

FARM BUREAU AUGUST PROGRAM

Co-operative Movements and Tuberculin Testing of Cattle.

The Directors of the Carroll County Farm Bureau met in the County Agent's Office, Times Building, Friday, July 24. All Directors were present but three. Mr. Miles H. Fairbanks, Director of organization, was present at this meeting and presented some very important work for the Farm Bureau organization. Mr. Fairbanks stated to the organization some of the most important things the Farm Bureau has accomplished in Maryland and other states in regards to government regulations for the benefit of the farmers. Mr. Fairbanks just returned from Michigan and Ohio, and explained the great co-operation of the farmers, and the benefits the farmers are receiving through the co-operation of the Farm Bureau.

The Directors took up the subject of co-operation with the county picnic in the county. Union Bridge local will hold their picnic in cooperation with the Homemaker's Club and Grange, in Rinehart's Grove, on Saturday, August 1st. The speakers will be D. H. Harry and the Hon. Millard E. Tydings. Berrett local will have their picnic in cooperation with Homemaker's Club, Pomona Grange and the County Farm Bureau. There will be speakers of note at this picnic. We are sure those who attend these picnics and hear these speakers will be well paid for their time besides there will be music and other entertainment. The reports of the Directors meeting shows cooperation and the great advantage of the Farm Bureau to those who have taken advantage of the opportunity presented.

The tuberculin testing of cattle in Manchester, Hampstead, Woolerys and Freedom Districts was continued last week with the following results: 202 herds were tested containing 975 cattle. 201 reactors were found. These reactors were found on 71 premises making about two clean herds to each infected herd found, while the cattle ran about 20 7/10 per cent tubercular. The district of New Windsor was started this week by Dr. F. H. Benjamin making five districts which are now under test. It is thought that we will be able to move one or two inspectors a week into Carroll County until we have about eight or nine districts under test.

The cattle that have been condemned are being rapidly moved into Baltimore for slaughter and we expect to start one or two men on clean-up and disinfecting work on August 3. Where reactors are found the cattle should be moved as soon as possible, so that the clean-up can be made and the indemnity claim paid at once, as the Federal Bureau of Animal Industry refuses to consider the payment of claim until all animals are slaughtered, and the premises cleaned and disinfected. Disinfecting material can be obtained at the following places: Hampstead Implement Company, Hampstead, Md., and Richardson Bros., Westminster, Md.

HESS FAMILY REUNION.

An Interesting Gathering Held by Well Known Family.

The Samuel Hess Sr. family reunion was held in a beautiful grove of H. David Hess, overlooking the Monocacy River, July 29, 1925. The day was ideal, the crowd was good, there was nothing to detract from the pleasures of the day. There were about one hundred present. There were four sons, one daughter, and two daughters-in-law, of Samuel Hess, Sr., present. The eldest member of the family, H. David Hess, is past 86, and his great-granddaughter Dean Hess, aged 7 months, is the youngest member.

A committee consisting of a representative from each family, known as the "Committee on Findings," made the following recommendations.

First, that we form a permanent organization not only of the Samuel Hess family, but of his father, Chas. Hess's family.

Second, that H. David Hess be the chairman for this day, only, that Samuel F. Hess be chairman for 1925-26; Caroline P. Mehring, Vice-Chairman; Geo. W. Hess, Secretary; Rev. John Henry Hess, Treasurer; Effie Elizabeth Hess Belt, Historian.

Third, that Effie E. H. Belt be requested to give the outline of the history written by her father, C. M. Hess, and his brother, A. N. Hess. These findings were adopted and given as requested.

The committee was: Rev. Chas. W. Hess, Chairman; Rev. Wm. Samuel Hess, Clerk; Elmer S. Hess, Nettie Hess Buckingham, Alveta H. Mehring Plunkert, John Henry Hess, Jr.

A very sumptuous dinner was served, and the entire group was served from one table. One thing was evident, they are bountiful providers.

An impromptu program was rendered as follows: Song by all "My Country 'Tis of Thee," Hess Quartet, "Some Happy Day," by Edith, Hazel, Wilbert and Lev, children of Elmer S. Hess and grand-children of H. David Hess; Remarks by Rev. C. W. Hess, on the history of the family; Violin selection, Miss Hazel Hess; Duet, "Smiling Thru," Misses Ruth and Ella May Hess, granddaughters of Samuel F. Hess; Reading, "Angeline Johnson Comes a Swinging Down the Line," Miss Ruth Hess, she also responded to an encor with "At our House," Remarks by Rev. Wm. S. Hess, of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Prayer, Rev. John H. Hess. Mr. Samuel F. Hess then took the chair and assured the organization there would be another reunion next year. Song, "God be With You Till we Meet Again," by the organization.

Frederick-Keymar Trains Off.

The short run passenger trains between Frederick and Keymar were dropped on Thursday, on the N. C. R. The trains heretofore left Frederick at 7:05 and 9:25 A. M., and 5:15 P. M. The reason given is that owing to a heavy falling off in travel, due to automobile and bus transportation, these trains have for a long while been operated at a loss. The through trains will operate as heretofore.

Citizens located along the line of the road are entering protest to the Company, perhaps many of them being persons who take travel patronage away from the road, yet still want it to give conveniences when they occasionally need them. This is in line with other people who in other ways reduce the earnings of local utilities, yet expect them to stay in business, at a loss, as a sort of second-choice necessity. One can't starve something to death, yet still have it.

Death of Oldest daughter of President of Blue Ridge College.

(For the Record.)

Hortense May Henry, fourteen year old daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. M. Henry passed away Friday, July 24, after a hard struggle with typhoid pneumonia. At the close of school June 2, Dr. Henry and family attended the General Conference of the Church of the Brethren, at Winona Lake, Indiana, where his daughter got typhoid germs.

After visiting relatives and friends in Indiana, while Dr. Henry was delivering three lectures at North Manchester, Goshen, and South Bend, they returned by way of Niagara Falls arriving home on June 18. The daughter took sick July 1 and was cared for by two trained nurses, night and day until the end came.

Short services were held at the home Saturday, 4:00 P. M., conducted by Prof. William Kinsey and Dr. James Frazer. Profs. E. C. Bixler, Lewis Brumbaugh, Earl Flohr and H. D. John, members of College Faculty, were pall-bearers. The sorrowing parents accompanied the remains to Roanoke, Virginia, where funeral services were conducted by Rev. Walter Kahle, in Central Church of the Brethren, Monday, July 27, and interment in the Evergreen cemetery.

Hortense was born May 30, 1911, at Daleville, Virginia, and later lived at University, Virginia and Washington, D. C. Her parents moved to New Windsor 1922, where she attended public school and graduated June 1925. She was talented in music. She possessed a beautiful and modest disposition, and had a host of friends who will greatly miss her.

Owners of fancy dog shops are doing a flourishing business in London this summer, for it is the vogue for women to have pets to match their gowns, or dress schemes to correspond with the coat of their favorite dog.

MINERS STRIKE IS ALMOST SURE.

No Agreement Likely Between Operators and Miners.

There seems to be no likelihood of the coal operators agreeing to either one of the three main points at issue in the coal strike—increase in pay, recognition of the union, and the check-off system. The operators are willing to concede certain lesser demands, but none that will raise the price of coal.

The conference has developed into a talk-fest, and it is difficult to size up the true inwardness of just what the conference actually means, and how much consideration the purchaser of coal actually gets, from either side.

Secretary Hoover has been summoned to leave his California vacation and come east to keep track of the situation, and to advise the President, if necessary, especially if a strike should be called, which now seems imminent.

There is a feeling afloat that the President may call a special session of Congress to consider recommendations of the U. S. Coal Commission, that the mines be taken by the government and operated in the event of a strike.

Bank Robber Soon Captured.

An amateur bank robbery, that did not get far, was committed in Keedysville, near Boonsboro, on Wednesday. The robber was Hilton Grove 20 years old, of Sharpsburg an adjoining town, who entered the bank and held up the assistant cashier, gathered up $1,027 cash in sight, jumped into a stolen automobile and made off. For some reason he stopped a short distance out of town and picked up Paul Kefauver and asked him to take a ride, to which the latter agreed.

In the meantime the county authorities at Hagerstown and Frederick were notified, and deputies took up the case, having secured the number of the stolen car, and a description of Grove. About a mile west of Frederick the car was captured by Sheriff Albaugh along with the occupants. Grove admitted the robbery and exonerated Albaugh.

On searching the car, $1,021 was found in a pocket of the car. Grove expressed surprise that the news of the robbery came out so quickly, and said he wanted the money to help two of his friends, Snively and Lynch, out of the penitentiary.

Some Pay in Advance Records.

A Wisconsin Editor who wrote to the Publisher's Auxiliary that he thought he had the champion long-distance subscriber in a man who paid up nine years in advance, has been out-distanced.

An Iowa Editor tells of a subscriber who sent in a check for $22.00 and a half-dollar, without any explanation. After investigation, it was found that his name was still on the mailing list, where it had been carried for fifteen years by mistake, and the name had long since been dropped in the card index system. The name was reinstated, and the paper continued.

The Editor of an Oklahoma paper reported two subscribers who subscribed for 20 years each in 1922, or up to 1942. And another subscriber who advanced his subscription 11 years the last time he paid. The same Editor also boasts of many 5 and 6 year subscriptions.

An Arizona Editor comes to the front with several 10 year in advance subscribers, and a North Carolina Editor reports a subscriber paid for 11 years, or until 1937.

These cases evidently represent a very marked degree of faith in the longevity of the papers mentioned, or big lots of surplus cash. Here in this neck of little old Maryland, we have never had a longer term than 5 years paid in advance—and the fact is we are mighty glad to get the 1 year in advance kind—and would like more of them.

Hairy Vetch in Georgia.

Atlanta, Ga., July 24—Farmers in Georgia will sow 1,000,000 pounds of hairy vetch this fall—an increase of 750,000 pounds over last year—it is estimated by the State Department of Agriculture.

