

COUNTRY EDITORS FOR PROHIBITION.

National Association Votes for Volstead Act.

Lawrence Wooden, of Hampstead, Cal., for his health, sent us the following editorial clipped from the Los Angeles Times, commenting on the vote taken by the National Editorial Association composed of editors from all over the country, now on its annual tour, in California.

"Wet majorities doubtless exist in some of our big cities, particularly New York and Chicago, but there is every indication that the sentiment in nearly all the smaller cities and towns in this country is overwhelmingly in favor of prohibition and that their citizens do not desire any modification of the law that has established what they consider an acceptable state of affairs, despite all efforts on the part of unthinking people to nullify or modify the law.

Strong proof of this fact is seen in the registered expression of the country editors. Most of them favor the Volstead Act as it stands and will stand for no tinkering with it. The National Editorial Association, composed of editors and publishers of journals printed and circulated in places of small population, voted on the question of prohibition recently in this city. More than three to one were for the strict enforcement of the Volstead Act.

This remarkable preponderance of sentiment for prohibition should prove to those sincere and sober city people who have come to regard the defiance of the law in their communities as representative of the views of the people of the country at large that there is no such general sentiment, but that the general feeling really is the antithesis of this and there is likely to be no change in it whatever.

What makes this overwhelming dry vote of the editors the more important and significant is that those of them who hail from small cities and towns, as they do for the most part, are not only molders of public opinion in this, as in other respects, but that they truly reflect their community sentiment, as editors generally feel bound to do if they are to make a successful newspaper.

The sober, self-respecting people living in each little center of population are glad to be rid of the reeking, pestiferous, crime-breeding saloon, which for many years was the headquarters of the bosses and gangs who tried to run the town and keep it as "wide open" as possible. They are glad to be spared the sight of the town "drunk"—glad that their sympathies no longer are wrought upon by his pitiable family whom his slavery to drink had reduced to poverty and rags and who often became public charges. They are glad there is no rum hole to serve as a pitfall for their sons and from which issued men who, in the past, impassioned by drink were a constant menace to society.

It is good to know that the country editors present such a solid front to the enemies of prohibition, that they are not only supplementing the efforts of those sober people of their communities who are working in support of the law and to prevent its nullification or modification, but that they are encouraging them in their labors, writing quotable articles for them to use in their campaigns against the wets and assisting in making it impossible for a reactionary movement to gain headway against those who honestly believe that, as has been shown in the case of America, a dry nation is a prosperous nation.

THE HANDY KITCHEN.

The Great Importance of the Woman's Workshop.

Although the details of arrangement of every kitchen are more or less problems in themselves, the general scheme remains the same because the chief work in all is preparing and serving food, and washing dishes and utensils. "Make your kitchen so convenient that you can reduce your hours in it to a minimum," suggests the Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture.

How is your kitchen situated in relation to the dining room, the front and back doors, the telephone, the cellar and the pantry? Make, if you can, in the connecting wall between the kitchen and dining room a two-way cupboard for storing china and passing food and dishes. If you can also place your sink adjoining this cupboard on the kitchen side, you will save many steps in handling the dishes and silver which are kept in the cupboard.

Group the equipment in the kitchen into working centers for preparing raw food, cooking, serving and dish washing. Store food supplies as near the food preparation center as possible in cupboards or receptacles proof against dust and household pests. Provide good wall or drop lights, or lamps in brackets, over the sink and stove and any other work centers, so that when your tasks continue after dark, you can see what you are doing. If you can have a window above your sink you will find it a great blessing.

Arrange for kitchen ventilation to carry off cooking odors and maintain a comfortable temperature. Choose finishes for floor, walls, and woodwork that are easy to keep clean, durable, and pleasing to the eye. Set sink, work table, and other large equipment at such height that the worker does not have to stoop over them.

Running water—both hot and cold, if possible—is the greatest boon a housekeeper can possibly have in a kitchen. Your State extension people will tell you ways to install a water system inexpensively if you have none. Provision for the sanitary disposal of waste and garbage is also extremely important.

Think first, last, and always of suiting the kitchen to the work done in it. This practical test can be applied to every feature from the floor plan to the hanging of the smallest saucepan.

Wheat and Corn Crops.

Washington, D. C., July 15, 1926.—A spectacular improvement in the condition of Maryland wheat during June makes possible a forecast of 9,614,000 bushels, based on growing conditions as reported by farmers on July 1 to John S. Dennee, Federal crop estimator for Maryland. This is an increase of nearly 2,000,000 bushels over June 1 estimate. Improved weather conditions is the explanation says the crop statistician. Last year production was 10,290,000 bushels. The five-year average harvest during the period 1921-1925 is 9,535,000 bushels. Much of the crop has already been harvested and put into the barn.

The low condition reported for Maryland corn on July 1 indicates a very short crop this year, according to John S. Dennee, Federal crop estimator for Maryland. Farmers say the stalks are for the most part small and irregular in size, but the color is good. Corn got a very late start. Cut worms are doing considerable damage. According to the crop estimator condition is 10 points below the ten-year average of condition on July 1. A production of 19,849,000 bushels seems likely. Production last year was 25,560,000; and 23,655,000 bushels is the average of harvests for the five-year period 1921-1925.

THE PRIMARY LAW IS RESPONSIBLE.

And the Pennsylvania Result has Supplied the Evidence.

The newspaper agitation of the recent Pennsylvania primary election still continues, and what is to be done about it, or can be done about it, is still a matter of National interest to be carried into the November election. It is also a big question that concerns all of the states, because, first and last, it is the primary law itself that is chargeable with the situation.

Notwithstanding all of the money spent in the primaries, no corruption has been uncovered. The money appears to have all been spent for service and promotion of various sorts; perhaps a lot of it was wasted, and perhaps another lot of it found resting places in the pockets of individuals for their "influence."

No kind of election can be held in a big state like Pennsylvania without the legitimate spending of a lot of money, if the voters are to find out who the candidates are, and what the issues are; and especially is this true when the state-wide primary system permits a family fight—that is always the hottest and worst kind of a fight.

The spending of several millions of dollars is an indictment of the primary system, rather than of the candidates. If Senator Pepper, for instance, had been the choice of the legislature, or of a state convention, there would have been much less of a money-spending scandal; and if there had been no "wet" and "dry" issue, there would have been less of it. So, the primary law permitted three men, each with a "barrel" back of them, to fight for the Senatorship; and the candidates for Governor were in the same sort of a game, giving certain other interested parties an opportunity now for expressing a large crop of more or less hypocritical horror at—how the state-wide primary system worked out, and how it has worked out in other states.

If the lavish expenditure of money is to be prevented, and if the people desire the best qualified men to win, and candidates more surely representing majority sentiment, all this can best be done through a return to the convention system, or through some delegated democracy plan. A free for all scramble for all who have lots of money to spend, will never do it.

The Country Editor a "Burro."

A far western Editor says the country editor is everybody's "burro"—sometimes called by another name—who is rushed to whenever there is a load of some sort to move, that other folks do not like to buck up against. He says— "If there's particularly nasty committee work to be done, the newspaper man gets to be chairman of a committee of one. If it is desired to let the world know something which will attract people to town to spend their money with every one but the newspaper, he is invited, sometimes compelled by a squeeze play to furnish the thought, the ink, the paper, the labor and the postage.

"You see, the country publisher rather prides himself on being the biggest booster, the fastest and hardest worker and the most dependable citizen for community purposes in his bailiwick." And yet—and yet—when it comes to supporting this "burro" with actual subscriptions, and cash for service—why, the said animal is expected to scout around for himself, and still feel happy.

There are lots of big and little boosts that the home folks just can't get from other papers that are so popular, and which the said home folks feel so independent about taking; but when they want a free ride, or a strong pull, the old home Burro is good enough to fall back on. Strange, isn't it?

A German Wine Debauch.

Good wine, the best that can be made, killed at least five persons in Germany, last week and the hospitals are crowded with cases of alcoholic poisoning. A wine ship loaded with Moselle vintage, struck the piles of a bridge on the Rhine river, and collapsed with the result that the spectators of the wreck rushed into the river by any means possible, and fished out the barrels containing some 90,000 quarts.

The result was a wholesale drunk, on pure wine that contained sufficient alcohol to kill. The carousing that followed was indescribable and the actual number meeting death can not be determined until the hospitals are cleared.

And this was "pure" wine—not "bootleg" stuff—and in a country where "light wines and beer" can be bought legally, every day in the week, and where "very little drunkenness" is ever seen, according to propaganda in this country.

Paint the Mail Box.

Don't forget the mail box when you have your paint brush handy. Uncle Sam is urging all rural postmasters to make a systematic effort to get all mail boxes and support posts painted white with the patron's name in black letters 1 inch high on each side of the box. Paint protects, preserves and pleases.

THE BOYS IN CAMP.

After a week devoted largely to instruction in personal hygiene, the responsibilities of citizenship, and the cultivation and preservation of ideals, sixteen hundred candidates at the Citizens Military Training camps began their second week of intensive training with the 34th. Infantry at Fort Eustis, on Tuesday.

