

HOOVER REPORTS FARMING BETTER

Foreign Trade and Business are Helping Agriculture.

Secretary of Commerce, Herbert Hoover, who is credited with being the country's soundest statistician, and who does not "play politics" with his statements, has issued a report covering industry, agriculture and transportation, in which he emphasizes the opinion that farming has partly "come back" and is coming still more. He says in part:

"The outstanding features of the fiscal year were: First, the advance in agricultural prices, which had hitherto lagged behind industry since the slump of 1920; second, the beginning of sound policies in German reparations leading to a hopeful measure of economic recovery in Europe, and, third, the complete recovery of our own industry and commerce, great stability of prices, high production, full employment, expanding foreign trade and prosperity through the business world."

"The situation of agricultural prices may be well indicated by comparing September prices with the general level of commodity prices. Based upon 1913 as 100, the wholesale price index of all commodities was 149. The corresponding price index of No. 1 Northern wheat was 148, of cotton 191, corn 186 and hogs 118. From the low point since the beginning of 1921 these figures represent recoveries for wheat of 37 points, cotton 99, corn 111 and hogs 37. Many readjustments are needed yet, but agriculture has turned an important corner and this change marks a vital step in the whole after-war economic readjustment."

Taneytown Chautauqua.

In looking over the program it seems that we have a splendid treat before us, in our Chautauqua, beginning Saturday, Dec. 6th.

A change has been made in the lecturer and we are to have Frank B. Pearson, director of Swarthmore Chautauqua—his subject, "World Building."

The Ladies Quartet must please everyone, for in it we find a soprano soloist, a harpist, cartoonist and entertainer, whistler and violinist. So much for the first day.

Sunday gives us an extra program which is sure to be enjoyed.

If Mildred Clemens, who comes Monday, is one-half so clever and entertaining as her cousin, Mark Twain, she will prove a rare treat. She brings with her singers and players from Hawaii, unspoiled native musicians. "Happy Hawaii," a scenic, illustrated Musical Travelling production, stands by itself among the entertainments of the day, for it visualizes, truly, the life and lure of these "Islands of Tranquil Delight." It is not only novel, but hauntingly fascinating. Pictures in motion and color, story in vivid language, native singing, dancing, and instrumental music are blended into a most artistic whole.

Mr. Visocchi with his concert accordion of 165 keys, will give us a most unusual afternoon. Then too, we have the Jolly Juniors, from the Taneytown young folk take the stage. We all enjoy these stunts and frolics.

Closing night, S. S. Henry & Co., promise a wonderful program of fun and mystery.

Later Election Results.

The election of Senator Brookhart, in Iowa, will be contested before the Senate itself. It is claimed that several thousand Republican votes in the state, against Brookhart, were not counted because of identifying marks, the voters simply meaning to show that they, as Republicans, voted "against." In a total vote of 894,000 Brookhart appears to have a lead of 755 by throwing out certain arrow marked ballots.

In a vote of more than 1,200,000, Judge B. M. Willoughby, Republican, has been returned elected in Indiana, to State Supreme Court in the first district, by one vote, according to an official recount by the state returning board.

In Colorado, William Heebner, candidate for County Commissioner, was so sure of his own election that he voted for his opponent, which lost him the election by the one—his own—vote.

The National organization of the Anti-saloon League claims that the "dry" vote in the new Congress will be larger than in the present Congress, but without giving exact figures.

"Ted" Christianson, a Minnesota newspaper editor, was elected Governor of Minnesota by a plurality of 40,000 over the Democratic and Farmer-Labor candidates. He was almost unanimously supported by the weekly papers of the state. He already had a good record in the state legislature.

The official figures for Baltimore, give Coolidge a plurality of 9366, and the figures for the entire state, 14,342.

Plans for a highway from New Orleans to Portland, Oregon, which will follow as nearly as possible the boundary lines of the old Louisiana Purchase, have been officially launched. It will commemorate the purchase of the territory by the United States.

HOSPITAL FOR HANOVER.

Will Be Built and Endowed by Messrs Sheppard & Myers.

Announcement was made by H. D. Sheppard and C. N. Myers on Friday through the Evening Sun, that it is their intention to build and equip a first-class non-sectarian hospital for the benefit of the community. In addition to the erection and equipping of the institution they also announced that they will set up an endowment fund of $100,000 toward its maintenance.

The site selected for the hospital is located on the northeast corner of Highland Avenue and Charles Street, one of the highest points in Hanover, making it an ideal spot for the institution. Highland Avenue is the first street north of Stock Street and runs parallel to it. The site consists of a number of lots recently sold at public auction by the George A. Long estate. These lots were turned over by the purchasers to Messrs Sheppard and Myers at original cost and without profit.

Application will be made for a charter by E. H. Bange, local attorney, within the next few days. Plans will then be started for the erection of the proposed building so that matters will be in shape to go ahead with operations early in the Spring.—Hanover Record.

School Trouble in Freedom District.

A communication to the Sykesville Herald, last week, protests against the closing of the Pine Knob school, charging that this was done without the knowledge or consent of the local trustees. A committee of protestants was appointed to take charge of the situation. The communication shows the division of sentiment in Freedom district over the location of the proposed new school building, and says:

"It was agreed between all the farmers that irrespective of the decision of the local school board as to whether they will reopen the Pine Knob school which they closed down without consulting the trustees, that under no consideration would they send their children to Sykesville school, as it was pointed out to the local Board that the children are hauled to school in an ice wagon, just as if they were cattle and not children, as a great many times this so-called bus is late and the children will have to stand out in the bitter cold on the road, freezing themselves to death."

It was stated at the hearing of the committee that the whole scheme in back of this is to get a large attendance in Sykesville so that they can get an excuse for building a High School, which being at the end of the county line would be of no use except to a few storekeepers in Sykesville, who, by the way, have no children attending school, so they don't care how many other children freeze, just so it pleases them.

If a High School is necessary, it was pointed out, that the most logical place for it was Eldersburg, which has four cross roads, and children can easily reach it from all directions.

The farmers in the Freedom district have decided that if the local School Board does not re-open the Pine Knob school the matter will be taken up with the County Commissioners, and if necessary will take it up with the Educational Department of the State of Maryland."

Christmas Seal Sale November 27th.

The seventeenth annual sale of the Tuberculosis Christmas Seals will open on Thanksgiving Day, November 27th, in all the counties of the State as well as in Baltimore City.

Each county organization has perfected its plan for conducting what it is hoped will be the most successful Tuberculosis Seal sale ever held.

Last Summer, 155 undernourished children from the counties of Maryland and Baltimore were cared for at the "Miracle House" at Claiborne, Maryland. It is hoped that many more children will have the opportunity to attend next summer.

The Maryland Tuberculosis Association holds clinics throughout the State in co-operation with the health authorities and physicians. These clinics are rendering a distinct service to the people of Maryland who are unable to pay for a consultant's examination. Suspects, and contacts are examined when referred by physicians for corroboration of diagnosis, resulting in a number of early cases being subsequently recommended for sanatorium treatment. Families are advised as to the proper home care and prophylactic measures in general which result in their protection and that of the public.

So all are urged to lend their aid in this work of saving human lives by buying as many Tuberculosis Christmas Seals as possible. When you purchase these Seals you actually help to eradicate and prevent this scourge.

The Coldest Nov. 17.

Monday morning was the coldest Nov. 17 on record in the eastern states. The temperature in Pennsylvania and Maryland varied from 10° to 22° and in far north New England to zero or below. Three deaths due to cold were reported; one in New York, one in Boston and one in Hartford, Conn. Snow fall was partly general, on Saturday and Sunday, the cold wave developing on Sunday night.

ANDERSON WINS FREEDOM FROM JAIL.

Ex-Supt of N. Y. Anti-Saloon League, Free Dec. 24.

William H. Anderson, well known all over Maryland will be freed from Sing Sing prison, N. Y., on Christmas Eve, and will eat his Christmas dinner at his home in Yonkers, N. Y.

The State Board of Parole reversed its ruling of a month ago that prisoners must serve at least one year and ordered him paroled on December 24. The change of front by the parole commissioners on the question of releasing a prisoner for good behavior after he has served nine months occasioned great surprise and led to considerable discussion.

While acting as State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, Anderson had been charged with and convicted of forgery in his administration of the finances of the League. In the minds of many of his friends, there was always doubt as to the reality of his guilt, and many claimed that he was a victim of his political and other enemies, because of his activity against the liquor interests.

Proceedings of the Orphans' Court.

Monday, Nov. 17, 1924—Letters of administration on the estate of Samuel D. E. Fogle, deceased, were granted unto Melvin T. Hess, who received order to notify creditors.

Frank W. Mather, administrator of Thomas W. Mather, deceased, received order to sell personal estate.

Howard W. Geiman and David R. Geiman, administrators of Jeremiah Geiman, deceased, returned inventory of personal property, and debts due.

William H. Shank, administrator of Rebecca Stonieser, deceased, settled his first and final account.

Letters of guardianship of Arlene V. Guyton, Miriam L. Guyton, Charlotte E. Guyton and Edgar G. Guyton, Jr., infants, were granted unto Cora B. Guyton.

The last will and testament of David Green, deceased, was duly admitted to probate.

Tuesday, Nov. 18, 1924—The sale of real estate of Charles C. Gorsuch, deceased, was finally ratified by the Court.

Conrad Mauler, administrator of Collin Brown, deceased, settled his first account.

The last will and testament of Sarah J. Stonieser, deceased, was duly admitted to probate.

Note:—Thursday, November 27, being a legal holiday, Court House offices will be closed.

Radio Culture in the Home.

The 26,000,000 American homes are being very rapidly equipped with the service and entertainment supplied by Radio.

The home circle made more attractive, family ties strengthened, and a higher grade of culture for the individual is being established for the American people.

Take an ordinary Sunday evening program and it is safe to say the average American family never listened to a finer general cultural entertainment.

Broadcasting stations are more and more demanding high class performers and many of them render the finest forms of high class compositions.

Nearly every broadcasting station in our country is now supplying at least one complete church service on Sunday and sometimes two or more.

These religious services are on broad lines, by preachers of all denominations.

Further improvements in radio programs are proposed by the Radio Corporation of America through superpower broadcasting stations working in conjunction with local stations.—The Manufacturer.

Trust Company Resources in Maryland.

Trust Company resources in Maryland, for the year ending June 30, were $228,178,970, an increase of $24,009,099 over 1923, according to "Trust Companies of the United States," just published by the United States Mortgage & Trust Company of New York. The Middle Atlantic trust companies reported assets of $7,534,200,000.

The totals for the country were $16,025,580,000, a gain of $1,584,042,000, or nearly 11% over 1923, and deposits increased from $11,828,983,000 to $13,289,148,000, or more than 12%.

In commenting on the figures for the year, John W. Platten, President of the United States Mortgage & Trust Company, says:

"It is significant that Trust Company resources in the United States have more than doubled in eight years and have practically trebled in twelve years. These tremendous increases, together with the rapidly mounting volume of corporate and personal trust business, give evidence of the deep rooted and commanding position of Trust Companies, and furnish the best evidence of their ever growing usefulness."

A total of $13,648.21 was collected by the Maryland La Follette campaign managers, of which, there is a balance left of $723.55. The small contributions were many of 5 cents, while the largest was one of $979.10.

WHAT SHALL THEY EAT?

Importance of Proper Food for Little Children.

"Eat nourishing food, takes sometime each day for play out-of-doors, get plenty of sleep" this is the advice of Dr. John S. Fulton, Director of the State Department of Health, to the school children whose records are marked "Undernourished" or "Underweight". Dr. Fulton adds:

"It isn't the lack of food, but badly balanced food, too many sweets, failure to drink milk and to eat other nourishing foods, that is largely responsible for the number of undernourished and underweight children that are found by the school physicians and the health officers in the medical inspections of schools throughout the counties."

With the idea of giving the children meals that will be inviting and that at the same time will supply what growing children need, some suggested menus that were prepared by Miss Olive Bolcum, Nutrition Worker of the U. S. Public Health Service, for children from 8 to 12 years old, have been recommended to mothers who are anxious to see their children improve. Here are some of them:

Breakfast: 1 baked apple; a cup of oatmeal with one-half a cup of milk, 2 slices of bread and butter, and a cup of milk to drink.

