COOLIDGE SPEAKS ABOUT FARMING

A Masterly Presentation of General

President Coolidge, on Monday, delivered an address in Chicago, be-fore the American Farm Bureau Federation that was widely broadcast throughout the country by radio. It was very much in the Coolidge style—a calm presentation of the general situation of the great industry, from the standpoint of one who has access to the wide view point. It was encouraging, conservative and hopeful and carried the conviction that the administration is greatly concerned with the present conditions, as well as with the future outlook. Some of his statements

The tariff must be maintained to protect them from low-wage foreign

President Coolidge declared that while he will do everything within the power of the Government to assist the farmers, he will have none of Government price fixing or direct subsidies or Government purchase of surplus farm products as provided in the McNary-Haugen bill.

"Various suggestions of artificial relief have been made. One of the methods by which this has been sought was to have corporations or-ganized through which the Government would directly or indirectly fix prices or engage in buying and sell-

"This would be a dangerous un-dertaking, and as the emergency is not so acute, it seems at present to have lost much of its support.

President Coolidge found in his Chicago audience a warm response to his declarations that the farmers want encouragement and assistance from the Government, but nothing in the way of direct subsidies which might compromise their economic and political independence. Those statements drew the warmest applause from the 3000 people, mostly men, who heard him.

"Whatever other obstacles the American people have had to meet and overcome, of every station in life they have never permitted themselves to be hampered by a condition of de-

Deafness Reported Cured by "Static."

A case is reported from Brooklyn, Anne Arundel county, this state, of a cure of deafness by "static" applied by the ear receivers of a radio set. Joseph Clyde Tennison, of St. Mary's county, was visiting his son, in Brooklyn, on Saturday last and he and several of the family were enjoying radio reception through head-pieces. A sudden crash of "static" caused the others to remove the head-pieces very quickly, but the elder Tennison kept his on, and later when he removed them, claimed that he could hear almost as good as ever, after being almost totally deaf for twenty years.

The case is given as reported in the Baltimore American. If fully true, it may offer a valuable new use for radio. Should "like cure like" then we are ready to believe in the story, as we believe the use of ear-receivers by a person of normal hearing, might easily cause deafness, especially when "static" is coming in strong. To sensitive ears, it is head-splitting, through the phones.

Maryland Cook Books.

We again have on sale a supply of "Choice Maryland Cookery," edition, as published by the Ladies of St. Paul Lutheran Church, Uniontown. Copies can be had at this office, at 25c per copy, or 30c when sent by mail. We are handling these books "on sale" as a matter of accommodation, and without profit, and have recently had calls for the book that could not then be supplied. It usually has increased sale, "just before Christmas."

Straight roads that offer an opportunity for speeding, have been demonstrated, on careful investigation. LETTER FROM DETROIT.

Interesting Impressions from Our Former Co-worker.

(Our friend John J. Reid has kindly sent us for publication a lengthy article on some people he has met in Detroit, which our readers will find entertaining. As it is too lengthy for one article we will run it in two or more instalments.—Ed).

Many times I have heard it remarked, "It takes all kinds of peo-ple to make a world." In a small town like Taneytown, this remark is always applied to the characteristics of the people of the vicinity. if we pause long enough to think of these people, we find the saying is very true. In a wider sense, we find it true in a large city like Detroit. From every standpoint, the people are at least a little different in their beliefs and actions, according to the country they originally came from, and their usual environment.

A big factory is a little world in itself. As in the city at large, you will find here all classes; colors and creeds-and in a good many cases,no creed at all. The learned and the ignorant, white and the different races of mankind, all are here. I know educated men who are working at the bench, or at a machine, while there are others who have just a common education who occupy high positions. All phases of human nature are here, the arrogant, blustery man, who has no consideration for others who may be working under him—and you can see this clearly if you watch the way, a white foreman originally from the South, will treat the colored truckers and sweepers under him—agnostics and atheists, earnest faithful Christians, all shades of politicians, from soap box orators to those who are really high in councils of their party. As you doubtless know, the large factories are the hot beds of Bolshevism, and I venture to say that 90 percent of the radical vote, last Fall, came from this source.

I do not pretend to be able to tell you all about these different classes of people, although I feel that I am acquainted with at least one of each class. My object in writing this article is to give to your readers a description of some of the people I have met since coming to Detroit, and to relate the incidents that are happening, and remarks that are made by those with whom I have been working, or associating since I came to Detroit, not in order to ridicule them, but to simply relate these stories, etc, hoping that your readers will catch the humor in them, and enjoy them as much as I did.

When I went to work for the Timkin Detroit Axle Co., eight years ago, naturally the only man I knew was the foreman who gave me the job, and whom I had met while he and his family were on a trip East. He was very kind to me, and overlooking my ignorance of the new kind of work, tried to help me all he could, and put me to work with a Swede, who initiated me into the—to me—mysteries of axle inspection. After working with him a few days, I changed to an Englishman, and between the two I came to the conclusion that the language I spoke was a new one. I could no derstand the Swede, but after trying the Englishman for a few days, I asked to be put back with the Swede, as I could understand him better than I could the Englishman.

I remember that the only foreigners we had around Taneytown, when I lived there, was a German who lived at Wm. Flickinger's, and for a short time, the Russian Jew, junk dealer, both of whom were naturalized. Out here we have about all the nations of the earth represented, and I have worked with men representing the majority of these nationalities. At one time, we had in our department, a dozen Serbs, a Jew, two Scotchmen, some Englishmen an Irishman or two, a Norwegian, a Dane, a German, some Polacks, Belgians, Austrians, a Fillipino, and maybe some nationalities I do not remember.

You could tell the Serbs and Italians by the sense of smell, as they are all inveterate garlic eaters. It used to amuse me to see our bunch of Serbs eat their midday lunch. They would find seats in a circle, pull out a hunk of rye bread and some garlic, and after looking at and listening to them a while, you would wonder how in the world they could swallow anything, as all their voices would be going at once, and it sounded more like a flock of hens than anything

All the Foreigners that I have become acquainted with are good workers. And no American is as keen after the almighty-dollar as they are. One of the Serbs, named Steve Secunda, a big fellow, weighing over 300, who has since returned to Serbia, worked with an Irishman named Mike Moran. Steve was the more experienced man of the two, and kept the books of the firm of Secunda and Maron—that is he turned in the piece work cards for both of them. It was just after the war, and wages were at their peak, and these two would make together, every day, $25.00, which they should have divided equally. But Steve took $18.00 and left Mike have $7.00, which looked like a good day's wages, if you did not stop to think of what the other fellow was getting.

It was my duty to "O. K." the cards before they went into the time office, and of course, knowing how the money was intended to be divided, I caught on to the inequality of the division. I told Mike about it, but it took all the persuasion that his brother, (who was an assistant foreman) and myself, had, to convince him that to be more dangerous than curved anything was wrong "$7.00 is good money," was all he would say. But

YEAR'S RACING BREAKS RECORD.

State will get about $800,000 from Legalized Gambling.

According to the Baltimore News, the present year's racing breaks the record. The sum placed in bets was approximately at $54,200,000, or $100,000 more than in 1921, the other high mark. Of the profits of this year, the state will get about $800,-

The state receives $8000. a day for each of the 92 days racing, and 15 percent of the net profits of the racing commission. During the past five years, approximately $285,-500,000 has been bet on the races.

In these figures, we have the arguments both for and against, legalized racing. Everybody admits that it is an immense gambling scheme, and that the state is a partner in it. Perhaps if it was a little affair, resulting in just "common" gambling with a few thousands a year, profit the a few thousands a year profit, the state would consider it wrong, and stop it; but when there is a chance to get $800,000 a year out of it, the state finds excuses for it—and takes its share of the loot.

The bets of $54,200,000 this year, means that somebody won this much, and somebody lost the same sum. The state is not concerned about this. It is not concerned about resulting defaulters, nor losses to those who do not commit thefts to cover their losses, nor the hundreds of other wrong features connected with race track gambling. It simply "takes the money" and no doubt considers it "good business."

And, by the way, in the some issue of The News was the story of Leo J. Ferrell, clerk in the Mercantile Bank, of Baltimore, who confessed to stealing some $55,000 or more from the Bank, all of which was lost at the races. He commenced stealing small sums, then larger ones, sometimes betting on "tips." but nearly always lost. It was the old, old story of gambling. Fortunately, in this case the bank will be the only loser, financially; but in view of such cases, how can legislators possibly vote to continue race-track gambling? The honest ones can not, and the future must tell the story.