Number of candidates who had week-end passes spent the short holiday at nearby seashore resorts. Candidates who remained in camp were required to attend the church of their choice, on Sunday morning. The second week of training was begun with the candidates in high spirits. A spirit of friendly rivalry between companies is already in evidence, and much enthusiasm is being shown in military and athletic contests which have been arranged.

Active training begun on the day after the arrival of candidates on July 8. Candidates were uniformed and assigned to companies on the day of arrival. The following day candidates were awakened by first call at 5:45 o'clock. Reveille was at 5:55 o'clock and breakfast was served at 6:45 o'clock, and drill call followed at 7:30 o'clock.

The mornings are largely devoted to drill, calisthenics and lectures on military courtesy and discipline. From 1:30 to 2:20 each afternoon the candidates engage in supervised athletics, and voluntary athletics follow from 2:30 to 3:30 o'clock. The afternoon schedule is often varied with lectures on military subjects.

In discussing the advantages of military training to young men in teaching them discipline, neatness, obedience to orders, and improving them morally and physically an officer on duty as instructor brought out another factor in the Citizens Military Training Camps. He said that the training was not only a benefit to the young men, but that their spirit of enthusiasm and willingness, and aptitude were a revelation and an inspiration for those who assisted in training them. In bringing out this factor this officer merely expressed a sentiment which prevails among the regular army and reserve officers on duty at Fort Eustis as instructors at the CMTC.

Nearly every county in the state of Maryland and Virginia, several counties in Pennsylvania, and the District of Columbia are represented among the sixteen hundred CMTC candidates at Fort Eustis.

Begging Profitable in N. Y. City.

A writer in the Philadelphia Ledger says: "How much money in pennies, nickels and dimes, do the 200 blind and crippled beggars selling chewing-gum and pencils in New York City make during the course of a year?"

The answer, according to the mendicant squad of the Police Department, is $1,500,000.

That, if the estimate is reasonably accurate, means that the average cripple should pay an income tax on more than $7000.

Frank L. Dunn, secretary to Lieutenant William C. Whitley, commanding the bureau, talked to us about beggars and panhandlers. The bureau divides these panhandlers in four classes: "Professional" cripples, genuinely maimed or blind; plain down-and-outers, Bowery bums looking for an easy drink and a place to sleep; "alleged" cripples, with healthy legs and arms strapped to their sides, and honey-tongued men and women who collect funds for fake charitable organizations.

The great "sucker" districts to which the professional panhandlers flock when they are not chased away by the police are Wall Street and 5th. Avenue. It is there that even the quarters and 50-cent pieces tinkle in the little tin cups.

On a pleasant day Mr. Dunn believes that a panhandler, undisturbed by detectives, makes an easy $40. Panhandlers have been "under observation" for half an hour or more, and in that time the silver deposited has sometimes totaled $10.

It is the usual thing to find anywhere from $20 to $50 in their clothes, while there are tales of $500 and even $1000 in bills sewn into the lining of their poor overcoats.

BIG NAVAL ARSENAL DESTROYED.

Bolt of Lightning Responsible for Terrible Calamity.

The main U. S. Naval Arsenal at Lake Denmark, N. J., was struck by lightning, on Sunday afternoon, that caused fires and explosions covering a wide area, caused 21 known deaths and over 100 injured, and a property loss estimated at $100,000,000. A great variety of heavy shells exploded, ranging up to 16 inches, while bombs and explosives of nearly all sorts were destroyed.

Fires and explosions continued for two days. Due to the extreme danger connected with trying to combat the catastrophe newspaper reports have been somewhat curtailed because of guarding of the devastated district by the military.

The loss was mainly to government buildings and stores, but there was a heavy loss to private property which will likely be assumed by the government. The entire country, for miles around, was devastated as though by a terrific war. Trees were cut and broken off by shells, and many buildings were completely blown out of existence, while the earth was torn up in indescribable ways.

Growing out of the disaster, there are already protests from other localities where army and navy explosives are stored, as the present destruction caused by a bolt of lightning shows that all human plans for the safety of such plants cannot protect against such occurrences.

Necessarily, large supplies of explosives and ammunition for the use of the Navy must be kept on hand, and they must be kept near the coast. Isolated sites have always been selected, and every precaution against explosion taken; and these sites are selected by Congress. While another such disaster is unlikely, yet it is possible, and Congress will therefore have another big problem before it this winter.

Have Them Vaccinated.

If your small son or daughter is going to start in on the royal road to the three R's this Fall, now is the time to have him or her, as the case may be, vaccinated against smallpox. That is, of course, if it has not been done previously. Do it for two reasons; first, and most important, to protect the youngster against one of the most loathsome and disfiguring diseases known; second, because the state law requires all children to be successfully vaccinated against smallpox before they can be enrolled in the schools. This is the advice of Dr. John S. Fulton, Director of the State Department of Health.

According to estimates of the State Department of Education, over 16,000 children living in the counties of Maryland, will reach school age this year, and will be eligible for admission to the schools. Health examinations of prospective first graders, to find out conditions that need attention, so that the children may enter school without unnecessary physical handicaps, were started by the Bureau of Child Hygiene, working in co-operation with the Department of Education several weeks ago.

Two out of every three children who have been examined so far, have never been vaccinated against smallpox, according to a preliminary report made to Dr. Fulton by Dr. J. H. M. Knox, Jr., Chief of the Bureau of Child Hygiene. Out of 1198 children from four to seven years old, examined during the month of June, only 342 had vaccination scars. The remaining 856 had never been protected against smallpox.

These figures were taken from reports of child health conferences held in fifteen counties, in widely separate places, and are therefore regarded as typical of the entire state. It is accordingly estimated that approximately 10,000 of the prospective first graders have never been vaccinated and therefore need to have this done before they can be admitted to school.

"Smallpox has been kept down in Maryland," Dr. Fulton said, in commenting on the figures, "through the careful enforcement of our vaccination law. Within the last few years there has been a serious flare-up of smallpox in this country and the United States has had the unenviable reputation of having more cases than have occurred in any other part of the world with the exception of British India. People in this country are so accustomed to be kept free from devastating epidemics that they carelessly neglect the means we have of protecting ourselves. Nothing but vaccination will prevent us from having the kind of outbreaks that have terrified other parts of the country. The old-fashioned family doctor used to vaccinate the babies in the families he attended, as a matter of routine, before they were a year old. That this is no longer the case is indicated by the examinations made by the Bureau of Child Hygiene. It is therefore necessary for the State Department of Health to see that the law requiring children to be vaccinated before they can be enrolled in school, is strictly enforced. Accordingly, my advice to parents whose children will enter school this Fall, is to have the children vaccinated now and not to wait until the school opens to have it done."

BUMPER WHEAT CROP.

The Southwest Has Millions of Bushels Ready.

The railroads, although making unusual preparations, are likely to be unable to meet the demands for moving the tremendous crop of wheat in Missouri, Kansas and Texas, that is now waiting along the tracks. Hundreds of millions of bushels, millions of dollars, and a hundred thousand box cars, are now the figures being used.

The railroads are fearing that their preparations will be twenty or twenty-five percent short of the demand. The harvest has been helped along ahead of time by hot weather, premature ripening, and the use of the new harvesting combine machine.

Anyway, the crop is moving to market and storage, and mountains of wheat are literally piled up along the railroads, and it is a big question as to how it will be disposed of, in its entirety, without much waste, as it must be stored up and held, somewhere.

From Slave to Tractor.

College Park, July 12.—A tractor of fair size and good quality can now be purchased for the price of an able-bodied slave in 1850, says R. F. Hale, who is representing the United States Department of Agriculture and the University of Maryland Experiment Station in a study of farm economic conditions of a half century or more ago.

It is interesting, says Mr. Hale, to speculate on the economic progress measured by these two extremes in meeting labor conditions on the farm. How would the economic output of an able-bodied slave, for instance, compare with the work performed by a modern tractor? Aside from the ethical and moral questions involved, how many modern farmers, if they had a choice, would prefer to invest their money in human rather than machine labor?

In 1850, however, there was no choice and the plantation owner listed his slaves as part of his valuable assets. An inventory of all personal property on the tobacco plantation of a land owner in the southern part of Prince Georges county listed the following slaves according to their age and value in 1850: Tom, age 37, $550; Jim, age 14, $300; Nell, age 28, $159; and Minnie, age 3, $50.

Other interesting sidelights, showing the economic progress of the past fifty or one hundred years, are expected to result from the study of farm prices in Maryland during earlier days. Those who have knowledge of old farm records, account books or diaries containing prices, will assist materially in the study by notifying R. F. Hale, College Park, Maryland.

Illinois University Bans Autos.

The University of Illinois has issued a regulation prohibiting students from owning or operating automobiles during the school year. Indiana State University took the same action some time ago, while Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin considered the matter for some time, but voted it down.

The reasons given for placing the ban on automobiles are; that they hold a direct relation to low scholastic standing; they cause a serious waste of time; numerous accidents involving considerable damage and serious bodily injury; violations of state and local laws governing traffic; cause unnecessary and dangerous congestion of traffic in streets adjacent to campus, and contributed to moral delinquencies, which resulted in dismissals from the University.

