TRUCK OPERATORS VIOLATING LAW.

Must get Permits, or Licenses will be Revoked and Refused.

The operation of motor truck lines was up for discussion before a con-ference between the Public Service Commission and the State Road Commission, this week, at which the charge was made that the state is losing fully $50,000 a year, due to the evasion of state laws by truck opera-

At the conclusion of the meeting it was announced that operators of trucks doing business without state permits will be summoned to the office of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles and warned of the laws that became effective June 1, requiring permits from the Public Service Commission for the operation of truck

Unless proper permits are secured, licenses of drivers will be revoked and 1925 licenses refused. The point at issue seems to be that trucks are hauling milk and other produce to Baltimore, and carrying freight back into the counties, thereby interfering with railroad carrying business.

A number of the motor-truck lines have applied to the commission for permits, many of which have not been granted because of objections by the railroad companies and other freight lines already holding permits.

The Adamstown School Building.

Inasmuch as the Board of County Commissioners have recommended the new school building at Adamstown, Frederick County, as of suitable size and arrangement for Taneytown, and have advanced the argument that a building erected on the same plan will meet our needs here, and cost considerably less than the building proposed, I made a trip to Adamstown, on Tuesday afternoon, to inspect the school building there, although I had seen it before, during the summer. This time I made a careful examination, and noted all the details available with respect to size, lay-out of rooms, and adaptibility for Taneytown's needs. The building at Adamstown is 70 feet wide, and a few feet longer, with feet wide, and a few feet longer, with one story and a basement, so built that the school floor is about thirteen feet out of the ground at one end of the building and nine feet out of the ground at the other end, that is, at one end, the foundation stands three feet out of the ground, and at the other end, one foot in the ground. I understand that the walls are of hollow tile, faced with brick.

The main floor is divide into four recitation rooms, each with cloak room, the full dimensions being about twenty-five feet by thirty-five feet. A twenty-five feet by thirty-five feet. A hall, to be used also as an assembly room, and twenty-five feet wide, runs the length of the building. At one end of this hall is a stage about fif-teen by eight feet. In the basement, after allowing for boiler room and toilets, is room for three more rooms. The structure appears to be well built and is neatly finished.

The use of a building of this size, however, for Taneytown, is out of the question. After the basement is floored, the clearance from floor to ceiling will not be over nine feet. Assuming however, that three rooms in the base ment could be used for regular school purposes, there will be only seve rooms in all, one less than we have now. This building at Adamstow was erected for a three room school

Taneytown for present needs, mus have eleven rooms. The contractor informed me that the cost of the building is something over twent; five thousand dollars, with the cost heating plant included. The cost finishing the basement will be from three to five thousand more.

Westminster had a midnight fire, Wednesday night, that badly damaged the meat store of Wm. F. #### GENERAL ELECTION RETURNS. Republican Victories Represent a Big Landslide.

The election returns commenced coming in, in small instalments, as early as 7:30, and from the outset the indications were favorable to the Republicans, the later returns merely adding to majorities. New York, Illinois and Ohio were soon added to the Coolidge column, while the vote in Baltimore precincts indicated that the state would be Republican. The far Western states were nec-essarily later with their figures, but the trend of public sentiment was the same there as in the east, and by 11 o'clock conceding the election of Coolidge was pretty general from New York to Chicago. The majorities by states are approximately as follows, for the three leaders:

North Dakota and New Mexico are still in the doubtful class, owing to the closeness of the vote, but are likely to land as given in the above table. The name of Bryan does not seem to be connected with national political

President Coolidge made a practical demonstration of his inclination toward economy, by mailing the votes of himself and wife back to Massachusetts. This appears to us to be a very sensible law for all states-voting by

The Ku Klux may have had some influence on the result, but it seems to have been largely confined to a few states. There was also a conspicuous absence of organized labor mass voting, unless it was included in the La Follette vote.

Rather contrary to most expectations the La Follette vote appears to have been made up of more Demo-cratic than Republican votes.

An outstanding fact in the returns, West Virginia, and Mr. Bryan lost his home state, Nebraska, both by unmistakable pluralities.

The total popular votes, as given in the papers of Thursday (incomplete) are as follows: Coolidge 15,224,688;
It has been discovered that owls Davis 7,706,786; La Follette 4,413,598 vote total is about 2,000,000 more.

The Republicans will have a clear a human being. This upsets the theory that the owl is blind in the day-time.

Donahy, Democrat, was re-elected Governor in Ohio, notwithstanding the fact that all other Republican state candidates were elected, and Coolidge's big vote in the state.

Vice-President elect, Charles G. Dawes, has made no post election statement, other than that "the re-turns speak for themselves." The day following the election he attended to business, and among other things attended a meeting of bank directors in his home town, Evanston, Ill.

Senator Magnus Johnson, of Minn., labeled as a Republican, but who always opposed the policies of his party, seems to have been defeated; while Brookhart, of Iowa, another of the same class, pulled through by a small margin. Thousands of Republicans in both districts, voted for the Democratic candidates.

Among other predictions that went wrong, regarding the election, was that even should Coolidge be elected, the Democrats were sure to make

The exact line-up in the Senate is still in doubt, but the Republicans will likely have a clear working majority without counting on any radicals or independents.

Senator Borah, Rep., of Idaho, was easily elected to succeed himself.

The Democrats elected Goldsborough, Tydings, Linthicum and Gambrill, and the Republicans, Hill and

RADIO ELECTION NEWS.

An Explanation to Listeners over their Telephones.

We regret that our Radio service by phone, on Tuesday night, was largely a failure. Between Friday night and Sunday afternoon last, something happened in the internals of our Radio that materially reduced the volume of sound. Thinking to correct it, we made a trip to a Radio specialist in Gettysburg on Monday, who failed to locate the trouble; and the wiring was gone over, on Tues-day, but reception still continued be-low par. It was sufficient for good service to those who gathered in our room, but was not strong enough to carry to phone subscribers.

On inquiring from other radioists, we learn that our experience was not very different from that of other listeners in. There was such a commo-tion in the ether caused by the acgains in Congress, and control it.

The Future of the Ku Klux.

Unless our predictions are widely at fault, we will see the end of the Ku Klux as a political factor, as well as a big fraternity, in the near future. roads. The United States is a vast country, and peopled with all of the races and conditions of mankind in the world, consequently it is probable that the Ku Klux and its propaganda will continue to exist in favorable localities, but not as a power to be reckoned with nationally.

It has not, to the best of our information, any good planks in its principles that are not already duplicated in many fraternities. It can not exist on these, and should not exist on most of the others commonly attributed to it; and we believe that it used its power during the past year somewhat effectively simply because political leaders are always nervous over the voting power of large organized units.

With the passing of this big opportunity, courage will come to its opponents who feared to exercise it during a Presidential campaign. It is too soon, as yet, to figure on the exact influence of the order on the vote in the various states; too soon to figure on whether its support was an asset, or a liability, but this will develop in good time, when the future of the organization will be more clearly didates is fit for the high honor. ### Railroad Ownership and Taxes.

Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University in a campaign address, last week, in New York, stressed three points relative to the government ownership of railroads, over which but little has been said, and especially on the last of the three main points made by him.

After the Big Battle.

Although this has been a fairly decent Presidential campaign, it has been the usual quadrennial opportunity for political extremists to use their voices and arguments to the limit, in order to win. There is very little fairness in a big political contest, in so far as giving all of the facts on a question is concerned, but it seems to be generally held that all is fair, in love, war and politics.

Men who conduct political contests, who may be fair, polite and gentlemanly in the ordinary situations in life, are apt to become bitter, unscrupulous and "fighting mad" when engaged in the heat of political battle; and after it is all over, like opposing counsel in a law suit, the spell-binders are apt to come back to normal, and even joke about some of the arguments used while the battle was on.

