NO. 6

MARKET PRICES OF FARM PRODUCE.

Farmers to be Better Posted on Prevailing Prices.

Farmers are always interested in prices and while primarily concerned with the prices in their own markets are likely to view with considerable interest quotations from other points for purposes of comparison. The marketing news, therefore, which is being undertaken by the State Department of Markets for the first time in Maryland will probably be watched with much interest.

The plan is to provide a consolidated report of wholesale prices prevailing for the most important farm products of the State at some of the principal wholesale Maryland markets outside of Baltimore. Prices will be secured from representative wholesale dealers in such markets as Cumberland, Hagerstown, Frederick, Westminster, Rockville, La Plata, Chestertown, Easton, Cambridge and Salisbury on Friday of each week. The information thus secured will be compiled and on Monday or Tuesday of the following week will be distributed by mail to interested persons all over the State.

The products on which prices will be reported will vary from time to time as their importance on the markets varies. The department, however, will endeavor to keep the list at all times representative of the actual local wholesale markets in farm products in the respective sections of the State. Prices will be secured from millers, elevators and from wholesale dealers in eggs, poultry, fruit, vegetables, livestock, etc.

Owing to limited funds and personnel at the disposal of the State Department of Markets, it will be necessary at the outset to limit the report to ten or a dozen local markets of the State. For the same reason it will be necessary to limit the price quotations to six or seven of the market at any particular time.

Big Flohr Family Reunion.

A big family reunion of the John Flohr, Sr., descendants and relatives is to be held at the Fair grounds, Taneytown, Md., Saturday, August 22, 1925. Said John Flohr, Sr. died in Thurmont, Md., in 1893. His children were: Leonard (settled in Ill.), John, Jeremiah, William, Josiah, Elizabeth (Baker) and Ann (Fleagle). All Flohr's and Flohr relatives are invited and welcomed. A basket dinner provided by those attending will be served. At this reunion a still greater reunion to include all Flohrs and Flohr relatives in America, is to be planned. Leonard J. Flohr, Thurmont, Md., is President, and Lewis B. Flohr, Vienna, Va., is secretary of the present organization.

An Excessive Postage Rate.

The new postal laws that went into effect April 15, contain at least one excessive charge, out of proportion to any other increase made—the rate on newspapers mailed by individuals. We have mentioned this before, and some think the rate was made for the benefit of newspaper publishers, but if it was, The Record has not felt the beneficial effect of it.

Under the former law, newspapers in wrappers were mailable by anybody at the rate of 4 ounces for 1 cent, which covered the cost of mailing for the average weekly newspaper. Under the present law, the rate is 2 cents for each 2 ounces, or fraction thereof, and as The Record weighs a "fraction" over 2 ounces, the cost of mailing a copy is 4 cents; or if a stamped wrapper is used, 5 cents. The cost of mailing a copy of the average large daily, is 6 cents.

The present rate is therefore practically four times the old rate, which is excessive. It ought to encourage short term regular subscriptions to weekly papers, but as yet we have not noticed that effect.

Large Pic-nic at Emmitsburg.

Approximately 2,000 persons attended the annual picnic, under the auspices of St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Emmitsburg, Rev. J. O. Hayden, C. M., pastor, on Fireman's Field, Saturday. In addition to a large crowd from Emmitsburg and vicinity many were present from Frederick, Thurmont, Woodboro and other sections of the county.

The picnic was on a larger scale than usual and at one time during the afternoon presented the appearance of a fair. Gaily decorated booths and a number of sales stands attracted a large number of purchasers. The feature of the day was a game of baseball between the Emmitsburg and Woodboro county league teams, followed by two junior clubs of Emmitsburg.

The picnic was in charge of and arranged by Rev. Francis Rogers, C. M., and Rev. Hulet Piper, C. M., assisted by Rev. Fr. Hayden and a large number of ladies of the congregation. The ladies had charge of the booths, which were laden with household and fancy articles and a variety of things that appealed to juveniles as well as older persons. A substantial supper was served on two large tables in the open. Leonard C. Barrick, vice-president of the county league, entertained a number of friends at supper.

REV. SHIPLEY'S FAREWELL.

Large Audience Fills Presbyterian Church, Sunday Night.

Rev. G. Wilbur Shipley, as pastor of the Taneytown Presbyterian church, preached his last sermon, as pastor, on Sunday night, before his removal to his new field at Herndon, Va. The church was filled to its capacity, and many staid away knowing they could not be seated. The other churches held no services, thereby leaving their members free to attend the Presbyterian church.

At the close of his sermon, Rev. W. V. Garrett, pastor of the Lutheran Church, expressed his regrets, as well as those of his congregation, on the removal of Rev. Shipley, and wished him God speed in his new field. Rev. Guy P. Bready, pastor of the Reformed Church, spoke more at length along the same line, having had a longer acquaintanceship with Rev. Shipley and his value to the community, and paid warm tributes to his many fine qualities. Rev. T. D. Ritter, pastor of the U. B. Church, was otherwise engaged and could not be present.

Rev. Shipley responded briefly and appropriately, expressing his pleasure on account of his associations with the pastors and congregations of the town, his enjoyment of many union services, and satisfaction generally with his sojourn in Taneytown; stating that his new field was only about four hours away, and he hoped to come back occasionally and renew many friendships formed here.

Rev. Shipley not only labored faithfully among his two congregations, but gladly found time to have active part in a broader field of usefulness. During his pastorate he spoke many times for Red Cross, Sabbath Observance, Sunday School, Christian Endeavor and other objects, both here and throughout the county, and always with characteristic ability and earnestness. He was a co-operator, whenever the good and uplift of the community called for outspoken leadership, and Taneytown, as well as our county, will miss him.

State Camp of the P. O. S. of A.

The State Camp of Maryland P. O. S. of A., met in its 30th annual session in Hampstead, on Tuesday and Wednesday. About 150 state officers and delegates were present, in addition to visiting officials of the National Camp, and members of local Camps. The sessions were unusually full of spirit, and the business transacted all indicated progress for the future.

On Tuesday evening the annual memorial service was held, with addresses by Past State President, Charles Redecker, Windsor, Canada, and Smith Allen, New York. Preceding the memorial services, there was a parade of delegates to the State Camp, Washington Camp No. 73 of Hampstead; Junior Order American Mechanics of Manchester; Independent Order of Mechanics of Manchester; the Red Men of Manchester; Washington Camp No. 7, of Pleasant Valley, with three bands of music, the P. O. S. of A. band of Pleasant Valley; P. O. S. of A. band of Hampstead, and the Alesia Band.

Reinecke, of Westminster; State Secretary, Wm. James Heaps and State Treasurer, Wm. J. Carter, of Baltimore, hold over another year; State Conductor, J. F. Zimmerman, of Cumberland; State Inspector, Jesse Lewis, of Ewell; State Guard, Charles F. Ray, of Baltimore; trustees, Chas. H. Williams, Charles W. The National Camp meets in Salisbury, N. C., in September.

Trying to Eliminate "Fading."

The General Electric Company is conducting extensive experiments in radio waves, in order to find a solution of "fading" so prominent in radio reception. An official of the Company explains the new theory being worked out as similar to water gushing from a fountain, the radio waves first rising in the air, then coming to earth at a point which can be fixed by the transmitter.

The Company is planning for greater watt power, and for taking small sounds and greatly magnifying them more than at present, and without distortion of the sounds. The experiments are being watched with a great deal of interest.

A Record for Linotype Work.

What is believed to be the record for correct composition on a linotype was made recently by Jack P. Turley, of Hastings, Nebraska, who in one day set 1672 lines, and two weeks later, on another day of 8 hours 1718 lines, in both cases without a single error. In the days in between, his corrections ranged from two to twelve a day.

As there are an average of 35 letters and spaces to a line, this means that Turley hit the keys approximately 59,000 times without an error; or, had his two clear days come together 118,000 strokes without an error. Some record!

MR. FORD FAVORS OLD-FASHION DANCES

Quotes the Bible as Indorsing Religious Dances.

