

TWO MORE CALLS FOR THE FIRE CO.

Barn near Harney, and Dwelling at Keymar.

The Fire Company was called out shortly before midnight Friday night, in response to a telephone call, due to the barn on Mrs. Mark R. Snyder's farm, between Harney and Emmitsburg, having been struck by lightning. The building was entirely burned with its contents of wheat and hay, this year's crop.

The farm is tenanted by Clyde Seaks, who saved a lot of valuable machinery stored on the barn floor, and all of his stock but one cow and some chickens. Mrs. Snyder's loss was quite heavy, as she had only very light insurance, and lost her share of this year's crop, as well as a large lot of corn from last year. No accurate estimate of the loss, or of the insurance, has been given.

The barn, one chicken house and one corn crib were burned; and the dwelling, one corn crib and part of chicken house were saved.

On Wednesday afternoon, shortly before 3 o'clock, the Company was called to Keymar, due to the burning of the home of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Leakin's. The building was completely destroyed, but with the assistance of the Union Bridge and Taneytown Fire Companies, the spread of the fire to adjoining buildings was prevented, and the Leakin's stable that was on fire, was saved.

The home of Mrs. Sappington, only about 25 feet distant was scorched and some windows cracked by the heat. Some of the furniture in the Leakin's home was saved. Due to scarcity of water the whole place was in considerable danger, but two engines of the W. M. R. E. came to the scene and helped matters considerably, and a number of wells were used.

The fire originated in the kitchen, where children were playing. Mrs. Leakin was upstairs at the time, heard the children cry out, and ran down stairs finding the room in flames. The house burned very rapidly and nothing from the second floor was saved. The loss is estimated at about $3500., with partial insurance.

The Taneytown Fire truck, with 18 men, had considerable difficulty in making the run, as the Keymar road has just been torn up, in a leveling up process.

Prices Paid for Farm Produce for Thirty-one Years.

Recently, The Record was asked by the Department of Agriculture to furnish from our files, the prices of farm produce, once each month, covering our market report records, or from 1894 to 1925—a period of 31 years. Although the work required much time, and there was no pay attached, we complied with the request, and have received the following acknowledgment:

"We have received your quotations of prices of wheat, corn, oats, rye and hay from 1894 to 1925 and wish to take this opportunity to express our sincere appreciation of your co-operation in the historical study of farm prices in Maryland.

We realize that an immense amount of time and energy was consumed in compiling these figures and can assure you that your efforts have not been in vain. The agricultural development of this country has undoubtedly been too lightly stressed in history. A history of agriculture in any territory is incomplete if it does not include prices farmers received for their products. Without the assistance of public spirited citizens we would be unable to build up a complete series of price indices for the important farm products of Maryland back to the Civil War.

Thanking you again for your wholehearted assistance in this matter, I am,

Very truly yours,
C. F. SARLE,
Agricultural Statistician for Farm Prices."

Changes in Fish and Game Laws Indicated.

E. Lee LeCompte, State Game Warden, announced that he contemplates urging establishment of license requirements throughout Maryland similar to those instituted by Delaware this week. Six Maryland counties now have local license laws regarding fishing.

Six Maryland counties—Garrett, Allegany, Washington, Frederick, Carroll and Dorchester—require $5 license fees from non-resident fishermen. In Washington, Frederick and Dorchester counties a similar fee is required to be paid by all fishermen who are non-residents of those counties.

Increasing of the Maryland non-resident hunting license from $10 to $15 is being considered by Mr. LeCompte, he said. The States of West Virginia and Pennsylvania recently have raised the cost of non-resident licenses issued in those States to that sum.

Abolishment of the present county and State hunting license, now costing $1 and $5, respectively, also is being considered. Mr. LeCompte said. It has been proposed to sell a $2 State-wide license to take the place of the present county and State wide licenses.

HURRICANE ALONG THE SOUTHERN COAST.

Moving Northward with much loss of Severity.

A terrific hurricane, about which little has been heard as yet, occurred on Saturday night and Sunday in the Caribbean Sea, carrying damage also to the Florida Coast. The Bahama islands were especially hard hit, according to reports from Nassau, where the damage is placed at $8,000,000.

The total damage is variously estimated, but is in the vicinity of $20,000,000, including vessels, harbors, wharves, small shipping and coast property in general.

The entire Florida Coast has apparently suffered to the extent of $8,000,000 to $10,000,000. Conflicting reports have been made as to the deaths, the number all told being placed as high as 250. The loss at Miami was about $100,000; in the Palm Beach section about $2,500,000, and in the Indian River section about $50,000. The effect of the storm is still being felt northward, moving up from Georgia, but in very much less intensity.

It is the fact that the average farmer will work hard and plan for a whole year for a good crop, and then carry a heavy unnecessary financial risk on it, between the time of harvesting and marketing; and the same is largely true of the risk he carries on buildings. It does not pay to take the chance of saving a few dollars in insurance cost; neither does it look well to carry little or no insurance, with the expectation that his neighbors will help him, in case of a big loss.

This is not a plea for the insurance agent, but is a sound statement of good business sense. Insurance, in fact, is as necessary an expense as taxes, and a lot more satisfying.

Headquarters 34th. Infantry, CMTC.

Port Eustis, Virginia.

The visits of Major General Douglas Mac Arthur, Commanding the Third Corps Area, and Brigadier General Laroy Upton, Commanding the 16th. Infantry Brigade, to Port Eustis were among the important events during the past week at Citizen's Military Training Camp. Both officers were high in their praise of the work being done here.

The regular semi-weekly dances were held on Wednesday and Saturday nights, and on Thursday night a special entertainment was given for the candidates by the Glee Club of the Naval Y. M. C. A., in Norfolk.

An air demonstration was held Saturday morning, in which flights of attack, bombardment and pursuit planes from Langley Field participated. A stimulated attack on the athletic field was held with the 1,400 CMTC candidates as interested spectators.

A brief talk was also made by an army aviator on airplanes, the air service and the air force demonstration. On Saturday afternoon 400 candidates were taken to historic Jamestown in army trucks to visit the site of the first permanent English Settlement in America. Three hundred students were taken to the navy yard at Portsmouth the previous Saturday to see the various classes of fighting ships.

A solemn high military field mass was celebrated Sunday morning at 9 o'clock, the impressive open air services being attended by numbers of visitors to the camp as well as CMTC candidates. Religious services were also held at the same hour for the Protestant and Jewish candidates.

The CMTC baseball league games were played nearly every afternoon, but it is still too early to pick the winner, for two or three company teams are in a close race for the pennant.

Six or eight boxing matches were held each evening representatives of the different companies, and the finals will be held next week to determine the regimental champions in the various classes.

Several hundred students are in attendance each night at the show at the Liberty Theatre.

The new swimming pool, which is the largest at any army post in the Third Corps Area, was officially opened during the past week, and candidates are given an opportunity each afternoon to visit the pool. Special instructions in swimming have been given for their benefit.

Marked improvement in drill has been made by the candidates during the past week, and parents who take advantage of the invitation to visit the post on Mother's Day, July 30, will no doubt be surprised at the progress made.

Pickpockets at the Sesqui.

Crowds at the Sesqui-Centennial have tempted pickpockets to return to their old trade. For a time this class of criminal was virtually put out of business by the operations of bandits and hold-up men. When the latter became active, cautious men and women refrained from carrying large sums of money and valuable jewels. Experts in criminology say the pickpockets soon discovered their gains from slim wallets to be so small as not to be worth the risk of capture and imprisonment.

With the opening of the Sesqui-Centennial the deft-fingered criminals saw opportunity to replenish old losses. District Attorney Fox, however, was wise enough to realize the congregation of large masses in a limited area probably would have this effect, and he ordered a pick-pocket crusade. The arrest of one of the best-known "dips," as the pick-pocket is known in the underworld, is a warning to others of his kind that the pickpockets squad from detective headquarters is again active.—Phila. WHEN A STORM COMES.

Too Much Chance, and not Enough Insurance.

When a storm comes up suddenly, and especially if it be violent, and at night, there is no time in any man's life when he feels more helpless. There is, in fact, but little to be done but keep one's "nerve," not become unduly excited, and be prepared to meet as courageously as possible whatever may happen—and be extremely glad when nothing serious happens.

In such times it is a great satisfaction to know that all property is fairly covered with insurance against fire and storm; and even though insurance rarely covers a total loss, one feels, at least, that he has exercised all possible care as a good business man against the chance of losing heavily.

It is the fact that the average farmer will work hard and plan for a whole year for a good crop, and then carry a heavy unnecessary financial risk on it, between the time of harvesting and marketing; and the same is largely true of the risk he carries on buildings. It does not pay to take the chance of saving a few dollars in insurance cost; neither does it look well to carry little or no insurance, with the expectation that his neighbors will help him, in case of a big loss.

THE PRIMARY LAW IN TEXAS.

High Candidate does not win unless He has Majority.

"Ma" Ferguson, who was disastrously defeated for renomination for Governor of Texas, by Attorney General Dan Moody, last Saturday, will resign. This is said to have been due to an agreement between the two; "Ma" Ferguson had promised to resign if Moody beat her one vote; and he promised to resign if she beat him 25,000 votes. Moody led "Ma" by about 100,000 votes, but appears not to have a majority over all candidates.

"Ma" Ferguson's time would expire in January, but she prefers to call a special session of the legislature, and quit as soon as possible, and Governor-elect Moody also demands the special session to validate certain road bonds.

The main feature of interest in the nomination to other states, is that the primary law in Texas provides that in case the highest candidate does not have a majority of the votes cast, a "run off," or second primary, may be held later, so that in the final result the voice of the majority is expressed. This means more expense, but it means majority rule, something that the primary law does not mean, as we have it in the north.

In this case it is unlikely that there will be another election, as the three other candidates cut but little figure in the contest, and the voice of the majority has been practically shown. The complete vote may yet show that Moody has a majority over all.