To make the best of it, there is very little fairness or dignity connected with even our campaigns for the Presidency. If we believe all that is said on all sides, not one of the canit "mud slinging," "muck raking," "character-lynching," "dirty politics," or just a "Presidential campaign," we must realize what the majority of The Labor Party, the "radical" parAmerican citizens are compelled to leagues insisting that the various aswade through and sift, in order to and believe the rantings of many of

The Fourteenth Amendment.

Much more than the incumbency of the customs collectorship of the report of New Orleans is affected in the application for an injunction to prevent the appointee, a Negro, assuming the duties of that office.

Grounds for the petition allege that the appointee is not a citizen of the United States, and is not eligible to citizenship, because of his African blood.

The windjammer trader is the only variance with this principle. Had not white man who finds the natives in white man who finds the natives in this change escaped attention at the time, this suit could never have been started, for by the popular vote at the time the Fourteenth Amendment, the word "white" would not have been stricken from the Constitution in the provision defining eligibility to citizenship.

The United States was a "white a political measure. Before that time, too, the question of eligibility to the franchise was a function of the state. It remained so after its adoption, until the supplemental amend-"race, color or previous condition of | mer field sport. servitude."

The attempt to force Negro suffrage in individual states failed, popular prejudice being sufficient to defeat it at the polls. Democracy was however, and the accession of millions | caused by Catarrh. of votes seemed vital. For that reason the Fourteenth Amendment was forced through. Forced, we say it without prejudice, since Michigan, for example, which refused to change its own constitution by a majority unprecedented in those days, was recorded as ratifying it, although the Legislature was elected at practically the same time, and thus reversed the expressed will of its constituents

The South, under "carpet-bag" rule, obeyed the dictum of Washington, to the number of six states, and this vote is challenged in the petition.

It is hardly to be expected that a decision favorable to the petitioners will be reached by the courts, but if it is,

Made for Each Other

In the summer of 1889 Mark Twain and Rudyard Kipling first met. Kipling, who had just begun to make his name known, was touring the world, and during the trip through the United States they went to Elmira especially to see Mark Twain. The account of the visit and interview is described by Mark Twain as follows:

Kipling'spent a couple of hours with me, and at the end of that time I had surprised him as much as he had surprised me-and the honors were even. I believe that he knew more than any person I had ever met before, and I knew that he knew that I knew less than any person he had ever met before-though he did not say it, and I was not expecting that he would-he is a most remarkable man -and I am the other one. Between us we cover all knowledge; he knows all that can be known, and I know the rest."

Famous Vice Presidents

John Adams, who received the second highest number of votes, became vice president in the first and second administrations. In the same way Thomas Jefferson was elected vice president in 1796, when Adams was elected President, and Aaron Burr took second place in 1800 when Jefferson was elected President by the house of representatives. By the twelfth amendment to the Constitution, effective September 24, 1804, the electors were instructed to ballot separately for President and vice president. George Clinton was the first man nominated and elected to the office of vice president, being elected in November, 1904, when Jefferson was re-elected President.

BREEDERS ENTITLED TO COMPLETE REST

Both the males and females in the breeding pens having fully done their duty during the summer are now entitled to a well-earned rest. It is imperative that they be permitted to fully recuperate at this time if they are to prove worthy breeders again next season. The numerous progeny disporting themselves on the range is ample proof of the past labors of the breeding birds.

This strain on the fowls that comprised the breeding pens has been no small one, so we should allow them a complete rest and provide for their every comfort. It is extremely unwise to still persist, as some do, in encouraging the fowls to keep up laying by feeding stimulating foods. The breeding birds are entitled to a good rest and the conscientious poultryman will see that they get it.

The first thing in order then, is the breaking up of the pens and the separating of the sexes. The females should by all means now be freed of the annoyance of the males. It is essential to their obtaining a complete rest. The females can now be run together and given the use of the range. A range with plenty of green stuff offers an ideal place in which the hardworked females may spend their summer vacation. Little attention need be given them, merely seeing to it that they have sufficient feed, clean, cool water, and comfortable, verminfree sleeping quarters.

The food ration of these breeders should be such as not to stimulate production. Only two meals a day need be provided, but they should be full meals. While no surplus of food is needed for egg production now, yet sufficient quantities should be provided to enable the fowls to grow their new feathers, for molting will now be in order. And the tissues, affected by the wearing labors of production, must undergo repairs at this time, and the proper food and in sufficient quantities, are essential. When the fowls have liberal range, the animal and vegetable food secured by them will benefit them greatly.

The male birds should be penned apart and given roomy pens, so they may obtain the necessary exercise. If it is possible to arrange it so the males can also have the use of the range, it will be just so much better for them. It is always good policy to take the very best of care of the male, as he is always half of the pen. We have only one male where we have ten or more females. When we lose a good male we lose half our pen and often more-very much morefor often a male as good in every respect cannot be secured to replace him. Therefore it will readily be seen that to lose a good pen header for any reason is to sustain a big loss. A little extra pains exercised in the care of our pen headers, after the breeding season is over, will be time and labor well spent. It is preferable to have small runs for each male and have the runs covered with some suitable material to protect the plumage from the sun and weather.

It is a good plan at this time to cull out the less desirable hens. With the hens kept for laying purposes only it is a good plan to cull out those that have had their second laying year. It is seldom that they prove profitable after this when kept for laying only.

Eliminate Early Molter

From All Laying Flocks The beginner with poultry soon finds that there is a time in the fall when the egg returns become very low and often it is just the time when feed bills are high and he wishes to buy all feed not raised on the farm and stack it up for winter. This period of slack production usually occurs somwhere between August first and December first, and the length of time it lasts depends on the skill of the poultryman. Why do the egg returns fall at this time? Because there are too many early molting hens in the flock which have ceased producing eggs. And the pullets are not the early hatched birds that lay in the early fall and keep it up throughout

Must Produce Eggs To be most profitable a flock must produce eggs the year around, in winter as well as summer. There is small profit in summer eggs, but when they get up to top-notch winter prices there is a handsome profit in them. The flock that does not produce a reasonable number of eggs during the period from November 1 to April 1 of each year is often kept at an actual loss for the year, as it is almost impossible to make an annual profit from the flock that lays all its eggs when the market 's sagging.

Means of Ventilation If no means of ventilation are provided it is a good plan to remove several panes of glass from the windows in the south side of the poultry house and replace with cheesecloth or unbleached muslin. Fresh air is admitted through the cloth and the stale air from the inside is permitted to escape. These cloth-covered openings do not lower the temperature of the interior of the building. Some contend that the house is warmer when arranged in this way.

Cave That Furnished Solomon With Stone

Solomon's cave, an old quarry from which the stone was taken to build Solomon's temple, is situated just outside of Jerusalem, in the hills of Judea. All that is left of the temple is the idea embodied in a model of it. On its site stands the Mosque of Omar. But the cave remains unchanged, its walls echoing voices from out the ages and bearing testimony to the foundation of a grand and glorious temple which symbolized as well as dated the foundation of the Masonic lodge, says a writer in the Christian Science Monitor.

In the early days the laws of religion and philosophy and those of architecture were very closely united in thought, and it was held that these laws were secrets to be known only to the few. The working tools of the builder became emblems of moral truth and the arts and crafts were secrets jealously guarded. There must have been a secret order of architects who built the Temple of Solomon, and who opened friendly commercial relations with foreign nations, making of the organization an international fraternity. Great material help was given by Hiram I of Tyre and the society of Phoenician architects in the construction of the temple.

When Diocletian began his reign he determined to destroy Christianity and began the persecution of all religious secret orders. For a time the builders, owing to their value and services to the state, were exempt from these laws of suppression and enjoyed special privileges, but gradually they were forced into more and more secrecy, taking refuge in caves and secluded places to hold their meetings.

