

DID NOT VIOLATE VOLSTEAD ACT.

Ruling by Judge Soper may have a Widespread Effect.

Judge Soper, of Baltimore, has made a ruling during the John Philip Hill case, that may have a far-reaching effect, if not over-ruled by higher courts. He says that cider, or wine, made for home use only, must be actually "intoxicating in its effect," regardless of the percentage of alcohol it contains, before the manufacture of the same becomes illegal under the Volstead Act.

That it was evidently the intention of Congress permit the manufacture of cider and fruit juices in homes, of a non-intoxicating character, and that the maker has a right to introduce evidence that said beverages are not intoxicating in fact, irrespective of their alcoholic content.

If this decision stands, then the old question of when actual intoxication exists, will be a matter to determine in each case. As Dr. Kelly testified, during the hearing, some men not accustomed to drinking liquors could easily become intoxicated on Mr. Hill's 2.70 percent cider, while others might not.

There would also be left open the temptation to make all sorts of concoctions "for home use" which would not be as unobjectionable as pure wine, or cider; and the evidence as to its character would also be "home made" and there would never be any convictions under it. It is also a well known fact that "home-brew" and illicitly made liquors, are infinitely more harmful in their effect on body and brain, than liquors made by regular distillers and brewers. Judge Soper's decision in part is as follows:

"The question for decision is whether the defendant, admitting that he manufactured cider containing more than one-half of 1 percent, of alcohol by volume—that is, admitting it for the purpose of this decision, but contending that it was made exclusively for use in his own home, may offer evidence to show that the cider was in fact not intoxicating.

While the question is not free from doubt, in my opinion—such evidence may be offered. The determination of the question depends upon the construction of certain provisions in Title 2 of the National Prohibition Act. The doubt arises from the fact that Congress seems to have used the word "intoxicating" in a different sense in one section than that employed in another.

Section 1 defines intoxicating liquor to include, among other things, any fermented liquor containing one-half of 1 percent of alcohol by volume which is fit for use for beverage purposes. It is well settled that for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the Eighteenth Amendment Congress had the power to establish this standard.

Section 3 of the act makes an offense for any person to manufacture any intoxicating liquor except as authorized in the act.

Section 29 specifies the penalties for violation of the act and concludes with the following sentence: "The penalties provided in this act against the manufacture of liquor without permit shall not apply to a person for manufacturing non-intoxicating cider and fruit juices exclusively for use in his home, but such cider and fruit juices shall not be sold or delivered except to persons having permits to manufacture vinegar."

The Government contends, and its contention is not without some force, that the words "non-intoxicating cider," which a person may manufacture in his own home must be construed with reference to the definition of the term "intoxicating liquor," given in the first section—to wit, that it shall not contain as much as one-half of 1 percent, or more of alcohol by volume.

But it is obvious that by the concluding sentence of Section 29 of the act Congress intended that persons manufacturing non-intoxicating cider for use in their homes and not for sale should be in a class by themselves at least in some particulars, otherwise the sentence has no meaning or use whatsoever. If it was intended to punish manufacturers for manufacturing cider in their own homes which contains more than one-half of 1 percent of alcohol by volume there was no necessity for the provision for the act without the sentence already provided such punishment.

The only reasonable explanation for singling out home manufacturers of cider for special mention in this section, to my mind, is that Congress did not intend to subject them to the strict provisions as to the alcoholic content of the product specified in Section 1, but intended to prohibit the manufacture of cider for home use which should be in fact intoxicating. If the section is so interpreted, then there is a reason for its insertion in the act.

The case went to the jury Wednesday afternoon. Judge Soper charged the jury to dismiss the fifth and sixth counts, accusing Hill of maintaining a nuisance, and that the definitions of the word "intoxicating" given by Dr. Howard A. Kelly and Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, should be ignored, they having testified that cider with 2.70 percent alcohol was intoxicating. His charge was lengthy, and was to the effect that the jury should give to Mr. Hill all reasonable doubt.

The jury, after being out 17 hours returned a verdict of "not guilty" of the charges wherein he stands indicted.

TANEYTOWN CHAUTAUQUA.

A Fine Program is Promised December 6th. to 9th.

As stated in a former issue of the Record the Chautauqua for Taneytown will be held in the Opera House, December 6 to 9 inclusive. An enjoyable and instructive program is promised, and it is hoped the public will patronize it liberally. The price of season tickets for the six entertainments is $2.00; Children's tickets, (6 to 14 years inclusive) $1.00 each.

There will be a meeting of the guarantors to make necessary arrangements, Saturday evening, Nov. 15, at 7:30, at Public Library. It is hoped there may be a full attendance.

The list of guarantors is as follows: John E. Davidson, Robt. S. McKinney, Geo. H. Birnie, W. M. Mehring, Mrs. W. A. Bower, D. J. Hesson, Wm. E. Ritter, Lavina Fringer, Anna Galt, Amelia H. Annan, Jacob D. Null, Clyde L. Hesson, Robt. W. Clingan, Mrs. C. E. Dern, Mrs. Cora Riffle, C. E. Ridinger, Geo. A. Arnold, Harry L. Feeser, Mrs. Curtis Bowers, O. T. Shoemaker, Mrs. Ida Landis, C. M. Benner, M. D., J. H. Lentz, W. A. Morelock, Mrs. H. B. Miller, Chas. F. Cashman, M. L. Reindollar, Vesta Elizabeth Zepp, W. Wallace Reindollar, J. L. Hunsberger, John C. Shreeve, J. A. Angell, T. Dewey Ritter, Wm. F. Bricker, O. D. Sell, Jennie E. Galt, Chas. B. Kephart, Geo. W. Baker, G. Wilbur Shipley, B. Walter Crapster.

"An Ounce of Prevention."

Most of the accidents could have been prevented by an ounce of prevention. A large proportion of our illnesses and early deaths could have been avoided by an ounce of prevention. The death rate in infants is higher than any other group of people. It is more dangerous to be a baby than to be an automobile racer, or a trick flyer in an aeroplane. We have to do all the thinking for the baby and young child and it is very important that we do this wisely and safely.

If the baby does not cry it is usually taken for granted that there can not be anything the matter. This unfortunately is not always true, and sometimes the baby does a great deal of crying and there is nothing the matter but bad management. It is a great mistake to load these little people up with all kinds of soothing syrups and patent medicines.

Arrangements have been made to have a baby specialist come to the several parts of Carroll County to help the parents to find out just the condition of the children of pre-school age. The object of these meetings is not to treat sick children, but to try to keep children from being sick. He will be glad to have doctors present with patients, or if the doctors do not have such cases on hand at the time, he would like them to come any way to get his method of work.

These conferences are to be entirely free. That is quite a different story than would be the case if you found it necessary to go to a specialist's office or have him come to your home. These conferences have been held and well attended in several parts of the county to date.

There will be one for the Taneytown section on Saturday, Nov. 15, at 2:00 P. M., in the Firemen's Building. Everyone is welcome.

Poultry Culling Demonstrations.

A very interesting and helpful Poultry Culling demonstration was given at the home of Mrs. James Bailey November 6. Mrs. Bailey has Rhode Island Reds. Mr. Fuller showed the men and women present how to cull the pullets for layers and the hens for breeders. He compared the different types of birds and showed how to cull each type. This demonstration was the regular meeting of the Hillsdale Homemakers Club.

A poultry culling demonstration was held in Warfieldsburg, November 12, at the home of Mrs. Weldon Duvall. This also was a Homemakers Club meeting. Mrs. Duvall has some fine Rhode Island Reds.

The purpose of these demonstrations is to teach the farmer and his wife how to cull their pullets for egg production and their hens for good breeders. This will increase the profits from poultry and produce better birds. If you wish a culling demonstration in your community, ask either Mr. Fuller or Miss Cobb and a date will be arranged for the demonstration.

Extension Service News.

A very good Community Show was held at Mt. Airy the 7th. Although the annual event was postponed the last two years because of lack of room, the quality and selection of exhibits still show the results of the previous shows.

One of the features of this year's show was the B. & O. poultry club show. Some very fine birds were shown. The White Plymouth Rock eggs were the Fischel strain secured from Mr. Fischel in Ind. Pens and individual pullets and cockerels were shown. Sarah Grace Null, Taneytown walked away with all three first prizes. Lillian Barnes second pen, Carl Cornheim third; Erman Wills, second pullet; Carl Dorheim, third; Erman Wills, second cockerel.

The B. & O. is to be commended for the interest they are taking in helping Boys and Girls get started in the poultry business. Mr. McBride, Agricultural Instructor at Mt. Airy has been acting as local leader for this club.

MUST REMOVE COLORED LIGHTS.

Only White Lights Must Show in Front of Autos.

State Motor Vehicle Commissioner Baughman says green and red lights on the front fenders of automobiles must be removed from cars traveling in Maryland or the owners of the cars will be fined.

He explained that these colored lights, which only recently have been made part of the equipment of some cars, are confusing and dangerous to motorists, as it is apt to lead them to believe a car is going in the same direction they are instead of coming toward them.

The law requires that only white lights be visible from the front of an automobile and that a fine of $5 to $50 is provided for the owners of a car having colored lights there.

Registration and Vote of Carroll.

The vote, as compared with the registration in the Districts is given below, and shows that the vote cast was 3185 short, the comparison being made with the vote cast for all four Presidential candidates. There is never a full vote, due to cases of illness and to unavoidable absences from home, but, allowing for these, there must still have been a very large number of votes not interested enough in the election to take the time to go to the polls.

Our Youth's Companion Offer.

Read it on another page, and find out how to get The Record at $1.00 a year! We make this offer on the Companion, because we think so highly of it for general home reading. The word "Youths" is misleading, in a way, for while it is an especially fine periodical for young folks, it is equally interesting, entertaining and instructive, for every member of the family. It is one of the periodicals that grows fast to you—it is hard to drop it after you read it a year, and that is because you want it.

This is a fine "Christmas gift" opportunity to present to that boy or girl of yours away from home, or to some close friends that you know will appreciate both The Companion and The Record.

The First $5.00 Gets It.

We have just placed in our office a copy of the latest Webster's International Dictionary. Our copy of the 1914 Edition, full sheep binding, in fine condition, will go to the first offer of $5.00 for it. Regular price is $15.00 for canvas bound edition.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The Taneytown School Ordered to be Closed on January 1.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Education was called to order in the office of the Board on Nov. 5, 1924, at 10:15 A. M. Mr. Forlines was absent.

The minutes of the previous meeting were approved as read.

The list of bills presented to the Board were approved and order paid.

In order to relieve the congestion at Sykesville and Westminster, the Superintendent proposed the addition of one more teacher at each place, and to take the necessary steps to transfer the Woodbine portable building to Westminster. The Board declined to undertake this proposition, for lack of funds, and laid it on the table for further consideration.