According to the N. Y. Herald-Tribune, Henry Ford has declared in favor of dancing, even under the encouragement of churches in providing dancing floors and music. Mr. Ford's advice is bound to attract considerable attention, even if his ideas on the subject are not generally accepted, or adopted. We reproduce a portion of the article, as purporting to represent his views on the subject.

"I believe the Bible saying that there is 'a time to dance' is true in the lives of people of all ages," Mr. Ford continued. "The old dances are suited to all ages and any one would find them a refreshing and restful recreation.

"We have seen people of all ages take hold of these dances with the same enthusiasm," said Mr. Ford. "Younger people, who do not know these dances, can learn them and then they demand them. Then there are in the country thousands of people, actually thousands and thousands, who used to dance, but stopped when the so-called modern dances came in. They have not had much opportunity to dance since. The dances we have given, not only here but at the Wayside Inn and at Harbor Beach and elsewhere, have brought back some of these older people to the floor, and it has done them lots of good.

"The churches have really a special responsibility here. Dancing originated as a religious ceremony. Religious dances are mentioned in the Bible. Young people are sure to dance, because dancing is an instinct with us. Everybody who is keeping time to music with his hands or feet is really dancing, whether he calls it that or not.

"If the young people are sure to dance, the young people of the church, why should not the church set the standard for them? 'We have to face this fact that if the young folks cannot dance in church halls they will dance in other halls.'"

Wheat Crops Show Big Gain.

The Department of Agriculture has reports showing wheat production in 17 of the world's principal producing countries as 2,110,000,000 bushels, as compared with 2,065,000,000 last year. Most of the increase comes from countries such as Bulgaria, Hungary and Roumania, in eastern Europe. Austria and Jugoslavia report increased averages, though these countries are still expected to be buyers of imported wheat.

Bus Line Permit Refused.

Permission to run a bus line from Union Bridge to Frederick, by John Corbin, of Westminster, has been refused by the Public Service Commission, on the grounds that "the public welfare does not require the service." His application was objected to by another bus line, and by railroad officials, who stated that the needs of the public were already fairly served.

WHAT IS "ROTARY."

Alex. Blanchard's Address at Cleveland, Ohio.

We should like to go at length into what the Rotary Clubs—that now cover most of the world—stand for, but do not have the space. Mr. Alex. B. Blanchard, of New York, now summing at Glen Burn, recently delivered a lengthy address at Cleveland, that comprehended the subject, stating among other things, that Rotary represents, an idea, a purpose, rather an organization—service, general betterment in and for, the world's activities—and a recent extension of such activities among the boys.

We clip the following from a newspaper report of Mr. Blanchard's address:

The official report covering several pages was read by Lex Blanchard. This report, delving into details of the convention set forth the ideals of the organization—"Service Above Self."

Blanchard told the members yesterday that more than 10,000 delegates from 31 countries attended the convention which lasted five days.

Reviewing briefly the history of the Rotary Club, Blanchard said that the first meeting was held in 1905 in Chicago and that its founder was Paul Harris, who with only a handful of representative business men started an organization which today has 2095 clubs throughout the U. S. and Europe.

The first convention of Rotary was represented by 16 clubs. It was held in Chicago during the latter part of 1905 when a constitution was adopted. The next convention was held in Duluth, Minn., in 1911 and in Portland, Oregon, in 1912. The title "Rotary International" was affixed to the organization in Los Angeles in 1922, during a convention of all clubs. The convention in Cleveland this year was the 16th annual. The next convention will be held in 1926 in Denver. Steps were taken at Cleveland to stage the 1927 convention overseas.

One of the paramount discussions at the recent convention was the closer relationship between Rotary and boys' work.

"You would be surprised," said Blanchard, "at the great interest manifested at the convention in helping the boys of the present generation to 'find themselves.'"

The $1.00 Bill Problem.

High prices, the automobile and the movies undoubtedly were responsible for the run on the one-dollar bill, but the Federal Bureau of Efficiency believes the American public has permitted the habit of carrying a pocketful of the convenient form of currency to go to excess.

A study of the uses of the one-dollar bill, just completed by the Government's efficiency experts, shows that seven times as many one-dollar bills are carried now as in 1900, and the increase in the use of the bill since 1910 has tripled. The estimated production of dollar bills for the present year is 800 tons, against ninety tons in 1900. The bureau believes that is "too much."

Efforts of the Treasury Department to put silver coins back into circulation have been unsuccessful and a recent campaign to popularize the two-dollar bill has met with no enthusiasm, so the efficiency bureau was asked to get the facts regarding the one-dollar measure.

"The drift toward the excessive use of low-denomination bills," says the report of the experts, "is uneconomical from the standpoint of both the public and the Government."

"The development of so bulky a currency is bad from the standpoint of the users because of the time the individual loses in having his change counted out to him in small bills. He loses time again in counting it out when he makes a purchase. The merchant has a great bulk of small bills that he must count into the bank, where they must again be counted."

"Every one of these processes is complicated in proportion to the smallness of the denomination of the bills to be handled. The larger the denomination of the bills, the easier and more economical the task."

"New money must be issued in the place of that destroyed. The life of a dollar bill is but seven months. It completes its cycle and is replaced in that time. If one ten-dollar bill can be made to take the place of ten ones, the expense of maintaining ten dollars in circulation is one-tenth as great. If fives can replace ones there is a corresponding saving. If twos can be made to serve, the cost will be reduced to one-half."

The two-dollar bill, the efficiency experts believe, is a useful denomination that has fallen into disuse for no sound reason but merely because it is believed to be unlucky. It is largely used in Canada. In England the smallest piece of paper money in use is a ten-shilling bill which is worth a little more than the two-dollar bill.

GOAL PARLEY IS CALLED OFF

Both Sides Unwilling to Make Important Concessions.

The conference between the coal operators and the miners has been discontinued for the present, but is likely to be renewed at the request of either side. As both sides are standing firm, a deadlock has been reached until one or the other is willing to make concessions. The miners have refused to submit questions to "arbitration," or to continue work after Sept. 1st.

Gov. Pinchot declines to comment on the situation, or to say whether he will take a hand in the situation later, which is practically the stand so far taken by President Coolidge. Unless there is some change made, a strike seems sure, Sept. 1st.

Samuel D. Warriner, chief of the anthracite operators, has sent a letter to John L. Lewis, president of the Union, in which he places responsibility on the Union for breaking off negotiations, and denies that the operators have received instructions to refuse any concessions. While the letter is very positive on some points, it is regarded as offering an opportunity for the reopening of negotiations.

Summer-time Radio Operation.

"The hand that twirls the receiver knob is the final link in broadcasting," says Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, Chief Broadcasting Engineer, Radio Corporation of America. "No matter what may be the power of the broadcasting station; no matter what the atmospheric conditions; no matter how good the radio programs; no matter how excellent the receiving set itself, the final factor—and the one that counts for perhaps as much as all the others combined—is the care exercised by the person at the receiving end. There is nothing complicated about the usual receiving set, but radio will deliver more or less in proportion to how it is played. That is why a little care in operating the receiver goes a long way in radio satisfaction."

"Especially does all this become evident with the warm days of summer. Just as the automobile requires a little care during freezing weather as compared with its carefree operation in mild weather, so does the radio receiver require just a wee bit more attention in its operation, if the best results are desired."

Big Flood in Detroit.

Detroit, Mich., had a bad flood, last Saturday, doing damage to property estimated in millions of dollars, chiefly in the low sections of the city. At places the water was 10 feet deep. The storm and rainfall was the heaviest recorded in Michigan in recent years. A number of auto plants, including the Ford, Hudson, Chrysler and Packard, were forced to shut down temporarily.

We used to send children to school to learn "manners." The telephone companies seem far more successful than the ordinary schools in driving home lessons in urbanity. Instead of sending girls to "finishing" schools perhaps it would be better to let them be telephone operators for a while.

THE TOWN LOT SALE.

Taneytown now Showing Extensive Development Opportunities.

The public sale of town lots, in Taneytown's new extension, attracted a large crowd, last Saturday afternoon. The sale was conducted by Hammond & Ogle, of Baltimore. Thirty-six of the lots fronted in the state road on its west side, filling out the unsold gap between the former sale of lots, to the farm house on the Fair Ground farm.