Legitimate Campaign Expenses.

The fact that millions of dollars were spent in the recent primaries in Pennsylvania, does not necessarily mean that much of the money was used for vote buying. For instance, Senator Reed, of Penna., made the statement that there are about 4,000,000 voters in the state, and that it costs about 6 cents to reach each one of them by mail, involving an expenditure of $240,000.

Newspaper publicity is very costly, also the maintaining of headquarters, cost of public meetings, travelling expenses, etc. Watchers at the thousands of polling places cost $5.00 per day—or about $14,000 per county. One of the candidates sent 250,000 letters to farmers, 250,000 to members of automobile clubs, 130,000 to members of fraternal societies, and 50,000 to school teachers.

When it is considered that there were 3 candidates for the Senatorship, 4 candidates for Governor, 36 for Congress, 25 for the State Senate and 280 for the house of representatives, it is very easy to figure out an approximate estimate of how high the legitimate expenses of a campaign might run in so large a state.

The President's Vacation.

It will not be President Coolidge's fault, but rather the fault of his being President, that his doings while off on vacation will furnish a daily news item for the newspapers, and as a topic is likely to become rather tiresome. It is all well enough to take the best of care of our chief executive, and not keep him hid away or out of touch with the country; but, the size of the fish he catches, or the scores he may make playing golf, or every little stunt he engages in, are hardly news items of importance, but rather a "nosing in" on privacy and play-time.

The big newspapers have an idea that it is quite enterprising to acquaint the public with the intimate details of the private life of noted individuals; and in so doing imitate the country weeklies that the city papers pretend to poke fun at, for it is equally as justifiable for weekly to "local" the little doings—of its home patrons as it is for the big daily to publish trifles about the notables of the country.

No doubt the President's vacation is partly spoiled by the spies and photographers hanging around his camp. In fact, it is probable that the latter are having the most enjoyable time, as they play a sort of game, get the outing, and are well paid for it, all at the same time.

So, until the vacation is over, the country will be daily interested in knowing how many mosquito bites Mr. and Mrs. President get, how they are getting along accumulating tan, how many miles a day they walk, the health of their pet dogs, whether they get caught out in a rain, and a lot of other like important events.

Prohibition in Politics.

Nobody expects the prohibition amendment to be repealed nor any material changes in the enforcement laws, for many years to come; but everybody does expect that bootleg booze will be an issue in politics, and a big complicating one, for quite a number of years.

It seems like a strange thing—a most discreditable thing—that the mere matter of appetite for alcoholic stimulants—an opportunity to get drunk, if one wants to—should be a country wide issue in such a country as the United States, and perhaps seriously interfere with our government as a great Nation; but, so it seems to be.

And this, in spite of the fact that before booze can again be legalized a two-thirds majority in both Senate and House favorable to it must be secured; and then a majority of the legislators in three-fourths of the states; apparently, almost impossible proposition; but, this does not hinder making the question a political one. Back of all the "wet" argument, there is just one big truth—a lot of people want to have the privilege of being either mildly stimulated, tipsy, or full sized drunk, and they do not care how much disorder, crime or death, follows, among other people.

So, prohibition is booked to get into politics to a much greater extent, within the coming ten or more years, than it ever has before, and will be a big factor in at least one Presidential campaign and election; and this question, bearing merely on animal appetite, may reach very much further in its final outcome. How far, no one can now safely predict.

Lowden for More Farm Co-operation.

Frank O. Lowden, who reshaped the government of Illinois and narrowly escaped becoming President, is centering now on farm relief.

He was among the early supporters of the Haugen farm aid bill, but its defeat finds him undismayed. He knows that legislation at best can never take the place of self-help by farmers themselves.

Hence he is in Denmark studying at first hand successful methods of co-operation. Interviewed there, he recently said:

"We intend to put co-operation over with the American farmer by showing him facts."

Here are some of the facts he has verified:

"There are many ways in which Denmark's experience shows that co-operation means more money for the farmer. It isn't alone that it enables him to get a better price for his produce. It enables him to grow better produce.

"When all the farmers of a district are organized for selling, they find one man who perhaps grows better corn than all the others. Another gets more milk per cow, and another makes better butter. Immediately this one best farmer becomes the standard for the whole district.

"Co-operation makes for better agricultural education and for better political knowledge because it brings men together in discussions affecting every-day life. Thus it makes better citizens. All of history shows that the destruction of a nation's rural life is followed by a destruction of its entire civilization. "This process is beginning in America, and it must be stopped if we're to have a healthy, sound nation. The way to stop it is to make the farmers more intelligent, more prosperous."

But to "sell" co-operation in America it is not enough to convince farmers it means more money for them. Our cities must be convinced that they, too, will benefit.

Mr. Lowden believes that this can be done here because it has been done in Scandinavian countries. He says: "I have secured recently interesting figures showing that while the price of wheat has fluctuated $1 to $2 a bushel, the price of bread in the same period never varied over 15 percent. Similarly, while hogs have varied from $6.75 to $14 per hundred weight, the price of bacon has only varied 15 percent.

"If during that period, wheat had been stabilized at $1.50 per bushel and hogs at $9, we would have had cheapening market the raw material manufacturer and dealer are bound to make plans on the basis of the highest price.

"Stabilization of farm product prices, therefore, will help the consumer as well as the farmer, who seldom, as a matter of fact, gets the higher prices, which generally go to speculators."

All of which confirms this newspaper's contention that the basic cure for American agriculture's depression is broad-scale co-operative marketing organization, not temporary subsidy.

Mr. Lowden's prestige among farmers should make his contribution to the movement for co-operation especially valuable.—Baltimore American.

'Ware the 'Wet' Press.

Nothing is more amusing than to read the news dispatches dealing with 'dry' hearings at Washington. Even the supposedly impartial press reports strain ludicrously to make it appear that information secured from the 'dry' workers was wrangled, forced, dragged out of a regular knock-down resistance of the 'drys' against the truth. The 'wets' are the frank, open, honest, transparent, pure advocates of truth; the 'drys' are the shady, furtive, dissembling practitioners of deception and concealment.

Well, this is war. The forces of the Government have been used without reserve to intimidate believers in the Constitution, and have never been used with anything like full force to expose the colossal and profitable disregard of the Constitution practised by men who have reason to think that the Government will act rather delicately toward them because of their connections. If this is a strong statement, there comes a time when, as between the Government and the Constitution, there is only the Constitution to choose.

That war is on now and the only weapon the 'drys' can use is the truth and to accuse them of refusing to use their own best weapon is rather silly. Great ado is made about the half-dozen members of Congress who were paid for speeches made in the prohibition campaign. The only ground for this inquiry is its possible use in preparing a charge that members of Congress favored prohibition legislation because they had previously been 'retained' as prohibition speakers. Every fact in this connection should be laid bare, because the facts will show that political figures who openly espoused prohibition did so at their political peril, and the amounts received were not large enough to pay the average 'wet' petition-circulator's daily drink bill.

We can remember most of those speakers in a day when prohibition was extremely unpopular; at exceeding risk they were willing to certify by their public appearance that prohibition was sufficiently important and sound to command the approval of men of position. The people of the country who were vitally interested in the removal of the great curse of a whisky-sodden people and a Government in partnership with booze did not think it immoral to provide the expenses of those men while they traveled and spoke. They do not think that all the armament of Congress and the press can make it appear immoral now.

Let the facts all come out, and then let the astute investigators uncover the facts regarding the 'wets' and bootlegging in this country. Having finished with that, there will be no more excuse for the fragile fiction that the country's mind is not made up to be 'dry.'—Dearborn Independent.

Grand Canyon Marvel of Peace and Beauty

We did not expect to love the canyon. Friends had presaged a deep, overwhelming round of earth's side. Colored postals and railroad folders had prepared us for crudely hued lozenges on the precipitate walls. We expected neat, zebra stripes of vermilion, ochre and cobalt.

Instead we looked into the beautiful soft gulch of the canyon and our hearts were won. The crisp Arizona morning was cupped there when we first beheld it—on the deep sunken plateau with its dotted firs, on the pale pastels of the irregular far walls. Truncated peaks wore crowns of melted azure light and lower wreaths of faded geranium. The immense peace of the great jagged bowl played over us, an unplumbed, unfathomable mantle of serenity.

We saw colors change, the pinks grow dull, the soft bands of azure break up, and etherize in the full noon, then brood together as the lights lengthened, and set in colder strands of petunia blue. On the slab side of the river walls we saw the sweetest pearls cling and the gulf brim with frostier blues, until it lost them in dusk and night. Then on the brim in the high, clean wind we walked by that invisible cavern, saw the stars, large, fringed and low, and knew that vast as a familiar place where we could be at peace.—Christian Science Monitor.