Shop and Mail Early.

The Postoffice Department is now in the midst of its shop early, mail early campaign. All the officials of the department, starting with Postmaster General New, are determined that the thousands of letter carriers and clerks employed by Uncle Sam are entitled and are going to have the very mer-riest and happiest Christmas day this the absolute necessity for shopping and mailing early and often. Only through the heartiest and most nation-wide co-operation on the part of the general public will the letter carrier and postal clerk be permitted to enjoy Christmas day with his family and his friends as all other American citizens will be doing.

Attention of the public is called to the fact that if you leave your Christmas shopping until the last minute vou get what other people have left. There is no selection of gifts from which to make your purchases.

And it is likewise true that if you but off your mailing until the very last minute, the congestion that al-ways takes place at Christmas time will be bound to delay the prompt delivery of your gifts on the day intended by the sender.

To insure that your remembrance will be in the hands of your friends make your purchases early and turn them over to the employees of the postal service not later than Dec. By doing so you will be happy and those for whom they are intended will have nothing to interfere with their happiness and jov at yule-

He could hardly speak or understand English, and was ignorant in many ways, but his ability to earn and keep money was away above the average, as indeed is the case with nearly all low class foreigners.

DR. CRONK DIES SUDDENLY. One of the Best Known Physicians in Carroll County.

Dr. Edwin C. Cronk, of Winfield, a widely known physician of this county, died suddenly on Thursday morning along the roadside, two miles from home, near Dorsey's crossroads. He had stepped out of his automobile and called to a man to fix a punctured tire, and while watching the man at work, became ill, sat down by the roadside and died. He was on his way to see a patient, after which he intended to go to Westminster to attend the meeting of the County Medical Association. He was a hard-working physician in large country practice, and stood high in the profession. He had been practicing about 40 years, and was between 65 and 70 years of age.

Soap and Sunshine.

Two things that are within the reach of everybody-sunshine and soap, liberally mixed with hot water, are effective disinfectants of the articles that have been used by a person suffering from an infectious disease. This applies to dishes, utensils, bedding, clothing, and other personal articles, as well as to the walls and floors of the room he has occu-pied. This is the way Dr. Riley, Chief of the Bureau of Communicable diseases, of the State Department of Health summed up the requirements of the Department, in regard to disinfection after a case of communicable disease.

"The State Law mentions two kinds of disinfection," he continued, 'concurrent and terminal.' By concurrent, we mean the sort of disinfection that is carried on continuousy during the course of the disease. For instance, a person who has a common cold, or an uncommon one, an acute case of influenza, sore throat, diphtheria, pneumonia, tuberculosis, scarlet fever, measles, whooping cough, infantile paralysis—any one of the diseases that is accompanied by discharges from the throat or nose is urged to use either paper hand-kerchiefs that can be destroyed by burning, or to catch the discharges in handkerchiefs made of cheese cloth, or other sofe cloth, that can either be destroyed by burning, or can be disinfected, or sterilized by boiling hot water.

"When a doctor or health officer tells the person who is caring the one who has a communicable disease, that the dishes used by a t. b. must be boiled after each meal; that the child who has scarlet fever or diphtheria or just an ordinary sore throat, must have his own towel and washcloth; that such things must be kept separate from the bed linen and towels of the rest of the family, and must be boiled before laundering, with plenty of hot water and strong soap, he is simply advising the protective vigilance that must be applied year in their history.

With this end in view, the Postmaster General is urging on every man, woman and child in the United States the absolute necessity for shorping. sterilization of all discharges before they are disposed of, in cases of typhoid, and other diseases of the digestive tract.

"Terminal disinfection is the general cleansing and sterilization room and bedding, and personal belongings that takes place after a patient is up and out-or released from quarantine, if he has had one of the communicable diseases, for which isolation is required. And nothing better has been discovered so far, than scrubbing the walls and floor with boiling water and soap, sterilizing the sheets, and blankets and other covers by boiling, and by letting in plenty of sunlight and fresh air."

Prepare Car for Cold Weather.

Prepare the car now against the coming of cold weather and be protected against any sudden drops in temperature, is the text of the warning broadcast by the Ford Motor Company to Ford car drivers in cold climates. To eliminate as far as possible the annoyances of winter driving, the service department of company has outlined a set of simple precautions against freezing. They are in brief: Add anti-freeze solution to radiator. Be discreet in use of choke. Conserve battery current. Drivers are cautioned against patent solutions for radiators of unknown formulas. The safest to use is denatured, or wood alcohol. The amount of alcohol necessary to prevent freezing is also given in a table which includes all winter temperatures.

Alcohol. Water 80% Freezing point 13 above 0 30% 70% 3 above 0 60% 20 below 0 Evaporation of the alcohol after the engine is warmed up may be considerably retarded by the addition of a small amount of glycerine equal to, about 10% of the total capacity of the

Since present day gasoline does not vaporize readily in cold weather, starting necessitates use of the choke. Discretion should be used, however, because of the fact that the raw fuel sucked into the combustion chamber condenses and passes the piston rings into the crankcase, making for oil dilution. Protect radiator with blanket, or cover, to minimize delay in the 'warming up."

CONGRESS OPENS LONG SESSION

Interest Centres on Tax Reduction and Republican Line-up.

Congress met in regular session on Monday, and likely to continue until early summer. Organization of the House was effected by the election of Longworth, Ohio, as speaker, the Republican "insurgents," voting against him but still leaving the "regulars" a comfortable majority. The House at once plunged into business, without any delay.

The Senate proceeded in its own slow way, and has held a number of secret cancuses said to involve the question of "regularity," as it applies to La Follette, and others.

The President sent his message to Congress, instead of reading it in person. It was largely a statistical message, calling attention to conditions of the various departments and their needs, and was largely free from personal requests, placing matters up to Congress, yet giving room for much under the surface thought.

It is not believed that the "fire-works" will be started until after the Christmas recess, but that the session will be full of thrills and fervid oratory, nobody doubts. It is likely to be a front page, big headline, session, when it gets to going Ducks, Geese and Turkeys.

Ducks, geese and turkeys are unknown on many farms in central Maryland, yet, there are many farms over the country where ducks, geese and turkeys are the source of considerable income. Ducks are the meaty birds of poultry. They are hardy and with the exception of picking are easy to handle. A duck, if well cared for weighs five pounds at the end of ten weeks. It takes a chicken twice as long to grow to this size. Ducks are good egg producers. The eggs are larger than hen eggs. Pekin and Indian Runner are the popular breeds.

A few geese may be grown each year, almost without expense. They are the easiest of all poultry to handle. "A goslin hatched means a goose for market," is an oldy saying which holds true. They grow best where there is good pasture and plenty of fresh water. The breeds common on American farms are Embden and Toulouse.

Turkeys are a great aid in keeping grasshoppers under control. They require little feed and little investment in the way of buildings. Their need of a wide, free range, makes it somewhat difficult to grow them thickly settled countries. Grown tur-keys are extremely hardy but young poults need considerable care. Bronze and White Holland breeds are the most popular .- Tri-County Bul-

Just Before Christmas.

A lot has been said about "Just before Christmas," but we do not recall that anybody has explained why everything seems to get so fussedup, and everybody is so busy and so much in a hurry at this time, and then why the said "everything" gets correspondingly flat and dull, as soon as Christmas is over?

One would think that a new year ought to go in with some spryness, but the "noise" of the event is largely limited to the "shooting of New Year" and to the noise-making that is purely of a trivial character. There is nothing about the entry of New Year's Day, or the new month of the new year, that anything like matches the month preceding it.

If we were busy preparing for Christmas, that would be an easy explanation; but, everybody knows that we seem to be too busy to get busy for the great day. We are so busy that we put off Christmas preparations until the last week-or even later-before the day comes.

Just when we ought to be getting into holiday trim, we are doing about everything else. We seem to be in a rush to get everything done up, before the new year comes, as though that meant a lazy time for us. Of course, working out a sort of schedule, is all right; but, perhaps if we had started the year a little more briskly, and kept fully up to schedule, we would not have so much rush and confusion at the end of the

Anyway, there is no good reason why December should be so lively, and January so slow. If it was because certain farm work pushes, and we must get ready for the winter months of January and February, that would be a good explanation; but folks who have nothing to do with farming, but whose work is about the same, one month as another get into the same "just before Christsplutter-and, we wonder Prohibition Knocking.

