lutheran Missionary Convention, at Baust Church, on Wednesday, was attended by members of the Senior and Junior Missionary Societies of the Taneytown church.

D. J. Hesson and Walter A. Bower, representing the Savings Bank, and G. Walter Wilt, from the Birnie Trust Co., attended the Bankers' Convention at Atlantic City, this week.

A number of Taneytown folks attended the meeting under the auspices of the Lord's Day Alliance, in Westminster, Sunday afternoon. Owing to the rain, the attendance was small.

The 100-ft. smokestack at the creamery plant received a new coat of paint, on Wednesday. Ever since a man lost his life at this job, the painting of it has attracted more than usual attention.

Merrill Stouffer, of Hagerstown, is on a visit to his parents until he regains strength in his right leg, for which he was a patient at Washington County Hospital, in Dr. Walrin's care, for a case of blood poisoning.

Mr. and Mrs. Tolbert Shorb entertained the following, on Sunday: Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cashman and daughters, Virginia and Emma May, of Frizellburg; Mr. and Mrs. William Ohler and daughter, Catherine; Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Shorb and son, Paul; Mrs. Harvey Shorb, Miss Lelah Hape and Miss Irene Johnson.

A letter from Rev. C. W. Hess, of Brunswick, says: "The Potomac is quite high here and rising slowly. The C. & O. Canal is now a part of the river, the tow-path being completely covered. Houses are standing in water to the first story windows in the lowlands, and railroading is almost abandoned for the present."

As a lesson in elementary civics, a teacher in the New Oxford, Pa., schools appointed her pupils as census takers in the town. Each pupil was given a street, or portion of street with none conflicting, and a count was made of the inhabitants, resulting in a total of 1032. This seems to us a good idea—only, so far as Taneytown is concerned, a proper census should include the built up extensions outside the corporate limits.

The U. S. Army aviation service has leased land from Geo. R. Sauble, to be used as an aviation camp, and expects to begin the use of it the last of this month. The plan is said to require eight camps, likely extending from Gettysburg to Washington. The object will be observation and landing practice for planes and balloons, and will be part of the training required for airplane army service. It is likely that the use of the field represents a part of the War College instruction, including a wireless station, and if so, will be of considerable importance. The Camp will be near the baseball field.

Easy.
"Pa, what is capital?"
"The money the other fellow has, my son."

New Brooms.

Everybody is familiar with the saying, that has become a common proverb for truth, "A new broom always sweeps clean," but not so many have adopted the truth in their transactions—only in their application of it to others, when it seems to fit. The "new broom" application means only that when starting in on a new job, one is apt to do his best in every way, in order to make a good impression and to hold down a new job.

Keeping it up—keeping the "broom" at its best in point of service after the newness of the work wears off, is an all too common failure, so that we almost always expect the reaction, hence make use of the proverb before passing final judgment.

There is also something about the "new broom" that leads us to overlook its short-comings. The very newness of it makes us feel that the "sweeping" is better than it actually is, by comparison with what we have been accustomed to. Brooms, as well as their work, may be improperly estimated.

But, the best thought in connection with the proverb is, that we should accept it as truth, and so far as it refers to us, not only keep on with our clean sweeping, but improve on it.

What we term "slacker" applies too frequently to us in our occupations. The motto to remember, is, that if a job is worth doing, it is always worth doing well.

Taking still another application of the truth, in a more literal sense, we should get from it the advisability of keeping our brooms, and our various implements, new, or in good working order. The care of what we work with, their repair and mechanical efficiency, are mighty profitable considerations if we always desire to accomplish the most and best work.

No matter how we view it, "A new broom always sweeps clean," contains a great amount of homely truth for the most of us.

U. S. Postal Facts.

The Postoffice business of the United States is the largest business in the world. It uses, annually:

More than 300 tons of stationery and typewriting paper.
Nearly 4,000,000 sheets of carbon paper.

Also 175,000,000 envelopes and millions and millions of blank forms of one kind and another.

To write on this vast amount of stationery and to fill the thirsty ink bottles from New York to San Francisco. Requires 70,000 quarts of ink.

This vast ink reservoir is supplemented by hundreds of thousands of rubber stamps, while the mucilage requirements are 35,000 quarts.

In addition to all this it takes 1,620,000 lead pencils, nearly 6,000,000 steel pens, 100,000,000 paper clips, rubber bands by the ton, and 2,331,446 pounds of twine.

Nearly 12,000,000 mail sacks are used, and it requires annually 6,000,000 yards of canvas to make new ones. Other interesting figures show that the army of rural letter carriers travel daily 1,173,473 miles, and annually, 360,256,364 miles.

Fifteen and a half billion stamps and one and a quarter billion postal cards are sold yearly by the Postoffice Department to the American public.

One-tenth of the people of the United States, about twelve million persons, may "tune in" on the proceedings of the Republican National Convention at Cleveland, June 10. The proceedings will be relayed from station to station and so amplified that people on both the east and west coast may hear it.

Automobile sales—trucks and cars—dropped from 382,459 in March, to 337,000 in April. The decline was foreseen, in view of heavy production during the winter months, and the failure of the buying movement to keep pace. Unfavorable weather conditions, in April, are also supposed to have had effect on sales.