Ancient Industry Is That of Bread Baking

Baking is probably the very oldest industry man engaged in. Wheat and barley, the oldest cereals known to have been found, together with the plowshare fashioned of wood and the stone hand mill consisting of a hollowed stone and a stone ball-shaped crusher, among the remains left by prehistoric man. The oldest bread was made in the form of cakes or fritters simply prepared by mixing wheat or barley to a batter with water and milk and baking these batter cakes of maybe the size and form of our present-day griddle cakes on hot ashes or over red-hot coals, or a hot stone, which represented the first bread pan and oven combined. Salt was probably the only other ingredient used besides the milk and water, as there was no baking powder and yeast was not used until brewing beer from germinated barley had become known. The Egyptians had perfected both baking and brewing 1,500 years before the beginning of the Christian era.

Rubbing It In

A well-known actress was appearing in a play with a certain actor who was noted for his irritability. He complained that the woman continually laughed at him during one of his most important scenes.

At last he wrote her a letter, in which he said: "I am extremely sorry to tell you that it is impossible for me to make any effect in my scene if you persist in laughing at me on the stage. May I ask you to change your manner, as the scene is a most trying one?"

To this the actress replied: "You are quite mistaken. I never laugh at you on the stage. I wait till I get home!"

New One

Here is a news item that someone in Los Angeles can probably get away with—once.

It was to blow out a match that John Helfetz speeded his automobile through North Broadway, Yonkers, at 35 miles an hour.

"I had three girls in my car and one of them tried to light a cigarette," he explained to the judge, adding: "I guess I'm a bit of a-fashioned. I didn't want my girl to smoke, so I stepped

Fox Changes Color

The blue fox is a color phase of the Arctic, or white fox, which is circumpolar in range, being found particularly along the seacoast of Arctic and subarctic regions. Its normal winter coat is white, while the summer pelage is brown and tawny. The blue fox is dark bluish in winter and tends toward brownish in summer. There are intermediates in which the coat may be spotted blue and white, or the blue and white may be blended, producing a dingy or smoky-white appearance.

Leading Languages

French is possibly the simplest language to learn. The German grammar is extremely complicated and English pronunciation is difficult for certain foreigners. The English language also contains a great number of colloquialisms used in everyday speech, which takes some time to acquire. All languages do not contain the same number of words. The English language contains approximately 700,000 words; German dictionaries contain about 300,000 words; French, 210,000 words.

Fortune Close at Hand

Whatever is necessary for your improvement, your enjoyment, your usefulness, is close to you. Distance lends enchantment to the view, but when a man is wise he knows he is standing on enchanted ground. A man's star is never in the sky. It is in his brain. Your ship of gold is not on the high seas; it is at the quay waiting to be unloaded and discharged. Your fortune is not at the bottom of a rainbow; it is at your feet.—W. L. Watkinson.

Not Quite Sure

The demure young woman signed her name in the hotel register "Mrs. T. Brown," and asked the clerk whether there were any letters for her.

"I don't suppose," he said, taking one from the rack, "that this could be meant for you." And he handed her a letter addressed "Mrs. T. Browne."

"Oh, yes," said the young woman, eagerly, "that's mine! I recognize the writing!"

"But you spell your name differently," said the clerk. "You spell it 'B-r-o-w-n,' while the name on the letter has a final 'e.'"

"That's all right," she replied. "I'm never quite sure how he spells it."

"Who?"

"My husband, of course. You see, we've been married only two days!"

Indian Romance

When you see a little Indian boy on the Glacier National Park reservation sitting by a stream ruminating he is not playing hookey from school. No, he is in love with a Blackfoot maiden and he is there by the stream romantically vowing his troth so that the rushing waters will carry to his sweetheart the fervor of his soul's desire.

She, of course, lives a few miles down the course of the rivulet and, he hopes, is at this very moment seated somewhere on the bank thinking the same thoughts that absorb him. Love making is just as queer among the Indians as it is when it takes possession of the pale-face youth.

Term "Scapegoat" Is From Biblical Days

During the war, especially, many a man was removed from office or from a high command more as the victim of a policy than for any sin or omission of his own. He was said to be a "scapegoat," because he was, more or less, suffering for faults that were by no means all his own.

This passage, from the Bible, illustrates the present use of the term "scapegoat": "Aaron shall cast lots upon the two goats; one lot for the Lord, and other lot for the scapegoat, and Aaron shall bring the goat upon which the Lord's lot fell, and offer him for a sin offering. But the goat on which the lot fell to be the scapegoat shall be presented alive before the Lord, to make an atonement with him, and to let him go for a scapegoat into the wilderness. . . . And Aaron shall lay both his hands upon the head of the live goat, and confess over him all the iniquities of the children of Israel . . . putting them upon the head of the goat, and shall send him away by the hand of a fit man into the wilderness: And the goat shall bear upon him all their iniquities unto a land not inhabited: and he shall let go the goat in the wilderness."

Thus, through three thousand years or more, has this pitiful picture of the scapegoat come to us, to be used today as the symbol for a man who is the victim, more or less innocent, of other people's mistakes and errors.

Phrases That Have Been Worn "Ragged"

The initiative faculty so noticeable in children is responsible for the ease with which a phrase often half understood spreads through the community. Thus the words "psychological moment," which as a joke were originally tolerable, have been used in season and out of season until the repetition is unbearable.

To some extent the phrase is illiterate, for if translated out of Greek it means "the study of the mind moment." What Oscar Wilde intended his character to say was the critical, right, suitable or opportune moment—no more than that. "Psychological" is not the synonym for any of these terms.

Another silly phrase which has caught the fancy of our grown-up children is, "I had a brain wave," when all that is meant is, "It suddenly occurred to me." This is often used by those who know little or nothing about the brain or about waves. There is a third or fourth-rate type of mind which rejoices in phrases and proverbs such as "the aching void," "the better the day the better the deed," and other superficial non-sequiturs.—D. Fraser Harris in the Contemporary Review, London (Living Age).

First "Potter's Field"

Outside Jerusalem in biblical times was a piece of land called Akeldama, meaning "field of blood." It was used for the burial of strangers. According to Matthew 27:3-9, it was originally a potter's field, and received the name Akeldama from the fact that it was bought with the money paid Judas to betray Jesus, and subsequently returned by him to the chief priests. According to Acts 1:18, it was called the "field of blood" because Judas here committed suicide. At any rate the fact that it had been a potter's field and a place of burial for strangers gave rise to the present meaning of the term. Since the Seventh century a place called Akeldama has been pointed out in Jerusalem as the original potter's field, and its possession as a holy place keenly contested for by the Christian sects.

Reward of Ambition

He was lonely. He wanted to make friends. He saw an ad in a magazine which said: "Play a saxophone and get ahead socially." "My chance!" he thought. "Now I will get to know people."

He sent for the saxophone. It arrived. He blew in it for some time. He didn't know anyone in the apartment house when he started blowing into it. He knows them all now. And some people from next door besides. He did get ahead socially—about three blocks ahead of the nearest pursuer.

However, he's lost interest in music.—Life.

Pictures on Doors

Often in bedrooms there are so many doors that the effect is not particularly attractive. In such a case it is possible to select a series of pictures which may be mounted on the doors, in the upper panels. Subjects which are related to each other should be chosen, such as a number of flower prints, or architectural scenes, or silhouettes, or something else attractive.

The picture should fit the panel or else be of the general proportions of it. It may be carefully and smoothly mounted, and then a coat of colorless sheen applied, to protect it.

Why, to Be Sure

It was raining terribly. The playing field was a sea of mud. The players came up out of every scrimmage like pulling a flivver out of a mud-hole. Everything was a mess. The football jerseys had lost their brilliant hues and the white pants of the officials were a dark gray shade.

"Isn't it terrible that they should get so dirty! Look at that fellow's shirt. How will they ever get them all clean?"

"Say, what do you suppose they got the scrub team for?"—Grinnell Mal-

Garage Man Couldn't Pass Up That Chance

 "Yes, sir. Want some cylinder oil, too?"

"No, just gas."
 "Do you want some paint? Your car needs it and we've got some dandy paint—heat-proof, dirt-proof, guaranteed to wear long."

"No, I want only gas today."
 "Then you want your car washed?"

"I said I wanted only gas."
 "You want a tire then. We've got some good nonskids. Only $40 apiece. Want one? Yours—"

"I tell you I want only gas today!"
 "Yes—sir; but—say, your rear lights are all shot to pieces. You need new ones. We just got in some dandy new crack-proof celluloid lights. Shall I put some in?"

"No! I want only gas, do you understand?"

"Your magneto needs adjusting—didja hear that funny noise in the motor when you stop? It needs adjusting. I'll fix it, what?"

"No! I want only gas, gas! Do you hear!"

"Yes, sir!" And with the gas obtained, the exasperated motorist drove angrily away. But for once the garage man had got even with his barber.—W. Peter Schramm, in the New Yorker.

Old Yuletide Custom Passing in England

An old custom, now almost extinct, existing only in certain portions of rural England, was that of the Christmas "waits" who went from house to house, singing carols, or discoursing music from various instruments, not always harmonious, and yet under the holy impression of the season the wild minstrelsy rang out upon the frosty midnight air and fell upon the listening ear with pleasure. Not more than forty years ago in Great Britain, it was a common thing for these singers of the holy night to pass along the streets, pausing here and there to render some song appropriate to the season. The origin of this custom may undoubtedly be traced to the Gloria in Excelsis, the song which the angels sang at the birth of the Redeemer near Bethlehem.