Is it Cement, or Concrete?

What is the difference between a cement walk and a concrete walk? Although a cement walk and a concrete walk are the same thing, many people still find this a vexing question oftentimes asked by a youthful member of the family.

Cement, a short term for "portland cement," is a highly manufactured powder, which when mixed with water, sand, and stone or pebbles, will form a mass rivaling rock in texture, strength and durability. In fact, this mass, commonly called concrete, is so strong that when forcibly broken the pieces of stone will be split open, instead of the cement's relaxing its hold on them.

Portland cement was so named by Joseph Aspdin, its inventor, who noted its resemblance to stone from the Isle of Portland, England, which was used in such structures as Westminster Abbey. So by no stretch of the imagination may the name "portland cement" be attributed to Portland, Me., or Portland, Oreg., although some cement is manufactured near the latter city.

The appellation "portland" is applied to this particular cement to distinguish it from natural cement—a cement made from materials already mixed by nature in proportions which are rarely exact. The production of natural cement is now only about one percent of that of portland cement, which was originally developed by the early manufacturers of natural cement.

Portland cement is manufactured all over the world by many different companies, each of which uses its own trade name in conjunction with the name of the product, "portland cement." In the United States portland cement is manufactured in accordance with specifications established by the American Society of Testing Materials and the United States Bureau of Standards.

Portland cement is composed of a number of ingredients which are chemically united through heating at a temperature approaching 3,000 degrees Fahrenheit. Cement must be ground finer than flour since 78 percent of it must pass through a sieve of 40,000 holes per square inch in order to comply with the government specifications.

So a cement walk is a concrete walk. Although both terms are much used, "concrete" is to be preferred.

Radio Stations Consolidate.

An important announcement has been made, of great interest to radioists, and country-wide in effect. It is the withdrawal from the air of Stations WEAF, of New York, and WCAP, of Washington, heretofore operated by the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. These stations will be taken over July 31, by Station WJZ of New York, and WRC, of Washington, both operated by the Radio Corporation of America.

Large Stock Sale in Waynesboro.

An unusually large sale of stocks was held in Waynesboro, on last Saturday, when Auctioneer A. W. Crouse sold for the estate of the late Ferdinand Fortman, a list of industrial stocks totaling over $200,000.

The following stocks were sold: 359 shares of Frick Company preferred; 399 shares Frick Company common, 1,572 shares Landis Tool Company; 77 shares First National Bank, of Waynesboro; 35½ shares Green Hill Cemetery Company.

The stock was purchased by a number of persons. The First National Bank stock sold for $430 per share, while the industrial stocks sold all the way from $50 to $80 per share.

MEETING OF THE P. T. A.

Parents-Teachers of the County to Discuss Schools.

An important business meeting, the third one since June 1, of the Carroll County Parent-Teacher Association, will be held on the first floor of the Westminster High School building, on next Thursday, Aug. 5, at 8:00 P. M. Although only a few delegates, appointed by each school association, have attended the first two meetings, all patrons of every school of the county are invited to be present at this next meeting. It is hoped that many will come out to help plan and bring about some definite results for our schools. Certainly, a county-wide organization has many channels in which it can work.

The enormous increase in High School enrollment in this county during recent years shows us that there is a keen desire on the part of the public to want their children to have more education than they themselves were privileged to have. Are the adults of this county doing their duty in helping to bring about the education as it should be? Each school as it becomes larger, should have the assistance and co-operation of a wide-awake organization.

Statistics show that in 1925 our country spent almost five times as much money for luxuries, and three times as much for joy-riding and pleasure resorts, as it did for schools. Are we doing all we can for the younger generation, or are we letting modern pleasure take our time and attention as well as theirs?

Let's have a large number come out next Thursday in order to talk over the school affairs of Carroll County. The officers of the County organization are: Pres., Dr. T. H. Legg, Union Bridge; Vice-Pres., Mrs. Geo. K. Mather, Westminster; Sec. and Treas., Mrs. D. Myers Englar, Uniontown.

Information for Women.

Raw onions are valuable for their minerals, vitamins and bulk, but have no particular effect on the nerves.

The hard central core of a cabbage has a sweet and peppery flavor which makes it especially good when chopped and used in salad.

The ideal kitchen floor is durable, comfortable to walk and stand on, smooth but not slippery, easy to clean, not injured by grease and water, and attractive in color and appearance. The wooden floor finished with oil and paint, or covered with a good quality of plain or inlaid linoleum, meets many of these points.

In addition to a seed supply, lettuce or a bit of apple should be placed between the wires of the canary cage frequently. Where practicable, this menu may be varied by the addition of chickweed, dandelion heads, thistle and plantain seeds, and the fruiting heads and tender leaves of senecio and shepherds purse.—U. S. Whittemore Will Hang.

Governor Ritchie denied the plea for executive interference in behalf of Richard Reese Whittemore, who is sentenced to be executed Friday, Aug. 15, for the murder of a penitentiary guard. His counsel, Edgar Allen Poe, spoke for almost an hour in behalf of the condemned man, and Mrs. Whittemore presented a petition signed by over 2000 names.

The Governor in his decision gave a lengthy review of the case, and reached the conclusion that nothing had been presented that would justify his intervention.

Live at the Crossing.

That all streets and roads that intersect a main highway should be made stop streets, is the contention of the Albany, Oregon, Herald-Democrat. It says:

"If such a practice had been in force last Sunday it is very likely that the sad accident in which a baby lost his life would not have happened."

Change the picture to a main line railroad. Would the operating officials of the railroad permit cars to enter the main line from spurs, switches and branch lines without stopping to be sure that the track was clear?

The block signals and locked switches help explain why railroads that carry millions of passengers annually, do so almost without loss of life.

Another reason, of course is that engineers don't operate locomotives until they know how and until their eyesight and judgment are tested.

There will be no real safety in motor operation until a master traffic plan has been adopted and enforced. If railroad systems did not enforce every precaution to over-balance the carelessness of thousands of people, they would kill thousands annually.

One railroad, the Southern Pacific, feels it has progressed so far in making people safe, that it has a right to sue motorists who collide with its cars and trains.

Lives won't save themselves at the crossings. The baby that might have lived, had the traffic plan enforced a safety stop, tells the story.—The Manufacturer.

Union Bridge Gets Road.

The contract has been awarded for ½ mile of concrete road from Union Bridge to the Frederick County line at the bridge over Sams Creek, to Gosnell Russell & Co., for $16,950. This is the piece of road running along the Cement plant property.

What Will Pennsylvania do About It?

Pennsylvania Republicans—especially the "dry" ones—will have some studying to do, this November when they come to cast their ballot for U. S. Senator. Mr. Vare, who won out in a three-cornered fight for the nomination, has three handicaps to overcome; first, what is known as "Vareism", especially in Philadelphia politics; second his extreme "wetness," and third his very lavish use of money in the primary campaign.

There is a fourth, of course, in the nomination of his Democratic opponent, Mr. Wilson, who was Secretary of Labor in President Wilson's Cabinet, a "dry," and a very capable candidate in every way; but this latter handicap which would ordinarily cut very little figure in a state with such a heavy Republican majority, may be of considerable importance this year with "dry" Republicans.

Mr. Vare is unquestionably the head and front of a political machine that has an unsavory reputation, but perhaps no worse than like machines in other cities or states having such a preponderance of political strength in one party, but which does not excuse the fact.

His "wetness" is considered a political virtue in New York and Maryland, and other states, rather than a disqualification, but this also does not excuse the fact. Whether Pennsylvania will also consider it a virtue, remains to be seen by the result of the election.

The excessive spending of money, even after a searching investigation, has not unearthed a corrupt use of money. Pennsylvania is a tremendously big state and it costs large sums to even legitimately conduct a campaign for the nomination under the direct primary plan, that encourages, rather than discourages, money spending—an iniquity under the law.

Against all of this, is the overwhelming partisan strength of Republicanism in the state, on the one side, and the tremendous "dry" vote outside of the large cities, on the other side. Should Mr. Vare fail of election, we believe it will be due to Republican "dry" votes for Wilson, and not materially to any other cause. The whole mix-up is largely Pennsylvania's job, and no matter how they may decide it, it should stand as a lesson for the state to clean house, and hereafter set an example for other states in political rectitude—which by the way, it is not at all clear that many of the states actually want.

There is still another difficulty that Mr. Vare would face—even should he be elected—and that is, whether he would get the seat. The Senate has the right to go behind the returns and decide on the eligibility of its members; and considering the make-up of the Senate, there is great doubt as to whether Mr. Vare would get the seat, for it goes without saying that there would be a "big row" over the question.

Foolish Finance.

There is a tendency toward spending money for luxuries—that is doing away with "rainy day" savings funds, and stands for a crop of future renters, rather than of home owners. Instead of the laying aside, weekly or monthly, of certain sums for the saving's account, these sums are going toward the payment of some credit purchase—likely "our car."

In course of time, if the habit is kept up, the number of well-to-do old folks is sure to greatly decrease, and in many cases perhaps heads of families will actually be dependent, who except for their foolish spending when the saving was good, should have placed themselves easily beyond want.

Unfortunately, many think it does not pay to own a home—that it is "cheaper to rent". On the surface, this may be true, but it is not a good reason for not saving money. A lot of young people, especially, had better be putting their money in a home that "don't pay" than in something else that is a positive sink hole. Owning a home is at least substantial evidence of stability of character, and is a good basis for credit, when credit is needed.

The average young man with a reasonably regular income, should take out a modest sized life insurance policy, in addition to keeping a savings account. Especially when he marries, he is morally bound to look ahead for the welfare of wife and family. A life insurance policy is then a good possession—whether he lives long, or not—and is considerably more of a worth-while estate than a used car, even if it be paid for.

Evidently, the present thought is that "some day" in the future will be time enough to build savings accounts; but, the future is a skittish quantity to build on. The good job of today may unexpectedly vanish; the times may so change as to revolutionize expectations and throw workers back on their own resources; and the workers who not only have no surplus, but are in debt besides, will be the first to be hurt.