The request of the Principal of the Westminster High School for an extra janitor service to relieve the present janitor who claims he has more work than he is able to do, was refused for lack of funds.

The request of Mr. E. C. Seitz, Principal of the Westminster High School, to be allowed extra salary on the basis of advanced credits at the University was declined until the proper amount has been put in the budget to meet the same. This will be requested of the County Commissioners when the next budget is prepared.

The vacant scholarship to St. Mary's Female Seminary was awarded to the daughter of Senator George C. Peverly, of St. Mary's County who is now a student there.

Tobias Yingling was appointed as trustee to Pleasant Valley School.

The Board authorized the usual amount of $25.00 to be contributed to the Maryland State Teachers' Association.

The request of Miss Louella Plett to receive compensation for the time she taught at Pleasant Gap school, was refused in view of the fact that she broke her contract and vacated her position.

Superintendent Unger was authorized to have a metal chimney put up in the Pleasant Valley school, as the present chimney is too small to carry the load of one furnace and three stoves.

The Board authorized the sale of the Delco Plant, at Hampstead. The demand of the Mayor and Common Council of Westminster that the new portable building erected on the Westminster grounds be covered with proper fire resisting material, was refused on the grounds that we do not have the necessary funds, and the Superintendent was authorized to make the necessary request in the next budget to the County Commissioners.

A delegation from Hobson Grove came before the Board requesting that their school be opened. After careful consideration, the Board decided to open the school, on trial, if a qualified teacher could be secured, and the enrollment justified it.

The Board authorized the publication of the annual report as usual.

A delegation from Pine Knob requested the Board to open their school. A committee consisting of President Wantz, Commissioner Alender, and Superintendent Unger was appointed to investigate the charges that the transportation service furnished was not functioning adequately, and take such action as seemed best.

By an unanimous vote, with the exception of Commissioner Koons who voted in the negative, the Taneytown school was authorized to be closed January 1, 1925, on account of the unsafe condition of the building. The report of the committee on the Taneytown building was accepted, and the committee discharged.

Requests for contributions to local funds raised for school equipment were presented to the Board which contributed $10.00 to the amount already raised in each case, with the understanding that the same is to be paid when the necessary funds are available.

Five Lutheran Charges Vacant.

Rev. R. R. Richard, pastor of Lineboro Lutheran church has resigned to accept a call to the second church at Chambersburg, Pa. This makes present vacancies in five practically adjoining Lutheran charges in this section—Lineboro, Littlestown, Emmitsburg, Woodsboro and Union Bridge. Another vacancy was prevented by Rev. C. A. Shilke, of Walkersville, declining a call to Clarksburg, W. Va.

LATER RETURNS FROM THE ELECTION

Only Minor Changes in Figures Given Last Week.

The election of Brookhart to the Senate, in Iowa, by 1116 on the face of the returns, is likely to be contested in the U. S. Senate by his opponent, Steck (Dem) who was liberally supported by Republicans. The contest will be based on rejected ballots for Steck.

A recount in Oklahoma, added another Republican member elected to the House of Representatives.

New Mexico appears to have gone for Coolidge by a small plurality, making his electoral vote stand 382, Davis 136, and La Follette 13.

The Senate appears to stand, Republicans 55, Democrats 40, Farm-Labor 1. From the Republican list must be deducted at least 4 votes of members who are, in fact, not Republicans—one of them, La Follette.

The status of the House seems to be Republicans 245, and all opposition 190, with perhaps a few not to be counted as Republicans.

The official returns from the 20th Pennsylvania district shows that W. W. Bailey, Democrat, has been elected over his Republican opponent by a plurality of 14 votes.

Since last week, very little political news has been given out, and the results in some very close districts and recounts, have not been given. The very decisive general result has made comparatively unimportant the minor details, that under different circumstances would be very important.

It is believed that Senator La Follette will be disciplined by the Republican majority in the Senate, by formally placing him outside of the party, and taking away his committee assignments. The Democrats, on the other hand, are likely to overlook Senator Wheeler's insurgency, with the hope that so doing may bring the "progressives" into the party.

Junior Boards of Health.

In connection with the celebration of American Education Week, Nov. 17-23, Dr. John S. Fulton, Director of the State Department of Health, calls attention to the way in which the organization of Junior Boards of Health in some of the Southern States, is serving the double purpose of interesting the children in personal hygiene and of developing an intelligent appreciation of community responsibility for community health.

The Junior Boards of Health are either appointed or elected from the student body. The team consists of two or more children according to the size of the school. The unit is a health inspector, usually chosen from the boys, and a junior public health nurse, chosen from the girls, with the teacher, the county health officer and the county public health nurse, serving as advisers.

According to the plan, the inspector and the junior nurse, make rounds daily, and keep a daily record. The nurse checks up on personal hygiene, neatness of appearance, whether hands and faces are clean, whether a tooth brush is used regularly, and records the number who sleep with their windows open. The junior health inspector looks after the general sanitary condition of the building and the grounds, and we bid the small boy or girl who throws scraps of paper or apple cores around promiscuously.

The team is changed often enough for the duties to rest fairly lightly upon the boys and girls selected for the honor, appointments being conditional upon good standing in the regular studies. The plan makes little demand upon either pupils or teachers, but through the exercise it give in cultivating health habits and in developing the powers of observation in regard to environmental conditions, it is quietly training the future home-makers and law-makers of the county to an understanding of the importance of organized health activities in the life of the community.

LAWS AGAINST TRESPASSING.

State's Attorney Brown's Opinions Again Published.

For the benefit of those who may not have read the first publication of State's Attorney Brown's answer to our inquiry as to the meaning of "posting in a conspicuous manner" in connection with advertising against "trespassing," we publish it again.

"The latest Act of Assembly touching upon this question is Chapter 112 of the Acts of 1920, Section 1 of which reads as follows: "That it shall be unlawful for any person to enter or trespass on any property which is posted against trespassers in a conspicuous manner."

Chapter 468 of the Acts of 1918 required that all persons, in addition to the license to hunt required therein, to procure the written permission of the person on whose land they wished to hunt, and that both such license and written permission be carried while hunting and, upon demand, be exhibited to any Game Warden, Deputy Game Warden, Sheriff, Constable or other officer. This Act was not repealed by the above named Chapter of 1920, but it is repealed and re-enacted by Chapter 549 of the Acts of 1922, and in this Act the provision requiring the written permission of the owner of the land is omitted.

From the above it will appear that in order to sustain a prosecution under these statutes the land would have to be "posted in a conspicuous manner."

Your question whether the law would not protect property without advertising brings us to another feature of the law. The above provisions have to do with the subject of hunting. Section 25 of Article 27 of the Code, Title Crimes and Punishments, Sub-Title Boundaries, provides that "Any person or persons who shall enter upon or cross over the land, premises or private property of any person or persons in this State, after having been duly notified by the owner or his agent not to do so, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor." This Act is very broad. It prohibits trespass for any purpose, and when the design is to prohibit an entry on the land for any purpose whatsoever, any notice which can be shown to have been received by the trespasser is sufficient to sustain a prosecution under its provisions.

Yours Very Truly,
THEO. F. BROWN.

A Widespread Drought.

For once, there is a serious drought in existence throughout the whole country, from Atlantic to Pacific, a condition that rarely exists throughout such a wide scope. The same condition has not existed within the past 50 years. The drought is not only affecting farmers, but has resulted in very disastrous fires. In California alone, the fire loss is estimated at $5,000,000.

Throughout the east and middle west the lack of rainfall has so far been most disastrous to plowing, seeding and growth of fall sown wheat. Reports are the same everywhere—too dry for fall plowing and germination, streams low, pastures short and gray, forest fires, water becoming scarce, etc.

Gov. Ritchie has appealed to hunters not to go hunting in fields or forests until after a soaking rainfall, but should abstain from the right the law gives them. If he had the authority, he would peremptorily call off the "open season," for the present.

Carroll County Man Pays an Election Wager.

The Baltimore American, on Tuesday, contained the following: "I'll walk to Baltimore if Davis loses."

Thus spoke Harry F. Evans, keeper of a general merchandise store at Woodbine, Md., a few days before election. So he got his walking orders from the voters a week ago, and yesterday he carried out the promise by covering the 24 miles from 8 A. M. to 3 P. M.

Albert Spencer of Lisbon, a Republican, agreed to walk if Coolidge was voted out of the White House. Spencer, just to enjoy his triumph the more, made the trip as official observer of Evans' hike.

On foot part of the way and in automobiles all the way, the pedestrian had a lively gallery, and he did not stand a chance of getting lonesome. There was plenty of laughing, and Evans himself right to the end kept cheerful.

When he reached the City line his friends gave him a cheer that showed they were proud of his triumph as a hiker. He wasted no time catching a train for home.

Carroll "Against" Amendments.

Carroll County is pretty strongly set on voting "against" all amendments, and without good reason for it. There was room for difference of opinion over the amendment regarding the pensioning of World War Veterans, but so far as we can see, Carroll County was not in the slightest interested in the payment of salaries to States Attorneys in Baltimore, yet it was voted "against" by a majority of 231, while the vote against the pension amendment was but 96.

As both amendments carried in the whole state by over 40,000 each, the Carroll County vote seems not to have been very representative of public sentiment.

Our county voters ought to be more careful of their reputation for intelligence, and not vote "against" anything merely because they do not fully understand it; nor should they conclude that the state constitution is always better unamended than amended; and the same general advice applies to bond issues.

Our voters should use their heads to better advantage in voting on such matters, not vote on them at all—which latter plan was practiced by about 85 percent of the voters this year on the amendments.

A Coolidge Administration.

President Coolidge will now have a free hand to exercise his own policies, and will apparently have a Congress back of him to indorse them. No doubt he will meet with obstructionists in his own party, but, if the voice of the people is heard and followed, it appears to lead to the conclusion that the big majority was a vote of confidence in Coolidge himself, and as such it will be difficult to materially go against the "administration."

There is no indication, nor fear, that he has any inclination to "big stick" his coming term. It is quite likely to represent the Coolidge temperament for conservatism and economy; and whatever policies he may have in view, he is too astute a politician to bring them before the coming short term of Congress, but will wait until the new Congress assembles, in March.

It is quite probable, too, that his election will represent a strong trend toward confidence and stability in financial and industrial affairs, and his special committee investigation of the agricultural situation, and the remedies therefor, will be one of the features looked forward to with much keen interest.

Politics Should "Adjourn."

Whether the La Follette party will remain intact as a political power, is a question that can safely be left rest for several years in the future, for time has a way of suddenly changing some of our prognostications—and a very short time can do it. Senator La Follette himself, due to his age, will hardly be a candidate, four years hence, and whether a stronger leader, can be developed, belongs in the political question box.