It seems to us that both the Anti-Saloon League and the anti-18th. Amendment folks, are making a lot of misleading fuss over the alleged non-enforcement of prohibition. The former are expecting too much to be done in a few years, and the latter are simply lying about what has been done; and both, directly or indirectly, are misrepresenting actual results.

The habits and appetites, the hereditary taints—the actual diseases that have grown in humanity for hundreds of years can not be eliminated by law, or even an amendment to the Constitution of the United i truth is at once the most useful and States, within a few years.

If it requires fifty years to bring about generally enforced prohibition, the attempt will be a success; and even then there will be "moonshining" and "bootlegging," as there always was when liquors were legally sold.

We have since the formation of government, had laws practically prohibiting murder, robbery, arson, and a long list of crimes. By common consent, these laws are necessary and desirable; but crimes are still committed, and always will be, and nobody rushes into print with statements that such laws are a failure, nor that the full force of government is not back of efforts toward their enforcement.

We seem to forget, at times, that the people of this country-which largely means the government of the country-have other things to do besides acting as police, and pursuing law-breakers. We must all sleep, for instance, during which time marauders are busy; we must engage in business, take time for our devotions to God and indulge in relaxation. All people, and all of their time, can not be devoted to running

The Invitation to "Bob," Jr.

The Republican hold on the Senate is so scant that it wobbles, and this knowledge. fact is apt to cause some tactics that are as difficult for the stand-by's to play, as they are distasteful for them to take. The reinstatement—or the offer of it—to the ranks of the regulars in the Senate, made to La Follette, Jr., is an instance of this sort. The probability is that it will not make Bob Jr., a "regular" any more than was his fighting father; in which doors again, with nothing lost.

The fact is, the big end—the body | of the party can not afford to let the tail do the wagging, no matter how badly the body needs the tail; therefore, the glad-hand is well enough to extend, invitingly, but not prove? Jay E. House, one of the regular contributors to the Philadelphia Public Ledger, puts it this way;

"Two things continually amaze us. One is the willingness of so many persons to accept whatever they read | Co. or hear without stopping to think whether it makes sense or conforms to their own observation and experi- List of Requisites ence. Another is the number of benighted souls who cling to the longsince exploded theory that cigarettesmoking is in some way inimical to health and good conduct. Cigarettesmoking has been a very general but we are now told that success is practice for thirty or forty years. It a science as truly as the science of grows by leaps and bounds. A generation of boys who smoked cigarettes has come through manhood to middle age. They have built nests and reared young. If the old theory about cigarettes were correct, we should be a nation of mental and physical defectives. Instead, we probably never were so mentally and physically virile nor so healthful as we are today. It seems incredible that with this evidence at every man's command, it should be necessary to set it down in cold print.

We may say, for the purpose of making the discussion entirely impersonal that we do not smoke the darned things and never did. Our objection to them is that they lack authority. We're not interested in cigarettes. But we're tremendously interested in truth. Finding the fascinating occupation in the world. We do concede one thing: Both the ethics and the art of smoking are | play, | broad-mindedness, | courage, declining. It has reached the point at which the man who smokes cigars is constantly embarrassed by his predilection for them. He is a little looked down upon. Society does not understand his curious idiosyncrasy. We never stir from home without a pocketful of cigars. We know it will not occur to our host to provide them and that we shall be upon our own resources. And, at that, we are reluctant to light one in company. We don't mind public opinion, but we do hate to have people think we are queer."

Needed for Success

It is possible to codify the qualities that surely lead to success. Success has often been termed luck, chance, hard work, effort, application, etc., health or the science of natural phenomena. And in line with this trend of modern thought to reduce success to certain rules fifty of the cardinal principles or laws are tabulated, obedience to which, it is held, are as necessary to attain any degree of success in life as it is for us to obey the laws of nature to keep our bodies healthy.

These fifty cardinal principles are as follows: Self-control, finding one's self. morality, health, will power, love or charity, knowledge of human nature, perseverance, ambition, development of inward richness and self-enjoyment, understanding, co-operation, optimism, self-reliance, rationality, common sense, honesty, loyalty, dependability, sincerity, love of the beautiful, naturalness, patience, right attitude toward life and work, altruism, industriousness, reverence for God and elders, ability to see ahead, contentment with nothing short of the best, economy, ability to think clearly and speak forcefully, discretion, ability to execute plans, fair imagination, system, initiative, thoroughness, punctuality, personality, training, self-inventory, memory accuracy, truth to one's self, courtesy, determination.

No attempt is made to place these in the order of their relative importance with probably the exception of the first one, self-control.

LAYING HENS NEED PROTEIN IN RATION

Many farm flocks get little or no protein in the winter and as a result are overfat and make a poor production. Farm hens are often given a whole carcass to feed on one month and no meat the next. As a result they are thrown out of condition and often are poisoned by spoiled meat. There are three ways in which animal protein can be secured. A steady supply is essential. Rabbits or dead farm animals, when available, can be cooked and ground or chopped up, dried and put in a box where hens can eat when they want. Skim milk or buttermilk can be put to no more profitable use on the farm than in producing winter eggs. Where a box of meat or a supply of milk are available all of the time, it may not be necessary to put meat scraps in the mash, but if there is a shortage of these it will pay to buy meat scraps.

Table scraps should be fed as a supplement to the ration at noon. Feed grain morning and night in the litter. In very cold weather the scraps may be fed warm in the morning and grain at ten o'clock.

It is advisable to use home-grown grains as much as possible. On the dry lands where the fibrous grains are largely grown, such as oats, barley, cane and millet, it is advisable to buy either wheat or corn. If corn, use it whole instead of cracked. The small grains should be fed in the morning and the corn at night.

Where there are quantities of grain strewn about the farm yard it is good practice to feed a few table scraps in the morning, keep the hens shut up with the dry mash until noon, and let them run to the grain in the afternoon. Make sure there is fresh water to the henhouse in the morning.-O. C. Krum, Extension Service-Colorado Agricultural College.

Electric Lights Useful

in Production of Eggs

Electric lights have been successfully used for years in hen houses to prolong the hen's working day and to increase the egg yield. A further application of electricity to the egg industry has recently been developed with extraordinary results, according to reports of the British Illuminating Engineering society.

Two groups of 12 pullets each, of the same age and breeding, were segregated for 16 weeks. During this time they were all fed on identical rations. The first flock was kept under ordinary conditions and produced 124 eggs during the test period. The second flock was treated for 10 minutes daily with ultra-violet rays and produced 497 eggs.

At the end of the 16 weeks conditions were reversed, whereupon the in the form of a rod through a circular output of the first group, which began to receive the violet-ray treatment, increased rapidly, and that of the second flock, no longer receiving it, decreased. At the end of the second 16-week period the egg production of the two groups had been approximately reversed. The same results were observed in similar tests at the Wisconsin experiment station.

Experiments in Wisconsin also indicate that the ultra-violet rays may have a profound effect in stimulating the growth of young chicks.

When Pullet Is Laying

Whether a pullet has started laying or not is easily learned by merely examining the distance between the lay bones. If these are spread so that three fingers may be placed between them, it may safely be assumed that she has commenced laying. Early layers produce the most eggs while the tardiest ones are the slackers even after commencing. By going through the flock of pullets after most of them have begun laying, the few that show no signs of productivity may be mar-that you can find. Have plenty of it in the poultry house.

Select your best, healthiest cocks and mate them with equally good early hatched pullets and one-year-old

The importance of vigor in the poultry flock cannot be overstressed. This problem of obtaining and maintaining vigor is one of paramount importance, because we are expecting more of the hen than of any other fowl or animal on the farm.

Thin, scrawny turkeys are a poor advertisement, and bring little profit. Of course the turkeys will have grit and charcoal as usual.

Hens with baggy abdomens may continue to lay heavily for a time, but they cannot hope to continue for any great length of time.

Wedge-shaped hens with the heavy end of the wedge at the front end lack room to digest much food and therefore will not be profitable lay-

Queer Mock Marriage Ceremonies in India

There is a wonderful variety in the marriage customs in different parts of

In addition to the important ceremonies which are binding there are mock ceremonies. One of the most interesting is a custom prevailing in the south, which takes place on the first of the ceremonial days.

Before the day all arrangements for the couple have, of course, been made, but there is a mock ceremony of sending out the young man to find a suitable bride. Before marriage he is supposed to make a journey to Kasi, the modern Benares, and having armed himself with the books of the student, etc., he sets out on his long journey. But on his way he comes across a man who, after entering into conversation with him, informs him that he has a lovely daughter who would make a suitable wife.