Dinner: 1 cup of vegetable soup; corn bread, 1 baked Irish potato, 1 ball (broiled) Hamburger steak, 2/3 cup custard.

Afternoon Lunch: 1 peanut butter sandwich; 1 apple.

Supper: Milk toast (3 slices of bread); 1/4 cup of cooked fruit; 1 cup of milk to drink.

Breakfast: 1 orange, 1 cup of corn meal mush with 1/2 cup top milk, 2 slices of toast with butter, 1 cup of milk to drink.

Dinner: 1 cup clear soup, poached egg on toast, 1 baked sweet potato, 1/4 cup creamed peas and carrots, 1/2 cup bread pudding with raisins.

Afternoon Lunch: 2 graham crackers, pear or other fruit.

Supper: 1/4 cup apple sauce, 1 cup milk, 2 slices bread and butter, 2 oatmeal cookies.

Breakfast: 4 stewed prunes, 1 cup steamed rice, 1/4 cup top milk, 2 slices bread and butter, 1 cup milk to drink.

Dinner: 1 boiled Irish potato, 1/2 cup turnip greens, 1 scant cup lamb stew, bread and butter.

Afternoon Lunch: 2 oatmeal cookies, 1 cup malted milk.

Supper: 1 baked apple, 1/2 cup cottage cheese, 1 cup cocoa.

Breakfast: 2 tablespoons dried fruit with raisins, 1 cup rolled oats with 1/4 cup top milk, 2 slices bread and butter, 1 cup of milk to drink.

Dinner: 1 baked apple, a slice broiled halibut steak, cooked tomato or fresh ripe tomato, bread and butter, 1/2 cup fruit whip.

Afternoon Lunch: 1 fruit sandwich.

Supper: 1 cup cream of celery soup, rice and custard pudding, bread and butter, 1 cup milk.

Breakfast: 1 very ripe pear, or peach, 1 cup grits and top milk, bread and butter, 1 cup of milk to drink.

Dinner: Macaroni and cheese, string beans, bread and butter, ice cream and cookies.

Afternoon Lunch: 1 cottage cheese and nut sandwich.

Supper: 1 scrambled egg on toast, stewed figs and ginger bread, 1 glass of milk to drink.

Breakfast: 1/2 cup stewed dried peaches, 1 cup of mush and top milk, bread and butter, 1 cup of milk to drink.

Dinner: Split pea soup, 1 baked potato, lettuce, 1 slice of roast beef.

Afternoon Lunch: 1 jelly sandwich

Supper: Bowl of clabber, corn bread, 1 baked pear or cooked fruit.

Breakfast: 1/2 cup of stewed fruit, 1 cup of steamed rice, toast, 1 cup of milk to drink.

Dinner: Stewed chicken, dumplings steamed 20 minutes, jelly, asparagus, bread and butter.

Afternoon Lunch: Slice bread and butter, grape juice.

Supper: 1 soft boiled egg, bread and butter, fruit cookie.

Note:—With underweight children it is recommended that one cup of milk be substituted for fruit in the afternoon lunch. 1/2 hour rest should be taken at this time.

Four Eclipses in 1925.

There will be four eclipses in 1925, two of the Sun and two of the Moon.

A total eclipse of the Sun will take place January 24, visible here. The eclipse will begin at 7:41 A. M., and be complete at 10:06 A. M., and end at 12:06 P. M., Eastern Standard time.

A partial eclipse of the Moon will occur on February 8, visible in the eastern portion of the United States. The eclipse will begin at 1:48 P. M., be complete at 4:42 and end at 7:35 P. M.

Annular eclipse of the Sun, July 21, invisible in the United States.

A partial eclipse of the Sun, August 4, visible only in the western portion of the United States.

Did You Know This?

A scar on a tree caused by barbed wire cutting on the trunk three feet from the ground when the tree is ten years old will still be three feet from the earth when that tree is thirty-five years of age or older. A surveyor's blaze struck shoulder-high a hundred years ago will still be shoulder-high today if the tree yet stands. A tree expands in girth with the seasons, but greater height is attained only by new growth at the tree top.

TWO BAD WRECKS ON BALTIMORE & OHIO

One Man and Hundreds of Animals Killed and Injured.

The fireman was killed and two postal clerks injured when the Capital limited from Baltimore to Chicago was derailed at Weverton, last Saturday afternoon. Ross, the engineer was also seriously injured.

The engine and seven of the 11 coaches of the train left the rails as it was switching from the westbound to the eastbound track because two derailed cars of a freight train ahead blocked the former.

Ross, according to the official statement, was making the crossover at excessive speed, "disregarding speed restrictions through the crossover, as indicated by the signals and as fixed by standard instructions." Ross is in a serious condition at a hospital in Brunswick.

Heavy loss in livestock and great property damage was caused early Saturday morning when 14 loaded cars, and an engine of an eastbound Baltimore and Ohio stock train was wrecked near Buckeystown, after having run down a horse, which had wandered on the tracks. Conductor McQuinn, of Baltimore, was slightly injured, the other members of the crew making miraculous escapes.

It was estimated that several hundred head of cattle and hogs were killed in the crash, the fourteen cars, the majority loaded with livestock, piling up in a mass at the rear of the overturned engine. One refrigerator car of beef was among those wrecked. Hundreds of hogs, cows and calves liberated when the cars were wrecked, had wandered for miles around the wreck scene.

Engineer Moxley, of Baltimore, and his fireman, who were in the cab of the engine when the train struck the horse, escaped without a scratch. As the engine left the tracks, and turned over the engineer and his fireman began to climb to the top side of the cab. When the engine came to rest on its side, hundreds of yards from the scene of the crash, the engineer was sitting on the outside of the cab. Immediately behind the engine thirteen cars were piled up.

The train consisted of 60 cars, one a refrigerator car the remainder loaded principally with livestock. The wreck occurred Saturday morning shortly after 4 o'clock, and tore up hundreds of yards of track. Late in the afternoon it was announced that 60 percent of the live stock in the thirteen cars had either been killed or were so badly injured that they have been slaughtered.

Public Opinion.

The man who tries to please everybody generally pleases nobody. Long before the Christian era Esop illustrates this in his story of the old man who tried to conform to public opinion in the treatment of his donkey—all that he had—and not only miserably failed but lost his donkey into the bargain.

In the course of a speech recently made in Perth, the "fair city" which Sir Walter Scott has rendered famous in one of his romances, Lord Dewar made some pointed observations on public opinion as it is today. He said that as one walked along life's highway one would find that public opinion was "paradoxical at every turn from the cradle to the grave." For example, if a man did not succeed in his calling he was pronounced a failure. If he made money he was called a profiteer. If he went to church on Sunday he was a hypocrite; if he staid away he was a sinner. If he gave to some public object it was an advertisement; if he didn't he was stingy.

The vagaries of public opinion have played too great a part in shaping the destinies of nations as well as individuals; thus occasions have arisen when dictators were found the only means of disentangling nations from the muddling of "many men of many minds." If individuals were to follow the conglomerate advice so freely handed to them by their friends confusion and disaster would be inevitable. A man should be guided up to a certain point by the experience of others—this is only common sense—but his ultimate course must be shaped by his own reason.—Dearborn Independent.

Fire Warning Signs.

Six more fire warning signs have been distributed throughout the State. These posters are the nature of an appeal to the hunters, fishermen, automobilists and picnics, brush burners and wood choppers. Each poster contains a picture at the top and then at the bottom a verse telling of the evil effects of their carelessness. One of the hunter posters shows all kinds of game and a hunter fleeing from forest fire and at this bottom is this verse: "The State put up the money and raised a lot of game, Filled each field and forest with stock of every name. The hunters flocked in season smoking every one. They left a trail of fire that spoiled their future fun."

In the United States there is a doctor to every 724 persons; England has one to 1,087 persons; while Central Europe has only one doctor to every 2,000 to 2,500 persons.

DO YOU WANT YOUR BONUS?

Ex-Service Men are Not Making their Applications.

The U. S. War Department is anxious to make good to all ex-service men their Bonus, as provided by Congress, but many thousands of them have not applied for theirs. The following appeal is made through the papers, urging them to accept their opportunity.

1—If you are a world war veteran and you want your bonus, please make application at once. Don't delay for delay means a loss of money to you. Make out your application today while this request is fresh in your mind. The War Department is prepared to handle 30,000 applications a day. Let them have yours tomorrow.

2—If you do not want the Bonus and do not wish to make application, please notify the Adjutant General, Washington, D. C., telling him that you do not want the bonus. We ask you to do this in order that the War Department may know how many veterans intend to apply and that they can thereby keep their force at full work until the work is done. Delay means more expense to the taxpayer.

3—If there has been some error in your application it has been returned to you, please make the correction and send it in today. If there is something that you do not understand and which you wish explained, apply to the nearest recruiting office of the Army, Navy, Marines, the American Legion Post, the Veterans' Bureau or the Adjutant General.

4—Let us hear from you and please do one of the three things stated above. Don't delay another day.

$1.00 a day for each day home service in excess of 60 days.

Amounts of $50.00 or less are paid in cash.

If over $50.00 an adjusted service certificate for 20 year endowment insurance with 25% increase for age. Birthday nearest to date of certificate.

If you die before filing an application, your beneficiaries will receive only the adjusted service credit instead of the face value of the certificate. This may mean a loss of as much as $1000.00 to them.

Germans Busy and Saving Money.

It is dangerous to spend money recklessly or lavishly in Germany, and profiteers who made fortunes during the collapse of the paper mark, ride in automobiles only at the risk of being stoned by a resentful public, according to Fred W. Gehle, vice-president of the Mechanics and Metals National bank, New York, who has returned from a trip abroad. An automobile is a rarity in most parts of Germany, he said.

"Business men who really need automobiles to cover large distances," he said, "put signs on their cars showing that they are used, not as luxuries but for strictly business purposes. They do this to avoid the danger of drawing hisses and not infrequently stones from passers-by."

The change in Germany over the last year was described by Mr. Gehle as one of the economic miracles recorded in history. One year ago, he said, German residents spent money as quickly as they could do so, for fear, that its value would drop still further overnight. "Today it is altogether different," he said. "The country has stabilized its currency. Prices are high, wages are low, everybody seems to be working, and, strangely, the people are again saving money."

Home Stationery for Christmas Presents.

We anticipate a lot of Christmas orders by mail for our $1.00 home stationery offers—especially of No. 2—as advertised elsewhere. It will be necessary that we have such orders in ample time, as we aim to handle them at odd times when no other work is pressing. Read the offer, and let us have the orders now. We will hold, and mail just before Christmas, or send according to instructions.

Another Lutheran Pastor Resigns.

Rev. George Eveler, pastor of St. John's Lutheran Church, Littlestown, has resigned to accept a call to St. John's Lutheran Church, Washington. This makes six Lutheran charges seeking a pastor, all practically adjoining, reaching from Adams County, Pa., into Carroll and Frederick counties, Md.

In addition to the six, Rev. W. M. Allison, of New Oxford, Pa., also near the same territory, has received, and may accept a call to Mt. Carmel, Pa.

The dollar sign which we commonly think of as some form of U. S. with the letters intertwined has nothing to do with these letters. Professor Florian Cajori, of the University of California, after extensive study of documents used in Colonial times, has shown that the $ sign is an abbreviation first used for the Spanish dollar or peso, a combination of the letters p and s. Since the dollar itself was adopted in America largely because of the wide use of the Spanish dollar it is highly appropriate that the symbol should happen to be Spanish in origin.

Vice-president elect, Charles G. Dawes, was operated on for hernia, on Sunday, at a Chicago hospital. He is expected to stay at the hospital two weeks, and no serious results are expected.

A woman died in York County, Pa., last week, aged nearly 102 years, and she was an inveterate user of tobacco. Perhaps if she had not smoked so much, she would have lived longer?

An early session of Congress will no doubt take up the Volstead Act, and wherein it is weak, prepare to make it strong. There is never any surrender in principle, when clear mistakes are ratified.

Remarkably little disappointment is outwardly shown anywhere, on the result of the election. Possibly no Presidential election ever held has left so little regret, or the result accepted more resignedly—very much as an expected one—and this is country-wide in its manifestation.

The appointment of Chairman Butler, of the Republican National Committee, to the United States Senate as successor to Senator Lodge, is a thorn for the Democrats, but it was not exactly a reward for "services rendered," as Mr. Butler set aside his intention to run for Senator, at the election, in order to take the committee chairmanship.