Farmers have just learned that this fodder plant is one of the best soil builders that can be sown in Georgia. It has been estimated at the State College of Agriculture, that a ton of hairy vetch is equivalent to 400 pounds of nitrate of soda—and it is no "stunt" to raise a ton of this crop on a good acre of land.

It has also been estimated that corn planted after hairy vetch will yield fifteen to twenty-five bushels more to the acre and cotton between 300 and 600 pounds more to the acre. The cost of seed this year is about $2 per acre, which is very moderate considering the advantages to be gained.

Suicide Bequeathes Wife.

A man at Egg Harbor, N. J., committed suicide by hanging, July 24, and in a letter to another man said, "seeing that you wanted my wife so badly, I am leaving this world so you can have her. I did this to make you two happy." He was a shell-shocked world war veteran.

ODD FELLOWS HOME DEDICATED

The Big Event Spoiled in Part by Heavy Storm.

The dedication of the Odd Fellows Home, at Frederick, last Sunday afternoon, was a big event, estimated to have been attended by 25,000 people. A heavy electrical storm occurred as the parade started, which greatly curtailed the parade, perhaps not over 2000 participating of the expected 10,000.

The ceremonies began with the raising of a large American flag in front of the administration building. This was followed by prayer by the Rev. A. R. Snedding and an address by William H. Hofstetter, Jr., Baltimore, Past Grand Master of the order. Presentation of the flag was made to Grand Master Albert T. White, of Mountain Lake Park.

The formal dedication took place in the afternoon in front of the Administration Building. John B. Spence, chairman of the Building Commission presided. Following prayer by the Rev. James Riley Berger, chaplain of the Grand Lodge, there was an address by Mr. White, Governor Ritchie, Joseph D. Baker, Grand Secretary William A. Jones and H. Dorsey Etchison also spoke.

In his address the Governor paid a tribute to fraternalism and complimented the order on the completion of the home.

The Governor and hundreds of other visitors were escorted through the buildings, which have been furnished and are virtually ready for occupancy.

The town was decorated in holiday attire and barrels of ice water were placed along the main thoroughfare from the center of the city to the home. Nearly every grand officer of the State lodge, home building commission, grand encampment, Rebekah assembly and department of party masters attended the dedication.

The group of buildings represents an investment of between $500,000 and $600,000. A number of lodges have donated furnishings. It was announced that a Baltimore lodge will donate a large automobile bus to convey children to and from school.

The dedication brought together the largest gathering of members of the order that ever has assembled in the State.

Hart Again Attempts Escape.

"Jack" Hart, the notorious member of the Norris murder gang, serving a life term in the Maryland Penitentiary, was apprehended, last Friday afternoon, in the midst of carefully laid plans for an escape. Warden Brady had been suspecting Hart for some time for concocting a plan of escape, but could not get any evidence. Last Friday, however, in making a careful examination of Hart's cell while he was in a shop at work, Brady happened to notice a scratch on the wall near the upper left hand corner of the cell, and in making a close inspection found a small piece of paper, the exact color of the wall, pasted over a point in the scratch, in the steel wall.

The scrap of paper covered a small hole about a quarter of an inch in diameter, made by Hart by some instrument that he had smuggled into his cell. Saying nothing about the find, he left Hart return to his cell from work and then sent for him to appear in the Warden's office. He was then taken to a bath room and all of his clothing removed.

In the meantime the cell was searched after he left it, where it was found that Hart had emptied his pockets of a key he had made, and three files, which Hart claimed he knew nothing about—that somebody was trying to "frame" him.

The hole made in the wall led to a steel metal tube in which runs all the wires which lift the plungers in the lever cell locks. It was no doubt his intention to insert a wire or small file, in this hole, and lift one or several of the wires leading to cell doors, perhaps to the one to his own door. Evidently, his plans were still far from completion, as the key was unfinished, and he had no equipment as yet, to reach freedom, even if he succeeded in opening his cell door.

Hart has since been placed in another cell, in solitary confinement. This was his third attempt to escape.

New County Road Applied For.

The County Commissioners, this week, after the usual preliminaries, appointed a committee of three to view and survey a new county road to go through the lands of G. E. Senesney, Samuel Foutz and Samuel Hoff, Jr., that would connect the Linwood and McKinstry road with the New Windsor and McKinstry road.

The committee is David Englar and Evan B. McKinstry, near New Windsor and W. C. Rinehart, near Union Bridge; and if in the judgment of the committee the road should be opened, the committee is authorized to stake it off. At present, there is no short cut between the two roads, which run to a point at McKinstry.

"Giving it Back to the World."

Under the above caption will be found an editorial in this issue, clipped from The Philadelphia Ledger. We advise its reading, for the information that it contains, but more for the lesson that it teaches—the unsatisfaction, for the future, of laying up wealth. Many who will never be one tenth millionaires, might read and study the editorial with profit.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN DEAD

A Victim of Apoplexy last Sunday Afternoon.

William Jennings Bryan was found dead in bed, at Dayton, Tenn., last Sunday afternoon. He had attended services at the Southern M. E. Church where he led in prayer. Following the services returned to his temporary home, ate a hearty dinner during which he remarked on his appetite, then retired for an afternoon nap shortly after three o'clock.

Mrs. Bryan went to the back porch, not over fifteen feet from his bed, to attend to some correspondence, and at about 4:30 when she thought he had slept long enough sent their chauffeur to wake him. It was then found that he was dead, and the physician pronounced it to be a case of apoplexy.

Since the Scopes trial Mr. Bryan had been busy speaking, and had a long program arranged ahead for the Summer. It is thought that the excitement of the trial, and the great discomfort brought by the heat, may have undermined his health, but he made no complaints of it.

And so, there has passed from life one of the most widely known figures that ever appeared on the stage of American political activity; one who came next to being President; one who in his best days wielded tremendous popular influence; one who no matter what may be thought of his doctrines—was a man of great ability, and must be accorded honest intentions in all of his many attitudes.

Mr. Bryan had just completed arrangements for the publication of his undelivered address on the Scopes trial, and he had prepared for the subject to open a speaking campaign on the subject throughout the country, as to which project there was pretty wide difference of opinion as to its advisability, especially as Mr. Bryan was not generally accepted as the highest authority on the subject.

Mr. Bryan was born March 19, 1860 in Salem, Ill. Practiced law until 1887 when he settled in Lincoln, Neb. Made political speeches in the campaign of 1888. Served in Congress from 1891 to 1895. Nominated for President in 1896 at age of 36 years. Commanded 3rd. Infantry of Nebraska in Spanish American war. Again nominated for President in 1900 and 1908. Was Secretary of State under Wilson in 1913 and resigned in 1915. His political leadership was broken at convention of 1920.

Burial services will take place today, Friday, in Arlington cemetery, Washington, with simple ceremonies.

The Airplane Mail Service.

Air mail service between New York and San Francisco has been in daily operation, for some time. An airplane leaves New York and San Francisco, every morning, whatever the weather may be. There are landing stations at regular intervals on the 2680 mile route, where pilots and machines are changed.

A mail plane now flies further in an hour than the pony express traveled in an entire day, sixty years ago, making an average of nearly 200 miles an hour.

The flight west is made in 34 hours and 45 minutes, and the trip east in 32 hours and 5 minutes, under normal conditions. The service west to east is almost three hours shorter because of prevailing western winds, while the trip east to west has the advantage of three hours more daylight because flying with the Sun.

Flying at night is guided in part by certain trail signs and lights, and low flying, but there is always danger of getting lost, especially on certain stages of the flight. Between Chicago and Cheyenne there is a line of beacon lights on the plains, like lighthouses along coasts, and emergency landings are equipped with powerful beacons, approximately 25 miles apart, while regular landings are about 250 miles apart.

Fogs and storms play a decided part in making the service dangerous, and there is always the risk of engine or other trouble. The flying altitude is normally from 2500 to 3000 feet, subject to wide variation.

MARRIAGE MILL AT ELKTON.

Ministers Protest to Governor over "Splitting" of Fees.

Elkton, Cecil County, as a "marriage mill" is again in the spot light through a petition to Gov. Ritchie, signed by 652 Cecil County voters, asking him to bring the "marriage trust" over there to a close. It is asserted that Elkton is a favorite spot for runaway couples to get "tied" and that certain ministers are getting wealthy at the business. One minister alone is charged with having received $3000. a year from a taxicab syndicate that arranges the details of the marrying.

The minister said to receive the $3000., salary is also said to receive $1.00 of the $10.00 fee charged, $9.00 being turned over to the taxicab trust. A minister is also said to have taken a ring from the finger of an impecunious bride in payment for ceremony, and to offer it for sale to the next couple.

The petition to the Governor was brought by a delegation of ministers representing the Cecil County Minister's Association who objected to "fee splitting," and to any commercializing of the sacred act. The marrying ministers are said to have no charges, but to openly invite revenue from this one source alone.

As many as 60 weddings a day have occurred at Elkton, and fees have been known to run as high as $50.00. The State's Attorney of Cecil County, treats the subject lightly. He says:

"I have taken no extreme position in the matter. There is a law prohibiting the soliciting by chauffeurs of couples desiring to be married on the streets. There is also a law of the railroad company limiting the number of passengers that the taxicab drivers can solicit at the station.

"It is a matter of little importance to me concerning who gets married in Elkton. I believe that it should be easy to get married. Easy marriage laws and stringent divorce laws should be the rule. Our marriage laws are uniform with those of the rest of the State and this fuss is absurd.

"The number of marriages in Elkton doubles every time someone starts fussing over conditions. If things were allowed to die down you would never hear of Elkton in connection with a marriage mill."

Certified Poultry Flocks.

College Park, July 27—Poultry raisers in Maryland will soon be made acquainted with a new classification of fowls, and in addition to the many varieties of the many breeds with which they are already familiar, will be called upon to distinguish between certified and uncertified flocks.

The certification of poultry flocks is a new undertaking in Maryland that is being sponsored by the Maryland Poultry Association, Inc., in cooperation with the poultry department at the University of Maryland. The object is to improve the quality of hatching eggs and breeding stock produced by poultrymen in the State, and to provide for the purchaser an official assurance that in buying from the owner of a certified flock he is securing the best in the way of poultry that it is possible to produce.