After various discussions on the subject the arrangements are made and the youth returns to inform his parents of the proposals, after which the final decision is taken. This ceremony is still carried out, and it provides a splendid opportunity for teasing the young man.

There is an instruction in the laws of Manu which he is supposed to keep in mind in selecting his bride: "Let him not marry a girl with reddish hair, nor any deformed limb, nor one troubled with habitual sickness, nor one either with no hair or with too much, nor one immoderately talkative, nor one with inflamed eyes. Let him choose for a wife a girl whose form has no defect, who has an agreeable name, who walks gracefully, like a phenicopteros, or like a young elephant, whose hair and teeth are moderate in size, whose body has exquisite softness."

Famous Landmark in Ancient English City

The town of Boston in Lincolnshire, from which Boston, Mass., takes its name, is remarkable for its imposing church tower which, rising to a height of two hundred and seventy feet, forms a landmark discernible for many miles around. The tower is locally known as "Boston Stump," and was undoubtedly intended as a guide for travelers both by land and sea. It is surmounted by a beautiful octagonal lantern tower, completed in 1460. History tells us that in 654 Saint Botolph, from whose name the word Boston is derived, built a monastery in "a wilderness unfrequented by men," named Icanhoe, and that out of this wilderness arose St. Botolph's town, or Boston. Boston is surrounded by fen country, and is situated five miles from the sea, to which it is connected by a waterway known as the Haven.

Manufacturing Crayons

Crayons are made chiefly from chalk. The coloring matter is mixed in with the aid of water and is pulverized by means of triple rollers. This is dried to a certain consistency and fed into a machine which expels it opening, the diameter of which equals that of a pastel or crayon. Cut requisite length, the crayons are set to dry on trays which are stacked in racks on steam-heated shelves. The process of making colors in the "cake" form differs from that employed for crayons. After being mixed and ground, the mass of color is carried to the drying rooms in pans. It is left in chambers of varying degrees of heat until the water has been evaporated, when the resulting dough is ready for kneading. The mixture is then fed through a machine, emerging in the form of a strip, pressed to about an eighth of an inch thick, which is cut into "cakes."-Family Herald.

Flowery Advertising

From an auto ad: It is not a mechanism; it is an inspiration. You enter an enchanted world, carried steadily onward by a force as irresistible as time. There is no semblance of harshness-only the gentle undulations of its springs to stimulate a wayward fancy. It suggests a Venetian gondola, languidly drifting on halcyon seas, or a placid stream winding its silvery way through sylvan glens. The symphony of it all lulls one into serene forgetfulness. Life acquires new phases and there ensues a clearer conception of the sublimity of nature. Verily it was designed for the immortals.-Boston Transcript.

Did Seem Hard Job

It was all on account of the labels. Doctor Glass had to send a box of pills to a patient, while there were half a dozen live chickens to be delivered to one of his friends.

The labels got mixed and the messenger delivered the pills to the doctor's friend.

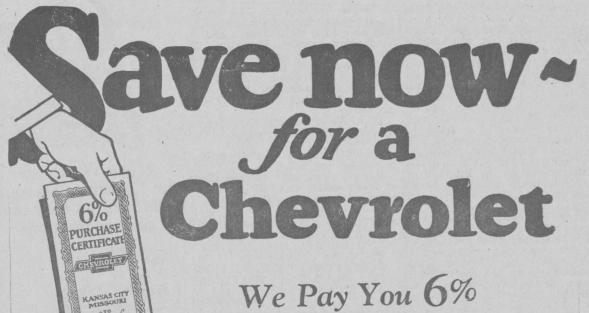

So far not much harm had been done: but the patient was pained on receiving a hamper of live fowls and an envelope containing the following instructions: "Two of these to be swallowed every half hour in water."

VOLSTEAD LAW IS BOON TO KANAKA

Sudden Demand for Vanilla Causes Prosperity.

Honolulu.-Prohibition in America has brought untold and unaccustomed wealth to the natives of the French mandated island of Bora Bora through an increase in the demand for and price of vanilla, which developed with the operation of the Volstead act in the United States.

Authority for the statement is Armstrong Sperry, a New York artist, who recently returned from the south seas, He added that, paradoxically as it may seem, the new prosperity has resulted in bankruptcy for more than one native, who hitherto had been comfortably settled in life, and the mortgage of much of the island property to Chinese merchants.

"Formerly vanilla sold at three francs a pound," said Sperry, "but now it is quoted at 75 francs. This rise is the cause of the new state of affairs and the raising of vanilla is the one industry-if it may be called that-of Bora Bora. The people simply plant it in a shady spot and wait for it to mature. It requires practically no

With the increased incomes, said Sperry, the tiny interisland copra steamers began to bring strange and unprecedented cargoes. Occasionally there was an automobile, sewing machine, bicycle, phonographs, cases of champagne and other liquors and bar-rels of Taihitian rum. When he left there were six automobiles in Bora Bora, which has only ten miles of good

"There had been other machines," the artist explained, "but a number of them had been abandoned. As soon as the gasoline gives out, or anything goes wrong, the automobile is left to rust away. Some are even left on the beach with the waves washing over them. But automobiling is great fun while it lasts.'

The vanilla market is in San Francisco. The natives send their beans to Papeete, whence they go to the mainland once a month.

The Chinese are the island merchants. They buy the beans from the natives, who will mortgage all they own on the chance of a good crop. Should the crop turn out to be a poor one, the Chinese get the land.

There are two motion picture theaters on the island, which show ancient movies of the West.

to Prevent Education Mexico City. — A dramatic story comes from Huichel, Indian county, in the state of Jalisco.

Antonio Rosea Robles, Huichel Indian, became inspired with the idea of driving illiteracy out of the Huichel country. He went to school at Guadlajara, where he studied primary education. Returning to the Huichel country, he began teaching children. The Huichel authorities warned him to stop. He refused. He was arrested and taken before a council of Huichel leaders, condemned to death as a traitor to the customs of the tribe, taken outside the village and shot, where his corpse was found by the Mexican authorities the following morning. The Huichels have always fought against civ-

GEORGE H. BIRNIE. who died December 1st., 1925.

It is with sorrow and regret, we announce the death of one of our Directors, George H. Birnie, who was also the Treasurer of our Company.

Mr. Birnie was one of the organizers of our Company, a director and treasurer since its organization, and lived to see it grow from a small beginning to its present prosperous condition.

He was always actively interested in all matters that came before the Board, and eager for the prosperity of the Company. Resolved, That our Company extend its sympathies to the bereaved family, in this their time of sorrow. That a copy of this tribute be sent the family, and also published in the Carroll Record.

DIED.

Mrs. Rose Bankard, wife of Mr. Monroe Bankard, died at her home near Westminster, Wednesday eve-Forney, of Taneytown, and lived until recent years near Taneytown.

Funeral services will be held on Saturday morning, at the home, followed by further services and inter-ment at Taneytown Lutheran Church, in charge of Rev. R. S. Patterson and by the Session of Taneytown Presbyterian Church.

With a sense of humility and submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, we reverently bow under the great sorrow that has befallen us in the calling away of our brother, George H. Birnie.

We realize not only as a session we suffer a great loss, but that the congregagation shares our sorrow. For almost thirty-five years he served faithfully as a ruling Elder, always loyally giving his efforts and influence not only for building up this Church, but also for the advancement of God's Kingdom everywhere.

We will miss his advice in our deliberations, but his memory will long be with us in our efforts wisely to conduct the affairs of the church he loved so well. We extend to his family our sincere sympathy and commend them for consolation to the love and care of our dear Heavenly Father, whose wisdom is beyond question and alone can give comfort.

We direct that this memorial be included in the Sessional Records.

By Order of the Session.

ROBT. S. McKINNEY, Clerk.
Taneytown, Md., Dec. 6, 1925.

Whereas, George H. Birnie devoted him

whereas, George H. Birnie devoted himself unsparingly to the development of the Trust Company which bears his name and the growth of which in its quarter-century of existence is the measure of his zeal and interest; and

Whereas, he was an invaluable citizen, ever in the vanguard of civic progress;

Then be it Resolved, That in his death this community has suffered an abiding loss; that the organizations with which he was associated have been bereft of a wise counsellor and an unwearying coadjutor; and that we, his colleagues on the Board of Directors of the Birnie Trust Company, have sustained a deep and lasting sorrow; and be it further

Resolved, That, while mourning his loss and extending our profound sympathy to his bereaved family, we will endeavor to emulate those qualities for which he was conspicuous; and, be it further

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this Board; that a conv of them be published in the Carroll Record; and that a copy of them be sent to the family.