Frederick county is getting quite a record for manufacturing "boot leg" whiskey, partly due to its many favorable out of the way spots for the business, and also to its proximity to the Pennsylvania line. This is a reputation that "the best county in the state" can not afford to continue, and one that by far the larger majority of its excellent citizens do not want to have continued.

The Coffee Monopoly.

There is at least one monopoly that is not located in the United States—the Coffee trust, the Brazilian government, that regulates the exportation of coffee, so as to hold the supply back in order that it may not get ahead of the demand, and cause low prices; and wicked speculators have also gobbled up large lots of the article released for export.

Coffee is not a necessity, though some will argue that it is. It is a stimulant—a drug habit. It is not a food, and not an essential. Most people, especially those who use coffee largely, would be better off without it, and in some cases it is positive injury.

The price of coffee is therefore not very substantially a thing to complain about. If one chooses to continue gratifying the habit of its use, regardless of cost, that is one point; but, the blame should be placed on the expensiveness of the habit, rather than on coffee itself. If we hang fast to it, irrespective of the fact that we thereby enrich Brazilian growers, that is our privilege.

Interpreting the Election.

Already there are signs that the "voice of the people," as shown by the recent election, will be variously interpreted. The only thing that was settled definitely, and beyond the continuance of all debate, was the choice of candidates. The "progressives" and "conservatives" are still in the game, and will still find ammunition with which to prevent the sessions of Congress from being "all one-sided" in oratory and argument.

The disposition of the bolting leaders—La Follette and Wheeler—is far from a generally agreed upon course. Some say "an eye for an eye," while others say, "turn the other cheek." Such matters as agricultural relief, National taxation, railroad legislation, and various foreign policies, were not settled in anything like exact terms.

This is, in fact, a healthy situation. A government without serious and complex problems to work out, would be too colorless, and would grow weak and inefficient.

We are all the better off, as a government, as a business, or as an individual, if we must meet trials and have our ingenuity tried to solve handicaps. We continuously need obstruction and controversy in order to develop our talents and business sense.

Perhaps another thing settled was La Follette's opinion with reference to the relation of the Supreme Court and Congress. He was also likely "settled"—from the present outlook—as being the arbiter of legislation in the Senate during the next few years—his "balance of power" is likely a gone prospect.

Very likely both parties will hereafter be less dominated by the "old guard" and be more responsive to the notions of the younger fellows who have a clear vision of the needs of the present, and less veneration for policies merely because they are old and conservative; at any rate, there is an object lesson in the result; that there is a large sane element, mixed in with the extreme radicals, that is worth catering to, for purely party strength, if for no deeper reason; therefore, it is not improbable that there will be considerable "come into my parlor" play within the next few years.

Dividends that Come.

There is one sure difference between Uncle Sam's bonds, and some others—the checks for interest come, as regularly as clock-work. We may dislike 4% or 4½% interest, and hanker strongly after 7 percent; but, it makes a mighty difference when the 4% dividends come, and the 7% ones do not. It also makes a mighty difference when we can walk into any bank and turn in our government bonds for cash, while we must hunt for a purchaser for our equally handsome pieces of engraving, but not so surely backed-up—promises to pay.

There is no such thing as the bond of any corporation being as "good as a government" bond. Never. This is the reason why the government can borrow at lower rates than anybody else—its security is the strongest. And this factor largely regulates all interest rates. The farther away we go from security, the greater the chance we take, and the higher the inducement offered in the way of promised dividends.

It is the presumed safety of the banks that brings them 4% money—that, and the fact that such money can always be had back, on short notice. It is the safety of real estate mortgages that often makes possible a 5% rate. Municipal bonds are floated at low rate, because of the visible property back of them. And it is safety, and demonstrated profitable operations, that causes certain bonds and stocks to sell at above par.

Supply and demand also regulates the value of money in invested securities. New and largely unknown enterprises must offer the greatest inducements to capital. Many of these soon get out of the doubtful class, but many do not. Some of them pay big on the chance taken, while others lose, anywhere from a small percent to the total face value.

So, it is the dividends that come, and not the ones promised, or hoped for, that prompts the conservative investor in the investment of his capital; and, it is an open choice that we have as to whether we will be conservative, or speculative, in our investment operations. If we win, or lose, it is our own wisdom, or unwisdom, our own choice—that is solely responsible.

Less Than 50 Per Cent Voted.

Despite the tremendous effort to get out the vote and stir up the stay-at-homes to go to the polls, less than half the eligible voters cast their ballots at the last election, according to a statement by Ralph M. Easley, chairman of the executive council of the National Civic Federation. Analyzing the outcome, Mr. Easley says the percentage of voters who actually went to the polls this year was lower than in 1920.

Because of the enormous stay-at-home vote this year, exceeding 30,000,000, according to Mr. Easley, the National Civic Federation is sending out a questionnaire seeking to learn why stay-at-home voters did not vote.

Mr. Easley said that in greater New York the gain over 1920 was less than three and three-fourths percent, and the woman vote was a fraction less than in 1920.

There were 52,000,000 eligible voters in 1920, and more than 27,000,000 votes were cast. In 1924, Mr. Easley, calculates, there were 60,000,000 eligible voters, and 30,000,000 went to the polls.—National Republican.

The shortage in the vote is largely due to the fact that women are not voting, to anything like their strength. Since they have the "right" to vote, thousands are not exercising it. As we have always urged, politics does not appeal to the average normal woman, and never will, and we respect them all the more for it. They do not understand the muddy game, and prefer to keep out of it.

The American School.

The American school is a school for all the people.

In most countries there are two school systems. One educates those who are to rule, the other those who are to be ruled. The educational opportunity that a child receives is determined by birth and social position. The "high-born" are given a complete education in one school system. The "low-born" attend a different system and receive but a meagre elementary training completed at an early age. In America, we have a different plan. We accept the ideal even if it is not realized everywhere in practice, that: "What the best and wisest parent wants for his own child, that must the community want for all its children. Any other ideal for our schools is narrow and unlovely, acted upon, it destroys our democracy."

We sometimes forget that this ideal is of recent origin. In our early history, few could obtain a first-rate education who were unable to pay tuition. In many places, attendance at a free school stigmatized a child as a "pauper." That time has passed. The community is the exception, today, that does not maintain free schools to which all parents may be proud to send their children. Nearly 23,000,000 children were enrolled in free public schools in 1922. At least one person in every five in the United States is at present attending a free public school.

We are coming to recognize that the public school is our greatest productive institution. Without the trained intelligence for which the school lays the foundation, most of our wealth would be impossible. It is therefore proper that a small part of the wealth which this institution plays so great a part in creating should be set aside for its maintenance.

Yet, this principle has but recently been accepted. Less than a century ago, Henry Barnard was threatened with personal violence for advocating such heresy as the taxation of one man's property to educate the children of his neighbor. Such an attitude seems ridiculous today. The local school tax is levied everywhere as a matter of course. Practically all the States partially support their schools through a state-wide tax. The Nation is contributing for the support of education money collected through a National tax. We have recognized the principle that the education of the future generation should constitute a first lien against all wealth—that every dollar of the Nation's wealth, no matter where it exists, should bear its share in educating the Nation's children no matter where they live in the next house or the next State.

Many of our States have recognized that money invested in high schools and colleges, as well as that invested in elementary schools, brings big returns. They have provided free schools extending from the kindergarten through the university.

This is as it should be in a democracy. The arguments against free college education are the same as those advanced against free elementary schools a century ago, and against free high schools fifty years ago. No State can make a better investment than to provide a complete education for all who have the capacity and the desire to obtain it.

Industry and brains, rather than caste or wealth, are the keys that should open the doors of educational opportunity in a democracy.—Scottish Rite News Bureau.

Would Oppose Union of Church and State.

Bishop John P. Carroll, of Helena, Montana, in his sermon at the Salem Pontifical Mass at the Cathedral, on Sunday, Nov. 9, at the opening of the National Council of Catholic women, declared;

"If the question of a union of Church and State were ever submitted by the United States Government to the people, the Catholic hierarchy and the Catholic laity of America would unanimously vote against it."

"Union of Church and State may be an ideal condition in a country that is wholly Catholic, but it is not practical or desirable in America. The Constitutional guarantee of religious liberty is sufficient for American Catholics, and they neither need nor want a legal union of Church and State."

Navajo Brave Flees

From Mother-in-Law

The superstitions of the Navajos are so many and so varied that life for them would be a constant burden if they observed them as carefully as they are supposed to. It is probable that the great American mother-in-law myth, which represents all mothers-in-law as being very bad medicine, had its origin in the beliefs of the Navajos; for very terrible things are supposed to happen to any Navajo man who is so unfortunate as to meet his mother-in-law face to face, writes Kenneth L. Roberts, in the Saturday Evening Post.

When the Navajos are pressed to reveal the hideous calamities that would befall them in the event of meeting their mother-in-law, they move uneasily from foot to foot and evade the issue. It is horrible to talk about, but it is obvious that meeting a mother-in-law in Navajo circles is the very apex of tough luck.

A Navajo will go to any length to avoid burying a dead man. It is very bad medicine to kill or skin a bear. His superstition, however, has never led him to consider as bad medicine the stealing of fascinating little odds and ends from the white man any more than the white man in years gone by considered that he was doing any particular wrong when he sold Navajo women and children into slavery, stole Navajo land and killed Navajo sheep.

World Enriched by

Genius in Poverty

Art? What have "idle riches" done for that? By rights they should have produced, they should have created, but so far as output goes their contribution has been disappointing. One often hears the suggestion made that young people of artistic promise should be "endowed" to create. "If only he had a little more money, and leisure—what great things he would do!" Would he? I believe, sordid as it may seem, that the wolf at the door has often been one of the most powerful incentives toward artistic creation.

Of course there are volcanic gifts, like those of Shelley or Blake that erupt spontaneously and irresistibly, regardless of the consequences. But many of the greatest artists have been goaded on to creation by need. Shakespeare, Chatterton, and (coming a long way after these) Walter Scott, Doctor Johnson, Anthony Trollope. On the whole, great artists have been not only hard workers, but men who have had to work hard.—Violet Bonham-Carter in Good Housekeeping.

Mystery of Sound Board

The sound board of a piano, although it is actually a thin sheet of fir wood, is a wonder not fully understood in its effects. Most people know that every note has a complete and very elaborate set of vibrations which give it its pitch and character, and all these separate sets are reproduced in the sound board quite independently. Even in comparatively simple music there are frequently thousands of vibrations going on in that piece of thin brittle wood, which we can hear but cannot see; and with all the crossing and recrossing of the vibration lines which must take place there is never any confusion, and it is possible to select any group of vibrations as the one to which we can pay the most attention. Perhaps even still more wonderful is the fact that the piano maker can make the board susceptible to different kinds of vibration without knowing how he does it.

Rare Motorist

A Melbourne citizen was run down by a motor car the other day while perambulating homewards on a "push-bike." The car was on its wrong side, and the "bike" was broken across; its rider had a brace of ribs fractured and a damaged occiput, combined with cuts on the face and many abrasions. The tout for a firm of shypoo solicitors called upon the injured man and tried to persuade him to take action against the car owner for substantial damages. "Oh, I couldn't do that," said the hurt citizen. "But you can," persisted the tout, "and you would be absolutely sure to recover." "No, I cannot," pursued the victim. "You do not know the whole circumstances. The driver has apologized."—Sydney (Australia) Bulletin.

Early Polo Games

It is a long vista back to the historic day when, in 1871, two cavalry teams played the first polo game on English soil with a billiard ball and hockey sticks; to Prospect park, Brooklyn, when the elder Bennett and Foxhall Keene staged the first game on American soil in 1876. Yet these two events have made polo truly international. The tactics of those early players of the eighties have been profoundly modified until the game has now become a science, in which the pony has gradually come to share the honors with his rider.

Fair Offer

A flashily dressed youth was buzzing around the foreman of a construction gang in hopes of picking up a soft job as timekeeper.

"I have nothing like that left," said the husky foreman. "You say you need work. If you need work, why don't you try hockeysing?"

"I ain't strong enough to carry one of them hods."