Poultry flocks will only be certified when they measure up to certain high standards of breeding, vigor and health, and when they are maintained according to prescribed regulations governing sanitation and management. Flocks to be certified must be rigidly culled of all fowls that do not meet the requirements of the breed, or that do not show proper health and vigor. Numerous inspections will be made from time to time to see that proper feeding and management methods are being practiced, and that sanitary conditions are maintained.

Once a poultry flock has been certified, the owner will be permitted to sell his eggs and his day old chicks, as well as his mature breeding stock under the official certification stamp. All inspections for certification will be made under supervision of the poultry department of the University of Maryland.

The work of poultry certification is expected to get under way by September 21st, in time for next year's breeding season.

It seems not to have occurred to Mr. Scopes who has attained sudden notoriety in the Tennessee evolution trial, that he can believe in, and teach, that man evolved from an ape, at every opportunity, all of his life, just so he does not do so in state supported schools. There is no law, in fact, that compels Tennessee, or any other state, to give jobs to such teachers. So, he has still pretty wide freedom to ventilate his views. Why not write a book?

Atheism on the Stage.

The comparatively few atheists, and variously labeled unbelievers in christianity, are having their day before the public, largely because of the kindness of the daily newspapers that are always alert for the something off-color for people to read and talk about. The Scopes case introduced the notoriety—the old and many times exploited theory of evolution, commonly understood as meaning that man developed, ages ago, from the monkey tribe—and it still has a run before it.

Perhaps along the same line of scientific research, birds developed from bugs, horses from foxes, and dogs from gophers, in each case without destroying the original breed? But, strangely enough, science has so far attempted only to prove the evolution of man, without likewise demonstrating the evolutionary origin of any other creature on earth, unless we except bullfrogs from pollywogs, and butterflies from woolly worms.

It is now thought by many that the Scopes case will "evolute" into Congress, in which event we may secure more inside information concerning the why-fore of certain uncommon trains of thought, developing into legislation, or trying hard to do so. Perhaps certain hereditary, bugs or germs, are merely trying to evolve.

At any rate, after a little while the various 'ists will have had their parade, the newspapers will have worn the newness from the feature, and the subject will be relegated to the limbo of last year's bird's nests, free silver, John L., shoo fly, and some other once popular has-beens.

Why Do We Read?

For information? Not always, sometimes we read merely for entertainment, or to kill time, and very often we read largely through curiosity, in a careless indefinite sort of way, without any particular object in view—we "skim over" page after page, read the head lines, then toss the paper away and say "there's nothing in it."

When one reads, it ought to be with an appetite, as it were. Actually, one should read for profit—not only for news, but for general information. Even reading for entertainment is profitable, and sometimes through closer reading than we customarily give, we find something unexpectedly that is new to us, and adds to our stock of general information.

It is a fact not appreciated, but none the less true, that if papers were prepared with the same degree of carelessness with which they are read, they would not be worth reading or paying for. Even when, as we say, there is "no news" in a paper, the editor has likely gone to special trouble to select something, not late news, in order to compensate for the shortage; and it is largely this selection that makes the difference between papers. It is this that marks real editorship, rather than the writing of "editorials."

Some people surfeit themselves with reading matter, which is as bad a plan as having too little. One should exercise care in placing subscriptions. It is greatly better to become familiar with a few good papers, than to be unfamiliar with many, as "close" reading pays better than "half" reading. Then, reading is a study.

Sometimes we get only the half meaning, or understanding, out of what we read, and this leads to confusion and misinformation.

We find this out sometimes when we are real hungry for reading matter, and pick up some old paper that we read carefully through from beginning to end, and find in it a lot of valuable entertainment, and often something really instructive that perhaps the person who threw the paper aside, when fresh, never saw.

If we would read for profit of some kind, we would find more of value than we commonly think, and we would as surely read a lot of things that we commonly pass by as of no interest to us. In reality, it is the reading of articles in which we mistakenly think we are not interested, that often gives the most information.

The New, and the Old.

There is a condition approaching the insane for discarding old, and adopting new, things and ideas. We are so fearful of not being "up-to-date," or in the "style" that we permit the mere habit of change to displace better judgment and experience, often to our loss both financially and otherwise.

Our school systems, for instance, discount mere past experience in teachers, and appear to place a premium on "forgetting" on the part of teachers, and the taking up of modern ideas—largely untested theories—and certainly more fanciful than practically useful.

Rather than try to improve that which we have, we are often more inclined to throw away old, and buy new things—house-furnishings, clothing, and often machinery, and items that still have a great deal of life and use in them.

Old rules and regulations, and long tried customs, are discarded for no better reason than that they are old; and the fad causes many readjustments that, in actual effect, are no improvement at all—merely "a change" and unnecessary friction and expense. Somehow, we are habitually wanting to make things better by overlooking real remedies, because we are impatient in the matter of doing a lot of small things that appear "old-timish."

In reality, the correct relation between the old and the new is largely the relation that exists between "old friends"—the tried and tested relation that can hardly have a high enough valuation placed on it. We are not wise in discarding old friends, merely because they are "old," and adopting in their place new friends, merely because they are "new."

Wise merchants take the best of care of long-time customers. Getting "new trade" is always good business, but holding "old trade" is better—holding fast to that which we have, that has perhaps been the result of many years of effort. New customers are not as important as more customers—not new business, but more business; and that simply means building up and holding on.

We can never afford to be careless of that which we have. Even if good sense and energy dictates following new plans, and not holding fast to worn out ones that have outlived their value, there is always the opportunity and necessity of very carefully estimating just how far we are pursuing mere newness, and underestimating that which we contemplate discarding because of its age.

As to Advertising Rates.

The National Editorial Association, that recently met in Richmond, Va., with a country wide membership of weekly newspapers, decided through its advertising committee that the following rates for general advertising, per inch, each insertion should apply as "very conservative" rates.

For 500 or less circulation, 25c.
For 1000 or less circulation, 30c.
For 1500 or less circulation, 35c.
For 2000 or less circulation, 40c.
For 2500 or less circulation, 45c.
For 3000 or less circulation, 48c.
For 3500 or less circulation, 51c.

Carroll county papers are included in the classes that should obtain from 35c to 45c per inch; but, they don't get anything near that figure—in many instances, not even half. The Publisher's Auxiliary, in commenting on the N. E. A. rates, says:

"The publisher who sells advertising space in his paper lower than these rates is cheating not only himself but his community as well. He is cheating himself because those are minimum rates, based upon a careful study of the whole advertising problem by men familiar with the subject, and if he goes below them he is not getting a fair return for his labor. It is just as true today as it was 2,000 years ago that the laborer is worthy of his hire. He is cheating his community because the 'starved' newspaper can not give to its community that type of leadership and service which it should and for which the community looks.

What is true of the low advertising rate is true of the low subscription rate. The $1 a year subscription price is now virtually obsolete but the $1.50 rate is still too much in evidence. Especially is this true when experts in newspaper production have declared that $2 comes more nearly being the rate upon which a fair margin of profit for this source of revenue can be figured."

Giving It Back to the World.

Leopold Schepp, an old man, is many times a millionaire. For sixty years and since he was 25 he has been in business. In that time he has given away $6,000,000. Before his death he would give away his other millions that he may go empty-handed to his grave. He is puzzled about how he may best do this. He has taken his problem to the public and invited the counsel of his fellow men.

He is one of a long line of rich men who, in the main, have followed the same road. They gather it through the years. They find it in steel or oil, in chocolate or sugar, in rails, or mines, or tobacco. Their days are given to the gathering of wealth and the power that goes with riches.

Then in the fullness of their time these millions begin finding their way back into the uses of Society. This has been so with the Rockefellers, the Carnegies, the Fricks, the Morgans, the Dukes, the Eastmans and many another rich man. In two decades their gifts have run into billions.

The Rockefeller gifts to religion, science and education total a half billion in twenty years. These princely benefactions have been matched by the steel kings. "Foundations," galleries, museums, libraries, colleges, and laboratories are everywhere. They have strengthened every agency of human betterment.

One generation no longer wastes what another has gathered. More and more individual wealth is being frozen into golden glaciers of endowments and enduring benefactions, thawing slowly through the years and flowing back into the human mass from which it came. There is more wealth than ever before. More of it is creeping, seeping and moving back toward its sources than ever before.

And why? What is it which moves a man to give back to the world the accumulations of a life-time? Charity's claims have their part. So do those of religion, education, science and human betterment. No one of them, nor all of them together, however, quite explains the melting of great accretions of wealth back into the uses of mankind.

Behind this self-leveling and renunciation of wealth is a deep-rooted instinct stronger than logic and sounder than human reason. It makes itself felt even in the fever and fret of accumulation.

A man works with hand or brain all the days of his years. He gathers much substance. His wealth means power. To some men there comes a time when they sense the emptiness of that substance and wish to make some use of that power for the common good. They come to feel they are no more than trustees of the riches which are in their hands.

It is then they face the greatest problem of them all. How shall this power be used and where? How best can fullness take the place of emptiness? It what way can this wealth be best translated to the uses of human welfare?

Some solve it in one way, same in another. Some turn to the serried statistics and graphic curves of professional philanthropy. Others follow the counsel of their own minds and hearts. Once in this generation a rich man has appealed to the public to tell him how he may best serve it.

Many do good. A few do evil. Some strive to leave their personal impress on the next generation. The great majority of our philanthropists seek merely to serve their fellows and the future. They all, consciously or half-instinctively, are moving toward the same end. Never has wealth piled itself so high as it has in our day and time, and never has wealth so leveled itself or moved so rapidly back toward the masses out of which it comes.—Phila. Ledger.

Scale Up and Scale Down.

Whether it be by President Coolidge or by any other public official or agency, efforts for tax reduction will meet with popular approval. For the tax burden is real. It bears heavily on everybody.

The farmer sells his crops and in turn gives more to the tax collector than he keeps for himself.

