

ONE BIG ISSUE IN THE ELECTION.

New School Buildings Sure, by Taxing Manufacturing Machinery.

A big issue in our county election is whether or not the tools, machinery and implements of all manufacturing firms in this county are to be taxed. At present, some are taxed, and some are not. Printing offices, for instance, are taxed for state and county purposes, up to the full value of their plants; and our information is that practically all small concerns are taxed, but that the big ones are not.

Chapter 528 of the Acts of Assembly of 1914 gave authority to the Commissioners of any county to exempt such tools and machinery, by resolution, if they saw fit. For some reasons, or influence, the Commissioners of Carroll County in 1915 passed such a resolution of exemption. In 1920 the then Board of Commissioners attempted to repeal the exemption by rescinding the former resolution.

This action was resisted by several manufacturing concerns in the county and the case was carried to the Court of Appeals, which decided that the County Commissioners had the power to pass such an exempting resolution, but had no power to repeal such a resolution after it was passed. An effort was then made to pass a bill through the legislature of 1915 giving the Commissioners authority to repeal the resolution, but it failed to pass having been introduced in the few last closing days of the session.

The importance of the present situation rests (1) in the fact that approximately $2,000,000 worth of property is estimated to be evading taxation, due to this exemption resolution; and (2) that with this property paying tax the county would be able to build the new school buildings that Union Bridge, Manchester, Sykesville, New Windsor, and other towns are in need of.

A bond issue for schools is proposed through proper legislation the coming winter, but such legislation would hardly be passed without first placing the question before the voters for their sanction; and as a somewhat similar bond issue was voted on at a special election in May 1922, and defeated 4773 to 986, the prospect for the passage of a bond issue for schools next year, would seem to be doubtful.

The logical thing to do, therefore, in order to secure the much needed new school buildings without a further increase in the tax rate, is to elect a Senator and a delegation to the House absolutely pledged to the passage of legislation in favor of taxing the at present exempt manufacturing plants.

We have been assured that there is no possible way of securing the new school buildings with the present tax rate, and a higher rate is unthinkable, even for such a desirable end. Therefore, the issue is clear as to what ought to be done. Taxation on all classes of productive property ought to be equalized, and if this is done, the school building problem will be settled.

Manchester School Fair.

Under the auspices of the Parent-Teachers Association of Manchester school, there will be held on Oct. 29-30 the third annual School and Community Fair, of Manchester, which promises to be a finer event than any heretofore held there. There will be new events of interest to entertain, chief among which will be a baby show, on Friday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock, for all babies in Manchester district; and a baseball game on Saturday afternoon, at 2:30. Also a musical entertainment Friday night. The fair will consist mainly of a large number of booths for the sale of all kinds of household products, fancy articles, cakes, candy, ice cream, etc., all located in the brick building on the school grounds.

A farm crop, garden and poultry exhibit will be made in the portable building. An exhibit of canned goods, fancy work, flowers, etc., will be made in the brick building, an exhibit list of which has been prepared and will be given to all interested, by any Manchester teacher.

An admission charge of 5 cents will be made for adults; all children admitted free.

On Friday 29th., at 3:30 P. M., the Manchester School Soccer Team will play its old rival, the Hampstead Soccer team. A good game is promised. Sandwiches and candy will be on sale by the Athletic Association.

Clemson to Oppose Brown.

The Democratic State Central Committee, last Friday, filled the vacant State's Attorney nomination on the ticket, by naming Attorney Chas. O. Clemson to oppose Theodore F. Brown Republican.

"WET" ELECTION DAYS.

By Common Consent "Dry" Election Days were Commended.

Some of us can recall back somewhere about 1870, or late in the '60s, when liquors were sold on election day. The evils of the practice became so intolerable that there was practically no opposition to making election day a "closed" day, by law. Prior to this law, election days were noted for fights and all sorts of disturbances. "Free whiskey" was the rule at most polling places, and the candidate who did not "pony up" had a slim chance of election.

Making election day "dry" did not totally prevent the evils of election day liquor, but it was a tremendous help. Making the sale of liquors—or giving the same to voters—"against the law," made it easy for those always opposed to election day liquors, to stop the practice; and the more timid and least thirsty ones were not willing to take the chance of prosecution under the laws. The result was, comparatively "dry" and peaceable elections.