Those who have an aptness at playing the political game as a continuous performance, will serve their country best if they shut up shop for awhile, and give the people a show to run their own affairs, as they are pretty apt to do, anyway. As funny Mr. Rodgers said, on election night, Coolidge won by not telling the voters just what they ought to do, but left them to do their own thinking; and this is the thought that—after a few weeks of figuring on "how it happened"—ought to prevail widely.

There is also nothing to be gained by wondering whether Governor Smith, of New York, will be a candidate at the Democratic convention four years hence, nor whether President Coolidge will be eligible to run again, should he so desire, having in view the debated "third term" precedent, and what constitutes a third term.

Then again, we are apt to hear a lot about whether the Democratic party will survive its defeat—a question that has been trotted out a number of times. All such questions should "adjourn," or be "laid on the table," or "take a recess," and give Congress and the new administration a show to try their luck at running the government.

One of the features of the election that should be gratifying to all, was its decisive character. There is no foundation for saying that it was due to the use of a "slush fund," and the complications of electing a President in Congress are happily avoided, nor are there any states the closeness of which in the least affects the result. There is, in fact, nothing left to argue over, and no charges of fraud or crookedness to make.

Real Estate Investments.

We read, the other day, in an editorial in a city paper, this statement: "Just one thing you can own with confidence and satisfaction, and that's a piece of the earth beneath your feet. That is real wealth, and that is why land that a man owns is called 'Real' estate. It is more real than other kinds of property."

"When you own a piece of land you are your own board of directors. You can supervise it yourself. It can't be stolen; thieves can't carry it away; its there."

We don't know whether this is to be considered as real business sense, or whether it is a bit of camouflaged humor. At any rate the idea expressed that unqualified ownership of real estate is a good investment, for all reasons, is not one to be taken seriously.

Many of the investments in farms, just now, are "real" and very much "there," but they don't pay. Some who invested in farms during the war, at the then prevailing prices, are up against a stiff proposition now, especially if they are heavily involved in a financial way, in the purchase.

Many other farm owners are now finding it difficult to get tenants, and purchasers are also far from plentiful, except for the best located farms at attractive prices; and there is, at least temporarily, a shrinkage in land values and in the revenue therefrom, that makes such a fancy picture as that sketched by the editorial quoted, appear ridiculous.

It may be true that investment in real estate, at this time, is connected with no more risk than some other ventures, if one is willing to wait for profit, and especially if one wants a home, or if a farm is wanted for actual residence and individual operation; but, investments in real estate need a good looking over, and are not a "sure thing" profit returning investment by any means.

The Cause of the Trouble.

The amount of crime and the general disregard for laws, both human and divine, which are at this moment afflicting the world like a pestilence, have caused certain people to pause and exclaim: "What is wrong with our religion?"

There is nothing wrong with any religion that is ethical, is sincerely believed in and sincerely practiced. It is in the neglect of religion that the trouble arises.

Quite recently an eminent ecclesiastic declared from the pulpit that if he happened to be wandering in a Central African jungle and suddenly came upon one of the aborigines engaged in the worship of a stuffed toad, he would take off his hat to him, for here at least were the elements of faith and sincerity. It is the want of these virtues which is at the bottom of the lack of religion today.

How can anything be good if it is neglected and cast aside? How can a judgment be formed upon any theory which is not put into practice? How can nourishment be derived from food that is not eaten and digested?

There is nothing wrong with religion; it is the want of it that causes trouble. Better have some ideal and practice it earnestly than to have no ideal at all.—Dearborn Independent.

Why Take the Home Paper?

The editor of the Oneida Democratic Union, and The Madison County Times, of New York, answers the question as follows:

"The country newspaper is a community institution the same as the school or the church. Property owners are taxed to maintain the schools, people contribute to the church either because they believe in its worth or because they consider it a kind of insurance against the hereafter. The country newspaper wants none of these appeals. If it justifies its existence the people of the community should subscribe to it because they find it an absolute necessity.

The day of the town crier is past and gone; word of mouth communication is slow and inaccurate. The people who do not read their home paper cannot be genuinely good citizens of their community for they cannot know the facts about community affairs which they need to know to enable them to participate properly in the life of their home town.

The local newspaper tells its readers what is doing and what will be doing in the churches, the schools, the grange, the lodges, the village and town affairs. It reports comings and goings, deaths, weddings, and all the rest of the community events. It informs the readers of the reason for and the time and place of every event which depends for its success on general public co-operation and unity of action. People read these things in their local paper and are accurately and intelligently informed. When they obtain this information over the telephone or by personal conversation the distribution of knowledge is infinitely more limited and more or less unreliable.

Every local newspaper can and should be a necessity to every family in its territory.

The local newspaper should be in every home. If it were, community of action and information and understanding would give that community an impetus for progress which would make it rise head and shoulders above its neighbors.

This is the only real reason the people of any community should subscribe for their local paper—because they need the information it brings them. When a country paper does this and the people of the community realize it they will subscribe."

Tax Equality for all Bonds.

Roger W. Babson, international statistician, says: "Unless the state, county, city and town tax-exempt bond issue is curtailed, taxes necessary to pay interest and retire them will bankrupt the farmers of this country. The present increase in taxes which results from the demand for these non-taxable bonds is raising havoc with land values, the cost of farm products and rural conditions in general."

Every dollar added to annual farm taxes reduces the farm value more than $30 an acre; for the average net income on farm lands for 50 years is only about three percent, and a dollar is three percent on a $30 investment. Just now, farm produce prices are higher, owing to the settlement of German reparations, and the opening of a better foreign market. Farmers are paying off bills, repairing farms, and some laying up a small surplus. But more tax-free state and municipal bonds were issued during the first six months of 1924 than ever before during a like period. The tax-free bond issue is catching up with the farm prosperity. When it does, good prices will not help the farmer or any other industrial investor; he merely pays more taxes to pay interest on more tax-free bonds, and they will run for 20 to 30 years.

The Dickinson bill is before Congress again this winter, with a graduated tax on non-taxable securities, to equalize their values and burdens with other property and industrial investments that have been paying all the tax. The Farm Mortgage Bankers' Association of America recently declared for a constitutional amendment revoking the exemption privileges of tax-free securities. The amendment had almost enough votes to pass it last spring; and some of its enemies failed in the primaries, so it may have a good majority this winter.

Tax equality is the one sure road to business development on a sound basis.—The Manufacturer.

Colonists Called On to "Trade" at Home

In a copy of the Providence Gazette issued during the Colonial period appears an amusing item of local news, which, if literally adhered to, doubtless would have devastated a portion of New England of its household cats. The copy of the paper bears the date of November 28, 1767, and one readily discerns that the residents of that Rhode Island city regarded themselves at the time as loyal subjects of George III. The article reads: "A number of householders in this town will engage to supply the public with the article of Catskins of American breed, not inferior to British ones, for making Muffs and Tippets. There are at this time a large number of his majesty's American cats, finely colored and spotted, who are bad mousters and now ready to be sacrificed for the good purpose of muffs and tippets, and it is hoped that all persons who wish well to America will give the preference to his majesty's catskins before those of foreign growth. As muffs and tippets are thought to be of the first importance, it would be well worth the consideration of all lovers of this country whether we ought not to encourage the use and consumption of our own catskins in preference of all others. The learned assure us that the American catskins are vastly superior to those of Europe, being of finer fur and more beautifully variegated with spots and streaks."

Vast Stores of Gold Await Lucky Finders

What becomes of gold? It has many channels of disappearance, according to experts. Figures show that more than half of the annual output is employed in the fine arts and jewelry trade. Thousands of pounds also are used by dentists, according to Popular Mechanics Magazine, one estimate being that over a ton is needed every year for the filling of teeth. Then money is worn in handling, this loss being one and a quarter million dollars annually. Bank of England sovereigns are often tested and found to have lost much of the original weight.

Of the immense quantities of the precious metal that have been buried away in the earth, it is believed comparatively little has ever been recovered. The priests of Peru are said to have buried approximately ten million dollars' worth of treasure to preserve it from the clutches of their persecutors. None of this has been found. The tombs of the old kings of Egypt were treasure houses, immense quantities of gold and jewels being interred with them. It has been estimated by historians that Alexander the Great became the master of great hoards of gold, all of which, so far as is known, has vanished.

Iona, the "Blessed Isle"

Iona, one of the smaller of the Inner Hebrides, was the "Blessed Isle" of early Christian days in the British Islands, says the Detroit News. St. Columba, noted Irish missionary, made it the center of Celtic Christianity. From there missionaries went out to convert Scotland and northern England to Christianity. Kings were brought to be buried in the soil of the sacred island. The importance of Iona was ended, however, by the Danes who swept down about the beginning of the Ninth century and seized the Hebrides from the Scotch.

The islands were returned to Scotland's overlord in 1226. More than 500 islands make up the Hebrides group, but only about 100 are inhabited.

All Life a Struggle

Life is a battle all through, physically as well as morally. Everything is struggling to endure, and the more successfully we struggle the stronger we become against a weakening enemy. The plant that is badly nourished, that slacks and flags in the fight is the one all its enemies fasten upon. The weakly animal is the one that sickness most easily attacks. The battle of life is generally to the strong. The early wheat in the best prepared, finest land makes the better stand, in most cases, against blights and other afflictions. Often the finest character, also, belongs to the best fighter, perhaps to the one who has had most to fight against.—Montreal Family Herald.

Animal Intelligence

According to William T. Hornaday, director of the New York Zoological park, the chimpanzee is the most intelligent of all animals below man. He can learn more by training and more easily than any other animal. A high-class horse is a very wise and capable animal, but this is chiefly due to its age-long association with man and education by him. A high-class dog is the animal that mentally is in the closest touch with the mind, the feelings, and the impulses of man, and the only one that can read a man's feelings from his eyes and his facial expression.

Lyric Soprano

The word Lyric is derived from the lyre, which is now used as an instrument to accompany the smaller forms of poetry. It has become associated with songs that are composed more for their melodious interest than for their dramatic effect. A lyric soprano is known as a light soprano, which is more suited to light songs and solos, to distinguish it from dramatic sopranos, which are heard to greater advantage in opera and oratorio work.

POULTRY

INEXPENSIVE HOUSE FOR POULTRY FLOCK

Proper housing is essential to winter egg production. Several types of house have given satisfaction in different sections. The type described in Extension Bulletin 224-A is in use in many places and is giving good results with the farm or town-lot flock. This plan, however, is not recommended for the commercial poultry plant with several hundred birds.

Two pens are provided, each 16 feet square. A considerable improvement can be made in farm poultry by selecting yearly a breeding pen of the best, giving them range and confining the pullets and ordinary layers by themselves during the breeding season.