HARNEY.

Owing to the fact that we have not written for some time, for reasons best known to ourselves, but having a few minutes time at present we thought perhaps it might be wise to send in a few items for publication, these will doubtless be interesting to a few and uninteresting to many.

The H. E. Duncan Milling Co., has completed the dam at the mill and now has a good water supply, this will undoubtedly be good news for the many farmers, who patronize the place.

Our furniture factory workers were all off on vacation last week, and quite a goodly number were in camp along the Monocacy; among those best known in this community was the Myers family, who were for many years our popular millers at this place.

Clyde Harner, of Cleveland, Ohio, visited friends here, several weeks ago, were accompanied to their home by John D. Hesson, of this place, who says that while he was there, he was taken around over the country for many miles. Mr. Harner is in the transfer and delivery business, and makes many long trips over the country. Mr. Hesson has returned very much pleased with his visit.

Our farmers had fine weather for their harvesting, and some have been threshing and report the yield exceptionally good, and the quality of grain excellent. We are told that oats will be fairly good crop; and with the corn looking fairly well, at present, a few good rains at the proper time, promises to be an average crop also, while the hay crop was short, it was much better than had been expected in the early part of the season. Gardens, generally, are looking well; cabbage, beans and tomatoes are making a good showing, while potatoes promises to be reasonably good. Cherries were an abundant crop. Apples will be a short crop, while pears and other fruit will be fairly good.

David Michaels, of this place, who had the misfortune to get hurt while working as an electrician in Baltimore, and was compelled to have his leg amputated, was taken back to the Hospital again, and was compelled to have another piece of the leg taken off. We are informed that he stood the operation fine, and is doing nicely.

Our boys, who have been working at the brick yard in Gettysburg, have been laid off for several weeks. A few have gone back to work, while others have not yet gotten on the job.

We are informed that a few of our boys have secured work at the Gettysburg Silk Mill, and are ordered to report on Friday evening, for night work.

Candidates are beginning to call around soliciting support for the coming primary. We hope that we can find a good man from this district for Commissioner, because it will be useless to ask of our people for any one who will not pledge themselves to finish our road to the Pennsylvania line, only a distance of a short half mile.

Several parties have been here, looking at what is left of the Haines store. We hope that some one will soon rent and start business in this nice room and fine location, in a rich farming community.

(We trust that our correspondent will find the time to send letters more frequently.—Ed.)

MAYBERRY.

Too Late

"I've come," said the woman politician, "to ask you to support me." "I'm sorry, miss," replied the man. "but you're too late. I've been married for years."

Cake Makes Town Famous

Nuremberg is one of the best known towns in Germany so far as American readers are concerned, probably because of Wagner's opera, "The Meistersinger of Nuremberg," but the fact remains that in Europe Nuremberg is more famous for its cake known as the Lubkuechen. The cake is made from a remarkable old recipe, and furthermore is made in animal shapes or, as is the case of the more ambitious bakers, in human poses, one of the best known being that of a country squire out walking. The cakes are shipped to all parts of the world.

FEESERSBURG.

Back to the old home came some of our citizens of the long ago. On Thursday, Miss Mollie Moore, eldest child of Dr. Moore, who resided in Middleburg, and was physician for this locality more than fifty years ago, and her nephew, Duer Moore, called on the few remaining friends of her childhood.

On Friday, Raymond Angel and family, visited some of their relatives in this neighborhood.

Mrs. H. B. Fogle and daughter, and Mrs. Alfred Zollickoff, of Uniontown, spent Wednesday at Grove Dale.

Hot a plenty—but don't the corn grow!

The C. E. Social at the Birely home was enjoyed by about 65 persons. 'Twas an every-day dress party, and everyone fined for wearing fineries. The two little girls in blue and two big boys in khaki ought to have had a prize—but no fault could be found with mother Koons. Refreshments served on the lawn, under electric lights in Japanese dress.

Miss Dorothy Utermahlen, of Bark Hill, is spending part of her vacation with her aunt, Mrs. Cleon Wolf.

They Advertise.

A hen is not supposed to have Much common sense or tact, Yet every time she lays an egg She cackles forth the fact. A rooster hasn't got a lot Of intellect to show,

But none the less most roosters have Enough good sense to crow, The mule, the most despised of beasts, Has a persistent way

Of letting folks know he's around By his persistent bray, The busy little bees they buzz, Bulls bellow and cows, moo,

The watchdogs bark, the ganders quack, And doves and pigeons coo, The peacock spreads his tail and squawks,

Pigs squeal and robins sing, And even serpents know enough To hiss before they sting,

But man, the greatest masterpiece That nature could devise, Will often stop and hesitate Before he'll advertise.

(By Ellis Hayes, in the Williamston Mich., Enterprise).

A Sour Note

In a certain midwestern university letter grades are used, A, B, C, D and E, the latter standing for complete failure. A student recently appended the following brief note to his poorly written paper:

"Dear Professor: I know this is pretty bad; but I have been awfully busy landing the campus sings and have had little time for study."

When the paper was returned, it bore a short annotation. The professor had drawn a musical clef and inserted a single note—E flat. Beneath it he had written, "Sing this!"—Youth's Companion.

The Limit

The tightest man of all I know, Goes to church by radio; Thinks the hymns and sermon great But tunes out while they pass the plate.

SOUND WAVE NOW BIG HELP AT SEA

Radio Brings Marked Change in Navigation.

San Francisco.—Radio, which has dissipated the pall of loneliness that once overhung ships on the isolated parts of the high seas, also is effecting a marked change in navigation methods.

More than half of the larger boats visiting Pacific coast ports are now getting direction signals over the sound wave, and as a result the older, more cumbersome ways of figuring distances, longitude and latitude are fading.

The information that goes to the captain in his chartroom through the "direction finder" enables him to determine his exact position at sea, without reference to the ship's speed or detailed log.

A "loop," which is the antennae, is operated on bearings like a weather vane at the top of its shaft. When this is swung into a position that gives the maximum intensity of sound, determined by ear, it is pointing directly at the signaling shore station. It then is swung at right angles so that no signal whatever is received.

In this position dials and hands operating over a Sperry-gyro compass record the direction of the ship, eliminating the necessity of figuring variation because of magnetic attraction, as must be done with a compass.

Another advance in navigation creditable to the radio is the manner of giving ships at sea the correct time. In the old days the captain set his chronometers when in port or offshore where he was within range of a flashing light signal, the dropping of a metal ball or the whine of a siren. These adjuncts are still employed, but the navigator need not depend on them. For he can get his time at stated intervals no matter in what part of the world his ship may be.

Those on the Pacific—from Alaska to Korea—are given a time signal every day at 10 p. m. San Francisco time. It has been caught from points as distant as London.

The time given to the navigator is "accurate to one part in 170,000," which in lay terms means that it is not in error more than a half second. To the average man a "second" means little; to the Mare Island naval observatory it is 1-86400th part of a day. Time is measured much more minutely than by "seconds," however.

The observer gets his time, not from the sun as is popularly supposed, but by the movements of stars, which are invariable. If a mistake of a half-second should be made one day it would almost inevitably be corrected the next time the observer peeped through his telescope and saw a certain star pass a fixed point in the heavens, determined by a line on the telescope.

Those on the Pacific—from Alaska to Korea—are given a time signal every day at 10 p. m. San Francisco time. It has been caught from points as distant as London.

Has to Earn His Living

New York.—John E. Andrus, formerly of Minneapolis, known here as the world's richest straphanger, is eighty-five years old, but still has to earn his living, he says.

"What's a million these days?" asked the reputed owner of $100,000,000. He can't retire and take things easy, like John D. Rockefeller, he explains, "because he's rich and can afford to take things easy, but I have to make my own living."

Mr. Andrus goes to work every day to the financial district on the subway. He says he hasn't had to see a doctor since he started traveling underground, and that the noise helps him to think.

Signifies Writer's Slip

The word "sic," introduced into a quotation, means that the words are those of the writer quoted and not those of the present writer. Suppose you were writing to a friend and quoting a remark from a paper that "the boot should then be placed on the head"—when "foot" is meant—you might add (sic) after the words to emphasize the fact that the slip is not yours. The word actually means "so," implying that it was so written.—Exchange.

On a Japanese Railway Train

The toy train jogs along at 10 or 15 miles an hour, unless it be an express, when it sometimes rocks across space at twice that speed. When well out of the station, the sound of whistles dropping to the floor is heard. Stockinged feet are drawn up on the bench. The men sprawl at full length, while the women crouch in any space left by their lords and masters.

At every station there are provided little lunch boxes of thin white wood divided into compartments. These are filled with rice, shredded fish and pickled lotus root. Then there are earthen pots containing tea, the covers forming the cups; and fish nets filled with oranges, bean cakes and bananas. Soon the car floor suggests a neglected tenement alley.—From "Japan in Silhouette," by Trowbridge Hall.