Death the Severest Sentence.

The argument set up by some, that a sentence of imprisonment for life is more severe than that of execution, is being disproved in the Whittemore case, as it has been disproved hundreds of times before, in the efforts being made to have the death sentence commuted to imprisonment for life. And this case shows another weakness of the argument, in the fact that while under a life sentence in another case, Whittemore both killed another man, and escaped from confinement, while serving a previous life imprisonment sentence.

That there is any sentence more severe, or more dreaded, than death, is wholly untrue, notwithstanding the specious arguments that may be advanced. Perhaps capital punishment does not always seem to show good results, but no other punishment has shown better results as a penalty for murder, and for the prevention of further murders.

The taking of life because a life has been taken may seem to be out of date, as a religious belief, and as a means of reducing criminality. It may seem to represent an act of revenge—"an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth" doctrine—but, as long as the gospel of love, moral suasion, and unlimited forgiveness is taken advantage of and calculated on, it will be necessary to use corporeal punishment as a deterrent influence—a punishment that either hurts, or eliminates, the criminal.

Killing in self-defense is generally recognized as a proper extenuation, when clearly established as a fact. The law kills for the same reason—for the defense of the common citizen, the officer of law, the bank cashier, the paymaster, the policeman and the innocent in general. The "self-defense" in the one case, is just as clear as in the other case.

Not So in Maryland.

The following portion of the report from the Colorado Tax Commission, does not apply to Maryland, in the matter of the building and operation of schools, but does apply to almost, if not entirely, every other state. The voters of Maryland do not vote for a single school official, and have no voice in school matters.

"Eliminating educational and road funds, of every dollar raised by general property taxation less than 7 cents goes to the state. The other 93 cents is for home consumption and is raised and spent by the local officials elected by the people for that purpose. And they in turn spend the money as directed by the people who vote on themselves at least 93 percent of the taxes which they pay. The state levy for two consecutive years has been lowered, and therefore the continued increase must be looked for locally.

Good roads, larger and finer school houses, automobile buses for transportation of pupils, increased salaries to teachers and bus drivers, etc., may be, and probably are, desirable things to have, but all cost money and can be paid for only out of taxation. For all of these things the communities, as a rule, vote freely; but when the bill is presented in the shape of an increased tax it seems to be lost sight of that these things were ordered by themselves."

Like Fleas on a Dog.

It is interesting to read the production figures in the field of industry and agriculture in the United States. With a population of only some 118,000,000 people out of an estimated world population of 1,748,000,000 individuals, our total output is all the more astounding. The application of electric and steam power as an aid to man power is responsible for such accomplishments. American workmen have more power at their command than the workmen of any other nation. This accounts for their high production and high wages. There have been ups and downs in American agriculture and manufacturing, but taken as a whole, it is safe to say that never before did the majority of individuals in the United States have as many of the necessities and luxuries of life as they do today.

As one travels over the country he is impressed by the fact that new farm buildings are being built, old ones are being repaired, the majority of farms have garages, automobiles, modern farm machinery, radios and a constantly increasing number are being equipped with electric light and power. Naturally there are exceptions to this rule in some localities, but no one who takes a fair view of the country can help but say that it has been unusually prosperous. Never in the history of the world have so many homes been built by individual owners, as during the last two years in the United States.

But in the fact of such unprecedented conditions we find a small but active group that favors socialistic experiments in America. It would fashion our government along more paternalistic lines, such as have restricted initiative, development and prosperity in many European countries. We can witness this agitation in all parts of our country. Of late, it has been manifesting itself most actively along the lines of public ownership of electric power. This has been noticeable in the campaign to retain muscle shoals as a federal plaything instead of leasing it for private development under public regulation. We have seen similar agitation for state development of electric power, in New York, in California and in Oregon.

So far all these moves to inject the state into business at the expense and discouragement of the individual, have been decisively defeated. In Oregon, advocates of putting the state into the power business have just failed to get even enough names on petitions to submit the measure to a vote of the people.

In North Dakota, however, non-partisan League candidates have recently been victorious in a state election. This is the same league that a few years ago led North Dakota into a maze of socialistic undertakings from which the state has not yet extricated itself. How far it will attempt to go in re-establishing its old doctrines, no one knows. There is some agitation in political circles in several other sections of the country to launch the state into various branches of the insurance business. And so it goes over the country. The agitations which annoy and vex the majority of the people, might be likened to the fleas on a dog—they demand constant effort to counteract their irritating effect.

All business and employment is interlocked, and neither the agriculturist, manufacturer, capitalist or workman can profit at the expense of his neighbor. Putting the government into business simply piles up the tax bill which in the end is paid by the consumer. If we are wise we will take stock of our exceptionally fortunate and prosperous condition today and not be led astray by political schemes which experiment at the expense of business and industry, which means at the expense of the workman and the consumer.—The Manufacturer.

Unable to Duplicate Paper Made Long Ago

Who ever thought when some of the bulky old volumes were published that in time the few blank pages in front and in back would be the most valuable part of the whole book?

That time seems to have arrived, for it is told that a distinguished British etcher spends many of his spare hours searching through old book stores and waste paper depositories for the massive and wholly unread volume of other days. For years he has been tearing out the clean leaves to get paper that is paper, and is not an assembly of all sorts of modern make-shifts, which will disintegrate after a few years.

The books, many of which are so dry and ponderous that some of the leaves remain uncut, can be bought for a few cents. The paper, it is said, is not duplicated today, and, if it were, the price would be prohibitive.

Animals Get Good Food

Old and wornout horses in London are bought by the managers of the zoo, made fat and sleek, then slaughtered and fed to the animals, the number of horses thus disposed of last year being 440. And the walrus colony must have codfish, so nearly five tons were fed to them, besides 40 tons of herring, while other articles of food for the animals included 14,000 tins of milk, 128 pounds of honey, 258 pounds of ants' eggs, 77 pounds of meal worms, 150 bunches of onions, 213,000 bananas, 343 gallons of fresh milk, the food bill for the year reaching $50,000.—Adventure Magazine.

Relics of Bronze Age Unearthed in England

On a long slope of seemingly virgin turf between the famous hills of Clisbury and Chantonbury, Sussex, England, archeologists have unearthed a site, abounding in evidences of occupation, of what is known as a late Bronze age village. Everywhere are the signs of a peaceful, cultured homestead, pastoral, yet with many of the luxuries of life brought about by 400 years of Roman civilization, and with every sign of this is a sign of the destruction wrought by the Saxon invader. The ground is littered with the Roman tiles, the Roman tile nails, fragments of walls that were once covered in the Roman manner with colored disemper. Here, in what was obviously the rubbish pit, fragments put together make up a perfect specimen of a wine cup of the classic red Samlan ware, delicately ornamented with a pattern that originally came from classic Greece. Here are fragments of the great amphorae used by Romans for importing wine. It should be noted that pots made by these vanished Bronze age people and the earliest of the Celts would not stand fire, so to cook their food they heated flint stones and threw them into the water until it boiled. It is a trick of savages to this day. Once the turf is removed the soil of the downs about these villages is strewn all over with millions of flint stones bearing unmistakable signs of having been made red hot and then plunged into water.

Alterations Are Made in Course of Years

Most people would think that the word admiral is a typical English expression. Its origin, however, is Emir el Bagh, which is Arabic for "Lord of the sea." The term captain comes to us direct from the Latin caput, meaning head.

The coxwain was originally the man who pulled the after-oar of the captain's boat, then known as the "cock's boat." Cock-boat itself is a corruption of the word coracle, a small round boat used for fishing. Commodore is nothing more than the Italian commendatore, or commander.

Frequently we hear about "Davy Jones." There was, of course, no such person, but should you speak of "Duffy Jonah's Locker," you have the original phrase. Duffy is the West-Indian negro term for the spirit of Jonah.

The term "dog watch" is a corruption of "dodge" watch, the "dodge" being an arrangement to prevent men from being on duty every day at the same hours.

Restoring Old Castles

Ancient Durham castle, in England, is disintegrating. The foundations of this historic pile were laid in the year 1072 by Walthoef, earl of Northumbria a favorite of William the Conqueror. The earl was appointed to the bishopric, and Durham castle became the home of a succession of bishops each of whom left his own additions and impress upon the castle. Towers, doorways, chapels, kitchens were added by historic characters who were owners of the castle during the succeeding years, and all have left their names upon the pages of British history. Public subscriptions are supplementing the £15,000 set apart by the Durham city fathers, and public sentiment is being aroused, looking forward to the preservation and restoration of this historic building, which is still in active use as a college.

Northern Ohio Indians

The Eries, for whom the lake was named, were at one time the occupants of northeastern Ohio, as well as of the whole southern shore of Lake Erie from near the site of Buffalo to Sandusky bay. They were kin of the Iroquois, but bitter enemies, and it seems that about 1650 a merciless war broke out between them. The Iroquois were superior in numbers and organization, with the result that they practically exterminated the Erie nation, a few remnants of it being received into other tribes. The lands of the Eries were thus left largely in possession of the Iroquois. They were also occupied to some extent by more westerly nations—Ottawas, Chippewas and Pottawatomies.

Located on "Fall Line"

The "fall line" is the boundary between the Atlantic coastal plain and the Piedmont belt to the west, which is marked by falls or rapids in most of the streams, due to the fact that the rivers can cut more rapidly in the soft unconsolidated rock of the coastal plain than the hard crystalline rocks of the adjacent regions. In early days the falls marked the head of navigation for the coastwise trade, and power is developed along the "fall line," to which is ascribed the location of many cities, among them being Washington, Richmond, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Trenton, Columbia, Macon and Montgomery.