Pygmy Victim of Act of Mistaken Kindness

In 1904, after the St. Louis exposition, one of the African pygmies exhibited there was stranded in New York on his way home. He finally got a job in a Coney Island restaurant, but soon lost it, and was near starvation when a person interested in his plight asked Dr. W. T. Hornaday, curator of the zoo, to give him work, says the Boston Transcript. The pygmy was set to work cleaning and tending the monkey cage, and later was promoted to the bear cage. He was happy and cheerful, but so slow that it took him half a day to clean the cage. It was not long before he became an object of greater interest than either the bears or monkeys, and an ingenious person conceived the idea of placing a sign on the front of the cage during the hours he spent there, announcing that he was a specimen of homo sapiens.

The fellow was not left untroubled long, however, for the New York Times learned of the practice and started righteous agitation against such indignity to a poor pygmy-and thus to the human race—and quickly interested the negro welfare societies. At their protest he was discharged and, after wandering southward from one ill treatment to another, he committed suicide.

Javanese Clever

The Javanese natives have a great love for music. Some of their musical instruments are very ingenious in appearance and pleasant to listen to. One of them, which is called a gamelan, is a sort of native orchestra, composed chiefly of gongs sounded in various cadences so as to produce a very sweet melody, with an accompaniment of wind and string instruments. A bamboo instrument called the anklung is also very popular. This is shaken by hand and gives forth a sprightly rhythm of which the natives are very fond. The music is played in the open air and is frequently the accompaniment to entertainments at which the age-old stories of the island are told. The Javanese also excel in work in copper and gold, although, having none of their own, they have to import their raw materials.

Bees Work Selves to Death

Honeybees turn on the heat in their apartment houses at 57 degrees Fahrenheit, says the Journal of Pharmacy. When it gets that cold, they form a compact spherical cluster.

Bees on the inside of the ball become active and walk, wiggle and beat their wings to generate heat. The outer shell of the cluster is made up of bees that cuddle close and stay still. They furnish the insulation which prevents the escape of heat so effectively that there may be 75 degrees difference between the inside and the outside only four and one-half inches

Thousands of dollars are lost to American beekeepers every year, however, by bees working themselves to death in keeping warm this way.

"Chameleon Lakes"

It is well known that the water of many lakes exhibits characteristic colors. Lake Geneva, at the western end of Switzerland, is blue, while Lake Constance, at the eastern end of that country, is green. Blueness implies purity, since the natural color of water is blue. A green lake has its water slightly clouded with impur-

It is said that green lakes sometimes become absolutely colorless for a time, and it has been found that this sudden change of hue is due to the washing into the lakes of mud colored red by oxide of iron. Red is complementary to green, and the result of the mixture is that the green color of the water becomes for the time being neutralized.

REALLY NOT HARD POINT OF "ETIKAY"

Matter of Behavior Settled to Sailors' Satisfaction.

The old sea captain and his mates were sticklers for form, a writer in the Youth's Companion remarks. In fact "etikay," as they called it, had become a mania with them. After dinner when the cloth was cleared, writes Sir Henry Robinson in "Memories, Wise and Otherwise," the captain often would send for the mates and the engineer and as we sat round the table propound hard cases on points of eti-

He used for his guide and mentor an amazing old tattered book that I sometimes think must have been intended to be comic, because it presupposed such utterly absurd situations. For example, if you were on top of an omnibus and saw a duchess in the street you could not with propriety wave your umbrella at her, no matter how well you knew her. Another thing: when dining with strangers you must not ask the butler for a toothpick at soup. There were many such "hard cases."

The captain used to rule a sheet of paper and put all our names down and award marks in accordance with our replies to the queries put. There was one that made such an impression on me that I made a pencil note of it, and I remember it to this day. We were all sitting round the table; the paper was ruled, and the captain be-

"Now, Mackay, we'll take you first. If you was walking in a field with a young lady with 'com you was but slightly acquainted, and she was to set down on the grass, what should you do?"

Mackay paused to try and imagine what his feelings and intentions would be in such a case and then replied, "I'd offer to git her a chair."

"Um, ah!" said the skipper. "Not bad, but you might 'ave to walk a couple of miles to get one, and it wouldn't look shipshape for an officer of one of Her Majesty's finest cruisers to be walking about the countryside luggin' a chair after him. However, it's a thoughtful-like thing, and I'll give you five marks. Now, Mr. Trelawney, what do you say?"

"Well," said Trelawney, "I'd argify with her agin it, and if words wouldn't move her I'd take off my coat and give it to her to sit on."

The captain thought deeply. "Well, I don't think that's the answer, but it would be a delicate kind of thing to do, and I'll give you seven. Now, Mr. Lyons, you're next."

"I'd ax the young lady for to get up and run me a race," said the plump little second mate.

"Go on!" said the skipper. "How could you expect a lady with 'oom you were but slightly acquainted to start runnin' races with a potbellied little bloke like you?"

Then after we had all offered our solutions to the hard case the skipper consulted the key at the end of the book and announced what the canons of refined society ordained as the duty of the male escort if a lady of high degree decided suddenly to sit down on "'The gentleman,'" read the skipper, "'must remain standing till the lady axes him for to sit down." "Of course, of course," said the mate; "fools we were not to have seen

Mixing the Breeds

An Indianapolis woman was the owner of a Jersey dress of which she was fond. It was beginning to show signs of wear as a result and she went shopping one day for another new dress. When her husband returned at night he asked about the dress and what kind she had bought. "Oh, after I had looked at a lot of 'em, I finally bought another Jersey one," replied the wife.

The husband apparently was disappointed. His next question was: "I'm getting tired of Jersey dresses. Why in the world didn't you get a Holstein this time?"-Indianapolis News.

"Ugly Duckling" Valued

There are 6,000 varieties of the orchid family, and they are all cherished for their exquisite beauty, but like most large families it has an ugly duckling, and the latter is most cherished of all the others, but for her homely and practical qualities rather than her beauty. The vanilla plant is an orchid and its flower is positively repulsive, but its fruit is in demand all the world over. This plant is really a native of Mexico, but it has traveled to East Africa, Tahiti and other distant places, where it is cultivated for the fruit alone.

ORANGE INDUSTRY BOOMED CENTURY AGO AT BAHIA .-About a century ago at Bahia in Brazil, a new orange appeared. The fruit was a freak, without seed. To the knowing in orange growing, however, this orange suggested much.

Nevertheless it was fifty years before William Saunders, chief of the government's propagating station in Washington, got twelve of the trees producing this fruit into the country. These died, but others were reproduced, and two trees were sent to California in 1873.

Rich in romance of its settlement, California can number these trees as two of the most important things that ever crossed the continent. They gave birth to the entire navel orange industry of the western state. Still alive today and bearing fruit, these trees are responsible for a large percentage of the groves which cover nearly 200,000 acres of California's soil.

Florida was the early center of the orange industry of the United States. It rapidly advanced to contend at home with the fruit from the Mediterranean.

Just as it was threatening invasion of the markets of Europe came the freezing winter of 1894-5. The crop failed. For the next decade it was an uphill battle to repair the loss. Confidence restored, however, the orange industry of this southern state is again on a firm basis. Louisiana's groves suffered also from the cold winter and the state has only recently come forward again.

In California a citrus industry representing more than two hundred million dollars of capital and employing nearly 50,000 people was built up. Oranges are the most important figure in it. The western state came forward to supply four-fifths of the home demand for the yellow fruit and to compete in foreign markets.-Nature Magazine.

How to Start Avalanche Avalanches are sometimes started by trivial causes. Even a whisper has been known to set them off and lives have been lost by a climber shouting to his companions when crossing a snow slope. The starting of an avalanche which a few years ago overwhelmed a caravan of sleighs in an Alpine pass was attributed to the tinkle of sleigh bells, and ever since the use of bells on this route has been prohibited. Newcomers to Switzerland often inquire what purpose is served by the little barriers dotted about the mountain slopes. These are the avalanche breakers, without which traffic on many of the Alpine lines and passes would be impossible for part of the year. It would be futile to place obstructions across the foot the track taken by an avalanche, Once the mass has gained momentum it sweeps all before it. So thick stone barriers are built on the slopes of the mountains.—Detroit News.