The "wets" laid in their supply in advance; many bottles were distributed to voters in advance, and there were places where those who could be depended on not to "give it away," could get drinks; but the day was very noticeably "dry," and even drinking men of the better class openly admitted the wisdom of the law.

So, up until prohibition came, we had "dry" Sundays and election days, because by almost unanimous consent it was considered that liquors exerted an evil influence on these days. What is the conclusion to be drawn from this admission? Certainly it must be that if it was beneficial to have a few dry days, it ought to be equally so to have all days dry; and this was the thought of those who fought many years for, and finally secured, National prohibition.

And now, some are apparently forgetting the beneficial results of "dry" election days, even though they were not wholly "dry" and are clamoring for what is a practical repeal of the prohibition laws, and for the open sale of liquors again from some source; and whether it be called a "bar room," or by some other name, makes no difference in fact.

Especially when we consider the millions of automobiles in use on our highways, every day in the week becomes as important—so far as sobriety is concerned—as election day, or Sunday. Even prohibition, with its bootlegging and law violation, and its wet newspapers and politicians, is fully as beneficial every day now as it was on election days, back in the older times.

"Inside" Information for Women.

Sliced ham, baked in milk with sliced potatoes on top, is an excellent dinner dish.

One of the easiest ways of preparing egg-plant is to cut it in half lengthwise and bake it with bacon laid in strips over the top.

What do you look at from your kitchen window? Cleaning up the back yard may improve the view, or a lattice screen, a hedge or trellis of vines may be used to shut out undesirable features.

Twice baked bread, that has been cut or torn into pieces and heated in a very slow oven until thoroughly dried and delicately browned is a good food for children.

Do you know kohlrabi, sometimes called turnip-rooted cabbage? Pare the globe or bulbous stem, discarding any stringy or tough portions. Slice it and cook for about half an hour in slightly salted water. Season with butter, salt and pepper or serve with a white sauce.

Fresh pyrethrum powder is advised in bathrooms or damp storerooms where centipedes appear. These insects are more alarming in appearance than in reality, however. Centipedes destroy house flies, roaches, small moths and other insects, and seldom bite human beings.

Serve roast lamb or lamb chops piping hot, on a hot platter, and then on hot plates. The fat of lamb has the peculiarity of sticking to the plate when cool, also to the palate, and roof of the mouth. To most people this is unpleasant and it can be easily avoided by serving the lamb on very hot dishes.

Instead of candy, make sweets to tuck in the school lunch boxes by grinding together in the meat chopper 1 pound of figs, 1 pound of dried prunes or seedless raisins (or both), and 1 pound of nut-meats. Mix thoroughly roll out until about half an inch thick on a board dredged with confectioner's sugar, and cut into small pieces. Or make into balls, rolled in the sugar. Wrap in paraffin paper to keep.

Why not use some of the windfall and specked apples to make pectin, which will be useful with fruits not ordinarily used for jelly? The U. S. Department of Agriculture will tell you how to make apple pectin.

The last green tomatoes have many uses. They make good pickles and chow chow, and also marmalade; they can be used for pie filling, for mock mince meat, and serve fried.

DEATH IN A WELL AT ELDERSBURG.

Evidence of the Operation of a Distillery Plant.

Leroy J. Rausch, of Baltimore, a garage proprietor, was found unconscious in a well at Eldersburg, this county, at an early hour on Tuesday, and died shortly after. The well was on a farm owned by Samuel Solomon, of New York, who has lived on it for about three years but has largely kept aloof from his neighbors. Solomon was arrested by Carroll County authorities, along with Julius Zepper and Annesley Hodson, both of Baltimore.

The arrests were made after the finding of Rausch in the well, and some investigations that led to the discovery of 59 barrels of mash, and other evidences of a distillery business. Rausch's body was found lying across a joist just above the water in the well, that is 60 feet deep. It is believed that he smelled gas, or fumes of some kind, and wedged himself between the joist and the side of the well with the hope that he would be found.