"Now, look here, lad, I'll make you a fair offer. If you'll really go to work I'll call four bricks a load."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

POULTRY FACTS

RAISE POULTRY FEED BY HAVING TWO LOTS

When open range is not available and hens must be confined, we recommend the division of the hen yard into two lots, so that green food can be grown on one side while the other patch is being grazed. As soon as the green stuff is two or three inches high the hens may be turned on it, while the other lot may be prepared and sowed again. This plan provides plenty of green, succulent feed throughout the year for the average farm flock. Sooner or later we will have two or more such lots fenced in on our farms, with the hen house so placed with reference to convenience for the caretaker. Lots containing an acre or more, divided by fences, and large enough to provide considerable pasturage for the family cow and a growing heifer are very desirable for growing farm poultry. The pigs should not be turned in, however, for as a rule pigs and chickens do not go well together.

There are times when the poultry do some harm to some of the crops at or soon after planting time, but after they have a good start this is not very often the case. Take corn, for instance, after it is a foot high and from then on it is hard to find a better run for poultry. They help work the crop, destroy insects, and the corn in turn furnishes the much-needed shade. Hawks, by the way, can do little harm to birds on range in a corn field.

The green crops to be grown should be suited to local conditions as well as to the proper time to plant in order to have a succession of green crops throughout the year.

There are times when these lots should not be grazed too closely, but allowed to get a fresh start, so here is where the other yard comes in play. Birds can be shifted from one to the other, thus saving both pasture lots much longer.

Thickly sown crops furnish succulent feed and summer shade.

From April 1 to July 1 on growing yard 1—Oats, chard or lettuce, clover or vetch, sunflowers, cowpeas, rape. For feeding purposes on yard 2—Winter rye, winter vetch, sweet clover and various other green clover crops.

From July 1 to October 1 the oats, chard and lettuce, clover and vetch, cowpeas and rape on yard 1 may be fed, while buckwheat, dwarf Essex rape and flat turnips are grown on yard 2.

From October 1 to April 1 the growing crops on yard 1 should consist of oats, winter rye, winter vetch, sweet clover and crimson clover, while at the same time yard 2 could be growing buckwheat, dwarf Essex rape, flat turnips and soy beans.

We, in this state, are blessed with a climate that makes it possible to have some green pasturage crop growing at all seasons. It is one of the very best and cheapest foods for our poultry as well as other live stock.—Allen G. Oliver, in Charge, Office of Poultry Extension, North Carolina State Agricultural College.

Proper Plan of Packing

Will Prevent Breakage

Careful packing prevents breakage in market eggs. The poultry department of the New Jersey experiment station recommends this plan of packing. First, place an excelsior pad in the bottom of each compartment of the crate. Directly upon this pad place a filler and fill with eggs as usual, packing the eggs small end down. If no flat is placed over the pads, the eggs will bed themselves in the excelsior and ride safely. Three layers should be packed as usual, alternating flat and filler, with an excelsior pad instead of a flat on top of the third layer. Continue to fill the crate, using filler, flat and filler. On the top use an excelsior pad with no flat.

Pullets in Quarters

The reason some pullets are late in laying in the fall is because they get started wrong in their winter quarters.

Pullets should be established in their winter quarters before the egg organs are developed; otherwise a change of house disturbs them and interrupts the egg yield.

Separate Late Molters

Late molting hens should be separated from the pullets about ready to lay. These hens have performed well and now need plenty of fattening feed to build them up ready for early spring laying. Eggs from these hens will be valuable for hatching and should be reserved for that purpose.

Sell Old Hens Early

Pullets make the most profitable layers. Hens are always a good price if sold just before the breeding season is over, but they drop fast when farmers are selling their stock after they drop down in production. Eggs at this season are low in price, and it will pay to sell two or three weeks before they stop laying rather than risk a sudden slump in price. Feed heavily of corn for a week or ten days before you sell, and keep off free range.

It is estimated that of the 24,000,000 dairy cows in the United States only one in three earns its owner a profit, one "breaks even" and one loses money. Surplus milk, produced at no profit to dairymen, is one cause of low milk prices. The way to cut the surplus is to get rid of the wasters in dairy herds, which are a dead loss any way you figure. The price of milk never was and never will be high enough to make scrub cows pay. Weigh your milk and weigh your feed. If there is a Cow Testing Association in your neighborhood, go and join it. If there is none, get together with your neighbors and organize one. Find out about your cows. Keep the money makers and turn the wasters over to the butcher.

Community Building

Advisory Committees

for Town Beautifying

Ugliness is becoming the rule in many of the extreme aspects of modern town life, the Literary Digest comments sadly. The suave writer calls it "indifference of the greater public" to "the general artistic and natural amenities of towns and rural areas." The beauty of the past is sacrificed to make way for modern improvements, says the Christian Science Monitor, voicing a plea for concerted effort at town-beautifying:

"It is when things get bad, when they seem at their worst, that endurance reaches its limit. Already in parts of America something has been done toward the suppression of billboards that bade fair to conceal the country as completely as the smoke screen in a battle at sea shields the fleet, and without the same reason or necessity. The preservation of the American amenities, if too local for the art commission in Washington, is left largely to woman's clubs. The English would take more thorough measures. Architects, roused to a realization of the sadness of a land from which beauty has flown, and eager to stay its flight, suggest the formation of advisory art committees in towns and country both. Their function would be much the same, though on a more restricted scale, as that of the English art commission modeled after the pattern of the American. The committees would advise and interfere in their own districts—interfere when some avoidable piece of vandalism was proposed; advise when new buildings were to be put up, new streets laid, new open spaces planned.

"They would have no power but, the hope is, would exercise an influence gradually growing irresistible as the public consciousness should awaken to a sense of the part beauty plays in life. Such, in a few words, is the scheme suggested by the Royal Institute of British Architects for the guardianship of beauty in England."

Removed Billboards

From All Highways

Definite steps by civic organizations to eliminate billboards from the highways of the Pacific coast are expected to result from the impetus given the movement by the Standard Oil company of California, which has torn down 1,200 of its roadway signs in California, Oregon and Washington.

The company removed its highway advertisements on the ground that they detracted from the beauty of the roads, and ordered that hereafter such signs should be confined to commercial zones.

"There was instant public response up and down the coast," said Kenneth R. Kingsbury, president of the company. "We have had editorials, letters and telegrams by the hundreds indicating that a keen feeling exists concerning the marring of our great highways by signs."

The Skyline boulevard, a great highway being completed from San Francisco southward along the high ridges overlooking the Pacific ocean, is reported to be insured against billboards.

Ugliness a Liability

Attractiveness has been deemed an important asset in the development of such thoroughfares as Fifth avenue in New York and Michigan boulevard in Chicago. There is no question that the beautiful home in an attractive residence district has a value far in excess of the commonplace home in a district of uneven development. But does attractiveness pay in commercial building in general as in the case of residences? Is it good business to put up an attractive office or store building rather than a plain, unadorned structure, even an ugly structure? It was observed in one of the large cities recently that the ugliest commercial building was the one most often without tenants and the structure that as a rule was the first to be torn down and replaced. No doubt that observation would hold in many instances, in many cities.—Kansas City Times.

Make Home "Fire-Safe"

The man who builds a fire-safe home is a good citizen. He is adding something permanent to the wealth of his community, and he has provided a fire barrier that in itself will tend to lessen conflagration and provide stopping points for them.

Put a fire-safe roof covering on your home. Various kinds of fire-resistant roofing have been tested and tried and found to be well worth their slight extra cost.

The man with a fire-safe home will generally find that his banker will grant a larger proportion of its cost on first mortgage loans owing to the added security.

Guard Against Fire

When the house is completed you do not want the fear of fire always before you. Those who have seen the results of large conflagrations will realize something of the tragedy of thousands of homes being destroyed and hundreds of home owners losing their all. Even those who are insured never get full compensation for all their losses. Many things are destroyed in a home that money cannot replace, and there is no adequate insurance against the risk of human life.

Showed Intelligence

An orang-utan named Dohong, which was brought to the New York Zoo from Borneo some years ago, astonished us by his intelligence. W. Reid Blair writes in the American Magazine. A gas pipe four feet long and two inches in diameter was wired to the bars at the front of his cage. The pipe itself could not be tilted or moved, inside this pipe—in the very middle—a piece of banana was placed. Dohong, who was very fond of bananas, tried to get it. First he attempted to reach it with his hands, then his feet, and failed. He tried to loosen the pipe, but he couldn't do that. He was very much disturbed over his inability to get at that banana, and sat down to think it over. But no happy solution came to him—for the simple reason that, under the circumstances, there wasn't any.

Finally, without Dohong's knowledge, a stick two feet long with a hook in the end of it was concealed in the straw of his cage. Then Dohong was put back in the cage and we waited. In the course of 15 minutes Dohong accidentally came across the hooked stick. It didn't mean anything to him on the instant, but presently he was struck by a bright idea. He inserted the hooked end of the stick into the pipe, and lo! out came the banana on the hook! After that, when a banana was put inside the pipe, Dohong wasted no time trying to reach it with his hands, but began looking at once for the hooked stick.

This seemed to me to indicate a high order of intelligence.

MARRIED

PLUNKERT—DUTTERA.

Miss Edna V., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Duttera, of near Silver Run, and Mr. John W. Plunkert, of Hanover, Pa., were married on Wednesday evening, by Rev. George Bow-ersox, an uncle of the bride.

HOLMES—EVANS.

A wedding of interest took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Evans, at 134 East Capitol St., Washington, when their daughter, Josephine O. Evans and Mr. A. Sexton Holmes, of Creswell, North Carolina, were married.

Rev. C. W. Hess, of Brunswick, Md., a cousin of the bride, officiated, with Dr. S. T. Nicholas, of Keller Memorial Lutheran Church, of Washington, the bride's present pastor, assisting. The parlor was tastefully decorated with ferns and holly.

Miss Evans had as her attendants, Mrs. R. N. Loggins, of Los Angeles, California, matron of honor. Mrs. L. C. Moltz, of Columbia, South Carolina, Mrs. S. M. North, of Baltimore, Miss Carrie May Holmes and Miss Matilda Alexander, of Creswell, North Carolina, were her bridesmaids.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. The groom had as his best man, Mr. Norman Davenport, of Creswell, North Carolina.

The bride wore an attractive and becoming gown of white satin with pearl trimmings, and carried a shower bouquet of brides roses and lilies of the valley. The bride's attendants dresses were of rainbow hues and carried an arm bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums. The matron of honor's dress was of yellow canton crepe with crystal beads. All of the bridesmaids wore silver hairbands.

Mr. L. C. Moltz, of Columbia, South Carolina, sang "At Dawning," accompanied by Miss Mary Hess, of Taneytown, Md., who also played the wedding march from Lohengrin.

The bridal party and about fifty of the bride's friends who were present were delightfully entertained at a reception after the ceremony. The happy couple, Mr. and Mrs. Holmes, left immediately after the reception for an extended wedding tour to Florida and various points of interest in the South. They will reside in Creswell, North Carolina, where Mr. Holmes is one of the outstanding business men of the town and surrounding community. Mrs. Holmes is an honor graduate of Western Maryland College, and has taught in Taneytown, and also at Marlboro, Md. Mr. Holmes is a graduate of the University of North Carolina.

DIED.

MR. FRANK WILSON.

Mr. Frank Wilson, one of the well known citizens of Union Bridge, died suddenly on Thursday evening of last week, from heart trouble. He was a son of the late Joseph Wilson, and for many years conducted the grocery and ice cream business established by his father, on Main St., but had recently retired.

On the day of his death he had been in Baltimore, and at Pimlico, and on his return home, seemed in usual health, but about ten minutes after his return, was stricken and died almost instantly. He was a baseball enthusiast, and last year was manager of the very strong Union Bridge team.

MRS. EMMA J. STULL.

Mrs. Emma J., wife of D. Allen Stull, died at her home, near Bridgeport, about 9 o'clock, Thursday night, from a complication of diseases. Funeral services will be held on Monday, meeting at 10 o'clock, with services at the U. B. Church, Taneytown, in charge of Rev. T. D. Ritter; interment in Grace Reformed cemetery.

She is survived by her husband and one son, Wilbur, and one daughter, Edna, both at home; and by the following brothers and sisters: Mrs. Agnes Phillips, of Littlestown; Wm. W. Witherow, of Washington, D. C.; Miss Sarah Witherow, of Harney; Mrs. Harriet Hayes, of Marion, Ind.; John Witherow, of Colorado; Mrs. W. G. Harner, of Harney; J. W. Witherow, of Taneytown, and Mrs. Anna Hoffman, of Harney.