Finish for Floors

Put one quart of turpentine in a self-sealing jar. To this add four ounces of finely cut beeswax. Adjust the lid and set in the sunshine. Shake it occasionally until beeswax is dissolved and it is the consistency of thick cream. Apply with a small rag, rubbing thoroughly into floors, and polish with soft cloth after it is dry. It is easy to apply and when once used will never be discarded. It is fine also for linoleums and painted floors.

POULTRY

COCCIDIOSIS IS FATAL AILMENT

One of the most serious maladies which poultry-farm owners have to combat is coccidiosis, a destructive disease, especially prevalent on poultry farms where a large number of birds are raised on a limited area.

Chickens between the ages of four and fourteen weeks are the most likely to contract the infection, and suffer the greatest mortality, according to B. A. Beach of the veterinary science department at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture, in a recent circular published by the college. He says that although adult birds often contract the disease, they seldom die directly from it.

The disease is the result of infection by a small parasite, known as the coccidium, which is spread in the droppings of infected birds. Beach, in outlining the symptoms of the trouble, says that the first to be noticed is the appearance of blood in the droppings; following this, the chick usually becomes listless; its feathers become ruffled, and its wings droop. Contaminated soil and water are the chief carriers of infection, as are certain adult birds, which are infected, though showing no outward signs of the disease. Such hens are a continuous source of infection and a menace to all chicks that are permitted to run with them.

"No medicinal treatment has yet been found of sufficient value to warrant its use," Beach declares. "Sanitation is both the preventive and the cure," he says.

As soon as coccidiosis is diagnosed, Beach says the steps to be taken are to remove all of the apparently healthy chicks to clean quarters—feed the chicks inside brooder houses—remove all litter from the brooder house twice weekly—withdraw all mask, and feed light on scratch feed, and keep sour milk before the chicks at all times.

Farmer Who Balances His Poultry Ration Gets Most

Laying hens need a balanced ration. This fact is demonstrated by an experiment completed recently by the South Dakota State college poultry department, in which two pens of 25 hens each were fed under the same conditions but with different rations. In one case the hens were given all the corn, oats, wheat and barley they would eat. The hens in the other pen received these same grains but in addition were given a 20 per cent meat mash in order to make the ration balanced.

A summary of the results of this experiment indicates that the hens on corn, oats, wheat and barley averaged 27.64 eggs per bird for the two-month period. The hens that received the meat mash in their ration averaged 36.56 eggs per hen. The cost of the feed was practically the same in both cases because the first pen ate enough more grain to balance the cost of the meat mash, thus proving that the farmer who will balance his poultry ration will receive a greater profit.

Mortality Loss in Baby Chicks May Be Prevented

According to a report from the extension division, Ohio State university, a record from 300 farmers shows that the mortality loss in baby chicks up to the age of ten weeks was 20.3 per cent. This probably is a conservative estimate as no doubt a farmer who is progressive enough to keep records is more apt to give his chicks better care than will the average farmer. The chief causes of these losses may be summarized as follows: Weak chicks, diarrhea, crowding, leg weakness, cannibalism, coccidiosis and intestinal worms.

A great deal may be done in preventing these losses by adhering closely to the five essentials of chick raising advocated by the University of Missouri. These are:

1. Hatch early.
2. Brood each hatch separately for four weeks.
3. Range on fresh ground.
4. Feed a balanced ration constantly.
5. Separate pullets and cockerels.

To Regulate Incubator

If it seems impossible to regulate the incubator, examine the water and see whether or not it still has the ether which causes expansion and consequent regulation of the thermostat. The wafers are filled with ether which will evaporate through a very small leak. Detach the suspected wafer, and shake close to the ear. If the liquid is in it, you will hear it shake, and the trouble is not there. If there is no sound of liquid, buy a new wafer and save time, money and worry.

Best Feed for Beginner

Chick rations are numerous, and one of the best feeds for the beginner with a small flock is the commercial dried buttermilk starting mash. This can be fed in hoppers and placed before the chicks at all times. These commercial mashers are used by many commercial poultrymen with good results. A large number of egg producers who mix their own laying mash, depend on the commercial starters for bringing the chicks through the critical period.

Early Seeded Oats Give Larger Yields

Seven-Year Test Made by Nebraska Station.

While there is such a thing as seeding oats too early in the spring, there is no doubt but many farmers are inclined to defer seeding more than seems advisable. Oats are a cool-weather plant, and for that reason the more its growing period can be stretched while the weather is cool the larger will be the yield. The Nebraska experiment station has accumulated some valuable data on this subject in recent years that should be generally known.

In a seven-year test, for example, oats seeded on March 31 averaged 58 bushels per acre; those seeded April 12, 49 bushels; and those seeded April 20, 38 bushels. At the North Platte (Neb.) experiment station in a 14-year test, oats seeded April 8 yielded 28 bushels per acre; those seeded April 18, 25 bushels, and those seeded April 20, 21 bushels.

Average yields of a given crop for periods of seven to fourteen years are pretty reliable and the figures presented above certainly point to early seeding as being very desirable for oats. What may be said about oats in this respect applies equally to barley and spring wheat. It is important, therefore, to have the ground intended for oats or other small grains in shape to rush seeding operations as much as possible after the season for spring work opens.

Farm Inventory Is Very Simple Form of Record

"An inventory can be taken on the average farm in less than half a day, and for the time spent it shows the farmer the most about his business of any records he can keep." This statement is made by Prof. V. B. Hart of the farm management department at the New York State College of Agriculture.

"A farm inventory is the simplest form of farm financial record that can be kept," he says. "The inventory shows the farmer his net worth above debts, and a comparison of two successive annual inventories will show him whether he got ahead during the year. This is the first step to take in putting a farm on a good business basis, and from such an inventory a credit statement can be made to be filed with the bank where the farmer does business.

"Any farmer borrowing money from a bank should file a credit statement with his bank once a year. The banker is a custodian of the funds of his depositors and should not make loans to any but responsible persons. He is entitled to and should have the information which a credit statement gives and this statement also generally gives a farmer a better credit standing at the bank."

The state college at Ithaca has copies of a form for taking an inventory, with spaces provided for all the items. It also contains complete directions for taking the inventory and for making a credit statement, with blanks for two such statements. This can be had free from the college by writing for it.

Ventilation in Chicken House Quite Important

Chickens need more fresh air for their size than any other farm animal. This is because the moisture other animals exude through the skin and kidneys is in poultry almost entirely given off in breathing. The air of an overcrowded, under-ventilated house quickly becomes foul. The chickens get off the roost in the mornings dull and drugged from bad air.

Even open front houses with three sides closed and open on the south may not provide enough fresh air. A narrow board's width opening along the south side immediately under the rafters improves the circulation without draft. The curtained openings should be from 30 to 36 inches from the floor. All openings should be arranged for closing if necessary.

Inventory Is Big Aid

The farm inventory is an aid in keeping a record of property that has been lent or misplaced. This is often sufficient justification for taking the inventory, although the information it furnishes concerning the progress made in accumulating farm property is of far greater importance. Many farmers who are keeping a close record of their farm business never fail to take their farm inventory.

Economical Rations

Stock keepers must know the cost of their feeds in order to determine the best and most economical rations. For this reason it is necessary to investigate the cost of making silage. The Missouri Agricultural college last year showed a cost of $5.90 per ton for corn silage. They based this on 26½-bushel yield, crediting the corn with 94 cents per bushel and charging actual costs, which were liberal on all items.

Grub Out Dead Trees

Midwinter is the best time to grub out dead trees in the orchard and saw off large dead branches. These should be at once worked up into stove wood. Apple or cherry wood makes excellent fuel for the fireplace or kitchen stove. If removed from the orchard at this time the hazard of their spreading blister canker or borers to the live trees is avoided.

Rite of Fire Walking Still Deep Mystery

Despite investigations of competent observers, the famous Tahiti fire-walking ceremony still remains a secret of a small company of natives in the island of Raiatea, Tahiti.

The ceremony was given on this island recently for the first time in many years and outsiders were not excluded from witnessing any stage of the preparation of the fire pit. When the proper time comes and the celebrants pass through the fire, any bystander asking permission may go through beside them without discomfort.

Outsiders who have passed through the fire say they felt no sensation of heat except on the face, although, when standing outside, the radiation made the pit difficult to approach.

Those trying to solve the mystery have pulled out a large stone from the pit while the ceremony was in progress and thrown it into a pail of water. The water would go up in steam. Some also have tried crawling to the edge of the pit and touching one of the white stones with the finger. They were rewarded with ugly burns.

Scientists who have seen the fire-walking have propounded a number of theories, but practical tests always failed to establish such explanations. The ceremony, harking back to heathen times and the worship of old gods, is frowned on by the missionaries and the Christians among the natives. Hence it is seldom performed, even in Raiatea, the place of its origin.

COLLEGE BOYS WORK WAY AROUND WORLD

Answer to Challenge of Their "Prexy."

Bombay. — Two young American stowaways arrived in Bombay on a liner from Port Said the other day, their only baggage being two rain-coats, a camera, shaving set, sewing kit and a Bible. They were allowed to land and go free because their passports were in order and because the shipping company did not care to take the case to court. Incidentally the youths had worked well as deck hands and had won the friendship of the officers and crew.

Questioned in Bombay the stowaways said they were college graduates taking a year off to work their way around the world without receiving a cent from home. Their journey is an answer to a challenge made by their college president, Dr. P. R. Kolbe, who in a speech before the student body of Akron university wondered why American students no longer worked their way to and around Europe during summer vacations. He even hinted that fear of the hard knocks might be the cause of this lack of wanderlust. The two students, Adib Karam, twenty-three years old, and James W. Matz, twenty-two, in answer to the president's challenge, not only have worked their way to and around Europe, but are going around the world. Already they have been through England, France, Switzerland, Italy, Syria, Palestine and Egypt. Start on Leviathan.

In New York on June 30, 1925, two weeks after receiving their diplomas, the young men got jobs on the United States liner Leviathan, plying between New York and Southampton.