Last year the railroads paid taxes in the amount of $340,000,000 or $30,- 000,000 more than was paid the stockholders.

Merchants may and usually do, add their taxes to the selling price of their goods and wares in "overhead," thus passing the tax burden on to the consumer, but as taxes rise, prices soar, sales lessen and profits dwindle. The railroad like the merchant, obtains its revenue from the public, selling service instead of merchandise hence it too passes its tax burden on to the consumer.

The tax burden cannot be shifted. Directly or indirectly, it falls on the general public. The only way to reduce it is to scale up economy and scale down extravagance.—The Manufacturer.

POINTS OF DANGER IN THUNDER STORM

Shelter of Trees Especially to Be Avoided.

The danger of death by lightning is very small. It is almost negligible. But not quite. Men are killed by lightning. The season of thunder storms is at hand, and it is only the part of common sense to minimize the danger as far as possible.

Most of those who are killed by lightning are not in their homes. They are out somewhere in the open. Probably they are seeking shelter under trees. The worst possible thing to do in a thunder storm is to snuggle under a tree. Any tree is likely to be the lightning's target, and this is particularly true of trees like the elm, which have much sap. The beech, which is a dry tree, is much safer than the elm, but no tree is surely immune. Lightning which "strikes" finds a tree more frequently than it finds anything else. A man in the open is so small a mark that the bolts of Olympian wrath usually scorn to kill so insignificant a thing. A man under a tree which is struck by lightning may escape with only a severe shock, but he is likely to be killed by some electric prank.

It is to be remembered that water is a conductor of electricity. For this reason the sappy elm is struck oftener than the desiccated beech. For this reason, too, it is wise for the wanderer in a thunder storm to have his raiment as dry as possible. If one's clothes are wet the lightning is likely to course through the watery fluids of the human body, bringing sudden, complete and disputable death. But if the garments are saturated till they are wetter than the body the lightning may follow them to the earth, ripping and tearing them but not necessarily ripping and tearing the man within them. Of course the man whose clothing is struck by lightning must suffer a severe shock, but even this is better than the alternative of being surely electrocuted.

If you are caught in the woods in an electric storm the best strategy is to get out of the woods. The next best plan is to get as wet as possible. If there is a brook handy it is advisable to lie in the brook rather than to wait for the rain to do the wetting. Eschew the forest and seek wetness. Thus you will probably attain old age in spite of the lightning. Because the lightning has never yet killed you it is no safe assumption that it never will. The chances are a million to one in your favor. But there is no sense in ignoring the millionth chance.

Didn't Go Down

President George M. Verity of the American Rolling Mills company, who in 33 years of business life has never had a single labor trouble, said in New York the other day:

"I believe in frank dealing. Employers should be honest and open with their men. Deceit, hypocrisy and cant never go down."

"A millionaire was addressing the inmates of an almshouse.

"Ah, dear friends," he said, 'prosperity has wrecked and ruined countless lives.'

"No doubt o' that," spoke up an old pauper on a back bench. 'All the same, boss, I wish to goodness I'd a' been ruined by prosperity instead of adversity. I bet it'd been a darn sight pleasanter.'

Says Earth Stands Still

An instrument which, the maker says, proves that the modern ideas of the solar system are wrong, has been invented by Chang Chung-shan, a Chinese astronomer. He says his instrument demonstrates that the earth does not move, but stands still, suspended in air like a soap bubble. He says, further, he can prove with it that the sun and other heavenly bodies revolve around the earth. With the aid of two colleagues he has written a book in support of this theory but it has not yet been translated into a foreign language.

POULTRY

COMMERCIAL GRADES FOR MARKET EGGS

William H. Lapp, of the Iowa Agricultural college, in a circular gives the following description of the ordinary commercial egg grades:

Extras—These are eggs weighing from 24 to 28 ounces to the dozen and are uniform in size and fairly uniform in shape and color. They must be free from heat or germ development. The air cell must not be larger than the size of a dime.

Firsts—These are eggs weighing from 22 to 24 ounces to the dozen, uniform in size, and fairly uniform in shape and color. They must be free from heat, with an air cell not much larger than that of an extra. The shell must be sound and clean.

Seconds—These are made up of light stains and dirties, heated and stale eggs, also small eggs or any others not classified above but edible.

Checks—These are slightly broken eggs.

Cracks—These are generally classed with checks.

Leakers—Leakers are broken eggs where the liquid is escaping.

Rejects—These are the eggs unfit for food.

In securing eggs that will class as "extras" or "firsts," Professor Lapp suggests that the following points be kept in mind:

1. Take pride in the eggs you sell.
2. Keep a flock of good standard bred stock. Hatch only large, select eggs.
3. Keep nests clean and plenty of them.
4. Do not keep eggs in a place above 60 degrees temperature.
5. Keep litter in house clean.
6. Separate males from flock as soon as hatching season is over.
7. Do not market small, inferior eggs. Use them at home.
8. Do not wash dirty eggs if they are intended for market.
9. Keep eggs covered when taking them to market.
10. An egg is generally good quality when it is produced. Don't help to deteriorate the quality. Market eggs often.

One difficulty in the way of the Iowa farmer in working for higher grades on eggs is that in a great many cases higher grades are not rewarded by proportionately higher prices, due to the indiscriminating attitude of some local buyers. The co-operative egg selling associations of Minnesota and Missouri have found that the quality of the eggs handled goes up very promptly after the returns for the first lots have been received. As soon as farmers are sure that they are going to get premiums for their high quality, their percentage of "extras" and "firsts" goes up markedly.

Necessary to Have Eggs Clean in Fowls' Nests

It is necessary to have the eggs clean in the nests, because washing eggs takes time and also removes the natural bloom. One common cause of dirty eggs is the habit of pullets roosting in the nests. This can soon be broken up by going through the houses just after roosting time and removing such birds to the roosts. Spending a few minutes in the houses just at sundown to frighten the pullets from the nests will teach them to select another roosting place themselves. Then they are most apt to go back to the regular roosts each night.

Walking on dirty dropping boards is another cause of dirty eggs. Some poultrymen nail strips of two-inch mesh wire under each roosting section. This permits the droppings to fall through to the boards but keeps the hens from walking on the boards. They have to hop from perch to perch and then down into the litter and will have cleaner feet when going on the nests in the morning. The mesh of the wire may be fine enough to catch any eggs laid during the night and save them from breaking.

Poultry Facts

Provide plenty of oyster shell in addition to grit.

Sunshine keeps chicks growing rapidly. Give them plenty.

A chicken doesn't drink very much at a time, but that's no sign that it doesn't need any water.

Tuberculosis in poultry causes an unthrifty condition, especially in the older birds. They get poor and thin, lose flesh rapidly in most cases, and many of them get lame.

If one is not careful on mash feeding, there is danger of getting the chicks off feed by giving too much.

The first six weeks of a chick's life is the most critical period. The largest per cent of losses occurs during this time.

Plenty of shade should be provided for growing chicks. When allowed to range in an orchard or cornfield, they will not only find ample shade and green feed, but will benefit the trees or corn by destroying bugs and worms.

Find Advantages in Saving Seed

Selection Often Is Better Than Can Be Given to Market Product.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The home or local gardener and the greenhouse gardener will often find it advantageous and profitable to save their own seed, at least for some of their vegetables, says the United States Department of Agriculture. In earlier times the home saving of seeds was the rule. This custom has practically ceased, although there are distinct advantages even under present conditions for continuing the practice.

Suitable for Shipping.
The tendency of large-scale vegetable producers at present is to produce vegetables that are suitable for shipping long distances, and this has caused a decided lessening of varieties handled. The characters necessarily chosen for these varieties that will ship long distances are determined by shipping and market requirements, and too often a high culinary quality has been neglected. Both the home and market gardener are in a position to profit by growing vegetables of high culinary quality. This is best done by saving the seed of proven varieties at home.

Many garden varieties carry place names or names of persons which occasionally indicate that they have been developed by community selection in the localities shown. As late as the middle of the last century many individual market gardeners in this country jealously guarded the seed of certain varieties and strains which represented years of intelligent selection in their hands. A few such superlative varieties are yet to be found in the possession of gardeners near the old market-gardening centers. That there are advantages in thus saving seed where it is grown is generally recognized.

Advantages Two-Fold.
These advantages are two-fold: (1) The selection which the gardener gives his seed plants, while not greater than the seed grower gives his seed stock, is often better than can be given to the seed that is placed on the market; and (2) the plants selected will be the ones which succeed best under local environment. Certain vegetables in which cross-pollination is normal will, of course, mix badly if two varieties are seeded in one garden together.

Weather or other conditions sometimes cause a short crop of seed or a failure. Fortunately, well-matured seeds, if properly stored, with the possible exception of those of the parsnip and onion, will retain their vitality for from three to five years. It is thus possible to tide over poor years and to grow most of the seed needed for a small garden.

Sudan Grass in Heading Best for Maximum Yield

Experience indicates that for practical farm purposes it is more profitable to cut sudan grass for hay as soon as the grass begins to head. By cutting at this period more hay will be secured during the season. The hay cut as soon as it has begun to head is a little more palatable than when cut at a later stage. Sudan grass hay is not washy or extremely laxative in effect, and consequently the objection to early cutting, which holds good with many crops, is not so important with sudan grass, according to agronomy specialists, Kansas State Agricultural college.

In harvesting the seed crop, the highest per cent of good-quality seed will be secured if the crop is cut after the earliest seed heads are fully mature. This may result in a small amount of shattering from the earlier ripening heads. The grower of the crop must watch conditions closely and use his own judgment as to the proper time under existing conditions.

It is usually more profitable to harvest the first growth for seed purposes, and the second for hay, than to attempt to harvest the first growth for hay and the second for seed. Only in exceptional cases in Kansas can two seed crops be secured in a single season, agronomists say.