A MAGIC BILLIARD BALL

By EDMUND S. MIDDLETON

(© by Short Story Pub. Co.)

N THE lull of an August afternoon Shaman Tuloc sat within the shaded doorway of his little shop, contemplatively smoking. From time to time a thin brown hand slowly stroked his long gray beard, while his dark, melancholy eyes looked far away into the distance

Presently a shadow darkened the doorway, as a well-dressed stranger halted uncertainly and gazed curiously within. The old merchant rose courteously and with a wave of his hand extended a silent invitation to enter. Seeing that the stranger still hesitated, Shaman said in a tone devoid of eagerness, "Would the gentleman care to step in? It is not necessary to buy.

An air of distinction in the old man's bearing, scarcely expected in such surroundings, excited the stranger's interest, and with an appreciative, "Thank you, if you don't mind," he entered.

The merchant noted the young man's eyes as they swept over his wares with half-observant gaze, and saw that his face wore the unsatisfied expression of one who seeks something greatly desired.

"It is not merchandise the gentleman seeks today," said Shaman with kindly interest, continuing to search the other's face with his far-seeing

"Are you a fortune-teller?" asked the stranger eagerly.

"Not in the ordinary sense, my son," answered the aged merchant solemnly, "but much of the wisdom of the East is mine, and I have known the hearts of many men."

"If you help me," burst impulsively from the other's lips, "you may name your own price."

Shaman with dignity, apparently unmoved by these glittering promises.

"My name is Philip Arden," began the young man in quick, excited tones, "and I am what people call rich. If my lot had been different, with my own way to make, I should doubtless have become a gambler, as the gaming instinct is strong within me. At times | er, the best type of a gentleman play-I am consumed with a perfect fever and skill."

"Why do you tell this to me?" demanded the old man.

"You shall see," answered Arden, meeting his glance fairly. "Being wealthy, the gambler's love of gain does not appeal to me. Instead, I have devoted myself to games of skill, balk line, one shot in. Without effort, playing as an amateur with men of my own class. After making a fad of one game after another, I have settled upon billiards."

the back of the shop, a sudden trem- what he would, Arden could not shake bling of swaying curtains, and a quick- off his opponent. He answered run ke a listener ly caught breath besp in those regions. Shaman Tuloc never turned his head, although he heard. Arden was too absorbed in his story to notice. One look at those curtains would have disclosed a pair of peering eyes that shone like midnight.

"Go on," said the merchant, calmly stroking his beard, "There is yet something to tell."

"No lover could have been more devoted to his mistress than I to my favorite game. I wooed her early and late, playing my way up through the ranks at the club, until last spring I defeated the strongest men and was hailed club champion. But alas! my joy was short lived."

"Your hand lost its cunning?" suggested Shaman Tuloc. "No, not so. A more subtle hand than mine entered the lists," explained Arden with a touch of bitterness in his tone. "While my laurels were yet fresh, a stranger joined the club, a tall, slender man, with sallow skin and coal-black hair, which parted over a narrow, contracted forehead. His black, beady eyes were set close together over a long hooked nose, and his thin lips were shaded by a scanty black moustache. They say that those ratty weasel-like eyes could look into the shining depths of any jewel and rightly prize its worth. Enough for me that he could play billiards like a fiend. His long slender hands controlled the balls like a magician. He defeated me once, twice, thrice—each time worse than before-in a word, ignominiously. Let me vanquish him! Help me to defeat him!" cried Arden, moved to the depths of his being, "and I will give you what you like." Shaman Tuloc smoked a while in silence, then rose from his seat and drew a small casket from a secret recess in the rear of the shop. The box was of fragrant sandalwood, wrapped with cords and sealed in many places. Carefully removing these, he disclosed a small bundle of numerous layers of fine silk, concealing some object within. Very reverently the old man unwrapped the silken folds until there lay uncovered in his palm a small cylinder of ivory of wondrous quality, and without spot or blemish.

"My son, you behold a portion of the tusk of the sacred elephant of Siam, the most sacred of the holy herd. He went into the silence at the age of two hundred years and this relic possesses a mighty power. Listen to the words on the scroll. I will interpret." As Shaman Tuloc spoke he lifted from the casket an oriental scroll and reverently held it towards the light. "To the pure and single of heart," he read in a low voice, "I will grant his wish.'

"I will give any price, fulfill any conditions," exclaimed Arden in a choking voice, his whole form trembling

"Look! What do you see?" the old man suddenly demanded, holding the ivory above his head. "Only the ivory, nothing more," the young man answered. "Look again!" cried Shaman Tuloc eagerly, "Look at the center! What do you see now?" "I see a delicate pink light shining through the ivory," answered Arden excitedly. "It seems to move and tremble like a rose swaying in the "It is the soul of the sacred tusk!"

cried Tuloc triumphantly, "the spirit, the life. Therein lies the power." "What am I to do? Tell me!" denanded the young man.

"Bring from your club the finest ball you have. My hands shall fashion its mate in size and appearance from the sacred tusk. I will entrust the task to no other. In a week's time you shall have a ball, endowed with the living spirit of victory."

The same evening Arden brought from the club the desired model and the next day Shaman Tuloc began his self-imposed task. As he wrought his labor of love, patiently, silently, with reverential skill, the slender, graceful form of his only daughter glided often through the parted curtains and hung over her father's shoulder with moist eyes and heaving bosom. More than once a rosy blush suffused her modest cheek as she recalled the young stranger's face and trembling voice. Then she murmured a silent prayer for her father's task and for the young man's victory.

On the eighth day the ball was finished, and to the instructed eye seemed to throb visibly with sentient life, as it lay, white and glistening, in the sandal casket.

"Take it, my son," said Shaman Tuloc, committing the box to him. "Let no other hand than thine use this sacred ball. Let no other interest divide your heart. Then victory will

The report that Arden was to play his conqueror again filled the club house. An undefinable feeling was "I am listening, my son," responded in the air that this game would possess unusual features—that it was a strife for mastery to an unusual de-

The two men presented a remarkable contrast as they stood in evening dress at the end of the table ready to begin. One was the picture of cold nervy cunning and calculation, the other, brave, generous, skilled, eager for to excel at games involving chance the fray. It was like night matched against day-the powers of darkness arrayed against the powers of light.

To the surprise of his ferret-eyed opponent, Arden, playing with the sacred ball, won the bank. The balls were spotted and the game began. The style of play was fourteen-inch by graceful, easy play, Arden rolled off run after run. His ball was absolutely under control and the audience was with him to a man, following his Just then a soft rustle of silk in game with frequent applause. But, do with run and invariably finished a point or two in the lead.

Arden, however, never lost confidence for a moment in his ball or the outcome of the game. As the players approached the goal, the 300 mark, almost abreast, but the dark man still in the lead, the excitement grew intense. With only eight to go, the latter ran six and missed on his 299th shot. A hateful scowl showed on his face but changed instantly to a triumphant smile, as he saw that Arden, who stood at 295, was left an impossible shot. Arden's ball lay tight against the cushions in one corner, the red ball in the same position in the far corner on the same side, and his opponent's ball against the cushion along the rail half-way between the other two balls. It, indeed, looked to be an impossible shot, but Arden, with unruffled confidence played a masse, whose like had never been seen on that or any other table. His ball, with a beautiful curve, spun to the ball half-way down the rail, continued its journey in the same marvelously accurate fashion to the red ball, and counted, of course. The house fairly thundered its applause. The result of the shot was to leave the three balls lined up along the center of the table. A second brilliant masse counted 297, and the remaining three shots were clicked off in rapid succession.

As Arden made the last shot, which meant victory for him, he felt his eyes drawn irresistibly across the table to the tier of seats opposite. His gaze rested on a pair of eyes shining with a radiancy he had never seen before. As he felt himself yielding to their power and started towards them, a strange thing happened. With a sudden click the wonderful ball, with which he had played and won, snapped asunder and parted into two pieces. As it fell apart, Arden saw an appearance like a delicate pink flame leave the ball, pass through the air towards the wonderful eyes, then over the head of Shaman Tuloc's beautiful daughter and away.

A minute later Arden was holding her by the hands and gazing at close range into those wondrous orbs. Tuloc hastened to the table and clasped the precious fragments of ivory to his breast.

Later that night, as he stood beside the beautiful Esther in her father's shop, Arden asked, "Why did the ivory ball snap and the pink soul flee away?"