MRS. CAROLINE WHITMORE.

Mrs. Carrie, wife of the late Mr. Charles Whitmore, died at Frederick Hospital, Tuesday night, following an operation performed a week previous, aged 58 years, 11 months, 22 days. Previous to her illness she had been housekeeper for Samuel Johnson, at Conoverville.

She is survived by two brothers and three sisters, John Marquet, of Tyrone; Jacob Marquet, of New Windsor; Mrs. W. U. Marker, of Tyrone; Mrs. Sherman Gilds, of Taneytown, and Miss Annie Marquet, of Baltimore.

The funeral was held this Friday morning, from the home of her sister, Mrs. W. U. Marker, of Tyrone, in charge of her pastor, Rev. J. E. Lowe, services and interment being held at Baust Church.

IN REMEMBRANCE OF

My Brother EDWARD FOGLE, who died Oct. 23, 1924.

Lonely the house and sad the hours
Since my dear Brother is gone
But to a brighter home than mine
In Heaven, I hope is his home.

Dearest Brother you have left me
I feel most deeply feel
But 'tis God who has bereft me
He can all my sorrows heal.

Yet again I hope to meet him
When the day of life is dead
Then in Heaven with joy I'll greet him
Where no farewell tear is shed.
By his Lonely Sister, ESTELLA.

His earthly suffering here was great,
But now he is at rest;
It seemed so hard to part with him,
But God he knowest best.

Legends of Gods and Goddesses in Hawaii

Near the city of Hilo, on the island of Hawaii, are the locally celebrated Rainbow falls, around which many legends center, says the Detroit News. One is that the goddess Hina lived underneath the falls in a cave and that the dragon Kunamoo tried to down her by throwing up a dam below the falls. She called for aid to her son Maui, who at the time was trying to lasso the sun at a distant point because of the complaint by the natives of the shortness of the summer season. The fable has it that the son in his canoe crossed the ocean from a near-by island in two strokes and chased the dragon to what is known as the "Boiling Pots," where he threw red-hot stones into the water, scalded the monster and finally killed him.

The Naha stone, one of the historical relics of the Hawaiian islands, is found on the grounds of the Hilo public library. An old prophecy concerning the Naha stone was that he who could move it would be king of the island of Hawaii, but that to him who could overturn it would be given sovereignty over all the islands in the group. Kamehameha the Great, who finally conquered all the other islands, visited the island in his youth to test the efficacy of the prophecy, and, having succeeded in turning the stone, was so inspired that he entered upon the career which ended in the union of all the Hawaiian islands under his control. Native Hawaiians put full faith in the story as having been handed down to them from generations to the days of Kamehameha.

Dried Rice Fatal to One Household Pest
Whence do all the beetles, ants and flies come that swarm about the house, and particularly in the kitchen andarder? And what is the best way to get rid of them? These two questions are always very much in the minds of housewives.

The first is not easy to answer. The intrusiveness of beetles and cockroaches is something uncanny. They are found down deep mines, and they appear in new ships the moment steam is raised. Wherever there is a moist heat there they come quickly.

The entry of ants into a house is often traceable to some opening near the ground, such as a ventilator. Moths come in through the open windows after the lamps are lighted. Windows closed or guarded by mosquito nettings after lighting up time should keep them out.

The ant is, of course, intelligent. But ground rice, it is said, finds his weakness. Sprinkle the rice in his track, and he will eat of it greedily. Then it swells within him and kills him. But the rice must not be thrown down on a wet floor or it will swell before he eats it, and he will come to no harm.

SCIENTISTS FIND NEW FIELD OF RESEARCH

Much Expected of Explorations in Sinai Peninsula.

The deciphering of the remnants of an ancient tablet found on the Sinai peninsula revives interest in an almost forgotten land of archeological research. The remnants of the tablet were found some time ago by Professor Flinders Petrie, the founder of the British school of archeology in Egypt and one of Great Britain's most distinguished Egyptologists, in the course of his explorations in southwestern Sinai.

They came later under the observation and study of Dr. Hubert Grimme, professor of Semitic languages at the University of Munster, who deciphered them and reported their discovery.

Doctor Grimme says the tablet was written in old Hebrew. He quotes this sentence which he deciphered, "I was taken out of the Nile by the Egyptian queen" and says he found also the names of Joseph, Manassas and Moses. The statement that the stones were remnants of the original tablets bearing the Ten Commandments given to Moses was very probably not made by Doctor Grimme.

Doctor Grimme discovered in these remnants a part of the record of the exodus from the Nile valley. They were found in the supposed line of the wanderings of the Israelites after they had crossed the Red sea. He deplores the fact that only a portion of the tablet was found and that no effort was made to locate the remainder.

Shifting desert sand, intense heat and lack of water have been formidable obstacles to archeological exploration on Sinai peninsula. The country is rich in valuable antiquities; a French explorer found 3,200 inscriptions in Egyptian and Semitic among old temples and in quarries which were extensively worked from 2500 B. C. to 1500 B. C.

We know Sinai was the refuge of many Christian anchorites in the period of persecution in the Third century and that Emperor Justinian built the famous convent of Mount Sinai, afterward known as St. Catherine's, early in the Sixth century.

The convent of St. Catherine has yielded two most important Biblical manuscripts. The German student Tischendorf, in his research extending from 1843 to 1859, brought to light ancient Greek manuscripts known as the "Codex Sinaiticus," containing most of the Septuagint and all of the New Testament. Miss Smith Lewis in 1892 found a palimpsest Syriac text of St. Luke's gospel.

After those two discoveries Sinai was a neglected field of research until Professor Petrie's find of the old Hebrew tablet. The recent research work of Professor MacAlister, in which he succeeded in unearthing almost the whole of the ancient city of Jerusalem, has given a new impetus to exploration in Biblical lands. This may result in bringing to light the long hidden archeological treasures of Sinai peninsula.

Preventing Floor Scratches

Those who have hardwood floors in their houses know the difficulty of keeping them free from furniture scratches. Pushes and slides overcome the difficulty for furniture that has straight legs, but these will not prevent rockers from scratching the floor. The best thing to do with the bottom of a rocker is to glue on a strip cut from an old felt hat. Don't let the joints come where the rocker rests when idle. The felt lasts a long time and can be renewed easily when worn.—Popular Science Monthly.

Our Letter Box

Under this heading we will be glad to publish letters from former Carroll-countians, who are now away from home; and especially letters from those whose home was Taneytown. These letters are very interesting to many, and we should be glad to publish one or more each week. On account of their length, it is not always convenient to use letters on first page, and will hereafter use the 4th. or 5th. page.

SOME OLD RECOLLECTIONS.

I read Miriam Britt's letter with much pleasure. It brought back many pleasant memories of the family. One morning little Mimmie stood by her father's knee, and he, looking down at her, said "Little Miriam, gift of God." How many of us know the meaning of our names?

Speaking of the old school building, I went when it was only one story high. In the back of the room was reserved three or four desks for the colored children. The school was too large for the room, and there was much talk, about the walls not being strong. When they added the second story, the younger children were sent up stairs.

Do any of you remember the old Plank Road? What a pleasure it was to ride on, while it lasted. The long walks the young people took, out to the bridge at Piney Creek, or the old toll gate, in opposite direction.

How blest the town is, with such a supply of water and ice. Very different from the hot summer nights of long ago, when you would meet people coming with pitchers on their way to Rudisill's springs, or Bunker Hill to Mr. Sam Reindollar's well, or out to Miss Honor Donely's. You earned the water when drawn by that chain and heavy bucket.

Speaking of the Donely's, reminds me of a man that went to Dr. Sam. Swoope for treatment. The Dr. recommended a plaster. By the time the man reached the drug store, he had forgotten the name, but said it sounds like "Betsy Donely". Mr. McKellip said "You mean a (belladonna) plaster," and the reply was, "That's it."

I see the new fire truck has arrived; what a help it will be to that band of noble men, who are willing to risk so much to protect the property and lives of their fellowmen. That is a debt the town can never repay. Washington, D. C. M. M.,

LETTER FROM H. CLAY ENGLAR

This is Armistice Day, and a beautiful day it is. I am sitting on the sand by the edge of the wonderful Pacific, at Redondo Beach, only a few feet from the water's edge. Sea gulls by the hundreds are flying all about me, and children bareheaded and barelegged are playing with swings, etc., on the sand, and men are fishing in shirt sleeves with rod and line from the end of a pier.

It is really a wonderful privilege to live in Southern California. Boardwalk promenaders are just beginning a day's outing in God's great sunshiny out of doors, forgetting everything but taking a day's rest and recreation. Rich and poor share in this blessed privilege, and but few of us appreciate our privilege.

To me, there has always been an unexplainable fascination and satisfying feeling to sit and gaze upon the ocean's moving waters. Seems as though I never tire of its noise and ever-changing waters. It would be wonderfully good for you if you could spend a winter with us, and I have not yet given up the hope that one day you may find it convenient to do so.

The coming year looks like a bumper year for our Company (Southern California Edison) with the election favorable, the state water-power act defeated, and the rainfall above the average. We are buying Edison stock, and a mountain lot, and have good hopes for our fruit ranch investment turning out well and am negotiating another five year lease for it.

Last week a friend and myself made a real three-circuit tuner tube Radio, single tube with a range of 500 miles and we hear quite distinctly Oakland KGO from our home in Colton.

If anybody wants to make an investment, would advise their investigating Southern California Edison stock, or write me about it and I will give them the information. I am taking all I can handle and feel that it is all that it looks to be—a gilt edge security.

H. CLAY ENGLAR, Colton, Cal.

THE SENSITIVE SWAIN

"I'll tell you, right now," declared Sankey Spink, a swain of the Sandy Mush region, "I ain't going to have nuth'n more to do with the Widder Slab's girl, if the old lady don't change her ways."

"What's she did to you?" asked Tobe Tadlock.

"Met me at the door, tuther evening when I went to call, and flung a dipper of scalding water onto me!"

Problem in Chemistry

"What are you working over there?" asked a friendly friend. "Some abstruse problem in chemistry?"

"You might say so," replied the druggist. "I'm trying to combine ice cream and pickles into a compatible mixture. It will make a fortune for me if I can put it across."

Interbred Chickens

The origin of the Rhode Island Red chicken was similar to that of the Buff Orpington in England. It was a local race of poultry found extensively in Rhode Island, produced by the farmers themselves without any definite breeding and from uncertain stock. It is thought by some authorities that a considerable foundation of this local Rhode Island poultry was an old smooth-legged Cochon-China stock; but that ordinary Cochons were also largely bred is undoubted, and there is strong evidence that the Asiatic stock was considerably crossed and intermingled with Brown Leghorns.

Pat O'Malley

This popular "movie" actor was born in Dublin, Ireland, and came to this country when a small boy. He was educated in Forest City, Pa. His first work was with a stock company. He stands five feet eleven inches in height and weighs 160 pounds. He has brown hair and blue eyes.

Have You This Habit?
By Margaret Morison
ALWAYS FEELING POOR

YEARS ago, when Carrie was a young thing of fifteen running about barefoot on her father's farm in Virginia, she had been richer than she was as Mrs. Leonidas Grimes with her establishment up the Hudson. Everyone knew then that she had no money. How could they help knowing with the holes in the carpet covered up by the rugs, and the children's mother turning the colonel's old suits? But Carrie spent money with some pleasure in those days when she had hardly any to spend.

Then she married Leonidas Grimes, doing business for a big cotton firm, and from that moment Carrie began to feel poor.

One day Aunt Eugenia received an invitation from Carrie to luncheon. Aunt Eugenia, who had had a brilliant career, was reduced now to dividing her time among several more or less eager relatives. Everything was on a lavish scale from Carrie's note of invitation, to the number of courses served. Then, as the guests sat about the finger bowls, the butler passed on a heavy silver tray, a tightly tied and sealed box of candy.

"Do have some," urged Carrie. "It has to be opened some time, you know." And Aunt Eugenia marveled at this survival of childhood experiences in the rich Mrs. Leonidas Grimes.

Aunt Eugenia began to hear of the Grimeses as "entertaining royally." One day an elaborate missive booked her for a week-end. On her arrival, Aunt Eugenia thought that Carrie seemed worried. Immediately she began, sitting there with her velvet dinner gown ablaze with jewels, to tell how poor she was feeling. "We have to keep up our position," she wailed, "but, oh, it takes so much money! Imagine what keeping up ten cars means."