Ration Is Favored for Fattening Market Fowls

The Cornell station advises the following ration for fattening poultry with milk: Fifty pounds cornmeal, 20 pounds white wheat middlings and 10 pounds of ground heavy oats. This can be mixed into a sloppy batter at the rate of a quart of milk to a quart of mash. By weight use two pounds of milk to one pound of mash. This ration has been found to give better results with milk than with meat scrap.

When meat scrap is substituted for the milk use 50 pounds of cornmeal, 20 pounds of white wheat middlings, 10 pounds of ground heavy oats. This is mixed into a batter at the rate of 1½ quarts of water to 2 quarts of mash. By weight it is equivalent to three pounds of water mixed with two pounds of mash.

The general practice in fattening is to pen up the birds to reduce the exercise and soften the muscles. The soft fat tends to take the place of muscular tissue and makes the poultry meat much more appetizing. The birds to be fattened can be fed all they will eat eagerly twice a day, and the fattening continued for about two weeks. A shorter time may be sufficient, depending on the weight of the birds and how much fat they seem to need when first penned up.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT
By F. A. WALKER

LOVE AND SACRIFICE

IF YOU exhibit a continuous willingness to love and sacrifice when all humans about you seem resentful and unappreciative, you have within your soul the essence of true nobility.

In wars between nations, in domestic turmoils, in the breaking of home ties, in the struggles for existence, love and sacrifice ultimately become the final arbiters.

What more beautiful than the love and sacrifice of a mother, who regardless of the undutifulness and snubs of her children keeps on loving and making sacrifices for their comfort and advancement, still smiling complacently while in her breast she is carrying a burden causing aches and pains from which she would gladly be relieved, but refuses to be, because of her spiritual nobility and simple faith.

The world is full of such love and sacrifice, perhaps saving it and its peoples from divine wrath, but certainly making it better in manifold ways which we do not in our blindness and apathy perceive or consider.

When all men say "Impossible," when the waters are snarling and the storms are beating against a wanton boy or girl, love and sacrifice stoop down and rescue him or her from peril.

There is no depth to which love and sacrifice will not descend; no height to which they will not scale to accomplish their object.

We may turn in lofty disdain from the little old woman with dimmed eyes, gnarled fingers and a limp in her walk, but if we could look into her heart and see its every recess the symbol of love and sacrifice, we might realize that we have snubbed an angel.

Every first of January we open a new book with high resolves.

On the first page there are profuse promises of love and sacrifice, then follow a few blushing leaves containing hasty scrawls; with the rest of the volume a blank.

We forget our vows ere January is done, just as we forget to pay homage to the little old woman with the dimmed eyes and gnarled fingers, who never fails from the beginning of the year to the end to remember love and sacrifice, when she may be counted upon faithfully to do until the end of her days.

THE YOUNG LADY ACROSS THE WAY

The young lady across the way says nothing is more pitiful than a little child whose father and mother are both dead and to be an orphan with one parent is bad enough.

Among the NOTABLES

NICHOLAS BIDDLE

NICHOLAS BIDDLE was born September 10, 1750, with a taste for adventure. So when he was fourteen, he ran away from his home in Philadelphia, where he was born, and, as the expression goes, "went to sea."

He soon got plenty of adventure. He sailed to Quebec, then to the West Indies, where the ship was wrecked, and those of the crew who survived, were cast ashore on a desert island. As there was only one small life boat, they cast lots to see who should stay and drown or who should leave the ship. After some two months, the men were rescued and Biddle's wealthy family secured him an appointment in the British navy. He was twenty, then, and as he was considered too young to be allowed to accompany Musgrave on an arctic cruise, he deserted and shipped with the explorer as a common seaman, and went. Nelson, later to become the world famous admiral, was his messmate.

When the War of Independence broke out, Biddle came home to enlist and showed such ability that he was given charge of ships that went out and captured enemy vessels, bringing supplies for their troops. He was the naval hero of the country. Then one day he got into a fight with an enemy ship and was wounded. Ignoring his hurt, he ordered an armchair and, supported on it, continued to direct the battle. His ship blew up and he perished along with the whole crew, a mere lad of twenty-seven. Yet he had accomplished more than most old men, during his brief lifetime.

WHO SAID "Methods are the master of masters"

THE man who uttered these words owed his success in life to his methodical way of doing things.

Charles Maurice de Talleyrand-Perigord—better known as Talleyrand—was a man of methods and a man who so thoroughly studied the problems that presented themselves before him for solution that he became one of the leading statesmen in the France of his day. He was born in Paris, February 13, 1754, and died there May 17, 1838.

In the year 1792 Talleyrand was sent to London on a diplomatic mission. While there his enemies at home brought charges against him of being involved in royalist intrigues and he was proscribed. In 1794—he had remained in England because of the proscription awaiting him in France—England passed the famous alien act and Talleyrand was forced to seek asylum in America. After two years spent in the new republic, Talleyrand returned to France.

On his return to his native land he was appointed minister of foreign affairs, but being suspected of being in communication with the agents of Louis XVIII he was forced to resign in 1799.

Talleyrand was one of the first to recognize in Napoleon Bonaparte one of the great leaders of the time, and from this time forward for some years he devoted himself untrillingly to the service of the "Little Corporal."

In 1807, following the peace of Tilsit, a coolness arose between Talleyrand and the emperor and in the following year Talleyrand secretly joined a royalist committee. The year 1814 saw him active in procuring the abdication of Napoleon and working to place Louis XVIII again on the throne.

After holding numerous positions under the government, he retired in 1834 and died in 1838 in private life.

MANCHESTER.

I approached a business man the other day and asked as to how business was these days. Said he "on the bum." I presume it is due to the vacation season. Many people from our town have gone to Penn Grove Camp and elsewhere to recuperate.

Because of the fine showers which visited our community, vegetation in general promises to give us the best for many years. The only commodity which lacked moisture at the proper time was early potatoes. We are glad to know that enough later ones were planted to care for this deficiency.

The canneries have been busy domesticating peas and beans. They seem to have an overflow. I was told that the Greenmount factory which is located two miles from here threw many beans away. This was due to a shortage of help. They are making ready for the corn which will be hauled, in the very near future. The farmers are wearing a smile. They say if nothing comes along and destroys the corn, there couldn't be a better yield. Last year there was an ordinary crop.

Last Sunday a week ago, Greenmount United Brethren Church, witnessed the largest crowd that had gathered within their beautiful church since the dedication services last spring. It had been announced at previous meetings that the mysterious order, the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan would attend services on Sunday evening. People came for miles around the surrounding community. So great was the crowd that standing room was at a premium. Much to the surprise they entered the room unmasked. Rev. J. H. Lehman, pastor, delivered the sermon. Subject, "Americanism." Text, "David said unto Solomon, be a man." At the close of the address a beautiful American flag was presented to the church by the organization. Grand Dragon, Frank W. Beall, made the presentation. They remembered the pastor with an offering.

Our community mourns the loss of the great statesman and religious leader William Jennings Bryan. We believe he was a good man. Of course, like the rest of us, made some errors. Most Christian people feel that it is a mistake to quibble over questions which no one knows very little about, but the Creator. There are so much to be advanced that has to do with living, that people ought to be thinking about. No one will question the fact of man's existence. We are here. The question we should be considering very seriously is where will you go from here. The thinking people whom I have talked to think that God was placed on trial rather than man. We believe however, that Mr. Bryan, was sincere, and shall live in the lives of the American people.

The Sunday School at Miller's United Brethren Church, held their annual picnic in the grove near the church, on Saturday, July 18. This proved to be the best in years. The program was rendered at 2:00 P. M., and was as follows. Singing by the school men's chorus and quartets and addresses by Rev. Stalman, pastor of the Lutheran Church, Lineboro; Hallenbach, of the Reformed Church, Manchester; Lehman, pastor of United Brethren Church, Greenmount, and pastor of Church there. Mrs. Meckley, gave several readings. Alesia band furnished the music.

Rev. Rehmyer, pastor of the Lutheran Church, was a visitor at St. Matthew's, Hanover, Sunday morning past.

The Missionary Society of Immanuel Lutheran Church held their regular monthly meeting recently, at the home of Mrs. David Brown. There will be no meeting during the month of August.

The ladies of this place are busy nipping beans, at the Greenmount canning factory. The proceeds to be used for the benefit of the Ladies' Auxiliary and to help with the painting and carpeting of the Sunday School room of Immanuel Lutheran Church.

Mrs. Rebecca Wachter, mother of Rev. W. C. Wachter, who for ten days was a visitor at the parsonage, went to Hanover, where she will visit her sister.

Rev. Hollenbach, with other friends attended the Reformed Reunion which was recently held at Pen-Mar.

Your correspondent appreciates very much the generosity shown our town. Taneytown ought to feel proud that they have an Editor that stands for high morals and who is interested particularly in our county. Why not everybody feel this way, and send in to him news that may stimulate our thinking. Too many people are satisfied with merely reading the paper. Send in the happenings of your community and be sure that part of them will do more than entertain. I only have one criticism to offer the other correspondents. Too many of them love to spell the names of those who visit, especially Sunday visitors. It reminds you many times of reading the genealogies of the Bible. We love to read them, but not every week. If they would say a number from our community visited on Sunday, and publish the names about once or twice a year, we would have more room for helpful news. I mean by the above expression that the visitors are usually the same ones. Let news come that may stimulate our thinking. I have been rather newsy this week, but missed two weeks.

HOUSE IS STILL 'TO LET'

By ALICE TURNER CURTIS

(© by Short Story Pub. Co.)

ON ONE of the streets leading from the park in the center of a town near Boston is a very attractive modern house with a history. It was built for the occupancy of a Mr. and Mrs. Leslie, whose mysterious deaths mark the beginning of this story.

The facts here recorded are just as I heard them. Indeed, I was a resident of the town during the period in which these strange occurrences took place, and had a personal acquaintance with the people mentioned.

The Leslies had been married a year, were apparently happy, and were well and favorably known in the town. One morning a neighbor noticed that lights were burning in the Leslie house. He ran up the steps and rang the bell. There was no response, and after a few hours the neighbors decided that something was wrong inside, and that an entrance must be made at once. The front door was accordingly forced open, and as the men went in they could see into the room beyond the hall, the sitting room. Mr. Leslie was sitting with a paper across his knee, apparently asleep, and on a couch near by lay his wife.