How Depth Is Measured

The depth of the ocean is measured by a long, thin wire, which is wound on a drum so that when wound up it is like the thread on a spool. At the end of this wire which is lowered a heavy leaden weight is attached. The ship must be perfectly still so that the wire will go direct to the bottom and not at an angle. The leaden weight pulls the wire off the spool until it hits the bottom. There is a counter arrangement on the spool which shows the number of times the lengths of the wire have been taken off the spool, and thus indicates the entire length of wire which has descended. In this way the depth of the ocean at that point is ascertained.

How an Alligator Breathes

The New York Zoological Park says that if an alligator has been in a quiet mood and the blood is well aerated and there is steady respiration, it might be possible for the animal to remain under water for half an hour's time. In hibernating these animals go into holes, where they can breathe. This is different from frogs and toads, which actually hibernate under water, but these creatures are provided with aerated blood through the skin, while the alligator is covered with scales or plates and must depend upon the

How Many Generations?

Q.-How many generations have there been since the people in the Mayflower landed?

A .- A generation is reckoned by some as thirty-three years, and by others as twenty-five years. Actually there might be quite a variation in the number of generations of descendants in the different Mayflower families. In 300 years there might be from eight to fifteen generations.

How Sixes and Sevens Started

The original form of the expression 'sixes and sevens" was "to set on six and seven." It is based on the language of dicing, and is probably a corruption of "to set on cinque and sice." being the highest numbers. The Eighteenth century.

Do-Nothing Critics of Little Value to Town

In every town there is a small group of folk who sit tight in the safe but convenient offing when a community project is under way and tell each other, or at least themselves, that "It can't be done," or that it is being done the wrong way. They never offer to help; they have no suggestions for bringing success to the project; they invariably refuse to contribute if funds are needed. But after the campaign is won, after the work is done, after the goal is attained, they rise up in noisy dissertation. They criticise the leaders. They explain how this should have been done and how that should have been handled. They know exactly what was the matter. They assure you in frank confidence that if they had been in charge the undertaking would have gone over with a bang the very first day. But they are the folk who always-without exception-are very conspicuous by their absence on the first day and on every other day until the fight is over. Their talk worries nobody because everybody knows that anybody can shoot par golf at the "nineteenth" hole. It's the man who does his best all the way from the first to the eighteenth who serves his community. Those who wait until the "nineteenth" hole to begin playing don't count, because the game is over then and the scores are all in.-Lebanon

Tribute to Home Town Both True and Clever

There are fancier towns than our little town, there are towns that are bigger than this; and the people who live in the smaller towns don't know what excitement they miss. There are things you see in the wealthier towns that you can't in a town that's small; and yet, up and down, there is no town like our own little town, after all. It may be the streets through the town are not long, they're not wide and maybe not straight, but the neighbors you know in your own little town all welcome a fellow-it's great. In the glittering streets of the glittering town, with its palace and pavement and thrall; in the midst of the throng you will frequently long for your own little town, after all. If you live and you work in our little town, in spite of the fact it's small, you'll find it a fact that our little town is the best little town, after all.—Oklahoma Wheat Grower.

Home Is Everything

The home is something more than a place to hang your hat at meal time and a convenient refuge in which to take your necessary sleep, A. A. Jeffrey of the agricultural department of Missouri wrote recently. Its daily and hourly influence-for good or bad -is the most nearly continuous and "I'll bet there's a string to it," he doubtless the most important of the said, in his world weary way. conditions silently shaping the character of your children and coloring your own outlook on the world.

To passersby a beautiful home signifies refinement; to the occupants happiness, contentment, optimism, benevolence. How important it is, then, that we make our homes as beautiful as we possibly can, with the means and ingenuity at our command, with well-kept grounds and plantings so placed as to make the home blend harmoniously with its more remote surroundings.

Menace in Unpainted Wall

An unpainted rough wall, says Doctor Gardner of the Institute of Industrial Research at Washington, is porous; moisture may be absorbed readily and retained for long periods. In these pores, organic matter and germs may easily lodge and develop. If the wall is painted, however, not only are these pores filled with paint and a rough, absorptive surface turned into a smooth, unabsorptive surface, but a painted wall can be easily and effectively washed, while the unpainted wall cannot be cleaned successfully. This is another evidence of the fact that good health is nothing but common sense. Keep your surroundings clean and neat and you will lead a healthier and a happier life than you will if you live in the midst of dirt and confusion.

Clean-Up Important

The success of a clean-up week depends largely upon the hearty co-operation and enthusiasm of the citizens. Most of those who take a pride in wanting their town to present a clean, neat and sanitary appearance at all times will lend the mayor and council a helping hand by cleaning up their premises and placing such trash as they cannot burn where it will be accessible to the trash wagon.—Leeds (Ala.) Enterprise.

Civic Pride Appealed To

Let every good citizen of Columbiana give whole-hearted co-operation to the town council in its efforts to keep the town clean. The work already done has greatly improved the appearance of the town. Now let's all work together not only to keep our town clean, but to continue to improve the appearance of things. A degree of civic pride is one of the essential elements of good citizenship. The more civic pride present form has been used since the the better citizen.-Shelby County (Ala.) Reporter.

Tropical Plants More Deadly Than Snakes. In some tropical jungles there are plants whose stings are dreaded quite as much as the bite of a poisonous snake. In Central America there is a terrible nettle which is a distant cousin of that which grows in our own hedges.

The stem, leaves and flowers are covered with long, sharp, stinging hairs, really tubes made of very brittle tissue. When one of these is touched it breaks diagonally, leaving a kind of sharp-pointed funnel.

The point penetrates into the flesh and the poison is poured into the wound from a gland in the plant.

The "cruel nettle," as the plant is called, does not often cause death, though its stings result in sores that are painful for a long time. But there are other plants in South America and in the East whose poison is so deadly that it will kill human beings in a very short time.

In every case nature has devised the sting as a protection. The plant is juicy, and but for its poisonous weapons would be eaten by insects and animals; as it is, it is allowed to grow undisturbed.

Why Cubs Wept When Hunter Killed Mother

Illustrative of family affection among bears a story was related by E. D. Crabb, associate lecturer at the Public museum, in an illustrated lecture in the museum lecture hall, at Milwaukee, Wis.

An expedition of scientists hunting bear specimens in western Canada shot a huge female grizzly. When they reached the carcass the faces of two cubs were seen staring in great surprise from among the rocks. Fearless, the tiny cubs slowly went to their dead mother. There they smelled the blood from the bear's wound and seemed to realize what had happened. For a time they stood awestruck in the presence of death. Finally their grief overcame all other emotions.

Tears welled slowly from the eyes of the cubs and soon, grief-stricken, they wept as human being would, mourning their mother. Reproachfully looking about, one of them caught the eye of the trapper who had made the killing.

The cub walked to the rock on which the hunter sat, put its forepaws on the man's knee and slowly raised its head to look into his face. Before long tears were coursing down the man's cheeks.

But it was too late. The bear mother was a specimen.-Milwaukee Jour-

Why Steak Was Tender

An uptown restaurant in New York is noted for its good steaks. They are said to be as tender as the skin you love to touch. But it happened that a skeptic heard of them-a man who had lost his faith in restaurant steaks.

ell, go and see for yourself," they told him.

So out of curiosity he went. He ordered a minute steak and attacked it eagerly. And sure enough the knife slashed through as though it mistook meat for butter.

Still he wasn't satisfied and began to examine everything. Again he took up the knife. Then it all became clear. The blade was sharp as a razor.

Now he walks past the restaurant without stopping. But inside the regular patrons, blissfully ignorant, continue to order the tender minute

On the "Plains of Abraham" The Plains of Abraham, near Quebec, overlooking the St. Lawrence river, took their name from Abraham Martin, a Canadian pioneer of Scotch descent who was a pilot on the St. Lawrence in the time of Samuel Champlain, founder of the city. By a deed authorized by Champlain himself Abraham Martin, who was affectionately known as "Maitre Abraham," obtained a homestead on the heights of Quebec. His herds of sheep and cattle grazed on the table land along the St. Lawrence, which became known among the inhabitants of the town as the Plains of Abraham.