"We learned a little what Doctor Kolbe meant by hard knocks when we were put to work peeling onions and potatoes. It wasn't easy to become scullions so soon after our graduation from college," Karam remarked remissively. After working three months on this boat and then leaving it in England, they saw Canterbury, with its historic cathedral; London and Wembley, and "hiked" through Kent. Four days after arriving in Paris they obtained jobs. They saved money, saw Paris and learned some French.

Geneva, their next important stop, was reached by walking through the picturesque French and Swiss alps. After riding around Lake Geneva and through the Simplon tunnel, they visited the famous places of Milan, Venice, Florence, Rome and Naples and inspected Mount Vesuvius and Pompeii.

Work Way to Syria.

The two wanderers next went to Marseilles, France, from which port they worked their way to Beyrouth, Syria, in the stokehole of the Pytheas, a French military transport.

In Syria they went inland, saw something of the war. They passed two weeks in Palestine. The next leg of their tour was from Jerusalem to Egypt. Walking to the desert and then stealing a ride, they arrived in Kantara, Egypt, after four days of travel. Because of the dirt and grime of these hard four days and their unshaven appearances, the Egyptian passport officials permitted them to enter only after a thorough questioning.

Calro, with its pyramids, the Sphinx and the River Nile, was the next city of interest. After spending five days there the wanderers began a 150-mile walk to Port Said.

After failing to find jobs on a boat that would take them to Bombay they stowed away.

So far their wanderings have cost only $220. Of this amount $56.50 was used for visas, leaving only $163.50 actually spent in living and travel for the eight months in which they have been away from home.

Men and Sparrows Like Yellow Flowers

London.—Men and sparrows both favor yellow flowers, it was declared by exhibitors at the Royal Horticultural society's show. Members were discussing the revival of the "button-hole" posy habit, and it was agreed the favorite colors for men were scarlet, cerise and yellow.

Women were said to favor pale shades, such as salmon pink, pale heliotrope and mauve. The business woman preferred dark colored flowers, the dressy woman pale tones, and the artistic woman a blend of two or three colors.

Papal Bull of 1758 Found by Chicagoan

Chicago.—Two documents of historical value, one of them a papal bull of 1758, are being translated by University of Chicago scientists for a Chicagoan into whose possession they recently came. Both are written in highly ornamental style on pigskin and the ink is well preserved. They were purchased in Graz, Austria. The papal bull was issued in the first year of the pontificate of Clement XIII, granting a pension to a priest. It is in Latin. The other document bears the signature of Marie Theresa, Queen of Austria, and is a receipt for war supplies in the war of the Austrian succession, the translators have discovered. It is in German.

A reckless driver going at the rate of 75 miles an hour run into Mr. Valentine's car and damaged it considerably, but fortunately no one was hurt. Both cars were damaged.

John Leakin's dwelling house and most of its contents was destroyed by fire Wednesday afternoon. The Taneytown and Union Bridge Fire Companies responded very quickly, but they could not save the house as the fire had too much of a start. The barn and chicken house was also saved by the firemen. Mrs. Sappington's house was also saved by the firemen by using chemicals and water. Mr. Fowle, of Union Bridge sent up two engines on the railroad, full of water, which saved other buildings. There was an article in the Record some time back, saying the Taneytown-Keymar so-called pike would make a good potato patch. Looks very much like that is what it will be used for, as it is all rooted up. Suppose it will be the late variety that will be planted; if it is a season, might bring a good crop.

HARNEY.

Mrs. Nellie Wagoner, who we reported on the sick list, last week, was taken to Frederick Hospital for an operation, on Tuesday evening. The cause of her trouble is not definitely known, but it was plainly seen that she was a very sick woman. She is being kept under close observation for several days before the operation is performed. We hope that she may soon recover, and can return to her home again, where she is badly needed, to help care for her three small children.

On Thursday night of last week, John H. Ridinger's barn was struck by lightning, and burned down, with several other buildings. One horse was burned and about 400 bushels of ear corn was destroyed, and it was only through the heroic efforts of the Taneytown Fire Company that the wheat stacks and the house was saved.

On Friday night, Mrs. Lizzie Snider's barn and the entire contents of grain and hay were burned with the wagon shed and a large crib of corn—her share of last year's crop. It was only by a desperate effort that Mr. Speak's corn, which was a short distance from the other buildings, was saved. The loss can truly be considered a total loss. We are informed that Mr. Ridinger will rebuild, but at present Mrs. Snider's plans are unknown.

Duncan contemplates putting up a building for the accommodation of the many bathers that visit the dam during the summer season and may make other improvements for the benefit of those who wish to enjoy the waters of the Monocacy at this place. Intimations Are Dangerous.

There was nothing in the appearance or manner of a certain judge who presided over a criminal courts bench of a Southern state, which would invite familiarity. His countenance was stern, his manner forceful and his speech emphatic. The gravity of his judicial bearing was a matter of indifference, on one occasion, to a crack-brained negro woman. She had charged her husband with assault and battery with a deadly weapon and, while on the stand, the court examined her.

Court: 'You say your husband tried to kill you?'

Witness: 'Yes, mass jedge, dat's what he done. De ole rascal ub a nigger done his bes' to kilt me. He done try to shoot me dead.'

Court: 'What did he try to shoot you with?'

Witness: 'What he try shoot me wid? Now, what you ax me dat fur? Doan' you knows when a man goes gunning, dat he don't tell de bird dat he's got a five shooter, or a six shooter, or a seven shooter! And de bird don't care noways, if he done gets kilt.'

Court: 'Sheriff, you can remove the witness. The woman is evidently crazy.'

At this intimation the woman, who had become very talkative, turned upon her husband, with glaring eyes, excited manner and wrathful ejaculation, and said:

'You ole' becurious, cracked-brained debilit, I's gwine to tuck dat six shooter and blowed de top of'en dat kinky head of your'n—do you h'ar me?'

Then, with quiet manner and courtesy to the judge, she said:

'And mass jedge, you can't do nutten wid me nudder, kase you done say I's crazy!'

If we improve ourselves we improve others by our example.

DAWN-DUSK WORLD FLIGHT HIS DREAM

815 Miles an Hour Needed, Says Scientist.

New York.—Around the world in seventeen hours, the length of the daylight period on a long summer day, is the dream of Dr. Charles H. T. Townsend of Itaquaquecetuba, Brazil, writing in the Scientific Monthly. To do this at the latitude of New York would require a constant speed of 815 miles an hour, nearly three times the highest speed yet attained by airplanes over even short distances.

Even at that, however, Doctor Townsend does not think his dream outside the limits of possibility. Man began flying only a short time ago, after studying the flights of birds for many centuries, and he has already far outdone the birds in speed, in altitude and in weights carried, though he has not yet proved himself the equal of the best of them in long-distance, non-stop flights.

To reach the terrific speed necessary for a dawn-to-dusk flight around the world, however, a different animal model will have to be studied, in the opinion of Doctor Townsend. He has made observations on the flight of a certain genus of large flies, known to scientists as Cephemyia, which have flying speeds of about 400 yards a second, or over 800 miles an hour. This does not equal the velocity of a modern rifle bullet, but is faster than an old-fashioned musket ball and as fast as the projectiles of certain kinds of artillery. If such a velocity could be reached by a flying machine it would easily accomplish the feat dreamed of by Doctor Townsend.

It is admitted that this would not be easy to accomplish by any flight mechanism known at present, but the fact remains that the flies do it. Their analogy to a long-flight airplane is the stronger, Doctor Townsend points out, in that the flies eat nothing whatever during their several weeks of adult life, living and flying entirely on energy stored up in the reserve food material laid up in their bodies during their prolonged feeding period as grubs. That is to say, they carry fuel and rations for all the flying that they ever do.

Ice-Bound Five Weeks, Ship Crosses Sea in 12

Boston.—Nearly three months since it first sailed from Stockholm, Sweden, a voyage that usually takes less than three weeks, the steamer Baltic, Capt. O. Lodin, warped into dock at Charlestown with a story of having been trapped in the ice of the Baltic sea for five weeks.

The steamer left Stockholm with a cargo of wood pulp, polished granite and other merchandise. It made the passage to the Finnish port of Hango, where it finished loading. The five succeeding weeks were passed frozen in the ice of the northern sea, and it was only through persistent efforts to open a path with the assistance of two ice-breaking boats sent out by the Swedish government that it was extricated.

With provisions low and coal nearly exhausted, the steamer limped back to Stockholm, where its bunkers were replenished. It next went into drydock for minor repairs. Through the unusually long voyage, Captain Lodin said the health of his crew was excellent. In addition to its regular cargo, the Baltic brought a case of books from Stockholm, consigned to Harvard university.

Winter

Twenty-five years ago the kaiser set out on his memorable journey to the Holy land and Constantinople, where he made friends with Abdul Hamid, sultan of Turkey and butcher of the Armenian people. In Jerusalem, then an Arab city, he put on the desert garb of a sheik prince to impress the Mussulmans. In a speech he made at Damascus he told the followers of Islam: "The people of Islam should be assured that they will always have a friend in the German kaiser." That was part of the prelude to the war in which Turkey was to be ranged on the side of the German allies. And now The Hague Post, an influential Dutch newspaper, carries the item that his majesty himself occupied the pulpit of the little chapel attached to his castle at Doorn and that he preached from the text, "And it was winter."—Pierre Van Paasen, in Atlanta Constitution.

Motor Trips Over Sahara

Touring the Sahara is becoming as popular as any ordinary Algerian trip. The journey from Paris to Timbuctu can be accomplished in a few days. The Algerian branch of the powerful Paris-Lyon Mediterranean Railway company is planning tourist trips by motor cars from Algiers to the Hoggar, the country of the newly exhumed queen, Ti-An-Han. The first trip will be made next winter. During the present season several tourists have or are to cross the sandy plains of the desert, making their way to the Hoggar or Timbuctu or the Tchad region. Some time ago Lieutenant Estienne in a six-wheeled automobile completed a double crossing—from Colomb-Bechar in the south of the province of Oran-Bourem and back. The whole journey lasted 113 hours. The cars were fitted with all the modern comforts.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

DOG DAYS

"MUZZLE that dog! The idea of letting a dog go about that way in these dog days!" And it was a "dog day."