The combination type of roof gives protection from storm and extremes of temperature and is recommended for narrow houses. Shingles are most economical in the long run particularly for the eastern part of the state, where they should be dipped in creosote to prevent curling, and laid over a tight roof.

The concrete floor is ratproof, sanitary and permanent. If properly constructed it is dry and warm. Eight to ten inches of straw should be maintained on any type of floor to induce exercise and protect the feet of the birds from injury. Dust from dirt floors irritates the respiratory system of the fowl and such floors eventually harbor disease. Intestinal troubles result from eating grain out of the accumulated filth.

The back wall is celled above the droppings board. Drafts are the most frequent cause of diphtheritic roup. If the siding does not make tight joints when laid, if it is green or if the house is exposed to high winds, two-ply roofing may be applied to the back and ends of the house on the outside.

For detailed plans send to the Extension Service, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, for Extension Bulletin 224-A, "Colorado Farm Flock Poultry House."

When Pullets Begin to Lay Put Them in Coop

Experienced poultrymen have found that if pullets are allowed to remain very long on the range after starting to lay, the change to winter houses is sure to check them and may cause a fall molt. Cornell backs them in saying that as soon as the first eggs are found on the range, at least a third or fourth of the best developed birds should be placed in winter quarters. When the remaining birds show maturity, they should be put in winter quarters also.

A thorough cleaning and disinfecting of the houses and pens in which the pullets are to live is advocated. This is especially true if the birds that formerly occupied the building have been diseased or have had worms.

Fattening Cull Hens Is Good Improvement Plan

Many a load of cull hens could be improved by a short fattening period before they are taken to market, says L. E. Card of the University of Illinois. Though gains to be made are considerably less than is possible with broilers, the improvement is still sufficient to more than pay for its cost. A simple mixture of two-thirds cornmeal and one-third wheat middlings mixed with enough skim milk or buttermilk to form a thick batter will give good results. This should be fed to the hens twice daily giving only what they will clean up in 20 or 30 minutes. No water should be given except as it forms a part of the milk used in mixing the soft feed.

This makes it highly important that the birds be kept in a place that is cool and comfortable.

Poultry Hints

A way to kill chicks: give them moldy feed.

There is nothing better than range for the development of vigorous fowls.

If you keep your fowls where they have any difficulty in getting all the green food of the kind they should have during the summer, plant some dwarf Essex rape handy for them. It is excellent.

Don't try to choose the place for your geese to make their nests for it only disturbs them, if you just give them a nice clean place with plenty of dry bedding, they will take care of the nesting proposition.

Clean poultry houses are essential if the comfort of the fowls and their laying capacity are to be maintained.

Pullets lay more eggs than hens through the winter and early spring and are in poorer physical condition when the spring hatches start.

The choice between brown and white leghorns must be a personal one. Both are good layers, and neither one can be said to be the best under all conditions. They are probably equally easy to raise.

LOOK. LOOK.

HOW

TO CLEAN VARIOUS KINDS OF FURS IN THE HOME.

Furs collect dust and dirt in quantities that would astonish us if it all could be detached and then gathered together.

In a town, "blacks" descend and are duly incorporated, with the result that dark furs lose their glossiness and light furs become begrimed, dirty and unsightly.

Extremely expensive furs should be sent to a professional cleaner, but others can be tackled at home with quite satisfactory results.

Sable or skunk should be treated with hot silver sand, of the best quality. It is rubbed in with a piece of new flannel, and will, visibly, collect all the dirt. Give a second rubbing with fresh sand, and then beat the fur with a flat stick and brush it until it is glossy. It will be as good as new. Other furs need only to be rubbed against the hair, with hot bran. Brush the bran out with a stiff brush and the fur will be clean. The bran, however, will be very dirty.

Light-colored furs need a slightly different treatment. Camphorated chalk should first be well rubbed in, and then a paste of cold-water starch brushed over the hair. This should be allowed to dry, and then rubbed off with the hand. Afterwards the fur should be sprinkled with powdered magnesnia, which should be brushed out with a stiff brush. A final brush with a soft brush, and the fur will be clean and glossy.

Cheap furs—which are never really clean, of course—should be cleaned with powdered ammonia and dry whitening; mixed in equal quantities. This will remove the dirt, and brushing will complete the operation.

Finally, if any fur gets wet, wipe it very gently with a silk handkerchief, and then hang up well away from the fire. When dry, fluff up the wrong way and then brush quickly with a medium brush. This prevents any damage by wet.—London Answers.

How Mosaic Glass Is Made

Mosaic glass is produced by arranging vertically side by side threads or small canes of variously colored opaque or transparent glass, uniform lengths, so that the ends shall form a ground representing flowers, arabesques, or any mosaic design. This mass is now submitted to a heat sufficient to fuse the whole, all the sides at the same time being pressed together so as to exclude the air from the interstices of the threads. The result is a homogeneous solid cane or cylinder, which, being cut at right angles, or laterally, yields a number of layers or copies of the same uniform design.

This process was practiced with great skill by the ancients, who are supposed to have produced pictures in this way; but in existing specimens the pieces have been so accurately united, by intense heat or otherwise, that the junctures cannot be discovered by even a powerful magnifying glass.

How Parishes Originated

The Florida parishes formerly comprised a part of western Florida. In 1810 200 men, headed by Gen. Philemon Thomas, marched against Baton Rouge, then held by Spain, and were successful in obtaining control of the fort. They held a meeting and formed what they called the free and independent state of western Florida. They immediately notified the president of the United States of their act, stating that they would like to be admitted to the Union, provided their freedom was guaranteed. The United States government replied that the land that they occupied was a part of the Louisiana Purchase, and therefore, already belonged to the government. A force was dispatched to take over western Florida. Later, when Louisiana was admitted to the Union, the Florida parishes were made a part of the new state.

How Crescent Originated

The crescent on the Turkish flag was made the emblem of Byzantium after the siege of that city by Philip, father of Alexander the Great. A night attempt by the followers of Philip to undermine the walls of the city was revealed by the light of the crescent moon. In gratitude for this delivery Diana's symbol became the badge of the city. In 1453 Mahomet II captured the city and adopted the badge for the Ottoman empire.

How Did "Bible" Get Its Name

It is said this comes from the word biblus, the name of a reed which grows in the marshes of Egypt. It was from the leaves of this reed that paper was manufactured for use in the making of books, and the word "Bible" meaning literally "book" gets its name from this reed.

Height of Orang-Utan

The orang-utan, the name being Malay for man of the woods, is shorter and broader than a man. The adult male stands about four feet high and sometimes weighs as much as 250 pounds.

MELROSE.

About two months ago we wrote about a promising crop of potatoes planted on top of the ground, covered with straw, belonging to John Chamberlain, of Winchester, Va., who, a little more than a year ago bought the Edw. Sterner farm, near here. The crop is now harvested and was a success. The seed potatoes were not up to the standard, yet there was a splendid average per acre. There was no cultivating done, no weeds in the patch, and the potatoes are smooth, yielding at the rate of at least an average of 150 bushels to the acre.

The treat at West's Union Sunday School, on Wednesday afternoon, will be distributed in the rain or shine. Don't forget the date, Nov. 16th.

A Record Breaking October.

With official temperatures attaining new high and low marks and characterized as perhaps the driest October in the history of the Weather Bureau, many new records were established in the month just closed.

October of this year was positively the driest that has been experienced in this section during the past 15 years and probably within the history of the Weather Bureau, it was declared. Rainfall during the entire 31 days totaled only .28 of an inch, whereas the normal rainfall is 2.50 inches. The nearest approach to this record for a month's duration was in March, 1910, when the precipitation amounted to only .49 of an inch, which, however, is .21 of an inch greater than the rainfall of the past month.

During the entire month there was only one rainy evening; three evenings were cloudy and three were partly cloudy; every other day was clear and sunshine adhering to traditions of Indian Summer.

The mercury in the official thermometer ascended to the 85 degree mark on October 6 and by the 28th of the month, had dropped 57 points to the 28 degree mark, new low and high records for recent years.

Throughout the entire month there were only two days that there was enough precipitation for recording. These were the 27th and 28th.

Frost prevailed on 12 mornings and there was fog on the 5th and 26th. Winds of varying intensities prevailed practically during the entire month.

Ontario Is "Dry."

Ontario, Canada, voted strongly "dry" after the most contented claims of the "wets" that the province was tired of temperance. Aside from this reversal of prophecy, the election was notable for the sharp difference in attitude between city and country; the cities for the most part heavily "wet" while the country districts were consistently "dry." No one has yet appeared to hazard the explanation that the difference is due to the greater ignorance or viciousness of the country districts.

There may be an occasional charge of greater "narrowness" in the country districts, but not a greater stupidity or moral indifference. The vote would indicate that moral indifference, or active approval of liquor, is more to be found in the cities. Where life is lived artificially, where amusements are hectic and unwholesome, where interested propaganda circulates most freely, where the public mind is freed by the superficialities of newspaper dogmatism, there the liquor interest are likely to find their chief support, but not in the country districts where life is more wholesome and where people have time to think their own thoughts.

United States readers of Canadian prohibition plebiscites are sometimes misled in their judgments. In Canadian elections which have "gone wet" the significance is not what the American would naturally understand by such a statement. In no case has the saloon been voted back into existence. In every case the saloon has been voted a continued oblivion. Most Canadian elections have turned on the question of the method by which liquors shall be handled by the government and the degree of accessibility allowed to citizens who purchase by the package. Had Ontario "gone wet," it would merely have meant that its citizens desired some other method than that now followed by the Ontario Temperance Act. The saloon is as dead in "dry" Canadian provinces as it has been at any time since prohibition, but the Ontario election indicates that a deeper "dry" sentiment obtains in a majority of the people there.—Dearborn Independent.

Our Letter Box

Under this heading we will be glad to publish letters from former Carroll-countians, who are now away from home; and especially letters from those whose home was Taneytown. These letters are very interesting, to many, and we should be glad to publish one or more each week. On account of their length, it is not always convenient to use letters on first page, and will hereafter use the 4th or 5th page.

A CALIFORNIA LETTER. PART 2.

After a four weeks stay in Maryland among kin folks and old friends we left Westminster on Sept. 15, on our return trip back to California.

We visited with cousins in Niles, Ohio, and a sister-in-law and two nieces in Iowa City, Iowa, and also some friends at Rockyford, Colo. We then extended our travel home by going by way of Kansas City, New Mexico, Texas, Arizona through old Mexico into Imperial Valley.

We passed through 15 States and on the Pacific Ocean to Panama, from Panama through the all American Canal into the Caribbean Sea, through the Gulf of Mexico into the Atlantic Ocean. And in all that travel we did not see any country as beautiful as "old Maryland" and Penna. There are more beautiful, but we did not see them on our travels.