In 1908 part of the Heights of Abraham was converted into a Canadian national park.—Detroit News.

Why Indians Are Beardless

Most Indians would have a slight to moderate growth of heard and mustache if they allowed the hair to grow. Beards are not wholly unknown. Some of the Mexican Indian's have full beards. The Guarayas, Bolivia, wear long, straight beards and the Cashibas of the upper Ucayli are bearded.

Why Mistletoe Grows High?

Mistletoe requires a great deal of sunlight. For this reason in bottom land forests of the East mistletoe is confined to the highest branches of the tallest trees, but in the intensity of sunlight in the Southwest mistletoe spreads over the entire tree.

Why Dealer Offers Box

The bureau of internal revenue says that the law states that after a cigar has been removed from the box it cannot be returned. It is, therefore, customary for a dealer to offer the box when a customer is purchasing cigars.

FROM HOLTVILLE CALIF.

PART 1.

I have thought many times of writing a letter for The Record, in the eleven years I have been in California, but I never put the thought in action. ent places any more than I do, I can chiffonier, brass clothes tree, upholassure you, and now, since I have just stered rocker, Morris chair, mahogassure you, and now, since I have just returned from a two months trip over land and sea, and before settling down to my home duties and Imperial Valley life again, the thought has come to me again to write a letter for the

First, I want to make mention of our trip which Mr. Starner and I took this summer. We left Los Angeles harbor on July 28, on the Finland steamer for New York, going by way of the Panama Canal. Our first stop was Panama, after a ten day's sail, on all smooth waters. We had several thunder storms during those ten days, but they weren't hard ones. We landed at Panama, on Aug. 6, at 7 o'clock in the morning. I was up, and looking out of our port hole and saw the Panama lights long before we landed. Later I went up on deck and watched them anchor, which was very interesting. We had from 7 o'clock until 12 o'clock at noon in Panama.

We took a sight-seeing car but hadn't gone very far until it began to rain, and it just poured down, and rained nearly all the time we were there, which made it bad for sightseeing, but with all that, we saw quite

We saw the ruins of old Panama, and out there we saw red crabs crawling all over the ground. Suppose the rain brought them out of the ground. Saw the natives traveling on pack horses and driving ox teams. Their way of traveling hasn't changed much from the original way. We saw very few automobiles in Panama, but saw them drive the real old-time carriages. We also saw some poverty looking natives' homes out around old

Panama.

The American side is Balboa, and a very beautiful place. One side of the street is Panama, and the other side is Balboa. Balboa is "dry" and Panama is "wet", and you can easily tell which is the wet side, as they are not as progressive. Our driver told us that if any one done any wrong, all they had to do was to cross the street

We left at 12 o'clock sharp, and then sailed up the canal into the Gatun lake. Entering the Canal from the Atlantic Ocean a ship proceeds up a sea-level channel seven miles to Gatun lake, where it is lifted 85 ft. by means of a flight of three locks passing thence into Gatun lake, an enormous artifically created sheet of water of 164 square miles. Gatun lake is a beautiful scenery all along on both sides. (Tropical scenery).

It took us from 12 o'clock at noon and there we found a rough sea; was rough one night and one-half day. There was some excitement on board that morning; some were seasick and others were seasick and other were seasick others were carried away with excitement of having a rough sea.

For my part, I didn't think having a rough sea, was very funny, as I was one among the ones that was seasick. I had to lay down three or four times

Cuba. We were again disappointed by not getting to Havana on time. We should have been there by 10 o'clock in the morning, but instead of 10 o'clock it was 3:00 P. M. They anchored out in the bay and a tender came over from Havana for us, and took us over. The reason they did not go into the harbor was because it cost them too much to dock.

They told us that it cost a big steamer $10,000 to go through the Panama locks. We had from 5:30 o'clock until 12 o'clock that night, at Havana, but by getting there so late in the evening we weren't able to see very much of Havana, but seeing what Give us a call before we did at night, we could easily see that it was a beautiful place.

We saw the spot where Columbus landed; was in the old Cathedral where his body lay for three hundred and eighty-one years. The driver told us that during the Spanish and Cuban war, his body was removed to some other place, but I have forgotten where he said it was. We were also in the new Cathedral which was very beautiful.

Our next stop was at New York harbor, and we were all glad to get to shore, after sailing for 16 days this being the 12th. of Aug. We left New York that afternoon for Baltimore, arriving that night between 8 and 9 o'clock.

We stayed in Baltimore that night at the Emerson Hotel. When I awakened the next morning, it seemed to me the Hotel was moving—still felt I was in the motion of the boat.

The next day being Thursday we left Baltimore for Westminster, leaving in the evening on the Blue Mountain Express, where were met by Mr. Starner's father and others.

During our stay in old Maryland we took some very nice trips. One among theme was a trip to Washington. From Washington to Mt. Vernon (George Washington's original home) where we saw George and Martha Washington's tomb, which is guarded all the time, in fact every thing is under guards there. MRS. R. S. STARNER. (We will give the account of the return trip—which is more lengthy than the above—in our issue of next week .- Ed. Record).

After Elizabeth and I were married we did not abandon our habit of making country excursions on Saturday afternoons. We always looked forward to the day when we should have a country home of our own. When we set forth we took the trolley car into the least urban part of the country, and then struck out across the fields.

It is strange how long one can repeat such journeys without ever repeating one's route. It must have been a year after we were married that we found ourselves in a little unknown village, looking at an ivy-clad Walls wreathed in ivy are plentiful enough, but not like this one. For ivy is usually planted at the side of a house. But there was no house here, nor ever had been-only the wall, rising from its foundation in the middle of a field.

"Looking at Old Michael's Folly, eh?" asked a voice behind us.

We started, Elizabeth and I, for we had not seen the speaker approaching us. He stood still, looking meditatively at us. He was a typical country man, shrewd, somewhat uncouth, evidently gossipy.

"You didn't notice that brick cottage as you came along the pike, did you?" he inquired. "That's Old Michael's place. Born there, he was, and I reckon he'll die there. Old, we call him, though he can't be more than forty-two or three. But he's Old Michael to us ever since Pansy Strother run off with that worthless Luke Buf-

"You see, Michael and Pansy had known each other since they was kids togther, and folks around here allowed that they'd get married some time. Michael worked powerful hard. on his farm, and had saved a tidy bit of money by the time he was twentyfive. Pansy was twenty then, the sweetest, prettiest girl in the village. They were to have been married that

"Pansy wasn't like us. Had a sort of hankering after flowers and things. She always wanted an old house to live in-the sort of house that has old-fashioned clapboards and dormer windows, y'know.'

Elizabeth stole a glance at me, and I felt her hand tighten in mine. For we have always wanted a house like that, and, some day, we meant to get

"Well, Michael didn't rightly understand her point of view, but he'd have done anything Pansy told him to. So, as she was particularly set on an old house, he determined to make the oldness before he built the house. So he dug a foundation trench and set up that wall there, and planted English' ivy against it.

"'We'll have four walls up anyway, Pansy,' he told her, 'and then when we can afford to build the ivy will be grown up to the top and waiting

"He'd just got one wall up and set out the ivy plants when Luke Buffum. come along. He was traveling for some firm or other, and he made this his headquarters. He was a flashy city man, and it didn't take him long To spot Pansy as the prettiest girl in these parts.

"Michael? What chance would a. slow, steady-going old fellow like Michael have with a snake like that Luke around? There, I'm calling Michael old again. He wasn't then, but he has been ever since she ran away with Luke. Married? Bless you, yes, friend; Pansy wasn't that kind. But we found afterward that he had a wife and child in Buffalo, and she left him-and that was 18 years ago. But Old Michael's Folly has been standing like that ever since that day. Hush! That's him, coming along the pike!"