Why do we call very hot days dog days? To be sure, in the summer, dogs are dangerous, and when people were not compelled to be as careful as they must be now to incapacitate them for doing harm, the hot days witnessed enough horrible accidents to earn the appellation. But that isn't how it started.

The ancients, with their myths and goddesses, were ardent devotees of astronomy. The planets were popularized, so that school children were familiar not only with this symbol, iam, but their physical changes. "Dog days" was the name given by the ancients to a period of about forty days at the time of the rise of Sirius, the planet called the Dog Star. This happened to be at the hottest time of the year, the star rising on July 1. On account of the changes of procession of the Equinoxes, the date has been brought down to about July 23.

Regardless of Sirius, we call them "dog days," if it is hot, and in cool weather we do not divert our attention from the strenuous life to astronomical problems. Yet the planet rises just the same.

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE

BY JOSEPH KAYE

At Twenty-One:—Marietta Holley, Author of the Famous "Samantha" Books, Didn't Help Her Mother as Much as She Should.

"AT THE age of twenty-one my position in life was like that of any other young girl in the pleasant north country. I helped my mother in the ordinary work of the household, though not so much as I should have done, for until one has the responsibility of a home, one does not understand the care and labor it means.

"I scribbled a good deal even then; poetry—so-called—and essays on almost any subject, some, I believe, that even Shakespeare and Milton would have thought beyond a poet's range. I did a great deal, indeed everything available that came my way. I roamed over the literary hills and vales with the freedom and delight of the country born.

"So much for my outward life. As for my inner life, I dreamed the gleaming, fanciful castles that young girls exhibit both in city and country—glittering castles that, it is needless to say, were never built.

"My ambitions at that time were boundless; and so was my faith. I was going to do some great work that would revolutionize the world and would set all the wrongs to right. Nothing is easier than for youth to make over the world; nothing is easier than for youth to look through the golden haze that hangs about their future and see a world transformed; nothing is easier than for youth to view the world's weaknesses and ailments and stand serenely on a height—a conqueror.

"Alas for the dream and ambitions of youth! The long years pass and things move on about the same. And as the shadows lengthen in the west, instead of the high place and the conqueror's dream, one must sit by the common wayside and see the old world go by in the same old way.—Marietta Holley ("Josiah Allen's Wife").

Marietta Holley is one of the last surviving members of the old school of writers who used to delight our parents and grandparents. She is the author of the celebrated "Samantha" books—"Samantha Amongst the Brethren," "Samantha at Saratoga," "Samantha Among the Colored Folks," etc., and for an equally popular work of that period, "Around the World With Josiah Allen's Wife." The last "Samantha" book was published in 1913, "Samantha on Women's Rights."

Miss Holley is a veteran in the cause of women's suffrage.

Worth Millions and Died of Starvation

A Greek named Papadakis, born in the village of Galaxidi, Greece, and at one time a deputy, recently died in Athens. Clad in rags, he had lived for some time in an attic.

From time to time Papadakis' neighbors took pity on him and went to his assistance. His daily food consisted of a little milk in the morning, a few olives and some dry bread in the evening—just enough to stave off starvation. After his death the authorities searched the attic and found only a few articles of worn-out clothing and a battered valise containing some pencils and two rusty pocket knives.

Shortly after Papadakis' burial, however, a young man visited police headquarters declaring that he was the old man's son and that the latter was a millionaire, possessing a great deal of valuable property in his native province and in Athens itself. He added that his father, a miser, had alienated himself from his family and relatives, none of whom he would permit to visit him.

The son requested a death certificate from the authorities in order that he might act as the dead man's legitimate heir. The police official of the district in which Papadakis had spent his last days, who knew the old man, suspected fraud and opened a formal inquiry. Several witnesses were summoned and corroborated the son's story.

It was developed that Papadakis possessed a fortune estimated at more than 10,000,000 drachmas (a drachma is worth, normally, 19.3 cents) and consisting of three large buildings in the center of Athens, some valuable real estate on the Avenue Amalle and near Zappion, and many rich acres of farm land in his native province.

Physicians who conducted a post-mortem examination of the old man certified that he had died of starvation. The room where he lived was so filthy and foul smelling that the doctors could remain in it only a few moments at a time. He was eighty-five years old and had existed under these conditions long enough to become a familiar figure in the neighborhood.—From La Bulgarie, Sofia. (Translated for the Kansas City Star.)

Back in 1880

"Here's a picture taken of me in 1880," said a man who doesn't look his years. "You'll notice I've got on one of those stiff hats that was about as tall as a playing card. Look at the collar. That is the style that John L. wore when he was in his prime. And the shirt was a white one with a front that was as stiff as a board and glistened as if it were varnished. In those days the only persons who wore colored shirts were men who worked in factories and shops. Then we always dressed up on Sunday, and the man was a poor fish who didn't have a 'good' suit, a 'good' pair of shoes, and a 'good' hat. In time it became second best, then 'every day' and finally they reached the 'work' stage. This outfit was my 'good' one."—Detroit News.

Saving Grapevines

An epidemic of measles has been afflicting California grapevines, and a new remedy is put forward by L. O. Bonnett of the California agricultural experiment station. The disease is the same as the affliction of the vine known in France as "apoplexy," though it has no relation to either measles or apoplexy in human beings. It makes dead patches in the leaves, and then kills off whole shoots and ruins the fruit, working from the top of the vine downward. Mr. Bonnett has found that spraying the vines with 4 or 6 per cent sodium arsenate solution will prevent the development of the disease.

Boxing Match for a Church

One novel method of settling religious differences between the orthodox and the "Living" Russian church was adopted at Sorotchni village, near Lubni, in the Poltavsky district. A boxing match between the leaders of the two congregations was advertised for several days and was staged on the Zubovka river at midday. Before the start an agreement was signed that the congregation whose entry won should have undisputed possession of the village church. But the ice started to crack and there was no decision.

Unique Reward

Some time ago Leo M. Dixon, Warren (Ohio) policeman, saved a frail and elderly woman from death on the street. She offered money to him and he refused it. Later a florist delivered a carnation to Dixon as he stood at his post and told him that he had a standing order to deliver a fresh carnation to him every morning as long as he and the woman are alive.

Fashions and Fiction

"What do you think of these new togs?" "I approve of them," answered Miss Cayenne. "They aren't very appealing to the eye, but they at least help to prevent fiction writers from referring to a manly suitor as looking like a 'Greek god.'"—Washington Star.

Nerves of Steel, Too?

"Here," said a lady to a beggar, "is a glass of water—pure, cold, delicious water. What! You refuse it?" He shook his head and sighed. "I have to ma'am," he said. "You see, I've got an iron constitution, and water would rust it."—Dartmouth Chronicle.

COAST CITIES OF WEST FADE AWAY

Once Prosperous Towns Dying of Dry Rot.

Denver.—The "Cousin Jacks," the prospectors after gold are passing. Hardly a week now goes by but word comes down that another has been found dead in a rotting cabin in the "ghost cities" that dot the high country of Colorado and the mining west. The towns, many of them, are dying, too. Once well-worn streets are grass grown, and pack rats haunt the buildings.

Central City is perhaps the most striking example of the change. Thirty years ago it boasted a population of 12,000. Today there are approximately 500 persons there.

President Grant and his daughter visited Central City and the residents paved the sidewalk from the street to the old Teller house with gold.

Black Hawk, near Central City, is in the same plight. Some old tunnels have been opened, a few people work them, but vacant houses stand row on row.

Many of the towns are virtually without inhabitants except for one or two old prospectors who still dream that the boom days will return. Nevada has two men left; American City about the same number. A person can wander through Owl, Tincup, Mound City and Aultman for days at a time without seeing a face.

Nevadaville had the first Masonic lodge charter in Colorado and the third in Kansas territory, which then embraced this state. The lodge still exists and men travel by burro, in automobiles or afoot long distances to attend regular meetings.

Gunnison, Colo., on the western slope, started as a mining town. It has become the center of a rich ranch and live stock region. Ouray, the most famous gold camp in the San Juan district in southwestern Colorado, is still existent, but only as a country town. Tom Walsh discovered the Camp Bird mine outside Ouray and sold it to British interests for millions of dollars.

Asks Pay for 34 Years as Man's Housekeeper

Ludlow, Ill.—Alleging breach of contract, Miss Lydia Summit of Ludlow has filed suit against William Lateer, executor of the estate of the late Carl Spoerle of this place, an uncle of the complainant.

She asserts that in 1889 her relative persuaded her to give up her profession of graduate nurse to live upon his farm and be his housekeeper. In return she was to receive all of his property upon his death. She agreed to this and was in his employ for 34 years. She helped him to harvest his crops, and during his last illness served as nurse. When his will was probated she learned that he had left her but $2,700 and the income from the farm for life, while upon her death the property was to go to relatives in Germany.

This, she maintains, was a breach of faith and a violation of contract, and she asks the court to set aside the will and award her the property or give her its equivalent in wages for a period of 34 years.

Drastic War on Opium to Be Made by Japan

Tokyo.—The Japanese government has appointed a commission with Foreign Minister Shidehara as chairman for the purpose of an inquiry and to originate new laws for the complete abolition of opium derivatives in Japan and its possessions.

The commission, which consists of representatives of all ministries, hopes to go even further than the Geneva convention in prosecuting all Japanese engaging in the traffic abroad. It may organize a government monopoly in Japan, Korea and Kwangtung province in Tokyo, as was done in Formosa.

The commission intends to take the most stringent measures to obliterate illegal traffic in opium.