And everything those two days was on the scale of "ten cars"—house, grounds, entertainment, guests! Then came the time for Aunt Eugenia's departure. Carrie was on the terrace with her as a chauffeur and second man drove up, polished and shining, their liveries gleaming in a fliver.

"You are one of the family, you see, and gasoline is so expensive," sighed Carrie.

Aunt Eugenia decided that Carrie had asked her to the castle simply because it was a solace to see someone who was really even poorer than she herself, among all her riches, felt. Aunt Eugenia thought of Carrie's mother and father, who, with nothing to their names, had always somehow managed to give other people a great deal. Carrie with her plenty would never know the happiness of generosity. The habit of feeling poor would cheat her to the day of her death, and then it would cheat her in that place where a bank account mattered not at all.

SOWING TROUBLE; REAPING

By JUNIUS B. SMITH

(©, Doubleday, Page & Co.)

"JUST had a run-in with a neighbor's kid," said the Pest from the office next door as he cocked his muddy feet on the lawyer's desk and besmirched some freshly typed letters just laid thereon for signature.

"So?" said the lawyer, reaching for the inkwell and then reconsidering his impulsively intended act.

"Yeh. Bad egg that Jones kid. I was tinkering with my car and had drained the oil. He came along and d-e-l-i-b-e-r-a-t-e-l-y kicked over the can and spilt the oil. He says it was an accident, of course. I took hold of his ear and dragged him over to his mother, who whaled the tar out of him."

"And your conscience now rests easy?" inquired the attorney. "Maybe it was just an accident; and maybe your car needed a change of oil anyhow."

"There you go," sniffed the Pest. "Accident nothing! You lawyers are always trying to build up a defense for some one who ought to be shot at sunrise. You'd defend a criminal for the money you'd get out of it, even though you knew he ought to be in jail. But I'm different. I believe everybody ought to get what's coming to them and I intend seeing that they do and I saw to it that that Jones kid got licked good and plenty. I told his old woman if she didn't lick him, with me looking on, I'd turn him over to the juvenile authorities."

The lawyer reached for the inkwell again but checked himself. Instead, he removed the Pest's feet from his letters, buzzed for the stenographer and asked her to recopy them.

The Pest watched the operation abstractedly, puffed on his vile cigar, again elevated his feet to the desk, and continued:

"I'm a firm believer in corporal punishment. I think kids ought to be licked when they don't mind, or get ornery. You bet they walk the chalk mark at my house."

"Your own children?"

"Naw . . . my wife's."

The lawyer leaned back in his chair in disgust. "I don't suppose it will do you any good," he said, "but I might point out that one always reaps what he sows. This statement is not original with me. You say the boy claims it was an accident. If it was, you have outraged the boy's sense of justice, have made a mother do something against which she rebelled, and have stored up wrath for yourself. I don't know how it will work out, but I've noticed that those on the war-path usually get harpooned soon or late."

The Pest snapped his fingers in disdain. "I'm not going to let anybody run over me," he voiced, viciously biting the end of his cigar. "I put people in their place, I do. I'm not one of the spineless variety. I'm a getter who'll stick up for his rights, whenever anybody steps on his toes."

The lawyer reached for the inkwell again, but checked himself. "You're storing up trouble for yourself on earth," he said. "Long experience listening to the woes of others has convinced me that people are mostly the authors of their own undoing. Why don't you live at peace with the world instead of tearing up the neighborhood? . . . You'll find it cheaper in the end. Public opinion may be flouted, but it is a powerful factor just the same. I would rather have the good wishes of my neighbors than their ill will."

"Well, anyone who gets gay with me had better look out."

The lawyer reached for the inkwell a third time, fumbled with it for a moment; it upset, the liquid staining the Pest's trousers a mottled blue-black.

"Oh, I beg your pardon," joyously cried the lawyer.

"Accidents will happen," condoned the Pest, hurriedly jerking his feet from the desk top and standing up. He shook his leg and pulled the cloth away from his flesh. "It's nothing, really."

"Why not take me by the ear and lead me to my mother?" the lawyer derided. "Did the Jones' boy have any reason for kicking over your oil?"

"None whatever . . . D— but these pants are sticky."

"Then I don't believe he did it on purpose."

The door was jerked open and a man, whom the lawyer recognized as a deputy in the sheriff's office, walked in, closely followed by a woman, unknown to him.

"There he is, officer, there he is . . . his stenographer said he'd be in here," piped the excited female. She pointed straight at the Pest from the next door. "He done it . . . I seen him with my eyes, and so did Mrs. Jacob, who heard my poor boy screaming when I whipped him because this big brute told me I had to . . . he stole it and I want him arrested."

The Pest turned very white. "Why Mrs. Jones . . . I don't know what you're talking about . . . just what is the trouble?"

"You know very well," she shrieked. "You took my watch, you dirty thief."

"Why Mrs. Jones . . . I . . . I didn't even know you had a watch."

"That proves it!" she cried, "that proves it!"

"Mrs. Jones has sworn to a complaint," interposed the officer, "charging you with the theft of her wrist watch, valued at sixty dollars. I have a warrant for your arrest on the charge of grand larceny."

"But I never even knew she had a watch, much less took it. . . ."

"You dirty thief, you dirty thief," the woman kept repeating. "You picked it right up off the ground where it fell when the snap broke while I was licking Tommy. You know you took it. I saw you pick it up, when you thought I wasn't looking, and I was so excited when I got through licking Tommy that I forgot to ask you for it. At first I thought maybe it was a mistake that you hadn't gave it back . . . but you didn't give Tommy a square deal and I thought I'd make you trouble to get even . . . but it wasn't no mistake, with you a-saying you never even knew I had a watch. Arrest him, officer . . . I'll appear ag'in him."

"You're under arrest," said the officer. "Will you go quietly or shall I put the cuffs on?"

"I'll . . . I'll go without the . . . irons." The Pest turned to the lawyer: "Can I engage you to defend me?" he inquired.

"H—, no," rasped the lawyer. "I was just telling you that we all reap what we sow."

"Sunshine Follows Where Their Feet Have Trod"

A sunny morning, the cool, sweet air of eight o'clock, and the patter of many feet. They are the daintiest feet in the world. No trace of a wrinkle in any silken stocking, and the little shoes all seem to have walked straight out of an elegant shop window. Fresh young faces, with complexions milk-white; shining hair for the most part bobbed; little cloche hats half shading pairs of big laughing eyes.

Such a chatter, not idle, but so earnest that you might think it concerned the future of the state, and yet laughter springs from it as light as the morning sunshine. This is the typists' hour, as seen by F. G. H., who rhapsodizes in the Continental Edition of the London Mail.

It is good to be caught in the rush of them. Who else but Parisian typists go to work so merrily, in toilettes so immaculate, and yet with such a consequential air? At no other time will you see them so perfect as in this morning hour, when, fresh from the mysteries of their toilettes, they break chattering upon the world.

Wet and Dry Leather

The United States bureau of chemistry says that wet leather is damaged much more readily by heat than dry leather. By remembering this fact the length of service of leather can in many cases be greatly prolonged. Much leather is damaged by being subjected to heat when damp or wet. Leather which has been burned by being too close to a stove or steam pipe loses its strength and will retain hardly any of the characteristics of the original leather. It becomes hard and is easily broken. A great number of shoes are ruined every year by the wearers simply because they put the wet soles against hot stoves or radiators.

Australian Sapphires

As a precious stone of the British empire the sapphire may rank first. Ceylon is one of their sources of supply, and from this island have come some of the finest now in private jewel-safes. Australia also contributes some exceedingly choice specimens from Victoria, Queensland and New South Wales, where they are generally found in or near the gold drifts. These are generally of somewhat darker color than those from Ceylon, but among the fascinations of good sapphires are the subtle shadings due to cutting and to the degrees of light under which they are displayed.

The Exception

It was in a home where the mother is somewhat aggressive and the father good-natured and peace-loving that a child's estimate of home conditions was tersely put.

While dressing, the mother paused in the act of putting on her shoes and said: "I am certainly easy on shoes. I have worn these for four months, don't know what you would do, Clarence, if I were not. I am easy on everything."

Whereupon the child looked up from her playthings and remarked: "Except father."—Kansas City Star.

Not Going Down That Way

A hodcarrier, at work on a new job, lost his way among the floors of the skyscraper, and couldn't get down to the ground.

While he was wandering about, the voice of the foreman floated up from below, calling angrily for Pat.

"I can't find the way down," called Pat.

"Come down the same way you went up," shouted the irate foreman.

"Faith and I'll not," said Pat. "O! came up head first."

Waited Long for Husband

Mrs. Henry Audette of New Bedford, Mass., after waiting 41 years for her husband to return, decided she had waited long enough and obtained a divorce. She was married, as Charlotte Smith, in 1833, and three days later her husband, a sailor, went to sea and never returned. Nearly half a century of waiting finally became irksome, she said, and the court agreed with her and allowed the decree on the grounds of desertion.

BREAKING SAD NEWS TO FRIEND HUSBAND

Wife Failing to Honor and Obey Confesses.

With tears in her eyes and a sob at her heart, she stood gazing out of the window—waiting. Soon, all too soon, she told herself between her choking sobs her husband would be coming home—to what?

He, whom she had promised to love for better, for worse, to honor and obey. She loved him, it was true; but—

—but—

And he must know. The thought throbbed through her aching head and seemed to set her brain on fire. He must know!

No less than three times that afternoon she had gone to the telephone to tell him, says London Answers. The first time she had given the number to the operator, but it was engaged. And after that, each time she had left the receiver fall—afraid.

Her heart beat cruelly as she waited. Her knees trembled as she watched for his approach. Every now and then she felt as if she must swoon. With a mighty effort she pulled herself together.

There was a way out. She could leave a note, telling him all, and fly. Yes, fly from the terrible reproach in his voice and the accusations in his eyes—those steely gray eyes that she now dreaded as much as she had once loved them. And she knew that those words of anger would be justified. The thought made her position a hundred times worse.

She crossed to the writing table and drew pen and ink toward her. Hastily she bent her head to her task. She had scribbled but a line or two, when suddenly she raised her head and paused—listening.

For a few moments her heart seemed to cease its fluttering; then it commenced to thump more wildly than before.

Steps could be heard on the graveled walk without. Too late! It was her husband. Oh, how she quailed at the thought of his stern gaze.

There was only one thing for it. She rushed, like one possessed, to the electric switch. Click! The room was in darkness. She would tell him in the dark. Then she would not see those terrible eyes; he would not see the same in her frightened face; she would not have to meet his accusing gaze.

There was a sound from the other side of the room and the door opened, admitting a long, lean shaft of light.

"Miriam!" he said sternly. "Miriam!"

With one choking sob she stretched out her hands.

"Morton," she sobbed, "I have had my h-h-hair s-shingled!"

Deep-Sea Sounding

Deep-sea sounding is part of the work of the hydrographic survey. It is accomplished with a mechanical reel instead of by hand and a thin piano wire takes the place of the lead line. Depth is measured by the number of revolutions of the reel, the diameter of which is known, as the lead moves through the water. If the depth is great steam is used to wind in the wire, as the pull would be too much for a hand reel.

The place of the sinker of the hand line is taken by a mechanical device holding a weight, usually a 100-pound ball, which is released at the bottom, thus facilitating the haul. Sometimes other devices are used, which bring up samples of the deep sea bottom.

When the work is done in sight of shore position angles are taken with sextants from small boats.

Impetuous Norseman

The famous Eric the Red had a somewhat lurid history. He was born in Norway about 950 A. D. Charged with homicide, he fled from his own land and settled in Iceland. Here his impulsive temper and aggressiveness led to another murder being laid to his charge, which forced him to leave Iceland. He went to Greenland which had been discovered about a century earlier, but had never been settled. In 985 Eric returned to Norway to recruit colonists for a colony in Greenland. He named his chief town Gardar. After flourishing for about 400 years the colony completely vanished, and no trace of it has ever been found. Eric's son, Leif Ericsson, is supposed to have landed on the New England coast in about the year 1000.