Signifies Writer's Slip

The word "sic," introduced into a quotation, means that the words are those of the writer quoted and not those of the present writer. Suppose you were writing to a friend and quoting a remark from a paper that "the boot should then be placed on the head"—when "foot" is meant—you might add (sic) after the words to emphasize the fact that the slip is not yours. The word actually means "so," implying that it was so written.—Exchange.

Facts Concerning Cattle Feeding.

Every year a good many farmers make the mistake of cutting out their grain feeding during the Summer.

Ordinary pasture grasses are largely water. Only a small part of all the grass your cows eat can be used for maintaining their bodies and producing milk. And not all of that is actually utilized, because part of this dry matter is merely hard indigestible fibre which is passed off as waste.

Grass is all right—as a conditioner and appetizer. It will make your cows feel good and will probably cause an increase in milk flow just after you turn them out.

But—unless you keep on with your grain feeding, at least once a day, better still night and morning, that increase in milk flow will prove to be only a temporary flush that will soon subside to lower levels than before you let the cows out of the barn. And then comes the worst of it—your cows in a bad slump—not able to get back to normal—drying off a month or two ahead of time.

Feed them grain right through the Summer. In that way only will they get the nutrients they must have.

Corn is cheap. To keep your Cows producing through the Summer, feed Corn Chop and our

POULTRY

GROWING CHICKS NEED CLEAN PEN

Costs of poultry production can be lowered by raising big hatches just as the cost of pork production can be reduced by the raising of big litters. Heavy mortality among chicks can often be prevented by timely observation and care.

By the time they are a week old the chicks should be allowed, in the ordinary season, to run out doors. Confine them in small yards at first or until they learn where the heat is to be found and they will go in and out of the brooder house freely. In the early spring the yard should be inclosed in muslin-covered frames which later can be supplanted by poultry netting or lath. As the chick grows, the yard should be enlarged sufficiently to keep them on green grass. Once put on free range, there is likely to be difficulty in feeding the chicks unless they are kept apart from the hens. The same difficulty arises when chicks of different ages are being raised close together. To avoid interference by the older chicks or hens, the younger ones should be fed in small movable pens, says N. E. Chapman, poultry specialist at University farm at St. Paul. The sides of the pens may be made of lath placed so that the lower strip is high enough to permit the entrance of the smaller chicks, but low enough to keep out the larger ones.

Pullets will grow more rapidly if separated from the cockerels when about eight weeks old. Cockerels that are to be sold as broilers should have the run of a small green yard while being prepared for market.

Open Type of Equipment Useful for the Chicks

There are two good reasons why some open type of equipment is useful in raising young chickens. They are: Need for more room than is supplied by the regular equipment and need for a house that can be thoroughly ventilated in hot weather.

A house can be cheaply constructed that will be of material help in successfully growing out young chickens. For a small flock this can be made six feet square and a board roof extending from six inches to a foot over the inclosure. The framework of the house may be made of 2 by 2-inch pieces if they are well braced. Two-inch wire mesh is satisfactory for the walls. No floor is necessary, as the house can easily be moved.

On a small house the side walls do not need to be over two and one-half feet high, which will make it somewhat higher in the center. Low roosts should be provided so the chicks may be comfortable and be off of the ground.

After the warm weather comes the protection which the chickens need is from storms and rodents and other pests which bother mostly at night.

Transmit Tuberculosis From Poultry to Stock

Some thought should be given by poultry raisers, particularly in the dairy districts of northern Illinois, to the probability of finding tuberculosis in their poultry flock. It has been definitely proved, as described in the Orange Judd Illinois Farmer, that tuberculosis may be transmitted from poultry to other live stock or from other live stock to poultry.

If chickens show distinct white spots on the liver it is safe to be very suspicious that they have tuberculosis. In case of any question on matters of this kind it is possible to send specimens to the state universities and arrange to have technical examination made.

Mash Brings Forth Eggs

It's the mash that is going to influence the egg yield, yet if hens have their choice of grain or mash, they may slight the mash. By giving them a light feed of grain in the morning, their hunger will drive them to the mash hopper and hence to the nests. One hundred hens should consume 12 to 15 pounds of scratch grain daily, two-thirds of which should be given them at the night feeding. Let the fowls go to roost with a full crop.

Feed for Ducklings

Equal measures of rolled oats and bread crumbs, with a sprinkling of about 3 per cent sand, will make a good starting feed for incubator-hatched ducklings. This can be fed three times per day until the fourth day, when a mash composed of equal parts of rolled oats, bread crumbs, bran and corn meal will produce good results. A mash recommended after the first week consists of three parts bran, one part low-grade flour, and one part corn meal.

How to Handle Roup

Roup in chicks is successfully handled as follows: Remove all ailing birds from the rest, to check the spread of the disease. If over-crowded in houses, relieve the condition, giving the light varieties like the Leghorns three and a half square feet of floor space per bird and the heavier varieties four square feet. Provide good ventilation without direct drafts. Wash the eyes and nostrils with 3 per cent boric acid solution, afterwards greasing the head.

Kentucky County Is Rid of Scrub Sires

First Community in Country to Accomplish Feat.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The manner in which Union county, Ky., disposed of its last scrub bull is described by County Agent R. O. Wilson in a report received by the United States Department of Agriculture. A survey made early in the year showed that cattle owners in Union county had in use 103 pure-bred bulls, 22 grades and seven scrubs. Through publicity and personal interviews with owners of grade and scrub bulls, the county agent succeeded in getting the last scrub bull in the county removed during the year. Of the 22 grade bulls only four remained, and their owners are planning to replace them with pure breeds. This county appears to be the first in the United States entirely free from scrub bulls, and it is very close to a pure-bred sire basis with respect to its breeding stock. The present status is the result of live stock betterment work started five years ago by County Agent L. C. Brewer.

On January 1, 1926, 550 live stock owners in this county were participating in the "Better Sires—Better Stock" campaign conducted by the various states and the United States Department of Agriculture. All of these stock owners have agreed to use pure-bred males exclusively in all breeding operations. Material financial benefits already are evident in the superior quality of the on-coming young stock.

Grapevines Thrive in a Wide Variety of Soils

Grapevines thrive in a wide variety of soils. Those that are too shallow, wet or excessively dry should be avoided. Sandy loams, loams and gravelly loams grow vigorous vines that carry productive crops, says a writer in the Rural New Yorker. In commercial practice the vineyard is plowed early in the spring, then the soil is worked into a fine texture through cultivation and thus kept until the latter part of July. At this time a seeding of clover, millet, rape or rye and hairy vetch should be made. The crop thus put in is allowed to occupy the ground until the following spring, when it is plowed under. The home vineyard should be plowed or the soil spaded about the vines, and all weed growth suppressed during the active growing season. Usually frequent hand hoeing will suffice to accomplish this end.

Grapevines over a wide range of country are responding with increased growth and productiveness through the use of nitrate of soda scattered about the vines in early spring just as leaf growth is starting. The usual treatment per vine is six ounces of the material. Some commercial growers use twice this quantity per vine with good results. It might be well to begin with the smaller amount and gradually increase it if occasion requires.

Milk-Producing Cow Is Entitled to Good Feed

In order to be most profitable, all live stock must be fed for a definite purpose: For instance, a dry beef cow can be maintained very successfully and very cheaply on coarse, cheap feed such as corn fodder, corn silage, hay and straw. It would be a waste of money to feed such a cow any considerable amount of grain. A cow producing milk through the winter months, however, requires a good grain ration liberally fed in addition to a liberal supply of good roughage and it would be just as much a waste of money not to give this grain to the cow in milk as it would be to give it to the dry cow that doesn't need it. Likewise there are proper feeds and proper amounts of feed required by every type of live stock and the most economical and profitable feeding practice is to give each type of animal the kind and amount of feed needed by that type of animal.

FARM NOTES

Plan to take an inventory this year. It gives the most returns for the time spent on it of any record the farmer can keep.

Dark brown or black spots in potatoes may result from piling them too deeply in bins, from lack of ventilation, or too much warmth.

Grease is better than oil for protecting plowshares from rust when they are stored for the winter, as the grease stays where it is put.

Soy beans should be planted either with the corn planter in rows three feet apart at the rate of about 20 pounds of seed an acre, or with a grain drill at the rate of about 50 to 60 pounds an acre.

Most of the cereal crop insects confine their activities to crops belonging to the grass family. The practice of crop rotation in which a leguminous crop is used is therefore a good method of reducing insect damage.

Give a hog a chance at the cafeteria system of picking his own food and he will show more sense than many men would under the same conditions. A hog will choose enough of each of the foods offered so that he has a balanced ration.

WHO WOULD HAVE GOLD?

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

Who would have gold? It isn't hard to gain: Go plant the seed, the Lord will send the rain And fill the fertile fields with yellow grain.

Who gold desires? Then sow the rolling hill, Or plant a little garden, if you will, Or put a box upon a window-sill.

And plant a bulb, or give a root a hold, And then some day observe a flower unfold. It isn't hard to gain—who would have gold?

The summer sun will ripen all your wheat, A yellow rose will make your garden sweet, A yellow jonquill cheer your window-seat.

Upon your path the summer's petals fall, And autumn's yellow leaves adorn the wall. Who would have gold? It isn't hard at all!