These lots were sold 25x200', at prices ranging from $80.00 to $125.00. An Avenue was opened from the state road, near J. N. O. Smith's extending to the Uniontown road at J. J. Garner's, and lots laid off on the north side. Some of these lots on the state road end, were sold, varying in price for $8.00 to $16.00, and the rest were withdrawn.

The farm was offered in two tracts, separately and as a whole, but was not sold, the bids not being regarded as satisfactory for such a desirably located property.

The lots sold, in course of time—and perhaps not very long—will prove to be good investments to the purchasers, and in the meantime can be farmed to good advantage. Some of these lots will no doubt be built on before very long, thereby extending Taneytown for about one mile, built up, beyond the present town limits, and unfortunately not counting in the town's population.

Within the next ten years, this whole extension, including the remainder of the Fair Ground property as well as the properties on the east side of the road, promise to greatly increase in value. The building of the new High School, the tomato cannery, and the availability of numerous sites for homes and manufacturing plants, seems to offer development opportunities in a section that ought to attract many investors and industries.

The town should not, however, continue to grow only along this one road. Side streets should be opened and promoted, and the town broadened out, not only in the so-called "east end" but on all sides. There are excellent lots, desirably located, under water protection, within the town limits. In fact, just now, Taneytown is a good place to locate in, and invest in, both for homes and industries.

An Alleged Boot-legger Killed.

A man, charged with being a boot-legger, was shot and killed in Harford County, last Saturday, by a law enforcement officer, while trying to escape, after arrest. The feeling is very bitter against the officer, and an effort will be made to show that the shooting was wilful and unjustified. The officer, of course, will put up the defense that the shooting was done while in the discharge of his legal duty.

This is another of the many pitiful and most unfortunate cases growing out of the boot-legging and defiance of law business. That this one is complicated with doubt as to the legality of the official's act, makes it all the worse. No doubt the trial and evidence in the case will clarify this part of the situation; but just the same a young man with a family dependent on him, has lost his life.

This particular section of the state, in Harford county, is reported to have been under suspicion for some time, for boot-legging, but perhaps to no greater extent than some other sections where the same class of defiance of law prevails, and this case shows the great danger connected with such defiance. The lesson growing out of the case, is self-evident, whether the officer was fully justified, or not.

An Egg-laying Contest.

College Park, Aug. 7—Some time early on the morning of November 1 an ambitious pullet will lay an egg, and the race will be on between several hundred of Maryland's choicest fowls entered in the first long-distance egg laying contest to be held in the State.

At the University of Maryland at College Park, where the contest is to be held, arrangements are being made to provide buildings and runs for more than a thousand birds, whose egg records from November 1 to Oct. 30 of the following year, will be watched with keen interest by poultry raisers throughout the State.

The contest, it is announced by R. H. Waite, head of the University of Maryland poultry department and superintendent of the contest, is intended to stimulate interest in better breeding, create a more universal knowledge of the value of standard bred flocks, and aid in the production and distribution of better young stock.

Entries in the contest will consist of eleven birds. Ten of these will constitute a laying pen. The other fowl will be held in reserve. The laying record of each hen and each pen will be tabulated weekly and forwarded to the owner who will thus be kept informed of the performance of his entries.

It is expected that considerable valuable information will be obtained during the contest and this information will be compiled and published from time to time for the benefit of poultry producers of the State.

While the contest will be open to poultry producers in all parts of the world, Maryland entries will be given preference after twenty of the one hundred pens, for which space is available, have been entered by out-of-State breeders.—Univ. of Md. Dep't Agriculture.

Work in the Maryland Pen.

The third attempt at escape made by "Jack" Hart at the Maryland Penitentiary, through the use of tools secured in penitentiary work shops, raises the question—Why conduct such work in a penitentiary that gives convicts access to files, iron bars, and other steel tools? Not only tools for escape, but heavy implements with which to attack guards?

Surely, there are classes of labor far removed from the blacksmith, locksmith and bludgeon shops, and the making of ingenious contrivances by prisoners that might be used for prison labor. There are classes of work in which convicts should be removed from the handling of small instruments, such as can be concealed in their clothing and carried to their cells without being easily caught doing so.

Perhaps such problems have been brought, many times, to the attention of "pen" officials, and there may be reasons why what may be termed "dangerous occupations" can not be dispensed with; but if such has been the case, we do not recall ever having seen an explanation of why iron working, and such tasks, remain a part of prison labor.

It would seem difficult enough to prevent files, saws, knives and the like from being smuggled in from the outside, without providing them inside as every day tools. The Maryland "pen" has an unenviable reputation for escapes and attempts, and there must be reasons connected with the administration of the institution, for these efforts.

Future Political Leaders.

Already, newspaper writers, in the positive way they have of planning the future, say that with the death of Mr. Bryan there has passed the last of the political "spell binders," and that hereafter the people of this country will largely have to depend on the newspapers and printed propaganda for the origination and dissemination of political issues.

This is placing a pretty high estimate on what newspaper writers can do, and it seems to forget that there are writers and other writers, and newspapers and other newspapers. For years, the newspapers have not been great originators of political policies, and we fail to see how the passing of Roosevelt, Wilson, LaFollette and Bryan is now going to install them as the only hope for keeping the public interested in politics. In fact, we think that the "newspapers" ought to be more true to name than they have long been trying to be, in furnishing "the news" as it is made, and not in manufacturing it—perhaps in many cases falsifying it, for income.

This country always has had great political figures—leaders of men and thought—and while just at present the supply is running short, this does not mean that others will not develop, on short notice, when occasion demands. One speech made Bryan a leader. The most of our great men had nothing about them, early in life, to indicate future greatness. It is emergencies and opportunities that discover leaders.

So, we need not worry for future leadership, nor make up our minds that there is nothing left us but talented and ambitious writers. When this country needs individual "spell binders," they will be forthcoming.

It is greatly more true to say that this country is becoming weary of radicalism, and it is increasingly difficult to capture popular fancy, as Mr. Bryan did. Our country needs greatly more of quiet performance than it does of fiery eloquence; more of practical common-sense than of attractive theories; more of consensus of opinion than of individual opinion; and the Coolidge way, is proving it—for the time.

Mrs. Bryan's Example.

Mrs. William Jennings Bryan did not look upon the face of her husband, after his death, preferring, to remember him as she last saw him alive. This is not a new decision of the kind, but its practice in such a notable case serves to give it a prominence that makes it worthy of favorable comment, and indirectly leads to the subject of common customs at funerals.

Mrs. Bryan not only exercised a justifiable preference, but in so doing set an example leading to the encouragement of less public display of grief at funerals. Without meaning it to be such, perhaps, those bereaved by death in a home, often contribute to public displays that ought to be avoided as much as possible—the "last look," the last farewell to loved ones, that at least ought to be too personal and sacred for any but the few to observe.

Funeral customs have been changing for the better, in recent years, and should be encouraged, especially for church funerals. There is not the same display of dead bodies in churches, which often amounts to the satisfying of curiosity, notably in cases of violent death, and the increase of quiet and order in general, is becoming more the rule.

No fixed rules for funerals, applying in all cases, seem to be possible, owing to the wide variation in people and circumstances; but, church officials can do much toward bringing about still more uniform customs, by attempting to enforce certain rules, regardless, sometimes, of the wishes of those who may be temporarily not quite themselves, due to their great trouble.

Coffee.

Brazilian coffee stands in about the same relation to the United States as British rubber. Brazil produces about three-quarters of the world's coffee, and more than half of it is consumed by Americans. The average American family uses something like sixty pounds a year.

It is plain that Brazil, through a scheme of restricted production and exportation, can charge semimonopolistic prices for coffee. And Brazil has, with varying success, been doing it for years. Within the last few months, for instance, the American housewife has experienced one of these periodic price rises, at once so trying and so apparently ridiculous.

The American household budget is without any shield against this assault. The demand for coffee exists. Brazil controls the supply and, therefore, the price. That seems about all there is to it.

But to control the supply costs money. The coffee must be held in warehouses if exportation is to be regulated and restricted. Brazil never has had the spare cash for this purpose and has been compelled to borrow it from abroad.