Meanings Long Forgotten

Heels were put on shoes to prevent a horseman's foot slipping in the stirrup. Buttons on the coat cuff date back to Frederick the Great, who put sharp buttons there to stop soldiers using their cuffs as handkerchiefs. The wedding ring originally symbolized a chain. Thousands of the things we use and things we say and do are remnants of a long-forgotten past. Habit keeps them alive, even though their real meaning is as obscure as their origin. —Capper's Weekly.

Bells With a History

Rye church bells, which have a history dating back to 1360, are to be rehung. They had a great adventure in 1368, when the French landed at Rye, then a seaport, pillaged the town and carried off the bells to Normandy. Ten years later the men of Rye and Winchelsea sailed across the channel to recapture the bells, which they brought back in triumph. The famous peal has called Rye people to church on Sundays ever since.—London Times.

Silly View of Life;

How We Get That Way

The whole town was invited. Somehow a few days before the party the rumor got about that this was to be no ordinary affair; the Diddles, it seemed, were determined to hit it up.

The first guest to arrive was greeted at the front door by a well-stuffed lay figure with a stiffly outstretched arm pointing to a sign that read, "This way." Following a rope that now appeared, they soon reached a side door and a second figure and directions to ascend by the back way to the dressing rooms.

Up to this time not a word had been spoken, and no one resembling a host or hostess had appeared. When they reached the top of the stairs to go down to the parlor—there was no stairs. Instead, a slippery expanse of board covered with velvet reached from top to bottom.

One lady took it standing. Of course she slipped, fell, and reached bottom with a twisted back that she spent the remainder of the evening trying to hide.

A certain dowager in a new gown sat down and slid—ripping a tear from waist to hem en route.

No one wished to be a short sport—some got compensation upon their own arrival in seeing the antics of those that came after—all felt and looked more sheepish than sheep.

So the evening progressed, each event waxing wilder than the one before.

As the hosts talked things over afterward they felt that they had successfully waked things up.

How do we get that way? By a feeling that without hilarity there is no real enjoyment. Unless the Diddles of the world are making a noise they consider themselves dull. Their smiles are all horse-laughs. These are they who would eat and sleep to the strains of a brass band. Naturally their idea of entertainment is the bizarre, the hilarious. "Pep" is not only the spice but also the salt of life!

"Black Widow" Spider

There is no doubt in my mind that the "Black Widow" is very venomous. In 1917, while camping upon the bank of Snake river, Idaho, I was bitten in the wrist by one of these insects. The entire arm swelled and fine red lines radiated in every direction from the two punctures. In less than a week after being bitten a large, open ulcer formed upon my wrist. This was treated by a Doctor Ross of Nampa, Idaho, and also by a Doctor Boeck of Boise, and by a third doctor, whose name I have forgotten. The wound finally healed, but to this day I carry the marks of the "Black Widow's" bite.

For those who are unfamiliar with the appearance of the Black Widow, I will say this: She (?) may be identified by her long legs and glossy black body, the under side of which is marked with two, bright scarlet spots.—From Adventure Magazine.

Cavern National Monument

The Lewis and Clark cavern of Montana was discovered in 1895 by D. A. Morrison of Whitehall and was established as a national monument in 1908 by President Roosevelt. It takes its name from the fact that it overlooks, for a distance of 50 miles, the trail of Lewis and Clark along the Jefferson river. Vandalism and lack of funds to put in a proper lighting system keep the cave closed to the public at present. The entrance to the cavern is about 1,300 feet above the river and about 500 feet below the rim of Cave mountain. The general shape of the cave is that of a fissure in a steeply inclined bed of limestone. Its maximum measurements are, length, 600 feet; depth, 400 feet. Its numerous passages and rooms make it appear miles in extent.

Bird Census Interesting

A little more than one pair of birds to the acre of farm land is the average shown by bird census over a period of seven years for the country east of the great plains and north of Maryland, the Department of Agriculture reports. The robin is the most abundant species, the English sparrow second. In the immediate vicinity of buildings, including lawns and orchards, about 130 pairs of birds are found to nest on 100 acres. For the entire farm the average is about 112 pairs to the 100 acres.

A Speeder

The three small sons of a business man were discussing what they would do if they had a million dollars. The eldest, aged fourteen, said: "I would buy a steam yacht and sail for Palm Beach."

The second, aged twelve, would spend it, he said, in travel abroad, seeing the world.

Ten-year-old Ralph, who had not yet spoken, sniffed contemptuously. "Humph!" he said, "I would buy an automobile and spend the rest in fines."

"Kicking Down" an Oil Well

THOSE of the oil pioneers who could not afford to drill a well by machinery used the "kicking down" method. A pole of ash or hickory was fastened at one end to work over a support. To the other end was fastened a tilting platform, by which the motion of two or three men was made to jerk the spring pole up and down. This motion in turn slightly raised and lowered the drilling tools, attached to the pole, which worked inside a wooden tube. The strokes were rapid, and a sand pump—a spout three inches in diameter, with a hinged bottom and a valve working on a sliding rod—removed the borings by sucking them into the spout at each quick upward jerk. ¶ The "kicking down" method was not for weaklings! The next step toward better power was the use of horses, and then, in 1860, the steam engine came into general use.

It seems almost impossible nowadays that people of the same world we live in had to labor so hard for a bit of Oil. When we can go to the nearest store and buy such wonderful Kerosene as The Red C Oil and The White C Oil, same except in color, we realize how truly fortunate we now are.

Lesson for November 23

THE TRANSFIGURATION

LESSON TEXT—Luke 9:28-36.
GOLDEN TEXT—This is my beloved Son; hear Him.—Luke 9:35.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Shows His Glory.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Beholding Christ's Glory.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Glory of Jesus Christ.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Transfiguration a Preparation for the Cross.

While it is true that in this lesson the disciples are witnesses of Christ's glory, the full truth is that the manifestation of Christ in glory was to give to the discouraged disciples a foregleam of the Messianic Kingdom. The hopes of the disciples were crushed when Christ announced His death on the cross. They were unable to see how victory could issue from death.

Jesus took with Him Peter, James and John and went into the mountain to pray. His chief aim in retirement was to get the disciples apart and into a state of receptivity so that He might show them the method of the kingdom. Before going to the mountain He declared that there were some standing in His presence who would not taste of death till they should see the Son of Man coming in His kingdom (Luke 9:27; Matt. 16:28). That their drooping spirits might be revived and their confidence restored, He is transfigured before them. Two men from the upper world are sent to converse with Him about his approaching death in Jerusalem (v. 31)—the very thing about which the disciples refused to talk. Then, too, God's own voice was heard in words of approval of Christ's course, directing them to hear the Master. Surely they cannot doubt His ability now to carry into execution His kingdom plans. The purpose, then, of the transfiguration is to give the disciples a foregleam of the coming kingdom, to enable them to see the kingdom in embryo. That this is true is not only shown by the context and circumstances, but by the inspired interpretation of one who was with Him and knew all that transpired (II Peter 1:16-19 R. V.). Note the outstanding features of the kingdom as displayed in the transfiguration:

I. Jesus Christ the Glorified King on Mt. Zion (v. 29).

The glorified king on this mount was intended to symbolize the Messianic kingdom when Christ returns to the Mount of Olives in Jerusalem (Zech. 14:4-17). This is still in the future, and will be literally fulfilled.

II. The Glorified Saints With Christ (vv. 30-31).

(1) Moses, who was once denied an entrance into Palestine, appears now in glory, representing the redeemed of the Lord who shall pass through death into the kingdom. Many thousands of the redeemed have fallen asleep and at the coming of the Lord shall be awakened to pass into the kingdom.

(2) Elijah, now glorified, represents the redeemed who shall pass into the kingdom through translation. Many shall be living upon the earth when the Lord shall come, and shall without dying be changed, and thus pass into the kingdom (I Cor. 15:50-53; I Thess. 4:14-18).

(3) They talk of the very thing which the disciples refused to believe, namely, the death of Christ.

III. Israel, in the Flesh, in Connection With the Kingdom, Represented by Peter, James and John (v. 28).

Israel shall be called from their hiding place among all nations of the earth and shall be gathered to Jesus Christ the King, as the central people in the kingdom (Ezek. 37:21-27).

(1) Peter proposes to build three tabernacles (v. 33). The Feast of Tabernacles looked forward to the glorious reign of Christ. Peter caught a glimpse of the significance of the transfiguration. His proposition showed that he thought of the Feast of Tabernacles, and therefore of the Millennium.

(2) The divine voice (v. 35). At this time God Himself uttered His words, assuring them that this One in glory was His Son Jesus Christ.

IV. The Multitude at the Foot of the Mountain (vv. 37-43).

This is representative of the nations which shall be brought into the kingdom which shall be established over Israel. See Isaiah 11:10-12. The people here were grievously oppressed by the devil. About the time of Christ's first coming he did his best to harass men. Just before Christ's coming again he will be especially active, for he knows that his time is short.

Stewardship: Our Time and Service for Christ

Jeremiah 1:4-10; Matthew 4:18, 19; Ephesians 5:16

Into the matter of stewardship there enters the use of time. The familiar hymn of Frances Ridley Havergal, commencing with the words:

"Take my life and let it be,
Consecrated, Lord, to Thee," recognizes this element of time in the words

"Take my moments and my days,
"Let them flow in ceaseless praise".

Some, like Jeremiah, are called to devote all their time to God as His messengers to the people. In this present dispensation of God's grace, all His believing people are called to "redeem the time." That is, to buy up the opportunities round about them. Inasmuch as we have been bought with a price and are not our own, but belong to Another, certainly our time cannot be used without reference to Him. The things of the spirit must permeate and dominate. In order to be a steward of Christ in the use of time we must not let the newspaper and magazine displace the study of the Bible and the reading of good books. The intellect must be informed, the affections purified and the will energized. The lodge must not displace the home and the church. Social contacts must not be a substitute for soul-winning. Every believer, upon his acceptance of Jesus Christ as a personal Saviour, takes upon himself certain obligations and responsibilities for which he will be held accountable when he stands before the judgment seat of Christ to be judged concerning his works and the use of his time.

A sense of mission (Acts 1-8) and a realization of true values (2 Cor. 4:18) will go far to help us as stewards of Christ in the use of our time and in the matter of our service.

Good Stories Golfers Tell of Royal Game

In 1921 on the course at Kirkfield, Ontario, P. McGregor and H. Dowie were all-square going to the home hole in the final, and when they reached the green McGregor needed to sink a long putt to win the match. He played the ball cleverly, but it rolled around the lip of the hole. It seemed to have stopped, when a large grasshopper landed squarely on the core and caused it to drop into the hole and decide the match in favor of McGregor.

Crows and sea-gulls frequently carry off golf balls, sometimes dropping the ball, actually on the green, a stroke of fortune for the player, and it is quite a common incident at a cow swallowing a golf ball.

A golfer at Newark in May, 1907, drove the ball into the river. The ball struck a trout two pounds in weight and killed it.

The Montreal yarn about the squirrel that stole and hid sixty-odd golf balls against a hard Canadian winter is more than matched by a report from E. R. Dickover, American consul at Kobe, Japan. In commenting on the increasing popularity of golf in Japan, Consul Dickover tells solemnly of the crows that infest the links of the Miko club and make away with the balls, even those sticking to the fairways.—Golfers' Magazine.

Mirage Produced by Passage of Light Rays

The mirage is an optical illusion in which images of distant objects are seen as if inverted or raised in the air, says the Detroit News. This phenomenon was first explained by a Frenchman who went with Napoleon on his first expedition in Egypt, where mirages are very common.

The phenomenon is due to the rays of light being changed in their direction when passing through colder or hotter strata of air. Layers of air in contact with the surface of deserts become greatly expanded and rarefied, while those immediately above remain denser, thus causing the light rays to be bent upward. However, over water the condition is just the reverse. The layers above are warmer than those next to the water. When an object appears to be lifted above its real position in the phenomenon it is called looming. In the case of looming the reflection is from the sky while in ordinary mirage it is from the earth. Mirages are common in Egypt, Persia, Turkistan, California, Nevada and Alaska.

HOW

SUGAR CANE IS BEING UTILIZED FOR ALCOHOL.—Gasoline shortage holds no terrors for the Hawaiian islands. Their chief crop, sugar cane, is not only able to supply all the motor fuel needed locally, but also enough surplus to make a worthwhile export, should the price of gasoline rise much above its present level.