Of course, there are lots of places that parts of them are more beautiful, but take the whole state of Maryland and Pennsylvania, and I don't believe you will find any states finer for scenery and nice homes. The state of Iowa is a wonderful state, has fertile soil and has very fine homes, but I don't think they have the beauty there, that Maryland and Pennsylvania have. But of course a person can't live on a beautiful country and scenery.

But when you find a place with nice homes and everything kept up, you know it is progressive. When it comes to climate and fertile soil, we have it in California. I will put it this way; we have the wonders and the fertile soil, and you have the scenery and a beautiful country. It is true we have beautiful places in California, but take it as a whole it can't be as beautiful as where it rains, as the beauty of California is made by irrigation and where they keep it up with water, it is truly beautiful.

When it comes to a wonderful country, it is in Imperial Valley. While it isn't so beautiful it is one of the most fertile with its sunshine and irrigation. One hardly knows how to begin to tell about Imperial Valley, especially when one looks back about twenty-four years and sees it a dry desert, and now a wonderful farming country.

I cannot begin to tell the history of Imperial Valley as there is too much to it, but I can say that I have seen a great deal of it improved. In fact, eighty acres of our ranch was still a desert when I came to the Valley. I have seen it improved, and I cooked for the men who leveled the sand hill down. We had three Fresno teams going, leveling the land. My nephew, Leslie Koons, being one of the men; also W. C. Starnier, a nephew of Mr. Starnier's.

They leveled for weeks and for months, to get it so as to run the water over it so as to put a crop in. This eighty acres Mr. Starnier took up as a desert claim. Another one hundred and sixty acres he homesteaded. That part of our Ranch was in crop when I came here. Mr. Starnier is one of the pioneers of Imperial Valley, of which I know he is very proud. I can say that I too have done some pioneering, but of course nothing like the ones that were here in an earlier day, especially the women, as I had a house to come into with all conveniences, and that I know the early settlers did not have.

They had a tent or a little house which is commonly known here as a "shack". Mr. Starnier's home was one of those little shacks and it was in that where I ate my first meal, (as the house was not finished) and that was prepared by one of the men. I am not going to say how heartily I ate of it. On my arrival on the ranch I was welcomed by W. C. Starnier, a nephew of Mr. Starnier's, with a smiling face, knowing by my coming, some of his duties as a cook would be lightened.

Our ranch, like many others, has become a garden spot made out of a dry desert, by the skill of man figuring out a way to bring the water in to the valley by means of canals from the Colorado river. We can't depend on any crops without irrigation, as it seldom rains here. We have rain once in a while but does not help the crops any. We also have one or two thunder storms during the summer, in some parts of the valley, but we hardly know what thunder and lightning is, as we have it so seldom.

Imperial Valley is now about 24 years old, and anyone that saw it then and sees it now would hardly believe it to be the dry desert it was then. There are hundreds of acres of trucking done here. Trucking of almost every kind, watermelons, cantaloupes, grapes, grapefruit, onions, tomatoes, peas, strawberries, lettuce and all kinds of things.

Peas and lettuce are our winter crops, the season usually ends about the 20th. of April. There were nine carloads of lettuce shipped out of the Valley in 1924. This year 1924 there were 25,690 acres of cantaloupes planted, and 12,661 carloads shipped out. There has been 65,000 acres of cotton planted this year, and the estimated yield is 25,000 bales.

We have a great many dairy ranchers here. Our creamery in Holtville is putting out nine thousand pounds of butter daily. We have also big alfalfa ranches. We grow from five to seven cuttings of alfalfa a year, and make from a ton to a ton and a half to two tons an acre. Our ranch is now in alfalfa, but for 14 years we raised two crops a year off of the same piece of ground—corn and barley.

We harvested our barley in June, then planted corn, and harvested our corn in November, then put barley in on the same piece of ground again. We also grow dates and figs here in the valley. Roland Reed is the famous date grower here and has a large ranch near El Centro. He raises choice ones, and in connection with his date ranch he has a large grapefruit ranch. I understand he is a cousin of the Newman's in Maryland.

One can find people here from most every state in the U. S., and I think I am safe in saying there are as many from the foreign lands. Almost the first question asked when you meet a stranger is, "Where are you from?" Harold Bell Wright the noted writer, was among the early settlers in Imperial Valley. His first book was written here while it was still a dry desert. "The winning of Barbara Worth." Several other books of his were written here. His home is only about three miles from ours and his brother, George W. Wright, is one of our nearest neighbors.

Several years ago Harold Bell Wright sold his ranch here, and built a home near Los Angeles. In a short time he was forced to leave there on account of poor health. He again settled in the desert and this time he settled in Arizona. There he built another home, at which place he is now living. In connection with Harold Bell Wright I might mention the "Barabara Worth Hotel" located in El Centro, is a very beautiful hotel. Its name was taken from the book called "The Winning of Barbara Worth." The paintings in the Lobby are the painted characters and scenes in the book. El Centro, the county seat of Imperial county, is a very nice place.

Imperial Valley's customs are very different from the East. One of the many different things here, which seemed very strange, to some at first, was to see men packing their bedding. It is a very common thing to see working men packing their bedding. Every man must furnish his own bedding. The rancher provides shelter of some kind, a tent or a bunk house, for them to sleep in, but they must furnish their own bedding. They also do their own washing, or have it done.

We have been home now two weeks, and every day has been sunshine. Some of the service station's have a sign up "Free-gas every-day that the Sun does not shine," by that you can well know that we are in a land of sunshine.

MRS. R. C. STARNER, Holtville, Cal.

We have a letter for next week. After that—Who? Why not you?—Ed. Record.

"To Walk Spanish"
To make a person "walk Spanish" is to make him come up to time, or to make him act under compulsion. It refers to the old sport among boys in which one boy seizes another by the collar and the seat of the trousers and forces him along on tiptoe. Hence, by extension, it means to walk gingerly. Apparently the expression originally referred to the manner in which the Spanish pirates used to handle their prisoners while starting them out on the plank.—Exchange.

Roadside Fruit Trees Beautiful and Useful

Why not fruit trees along the highways of Great Britain, under the bill introduced by Mr. Gosling, minister of transport, to empower him to plant trees and shrubs by the roadside?

Sir Charles Yates, M. P., suggests apple trees; but the other members say the boys would never let the fruit ripen.

I wonder; it does not take long to develop a civic sense even in boys when they know that the trees belong to themselves. This is how the scheme works in many parts of the continent, notably in Hanover:

The trees—cherry, plum, peach, greengage, apple, pear—are planted at short intervals and properly pruned and attended by a local official.

When the fruit of each kind of tree is nearly ripe, a local auction is held; every citizen has a chance of bidding for the fruit. He or she may buy a whole tree, or a group of trees, or join with a friend to share the produce of a tree. The price—never very high—goes to the community and more than pays the upkeep.

Until ready to pick, the fruit hangs temptingly over the passersby, and there is no objection to eating a casual cherry or pear. There are so many trees that no one dreams of really raiding them.

After the auction, the buyers mark their own tree, gather the fruit, eat or preserve it, or even sell it. Once stripped the tree reverts to the community till next summer.

And how pretty is the roadside in blossom time.—From the Continental Edition of the London Mail.

Front Walk Will Repay Thought Bestowed on It

Where a residence is built within thirty feet of the front walk it is generally advisable to introduce a straight entrance walk to the front porch. In the larger suburban homes where the house has a set-back line of more than thirty feet it is much better form to attempt to enter the property on a curve for both the walk and driveway, rather than bisect the open front lawn with a straight entrance. The curve should start and end at right angles, thus making the curve between. It should not enter directly at the corner of the property. Leave a space of a few feet for a group of well-placed shrubs on each side.

The walk should not be made any wider than actually needed. A brick walk or one with the surface coat of cement colored so as to harmonize more pleasingly with the grass and decorative colorings of the house is much to be preferred over the usual glaring color of a regular cement walk or drive.

Usually vines, hanging baskets, window and porch boxes add a great deal to the attractiveness of the house as a background for the public area.

Not Hard to Own Home

The question of owning a home is one which presents itself with ever-increasing force to every young husband and wife, and must be answered sooner or later one way or the other. Owning a home is not such a difficult matter as it appears to some. Like many other things in life, it consists chiefly in determination—making up your mind that you will have one.

No doubt, there are many young people renting homes in every city who could easily have a home of their own. Homes of all kinds, located in attractive surroundings, can be bought on terms almost like rent; and there are many marked advantages in owning your home. In the first place, the sense of ownership gives you a stimulating interest in your surroundings. You become a part of the community—a sharer in its responsibilities, its aims and its ambitions—and a partaker in its rewards.

Owning one's home stimulates one's self-regard and supplies the driving motive for other undertakings. One of the most important decisions that any young man can make, after he has found his job and his lifemate, is to own his home.

Capital Wisely Planned

Back of the plan of Washington was something entirely new in cities—the purpose to make it beautiful and comfortable for the population. Strange as it may sound in this day of wonder cities, that idea was revolutionary. All sorts of remarkable cities have been built, but never before had a thought of the people who were to live in the city played such a prominent part. And that the idea was a good one is shown in the fact that today the capital of the United States is universally admitted to be the most beautiful city in the world.

Village Too Modest

"One of the things I noticed on a recent automobile tour that took me some 2,000 miles," remarked a Detroit motorist, "was the absence of signs indicating the names of towns and villages, particularly villages, through which we drove. It seems strange that a community of several hundred people could exist and not a soul in the place would have thoughtfulness or civic pride enough to have erected some conspicuous place a sign that gave a community's name.

Giant Thistle, Grown on Coast, in Demand

Among the profitable crops grown by Californians in the region of San Francisco is a giant Mediterranean species of thistle. Soil and climate there seem to be exactly suited to its needs, says the Pathfinder Magazine.

Attempts to grow it elsewhere have invariably resulted in failure. Like the thistles with which all are familiar, it has formidable spines, only they are longer and more cruel than the average. It has a large purple flower, so sweet scented that bees find it irresistible. Rarely, however, are the buds allowed to develop into flowers, for the buds are esteemed as a table delicacy, being harvested and sold as "artichokes."

A quarter acre for the buds is not an unusual price in San Francisco and at that they take precedence over the finest oranges, raisins, apricots, etc., for the growers craftily time their development so that they may be marketed just at the psychological moment, so to speak—that is, in midwinter, when there is little else of the same nature to compete with them. This is done by cutting back the plants in June, pruning them down to the ground. Within a short time new shoots appear. Then if plant food and water are supplied in sufficient abundance the long sunny days bring about ideal development.

The bud harvest begins in October and reaches its peak about the first of April.

Hard-Working Burglar Forced to Draw Line

Bert met his old friend Bill the Burglar and the two got chatting about things in general.

"I hear you've left your wife," remarked Bert presently. "Why did you do that?"