The last coffee loan Brazil obtained from Great Britain. It was in May, 1922, and amounted to about $4,000,000. During that May the wholesale price was about 10 cents; by November it was just over 24 cents.

Today the price is about 19 cents. More money is needed to hold it there or send it higher. Just at present no foreign loans are being floated in London, so the State of Sao Paulo had to come to New York for the money. The credit of this State is good.

Every American coffee-drinker will admit that it is scarcely fair that American money should help the Brazilians to keep up the price of his principal potable. It is difficult for the unorganized public to do anything about it.

But somewhere that unorganized public has a friend. It seems to be the Washington Government, which has recently been keeping close tabs upon foreign loans. At any rate, the plans that were under way for a $30,000,000 or $40,000,000 loan to the State of Sao Paulo have been held up. If the Brazilians cannot obtain in New York the money to hold their coffee in warehouses, they may have to sell it. If they do, the price will come down.—Phila. Ledger.

No Conflict with Andrews.

The statement attributed to the Anti-Saloon League that prohibition will never be adequately tested until enforcement is in the hands of its friends, implies no criticism of General Lincoln C. Andrews. The statement is obviously true and justified. Prohibition enforcement should be in the hands of its friends from top to bottom. Every United States official, whether connected with the Prohibition unit or with federal courts, every investigating officer, every prosecuting attorney, every United States commissioner, every United States marshal, should be a supporter of the American policy of liquor suppression.

Mr. Mellon, the Secretary of the Treasury, because of his associations and his interest in the whisky business in former years, was not considered by prohibitionists as the proper person to be in charge of enforcement. But there is circumstantial evidence that, so far from hampering prohibition enforcement at the present time, Mr. Mellon is following a policy of absolute non-interference and of sympathetic support of his subordinates charged with enforcement of the Volstead law. We believe that General Andrews is being allowed a free hand. Mr. Haynes should have had it. Being a gentleman and a soldier, the General is the friend of prohibition because he is the enemy of law-breaking, just as during the war against Germany he was a whole-hearted supporter of his country against its external enemies.

The frequent assertion that "prohibition is having its last trial" is simply father to the thought. Prohibition will never have its last trial in America, no more than the republican form of government will have its last trial. One objective and only one is in view; satisfactory enforcement. And this objective will be reached no matter whether it takes five years or one hundred years. Prohibitionists are prepared to fight it out on this line for uncounted summers, if necessary, and their children are prepared to take up the battle for America against liquor treason when this generation has passed from the scene.

Sad as the news may be, however, to the enemies of prohibition, this will not be necessary. The cord of enforcement is tightening about the neck of the bootlegger and the time of his end may be mathematically computed. A few more years and the inevitable will be with us.—M. E. Church Board of Temperance.

Scientists Use Colors to Combat Insects

Men of science over Cambridge way in England put their heads together and then take time out to announce to a pestered world that mosquitoes favor navy blue above 16 other colors. Reporting further on the effect of colors, the scientists say that mosquitoes are unanimous in their aversion to yellow, and that they shun light blue almost to a mosquito. One observer says that house flies are indifferent to colors; another is positive that flies avoid pale blue and settle freely on white. A sense of color and a sense of smell are possessed by many kinds of insects, notably bees and butterflies, according to Darwin, Lubbock and other naturalists of the last century.

Just as we were dazzled with the idea of baffling the stings and arrows of outrageous insects by the trickiness of our apparel, or mayhap even ridding the earth of the busy boll weevil by some smelly lure, along comes the esteemed Engineering Foundation with a dissertation on combating mosquitoes by means of fishes, especially young ones. The most useful species for that service, so the announcement of the Foundation says, are the common sunfish, the mud minnow, and the killifish. Competition and struggle for existence in the mmlc world. The minnow plays Goliath to the mosquito's David. Lay on Macquisto—and d—d be Goliath if he cries "Hold; Enough!" A sting may outdo a sting. Watch your fins, Mr. Killifish.

It Comes High

Percival S. Hill, the tobacco magnate, subscribed for $10,000,000 of the German loan. Of course, he would not have done this if he had not been thoroughly conversant with European affairs. At a luncheon in New York the other day he was talking about David Lloyd George, once the most prominent and popular man in the world, now a negligible member of a negligible party.

"Envy wiped Lloyd George out," he said. "His case is like that of the pretty girl."

"What makes Phoebe so disliked?" one young matron asked another.

"Why, didn't you hear," said the other young matron. Phoebe got the most votes at the church social for being the most popular girl."

Ugly General Pays Penalty

Philopomen was a Greek general, notorious for his ugliness, but also famous for having had it said of him by Plutarch that he was the "last great Greek." He was so ugly that when he arrived in a town making ready for a ceremony in honor of his coming, he was put to work helping to prepare for his own entrance into the city. He looked so common and unsightly to the innkeeper in charge of the program that he was put to work drawing water and building a fire. When his identity was discovered he merely replied that he was paying the penalty for being so ugly.

Wise Solomon

Here is a story about a composition. The teacher requested her pupils—all boys—to write on a biblical subject. Here is what one boy wrote: "Solomon was a very wise man. One day two women went to him quarreling about a baby. One woman said: 'This is my child,' and the other woman said, 'No, 'tain't; it's mine.' But Solomon spoke up and said: 'Now, now, ladies; don't quarrel. Give me my sword and I'll make twins of him, so you can both have one.'"

Brotherhood Cannot Be Made Compulsory

Brotherhood is like poets and slogans: it is born and not made. There are two kinds of brotherhood—one that binds people who are by nature congenial and one that binds those who are comrades in arms, is the assertion of a writer in the Baltimore Sun. The first is a product of taste and the other a product of partisanship. In both cases we love our brother for the same reason that we enjoy victuals that agree with us. All religions impose an obligation to love fellow believers. All civilized men make some effort to encourage a spirit of fraternity. Yet one is at liberty to doubt whether any of these efforts has materially altered human relationships.

True, any club or lodge or other organization may bring together kindred spirits and thus widen each man's acquaintance among his own kind and add to his happiness; but if one who finds the organization's members uncongenial is by some mischance enrolled among them, neither pledge of brotherhood nor sense of duty can make him like them more.

Blood brothers fight; the fact of their brotherhood cannot make them congenial. If these cannot love one another in conformity with the obligations imposed by their kinship what reason is there to believe that men of different breeds can learn to love one another merely by willing to do so?

The man who has a sincere desire to love his fellows may rid himself of the selfishness and narrowness and conceit that now conspire to give him a lone-wolf complex, and may in humility and patience reconcile himself to all mankind; but to the last he will continue to avoid persons who do not agree with him and to court those whose opinions dovetail with his.

The ego admits to brotherhood only those who conform. You do not in truth love a comrade in arms; you love yourself and your cause, and accept him as a brother solely because he is grinding your ax.

Love isn't a product of will or pledge; it happens.

Japanese Constitution

The constitution of Japan was not patterned after that of any other country. It was promulgated in 1889 and was formulated by Prince Ito, who, after investigating the constitutions of the various nations, modeled the constitution of Japan largely after the Prussian. It is divided into 76 articles and provides for a law-making body of two chambers, the house of peers and the house of representatives. The emperor convokes, opens and closes the diet, has all executive authority, and all laws are submitted to him for sanction.

POULTRY

HIGH QUALITY EGGS
IN SUMMER MONTHS

One of the biggest problems that faces the poultry producer is the production of high quality eggs through the summer months. The reason for this is the heat of the summer will start fertile eggs to incubate and thereby spoil the quality unless special effort is taken.

The biggest loss can be stopped by the production of infertile instead of fertile eggs. Supplementing and correlating with this effort to produce infertile eggs is the need for careful methods of collecting, storing and marketing.

It is a customary practice for the people who are in charge of enforcing the egg-candling laws to lift the requirements for candling during March and April, for the reason that during the heavy production season the eggs are marketed with good quality. The cool weather, plus the large supply, helps to maintain the good condition of the eggs marketed during this period.

Investigations show that at least two-thirds of the egg losses occur on the farm. The remainder is on the buckster wagons, in the country store, on hot freight and express cars and in improper storage. This loss has been estimated at $20 per farm in Missouri, and it is doubtless as high in the other heavy poultry-producing states.