We turned and watched the stalwart, slightly bent figure that came trudging down the road. The word "old" well described it. Some men are old at forty, as others are young at seventy, and this man was of the former.

"Dear," whispered Elizabeth to me as we turned homeward, "it almost makes me feel we don't deserve our happiness."

"My happiness," I answered; and then, seeing that the road was clear, I kissed her.

We had almost forgotten the incident by the next summer. We had been married two years then, and there was a reason why our home ought to materialize that year. We were still looking for it. Yes, and we were still discovering new villages with quaint old houses within an hour's ride of the metropolis. It was not easy to find the home of our dreams, and we were almost coming to believe that it would never reveal itself, when we came one day upon a village street which seemed somehow familiar to both of us. "Dear," said Elizabeth, laying her hand upon my arm, "don't you remember now? That red brick cottage-"

"Old Michael's!" I exclaimed. Then we remembered everything, and we went on quite quickly to see whether the old wall was still stand-Ing. It was-but three other wails sooocoocoocoocoocoo | had been added to it, each with ivy | plants at the base, and a shingled roof completed what was really a charming fittle house. Rose bushes, freshly set out, were beginning to bloom in the garden, and a man was at work in a potato patch near the gate. He turned as we drew near, and we recognized the man who had told us about old Michael.

He did not recognize us, of course, but he was just as gossipy and ready for a chat as ever. He came toward us, dragging his hoe behind him.

"Kind of hot today, ain't it?" he said, running the back of his hand across his dripping forehead.

"So the house is built, at last," I said in answer. "Did Old Michael sell you the property?" He nodded and smiled. "Ah, so you was the couple as was here last year," he said. "I've often thought of you since then, because, you see, it wasn't but a week later that she come back." "What!" I cried. "Pansy?" "Aye, Pansy. Eighteen years it must have been she'd been away in the city, working in some office there. Yes, and she'd riz and riz, too, till she had become quite an important person there. And then, having saved up a few thousand dollars, what does she do but come back to buy the old

"And did he sell it?" asked Elizabeth, quite breathless.

"Not a bit of it," answered our friend. "It was strange, her coming home just after I'd had that talk with you. I thought to myself, 'always humor inquisitive folks and talk with them, because it means good luck."

"Well! The idea!" exclaimed Elizabeth indignantly. "Old Michael had been working late that evening, because it was mid-June and the light was strong. He came back about eight o'clock. I was passing his house when I saw a woman coming along the road. It was her! I knew her in a minute. So did Old Michael. I was curious then, I tell

"She come along and stood there, staring at him, and he stared back, but there wasn't anything but hate in his look. Then, all at once-I don't know how it happened, but I heard a sort of sob-I don't know which one sobbed-and they were holding each other tight and crying and kissing. And Old Michael didn't look old any more, nor doesn't now. And-they live here now. I work for 'em. Rich they are, and-there's a baby come last

"So what I say is, next time a gossip comes along I'm a-going to treat him kindly, because they do bring luck with 'em; there's no doubt about

"Well!" gasped Elizabeth again, "Dear," I said, as we started homeward, "I think we shall have to build that house of ours after all."

"But it shall not take us eighteen years to build it," I answered her. I saw by the look in her eyes that she understood me. For our house of love was built already. Samoan Chiefs Build

Their Own Sepulchers

Many Samoan chiefs have built their sepulchers to be certain of a comfortable and becoming resting place, says the Detroit News. A Samoan chief sometimes desires to review his furites. He first selects and appoints his successor in titles and assures himself that after his death there will be no opposition to the new chief from members of the family. Preparations for the death ceremonies then are made. The retiring chief goes through a figurative death, looking on at the tribal mourning and feasting. The Samoans show great reverence for their dead. The ceremonies attending the death of even a person of low rank are elaborate. The relatives go to great expense in buying foreign food, such as kegs of salt beef, cases of canned beef, tins of salmon and hard bread to supplement the supply of native pigs.

A Useful Lesson

"So you have sent your boy to college?" remarked Binks, as he encountered his friend Jinks in the street.

"Yes," was the abrupt answer. "But you used to say that a college education didn't count for anything. Have you changed your mind?"

"Yes," was the reply, more abruptly than ever. "Since when?"

"Since he went to college." "Well, what does a college education teach a boy that is really practical?" "It teaches a boy's father how to take care of his money."-London Tit-

Wonderful Sand Dunes

The sand dunes of San Isabel are the largest inland traveling sand dunes in the United States and perhaps in the world. They are among the strangest curiosities of our West, rivaling the historic sand wonders of Egypt and the Sahara.

They are 12 by 14 miles in area. Many of the dunes are 800 by 1,000 feet high. They shift continually, and are an awe-inspiring sight. The dunes of the Sahara are usually 60 or 70 feet high, though in some parts they are said to attain a height of 300 feet.

Electricity in Sweden Sweden boasts of many important industries. The country possesses immense iron and steel works, sugar mills, iron mines, pulp and paper mills, machine factories and the world's greatest match industry. Even the agricultural and dairying operations are carried on in a business-like way and more than 50 per cent of the rure! district is electrified.

Famed Navigator Gave Name to Mont Royal

In the late summer of 1535, Jacques Cartier, a hardy, skilled navigator of St. Malo, France, sailed up the St. Lawrence river and reached the island standing at the junction of the St. Lawrence and Ottawa rivers. On this island he found a race of Indians in a palisaded town of about 1,500 inhabitants, and living by a rude agriculture and fishing. This place was called Hochelaga. On the day following his arrival at the island, Cartier, with a few companions and twenty mariners, left his boats and, conducted by three natives, visited the town, which stood on rising ground about half a mile from the river at about what is now the center of the city of Montreal. Cartier saw on all sides large and fairly well-tilled fields in which were growing abundant crops of maize or Indian corn. The town was fortified, and it contained about 50 houses made of wood and bark. From the town the visitors were conducted to the top of the mountain which rose to the west of the town. "We named that mountain Mont Royal," wrote Cartier, in his account of his travels. "Therefrom one sees

The name "Mont Royal" with slight corruption gives us the name of today, Montreal. The old name, Hochelaga, is preserved in the name of one of the wards of the city.

Slow Poisons in Tea

When Improperly Made A slow and deadly poison can result from the incorrect brewing of tea, whereas, it is a harmless and pleasant beverage if certain rules are adhered to, explains a scientist in the Baltimore

Its stimulating effects are due to the presence in tea leaves of a powerful drug called theine. If the pot is not allowed to stand too long, only a small quantity of this substance is dissolved out of the leaves by the hot water, and the tea refreshes us without doing any harm. When the teapot is allowed to remain for hours on the stove, an excessive quantity of theine is extracted from the leaves, together with a larger amount of another semipoisonous substance known as tannin.

These two together form a real poison, affecting the nerves, the digestion and the general health. Stewed tea is almost as harmful as opium or cocaine. The habit of taking it in this way is soon formed, and the tea drunkard thinks nothing of consuming 20 or 30 cups a day.

Resented Insinuation

Jake Simpson's middle girl, Elsie, the one that's been brought up in the city, came down to Oak Holler the other Sunday to look over her Uncle Eb Simpson's farm and it seems that Eb got real het up over her visit and bundled her right off to town

Eb ain't talkin' none, but somehow the story got out anyhow. It seems Eb was showin' Elsie the farm critters and sech when they come on Eb's yaller cat and her litter of kit-

"Oh, Uncle Eb, those kittens are all different colors," says Elsie. Eb draws himself up as straight as he can, him havin' the rheumatism, and almost chokes on his chaw of tobaccer.