Mother's Cook Book

Die when I will, I want it said of me, by those who knew me best, that I always plucked a thistle and planted a flower where I thought a flower would grow.

CHEESE AS FOOD

CHEESE is one of our most valuable protein foods; is concentrated and has very little waste. When the price is high compare it with meat, one of the other proteins which we all like, and notice the difference in waste.

Cheese Omelet.
Beat two egg yolks until thick, add two tablespoonfuls of water, salt and pepper to taste. Beat the whites until stiff and add one cupful of grated cheese. Put a tablespoonful of butter in a hot, smooth frying pan; when hot pour in the lightly mixed omelet. Cook until well set, place in the oven to finish cooking on the top. Serve at once on a hot platter.

Welsh Rarebit.
Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add two tablespoonfuls of flour, and when well blended add one cupful of hot milk; cook until smooth and creamy. Add one cupful of grated cheese and when the cheese is melted serve on buttered toast or hot crackers. To make the dish a little more tasty add half a dozen chopped olives.

Cheese Fondue.
Pour one cupful of scalded milk over one cupful of soft bread crumbs, add three-fourths of a cupful of soft cheese cut into bits, one tablespoonful of butter, and salt and pepper to taste. Beat five egg yolks until thick, add to the cheese mixture and fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Bake in a well-greased dish for twenty minutes or until puffed and cooked to the center.

Cheese and Celery Salad.
Select firm, crisp, tender celery and choose the stalks which have deep grooves. Cut into inch pieces and fill with seasoned cream cheese to which chopped onion, green pepper and nuts have been added. Heap a half dozen of these filled stalks on lettuce and serve with a French dressing. This same method may be used for longer stalks and serve them as a salad accompaniment.

Hot Ham and Tomato Sandwiches.
Saute thin slices of lean ham very quickly in a frying pan. Peel and slice thin some ripe tomatoes. Have ready slices of white bread cut one-fourth inch thick and lightly toasted. Spread toast with salad dressing, cover with ham, then a slice of tomato and spread with salad dressing and chopped lettuce leaves. Cover with toast spread on one side with salad dressing. Cut into triangles and garnish with sliced pickle. Serve with coffee.

Baked Mackerel.
If salt soak over night, skin side up, changing the water several times. Put to bake skin-side down, adding a few teaspoonfuls of water. Cook 20 minutes, or until the fish loosens from the bones. After ten minutes cover with sweet cream and baste often during the baking. Serve with sauce poured over the fish.

How Land Is Used
The use of land in the United States for all purposes is as follows: Fourteen per cent crops for feed, 3 per cent humid improved pasture, 9 per cent humid unimproved pasture, 31 per cent arid and semi-arid pasture and grazing land, 12 per cent forest cover and burned-over land pasture, 13 per cent forest cover and burned over land not pasture, 12 per cent roads, railroads, cities, farmsteads and other land not in pasture, 2 per cent crops for fiber, 4 per cent crops for food.

THE CALL OF MOSES

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 3:1; 4:12.
GOLDEN TEXT—Certainly I will be with thee.—Ex. 3:12.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Moses at the Burning Bush.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Moses, the Shepherd.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Facing a Great Opportunity.

I. The Lord Speaks to Moses From the Burning Bush (3:1-6).

It was while keeping the flock of his father-in-law in the desert that the Lord appeared to Moses in the vision of the burning bush. Moses stepped aside to behold this strange sight and was taught the essential lesson of the proper approach to God. The Lord did not leave him long in suspense. He told him that He was the God of his fathers, the covenant God. As soon as he knew that it was God that was speaking to him, he hid his face.

II. Moses' Commission as the Deliverer of His People (3:7-10).

Observe:
1. God's active interest in His people (v. 7).
2. In a preamble of this commission God declared:

(1) "I have seen the affliction of my people." So keenly conscious is God of all that goes on in the world that not one of His chosen ones can be touched without His notice.
(2) "I have heard their cries." We sometimes feel that God does not hear, but no cry ever goes up from the heart of His covenant child unheard.
(3) "I know their sorrows." Many indeed are the sorrows of God's children. They are so diverse, but He knows all about them and will adapt himself in grace to their need.

2. God's gracious obligation to His people (vv. 8, 9).
(1) To deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians.
(2) "To bring them up out of the land."
(3) "To bring them into a good land and large—unto a land flowing with milk and honey."

3. God's commission to Moses (v. 10).
"Come now, therefore, and I will send thee unto Pharaoh that thou mayest bring forth my people, the children of Israel out of Egypt."

III. Moses' Objections Patiently Heard and Removed (3:11-4:10).

1. His personal unworthiness (v. 11).
He said, "Who am I that I should go unto Pharaoh?" He realized his insufficiency for this task. Moses did not refuse to go, but laid his difficulty before the Lord. God answered this difficulty by assuring him that He would be with him.

2. The difficulty of the people to understand Moses' relationship to God (vv. 13, 14).
Moses knew how unwilling they were to acknowledge him as their deliverer forty years before. Since God changes his name as he assumes a new relationship to his people, Moses inquired as to what that new relationship would be and his corresponding name. The Lord promptly met this difficulty by showing a name differing in many respects from all others previously given. This new name is "I am." This name is from the Hebrew "to be." It indicates:

(1) God's self-existence.
It sets forth the idea that God is the self-existent one and the source of all existence. There is no existence apart from Him.

(2) His self-sufficiency.
He said, "I am that I am." God is the unique one. He is not dependent upon any other existence.

(3) His unchangeableness.
"I am that I am" may be expanded to mean, I am what I always was. What I always was and am I always will be. The "I AM" of this passage is the Jesus Christ of the New Testament. Therefore the apostle could say, "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, today and forever."

3. Unbelief on the part of the people (4:1).

This difficulty the Lord met by supplying him with credentials which could not be gainsaid. He was given the power to perform supernatural wonders (4:2).

4. Lack of eloquence (4:10).

He confessed that he was slow of speech and of a slow tongue. His ability to speak had not been improved by the Lord's message to him. The Lord's reply (v. 11) carried a real rebuke. He assured him that the God who had made man's mouth could give man the ability to use it. This difficulty the Lord in His infinite patience met by providing an assistant in the person of his brother Aaron.

The Truth

Next to the Crucifixion of the Lord Jesus Christ there is no truth that you and I need more to lay hold of than the truth of the living Christ—alive today, and personally present with all who trust in Him.—C. A. R. Janvier.

Need of Prayer

Deeper than the need of men, deeper than the need of money, eye, deep down within this spiritless life of ours is the need of world-wide prevailing prayer.—Robert E. Speer.

Modern Home Aided Byrd Pole Dash; Sugar Cane Fought Cold of North

The House in the Arctic.

Loading Ship for Trip.

Byrd in Airship and Doughnut Boat.

A MODERN home built in the Arctic defied the death-dealing cold of the Polar Regions and proved an invaluable aid to Lieutenant Commander Richard E. Byrd in his successful flight to the North Pole, which he circled three times in a record breaking flight of 1,500 miles in 15 hours and 30 minutes at an average speed of 98.75 miles an hour.

It was at the Spitzbergen base, King's Bay, where this first modern house was constructed amid the snow and ice of the Arctic immediately upon the arrival of Lieutenant Byrd and his companions, as a permanent home and observation station for the explorers. The house, which rose up on the horizon of the frigid north in marked contrast to the igloo of the eskimo, was equipped with a complete radio outfit that those who remained at the base while Lieutenant Byrd made his thrilling dash to the Pole in his speeding Fokker might keep in touch with their chief and the outside world, which they kept informed as to the progress and success of the flight.

It was to this same home that he returned after his hazardous trip and from which some of the first messages were sent to the waiting public, telling them through the lanes of the air that Byrd had circled the pole three times and had returned to his Spitzbergen home in safety, adding one of the most memorable pages to the history of Arctic exploration.

Sugar Cane Fights Polar North.

When Lieutenant Byrd left the Brooklyn Navy Yard on the ship Chantier he declared he had the best and most scientifically equipped expedition that ever had started for the North Pole. Special plans were made for the erection of his Arctic home. Boards of celotex insulating lumber made from bagasse (sugar cane fiber after all sugar juices have been extracted) were carried along with the latest inventions to aid in polar exploration. This building material is very light and is filled with millions of air cells, which give it great insulation value and resistance to change in temperature, especially the severe cold. One odd circumstance in connection with the use of this material is that the sugar cane of the south was utilized to fight the cold of the north.

Celotex was selected instead of lumber because tests made by the United States Bureau of Standards and its universal use in building construction all over the world, had demonstrated that this insulating lumber would keep the quarters of the explorers warmer and protect their living conditions more securely than ordinary building material.

It was only after careful investigation by the scientific men in the expedition that celotex was selected. These authorities pointed out that the protection afforded by its insulation efficiency was three times as great as ordinary lumber and nearly twelve times as great as that of brick and other masonry material. The ship Chantier also was lined with celotex as an added precaution to keep the ship warm while the explorers used it in the preliminary stages of the expedition.