No doubt the rooster is responsible for more of this loss than any other one contributing element. He eats high-priced feed during the summer without producing any benefit and does a great deal of harm in lowering the quality of the eggs. The movement to cull the rooster out of the flock is on as soon as the breeding season is over. The young cockerels can be best developed by keeping them separated from the flock, and feed and market them as soon as possible. The cockerels that are to be kept for breeding purposes can be developed better if kept separate from the main flock.

In addition to the loss resulting from the sale of fertile eggs, there is a further preventable loss from cracked eggs, dirty eggs, shrunken and bad-flavored eggs. These different losses may be lowered by feeding oyster shell, by having plenty of nests, by gathering the eggs daily, by packing them so they will not break and eating all odd-sized eggs at home. Bad flavors are usually caused by feeding unusual feeds or by keeping the eggs in a place where they absorb unpleasant odors.

Scurvy-Preventing Feed Manufactured by Fowls

It looks as if the chicken makes its own vitamin C or the vitamin which prevents scurvy in guinea pigs and humans, according to an investigation carried on at the Purdue university agricultural experiment station.

It appears that chickens do not have scurvy and can thrive for long periods on feeds that do not have the scurvy-preventing vitamin. Mature cockerels were given a ration containing none of this vitamin for over three months. Their livers and kidneys were then fed in small amounts to guinea pigs suffering from scurvy brought on by a lack of a vitamin-preventing scurvy. In about two weeks' time the guinea pigs were cured of scurvy by the livers and kidneys of these cockerels which had received none of the scurvy-preventing vitamin, thus indicating that the vitamin was manufactured by some means in the body of the chicken.

This suggests that the chicken can make this vitamin from sources not available to the guinea pig or to a person and that the lack of this vitamin in the diet of the chicken apparently does no damage. In practical poultry feeding, therefore, little attention need be paid to supplying the vitamin which prevents scurvy, although other vitamins are absolutely necessary and must be provided by the feeds given.

Poultry Notes

Fresh, clean water is necessary to the poultry flock.

Losses from tuberculosis in chickens is usually greater in winter than in summer.

Chick specialists now recommend feeding egg yolk or cod liver oil to prevent leg weakness.

Experience shows that hens must have animal protein in order to lay prolifically. Milk, meatscraps and tankage are the animal proteins most available for feeding poultry.

Cracked barley can be included in the feed ration for chicks after they reach the age of five or six weeks.

It never pays to overcrowd hens—they need a comfortable house, dry and roomy, with plenty of fresh air and sunshine.

Grain-feed such as sprouted oats, cabbage, turnips, beets and rape are necessary for the health of the pullets. A disease similar in symptoms to roup is sometimes caused by lack of green feed.

Greater Profit in Eggs Than Capons

Ohio Station Finds From Test That Pullets Pay.

With broilers at 30 to 40 cents a pound it is more profitable to feed pullets than capons. So an experiment at the Ohio State university indicates University poultrymen found that, all things being equal, pullets were a better business proposition than capons principally because the pullets laid eggs while the capons were just growing.

"In our experiment with capons," says Prof. E. L. Dakan, head of the poultry department, "we were interested to determine whether it was more profitable to raise pullets or capons under the ordinary conditions of the farm, with limited space and equipment. We were slightly handicapped because we lacked the proper range for the capons, which most farmers have, but otherwise the conditions were normal.

"We caponized the cockerels at about twelve weeks, and put them on feed for six months. At the same time we evaluated an equal number of pullets of about the same age and put them on feed for egg production.

"When the capons were sold at the end of six months the pullets were again given a market price as a means of comparison, the receipts for eggs added, and the feed cost charged to each. The final result showed the pullets more profitable than the capons."

Sore Shoulders Tend to Increase Feed Bills

The best thing to do with sore shoulders on the horse is to prevent them, according to J. G. Fuller, animal husbandman of the University of Wisconsin.

Sore shoulders are due largely to improper fitting of collars, side draft and too much heavy pulling before the horse is thoroughly hardened to his work.

A raw shoulder puts any horse physically ill at ease, and his efficiency and willingness to work drop immediately. If the affected area is only slight many of the preparations, sulphur and linseed oil, salt water, and iodine, have been found to help the healing, but if the injury is greater the horse must be rested until the skin becomes normal again, Fuller states. Idle horses must eat and their help in the fields may be greatly missed.

It is much more difficult to control sore shoulders in warm than it is in cooler weather. Fuller declares that the shoulders can be kept in normal condition to a very large extent if the horses are carefully driven and intelligently cared for.

Some Prejudice Against Alfalfa as Horse Feed

There is more or less prejudice against alfalfa as a horse feed. This prejudice, however, is not found to any extent in the big alfalfa-growing regions. It is more prevalent in sections where comparatively little alfalfa is grown. Many feeding trials have demonstrated that when alfalfa is properly fed to horses there is no danger from its use whatsoever. When, however, horses are given all the alfalfa they will eat, that is, if their managers are kept stuffed full of alfalfa, as commonly happens when timothy or prairie hay are fed, there is danger of too heavy consumption of this highly nitrogenous roughage. The rule is to feed from one pound to one and one-fourth pounds per hundred pounds live weight per day. Some feed as high as one and one-half pounds, but the smaller quantity is preferable. In fact, many do not feed more than one pound per 100 pounds weight per day and add other cheap roughage such as cornstalks or bright oat straw to obtain the desired bulk.

FARM FACTS

Think of alfalfa. Then plant it.

You can usually judge what kind of farmer he is by the legumes he grows.

Don't neglect to vaccinate the spring pigs. It is the cheapest insurance a farmer can buy.

Shallow cultivation only is recommended for corn after it has reached a height of about eight inches.

Good seed and adapted varieties are a great aid in making your field better than the one across the fence.

When you feed your ducklings low-grade flour, middlings and grit in the feed, you simply pave the way for loss.

Pigs should be vaccinated when eight weeks old and weaned when ten weeks of age. This method is easiest on the pigs. They ought not lose a meal.

The common brown rat breeds from six to ten times a year and produces an average of ten young. Barium carbonate is an effective and economical poison.

After chicks have experienced the joy of running about in the open they find confinement on rainy days irksome. In their craving for freedom and exercise they often get into the bad habits of toe picking and cannibalism.

MANCHESTER.

Owing to the road being closed between here and Hanover, traffic is very light in our town. The road is being rebuilt from the Maryland line to Parkville, which is a distance of about eight miles. You have about this distance to detour and part of it is rather rough. Because of this, the tourists are using the Littlestown road.

The Ford car was also badly damaged. The accident happened in front of the meat store of W. A. Wink. The occupants of the Ford were badly bruised.

Reunions and picnics seem to be prevalent in this part of the county. It is an easy matter to get in your car on Saturday morning and go to a place where great crowds gather. Why not? Man is not only a religious being but has a social instinct. The day of sitting in a little two by four corner alone is past. That is if you want to grow spiritually. I speak this way because there are a few who discredit the social life.

The picnic of the Sunday Schools and congregations of Manchester will be held at Forest Grove Park, Hanover, Pa., August 8th. This is a fine spot to be manifested in any town.

Hyser Family Reunion.

The children of the late Samuel Hyser held their first reunion, at Spangler's Spring, Gettysburg, Pa., Aug. 2, 1925. The day was ideal; there was nothing to detract from the pleasure of the day. Eleven of his twelve children being present, one daughter and her husband and five grand-children were absent at roll call. They ranged in age from 47 years to a great-grand son of ten weeks. A very sumptuous dinner and supper was served with plenty of refreshments to the entire group, from one table, of which a snap shot was taken. One thing was evident they are bountiful providers. This is the first time the family has all been together since the death of the father, which is nearing four years and in that time not one link has been lost from the chain, but nine have been added—two daughters-in-law and two grand-sons by marriage, and three grand-children and two great grand sons. The reunion was led in prayer at the opening and closing by Clarence Hyser, and it was decided upon to hold the reunion next year, Aug. 3, 1926, at Caledonia Park.