"Well, young lady," he says. "Don't you try to cast no reflections. I'll say this much. Ma and me've tried to bring our cats up right."-Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Curiosities of Smell

No substance that refuses to dissolve in water has an odor. It is the actual substance itself, floating in the air, that appeals to the nose and not simply a vibration of the air, as in the case of light and sound, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The damper a thing is the more powerful odor it gives off. A pleasant proof of the fact can be had by walking in a garden after rain. There is no end to the curiosities of smell. It is, for example, the vapor of a liquid that smells and not the liquid in the mass itself. If eau de cologne be poured into the nostril the nose refuses to recognize any odor there at all.

Knew Feminine Weakness There was a canvasser at the door

trying to sell Mrs. Higgins a burglar "But I don't need any of your burglar alarms," she told the man, making as if to shut the door.

"That's just what the lady next door said," was the reply. "What do you mean?" asked Mrs.

Higgins, now on the alert. She hated "that woman." "She said that it was no use my calling on you," went on the man, "for you wouldn't need any, as you had nothing worth stealing." "Give me three," interrupted Mrs. Higgins, gritting her teeth.

Human Instep Tells Story

Man only of the larger primates has retained the long primitive instep bone in spite of his large body development. As the bulk of the body developed science might suppose that the instep would shorten. This human development is accounted unusual in view of the development of apes and similar bipeds, but is partially explained in that man used his heel and foot as he now does, even before his body began to assume large proportions, and this Indicates that originally humans were short of stature, but accustomed to

Pays to Build Well; Use Lasting Material

In these days when building costs so much more than formerly it is doubly important to get one's money's worth in good substantial material that will last. It is far better to build a house of good material and add to it later than to build a larger house of flimsy construction for the same money with cheap trimmings and material that will not last.

The life of a cheaply built house is seldom more than 35 years; by that time the amount of repairs it has required to keep it standing is almost equal to the cost of rebuilding it. There are many houses of masonry in this country which are more than 100 years old, and in Europe there are many more which have been standing for more than 500 years. Most of these houses are giving good service today.

Good construction does not deteriorate or depreciate. Get a good concrete foundation and a good cellar wall of concrete or concrete block. When you get up to the ground level it costs very little more to carry the same construction to the roof line. A more beautiful type house construction than good concrete block walls covered with Portland cement stucco or special concrete cement faced units cannot be obtained. A wall of stucco or concrete facing does not require frequent mending and repairing.

A cheaply built house will sway, sag and settle, but a house with masonry walls is rigid, so that the plastering will not crack, floor joints will not open, doors will not jam and the house will not settle.

Extension Work Has

Had Splendid Results Improvement in the appearance of the grounds and surroundings of farms and homes in the Southern states is receiving increased attention as a result of extension work in those states by a horticultural specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture, according to reports received by the department. For example, as a result of such work 6,925 fences were repaired in 1921 and 4,436 in 1922; 3,484 unsightly buildings were repaired or removed in 1921 and 3,523 in 1922. The number planting trees and shrubs rose from 8,308 to 26,313; of those planting flowers and vines, from 42,396 two years ago to 48,437 in 1922; of lawns seeded, from about 1,6060 to 2,600. More than 45,000 planted shade trees and shrubs last

In some of the states, particularly in North Carolina and Mississippi, the improvements are very marked. Girls' and women's clubs have been active in stimulating interest in making the home surroundings more pleasing, and the beneficial effect upon communities generally has been very marked.

Paint and Sale Value

A carefully considered investment in paint-good paint-is like putting money in the bank. It not only greatly improves the outward appearance of the home but also adds much to its sale value.

There is another thing to consider when you are thinking of paint as an investment. No matter what your house is built of, without several coats of the best paint it will quickly depreciate in

Without the proper amount of paint for protection as well as beauty, the moisture will cause tiny fissures, which will soon become long and unsightly cracks. The boards will warp and the joints will open up.

You wouldn't consider it economy to buy a cheap, shoddy suit of clothes; neither is it economy to buy any but the very best paint it is possible to get. -Indianapolis Star.

Fertilizers

The use of fertilizers is an absolute necessity if one would keep his lawn and shrubbery in a healthful condition. The vegetation requires a certain amount of plant food which must be supplied to the ground and the only manner in which this can be done is through the application of fertilizing material. Commercial fertilizers which are complete and carry all the elements necessary are most excellent means of carrying out this condition, but it is necessary that one exercise considerable caution in the application or they are liable to injure the lawn and shrubs through burning caused by too much fertilizer. It is better to use too little than too much. Immediately after using this type of fertilizer the ground should be thoroughly wet in order to wash the material from the plants and into the DWIN L. DRAKE, in 1856, was forced to resign as conductor on the New York & New Hav opportunity to work in the open, he took his family to Titusville, Pa., in 1857, with orders to bore an artesian well for Oil. The president of his company began writing to him as "Col." Drake to increase the latter's importance in Titusville, and the name clung to him. ¶ Drake started happily, but as time went by and his funds grew lower drilling became increasingly difficult. Finally, Saturday afternoon August 28th, 1859, the well had been drilled to a depth of 69 feet, and the workmen "laid off" till Monday. Sunday afternoon Uncle Billy Smith, one of Drake's companions, visited the well, and to his amazement he found Oil rising in it. Next day the well began pumping 20 barrels a day, and the news flew around the world. The first well bored intentionally for Oil had been a success!

Lesson for November 9 THE FEEDING OF THE FIVE

THOUSAND

LESSON TEXT—John 6:1-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—I am the bread of life.—John 6:35. PRIMARY TOPIC-Jesus Feeds Hungry People.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Feeds Five Thousand.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC—Christ Meeting Human Needs.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC—How Jesus Saves.

In the previous chapter, Jesus showed Himself to be the source of life. He here proves Himself to be the sustainer of life.

I. Jesus' Compassion for the Multitude (vv. 1-5. cf. Matt. 14:14). The sight of the crowd always incited the Lord's sympathy. He knew that they were as shepherdless sheep (Mark 6:34). They were going forth with no one to care for them. Besides, they were ignorant, so much so that they had no appreciation of Him. Added to this, was their awful physical hunger. This condition roused the Savior's pity. This is true of the multitude today. The crowd surges about us daily as shepherdless sheep. There is no one to care for them. Then, too, they are ignorant. Sin has so thoroughly blinded them that they are not conscious of their lost condition. Down deep in their hearts is a hunger for truth and God. The millions of earth are hungering for Christ, though ignorant of their real needs.

II. The Lord's Conference With the Disciples Touching the People's Need

This was not done for His benefit, for He knew what He would do (v. 6). He is equal to any occasion. His object in this conference may be summed

1. To teach them their sense of obligation to the multitude. Men are slow to recognize their obligation to the great shepherdless multitude. We need to be taught the wonderful truth that God has made man His partner in the salvation of the world. We are workers together with God (II Cor. 6:1). It is a most solemn obligation to co-operate with Him in saving the millions who are groping in dark-

2. To teach them their true helplessness in the face of such great needs. The loaves and fishes were as nothing in the presence of five thousand men besides women and children. Well might Andrew exclaim, "What are these among so many?" We may plant and water, but the increase comes entirely from God.

3. To teach them that their sufficiency is from the Lord. The mission worker needs to know that Christ is the only source of supply. Without Him we can do nothing (John 15:1-8). We can no more carry on the work ourselves than the branch can bear fruit without the vine. The branch supplies the life and strength for the production of fruit. Philip's arithmetic is of no use in the face of such need. The Lord Jesus has all power. III. The Lord's Method of Accomplishing His Work (vv. 10-13). We observe here the orderliness of thanks for their scanty supply, teaching us that we should always bring Christ's work. He pauses to give our abilities and gifts to God, that He might bless them to His use. 1. The Lord's part was to bless and break the bread; yea, even to create the needed supply. This part the disciples could not perform. The Lord must begin the work. The same kind of bread was provided for all, rich and poor, young and old, women and children.

2. The disciples' part was to distribute that which He had blessed and consecrated. This is true of the missionary today. His part is to take from the hands of the Lord that which He has blessed and consecrated, and distribute it among the starving multitudes. We are not responsible for the supply; but we are responsible for its distribution to all those who are hungering and perishing for the bread of life.