"Because, my son, another love had come into your heart"-and then, as Shaman Tuloc looked on the young people, he raised his hands and said. solemnly, "The God of heaven bless you, my children!"

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT By F. A. WALKER

VALUE OF MEDITATION

WHETHER among the captains, or in the lowly ranks of the struggling masses, set apart a little bit of time every day for your private use and give every moment of it to serious reflection.

Consider what you are, toward where you are heading and just what part you are playing in the great drama of life.

Be not afraid to grope in the dark, nor ashamed to face the light, for it is only by courage, by repeated reproval of self, that you can hope to improve and fit your hand and brain for greater usefulness.

To decide that such a course is of no avail is to admit defeat before you test your prowess in making an effort. The great men and women of America, whose memories and names are everywhere revered, found their way to the glorious heights through trials, temptations and opposing currents by serious contemplation of their failings and human frailties, the common heritage of mankind.

They found in their silent hours of meditation the ever-blazing lamp of hope. After weary months and years they learned how to hold this light above their heads and follow its kindly rays to pleasant places, stumbling now and then, but always regaining their foothold and making sure of their path.

The fault with most people is that they will not take time for searching deliberation of their own condition. They prefer fickle amusement and harmful companionship rather than the substantial essence which builds good character and ennobles the soul.

They unconsciously become so entangled in emotions, and in emotional thoughts, that they gradually stray from the common sod and soar aimlessly among the clouds, dreaming of wealth and influence which they imagine are waiting for them at every erally bordeaux mixture, such as one turn of the road, over which they go sailing like butterflies, thoughtless of this disease the approaching winter.

In short, they are quite sure that they are going upward, when in truth they are drifting downward to failure, disappointment and tears, all depicted in the final chapter of the book of acter, the county agents or the state their inconsiderate lives.

There is nothing wholly impossible to the man or woman who will deliberately penetrate his or her own heartsanctuary and wrest from it the poi sonous thoughts and wanton habits which are ever seeking to incapacitate and destroy.

"If grief is to be mitigated, it must either wear itself out or be shared.

THESE words are attributed to I Madame Anne Sophie Soymanov Swetchine, the authoress whose works are claimed by both France and Russia.

Madame Swetchine came naturally by her literary ability. Her father was a Soymanov, the founder of the famous academy at Moscow, and it was in such an atmosphere that Madame Swetchine was reared.

In the year 1790 this talented woman married General Swetchine. After her marriage she took up her residence in St. Petersburg and established a salon there which soon became famous for the celebrated personages which visited it. This was about the time of the French Revolution and there were great numbers of the French nobility pouring out of France in order to escape the fury of the mob. Many of these people found their way into Russia, and because of this Madame Swetchine's salon was frequented by some of the best French people: It was to here that Joseph de Maistre looked for an asylum during the Revolutionary period in France, when any person to whom even the faintest suspicion of royal sympathies attached was in danger. Joseph de Maistre was well known in his own country as a writer on philosophy and religion and he was a statesman as well. He was a devout Roman Catholic and finally persuaded Madame Swetchine to renounce her allegiance to the Greek church and become a communicant of the Roman church. Madame Swetchine's conversion took place in the year 1815. The year following she moved to Paris where she opened another salon and soon attracted to herself a group of students and literary men and women such as had been her intimates in Russia. There was one difference, however. Since her conversion madame had become very devoutly religious and her Paris salon partook of an extremely religious atmosphere.

Continental Currency

The Treasury department says that the various issues of Continental currency were never redeemable by the United States as reorganized under the Constitution. By act of August 4, 1790, it was receivable at the treasury in subscriptions to a loan at the rate of $100 in Continental money for $1 in specie. By the act of March 3, 1797, it was declared that said money | should be receivable as above until December 31, 1797, and no longer.

Bulletin on Caring for Farm Woodlands

Knowledge of Forestry Is Profitable in Farming.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) "A knowledge of farm forestry, applied along simple lines, should make farming more profitable," according to the bulletin "Forestry Lessons on Home Woodlands," just revised by the United States Department of Agriculture for general distribution.

The bulletin gives the farm woodland a distinctive place in the management of the farm and in the development of the community. The various chapters take up the important local kinds of trees and their uses, the proper location of woodlands on farms, their economic value, the different farm timber products, measaring and marketing timber, utilizing timber correctly, protecting and improving woodlands, and planting young timber. This bulletin has been prepared to give to the organized school work in elementary and secondary agriculture additional impetus in forestry. It provides material for instruction and furnishes a topic for home projects in forestry that may be worked out profitably in many communities. The bulletin contains subject matter material and a plan of study which should be of real educational value to the pupils themselves.

"Forestry Lessons on Home Woodlands" may be secured on application to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., free of charge as long as the supply lasts. After that it may be secured from the government printing office, Washington. D. C., for 15 cents a copy.

Mineral Supplements Is

Subject of a Bulletin

"Mineral elements are not to be regarded as medicines to be fed in doses, but as foods to be supplied daily," says L. S. Palmer of the Minnesota agricultural experiment station in special bulletin No. 94 entitled "Minerals for Farm Animals."

Five mineral elements are ever likely to be lacking in farm rations-sodium, chlorine, iodine, phosphorus and calcium. Common salt supplies the first two. Iodine can be supplied by feeding sodium or potassium iodide, or as sea salt from which the iodine has not been removed by refining, or as commercially iodized common salt. For phosphorus and calcium deficiency the mineral supplements must be bonemeal, spent bone black, or raw rock phosphate floats. Spent bone black is not a uniform product; only that which has been used by the sugar refineries should be fed. Fertilizer bonemeal is not recommended.

Lesson for December 13 PAUL IN MELITA AND ROME

LESSON TEXT-Acts 28:1-31.

GOLDEN TEXT—"I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth."—Rom. 1:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC-Paul the Helper. JUNIOR TOPIC-Paul in the World's

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC-A Prisoner Preaching. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC—The Power of the Gospel.

The Shipwreck on Melita (vv.

Through the storm they lost their bearings, and when they were safe on land they learned that the island was called Melita. Their experiences here may be noted as follows:

1. The Hospitable Reception of the Natives (v. 2).

They built a fire and made the shipwrecked people as comfortable as possible in the cold and rain.

2. Paul Gathering Sticks for a Fire (v. 3).

The world's greatest preacher and missionary, yet he was not above picking up sticks for a fire. All along the journey Paul busied himself in doing all that he could to help some one. Any service rendered in the right spirit is holy work.

3. Paul Bitten by a Venomous Serpent (v. 3).

Among the sticks that Paul gathered was a serpent. Perhaps it had already coiled itself up for its winter's sleep, but aroused by the warmth of the fire, it darted at Paul and fixed its fangs upon his hand. This was a serious thing. The natives expected to see him fall down dead, yet he shook it off, unharmed. At first the natives concluded that he was an escaped murderer, and that retributive justice was being meted out to him. When they saw he was unharmed they concluded that he was a god. In the popular mind a man soon passes from a murderer to a god, or more frequently the reverse is true.

4. Paul Heals Publius' Father (vv.

These people now received some return for their kindness. When this man of note was healed, others came and were healed also.

II. Paul's Arrival At Rome (vv. 11-16).

When Paul reached Rome Christ's charge to the disciples was fulfilled. After three month's stay at Melita Paul departed for Rome in the ship of Alexandria, whose sign was Castor and Pollux. At Syracuse they were delayed three days, perhaps for favorable winds. At Puteoli he found brethren at whose request he tarried seven days, after which he again set his face towards Rome. At Appii forum and at Three Tavers brethren from Rome met him. From Puteoli the news went before of Paul's comren that they came for more than forty miles to meet him. This greatly encouraged him and he gave God thanks. He greatly craved the fellowship of other Christians and was much helped thereby. This was the first city in all his missionary life that thus welcomed him. It was typical of the welcome that was given to the gospel by the Gentile world. He was treated with great leniency at Rome for he was allowed to hire a house and live apart, except that his guard was constantly with him. Being chained to a soldier was rather irksome, yet it gave him a chance to preach to the soldiers, which he could not have had in any other

III. Paul's Ministry In Rome (vv. 17-31).

1. His Conference With the Leading Jews (vv. 17-22).

He did not as usual, wait for the Sabbath day to speak to the Jews. He allowed only one day for rest, his object being to have a fair understanding with them. When they came he endeavored to conciliate them. He told them that though he came as a prisoner, he was not a criminal. Though his own countrymen had sought his life he did not come with accusations against them. The result of this interview was that the Jews cautiously took neutral ground, but expressed a desire to hear what Paul could say in defense of a sect which was everywhere spoken against.