"Because she was always wantin' me to do somethin'," snarled the burglar moodily.

"What do you mean?" asked his friend.

"No matter how busy or tired I was, she was always naggin' me to do somethin' for her. At last, one night, it was too much."

"How was that?" said the other, interested.

"Well, I came in about three o'clock in the morning," explained Bill, "all worn out from doing too much work. I had opened two strong boxes and finished up by forcing a couple of safes, to say nothing of a vault I cracked earlier in the evening. An' then, when I got in, what do you suppose that woman wanted me to do?"

"What?"

"As I stand here, it's true!" growled Bill the Burglar. "She wanted me to open a box of sardines for her."—London Answers.

Earthworms Valuable

Earthworms play a very important part in the formation of soil. Indeed Charles Darwin demonstrated that they are of incalculable value to agriculture. Angeworms feed on vegetable matter exclusively and in burrowing they take more or less earth into the alimentary canal where it is mixed with the vegetable food of the worm. Nearly all of this passes out with the castings which are always voided on the surface. Thus the worms are continually engaged in spreading a "natural compost" over the land. The process is called the formation of vegetable mold which is fertile both because of its composition and because the worms keep it stirred up and well aerated. Of course many other creatures are beneficial in the formation of soil, but the earthworms are the most important.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Polo Has Long History

There is no game today, with a longer history and one so consistently romantic as that of polo. Over 100 years ago polo was first observed in Persia by early European travelers, like Sir William Ouseley and Sir Anthony Shirley. The latter quoted his forerunner, the Italian Pietro della Valle who, in 1618, had found polo under the patronage of Shah Abbas, and remarked that "It was a favorite recreation of kings and chiefs, and originally, I believe, considered as almost peculiar to illustrious personages." The French traveler Chardin says the Persians played with 30 or 40 on a side, though the Persian miniatures remind us that even then three or four-sided teams were common. Another traveler calls it "the game of Canes."

Paper Razor Strop

Ordinary newspapers folded together in a thick strip and held between wire clips make a satisfactory substitute for a regular leather razor strop, according to a European inventor. Popular Mechanics Magazine reports. The ink on the paper is said to assist in giving a keen, non-pulling edge and consequently a smooth shave. A fresh strop can be prepared in a few moments and it is especially convenient for the traveler and camper.

Full Explanation

"So you were caught red handed counterfeiting ten-dollar bills?" said the police magistrate. "What have you to say for yourself?"

"I am not a malicious counterfeiter, and I should never have been arrested," replied the suspect. "I am a chemist whose interest is entirely scientific. I have been trying to make gold from less precious elements and I have only got as far as ten-dollar bills."

HOW

THE "MOVIES" CAN GUARD ACTORS' EYES FROM RAYS.

—The ultra-violet rays from the powerful lights used in taking motion pictures form a real menace against the eyes of the star and super alike, producing a condition of partial temporary blindness known as "Kleig eyes." This condition can be cured, but this requires no exposure to the lights during the cure, thus losing much valuable time, while the eye is likely to be permanently weakened thereafter.

To combat this condition an eyeshade has been provided which checks the action of the ultra-violet rays; but this shade also weakens the eye and it is necessary to apply it for every change of scene, as it is rapidly washed away.

Screens for the lamps themselves have not proved practical. The screen cuts off so much of the photographic light that two lamps must be used where one was used before, and the ultra-violet rays from these two are as strong as those from only one unshaded lamp.

Spectacles for the actors are, of course, impractical.

The research departments of the great film companies are at present at work on the problem. In their success lies the only hope of safety for the eyes of the celluloid actors.

HOW "WATCH" WAS NAMED

"Personal Clocks" Were First Invented for Watchman, Hence the Name.

The New England Pilgrims hold the record as far as guarantee requirements are concerned. According to an article by Mrs. W. L. Harris in the Mentor it seems that the deacons of a certain New England church, "way back in 1728, demanded a two-years' usage of a steeple clock as a fair trial before payment.

According to this writer "watches" were originally called personal clocks. They were first provided for the use of watchmen and then acquired the name "watches."

How to Make a Map.

One of the queerest of all the books that circulate in government departments is to be found at the Ordnance Survey office at Southampton, where maps are made.

At this moment the Ordnance Survey office is engaged in printing a wonderful array of new maps covering the whole of the country in scales ranging from one-sixteenth of an inch to the mile to twenty-five inches to the square mile.

The book contains "successive proofs" of the different maps, showing the stages through which a map goes before it finally reaches the public.

The first page shows the map printed in black ink on skeleton paper, giving nothing but the names of the different places. The next page is devoted to perhaps only two thick red lines—the main roads wending their way through the particular section of the country.

The third page will show the skeleton map with the main roads printed on it, while the fourth will give four or five minor and proposed roads. The fifth will show those roads on the skeleton. The sixth page is a veritable Chinese puzzle in green—the parks and woods. The next page contains the rivers and streams of the country.

Then comes a page of blue daubs representing lakes. More daubs, this time in light and dark brown, finely tinted, appear in another page—these are the low mountains and hills; while the last page but one looks like a picture of the moon printed in a deep sepia color—the highest points of the country.

Each of the series of outlines and daubs is in turn printed on the top of the skeleton map, and the finished plate gives the map as it is issued to the public.—London Tit-Bits.

How Big Can City Grow?

Just how big a city can grow has long been a subject of speculation. Some persons think that the metropolitan area of New York city will eventually have a population of 20,000,000 or 25,000,000 people.

The census figures of the county of London show that in the years from 1911 to 1921 inclusive the rate of increase in London was only 3.2 per cent, whereas the rate of increase in the rest of England was 5 per cent, says the Youth's Companion. They show, too, that in those years there was an actual migration from London of 320,000 and that for the first time in centuries there is a decided tendency of humanity away from the metropolis. Perhaps Greater London with 7,500,000 has about reached the limit of its growth.

How "Bill of Fare" Started.

The origin of the term "Bill of Fare" is as follows:

It is said that the Elector Henry of Braunschweig attracted general notice at a state dinner during a meeting of electors in Regensburg in 1489 by referring to a long list before a dish was ordered. In reply to an inquiry, the elector spread the paper out and it was found to contain a list of dishes prepared for the occasion. The idea so pleased the assembly that each of them had it introduced into his household.

Norns in Mythology Wove Fabric of Fate

Norns were the fates of Scandinavian mythology. They were three young women, by name Urth, Verdandt and Skuld—past, present and future. They sat by the well of Urdarbrunnr under the ash tree Yggdrasil, and there determined the fate of gods and men. Every day they drew water from a spring and with it sprinkled the tree, that its branches might not rot and wither away, says the Detroit News.

Originally there appears to have been but one norn—Urth—and her character was conceived in a gloomy night, making her often equivalent to death doom. Later two others were added. Two of these gave the blessings, the third the ills of life. In the legend of "Sleeping Beauty" the norns are represented as thirteen women. Usually they were conceived as spinners, weaving the fabric of fate.

Besides these great norns there were many inferior ones, both good and bad; for, says the Prose Edda, when a man is born there is a norn to determine his fate, and the same authority tells us that the unequal destinies of men in the world are attributable to the different dispositions of the norns. These lesser norns correspond to the genii of classic mythology. Women who possessed the power of prediction or magic also bore this name.

Busy Ant by No Means a Nuisance in Burma

Most people regard ants as a nuisance, especially in a garden or at a picnic, but the natives of Burma have found a use for them.

This country grows and exports sandal-wood, one of the most valuable and beautiful timbers in the world. The greater part of every tree felled is useless, however, for only the fragrant scented heart has any commercial value, and to transport the whole log would make even that not worth the cost of removal.

So the trees, after being stripped of their branches, are allowed to lie where they have fallen. The soft, sappy wood, which is useless in commerce, attracts the billions of ants who infest the forest, and to whom it is a tit-bit. In helping themselves the ants help the sandal-wood merchant, for they leave the hard heart of the trunk stripped of all its worthless integument, and thus do for nothing the work of many human laborers.

Usefulness in the Business

The president of a bank in Chicago was telling some friends at his club of a red-headed office boy he had lately taken into his employ.

"He came to me," said the banker, "with recommendations from his father, who was a schoolmate of mine. After I read the note from the father, I told the boy to take off his hat, sit down in a chair and tell me why he wanted to be a banker. His answer was:

"'Because I am good at multiplying.'"

"'Well,' I said, 'can't you subtract and divide, too?'"

"'Oh, yes,' he said, 'but because a banker wants to make all he can. I thought you wanted a boy who could multiply.'"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Restaurant Man Warned

"Tonkey," doorman at the Palace theater, is perfectly normal on some subjects—a majority, in fact—but he has a perfect obsession on the question of Mike Genora's famous corned-beef-and-cabbage. Genora, burned out in the Capitol hotel fire, is reopening soon in the old Carl Ries store—as soon as redecoration is completed.

Saturday "Tonkey" met "Mike" on the street.

"Lissen, y' old buzzard," murmured "Tonkey" in sweetest tones. "If you don't get your dang old chow dump opened up soon, and cook some corned beef and cabbage, my lovely disposition is gonna be ruined. C. B. & C. the first day, kid, or I'm gonna do some Black Hand for a certain Italian I know."—Houston Post.

Champion Mean Man

A wealthy man visited a school and gave an address. When he was through he called a little boy up to him and said, "My lad, have you a purse?" "No, sir." "I'm sorry," said the rich man. "If you had I'd have given you half a dollar to put into it."

The same man was scheduled to speak there again the following month, and when he came the boys were prepared for him; an empty purse lay hidden in every pair of trousers. And sure enough at the end of his speech he called another boy to him. "Have you a purse, little man?" he asked. "Yes, sir." "I'm glad of that," said the speaker. "If you hadn't, I should have given you half a dollar to buy one."—The Pathfinder.

Race Horses Oddly Named

The odd names given to race horses are always interesting and invariably have reason, which is more than can be said of the names of famous gallopers of the early part of the Nineteenth century. Among these quaint names are recorded: "Jack Come Tickle Me," "Jenny Come Tye Me," "I Am Little—Pity My Condition," "Sweeter When Clothed," "Watch Them and Catch Them," and "Britons Strike Home." One wonders what the modern book-maker would make of these labels on a hot day. Probably the name which has given the fraternity most trouble in recent years was Volodyovskit, which won the Derby in 1901.