Solomon said that Bausch had been employed to fit a length of pipe to a pump about 10 o'clock Monday night and at midnight failed to answer, after which an alarm was given, and Dr. M. L. Norris, of Eldersburg, summoned. The unconscious man was removed by Darrell and Herman Harris, brothers living nearby, and Rausch died a few minutes later.

After Rausch's death officials discovered that the ground near the house was damp and gave off a strong odor of coal oil. It is believed that several gallons of liquor had been dumped and that the coal oil was poured on the ground to make it impossible to detect the odor of moonshine.

A car was seized, a large automobile of expensive make and bears marks, according to officials, of having carried parts of a large still. The machine was seized near the house and it is thought that the still was taken to Baltimore and hidden, the driver returning to the estate.

An inquest was held at Eldersburg, Wednesday night, that failed to reveal very much that is new. Solomon refused to answer questions put to him by State's Attorney Brown, acting on advice of counsel and he was remanded to jail for contempt of Court by Justice R. E. Hutchins, acting as Coroner. Zepper and Hodson testified, and both were released on bail as important witnesses. Their testimony did not bring out anything new. Federal authorities will investigate the case, having in mind, possible liquor law violations.

From a Tampa Subscriber.

On renewing his subscription C. Edgar Yount, of Tampa, Florida, writes:

"For your information will say that the Record now reaches us every Monday morning which is earlier than in the past, also our address is 505 W. Warren Ave., also I want to compliment you on your clean up-to-date newsy paper and I hope your local subscribers appreciate your high standard as we do at a distance.

For various reasons most people knock Florida, but living here twelve years I cannot help but be a booster. The recent disaster was shocking, but mainly on the East Coast; we did not suffer any material damage, some plate glass broken, a few electric signs blown down but to my knowledge no lives were lost, however throughout the States this year there has been disasters in some form or other.

When you come to Florida again, you have not seen Florida unless you visit the West Coast. If you are doubtful ask Dr. Garland and he will agree with me.

Our business for the past year has been very good. We handle from three to four carloads of refrigerators per month; we are now employing 22 men, that is not bad for two years in business starting with three men. Will close with best wishes to you and the office force including all employees."

(We are always glad to hear from old-Taneytowners, far away. It shows fine spirit and a commendable desire to keep in touch with their former home in Maryland.—Ed.)

Mullikin for Law Enforcement.

A. E. Mullikin, Republican candidate for Governor, has made his first statement regarding his position in the liquor question. He says he was opposed to the 18th Amendment and the Volstead Act, and does not see the necessity for a separate state enforcement law, for the reason that present laws are adequate for convictions in liquor law violation cases. He also says he will support the Constitution of the United States, and if elected shall enforce the liquor laws of the state.

The "satisfactory" rating heretofore given to Mr. Mullikin, by the Association opposed to Prohibition, has been withdrawn, and it urges all voters opposed to Prohibition to vote for Gov. Ritchie as "the most conspicuous National exponent of the principle of local self-government, known as state's rights; and further, condemns the Republican platform as it applies to Prohibition.

5000 MEN WANTED.

Big Rally for Sunday School Men in Carroll County.

The annual men's rally, representing the Sunday Schools of this county, will be held in Westminster, Sunday afternoon, October 31. Last year the weather interfered with the turn out, but this year an effort will be made for the "best yet" demonstration and in order to have it there must be general participation on the part of both old and young, Sunday School members of the county.

A monster parade will assemble near the Court House, at 1:30 and move promptly at 2:00. The mass meeting will be held at Alumni Hall, at 2:30, where a pleasing program of special music, singing and addresses will be held.

Rev. Dr. Edward L. Watson of the Madison Square Methodist Episcopal Church, Baltimore, will address the assemblage on a very timely theme bearing on the relation of the Sunday School with some of our modern problems of Christian citizenship. Dr. Watson has the scholarship and the eloquence which are needed to put a real message across in a real way to a throng of men, eager to do a real work for the kingdom.

The women and children will have a meeting in one of the churches or the Armory, where a program of special interest will be rendered.

To Prevent that Common Cold.

"Don't forget that sunshine and fresh air indoors as well as out of doors—are two of the best preventives we have against the common cold that so often makes its appearance as soon as the chilly weather approaches," is the advice of Dr. John S. Fulton, Director of the State Department of Health.