2. Paul Expounding the Kingdom of God and Persuading Concerning Jesus

He pointed out a real kingdomthe Messianic kingdom with the historic Jesus as the king. The kingdom to Paul meant a definite reign of a definite person, not simply an improved state of society. This he showed from the Scriptures.

— THE — CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

--- From ----Moody Bible Institute Monthly Chicago, Ill.

December 13

The Bible Principle of Giving Leviticus 27:30;1 Corinthians 16:1-4,14 From the Scripture verses assigned for this topic, there emerge four principles of giving. First, there is that of the title. This principle of giving is evidently in accord with the will of God. The fact that it was incorporated in the Mosaic law, would prove this. Also, the additional fact that in Scripture, God is nowhere represented as approving of less than the tithe. In this gospel dispensation, we are under grace rather than law, but growth in grace is greatly hindered in those who withhold "more than is meet" by the specious plea that we are "not under law." The adoption of the tithe as the minimum of giving in

results in the realm of spiritual

The second and third principles of giving may go together. Our giving that both sets of chambers are parts We are to lay by as God hath prospered us. That which is laid aside is to be used as an act of worship on the first day of the week which is the Lord's Day and which early in the Christian era took the place of the Jewish Sabbath. The object in laying aside systematically and proportionately is to avoid appeals and years ago, and work has been in progollections when the missionary him- ress since then. For a long time the self arrives on the scene, when such true location of the city of David was offerings are more or less emotional. The principles of system and proportion in giving are to be regarded as binding. They are part of the law of Christ, given to His church through the apostles. The remaining principle is seen in verse 14. It is that of charity or love. Love expresses itself in giving. God so loved that He gave.

"Herein is love," writes the apostle, "that God sent his Son to be a pro-pitiation for our sins," and then he adds the words, "Beloved, if God so loved us we ought also to love one another." "Whoso hath this world's goods and beholdeth his brother in need and shutteth up his compassion from him, how doth the love of God abide in him?" (1 John 3:16, 17: (1 John 3:16, 17: 4:10, 11, R. V.)

Said to Be No Spot Quite Free From Dust

When beams of sunlight shine into a partially darkened room you are ing, and so interested were the breth- able to realize how thick the air is with millions of tiny particles of dust. But it is only with the help of a strong microscope that you can appreciate the marvels of dust. In the dust in one room you may find such various matters as the pollen grain of grasses, scales from our own skins, as well as fragments from our clothes.

You may also find atoms of salt. Salt dust is carried scores of miles inland from the sea, and there is no part of any land where it does not fall. Sand, too, floats in the air, both sea sand and desert sand. Always there is meteoric dust, ground-up morsels of some lost planet, floating in the air. This dust you find everywhere, on the tops of snowclad mountains and in the deepest abysses of the ocean.

Everything provides dust, from the ash of your cigarette to the scales from the wings of a butterfly.

The Gleaning Bell

In many parts of rural England one may still hear the gleaning bell being sounded at morn and eventide, to tell the country folk when they may begin gleaning and when they must cease.

The custom is of considerable antiquity, being mentioned by Tusser in the year 1557. As a rule, the bell is sounded from the belfry of the parish church, and the ringer is entitled to a penny for the whole period from each family that goes gleaning.

In some parishes, however, a crier perambulates the district with a hand bell while in others a gong, suspended from a tripod on the village green, is utilized.

Cloud Turrets

A scientific explanation of the connection between the imposing masses of cumulus clouds, piled up in aspiring white turrets, which are popularly called "thunder heads," and the approach of a thunderstorm is offered in a recent report on cloud studies made by one of the government scientists. It appears that the form of cloud called turreted cumulus is most common when there is a rapid vertical decrease of temperature in the upper air, combined with heating at the ground, which favors the ascent of columns of air to great heights, and that is, at the same time, a condition favorable to thunderstorms.

TOMB IN ROCK MAY BE THAT OF DAVID

Important Find Made by Jerusalem Excavators.

According to advices from Jerusalem, received in London, Rev. J. Garrow Duncan, who has been conducting excavations at the Ophel quarter of the city for the Palestine Exploration fund, announces the discovery on the western side of the site of a series of underground rock-cut chambers, comprising a large central room with five smaller chambers five feet square branching from it.

To the southward is a room 15 feet by 16 feet leading into two narrower rooms, each 15 feet by 8 feet, which again lead into similar narrow chambers, each with smaller chambers cut into its walls. Tool marks on the walls indicate the period of the Iron age, not earlier than 1200 B. C. There is a similar series of rock chambers and galleries on the eastern side of Ophel, entered from the face of the rock scarp under the Jebusite east city wall, and closed by a curious stone door.

It is not wholly impossible that here we have the actual long hopedfor tomb of David. The probability is s to be systematic and proportionate. of a series of royal tombs. The series has been much abused by later usage, first an olive press and storerooms in the Byzantine period, then as cisterns by the Arabs.

Plans for the complete excavation of the ancient city of David on Mount Ophel were announced just over two disputed, but excavations carried on by Doctor Bliss in 1896, by Captain Parker in 1909, and by M. Weill in 1913-14 settled the question, though much work remained to be done in exploring the original stronghold of the Jebusites, the palace of David, and the tombs of the kings of Judah, which are probably those referred to in the telegram.

This position was that captured about the year 1000 B. C. by King David (as described in the Second Book of Samuel, chapter 5:6-9). His capital had till then been Hebron. Mount Ophel lies on the southeast side of the city, just outside the southern wall (just south of the "temple area"), and in the area between the wall and the Pool of Siloam, which marks the southern area of the site, ten acres had been reserved by the administration for excavation.

On November 23, 1923, Prof. R. A. S. Macalister, who had charge of part of the work, announced the discovery of the north wall of the Jebusites and a tower. Later, it was announced that the breach made in the wall by King David had been discovered, as well as ornamental portico added by King discoveries were later announced of works constructed at an even earlier

Revolutionized Lighting

About forty years ago electric light began to supplant gas, and most people made up their minds that gas lighting was doomed. Then Baron Auer von Welsbach came to the rescue. He discovered that cotton fabric, if soaked in a nitrate solution composed of ninety-five parts of thorium and one part cerium, and then placed over a hot flame to burn out all impurities, would glow with a white incandesence, giving out a pure white light of astonishing power. By making a cone of this fabric he produced the incandescent (gas mantle, which, if placed over a gas jet, cut the consumption of gas by half, and at the same time gave ten times more light. This invention saved the gas-lighting industry, and is today being used extensively upon oil as well as gas light.

Your Loss-My Gain

It was one of the first days of school. The children, fresh from their long vacation, were listening attentively to a lesson in arithmetic.

"Now," said the teacher, holding up a gallon measure, "if this gallon measure of cider costs $1, what would you have to pay for a quart?"

"Fifty cents," said Mary. "Would you take that?" said the teacher, as she looked at keen-eyed little Isadore.

"Sure," said Isadore. Then very wisely added: "If she'd give it to

Turtle Wanted Tit-Bit

While grazing in the meadows near Tuckahoe, N. J., a cow owned by Enoch Stevenson attracted the attention of nearby residents by her constant lowing. Mr. Stevenson was notified. When he arrived he was much surprised to find that a large snapping turtle had the cow by the tongue. After a battle the turtle was killed and the I cow taken home for treatment.

Sight Not at Best

Before Age of Six A child does not attain his keenest eyesight until he is six years old or more. Small objects are not so well seen, the parts of the brain devoted to vision being incompletely developed. This is the statement of Dr. Edward Jackson, Denver specialist, who writes for Hygeia, popular health magazine published by the American Medical association, in an article on "The Baby's Eyes."

Abundant reason exists for using large type in primers, says Doctor Jackson. Fine stitching, beadwork and similar exercises, such as are sometimes expected of young children in kindergarten, may be quite harmful. Even when the object looked at is not small the young child must not be expected to look at it long at a time, but should be encouraged to turn the eyes away frequently to rest them. To "keep the eyes on the book" at times when they are tired does not help the child to learn and may be harmful.

Because they can hold things close to their eyes and still see them, and because they need larger images of what they look at to make up for the incomplete development of the eye, young children are liable to acquire the habit of holding things too near their eyes. As they grow older this should be corrected by encouraging them to try to see things at longer distances. Many children starting to school have eyestrain, or even inflammation about the eyes, merely because they hold their books too close to their eyes.