It took but a few moments to ascertain that both had been dead for some hours. Their faces were peaceful and composed; there were no signs of disturbance in the house.

Every possible inquiry was made. No trace of poison or of foul play could be found. Numberless theories were advanced, and the wonder and excitement over the tragic death of the young couple grew daily.

After some months their relatives removed the furnishings, and "To Let" appeared in the cottage windows. The house was immediately taken by a man from Boston, whose family consisted, besides himself, of his wife and two little girls. None of this family had heard the story of the Leslies, nor did they hear it until they had been in the cottage for some weeks. One night, after they had occupied the dwelling for over a week, the man of the family was awakened by a sudden scream. His wife awoke at the same moment, and exclaimed: "One of the children must have the nightmare," but just then the two little girls rushed into the room, exclaiming, "What's the matter, mother? What are you screaming about?" Almost before they had finished speaking two more screams in quick succession rang through the house. The place was carefully searched, but no cause for the disturbance could be found.

The next night at about the same hour like sounds were heard. After that Mr. Weston made inquiries of the neighbors. None of them had been disturbed. One suggested that possibly a cat was shut up somewhere in the house and had made the noises heard, but a careful search of the entire premises failed to discover any such commonplace solution of the mysterious sounds.

A week passed without any recurrence of the midnight sounds, when one night Mrs. Weston awoke from a most terrible dream. She dreamed that she was lying upon the couch in the sitting room. In front of her stood a young man who held a pillow in his hands. "I shall stifle you," he said clearly; "it's no use to struggle." Mrs. Weston dreamed that she tried to scream; that once, twice, three times she endeavored to rise from the couch to push away the pillow, but could not.

From this dream she awoke suddenly, and, as she lay endeavoring to overcome its impression, a gasping shriek, quickly followed by two more, awakened her husband, and again sent the little girls flying in terror to their mother's room.

This time Mrs. Weston held herself responsible for the terrible screams. "I've had a dreadful dream, and I suppose I screamed without knowing it," she said. She had hardly finished this explanation when again came the screams, the last dying away in a stifled moan.

The family was by this time thoroughly terrified. They had heard the story of the Leslies, and without waiting for further experiences in the house they moved at once.

Their story got about the town, with the result that the house was vacant for a year. Then a family, consisting of an elderly couple, Mr. and Mrs. Walters, and their son, a young man about twenty-five, moved in. The remainder of the story was told me by this son, and I will give it in his own words as nearly as possible.

"I wasn't afraid of any haunted house. My father was deaf, so it would take a reasonably loud scream to wake him, and my mother was a sensible woman. The house just suited us. We got nicely settled in a few weeks, and my elder brother and his wife came out from Boston to make us a visit. The first night they were there I stayed in town for the theater. The train I came out in left a few minutes after eleven, and I reached the house at about a quarter before twelve. I was nearly ready for bed when a shriek like that of a person struggling for his life sounded through the house. I hurried into the hall, and as I did so my brother opened his door. Before either of us could speak a second and a third scream followed. By this time even father's deaf ears had been penetrated, and we all sat up talking the matter over far into the night before we felt like sleep.

"In the end we decided not to mention the occurrence. We thought of several possible explanations of the noise. The next morning we made a careful examination of the house and surroundings. We made inquiries as to late trains, thinking we might have mistaken the shriek of an engine for a human voice; but all our conjecture led to nothing. We could find no satisfactory reason for the disturbance.

"I made inquiries about the Leslies, and found that many people believed that Leslie had stifled his wife, and then taken some subtle poison which left no trace; but there was no evidence to support this theory; no sign of poison had been found, no cause could be given for such an act, and nothing could explain the midnight screams. A week passed quietly, when one night my brother awakened our mother, telling her that his wife was ill. She had awakened from a bad dream almost suffocated, and my mother worked over her for some time before she was restored. She refused to tell her dream, but we were well assured that it was a repetition of Mrs. Weston's. The next morning my brother and his wife went to their home.

"I had one more experience in that house which I shall never forget. My father was to be out one night until midnight at the meeting of a society of which he was a member, and my mother and I decided to wait up for him.

"About eleven o'clock mother lay down on the couch and went to sleep. The room was brightly lighted, and I sat near the couch reading.

"Just as I heard my father come in I was startled by a sudden moan from my mother. I turned quickly toward the couch, and as I did so I saw plainly that the sofa pillow lay upon her face. I snatched it away, and awakened her with some little difficulty.

"Meanwhile my father had come into the room, and as he entered, a scream, terrible in its nearness and intensity, rang out, thrilling us all with a sickening shock. We left the next day."

This finished his story. No explanation of these happenings has ever been given. The Leslies' death remains a mystery, and to explain the Presence that occupied this cottage after their death would be to account for a side of life which we barely touch and cannot comprehend. The house is still to let.

Secret of Chemistry Hidden in the Brain

"Know thyself" was the advice given nearly twenty-five centuries ago by a Greek philosopher. Nearer our own time Alexander Pope expressed the same notion when he said "the proper study of mankind is man."

Probably this idea is as old as thought itself. Yet, though we have learned a vast amount about the stars, the earth, the animals, insects and plants, and the human body, we have found out very little about the thing inside of us that makes up the body, Collier's says.

We neither know ourselves, nor can we run ourselves half so well as we do our automobiles. We do not know what it is that makes us think. We cannot tell where our emotions originate, and why it is that we, as individuals and crowds, do many things of which we are afterward ashamed. We cannot say what causes crimes, riots and wars any more than what makes men play the hero in sinking ships. To borrow the words of Dr. Alexis Carrel: "No one suspects the manner in which memory, intelligence, courage, judgment and imagination are connected with the brain cells."

Yet the more we gain and apply information about other things the more necessary does information about our inner selves become.

Chemistry and spiritual progress seem far apart, yet the secret of both may be in the same bubble in the brain. Some of the saints of past ages retired into the woods and deserts. Who knows but those of the future will be found in laboratories? And our sins, like our bodily diseases, may be cured by a more perfect knowledge.

Austrians Heavy Smokers

The use of tobacco is increasing enormously in Austria. Although the population today is 8,750,000, the state factories now turn out more cigars than they did before the war when the country had a population of 52,000,000. One cause of the increase is found in the fact that women are smoking, not only after meals, but at all times of the day and everywhere. Also, there is no age restriction on the sale of tobacco to juveniles. A recent local exhibition arranged by the Anti-Nicotine union, designed to portray the alleged harmful effects of tobacco, failed to interest the public.

Old Newspaper

Albert Almon of Glace Bay, N. S., Canada, reading in Grit an item which referred to a Holland publication dated January 8, 1656, and said to be the world's oldest newspaper, writes that he has in his possession a copy of the "The English Mercur" dated 1588. The paper contains an account of the Spanish armada. The English paper, however, is no longer published under the same name, while the Holland Haarlemsche Courante has appeared weekly since the first date of its establishment in 1656.—Grit.

TOWNS THAT SHOW PROFIT

Odd Revenues That Relieve the Taxpayers in Various British Municipalities.

Many towns are today materially easing their taxpayers' burdens by means that a few years ago would have been deemed novel and perhaps impracticable.

Glasgow, for example, salvages every kind of saleable oddment from its refuse bins, as much as £20,000 being realized in this way in one year.

Further, the corporation saves nearly £1,000 a year on its used tram tickets, which are carefully collected and reconverted into paper. If Glasgow can make hundreds of pounds in this way London might very well make thousands!

But some London boroughs have an eye to economy in other ways. The Marylebone borough council has saved its taxpayers large sums by collecting and sorting out its household waste. In one recent month the council made £500 out of what local residents had thrown away. Other metropolitan boroughs are following suit.

Plymouth owns a theater, the Royal, and a hotel, which jointly yield an annual revenue of around about £3,000, while Birkenhead runs its own ferry service to and from Liverpool. The average gross receipts of the undertaking approximate £150,000 a year, the net profits on which go towards the relief of the taxes.

Race courses are in most instances a profitable investment from the point of view of the borough in which they are located. Doncaster makes an average of £14,000 a year from its famous course. Yarmouth and Pontefract raise money in a similar way.

Still, the fact remains that too many towns neglect the money-making opportunities in their midst, instead of exploiting them for the taxpayers' benefit.—London Tit-Bits.

KNOW YOUR CHILD'S TEACHER

Invite Her Home So That Little David Can Get the Right Impression of Her.

Many little children are becoming acquainted with their first teacher. They are telling their mothers about her at night. Perhaps they refuse to answer questions about her, but they imitate her in talking to the baby, or in driving the cows home from the pasture, they sing as she does. She is making them over and they are recording the fact in many ways.

Do the mothers know her? Invite her home, mother, and see the young son's pride, as he watches her eat your delicious rolls and baked apples. She seems to like them almost as well as he and father do.

The teacher will thereafter seem different to your son David. She has sat at the family table and has helped mother with the dishes. She is not a faraway person that a boy needs to be afraid of. She is like dear Aunt Jane, who comes to the house sometimes; a guest the family will always be glad to entertain.

Father handed her the paper when mother left to put the last touches to the meal and she told father how interested the big boys and girls are in the daily paper at school. David wonders how soon he can learn to read well enough to go to the school reading table and read the daily paper. He means to work very hard at reading so he can do it before long.

When the new teacher left she told mother how glad she is to know that David has such a happy home; when David thanked her that night for inviting the teacher, mother said:

"Mother, at one time, taught school, David, and she has not forgotten how much better the work went in the districts where she was invited to the homes."

Bugs in Wicker Furniture.

Have you wicker furniture bugs? If you hear mysterious noises coming from your wicker chair or settee you will know there is a bug working in that piece of furniture. This has been brought to light by the Pennsylvania bureau of plant industry. They have nicknamed it the "death watch beetle" and it makes a ticking sound at regular intervals for several minutes. When news of this bug was brought out the florists' exchange made an investigation and found that the insect is not a new one but has the almost unpronounceable name of "bostrychidae" and that it is rather cosmopolitan, living in nearly all kinds of wood throughout the world and is of no importance except where works of art, fancy baskets and wicker furniture are attacked, when it makes the wood brittle.