"There is a great tendency," he continued, "as soon as the Fall comes to close all doors and windows, and to shut out all the outside air. The air inside the house becomes impure from being breathed in and out, over and over again. Germs of the common cold, as well as of other catching diseases, thrive in air of that sort. They can't flourish when there is a constant circulation of fresh air. And you are doubly safeguarded when the sunshine is brought in as an ally of the fresh air.

"Fortunately for the grown-ups of the future, the children of today, are acquiring health habits as a matter of course, while they are mastering the three R's in school. And they are teaching some of their lessons to the grown-ups in the homes as was proved by a recent experience of one of the public health nurses of the State Department of Health.

"She noticed that the baby in the family was kept out of doors every sunny day, in a screened kiddie coop, comfortably dressed according to the weather, but a real, open air baby, instead of being kept indoors like so many of the neighbors' children. When the mother was questioned about it, she said that about three years ago, her oldest boy, then about eleven years old, came home from school, one day in the early Fall, and told her that his health lesson for the day, was: 'Sleep with your bedroom windows open.' That night Johnny's bedroom windows were wide open, while mother slept in the next room, sure that Johnny would wake up with a sore throat and she would have him and all the rest of the children down sick.

"But Johnny was down in the morning with no sign of the threatened cold or sore throat. The next night his windows were open, and the next, and so on for the entire winter. The mother was at last convinced that the open windows was a preventive against colds, and the following winter the windows in every bedroom in the house were open at night.

"There are two morals to the story," Dr. Fulton added. "First, Johnny's baby brother is getting the benefit of Johnny's example and is being brought up as a fresh air baby.

"Second, and this is worth thinking about. For the first time since entering school Johnny went through that whole winter, without losing a single day from school because of colds."

TROUBLE IN SOWING TREATED WHEAT.

County Agent Tells How best to Overcome it.

The present period of damp weather has caused some farmers in the county considerable trouble in sowing wheat treated with copper carbonate dust to prevent stinking smut. Broken drill wheels; scanty sowing; and hard words for the County Agent, Grain and Implement dealers alike are the result of the treated grain causing the drill to pull too hard and sow too little wheat.

Up until this week very few complaints on this score were heard. Many of the prominent farmers report overcoming their difficulty by using the oat side of their seeders, at the rate indicated for oats. That is, they are setting the drill to sow, for instance, seven pecks of oats and actually sowing seven pecks of the treated wheat.

Other farmers report the liberal use of oil and washers to take up and play in cog wheels overcome the trouble when the wheat was sown to the full capacity of the drill.

The men, who realize the serious menace of the smut disease to the wheat growers in the county, seem firm in the belief that the mechanical difficulties of sowing can be overcome. The treated wheat that is sown and already up shows an exceptionally strong germination from all reports.

The most serious epidemic of hog cholera in Carroll County for several months has broken out along the Washington road. At the call of local veterinarians Dr. Hoffman, Federal Inspector in charge of hog cholera control work at Hagerstown came to the county Wednesday and found positive evidence of the disease on four premises. Every possible precaution has been taken to prevent the spread of this swine scourge.

Any report of sick hogs should be reported to the office of the County Agent, Westminster. The Extension Service will at once phone or wire for the assistance of Dr. Hoffman or some other available specialist in this work.

The Florida Loss Minimized.

The Apopka, Florida, "Chief," Major A. M. Hall's excellent paper, says of the recent hurricane loss;

"The people of Miami are alone to blame for the unfavorable controversy that has arisen over the extent of the property loss and the loss of life, due to the recent hurricane, and the slowing up of relief contributions through the Red Cross. There were elements down there—and they were powerful ones, too—who were fearful they would lose a few dollars during the tourist season if the whole truth were told and immediately after the great storm they did seek to minimize the awful toll in property and life the storm had taken.

In fact the whole truth has not come out yet, in spite of the fact that the sensible people of that city and that neighborhood, have come to realize that the first attitude taken was a serious mistake. That there are approximately 50,000 homeless and helpless people there is a fact. That there will be great suffering among these people unless adequate relief funds are provided is certain.