In practically every other way this expedition was more scientifically prepared than any of its predecessors. These included inventions of Commander Byrd himself. A simple sun compass conceived by Byrd and developed by Mr. Bumstead of the National Geographic Society, superseded the complicated German device, developed three years ago for Amundsen. The drift indicator also was Byrd's invention. The bubble sextant by which the navigator obtains his bearings while in flight was another one of his inventions. Still another scientific development was a quick method of telling when one is at the North Pole. This has been worked out by G. W. Littlehales, the navy's hydrographic engineer.

Device Locates the Pole.

Byrd and others contributed to a chart of the magnetic lines flowing toward the magnetic North Pole, which is in Bolthia Land, 1,200 miles south of the Pole. Between Bolthia Land and the Pole the compass points south instead of north and over much of the Arctic it is badly disturbed by the discrepancy of position between the geographical North Pole and the magnetic North Pole.

This chart of the magnetic lines, flowing to the magnetic North Pole, although it was far from complete, was such as to enable the navigator to tell in what direction the compass should point from any spot in the Arctic. With this knowledge, the erratic behavior of the compass becomes orderly and it is once again a useful instrument.

A third type of compass used was a device of infinite sensitiveness—a revolving electrical coil, which is adjusted to a given relation with the magnetism of the earth. This, the sun compass, and the magnetic compass were each used to correct the other.

Lieutenant Byrd in his flight used a quick method of telling when he was actually at the Pole. This was the invention worked out by Mr. Littlehales, the U. S. Navy hydrographic engineer. It shows the sun's position from the North Pole at every hour of the day and every day of the year. When the flyer is near the Pole he can, by ascertaining the exact position of the sun, prove that he is near the Pole.

Flies 3,000 Miles Over Arctic.

The expedition, backed by such men as John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., had three main objects.

1—To prove that air navigation in the Arctic is feasible and that freight and messenger travel over the top of the world is certain to come.
2—To hunt for new land in the unexplored areas of the Arctic.
3—To conquer the North Pole from the air as a sporting adventure and as a demonstration of what a plane can do—not a geographical study, as the Pole was bagged for all time by Admiral Peary.

Probably no one knows more about Arctic flying than Commander Byrd. From the Greenland base of the MacMillan expedition at Etah last year he flew 3,000 miles over the Arctic, studying the behavior of oil, motors, compasses, and other navigation instruments at great altitudes over the Polar sea.

With him this time Commander Byrd took a noted fuel expert, who is Flying Commander G. O. Noble, as it requires great skill and pains to prevent the freezing of lubricating oil and stiffened action of the motors, if forced to work on the plane in the open at great altitudes with the thermometer at 60 to 70 below zero. The points which favored the month of May were that the Arctic fog had not begun to rise and heavy snows still covered the land and afforded many good landing places.

A factor of safety pointed out by Commander Byrd in connection with the use of the Fokker machine is that it carries a reserve engine. It has three engines. With a light load one is expected to be sufficient to maintain the plane in flight. With a normal load, two engines will do the work. If two engines break down at one time, when the plane is not too heavily loaded, it may fly with the use of one engine. The Fokker machine has a wing-spread of slightly more than 64 feet. It is said to be a marvel of airship construction.

The other airplane—the Curtis Oriole—was to have been used chiefly in finding landing fields so that if the fliers found their main landing place covered with a fog they might go elsewhere.

The Chantier was equipped with a powerful radio transmitter to send back the news of the expedition. The Fokker also is equipped with a receiving and transmitting set. Commander Byrd not only kept the world informed of the progress of the expedition, but received through the Chantier weather warnings to guide him in his flight.

How Expedition Was Equipped.
Forty-five hundred pounds of whole beef were included in the rations of the Byrd crew of forty-seven fliers, seamen and technicians. Also four hundred pounds of pemmican (meat fats and raisins), huge quantities of bacon, dried milk, erbswurst (pea soup) and other supplies in proportion were carried along. Cod liver oil was included for its healthful properties. Herbert Griggs, who had charge of provisioning Peary's expedition in his famous dash to the Pole, worked out the rations for the Byrd explorers. Two pounds per man per day was the allowance to take care of all emergencies.

No amount of clothing is really sufficient when flying 1,000 or more feet in the air in the Polar regions, but every possible precaution was taken by Commander Byrd against exposure. The men were equipped with the warmest and lightest of reindeer suits and with fur parkas, a garment that reaches to the knees and has a hood covering the head. Plenty of goggles were found to be an absolute necessity to protect them against the glare of the snow.

In spite of all the precautions the undertaking was full of unseen danger. None of this equipment would be of the slightest avail against some unexpected and unprecedented situation which might arise. There is always the danger of snowblindness, exhaustion, freezing, some mishap to the engine. Lieutenant Byrd and his companions, however, were particularly fortunate in escaping with practically no ill effects except the exhaustion due to such a perilous trip.

Pick Up Ice Pilot.
The ship Chantier's first stop was at Tromsø, Norway, where an ice skipper was taken on to pilot the Chantier and its crew through the ice-filled waters around Spitzbergen to King's Bay, where preparations for the first flight to the Pole were made. The planes, the instruments and the various oil mixtures used in connection with the airship tests, were carefully examined and tested. Lieutenant Byrd's original plans called for six flights as follows:

1—A 400-mile flight from Spitzbergen to Peary Land to unload oil, provisions and equipment at a place that looks promising for a landing.
2—A 400-mile flight back to Spitzbergen.
3—A second 400-mile flight from Spitzbergen to Peary Land base with further food, fuel and equipment.
4—An 850-mile flight to and around the Pole and back to the Peary base.
5—An 800-mile round trip flight to the northwest over unexplored areas in search of new lands.
6—A 400-mile flight from the Peary Land base back to Spitzbergen.

It was his plan in his second flight to attempt to discover new land, but when he received the report of the flight of Amundsen in his dirigible, in which it was stated that the Norge had failed to find any trace of new land, Lieutenant Byrd decided to abandon further flights and the trip over land on sleds he had planned in his search for new land in unexplored areas. Now he has decided to try to accomplish by airship at the South Pole what he did at the North. As he left the Spitzbergen base he stated that he would have just as well an equipped expedition for his southern flight as he had in his recent adventure in the North.

Thurmont 7—Taneytown 1.

Due to better all around playing, Thurmont handed Taneytown a deserved defeat on Wednesday. Notwithstanding the one-sided score, two-thirds of the game was well played but the weak links of the home team could not stand the strain, and contributed a lot of errors. The battery work of both teams was excellent. The score by innings was:—
Thurmont 2-1-0-0-0-0-2-2-7
Taneytown 0-0-1-0-0-0-0-0-1
Taneytown will play the Gettysburg Adams County League team, next Wednesday afternoon, and will try to make a better showing than with Thurmont. Whether they win or lose, our boys play a clean game, and our local umpires are honest and impartial.

Paying for the Auto.

What does an automobile cost? Is it the price you pay the dealer, plus tires, gasoline, oil and numerous etceras? Think it over! Consider the interest on the investment; the rapid depreciation; the numerous visits to the garage; the accidents and doctor's bills; time lost from work; possible fines for violation of law; injuries perhaps to the bodies or property of others.

All of these items are familiar, and some of them are compensated for in legitimate pleasure, the saving of time and money in going to places; saving of expense in maintaining horses, carriages and harness, and in many other ways by the use of autos we see and do things that are helpful. But, there are costs not commonly thought of, among which may be mentioned:

First, the toll of deaths and cripples, of little children and partly helpless old folks—many of them decided to be "unavoidable"—and the large number of grade crossing fatalities; hospital and undertaker's bills; costs of law suits; of wrecks due to racing—life loss and cripples in general.

Second; the buying of autos by those who do not have the money, can not afford the luxury, and the consequent debt, and all that debt and interest paying means on a short lived, non-money making, piece of property.

Third;—and growing out of the purchase—is lack of money with which to keep in proper condition and repair, buildings and land on which there may be a debt, and neglecting to pay store and other bills—getting a bad reputation for credit.

Fourth; the effect on the whole country of the employment of hundreds of thousands of people in manufacturing plants, causing scarcity of labor and high wages for it, that reaches out into all lines of business and returns to everybody in the high cost of all manufactured articles.

Fifth; the demand for fine roads, that causes higher taxes on all classes of property.

Sixth; the shrinking of the population in rural districts, caused by demand for labor at high wages in manufacturing towns, plus the advantage of fine roads, calls for the closing of one teacher schools, the building of large school buildings in the larger towns, and another big increase in the tax bill.

Seventh; the evils of "joy-riding," and the many Sunday and week-day tours, that have a tendency to draw people away from work, toward pleasure.

Eighth; the aid given to burglars, bank and other robbers, and bootleggers, making a get-away easy for law-breakers.

Ninth; money-spending in general, for dozens of new objects, that adds to the "high cost of living," which cost is finally paid, in some degree, by everybody.

This is not the full list of costs, by any means, but enough to think seriously over, as to whether motor vehicles of various kinds are not costing more than they have been of advantage to the country; and whether there is not yet to come, a "settling-up" time which we do not, as yet, see the full size of.