Leads in Paved Streets.

New York, with 46,236,244 square yards of paved streets, leads all municipalities in the United States, as is to be expected, but Chicago is a close second with 36,757,520 square yards. The next ten highest cities in the order of their paved yardage are as follows: St. Louis, 25,122,366 square yards; Philadelphia, 24,145,974 square yards; Detroit, 18,947,814 square yards; Baltimore, 12,011,086 square yards; Los Angeles, 11,302,972 square yards; Boston, 10,200,292 square yards.

Records Measure Value of Bulls

Show Some Remarkable and Conclusive Information About Dairying.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There seems to be no end to the records available to prove the value of a good dairy bull in increasing the production of a herd. The records that have been accruing for a number of years in the cow-testing associations, when analyzed, show some remarkable and conclusive information pertaining to many angles of dairy production. Where a bull association has been maintained in connection with a cow-testing association the records of the cows are a means of measuring the true value of the bulls in the association.

Associations Keep Records. In the vicinity of Grove City, Pa., there are two bull associations and one cow-testing association. The bureau of dairying of the United States Department of Agriculture now has the yearly records of 18 daughters of these bull-association bulls, and the yearly record of the dam of each daughter.

When all records were figured to maturity it was found that on the average the dams produced 8,785 pounds of milk a year and the daughters 9,212 pounds. The dams averaged 355 pounds of butterfat a year and the daughters 394 pounds. Thus the daughters produced about 5 per cent more milk and about 11 per cent more butterfat than their dams. That percentage of gain may seem small until it is realized that the daughters were matched against very good producing dams. The figures further showed that the daughters were by six bulls and that in no case did the daughters bring discredit to their sire.

Daughters Surpass Dams. What would have happened, says the bureau, if the 18 daughters had been sired by scrub bulls or by inferior purebred bulls, is not hard to guess. The fact learned from cow-testing association figures that the daughters of these bulls surpass their high-producing dams by 5 to 11 per cent proves conclusively that the bull association is a great success.

Leg Weakness Caused by Improper Feed to Hens

Recent experiments with poultry at the New Jersey agricultural experiment station, New Brunswick, show that it is unnecessary to use commercial mineral mixtures for the prevention of leg weakness, if a normal ration is fed.

When 20 per cent of the laying mash consisted of commercial meat scrap, and plenty of green feeds were available to the birds, no leg weakness occurred.

Mashes containing only vegetable proteins or very high-grade meat scrap—which contains a low percentage of mineral matter—sometimes permitted leg weakness to develop. Deficient rations of this type were corrected by using a mixture of a steamed ground bone, 60 pounds; calcium carbonate, 20 pounds, and common salt, 20 pounds. Three pounds of this mixture were used in 97 pounds of mash.

Since the discovery at the New Jersey experiment station that the addition of certain enzymic materials to the mash tends to promote growth in young stock, many poultrymen have inquired about the use of these materials for promoting egg production. Authorities at the station state that at the present time insufficient data have been obtained to recommend the addition of these substances to the laying mash, but that different pens fed various amounts of vegetable enzymic materials in the mash have shown appreciable differences in production.

Nubian Goat Is Largest and Quite Easy to Keep

There is no best breed of milk goats, any more than there is of cows; all three breeds which are raised in this country are fine milkers and answer well the purpose for which they are designed.

The Nubian is the largest, easiest to keep, and gives the sweetest and richest milk. The Saanans are large white goats that are heavy milkers, but like the Toggenbergs, their milk is very low in butterfat, and often poor in flavor. The breed that you like best is the one to select.

Milk goats breed once a year the same as a cow, and should be handled along the very same lines. Any dairy feed that is good for cows, is equally as good for milk goats. A field of brush or browse is the ideal pasture for goats, as they are browsers and not grazers, although they will take to the grass in the absence of brush, but will not do so well upon it.

Cutting Small Grain

The experienced farmer knows that his oats and, in fact, all of his small grain should be cut just when the seeds have reached the hard dough stage. Usually the stems and leaves are ripened to a bright gold color. If not cut until later than this, considerable loss in scattering will occur and if cut earlier than this the grain will not be well filled out and consequent loss in weight will take place. Small grain should always be cut as far as possible in the few days which elapse between the too green and too ripe stage.

Lesson for August 2

THE EPISTLE OF JAMES

LESSON TEXT—Jas. 1:19-27.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only."—Jas. 1:22.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Loving and obeying.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Be Ye Doers of the Word.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Doers of the Word.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Religion According to James.

The book of James was written to Jewish Christians scattered abroad who were passing through sore trials and persecutions. The pre-eminent aim was to show these humble believers how to live in such trying times. James recognized the difficulties of Christian living resulting from the attitude of the unbelieving Jews, and knew also the added difficulties of pride, jealousy and cowardly compromises which might spring up within. He showed that all these must be met with the realities which inhere in the religion of Jesus Christ.

I. Receiving the Engrafted Word (vv. 19-21).

1. What is the Engrafted Word? "Engrafted" means implanted. In verse 18 he speaks of having been begotten by the Word. The figure is that of a planting of the seeds of truth. The Christian doctrine as contained in the Word, when quickened by the Holy Spirit result in regeneration. The divine method of regeneration is the preaching of God's word made living and active by the Holy Spirit.

2. How the Word Is Received (v. 19).

(1) "Be swift to hear." This means to be ready and eager to use every opportunity to get acquainted with God's word.

Obedience to this injunction will make one diligent in the reading of the Bible, and in attendance at the church services where the Word of God is being taught.

(2) "Slow to speak." From what follows we infer that this refers to religious controversies. It means that whether in the places of worship or in whatever circumstances, we should give respect and thoughtful attention to what our Christian brethren are saying.

(3) "Slow to wrath." Heated discussions sometimes develop in our conferences, even when we gather to consider the doctrines of God's word. Sometimes one may even fancy that anger is justifiable. In such cases we should remember the injunction, be slow to wrath.

3. The Reason for Receiving the Word (vv. 20-21).

"The wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God." Angry debating among Christians never helped to make known God's righteousness. Man's anger springs out of the fountain of his depravity. Therefore its expression can only have a blighting effect upon those who listen, and even upon the speaker in its reaction upon him.

II. Coming Into Self-Knowledge (vv. 22-25).

Receiving the engrafted Word through swift hearing, and obeying its holy precepts will result in that experimental knowledge of one's self which brings true blessings. By "doers of the Word," is meant those who make obedience their habitual attitude.

The truths of God's word will permeate their very life and be expressed in everything they do and say. Those who hear and do not obey are self-deceived. Those who go through the form of religion without coming under its power are likened to men who gaze into the mirror beholding the natural face, and then go away and forget how they look.

III. Pure Religion (vv. 26-27).

This means that those who have become doers of the Word will in their outer lives manifest the following traits:

1. Bridling the Tongue (v. 26).

This means that they will speak with discretion. God gave man two ears and but one tongue. The ears are exposed, but the tongue is walled in by the teeth. Just as the tongue reveals the condition of the physical system, so the use of the tongue reveals the religious condition.

2. Sympathizing With and Helping Those In Need (v. 27).

The widow and orphan are the symbols of helplessness and need. Those who have true piety will visit such and render the necessary aid.

3. Keeping Himself Unspotted From the World (v. 27).

The one who has the true life will separate himself from the world.

Giving Up Pleasure

When we have given up an immediate pleasure for character's sake, we are impressed with how much we have sacrificed. Jesus was impressed with how much a man had gained.—Harry Emerson Fosdick.

Overcoming

We sometimes sing, "The Crowning Day Is Coming." That is true, but remember that coronation in Scripture is associated with overcoming.—Charles Inglis.

God's Friendliness As Expressed in Nature.
Matthew 2:26-30

"Behold the birds of the air." "Consider the lilies of the field." "Are ye not much better than they?"

These words express God's benevolence or friendliness in nature but they do not heal the broken heart. Heed in nature can do that. It requires the supernatural touch. A great preacher once spoke these words of wisdom: "You may remind men that Jesus draws lessons for life from the lilies and the birds, how that He was glad to watch the patient ox drawing the simple plow through the brown earth, how He loved the smell of the fresh-turned furrow and the swing of the sower's arm, as he scattered the seed, but do not think that this is the story that brings Christ close to the heart of the world. This troubled world does not find peace at the feet of the gracious and inspired and morally perfect prophet of Nazareth, uttering words of wisdom, amid the vineyards and in the path through the corn fields."

The heart cry of the world is expressed in the words of Phillip when he said, "Show us the Father and it sufficeth us"; but who can answer that cry? Who can reveal the Great God as Father and make Him real as such to the human heart? The answer is found in Matthew 11:27, where we read that no man knoweth the Father, save the Son and He to whomsoever the Son will reveal Him. To those who receive Christ as a personal Saviour, to them He gives the power to become the children of God. This includes the power of apprehension so that the human heart is enabled really to know God as Father.

Apart from this experience of receiving Christ there never can be any satisfying heart knowledge of the Fatherhood of God. Such knowledge does satisfy, for with the sense of Fatherhood there comes the sense of assurance for all that Fatherhood stands for, such as pardon, provision, protection and preservation. All the deep longings of the soul are met in this revelation of the Father which Christ alone can give. It will always be true that "no man cometh to the Father but by me." Nature can never lead to the Father.