The Work of Samuel M. Kier

WELLS sunk for brine to supply the salt works were troubled with what the owners called "odd, mysterious grease". Samuel M. Kier a Pittsburgh druggist, conceived the idea of saving the "grease", and in 1846 he bottled it as a medicine. He believed absolutely in the greenish fluid, at first as a medicine and later on as an illuminant. The Oil was sold at fifty cents a half-pint. About 1848 Kier experimented with it for light, racking his brains for some means to get rid of the offensive smoke and odor. To be entirely successful, the Oil must have some other than its crude form. A Philadelphia chemist advised distillation, but Kier's first attempt was not very successful. Slight changes in the camphene lamp enabled him to burn the distilled Oil without smoke. Further improvements, especially the "Virna Burner", as well as in the quality of the fluid, brought "Carbon Oil" as it was usually termed nearer perfection. "Carbon Oil" sold readily for a dollar-fifty per gallon, and provided a market for all that the neighboring salt wells could produce. The dawn of a new day was breaking.

Fifty cents a half-pint crude—and later on a dollar-fifty a gallon refined! The imperfect "Carbon Oil" of seventy-five years ago cost practically seven times as much as the highly perfected Red C Oil and White C Oil, same except in color, that you can obtain so conveniently today! But if The Red C Oil and The White C Oil cost that old-time, sky-high figure of a dollar-fifty a gallon, we could give you no finer Kerosene for your Lamps, Stoves and Incubators.

PETER'S CONFESSION

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 16:13-24.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.—Matt. 16:16.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Peter Speaks Out for Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Peter Takes His Stand.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Duties and Glory of Confessing Christ.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Does It Matter What One Believes Concerning Christ?

This confession in some sense marks the turning point in Christ's ministry. Hereafter it is more restricted to His disciples. Two reasons why this should be sufficient are (vv. 1-12): (1) The Pharisees and Sadducees show their attitude toward Him in their demand for a sign. His answer is that none shall be given save that of His death and resurrection, as symbolized in the experiences of the prophet Jonah. (2) The disciples show their inability to understand the spiritual nature of His teaching. When He warned them of the leaven of the Pharisees and Sadducees they understood Him to refer to bread, when He meant their doctrine. It was at this crisis when Christ turned from the nation which had rejected Him that Peter made this great confession. It was made in the borders of Caesarea-Philippi, practically Gentile territory.

1. Occasion Of (vv. 13-16).
Two questions of Christ provoked this confession:

1. The question as to the opinion of people concerning Him.

They recognized Him as a teacher or a prophet of more than human authority and power. Today, as then, there is a diversity of opinion among the people as to Jesus Christ. Some think He is only a man; others that He is a great teacher, but nothing more. Had He been content with this He would not have been molested in Jerusalem, for the Jews willingly acknowledged Him as more than a human teacher. It was His persistent claim to be the God-man, the Son of God, that sent Him to the cross.

2. The second question involved the personal opinion of the disciples concerning Him. To be able to tell what others think of Jesus is not enough; there must be definite, correct and personal belief on Him.

11. The New Body, the Church, Announced (vv. 17-20).

Peter had made a noble confession of Christ, so now Christ confesses him. If we confess Christ He will confess us (Matt. 10:32, 33). Christ declared His intention of bringing into existence a new body to the members of which He will give eternal life, and to whose hands He will entrust the keys of the Kingdom. Peter was to have a distinguished place in this body. The keys entrusted to Him were used on the day of Pentecost, and again in the case of Cornelius. Association in this new body cannot be broken by death, for the gates of hades shall not prevail against it. This body, the church, is of a heavenly origin, a heavenly calling and a heavenly inheritance.

111. The Cross the Way to the Throne (vv. 21-33).

This was, no doubt, startling to the disciples. They did not realize that redemption was to be accomplished through the passion of the cross. So unwelcome was this announcement that Peter cried, "This shall not be unto thee." Peter later saw through this darkness to the glory on the hill-top beyond. A new hope then filled his breast (1 Pet. 1:3, 4). Victory through death is yet the stumbling block of many. Many are stumbling over the doctrine of salvation and redemption through the suffering of the cross.

IV. The Cost of Discipleship (vv. 24-27).

To follow Christ means suffering. To follow Him is to turn one's back upon the world. Life can only be saved by losing it. If we are going to be Christians we must share Christ's suffering. We cannot go to heaven on flowery beds of ease.

1. There must be denial of self (v. 24). There is a wide difference between self-denial and denial of self. Self-denial is practiced everywhere by all people, but only the disciples of Christ or Christian people deny self. Christ takes the place of self.

2. "Take up his cross." This cross is the suffering and shame which lie in the path of loyalty to God. To do our duty will mean suffering (II Tim. 3:12).

3. Follow Christ. This means to have the mind of Christ, to do like Christ. All such shall be rewarded when Christ comes in glory.

What to Hate

I will tell you what to hate. Hate hypocrisy; hate cant; hate indolence, oppression, injustice; hate Pharisaism; hate them as Christ hated them—with a deep, living, God-like hatred.—F. W. Robertson.

With Every Day

Every day, as it rises out of eternity, keeps putting to each of us this question afresh—What will you do before this day has sunk into eternity and nothingness again?—F. W. Robertson.

Stewardship: Our Money for Christ Malachi 3:16; Corinthians 8:1-7

Many appeals for money have been based on the first of these two Scriptures. Malachi 3:10 should be memorized and pondered. It is an enlargement of Proverbs 12:25 which declares that "The liberal soul shall be made fat." The last word in this quotation denotes an abundance of spiritual blessing as used for example in Psalm 63:5, "My soul shall be satisfied as with marrow and fatness." It is quite true of human experience that liberality enlarges the capacity of the human soul to receive blessing from God and this capacity determines the measure of His gifts.

There are many ways of spending money. The worst kind of expenditure is that for ostentation and show, a yielding to the love of display. The next lowest is the expenditure for eating and drinking of superfluous things. The drug store and the ice cream parlor concoctions are a temptation and menace to many. Dimes and quarters soon run up into dollars, the aggregate of which amounts to millions of dollars. Over against this is the sad fact that two-thirds of the earth's inhabitants have not yet heard of Him who can save to the uttermost. Expenditure for personal culture and education, for research work in combating disease, or improving working conditions in the realm of industry, and for the beautifying of cities and communities is most commendable.

For the true Christian, the child of God born from above, the stewardship of money must be considered in the light of New Testament Scripture. The Macedonian Christians are good examples. According to verse 5 of our Scripture text they gave their own selves to the Lord and then gave of their substance according to the will of God. Such conduct is the result of a gracious operation within the heart and is referred to in verse 7 as a grace in itself, just the same as faith, spiritual knowledge and effective testimony. In this same verse there is an appeal to abound in this grace of liberality because according to the following verse it proves the sincerity of our love. Take this last phrase, "The sincerity of our love," and apply it honestly to our topic. It may work a revolution within. It is written, "No word of God shall be void of power."

How Followed Owner

Hogs usually are neither intelligent nor companionable, but like other animals they do not always run true to type. In moving from one farm to another, perhaps ten miles away, Mr. Turner, a farmer of the Kentucky hills, decided, writes a contributor to the Youth's Companion, to leave his herd of forty swine in an open field at his old home until the following morning when he would return for them. Next morning he was up early in his new home, making preparations for the arduous task of driving before him over rough mountain roads two score hogs, any or all of which might prove refractory. But when he emerged from the house into the front yard imagine his astonishment at seeing his hogs, all forty of them, standing before him at the gate!

Were the hogs so much attached to their owner that they followed him to his new home? Or did they follow the trail of the farmer's cattle? The owner and all the neighbors, too, were completely mystified.

Famous Old Highland Town

Crief was greatly beloved by Charles Rende, who said: "The habitable globe possesses no more delightful spot than Crief."

But the district is not only charming; it is also of hoary antiquity. Stone and bronze instruments, records of a bygone age, have been found there. In 1811, three miles from Crief, in the site where the Roman legions under Agricola defeated the British leader, Galgacus, and thirty thousand men. The earl palatine of Strathearn, "leader of the Celtic party in Scotland," held kings in their own right, held courts at Crief from the earliest time of which we have any record, but modern Crief may be said to date its rise from the opening of the first railway in 1850.—London Post.

Climbing a Tall Smokestack

When a huge steel smokestack of a power house needed painting and it was found rather difficult to arrange a tackle to haul up a man, the fireman made a parachute that fitted snugly inside of the stack. He attached a string to the parachute and allowed the draft in the stack to carry it up. A small rope was next tied to the string and pulled up, and finally a rope strong enough to hold the tackle, which was arranged to hoist up the painter.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Have Yet to Learn Much About Disease

What is disease? Everybody knows that disease involves a physical injury to tissue cells, but what and how? The truth is, we are really only at the beginning of our knowledge of the cause of disease. We must be able to measure exactly the injury, the vitality and the degree of recovery of body cells to find the answer, writes Paul H. De Kruif in the American Mercury.

Recently a man named Osterhout, obscure save among biologists, has made a step toward answering the question. Working with a common sea-weed, laminaria, he has hit upon give exact meanings to the hitherto vague terms, vitality, injury and recovery. He has found that normal weeds possess a certain resistance to the passage of an electric current, that this resistance may be accurately measured, and that it is always of exactly the same order of magnitude for the cells of healthy laminaria. But take the cells out of their natural environment in sea water and put them in solutions of different content and density, and their resistance to the electric current falls at once. The greater the damage to the cells the greater the fall.

The coincidence of the fall in resistance with the degree of injury has enabled Osterhout to construct equations which predict the exact amount of injury that the cells of laminaria will suffer. He can write down just how much and how long a cell can be exposed to damage and still recover completely. In brief, Osterhout measures injury, vitality and recovery. That is the beginning of science. That is the real beginning of the answer to the question: "What is disease?"

Uncharted Rocks Are Terror to Mariners

Uncharted rocks and islands of the sea have mysterious ways of dodging and befouling mapmakers. Sometimes they are dangerous.

One of the worst, Lamb rock, was found about thirty years ago coming straight up to the surface in water 200 feet deep. It was like a cathedral spire and rose straight into the middle of the Canadian liner lane into the St. Lawrence river. In calm weather its tip was 83 feet below the surface. This is a bare margin of safety, but in rough weather the rock was a lurking peril to any big ship that might come along.

The Avocet rock, in the southern end of the Red sea, also stands in the middle of the steamer lane to India. The steamer Avocet struck it and sank in 104 fathoms. It looked like pure carelessness on the part of the captain. The British vessel Flying Fish was sent to investigate. It could find no trace of any rock. Then another ship, the Teddington, sank at the same place. Another British vessel went to investigate, and it, too, could find nothing. Then a third vessel nosed about in the vicinity for six weeks with equal ill success.

Finally H. M. S. Stork made an investigation and located the rock only three hundred yards from the place where one of its predecessors had anchored. The rock was covered by a bare fifteen feet of water at low tide.

Surveying the Seas

Plans for the most complete survey of the ocean ever attempted have been inaugurated by a conference representing scientific branches of the United States government and allied institutions.

One or more ships will be fitted out with a complete laboratory and equipped with the latest scientific apparatus for the first cruise. The sea bottom will not only be mapped, but the composition of the water, its density, temperature, and currents which affect the distribution of marine plant and animal life, will be studied at all depths.