DELIVERANCE AT THE RED SEA

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 14:1-31.
GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is my strength and song and he is become my salvation.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God Takes Care of the Children of Israel.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Israel Saved at the Red Sea.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How a Nation of Slaves Was Set Free.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Divine and Human Leadership.

I. Israel in Straited Circumstances (vv. 1-12).

1. Going out of the land of Egypt (13:18).

The tenth stroke from the strong hand of the Almighty made Pharaoh willing to let Israel go. The Israelites went out from Egypt on their way to the promised land with a high hand. Through the land of the Philistines the journey would have been comparatively short, but God commanded them to turn from that way lest going through the land of the Philistines they would see war and desire to turn back to Egypt. The way of the wilderness was a longer route, but it had many valuable lessons for them. By this way they escaped the experiences of war which would have come to them at the hand of the Philistines, but they learned the crookedness and perverseness of their own hearts (Deut. 8:12).

2. Hemmed in (vv. 1-3).

At the Lord's direction they turned from their first course and were made to face a great difficulty. The Red sea was before them and mountains on either side. However, they should have been encouraged because the Lord went before them by day in a pillar of cloud to read them the way and by night in a pillar of fire to give them light. He took not away the pillar of cloud by day, nor the pillar of fire by night (13:21, 22).

3. Pursued by Pharaoh (vv. 4-12).

The stricken Egyptians had now recovered from their sorrow, and perceiving the straitened circumstances of the Israelites they interpreted this to mean that Moses was unable to lead them out of their difficulty. Therefore they went in pursuit, hoping yet to prevent them from leaving the country.

II. The Miraculous Escape of the Israelites (vv. 13-22).

Though they were in a straitened condition they had no reason to fear, for the Lord had led them there. There seems to have been a twofold object in leading them into this particular place.

1. To strengthen the faith of the people. To be delivered from such circumstances would impress upon them anew the reality of the love and power of God. The people, as usual, displayed their unbelief and even censured Moses for leading them out of Egypt. Moses replied, "Fear ye not, stand still and see the salvation of the Lord." Standing still in such a trial is faith taking hold on God's promises. God said, "Wherefore criest thou unto Me? Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward." The lifting up of the rod simply served as something tangible upon which their faith could act. They were to go forward a step at a time without raising any question as to the outcome, for from the source from which came the command, came the power to obey.

2. To lay a snare for the overthrow of the Egyptians. Those who will not heed the warning judgments of God may be allowed to go to their destruction under the presumption that the Almighty is helping them.

III. The Overthrow of the Egyptians (vv. 23-27).

Having seen the Israelites go across the sea dry shod, Pharaoh and his people madly pursued them. They insanely thought that they in their unbelief could follow in the wake of God's children. The Lord looked forth from the cloud and wrought confusion among the Egyptians. He not only looked upon them but took off their chariot wheels, which caused them to realize that God was fighting against them. He then directed Moses to stretch forth his rod and bring destruction upon the Egyptians.

IV. The Song of Triumph (15:1-21).

Standing on the other shore of the Red sea they could fittingly sing the song of triumph because of their miraculous deliverance and the overwhelming defeat of the Egyptians. They attributed it all to God. All self-consciousness and importance were left out. In a glad coming day, a similar but much larger company will sing the same song with an important addition, namely, the "Song of the Lamb." (Rev. 15:3).

The Deep Well of Life

Oh, ye poor, dry and dead souls, why will ye not come hither with your empty vessels and your empty souls, to this deep and sweet well of life, and fill your empty vessels.—S. Ruthenford.

Help Improve the World

The world was never meant to satisfy. It is man's business to do what he can to improve it; then he is to leave it and pass on to a higher life, to eternal joy.—W. Robertson Nicoll.

Wise and Unwise Decisions
Genesis 13:5-13; 1 Kings 3:5-15

Lot's choice was based on appearances. "Lot lifted up his eyes and beheld all the plain of Jordan that it was well watered everywhere; then Lot chose him all the plain of Jordan." In 2 Peter 1:9 we read of those who through lack of certain spiritual qualities "cannot see afar off." This describes the man Lot. He saw only what was near at hand. The great spiritual verities were hidden from him. Yet he is referred to as a righteous or just man. The lesson is obvious. It is possible to be righteous, to be a Christian, and yet to make unwise choices as this man did.

The law of cause and effect may be resorted to at this point. Regarding Lot's choice as an effect, we may well ask the cause of it. First of all, Lot walked with Abraham rather than with God. He did not have the spiritual appreciation and the power of faith which Abraham possessed. Then again he walked by sight rather than by faith, and as a matter of course when the crisis came he chose wrongly and his decision ended in disaster.

Under the gain and loss column we may figure as follows; he gained position, place, power. He tried to reform Sodom, but failed. His loss was severe; he lost his pilgrim manner of life; he lost his testimony, without which life has no real joy; he lost his good name, which should have been esteemed above all manner of riches; he lost his home, his wife, his daughters; he lost everything except his life. All of this was the result of an unwise choice.

In the book of Kings we read of a choice made by Solomon at a time of crisis. This choice was not made from selfish purposes, nor from an intense desire to do justly, to act wisely and to honor God.

The serious thing about all this is that God deals with us on the basis of our secret choices. The prayer which comes into actual consideration before Him is the desire of the heart. What we supremely desire discloses our real selves and is the basis on which God deals with us. To stand in the presence of God as Solomon did and to say, "I am but a little child; I know not how to go out or to come in," is a confession of need. It denotes the childlike spirit and is the beginning of real wisdom. To choose the ways of God and the salvation of God as it is revealed in Christ is our chief good. It is easy to make such a choice after making the confession Solomon made.

EXPLORERS REPORT
ANOTHER OLD RACE

Lived Thousands of Years Ago, in Nile Valley.

Zelies of a people who lived in the valley of the Nile about fourteen thousand years ago are on view at University college, London.

They were found by workers connected with the British School of Archeology in Egypt during recent excavations at Badari and in the Fayum, and include beads and ivory spoons, pottery which is finer than any made today, combs and even dolls.

Miss Caton-Thompson worked at first in the Fayum district, an arid area where water had to be taken to her 15 miles by motor car, over land which the most ardent workers had hitherto thought to be impassable for cars.

The workers say it is quite impossible to give a complete picture of the lives led by these people. "We have only found traces of them in one part of Egypt, and we can say that there was a large settlement of them, probably as big as an Arab village of modern times.

"We think there were people of importance and people of lesser importance. We found no linen in the graves of the less important people. They were wrapped in a leather garment, and all the bodies were finally wrapped in quantities of matting.

"The Nile valley was at that time covered with swamps on which wild reeds grew. We found the remains of a tremendous lot of matting made from these wild reeds.

"These people were apparently principally occupied as hunters, but they had emerged into the agricultural stage. They grew corn and made bread, and put both into the tombs of their dead.

"They could make linen, but only small pieces about the size of a pocket handkerchief have been found. No traces of writing have been found, and so we can say nothing of their social organization.

"In the tomb of a man of the period many interesting things were found. Round his waist he had worn strings of beads made from glazed stones, over a belt made from the fur of some catlike animal.

"There was a little fold of linen, which pointed to his having been a person of importance. An enormous bead of alabaster had been strung round his neck. Above the elbow of his left arm he wore a string of little shells, of a kind which are still found on the shores of the Red sea.

"Buried with him were his finely worked, saw-edged flint knife, and a few of the bone awls and needles which were used for leather work."

ENJOY SOCIETY OF THE "YOUNGER SET"

Parents in Spain Make
"Chums" of Children.

Statistics show that the birth rate in Madrid has declined in the past 12 months. Whether this means that the traditionally large family is more than slender purses can stand while the cost of living is at its present high level, or whether it is merely a passing phase, remains to be seen.

It is seldom that cases of cruelty to children come to light, and indeed there appears to be no need for a society such as exists in other countries whose duty it would be to take up such cases and bring them to the notice of the police. Corporal punishment is seldom administered either by parents or by teachers; indeed, anybody witnessing the infliction of physical punishment on a child would not hesitate to interfere and, whatever may have been the fault, a plea that he should be let off would be forthcoming.

The Spanish mother, even of the upper class, can seldom be persuaded to separate from the young folk, and astonishment is often expressed in Spain when foreign visitors are found to have left their children at home. When boys are sent away to school care is often taken that they should be within easy reach, and the argument that children brought up away from the watchful eye and care of the parents are probably better fitted in later life to grapple with its many problems is one that does not often carry much weight with the typical Spanish mother.

Spanish parents are always at their best with the smaller children, whose nurses, companions and playmates they are, fully identifying themselves with their smallest interests.

The greatest day of the year for the children is "El Dia de los Reyes"—"The Day of the Three Kings From the East." Probably no people in the world devotes itself collectively and so wholeheartedly to a purpose from which no gain is expected, but that of the privilege of bestowing. The big stores are so filled with people until twelve o'clock at night that it is difficult to move about in them.

Shows Aboriginal Life

An Indian garden and villages will soon be erected in the Bronx, New York, as a part of the Museum of the American Indian, Haye foundation, whose main building is in Manhattan. Ground for the new unit, the gift of Archer M. Huntington, has been broken, and the first part to be built will be storage rooms for ethnological and archeological specimens. When the whole building is completed the open patio in the center will be occupied by a botanical garden in which the plants used by the North American Indians both as foodstuffs and as medicines will be raised. It is also planned to erect full-size models of Indian habitations in order that students and visitors may get a comprehensive idea of aboriginal life.

Masts for Historic Ship

Masts and rigging spars on the historic frigate Constitution, which is being rebuilt at the navy yard at Boston, are to be of Douglas fir grown in the Pacific Northwest. The United States navy accepted an offer of the West Coast Lumbermen's association to give the Constitution's masts and spars from a new forest which was seeded half a century after the frigate fought her last engagement in 1812. A part of the fir will come from Bainbridge Island, Puget sound, named in honor of Commodore William Bainbridge who commanded the Constitution in all of her important engagements except that with the British frigate Guerriere.