Mystery Attached to Lost Cities of World

There is always fascination attached to stories of lost and abandoned cities. The East has many such places, once teeming with life—now the abiding place of lions, monkeys, snakes and jackals. For instance, the holy city of the Buddhists, Barabod, in Java, had been forgotten for 600 years when Sir Stamford Raffles rediscovered it and its wonderful temple, the eighth wonder of the world. The jungle of Siam has hidden its ancient capital, Ayuthia, for four centuries. Its inhabitants fled before the conquering Burmese, and never returned. It is now said to be the lurking place of thousands of enormous snakes. Mystery surrounds the dead city of Tibet, which Captain Rawling discovered. It is a vast collection of palaces, monasteries, and dwelling houses, but the Tibetans professed ignorance of its existence, and also of the reason for its abandonment. Five centuries ago Angkor had a population of three-quarters of a million. Today it is the Dead City of Cambodia. The carved stone elephants, the immense causeways, the majestic temples still remain, but the jungle has invaded the streets and squares.

Plant That Changes Its Location at Will

To those who have made it a study, plant life teems with wonders. Take, for example, the Loranthus, a species of mistletoe. If this plant finds itself in a situation unfavorable to its growth, it will throw out a root by which it is enabled to move to another site, the means of locomotion being a flattened disc that acts as a sort of foot. The moving process is repeated until a satisfactory position for development has been found.

Another plant, the Clusia, lodges its seeds in the branches of a tree, whence the roots grow downward and strike the soil. From these suspended roots branches grow on all sides, until the tree by which they are supported becomes literally suffocated. These and other queer happenings in plant life are related in "The New Book of Gardening."

Explaining "Gringo"

G. F. Weeks inclines to the view that "Gringo" was derived from the word "Greek." He says: "When English-speaking people began coming into Mexico they found the people with whom they came in contact unable to understand their language, just as they themselves were unable to understand that of the Mexicans. When addressed by a native quite naturally they used the familiar expression, 'That is all Greek to me.' The word Greek in Spanish is 'Gringo' (pronounced Gree-aye-go), and what more natural than that the Mexicans, hearing this word used so much, came to speak of the foreigners as 'Gree-aye-goes,' which easily enough became corrupted into 'gringos.' This expression was heard wherever English-speaking foreigners were encountered."

Ranger Couldn't See
Skunk as Family Pet

United States Forest Ranger Lewis Hanson of the Two Medicine valley in Glacier National park fed flapjacks all winter to a mink, a weasel, a skunk and two gray squirrels. The mink, weasel and the squirrels got so tame they ate out of his hand, but he left the skunk to wait on itself "cafeteria fashion."

Veteran trappers of the Rocky mountains declare this is the first time they ever heard of a mink or a weasel getting tame enough to eat out of a man's hand.

The incident came to official notice when Ranger Hanson kept reporting a shortage in flour rations. The chief ranger, when he discovered what Ranger Hanson was doing with his flour, was first inclined to reprimand the subordinate, but on looking over the rules and regulations, he changed his mind and allowed the extra supply.

In Uncle Sam's manual, forest rangers are instructed to be kind to animals.

Ranger Hanson's amiability has extended to more species than any other ranger has yet made pets of in the wilds of the Rockies.

"Of course, in the tourist season it's different, but during the lonely months of the long winter a fellow has a friendly feeling for anything with life in it," Ranger Hanson volunteered.

"These animals evidently felt the same way about it, for they kept hanging around my cabin door all winter, and I sure couldn't regard 'em as anything but companions of the wilds."

"But that darned skunk! I just couldn't bring myself to fondle him, although the poor devil almost wagged his tail as friendly as a dog when he approached me begging for the flapjacks which he had seen me feed to the other animals. I had to laugh at myself at times when I was almost convinced that he was sincerely friendly in the wagging of that tail."

"Once I was on the verge of giving him the hand offerings, just to show that I had no partiality for the other animals. I guess if I had had two suits of clothes I might have done it."

Trained Mouse

John Tierney, a night watchman in a factory in Geneva, N. Y., claims to have been successful in training a mouse to come when called, the call being the rattle of his dinner pail at midnight when he gets ready for his dinner. When the mouse made its first appearance he gave it some bits of food, next night he rattled the lid against the pail and in a short time the mouse appeared and was fed, and each night since he has found the mouse appearing shortly after the dinner rattle was sounded, so he claims a mouse may be trained to do a certain thing and repeat it over and over if one appeals to its appetite and is patient.

Man of Genius Made Companions of Dogs

In "Memories and Notes of Persons and Places," Sir Sidney Colvin gives an intimate glimpse of George Meredith's conversation with his dogs.

"The most characteristic strain in his ordinary manner was this blend of the most scrupulous courtesy with the frankest raillery, both somewhat elaborate of their kind. He would take and keep the same tone with servants. He would even take it with his pet dogs. I have noticed that the dogs of men of genius love them more passionately and devotedly than they love ordinary masters. I suppose feeling in them some extra glow and intensity of the emotional faculties calling for a response in kind. To the succession of black and tan or pure tan dachshunds given to Meredith by various friends, Koby and Bruno and Pete (for 'Kobold,' 'Bruno,' 'Peto'), and Islet, on whom he wrote his well known elegy—to these it was a delight to hear him talking eagerly by the half hour together in terms now of caressing endearment, now of irony, or sometimes, when the poaching instinct had proved too strong in any of them, of pained parental reproof."

And in the same chapter Colvin quotes Sir James Barrie's account of Meredith, written after the latter's death: "He came swinging down the path, singing lustily, and calling to his dogs, his dogs of the present and the past; and they yelped with joy, for they knew they were once again to breast the hill with him."

Hasty Buying Not a Fault of East Indians

American salesmen, trained to high pressure and quick-result methods, meet with puzzling experiences when selling in India, where men and women appear to be hunting always for an excuse for delaying a decision to a future date, says a writer in the Ohio State Journal.

A New York trained motor salesman learned that fact when he tried to sell a handsome motor to a man of wealth in Delhi. There had been some reductions made public in the price and the salesman assured the man of wealth there could be no more reductions for at least a year, using that statement for the purpose of closing the sale. It did not bring that result, the contemplative resident there merely smiling and saying he planned a vacation for a year and would look over the cars on his return.

Poet's Home in Danger

Longfellow's early home at Portland, Maine, will be preserved and maintained permanently if sufficient money is raised by members of the International Longfellow society. The home stands at Fore and Hancock streets in Portland. It is in danger of being lost through foreclosure of mortgage, and Edwin Markham is active in raising the money to prevent the foreclosure.

Autos in United States

The number of motor vehicles owned in the United States, it is noted in Good Hardware, is still continuing to increase. In the year 1924 the total registration was 17,700,000. This is a gain of approximately 2,500,000 over 1923. There is, roughly, one car to every six people.

Milk Substitutes as Feed for Chickens

Lactic Acid Seems to Act as a Tonic.

Is milk a substitute for a 20 per cent meat mash as a feed for chickens? According to the results of an experiment conducted by the poultry department at South Dakota college, it is.

"If a farmer has milk, he ought to feed some of it to his chickens," states G. L. Stevenson, head of the poultry department. "Milk can be fed to chickens to better advantage than to hogs and older calves. Furthermore, it will pay anyone to buy milk for the young chicks."

The results of the experiment show that although milk is a substitute for meat mash, if both the meat mash and the milk have to be purchased, the meat mash will supply the necessary protein to the chickens for less cost. A point in favor of the milk, however, is that it keeps the fowls healthier. The lactic acid in the milk seems to act as a tonic, Stevenson believes.

To combine the advantages of the two feeds, when both have to be purchased, he advises that meat mash be wet with warmed milk or with the commercial semi-solid buttermilk diluted with warm water. This combination will cost but very little extra and will keep the chickens in good health.

In conducting the experiment, three flocks of 30 chickens each were used. The semi-solid buttermilk was fed to one lot; the meat mash to the second; and buttermilk and meat mash to the third. All three flocks were also fed the regular scratch feeds. Practically the same number of eggs were laid by each flock during the time the experiment was carried on.

Penn State Jersey Cow
Establishes Big Record

Penstate Poggis Hattie, state champion Jersey cow bred by the Pennsylvania State college, has qualified for the 305-day class. To be eligible, she had to give birth to a calf before May 26, which was the final day of the 14-month period following her former calving. A fine bull calf was born on May 22, four days before the time limit expired.

As a junior four-year-old Penstate Poggis Hattie produced 701 pounds of butterfat in 305 days which made her not only the leader among all Jerseys of her age class in the state but of all ages in Pennsylvania.

In the 305 days she produced 834.7 pounds of butterfat and 15,505 pounds of milk, which qualified her for state champion in the four-year-old class and for a gold and a silver medal. This is also the second highest record made by a Jersey of any age in Pennsylvania. Sophie Elberta, a Hood farm bred cow, was the only Jersey in Pennsylvania to exceed this record.

Penstate Poggis Hattie also made a very creditable record of 10,611 pounds of milk and 614.7 pounds of butterfat as a junior three-year-old, qualifying for a silver medal with this record.

Danger of Cows Bloating on Cowpeas as Pasture

While cowpeas are not so generally used for pasture for cows, they can, nevertheless, be used for this purpose. There is some danger, however, that cows will bloat when on cowpea pasture just as there is always some danger when they are on clover or alfalfa pasture. After cows become accustomed to it, the danger of bloating is much less.

When you first turn your cows on cowpea pasture they should not be left on it very long and not when the dew is still on the pea nor should they be very hungry when they are turned on the first time. It is always a good plan, whether you turn on to cowpea, clover or alfalfa pasture, to feed the cows a full feed so they will not eat greedily. Each day they can be left longer until they are used to it, after which there is not much danger of bloating.

Farm Hints

Swiss chard is a good leaf vegetable for warm weather.

There were 10,160 farmers' co-operative associations in the United States in 1924.

Marketing eggs by barter is rapidly giving way to the new fashion method of co-operative selling.

Protect cattle, horses and mules from the torment of the biting fly and the horn fly by using fly repellents.

More swine than any other kind of animal were slaughtered in the United States last year, the total exceeding 80,000,000.

General control measures are more important than medicinal treatment for avoiding poultry losses due to intestinal parasites.

Proper feeding of the growing chicks will bring them into production early. It is the greatest extravagance to try to save on the feed of growing chicks.

Labor costs are 53 per cent of the total cost of producing corn, according to Greene and Medina county farm records analyzed by economists at the Ohio State university.