Those present were: Howard Hyser, wife and daughters, Odetta and Grace; Philip Mumert and family, Paul Bunny and wife and sons, Paul Jr. and Bobby; Fern Staley and wife, Ernest Hyser and daughters, Ruth and Hazel; Mervin Spangler, wife and daughter, Marie; Felix Florence and wife; Clinton Harner, wife and daughter, Thelma; Chas. Harner, wife and daughter, Kathryn and sons, Robert and Wilbur; Alvie Hyser, wife and son, Ray; Clyde Ohler, wife and daughter, Mary; Clarence Hyser and wife, Ralph Hyser and wife, Floyd Champion, Wilbur Leister, Charles Myers and Cletus Ridinger.

Advice---Buy Farms

Never did farming look as attractive as it does now, with wheat soaring toward two dollar mark and corn toward the one dollar and fifty cent mark, with other commodities in like proportions. Can get loans on farms 60 percent and over, first mortgage at 5 1/2 percent. I can give you choice of 100 homes, in sizes from 8000 square feet to 1000 acres. I don't have one farm that is inflated in price. Will price most of them less than the buildings would cost.

Some Good Short Ones.

"One of the greatest pieces of misinformation in this much misinformed world," said the Oldest Inhabitant to the flypaper salesman, as they watched a well-known cheap car come rattling along the street, "is that a man who rides in an automobile don't get no exercise."

Two colored steamboat hands were talking down at the wharves.

"And dat foolish looking George Washington Baldwin comes up to me and asks me if I could change him five dollars," said one.

They both laughed long and loud, and the other asked: "And what did you say?"

"Me? I just looked him in the eye and said: 'Don't high-hat me, big boy, don't high-hat me.'"

And they both laughed again.

In a western town there is a sign reading as follows: 4,076 people died of gas last year. Thirty-nine inhaled it, 37 put a lighted match to it, 4,000 stepped on it.

Duties of Public Health Nurse.

"What are the duties of a public health nurse?" Miss C. Ethel Monroe, Advisory Nurse of the State Department of Health, was asked recently. Her reply showed the many ways in which the county nurses help to prevent disease and to promote the health of the people of Maryland. Here is her summing up:

"Because of her training and experience, the public health nurse can do many things that are of benefit to either the individual or to the community, that no other individual is in a position to do.

"She can aid materially in the reduction of communicable diseases, such as tuberculosis, typhoid fever, scarlet fever, diphtheria, measles and the other infectious diseases. She goes into the homes in which such diseases have developed and under the direction of the local health officer, or at the request of the family doctor, she instructs some responsible member of the family in the proper methods of caring for the patient so as to promote a satisfactory recovery, and to prevent, as far as possible, disabling after-effects. She knows, too, the measures that must be taken to prevent the spread of the disease to others.

"Closely allied to work of this sort in the homes, is the promotion of health activities in the schools. Physical defects that are not noticeable to the casual observer, are often discovered by the health officer or other authorized physician in the medical inspection of the children in the schools. Correction of these defects frequently removes what might be a serious handicap, and puts the child on the high road toward better health in adult life. The nurse usually assists in these examinations, and by consultation with the parents and teachers she can often be of great assistance in having the defects corrected. The nurse also assists the health officer—always with the consent of the parents—in giving vaccines, or serums, to school children to protect them against such diseases as smallpox, diphtheria and typhoid fever.

"Instruction in personal and community hygiene, either in the classroom or by furnishing the teachers with material that can be used by them, is another important feature of the nurse's work in the schools.

"Children up to seven years are the special interest of the State Bureau of Child Hygiene. The public health nurse assists in the work of the Bureau by arranging conferences for mothers, on keeping the well baby well, on the care of the preschool child, and on the care of expectant mothers; by visiting in the homes where there are new-born babies; by instructing midwives, and in many other ways.

"The educational activities of the public health nurse are vital and varied. The nurse conducts classes in the home care of the sick; and in nutrition; she organizes community health clubs and gives talks to Parent-Teacher Associations, Rotary Clubs, and to other interested groups. She arranges health exhibits for county fairs and she is likely to be called on for help in getting up health plays for special occasions. These and many more activities are all part of the day's work of the public health nurse."

There are now forty-two nurses engaged in public health work in the counties of Maryland.

LIFE WILD IN MATTO GROSSO

Women Have to Be Taught to Wear Clothes.

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.—An educational film has been exhibited in Rio de Janeiro showing the wild life and frontier industries of the Brazilian state of Matto Grosso, the second largest state in the union, twice the size of Texas.

There are plenty of Indians living in Matto Grosso, most of them in the hunting and fishing period of civilization. The men of the Bororo tribe, which was shot for the picture, use no clothing, but the women have been taught by the federal Indian service to wear a simple form of dress.

The most popular style in necklaces is made by stringing a collection of the teeth of wild jaguars, powerful and dangerous animals of the cat family which kill live stock throughout a great part of central and northern Brazil.

A peculiar wedding custom was filmed showing the return of a young man with the hide of a jaguar, killed to prove his bravery, a necessary action before the right of marriage is given to a man.

Another feature of life in the interior, mentioned by the late Theodore Roosevelt in the account of his trip down the "River of Doubt," are the piranhas, the flesh-eating fish, which inhabit some of the interior rivers. The operator threw a calf into the stream. It was eaten with astonishing rapidity by an enormous school of these carnivorous fish. Alligators are numerous.

Edges of the forest bordering the rivers are, in many places, white with herons. The species are famous for their aggregate feathers.

There is a law in Matto Grosso preventing the killing of these birds. There is a large trade in the feathers, however, and they are gathered after dropping from the birds and sold for approximately $150 a pound.

Diamond mining seems to be flourishing, the picture showing one village where, it is said, there are more than 3,000 men washing river gravel and sediment by hand. Gold is washed by machinery.

The plains are stocked with cattle, one zone having 400,000 head. Much of the meat is prepared for market in the form of jerked beef.

Argentina Plans Student Interchange With U. S.

Buenos Aires.—At a recent meeting of the Argentine section of the international educational institute, the exchange of graduates between American and Argentine universities was strongly advocated.

It was resolved that this should be principally on the basis of providing these students with chairs of their own language in the country where they intend continuing their studies, and thus give them opportunity, by teaching, to earn their living expenses.

A knowledge of the language of the country was also established as a necessary qualification for obtaining those professorships.

The meeting also resolved to accept an offer of the American section of the institute to send to Buenos Aires a woman graduate of the school of domestic economy of Columbia university to give a course of lectures, and also commissioned Edward F. Feeley, the American commercial attache here, to resume negotiations toward establishing a number of technical scholarships for Argentine students in some of the great industrial establishments in the United States.

Daniels, 4402 South Wabash avenue, porter, who lost his life in the recent wreck near Rockport, N. J., in an effort to save passengers. Daniels was alive when rescuers found him in the wreckage, but refused first aid until a seven-year-old girl had been given medical attention. He was dead when the searchers returned to him.

THE SANDMAN STORY

WISE MR. GANDER

OLD MR. GANDER had suffered many things in the barnyard from Handsome Mr. Rooster and his family. They called Mr. Gander a goose and all his family silly geese who were all very stupid.

Mr. Rooster always crowed louder when the geese were around and strutted about showing his beautiful tall feathers for them to admire.

He even went so far as to say in the hearing of Mr. Gander, to some of his family, "Don't be a goose, Mrs. Henny," when she ran over in the field and was chased by Mr. Fox. "Don't you know any better than to leave the barnyard unless I go with you? You belong to my family. Please remember that, and do not be a silly goose again."

Called All of His Family to Follow Him.

Mr. Gander bore it all meekly, but he did not forget all he was made to bear, and one morning when the farmer threw out a larger supply of corn than usual Mr. Gander stretched his neck and called all of his family to follow him down the road.

"Look at those foolish geese," he heard Mr. Rooster telling his family as he walked away with all the geese following him.

"I can't understand why you called us away from the biggest breakfast we have had this year," said old Granny Goose, who always spoke her mind because she was the oldest of the family.

"I will tell you why," said Mr. Gander when he had them all behind a big rock where no one could hear what he said. "Don't you know the farmer is trying to fatten all the barnyard fowl?"