Bolstering Chinese Morale

The present year will see a great number of Chinese soldiers facing each other on either active or future battlefields, and efforts were made to cheer up the morale of those men at the holiday season, says the North China Star. The Kuominchun gave ten cents to each soldier and five cents to each coolie, while those at the front received a double present.

Wounded officers from $5 to $10, according to rank, while seriously wounded soldiers received $1 and others 50 cents. All troops not at the front had a holiday on Friday and Saturday, which was not allowed those at the front.

Russell Painting Found

W. P. Connelly of Winifred, Mont., recently found on the walls of an old cabin in the Snowy mountains an original painting by Charles M. Russell, the cowboy artist, whose work now brings high prices.

The painting, on cardboard, was tacked to the logs and later had been covered with tar paper. It is plainly signed. Russell formerly worked in that section as a puncher, it is said. It is presumed he either dashed off the sketch to amuse himself or gave it to a friend.—Los Angeles Times.

Generates Much Power

As much electricity as is required for a city the size of Boston is generated by the United States steamship Saratoga, an electrically propelled airplane carrier. This ship can attain a speed of nearly forty miles an hour by means of its 180,000 horsepower electric motors which drive four huge propellers. The electric energy is derived from four 32,500 kilowatt steam turbine generators.

TANEYTOWN LOCALS

Items of news from town, or vicinity are always wanted for this column. Especially accidents, sales of real estate, fires, important happenings, visits to or from the community social events, and all matters of general interest to those at home, and away from home.

Miss Pauline Brining is at home on a short vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Witherow, of Washington, spent the week-end with relatives and friends in and near town.

Mrs. C. G. Button, and son, John, of Dickerson Run, Pa., are here visiting the former's sister, Mrs. Frances T. Elliot and family.

Howard V. Brown and wife and Miss Vivian Summersgill, of Kane, Pa., are visiting at Joseph Brown's and Mervin Wantz's this week.

Mrs. H. D. Hawk is on a visit to her niece, Mrs. W. M. Longley, at Sewell, Harford County, and will be away from home for several weeks.

Edward Wantz, of Pleasant Valley bought the Wm. H. Fleagle property on George St., last Saturday, for $2300., and will occupy it next Spring

Misses Edith Hess and Ada R. Englar visited Miss Nellie Hess, in Baltimore, several days this week, and enjoyed some side trips out of the city.

Those who visited Mrs. Sarah Keef-er, near town, were: Mr. and Mrs. William Hossler, Charlie Hossler and wife, and two children and nephew, all of near Mount Pleasant.

Misses Alverta and Mary Martin, of Philadelphia, spent Sunday with Mrs. N. B. Hagan. On Wednesday, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sayler spent part of the day at the same place.

Rev. L. B. Hafer and Miss Genevieve Brewer, of Gettysburg, were visitors in town this week, the former at P. B. Englar's, and the latter at Miss Janet Burke's home.

Rev. and Mrs. W. V. Garrett and son, left on Monday on their vacation of four weeks. About two weeks will be spent at Lake Chautauqua, N. Y., and the remainder of the time at Glen Moore, Pa.

The Sharetts farm, near Baust Church, containing 163 acres, was sold on Tuesday at public sale to Scott Y. Garner at $48.75 per acre. The price is generally considered very low for so good a farm.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Holzapfel and son, of Hagerstown, George Koontz and family, of near Emmitsburg, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Stover. Miss Dorothy Eyler accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Holzapfel to Hagerstown, for a short visit.

Messrs J. B. Hedge and N. T. Farmer, of near Bluefield, Va., were the guests of Guy Wellner, near town, first of the week. They are looking for farms, in this community, on which to locate in the Spring, and were well pleased with appearances.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Everhart and daughter, Helen of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Arda Thomas, of Baltimore; Mr. Levi Justice, of Lutherville; Mr. and Mrs. John Everhart and son, of Westminster; Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Crouse, of town, were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Everhart, on Sunday.

The electrical storm of last Friday night, that was severe for about an hour, was the worst experience of the kind that this community has had for many years; in fact, only a very few instances can be recalled that equalled it. There were two main disturbances, the last being worse than the first. As the temperature had dropped from 15° to 20° from that of Thursday and the electrical storm of Thursday night, this second visitation was unexpectedly severe.

The calling out of the Fire Department last Thursday and Friday nights to barn fires several miles away, during general electrical storms, has raised the question as to what degree of protection is left to the town, in case of a local fire during the absence of the apparatus and firemen. There is a sufficient quantity of hose in the Firemen's building, and the pressure of the standpipe, just as before the engine was purchased; therefore it is largely a question of efficient help, and this the Company is no doubt looking out for.

Miss Mary Welty and Mrs. Valeria Overmann and daughter, Sweetie, and Herbert Gillan, all of Emmitsburg, and Mrs. Mary Hopkin and daughter, of Conneville, Pa., and the Misses Adelaide Shriver and Irene Winder, spent Sunday at P. H. Shriver's camping ground. Mrs. David Wert-heimer and son, David, Jr., also of Conneville, spent the day at the same place. Miss Irene Winder, returned to her home in Philadelphia, on Monday. Miss Adelaide Shriver, accompanied her and will spend a week visiting in Philadelphia.

William Burns, of Baltimore, is spending the week at Glenburn Camp.

Miss Alberta Neal, of York, spent the week-end with Miss Margaret Crouse.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Koons and son, Clarence Jr., were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Koons, on Sunday.

Rev. George Brown and wife, and Miss Loretta Jackson, attended the funeral of their cousin, B. F. Armacost, on Friday, at Manchester.

Quite a number of relatives and friends in and near town, attended the funeral of Mrs. John Kelly, (nee Fringer), at York, on Wednesday.

A game of baseball will be played on the home ground, Wednesday afternoon, at 3:00 o'clock, with Rice's Bakery All-Stars team, of Baltimore.

Members of the Presbyterian Churches of Emmitsburg, Piney Creek and Taneytown, held a picnic in Flickinger's grove, Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Crouse, of Westminster, and Mrs. Louise Kump, of Hanover, spent Sunday with Mrs. Nettie Weaver, and also called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Koons.

Mrs. Lillian Woodward and son, Harry, of Washington, spent Thursday with Mrs. Stott and Miss Anna Galt. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cunningham also of Washington, spent the week-end at the same place.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. Ott's guests, on Wednesday evening at dinner, were: Mrs. Sadie Newcomer, of Frederick; Mrs. C. D. Gillelan, Miss Betty Gillelan, of Emmitsburg; Mrs. Emma Ott, Mrs. Alma Newcomer and little Miss Roseanna Keilholz.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Hoffacker and two children, Mr. and Mrs. George Buffington and four children, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Emma Smith, were visitors last Sunday at Mrs. Nettie S. Angell's.

The Lutheran Sunday School held its annual picnic in Flickinger's grove, last Friday. It was largely attended and a lively day was spent, but the festivities were shortened somewhat by a heavy gust late in the afternoon.

The sale of local Bank and Warehouse stocks, as noted elsewhere in this issue, is decidedly creditable to these institutions, and especially because they have been in business in Taneytown a long while, and represent financial soundness equal to like business concerns anywhere in the state.

Callers at the home of Mrs. Mary Stover on Sunday, were: Mr. and Mrs. Walter Everhart and daughter, Miss Helen, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Arda Thomas, of Baltimore; Levi Justice, of Lutherville; John Everhart, of Westminster; Mr. and Mrs. William Stover and daughter, Helen, and son, Charles, of near town; Miss Alice Overholtzer, of New Midway, and Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Holzapfel and son, of Hagerstown.

Taneytown 3—Hanover All-Stars 5.
The Hanover All-Stars defeated Taneytown, on Wednesday, in a well played game, 5 to 3. The visitors put up an almost perfect all-around game and did the best batting, yet luck practically won the decision for them because they bunched their hits and opportunities in one inning, while the locals made two home runs with the bases empty.

The local team did very well in getting such a close decision, as the All-Stars team was about the best that has played here this summer, and had but very few weak spots.

Robert T. Lincoln Dead.

Robert Todd Lincoln, oldest son of the late President Lincoln, and the last member of the War President's family, died at his summer home in Vermont, on July 26, aged 83 years.

Although he never sought public office, he rose to high position in both public life and the business world. He served as Secretary of War under two Presidents and was United States Minister to Great Britain under President Harrison. He served for years as counselor for the Pullman Company, became president and later chairman of the board of directors.

Advancing age and declining health caused Mr. Lincoln to retire entirely from business activity between two and three years ago.
Under private ownership of business enterprises, customers are not required to wait for a political election to express disapproval of inefficiency.

The only thrill worth while is the one that comes from making something out of yourself.

Men can conquer everything except a sense of loneliness.

LAST PAGE EDITORIAL.

Ask Yourself—Why.

Why do we complain that we are not getting "our share" of prosperity, and that times are "hard," and our business not profitable, when we are spending at the rate of somebody else who is in a position to earn more than we do?

Why do we cut down our contributions to worthy institutions and objects, in order that we may have more to spend on selfish indulgences?

Why do we let our farms, our homes, and our bank accounts suffer, and keep on spending money for automobiles and non-essentials, just because others do?

Why do we let styles in dress cause us to throw aside perfectly good garments before they are nearly worn out?

Why do we try to shun plain employment, and get away from the country into some more pleasurable sounding job in a city?

Why can we not see that "the times" are better than they ever were in this country, only we are inventing plans for more spending, faster than we can find the ways and means for providing the cash.

Why do we not realize that before a child can run, it must first learn to walk; that trees become strong only after passing through a period of development; that we must be an apprentice before we can be a skilled workman, and that these natural laws, or their equivalent, are bound to apply to everything in life.

Why can't we see that the investment in a little patience, sacrifice and hard work, while young, will pay big dividends later on in life?