Five-sevenths of the surface of the earth is covered by water. This water area can produce more food than all the land can ever be made to yield, and one of the purposes of the expedition will be to take an inventory of such food possibilities.

On Growing Old

When we become old we want to get off the streets. We always sympathize with the old men who have nothing to do, who are not wanted anywhere and who have no place to go. When we become old and useless, we want a place of our own to go to, a place that is absolutely our own and which we can manage as we please. We hope it will be a little place where we can potter around with fruits and flowers and vegetables and chickens, and keep busy. We don't want to give people the opportunity to show neglect nor idle time in which to see visions of the grim monster. Old men who loiter about the streets, it seems to us, make a mistake.—Arkansas Thomas Cat.

Origin of Silk Culture

Although silk culture originated in China and the very name China finds its birth in a term meaning "silk people," the United States looks to Japan for most of this raw material. American mills are weaving nearly 50,000,000 pounds of raw silk annually, of which about 30 per cent comes from Japanese mulberry orchards, says the Detroit News. The ugly little silk worm is treated with great respect in the Orient, for it brings to the far eastern peoples more than $300,000,000 from the United States alone.

Answered Anyhow

The captain entered the officers' mess kitchen. "Do I understand there will be no fruit tonight?" he demanded sternly.

"Yes," replied the new and careless private.

"Yes, what?" replied the captain.

"Yes, we have no bananas."—London Tit-Bits.

TANEYTOWN LOCALS

Items of news from town, or vicinity are always wanted for this column. Especially accidents, sales of real estate, fires, important happenings, visits to or from the community social events, and all matters of general interest to those at home, and away from home.

Mrs. A. G. Wolf, of Silver Run, spent several days with Mrs. D. M. Mehring and family.

Miss Euphima Stoner and brother, Willard, called on Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Dern, Tuesday evening.

Wilbur B. Mehring, of the University of Maryland, spent Armistice day with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. David M. Mehring.

Mrs. Martha Fringer and Mrs. Clara Bricker spent the week visiting friends and relatives in Hampstead and Greenmount.

Rev. W. V. Garrett, with John H. Kiser as lay delegate, attended the meetings of the Lutheran Conference, at Walkersville, this week.

The "No Trespassing" list still grows. Evidently, our farmer friends do not want hunters; and gentlemen do not usually go where they are not welcome.

William Anders and family entertained, last Sunday, John D. Fox, and Victor Windesheim and wife, of Pikesville, and Misses Clara and Mildred Lipes, of Baltimore.

The Charter for the Pythian Sisters, the first Ladies Lodge in Carroll County, has been ordered and upon its receipt the ladies will receive a postal card telling them when to appear for initiation.

O. J. Stonesifer, Editor of the Pilot, Union Bridge, who has just recovered from a siege of pneumonia, paid our office an appreciated visit, on Wednesday, giving an opportunity for a nice long "shop" talk.

The play "Bashful Mr. Bobbs" presented in the Opera House last Friday night, by two classes of the Westminster Lutheran Sunday School, was a very creditable effort and was fairly well attended. The music was particularly good.

Miss Eliza Birnie and friend, Miss Carrere, witnessed the Princeton-Harvard foot ball game, last Saturday, at Cambridge, Mass., when Harvard was defeated, 34 to 0. The ladies enjoyed the game immensely, and enthusiastically "rooted" for Princeton.

Canvassers for the Red Cross, report very fair results. This is one of the objects of benevolence that ought to be kept up, without question. There may be questions involved as to some efforts, but not as to Red Cross work. It is absolutely dependable, and a needed work for emergencies anywhere in the world.

The students of Taneytown High School have improved their school monthly "The Flame" for this year, by turning it out in Magazine form, making it more attractive in appearance. The November issue, just out, is very creditable in every respect, and equals many College publications of the same class.

The cafeteria and bazaar for the benefit of the Taneytown school, will be held next Friday and Saturday, November 21 and 22 from 4 to 10 P. M. Fancy work, cake and candy will be on sale besides soups, sandwiches, pies and ice cream. Help the school along by getting your supper and your Christmas presents at the school. Show your town spirit!

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Null, entertained the following guests Sunday: Mr. and Mrs. John Catzendafner, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Selby, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Lansinger, Mrs. Samuel King, and daughters, Helen and Catherine; Misses Pauline Lansinger, Ruth Hilbert, Mary Smith, Ethel Lansinger, Arle Lansinger, Grover Bankard, Evin Smith, Johnnie Selby, Ralph Smith and Norman Lansinger.

A Pennsylvania farmer, last week, shot a trespasser in the head and back, who was hunting on the farmer's premises, and is now under arrest for "Assault with intent to kill". He claims to have been greatly annoyed by hunters, and had ordered this particular one to leave his premises; but, no person, for such an offense, is justified in "taking law in his own hands." The right way is to prosecute offenders—not to shoot them.

John Hoagland, of New York, well known here, met with a serious mishap, last Saturday. While engaged in some electrical work, 11,000 volts passed through his body, his right hand being badly burned, and the current passed through both feet. He fell about five feet on his head, but fortunately there were no serious results from the fall. Due to the fact that he was standing on iron, a complete circuit was not made, which saved him from instant death.

Mrs. Margaret A. Harman is visiting her sister, Mrs. Jacob H. Uhler, of Trenton, Baltimore Co.

Miss Virginia Ott was surprised on Wednesday evening, with a birthday party, given by her friends.

Mrs. Helen P. Hill has been engaged as companion and house overseer, by a lady in Washington, D. C.

Don't miss the opportunity of having your baby examined at the free baby clinic, Saturday, Nov. 15, at 2:00 P. M., at the Firemen's building.

Mr. and Mrs. Burdette Webster, and two children, and Mrs. Tschudy, of Baltimore, spent last Sunday as the guest of Miss Mary and Wallace Rein-dollar.

Beginning Nov. 15, the Bus service run through Taneytown to Westminster and Reisterstown. For the schedule, see advertisement in this issue.

About sixteen members of the Taneytown congregation attended the Middle Conference Missionary meeting, at Winter's Lutheran Church, on Thursday last.

The mother of Rev. T. D. Ritter, who visited here during the summer, is suffering from gangrene in one foot, and has been taken to a hospital, possibly for an operation.

Those visiting the U. B. Parsonage Sunday were: Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Ritter and son, Alonza W., and Mr. and Mrs. J. Ira Ritter and son, Ira McLean; Rev. Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Statton, all of Hagerstown.

A brief item in the proceedings of the School Board contains the information that the Taneytown School has been ordered closed, on January 1, due to the unsafe condition of the building. This likely means that the school itself will be continued, but not in the main building.

(For the Record.)

Russell Reinaman and wife, entertained on Sunday the following guests: John Frock, wife and daughter, Freda of Keyville; Bruce A. Shirk and wife of Mt. Union; Joshua Reinaman, wife and sons, Samuel and Franklin, of Trevanion, and Mrs. Raymond Coe, called at the same place in the evening.

More than $30,190,035 worth of diamonds were mined in South Africa alone last year. In spite of the fact that this is three times the amount mined in 1922, the sales exceeded the production by 531,175 carats.

LAST PAGE EDITORIAL.

Look on the Other Side.

Did you ever clip an article from a newspaper, or magazine, and then find that you had spoiled a still more interesting article on the other side? Did you ever make a hasty bargain, carelessly, only to find on more mature consideration that you had made a regrettable mistake? Life is full of just such experiences.

There is hardly an important question, or situation, in every-day life that does not have two sides to it—sometimes more than two. We hear the personal story of a witness, and are apt to be favorably impressed with it; but, if we are a factor in the question in any way, we should take the time for further thought and investigation, and hear the "other side".

There is not always time for careful investigation, perhaps, but there is such a thing as cultivating a judicial mind—an intuition that calls for fairness—and if we cultivate this faculty, we are apt not to make many mistakes, even in enforced hasty conclusions.

Most people act from right impulses, as they see them, and this should be our first thought before expressing condemnation of anybody—is it true, and why? Especially should we consider the character and standing of a person before pronouncing what we call "snap" judgment. If we have known men for a long while, we are apt to be mistaken if we change our opinion of them on a single bit of testimony, without first hearing "his side."

Consider the Editor.

He weareth purple and fine linen. His abode is amongst the mansions of the rich. His wife hath her limousine and her first born sporteth a racing car that can hit her up in 40 flat.

Lo! All the people breaketh their necks to hand him money. A child is born unto the wife of a merchant in the bazaar. The physician getteth ten gold plunks. The Editor writeth a stick and a half and telleth the multitude that the child tippeh the beam at nine pounds. Yea, he lieth even as a centurion. And the proud father giveth him a Cremono.

Behold, the young growth up and graduath. And the editor puteth into his paper a swell notice. He telleth of the wisdom of the young woman and of her exceeding comeliness. Like unto the roses of Sharon is she and her gown is played up to beat the band. And the dressmaker getteth two score and four iron men. And the editor gets a note of thanks from the sweet girl graduate.

The daughter goeth on a journey. And the editor throweth himself on the story of the farewell party. It runneth a column solid. And the fair one remembereth him from afar with a picture postal card that costeth six for a jitney.

Behold she returneth and the youth of the city fall down and worship. She picked one and lo, she picked a lemon. But the editor calleth him one of our promising young men and getteth away with it. And they send unto him a bid to the wedding feast and behold the bids are fashioned by Montgomery Hawick, in a far city.

Flowery and long is the wedding notice which the editor printeth. The minister getteth ten bones. The groom standeth the editor off for a twelve-months' subscription.

All flesh is grass and in time the wife is gathered unto the soil. The minister getteth his bit. The editor printeth the death notice, two columns of obituary, three lodge notices, a cubit of poetry and a card of thanks. And he forgetteth to read proof on the dead, and the darned thing cometh out "Gone to Her Last Roosting Place."

And all that are akin to the deceased jumpeth on the editor with exceeding great jumps. And they pulleth out their ads and cancelleth their subscriptions and they swing the hammer unto the third and fourth generations.

Canst thou beat it?—Exchange.

To Study Agricultural Needs.

President Coolidge's promised National Committee to study agricultural conditions and recommend measures for farm relief, promised early in the Presidential campaign, and which was handled rather contemptuously by some of his opponents during the campaign, has been announced, as follows; Robert D. Carey, Chm., of Wyoming; Charles S. Barrett, of Georgia; Ralph P. Merritt, of California; O. E. Bradfretre, of Illinois; Lewis T. Taber, of Ohio; W. C. Coffey, of Minnesota; and Fred H. Bixly, of California.

No protest has been made, so far as the newspapers state, against any of the appointees, who are said to have more than a local reputation for their qualification concerning agriculture and its needs.