"If those silly hens and their brilliant Mr. Rooster want to get fat, let them, and off will go their heads, but we will keep away from that corn, eat only a little, and not grow fat and plump."

"They will not pick out the lean geese. Now be wise and follow my example and keep your heads."

Pretty soon all the hens and Mr. Rooster were so fat they looked as if they had been blown up with an air pump and Mr. Rooster did not miss a chance when he saw Mr. Gander to tell him how poor his family were looking. "I heard the farmer telling his wife the other day," said Mr. Rooster, holding his head very high, "that those geese were as thin and lean as a bone and they would not be worth a thing. I thought I would tell you, Mr. Gander." "Thank you," replied Mr. Gander, "I'll tell you something in a short time that will interest you. Good morning."

One day Mr. Gander called his family and told them that they could eat all they liked. "There will be fewer hens in the barnyard and you will get a big feast."

Poor Mr. Rooster did not strut on that day. All the best-looking hens in his family were missing and he had heard the farmer say, "That rooster is too old and tough, so I guess we better not take him."

Mr. Rooster sorrowfully picked up a few bits of corn. The geese were busy eating their fill, but Mr. Gander stopped long enough to remark, "You do not seem to be enjoying your dinner, Mr. Rooster, and your family seems small."

"I told my family it was better to be a lean goose with a head than a plump hen without one."

"Now, I wonder what that silly fellow means," thought Mr. Rooster. "He is a goose, that's what he is, and he is always talking nonsense."

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

CEDAR CURE

MANY people in this country and Canada are accustomed to carry pieces of cedar wood in their pockets to cure or to prevent rheumatism. This is a very common custom among the lumbermen of Michigan and, perhaps, among the "lumberjacks" of other regions. The lumbermen prefer for their pocket amulet pieces of cedar wood with double knots in them.

This superstition is a survival of the ancient veneration in which the cedar tree was held. It is a remnant of tree worship—the worship of the cedar-tree god which some have identified with Osiris. One myth is that the cedar sprang from the body of Osiris, another that the tree is a visible representation of that god. But aside from any Egyptian connection we find that the cedar tree was worshipped as a god for itself ages ago among the Aryan races and today in some parts of northern India the cedar tree is regarded as the god of fructification for the crops; and, when the first wheat is planted, there are elaborate ceremonies into which the bark of the tree and invocations to the tree-god enter. Even the plowman who draws the first furrow is given first to eat of a cake made of wheat and cedar shavings.

In the Punjab, in the days before the influence of British rule had penetrated to that region, a young girl was annually sacrificed to the cedar-tree god in order that crops might be plentiful and pestilence kept away from the land. The cedar-tree god appears at all times, and in many places, to have been considered as a proper god to appeal to for protection against disease and the superstition under consideration is an inheritance of that idea. The carrying about of a piece of the protective tree god in one's pocket is, in effect, an invocation of his powers. The writer has only known of the cedar being carried as a charm against rheumatism, but perhaps in some sections the cedar is carried to ward off other diseases as well.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day, lucky jewel

MONA

MONA has the unusual distinction of being a diminutive of a name whose original form is not in use. It means "little nun" and at first glance it would seem that Monacella, the original form, should be the diminutive rather than Mona herself.

Monacella is a Welsh name, meaning honey-colored, or yellow. It was first made famous by Saint Monacella, a little nun who saved a hare hunted by Brocmael, prince of Powys.

Mona is a distinctly modern appellation. The original name was never transported from Wales but Mona proved extremely popular with the English and is also much in vogue in this country. For some curious reasons it is considered rather affected and is much used by romantic young ladies.

The opal is Mona's talismanic gem. Contrary to superstition it will bring her good luck for the machinations of the wicked fairy said to be imprisoned in the stone will be directed toward her good fortune. Tuesday is her lucky day and 1 her lucky number.

Revolutionary Hero

Jack Jouett was a Virginia hero who overheard a plot to capture Thomas Jefferson at Monticello. The tavern keeper, Jouett, covered 27 miles in an hour and three-quarters. His warning made it possible for Jefferson to escape Tarleton's troopers who had been sent out to surprise the House of Burgesses in Charlottesville and to capture the author of the Declaration of Independence. The legislators also escaped.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL
Sunday School Lesson

Lesson for August 9

BEGINNING THE SECOND MISSIONARY TOUR.

LESSON TEXT—Acts 15:36-16:5.
GOLDEN TEXT—"He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth."
—Ps. 72:8.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How the Boy Timothy Became a Missionary.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Silas and Timothy Become Missionaries.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Missionary Recruits.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Strengthening the Churches.

1. Contention Over John Mark (ch. 15:36-41).

1. Paul's Proposal (v. 36).

This was to revisit the scenes of their missionary endeavor, and see the state of the believers—what progress they were making in their Christian experience. This is a pattern for missionaries in all ages and countries.

2. Barnabas' Determination (v. 37).

It was to take with them John Mark. The human relation of these men was uncle and nephew, (Col. 4:10).

3. Paul's Opposition (v. 38).

He was suspicious of Mark because of his desertion on the former journey (Acts 13:13).

4. Their Separation (vv. 39-41).

Their contention was so sharp that they separated. It is impossible to absolutely determine which of these men was right. It is quite clear that both were sincere. That John had done wrong in turning back, could not be disputed. That one failure in a young Christian should condemn him for life is a wrong conclusion. It may be that nearness of relationship warped the judgment of Barnabas. On the other hand, this very fact may have given insight into Mark's nature which better qualified him to judge of his fitness than Paul. Then again, it is to be presumed that Paul, whom God was thrusting out to be the leader, had a clearer understanding of the matter.

Besides it may be that this sternness of Paul was the very thing that brought Mark to his senses. Frequently the demands of justice make the man. This painful incident resulted in these devoted missionaries parting company, but God over-ruled it to the wider extension of the work. Barnabas took Mark and sailed to Cyprus, and Paul chose Silas, and being recommended by the brethren unto the grace of God, went through Syria and Cilicia confirming the churches. The fact that Paul went forth with the recommendation of the brethren may be a vindication of the rightness of his action. It is comforting to know that the frailties of men cannot thwart the purposes of God, nor even delay them. One of the most serious difficulties in Christian work at home and abroad, is to get Christians to work harmoniously together.

11. Finding Timothy (ch. 16:1-5).

1. The Place (v. 1).

This was at the very place where Paul on his first journey had endured cruel stoning. The conversion of this young man may be regarded as the fruitage of his testimony at that time.

2. His Parentage (v. 1).

His mother was a believing Jewess, and his father a Greek. The mother's name was Eunice (II Tim. 1:5). Timothy's unfeigned faith had passed from his grandmother Lois through Eunice to him.

3. His Character (v. 2).

He had a good reputation in the church at Lystra and Iconium. This shows that the young man from the very first had followed in the footsteps of his spiritual father as a witness for Christ.

4. Timothy Circumcised (v. 3).

Though Timothy had been carefully instructed in the Word of God by his mother and grandmother, the Mosaic rite of circumcision had not been complied with. Doubtless this was because his father was a Gentile. In order to avoid offense among the Jews, Paul circumcised Timothy. This may seem strange in the light of the decision of the Jerusalem Council which set them free from this rite, but it showed his willingness to conform to any reasonable demand for the sake of expedience. However, when this act involved principle he was unyielding, as in the case of Titus, when he refused to have this done at the behest of Judaistic teachers, (Gal. 2:3).

5. The Ministry of Paul and Timothy Through the Cities (vv. 4-5).

It is likely that at this time Timothy was ordained (I Tim. 4:14). They went through the cities and delivered the decrees which had been ordained at the Jerusalem council (Acts 15:19-24). This resulted in the establishment of the churches in the faith, and the daily increase in the number of believers.

To Love God

To love God is to hate delusion and to long to know that which really is.—The Spirit.

Personality

Personality has been well defined as "capacity for fellowship."—C. A. Anderson Scott.

Abraham Lincoln Said:
"God bless the churches, and blessed be God who gives us the churches."