3. The people's part was to sit down and eat. They had no part in the provision, neither its distribution; but only to take from the hands of the disciples and eat. This is an illustration of the part obedience plays in our salvation. "When all had eaten to the full, much was left," illustrating the superabundance of Christ's salva-

IV. The Effect (v. 14).

The people recognized Him at once as the Prophet who should come. They believed Him for His works'

November 9 Stewardship: Our Ability for Christ Matthew 25:14-30

Our Scripture lesson presents three parables, all of which were spoken for one purpose, namely, to teach disci-ples of Christ the necessity of being ready for His return.

The first parable, Matthew 24:45-51, deals with the careless servant whose attitude of heart finds expression in the words, "My Lord delayeth his coming." In an unexpected moment his Lord returns to the confusion and loss of that professing servant. The parable of the ten virgins which immediately follows has the same purpose in view. This is succeeded by the third parable comprised in the Scripture verses given for this topic—Stewardship and Our Ability for Christ

The best possible preparation for intelligent understanding and discussion of this whole matter of stewardship may be obtained by the quiet, thoughtful reading of this complete section of Scripture containing these three parables. Our Lord is "as a man traveling into a far country" (v. 14). He frequently refers to Himself in this way (Luke 19:12). He has delivered unto us His goods in trust—His name, His kingdom, His church, His interests, are committed and entrusted to His redeemed and believing people. Not all have the same measure of ability and not all sahious the same measure of results. achieve the same measure of results. When the man from the far country returned his commendation was given for faithfulness in service. A one-talent man can be as faithful as a tentalent man, although he may not accomplish as much.

Faithfulness in stewardship largely depends upon the attitude of heart and life toward Christ. Every servant of Christ should learn to say with Paul, "As much as in me is, I am ready." One cannot say more, and should not say less. It involves readiness for all that is involved in stewardship, separation, sacrifice and service, all of which are expressions of faithfulness to the commission of our This is the spirit that God can bless. This blessing so enriches and suffices that the Christian believer en-ters into the experience of the apostle who said, "I can do all things through Christ who strengthens me.

Mongolia's Wild Dogs Fiercer Than Wolves

are about to die that evil spirits enter the body, according to Mr. Roy Chapman, leader of the American Museum Asiatic expedition.

The bodies, once death has occurred, are placed on carts, driven over the roughest possible ground, and during the journey thrown off, to be devoured by wild dogs. These dogs are doubtless the fiercest creatures in the world. They are indeed terrible, and were a constant menace to the lives of the members of the expedition.

No member, said Mr. Chapman, went out of the camp unless armed with revolver and knife. No one in Urga, the Mongolian capital, dares to go through the meat market at night. They would be seized and killed within a minute if they ventured to do so.

The members of the expedition on at least three occasions came within an ace of death from these animals. Prof. Charles J. Berky, the chief geologist, was attacked on the first occasion by three dogs, and would have been killed had he not had his revolver handy. He killed the leading dog and wounded the other two, but they still leaped to the attack.

"That so?" replied Farmer Fumblegate, who had just returned from Bigville. "Inside or outside talent?"

Wrong to Think Small

Town Not Up to Date

Many city people labor under the delusion that rural communities are not "up" on the latest styles, labor-saving appliances, novelties, etc., the Pathfinder Magazine remarks. The truth of the matter is that the rural housewife now reads all about the latest styles in the fashion magazines; with true feminine instinct she notes the dress of visitors and parties of autoists passing through the town. Extending the franchise to women has made them full-fledged citizens. The community store has to keep abreast of the times. It can no longer pass off old dress models on the knowing woman. The same thing applies to other merchandise. Nowadays the farmer is too wary to have old stuff passed off on him; he wants the newest and the

The radio is a big factor in knitting the rural community and the city in closer bonds of friendship and mutual understanding and helpfulness. It places the country resident on a par with the most favored citizen in regard to recreation and general culture. These and other factors are helping eradicate once and for all the farfetched notion which once maligned the country man. In effect, the country is one ingredient, the city another; each is indispensable and together they make a perfect combination.

New American Homes Show Better Designs

It is indeed gratifying to note the tendency of architects and builders to get away from the uninteresting; boxlike houses, giving us instead homes that at least have some semblance of architectural merit. While the public has not yet entirely signified its full appreciation of good architecture, the newer houses in both the cities and suburban communities give evidence of a leaning toward better design.

American small house architecture is steadily mounting to higher levels, which marks a distinct achievement, not only in the cultural life of the people but in the finest qualities of Good architecture, like good examples of any other art, is eternally good. It is in no way dependent upon changing fancies. The surface currents of public disapproval cannot long persist against the truth that is inherent in good architecture. There were periods when types of Colonial architecture, if not in public disfavor, were at least disregarded, but because they measured up to the best standard of the art they have always commanded the approval of the discerning and have never been more strongly intrenched in public favor than today.

Beauty Spot Appealed

Years ago a way-station agent of a railroad traversing the plains of the Canadian Northwest, sent back home for a few packages of flower seed and with such time as he could spare transformed the surroundings of his mean little one-room station. Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the road, was making a tour of inspection and when he reached this little garden spot in the then uncultivated wastes, he asked to see the boy and learned from him the story of his garden. As a result, the next year all the agents of this road-which stretches from the Atlantic to the Pacific—received packages of seeds and instructions to plant flowers around every station. The custom then begun has ever since continued.

Plant More Trees

Most cities and even some small towns, especially new towns, are apt to be pathetically treeless, and towns do need trees more and more as their population increases, Jane Leslie Kift writes in the Detroit Free Press.

Have you ever thought about the walls of the factories of your town? They looked rather well in the Pennell war posters, but some hot June day as you walk down a street skirted on both sides by monotonous brick walls, don't they seem oppressive? Don't you think that if the same walls were blanketed with green they would be more restful and more beautiful?

Beauty Easily Attained

It is remarkable the comparatively short period necessary to convert bare grounds into splendld settings of foliage and blooms when good judgment is used in the selection of plants. Many houses built only a few years ago that lack the beauty the modern community. demands can at little cost be given the atmosphere of privacy and the mark of individuality that can come only from the completion of the house set-

Paint has a curious effect. Many an architectural eyesore has been entirely changed within the space of a few days and has become as asset instead of a liability to the community and its owner. On the other hand many an architectural masterpiece has been ruined beyond hope of repair by lack of paint used at the right time.

LAST PAGE EDITORIAL. The Result of the Eelection.

The election of President Coolidge demonstrated the correctness of the preponderance of advance forecasts, as almost from the beginning of the returns there was no doubt of the outcome. The Democratic party nev-er recovered from its stormy convention. While the Republican convention was criticised for its tameness, it would have been vastly better for the Democrats to have had one more on the same order, as Mr. Davis never received anything like the united support and enthusiasm that the party nominee was entitled to receive.

Besides, while Mr. Davis was high-class lawyer and all around man of ability, he was not a magnetic campaigner, and not enough a professional politician to arouse an energetic, united party following. In addition, he made a mistake in the selection of Charles W. Bryan as his running mate. The surface view that this was "good politics," was incorrect. The party would have been stronger with two conservatives, and especially with a vice-presidential candidate of known Nation-wide ability.

Mr. Bryan and Senator La Follette appealed largely to the same classes of voters, and the latter was the strongest in his leadership. The result was that Davis lost a large portion of the conservative vote in his own party, and did not gain from the radical elements. As the line-up stood, Coolidge and Dawes appeared to represent National safety and business prosperity, and the least uncertainty, and the country so decided.

The Republicans had troubles of their own, but on the whole were better organized, and appealed more to the big conservative, or independent vote of the country, and to the factclaims to the contrary notwithstanding-that the Harding-Coolidge term, full of difficulties and complex situations as it was, was a good public administration of big affairs.