Newfoundland Is the Oldest British Colony

Newfoundland is often called "The Ancient Colony," because it is the oldest colony in the British empire. It was discovered by John Cabot, who sailed out of Bristol, England, in 1497 Cabot took possession of the island in the name of King Henry VII. Three years later the Portuguese under Gaspar Corte-Real explored portions of the coast. In 1588, during the reign of Queen Elizabeth, Sir Humphrey Gilbert renewed the claim of British possession, but his attempt to colonize was not a success, nor were the attempts made later by Lord Baltimore. During all these years the island was visited by fishing expeditions from England, France and Portugal, and the ownership of the island was a matter of dispute. It was finally settled by the Treaty of Utrecht of 1713, which brought to a close Queen Anne's war. By this treaty France acknowledged Britain's ownership of Newfoundland and ceded to Britain the region known as Acadia, now forming the provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

Adam's Suit?

Little Roger, spending a holiday on his grandfather's farm, was permitted to beguile the hours of a wet day by turning over the leaves of the family

Suddenly he looked up from the faded pages and quaint pictures, and called out:

"See what I've found, grannie!" In his hand he had a leaf, old and dry, and after a few moment's reflection, he added:

"Do you think it belonged to Adam and Eve, grannie?"

Taxes Paid in Butterflies When he faced difficulty in collecting the income tax from natives, the governor of the Belgian Congo in Africa invited the native citizens to bring in specimens of a particularly beautiful butterfly. For four butterflies he gave an income tax receipt. He then sent the butterflies to Europe where they brought as much as 30 francs each. This ingenious method of getting the tax from the natives enabled him to swell the state's coffers without discontent on the part of his people.

Early American Ship

The first American-built vessel to make a deep-sea voyage, the Trial, was launched 283 years ago, January 12, 1642. The builder was Capt. Thomas Coytmore, who was also the first commander of the vessel. The Trial was constructed at Boston and was of 165 tons burden. In these days of Leviathans and Mauretanias few persons would care to trust their lives to such a craft for even a short voyage, but in its day the Trial was considered a good ship and brought a rich return to its owners.

The Planet Mercury

Mercury is the smallest planet and the nearest to the sun, its mean distance being about 36,000,000 miles. It completes a revolution of its orbit in 88 days, and its diameter is about 3,000 miles. Its mass is about one-eighteenth that of the earth, and its density the same as that of the earth. Mercury is difficult to see with the naked eye owing to its proximity to the sun. Telescopically it is of little interest. Faint marks can be seen on its surface, but all are indefinite.

"Smiths" in England

In England there are 530,000 per sons of the name of Smith, and 204,000 of them have "J" for their first initial. The John Smiths number 41,000; the John W. Smith's, 30,000, and the John William Smith's, 5,000. It has been necessary to devise a mark for them to distinguish the products they make or own. A monomark with symbols will designate just which Smith is referred to. It was necessary to include five symbols in the monomark.

Last Name

IS IT BRIGGS?

BRIGGS is a more usual name than Bridge or Bridges, yet they both have the same meaning, and Briggs is the dialect variation of Bridge. Rigg is in the same way a form of Ridge, yet Rigg or Riggs is rather more usual than Ridge or Ridges.

In England the name is renowned as having belonged to Henry Briggs, a contemporary of Shakespeare and of the greatest mathematicians of his

There have been several distinguished members of the Briggs family here. One was George N. Briggs, one fine governor of Massachusetts and congressman. And another was Charles Augustus Briggs, an American theologian.

MEYER-This is a name of German origin though it is borne by natives of almost every country of Europe, and there are Meyers in this country among hundred per cent Americans. It is one of the most usual names in Germany, where they speak of Muller, Meyer and Schulze as we speak of Smith, Brown and Jones.

Meyer is derived from the Latin major, meaning greater, and is said to have meant originally merely overseer. Later it acquired something of the significance of farmer.

FERRIS-This is said to have been derived from a French nickname from MASON-Sometimes this is an occupative name but probably oftener it is derived from Matthew, having the significance of son of Matthew.

CATT-This is undoubtedly derived from the first name Catherine. may have been that the first of the name took his name from his motherand illegitimacy was surely not always the reason for this. Again it is highy probable that such first names were taken in honor of some saint or church festival. Thus a man born on St. Cath erine's day might have been given this name to distinguish him from his as-

Boy Scouts Planting

Boy scouts of Philadelphia are out after a record in tree planting, according to a report of the American Tree Association of Washington, which sends for a stamp for postage, free tree-planting instruction. The scouts from every section of the country are reporting tree planting to the association, in which there are no dues.

A CLEAR TRACK

THE white lights are blazing encourman and woman, and the world is once an animal, and not a vegetable waiting open-armed to receive you. There is work to do for yourself

Was Flirting With

Other Fellow's Girl He was a gallant post office clerk and for the moment business was slack. Presently to his joy a pretty girl entered the office. "What can I do for you?" he asked with unusual affability. "I want a 2-cent stamp," said the girl. "And would you mind weighing this letter for me as I'm afraid it may be a little too heavy."

Mind? He was delighted and chatted glibly about the weather while he executed her order. He even volunteered to affix the stamp for her-a courtesy she accepted with a dainty blush.

Just as he was placing the stamp on the envelope, however, she stopped him.

"Put it upside down," she requested.

"Why?" he asked.

"Oh," she replied, "that means something to Charlie!" And the clerk's interest vanished as the clouds of monotony once more gathered on his horizon.

Here's One Writer Has Good Word for Spider

The predaceous habits of spiders make them most useful to man. Our selfish interests should preserve and protect them, except where they annoy the housewife by building dustcatching and unsightly webs indoors. Even then they might be given a place. All forms are diligent producers of their kind, and were it not for their numerous enemies there would be enough spiders to alter considerably the overproduction of noxious insects. In comparison to the insects there are few spiders, both of species and of individuals. Considering the number of eggs spiders lay and the protective care they give their eggs, this seems surprising. But when we observe the ceaseless activity of birds, shrews. toads, snakes, lizards, robberflies. certain parasitic insects and, most particularly, mud dauber and digger wasps, it is more surprising that spiders exist at all.

Dogs Seldom Mad

When dogs bite people in the summer time, they're seldom "mad," except in the sense in which normal human beings often get mad. They're surly and grouchy, perhaps, because they are affected by the heat like human folk, and have less ability to help

Suppose, on a hot, sultry day, when you were fairly stewing in the heat, and the flies were biting you, you couldn't find a cool spot to lie down and, worse than that, couldn't find a bit of cool water to drink. And suppose every person you approached hopefully was surly and ill-natured and gave you a kick or an ugly look instead of something to moderate the heat. Wouldn't you feel like snapping at somebody's calves?

Dogs probably don't run amuck in hot weather any more than people do, though with more provocation.-Kokomo Dispatch.

Meals for Sponges

One of the hardest things to believe agingly along your track, young is that the sponge you use daily was growth of the ocean. Sponges live their own lives, and eat their own food as other animals do.

The separate existence of a sponge begins with the breaking away from the parent of a tiny particle. The latter, after being whirled about for a time by tides and currents, eventualand from that home it seeks its own livelihood. The food of infant sponges consists of yelk cells, which contain a form of nourishment. Later, as the sponge grows, it requires something more solid, and this is brought by the currents, which sweep into a bag-halfmouth, half-stomach-minute particles of the new food.

Famous French Palace

The Louvre is a famous palace in Paris, originally the residence of French kings, but since the French revolution used as a museum of art and antiques. The Louvre derives its name from an ancient hunting chateau that stood on the site of the present palace, in the midst of a forest infested with wolves and known as the Louverie. It is said to have been a royal residence in the time of Dagobert (628). The foundation of the present building was laid by Francis I in 1541, and the structure was enlarged and adorned by successive kings, particularly Henry IV and Louis XIV, the later being the last king to live in it. The work of uniting the Louvre and the Tuileries in one structure was completed in 1857; and the combined Louvre and Tuileries covers an area of 48 acres.-Kansas City Times.

"The Cup That Cheers"

On September 25 occurred the two hundred sixty-fifth anniversary of the day when Samuel Pepys had his first "dish of tea."

Only 27 years earlier the very first cup of tea ever drank in England is recorded as having been prepared at Arlington house, which then occupied the site on which Buckingham palace now stands.

The earl of Arlington bought the tea in Holland and gave 60 shillings a pound for it, a sum which today would be represented by at least 20 pounds.

The drink that was a curiosity less than 300 years ago is now our chief beverage.-London Answers.