The manufacture of industrial alcohol from molasses is merely awaiting the demand, according to an extensive report issued by H. P. Agee, director of the experiment station of the Hawaiian Sugar Planters' association, and W. L. McCleery, assistant sugar technologist of the same institution.

Technical problems, they say, have been solved in a satisfactory way with respect to manufacturing both motor alcohol and stove alcohol for domestic fuel purposes. But at the average prices of gasoline and kerosene for the last five years extensive production is not an inviting proposition.

One sugar plantation, the Maui Agricultural company, now has in operation an industrial alcohol distillery which is supplying the needs of 32 trucks, 20 passenger cars and 2 tractors owned by the plantation and its employees. Five hundred stoves used in the kitchens of the field laborers are also being supplied with fuel from this distillery.

Difficulties incident to the substitution of motor alcohol for gasoline in motorcars are said to have been overcome. Much experimentation was necessary in arriving at the present satisfactory formula, but now there is essentially no difference between motor alcohol and gasoline in facility of starting or general ease of operation. The life of the motor and extent of repairs is not influenced by the new fuel. Motorcars at the Maui plantation, which have been operated with alcohol for several years, have less carbon trouble than when they used gasoline. Proper carburetor adjustment must be made in changing the fuels, however, as not all carburetors are suitable for alcohol.

GET SECRETS OF THE PAST

How the Chewing of Gum Inadvertently Has Proved Helpful to American Scientists.

Gum chewing, the national sport of the youngest civilization, has been the means of bringing to light information regarding one of the oldest civilizations, according to Sylvanus Griswold Morley, noted archeologist.

Buried in the vast tropical forests of Mexico and Central America are relics infinitely precious to the archeologist and the scientists of the Mayas, a brilliant aboriginal civilization of Central America, which existed while our own northern European ancestors were still plunged in barbarism.

In these forests is found also chicle, which is the basic ingredient of chewing gum, and which is obtained from the sapodilla or sapote tree. The gatherers or "chicleros," as they are called, are the native Mexicans, Indians and halfbreeds. Intent on securing the precious chicle, which to them means money, they often stumble in the tropical bush, unaware, on less obvious treasures—the hieroglyphic monuments, sculptures and ruined cities of the ancient Mayas.

Knowing this, archeologists have offered a standing reward to all chicleros for information of any new group of ruins where there are hieroglyphic monuments and already, it is said, this expedient has resulted in several important discoveries.

How They Get Oil in Mesopotamia.

All economic considerations in connection with the large oil territory between the Black sea and the Persian gulf relate to the future only, for the present condition of the oil fields, as well as the methods of their exploitation, have remained unchanged through thousands of years, writes Edward J. Bing in The New Republic.

The oil wells of Mesopotamia are merely so many simple, shallow pits. The "exploitation" is carried out by the inhabitants of the adjacent villages, the oil being used only in their households. You could call it a "home industry." While the crude oil is transported on donkey and camel back, it is removed from the wells by villagers who descend into the pit, generally six to eight feet deep, and dip goatskin sacks, buckets or cups into the oil. Some actually use palm leaves and even the hollow hand.

How to Address a Letter.

"In many cases," the postmaster general said, "the sender of a letter puts on all the address that he knows. In that event the post office service should be very willing to assist in every way its proper delivery. In this we should take pride in our efficiency. It often happens that the sender of mail may not know the number of the street of his addressee, but does know the street itself. He should be instructed to put on the address all the identification he does know. He may know the occupation of the addressee as, for instance, 'clerk in store,' 'machinist,' 'barber,' 'housemaid,' etc. Adding this may become a material aid."—Bulletin of the Post Office Department.

Mrs. H. D. Hawk received, this week, as a gift from her niece in Harford County, a nice young wild duck.

Citizens are asked to donate cakes and candy for the supper for benefit of Fire Co., to be held Saturday, Nov. 29th.

No season tickets for Chautauqua, will be sold after 12 o'clock, noon, on Saturday, Dec. 6. All single admissions 75c.

Two barrels and a box of supplies for the Loysville Orphan's Home, were packed at the Lutheran Parsonage, on Thursday.

Attention is called to the adv. on this page, concerning the supper to be held at the school building, this Friday and Saturday evening.

Do you realize that only five weeks more, and Christmas will be here? Are there not lots of preparations that you ought to be making, now?

The first snow of the season fell on Saturday, about three inches. As it laid only a few days, it was a good substitute for rain that is needed.

The Lutheran C. E. Society will hold a social, at the Church, Friday evening, Nov. 28, at 7:30. All members and those who attend regularly are invited.

It is to the interest of those having sale in the Spring, to let us have their dates now; not for publication before January 1, but in order that we may give information to inquirers.

We have received from C. Edgar Yount, of the Tampa Fixture & Supply Co., Tampa, Florida, a copy of "The Observer" a publicity issue concerning Tampa real estate. Thanks.

Don't forget the entertainment by the Daniels Male Quartet, of Gettysburg, this evening (Friday) in the Opera House, for the benefit of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Reformed Church. Admission 15c and 25c.

Rev. and Mrs. L. B. Hafer, Miss May Siner and Miss Genevieve Brewer, of Gettysburg, spent Tuesday with Tolbert Shorb and family. Later, they visited at Albert J. Ohler's, Jacob D. Null's and P. B. Englar's.

The Amos Basehoar family reunion will be held at the home of Dr. and Mrs. C. M. Benner, this year, on Thanksgiving Day, the dinner being served at Sauble's. This is an annual event, always greatly enjoyed by the members of the family.

The Westminster Fire Department has issued orders that no more festivals, or like events, may be held in the apparatus room of the firemen's building; likely due to the possible interference with the quick response of the firemen in case of fire.

In case of calls on our firemen, and especially for out-of-town calls, those who issue the call should not fail to make liberal donations for the voluntary service. In Westminster, last week, Wm. Myers & Son presented the Company with $100.00 for service at their recent partial fire loss.

November 27 (Thanksgiving Day) being a Legal Holiday, the Postoffice will be open from 8:30 to 11:30 A. M. and from 3:00 to 5:30 P. M. The rural Carriers will not go over their routes, but will be at the window to hand mail to their patrons from 10:00 to 11:30 A. M.—Harry L. Feeser, Postmaster.

John L. Zimmerman came home from Frederick Hospital, on Wednesday. He stood the trip very well and seems to be in pretty good spirits and condition, but weak. He wishes to extend many thanks for all sympathy, prayers, cards, letters, fruits and flowers, or anything that helped to cheer and brighten the sick room, while at the hospital.

Wilbur Z. Fair while employed with Raymond Ohler in placing a metal roof on Albert J. Ohler's farm dwelling, near Pine Hill, on Tuesday afternoon, met with a narrow escape from serious injury, or perhaps death. He was engaged in seaming the sheets of metal, when the ladder on which he was working became unfastened and slid down the roof, Wilbur grasped the upstanding seams and partly broke his fall, but slid off the house roof to a porch roof, and from there to a concrete walk. No bones were broken, but it was a close call.

Miss Nellie Duttera is visiting Mrs. Margaret Seiss, in Washington.

Read the St. Anthony's supper adv. in this issue, for Saturday evening.

Mrs. John Byers spent last Saturday in Hanover and York, and this Thursday in Baltimore.

Mrs. John R. Sarbaugh returned home last Sunday after spending a week in Hanover, with her sister, Mrs. Jordy undergoing treatment for appendicitis.

Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Fuss entertained at dinner, on Sunday: Mr. and Mrs. John H. Marker, and Mrs. Jacob Koontz, of Littlestown; Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Fuss and Chas. A. Lambert.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde L. Hesson, spent several days of this week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Withrow, of Washington, D. C., and while in Washington, attended the Holmes-Evans wedding.

At present, there is no assurance that the High School will be opened, even in rented rooms, after the Christmas vacation. More definite news on the subject is likely to be forthcoming very soon.

Mrs. Lavina Fringer, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Hesson and Miss Mary Hesson, attended the wedding of Miss Josephine Evans, in Washington, on Tuesday. An account of the wedding is given in full, on another page.

Those who spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. David Little were: Mr. and Mrs. George Knox and Mrs. Joseph Kreitz, of Emmitsburg; William Maylone and Miss Edith Knox, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Joseph Reaver, of Taneytown. They also celebrated Mr. Luke Beitzel's 82nd birthday. Two beautiful poems were recited by little Miss Ruth Little and Miss Marie Little.

A Little "Shop" Talk to Taneytowners.

You can do without The Record. You can do without spending the $1.50 a year for it. You can subscribe for other newspapers, or you can drop them all. You can possibly get other papers that contain much that The Record contains. You can make it $1.50 a year harder for us to get out The Record. You can help other newspaper offices, in many ways, to make our home paper proposition harder.

But, while you can do all these things, will it really pay you to do any of them? Will it help the town, or community? Would Taneytown be a good town for homes, for business—for anything—without a creditable paper in it? Doesn't it pay to spend $1.50 a year, even for the good that many do get out of The Record, even if you think it is not worth that much to you?

Frankly, we make these blunt statements because we think The Record—or what it is trying to do—deserves more liberal home support. This is just a little straight "shop talk" for what you may think it to be worth and what you shall do about it, is for you to decide.

In view of the fact that the South for years stood firmly against woman suffrage, it is interesting to note that Georgia sent the first woman to the Senate and Texas was the first state to nominate a woman for governor.

It has been estimated that it costs the American people $30,000,000 or at the rate of 80 cents a vote to conduct a national election.

Collie Certainly Was Clever Though Crooked

The dog story the other day seems to have attracted considerable attention, says a writer in the Montreal Herald, for in this morning's mail I received the following from an acquaintance:

"A friend of mine is a butcher, who some time ago noticed a big collie come into the shop, wag its tail and drop a letter at his feet. The meat man opened the note and discovered that it was an order, signed by the collie's master, for a piece of sausage. The dog was given the meat, and the amount chalked up on the master's account. This occurred several times, and finally the butcher ceased to unfold the notes, knowing what they contained.

"The dog continued his visits more or less frequently, and when the account went in there was a kick from its owner. There was something like ten pounds of sausages charged to the animal. Its master said he had only given a dozen or so orders to the dog. He happened to be in the shop the next day when his dog came in and dropped the usual piece of paper. Then it was found that 'Nero,' noticing that the butcher didn't read the order, had been picking up stray pieces of paper, folding them, and taking them to the shop, thereby assuaging his sausage hunger."

LAST PAGE EDITORIAL.

Carrying the Pocketbook.

Are you one of the men—the "boss" of the home kind—who carries all of the cash? Do you think it your exclusive job to get, and give out, all of the money that comes in from the farm, the business, or your work. Do you require your wife to come to you for every bit of money she needs, and require her to tell you what she wants it for?

If you are this kind of man—well, you need to have somebody tell you plainly that you are—not the right kind. It rarely pays to be stingy, or non-trustful, with your wife in money matters. It never pays to humiliate her, nor treat her as an irresponsible, to the extent of not giving her a regular allowance that she can dispose of as her own, without being required to render an accounting.

This is the rule—there may be exceptions. And where there are exceptions, the chances are they represent cases in which marriage itself was a big mistake. Wives—and children too, for that matter—who have no money of their own to handle, are in direct line of temptation to get money in disreputable ways, and it is highly dangerous to bring about such a situation.

The successful happy family is a partnership affair. It represents mutual trust, ownership and efforts—an "all for one, and one for all" combination. Perhaps in many cases the allowance to wife and children must necessarily be small, but it should be regular, and part of the home budget; a sort of wage-paying, interest bearing investment, to be discontinued only in the most serious emergencies, or after proven a wrong policy.

The truth is the same in cases in which it is the wife who "rules the roost." It is not so much the exact person who carries the purse, as it is the principle involved—the dangers faced—the temptations encouraged. It never pays any family to make part of it dependent on the other part to the point of beggary, for the want of a little ready money.

High and Low Lands

The maximum difference between the high land and the low in the United States proper is 14,477 feet. According to the official figures, Mount Whitney, the highest point, is 14,501 feet above sea level, while Death valley, the lowest point, is 275 feet below sea level. These two points, which are both in California, are less than 90 miles apart. The difference between them seems small, however, when compared with the difference between the highest and lowest point in Asia. Mount Everest rises 29,002 feet above sea level, whereas the shores of the Dead sea are 12,290 feet below it—a difference of 41,292 feet.