The Benefits of Wholesome Play
Mark 6:31, 32; Luke 2:52

July and August are the months of the year when most people take vacations, or in some way relax from the more strenuous exertions of the year. Many travel, as leisurely as possible, some go to the mountains, some to the seashore, those in rural sections go to the cities, and those in the cities go to the rural sections. This period is often considered a time of play, and at numberless places of resort opportunity for play is given. Tennis, baseball, roque, swimming, etc., are available to all who can participate.

The benefits of wholesome play cannot be denied, but there may be questions as to what is wholesome play. Ordinarily this means out-of-door play. Players should be properly garbed and the playing should be with discretion. If not, the playing cannot be considered wholesome. It is very easy to go to excess. All wholesome play must be entered into heartily, and unless it affords pleasure, little benefit can be expected, and it must also be honorable in every sense. Some famous football teams have always had a season of prayer before a game would begin, and it is quite common with various athletic teams in Bible schools and other religious institutions to observe such a season of prayer.

It might be questioned whether the Lord in Mark 6:31, 32 was speaking of a time of recreation and play. The exhortation was to go to a place where rest could be found. It might be that playing at any kind of games was not in mind at all and that the whole object was rest and that might have been offered by abstaining from physical exertion.

We are living in a time of great stress as far as activities of life are concerned, and a proper amount of play is wise. The old adage "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," has some truth in it.

Embarrassing

"Why did you give up pipe-organ lessons?"

"I felt so blooming childish, playing with my feet."—From the Stanford Chaparral.

Weak Defense

General William Mitchell said at a dinner in New York:

"Our air service is in a bad way, and its defenders put up as bad a defense as the tramp's."

"A very dirty tramp was charged with chasing a lunch-joint attendant all around the lunch-joint with a knife."

"What time wuz it when I chased ye? The tramp demanded of his accuser."

"Eight o'clock in the morning," said the lunch-joint man.

"There, gents," said the tramp, running his dirty hand through his disheveled crop of whiskers. "That lets me out all right all right. That shows ye what a liar he is. At eight o'clock every mornin', winter and summer, I takes me bawth."

Mixed Metaphor

Sir Almeric Fitzroy, who was clerk to the English privy council from 1898 to 1923, is writing his "Memoirs" for the London Morning Post. In the first installment he quoted from his diary some incidents that came to his knowledge during an official visit to Queen Victoria at Balmoral in October, 1898. One of these was the prayer of the Scottish minister who officiated at Craithie church and "in the royal presence petitioned the Almighty that 'as the queen became an auld woman she might put on the new man, and in all righteous causes stand before her people like a he-goat upon the mountains.'"

No Record Available

Mr. G. G. Grey, who conducts a bookshop in Trinity street, Cambridge, England, has traced the line of occupants of his establishment back to the year 1581. The names of those doing business there prior to that date seem to be lost in oblivion. Mr. Grey is anxious to learn if any person knows of an older bookshop. It was in 1581 that Queen Elizabeth knighted Sir Francis Drake, who had discovered New Albion two years earlier; but there is no record of his having established a bookshop at Drake's bay, so Mr. Grey need expect no help in his researches from this quarter.

Got Off Cheap

The late Samuel Gompers, condemning the pardon of two notorious law breakers, said one day to a Washington correspondent:

"The short time these men have served, about a tenth of their actual sentences, reminds me of a story. It's a story about a bogus oil stock millionaire who motored a friend out to his new home on Long Island. The friend gazed in awe at the vast pile.

"Holy smoke, George," he said, "what did this cost you?"

"Three months is all," answered the millionaire."

No Matter

"Mr. Johnson, the baby has poked beans into his left ear until I fear the hearing is permanently affected," said Doctor Slash.

"Aw, well," replied Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge. "He's got another ear left, and there ain't nuth'n of consequence to—p'tu!—listen to these days, no-how."—Kansas City

Times Has Changed

The salesman who had been turned away several times remarked to the office boy with fine sarcasm:

"Well, I suppose the boss is in conference again this morn'ng?"
The office boy flipped a paper pad at the stenographer before he replied: "No, sir; not in conference. He's sworn off golf."

How on the Preacher

The Sunday school girls of a certain church put flowers in front of the pulpit each Sunday.

One was asked by an elderly person what they did with the flowers after the service.

"Oh, we take them to people who are sick after the sermon," was the innocent reply.

HOW IT WAS DECIDED

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

DAD meant him for a merchant, and his brother for a bank; Sister thought that acting was the very thing for Hank. Grandma thought that preaching was the thing he should be at. And all the while insisted that she meant the boy for that.

Mother—well, a lawyer mother meant her boy to be. Granddad was a sailor, so he meant him for the sea.

Some pulled for the ocean, some pulled for the shore— There were so many matters that so many meant him for.

Now, of all his mentors only one, of course, could win.

Maybe you may wonder whom he followed of his kin?

Well, he met a maiden, as will frequently occur,

And the maid at once decided that the boy was meant for her.

IS IT BYRD?

BYRD differs not at all from Bird in the matter of derivation and the matter is usually settled by saying that the name is from the commonly accepted meaning of bird, and was probably first used as a surname as a nickname. The original bearers of the name, in other words, doubtless possessed some birdlike qualities that made the name seem appropriate.

But there really seems to be more to it than this. In early times, byrd or bird meant only a young bird, while fowl was the word used for birds in general. In the Bible fowl is used in this way, as "the fowls of the air." Later for a time bird was used to indicate the young of other living things and sometimes meant children.

In this country the name Byrd has especial significance because it was borne by the founder of Richmond, Va. This was William Byrd who was born in western Virginia in 1674. His father was William Byrd, the colonist, who had come to Virginia a few months before the birth of his son and namesake.

William Byrd, second, was a man of great benevolence and showed the greatest kindness to the colonists who settled on his land. At one time he received 300 destitute French-Huguenots on his place and made it possible for them to establish themselves in their new home. William Byrd was a man of literary taste and had a library of 3,500 volumes, which was the largest library at the time in the colonies. William Byrd's wife was a daughter of Col. Dan Parke, an aide de camp of Marlborough at Blenheim, and sent as a messenger to Queen Anne to bear the tidings of the victory of Blenheim. By this wife William Byrd had two daughters, and by his second wife, Marlon, daughter of Thomas Taylor, he had a son, known as Col. William Byrd, from whom all of the name and family are descended. COMEDY — PATHE NEWS —

LAST PAGE EDITORIAL.

Pay—or Don't Go!

We commend this motto to that class of young folks, especially, who have Million Dollar ideas and Five Dollar Cash balances. Hi-falutin pleasures and show-off demonstrations cost real money, on the part of somebody, and unless those who indulge in them have the cash, or know where they will earn it and have it ready by pay day, they should honestly "not go," rather than dishonestly go, and "not pay."

There are many—not in the young folks class—who absolutely squander money, or "go" on credit, who ought to be put into prison for theft; for many in this class often become criminals in fact by becoming thieves under the law, in order to get the wherewithal to carry on their indulgences, without honest means of pay. Among incentives for crime, the need for money wasted in gambling, or for expensive habits, looms up large.

Whoever is careless about financial contracts, or who ignores cost, or plans a larger outlay than income warrants, is not only dishonest, but is not to be depended on for moral rectitude in any other direction, because the inclination leading to the one, is as likely to lead to any other act that is the outgrowth of weak moral fibre—evidence of shallowness of character, and that dependability that marks the honorable man or woman.

View it from any right angle, and the spend-thrift must class-in with moral degenerates, no matter how loftily one may profess to be above the sordid side of calculating such a mere aggravating outcome as the making of both ends meet. We find people sometimes, who pretend to have fine scorn for counting up financial problems, and to consider it somebody else's job to have the honor of paying their contracts, without worrying them, as the contractors.

And these same people liken those who do care for their character to "tight wads." Reduced down to correct standards, "tight wads" of this class are as far above the spenders in honesty and reliability as are the stars above toadstools. Don't go, if you can't go with a clear conscience, and return with a clean slate of obligations met.

If you can't go on a vacation and come back home able to meet your tax bill, and lay in your winter's supply of coal—assuming that other financial obligations have already been met—don't go. Splurging, at somebody else's expense is dishonorable, and your debtors think just that way about it, even if they don't always have the courage to tell you so.