The effort to make light of the storm damage at the start, for purely selfish purposes, could have had but one effect and that to slow up or stop contributions and aggravate human suffering and distress. Two or three days after the storm, a Miami citizen, presumably interested in real estate operations, made the statement in Apopka, that the storm reports were exaggerated and that the needs of the people could easily be met by Miami itself."

Jos. B. Boyle gives $5000 to Convent.

Westminster, Md., Oct. 14.—Fortunate is the Rev. Martin P. J. Egan, pastor of Saint John's Church, in having Joseph B. Boyle for a parishioner. A few months ago Father Egan told his congregation he would like to build an addition to the convent for the Sisters of Notre Dame. Such an addition was badly needed and would cost $5,000.

Mr. Boyle went to Father Egan and said to him: "Don't worry, Father. Go ahead and build the addition. I'll give you the $5,000."

The addition to the convent has been completed and the old part of the convent has been renovated until now the building is one of the finest sisters' homes in the Archdiocese.

In addition, each sister has her individual room; there are large bedrooms, a dining room and laundry. The building is finished with the best electric and plumbing equipment. It is a home of comfort and happiness.

Some months ago Mr. Boyle and his wife donated windows to the church in memory of themselves and children and in memory of Mr. Boyle's parents. Mrs. Boyle died before the windows were blessed.

The addition to the convent is in memory of Mr. Boyle's widow, Mrs. Mary McSherry Boyle, and children.—Catholic Review.

At present, there are more than 550 radio stations using only 90 channels, or wave lengths, allotted to the United States.

ATTORNEY E. O. GRIMES

Sentenced to Two Years in the House of Correction.

E. Oliver Grimes, Jr., Baltimore Attorney, formerly of Westminster, was sentenced to the House of Correction for two years, on Wednesday, when he pleaded guilty to charges of embezzling $1300. from the widow of one of his classmates, Mrs. Catherine Kennard.

Mr. Grimes first met Mrs. Kennard when he was soliciting subscriptions to the endowment fund of Western Md. College, when she stated that owing to the death of her husband she was unable to contribute. Later she employed Mr. Grimes as her attorney for the sale of some property.

Mr. Grimes also prevailed on Mrs. Kennard to cash a check for him, drawn on the Park Bank, Baltimore, where he had no funds. He paid the widow $550. on account of the sale, and declared that the remaining $1300 due her had not been paid to him. On the case being reported to the Baltimore Bar Association, action was taken that resulted in his confession and sentence.

Old Clothing Wanted.

An S. O. S., call, an urgent plea, for old clothing immediately for 125,000 refugees, including many children, in response to an appeal cabled by a committee headed by Bayard Dodge, president of Beirut University, is sent out by Harold F. Pellegrin, Potomac Division Director, Near East Relief. Thousands of these refugees are caused by conditions following the Druze uprising, unless relieved at once, says Mr. Pellegrin, the suffering, now intense, will be terrible. Bundle days will be put on at once in the counties, clothing may also be sent, prepaid, to the Near East Relief, Army Base Warehouse, foot of 58th. Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

In Baltimore, Mr. Pellegrin asks, that clothing be brought, or sent, prepaid, to 14 W. Franklin St., third door; in the District of Columbia, to 321 Bond Building, Washington. October 29 is the latest time that clothing can be received in time to be shipped for this emergency. Mr. Pellegrin is hopeful of the usual generosity of the public to people in distress and of promptness in donations.

Fire Caused by Gasoline.

A fire near Union Bridge, last week, is said to have been caused by a lighted lantern placed several feet from a gasoline tank that had leaked, or overflowed, causing an explosion due to the gas arising from the gasoline coming into contact with the blaze in the lantern.

Those who have gasoline about their premises should never, never, never forget that gasoline throws off a gas that is highly explosive under proper conditions—especially when confined in a building—and that this gas is represented by the odor of the gasoline.

Gasoline should always be confined in tight receptacles and never be placed, even then, in closed rooms, or buildings, where there is an open fire of any kind. When gasoline is used for cleaning purposes, it should always be used out of doors.

More Stills Seized.

On Friday of last week, eight more stills were seized in Baltimore, by prohibition agents, and four men arrested. Large quantities of mash, distillate and sugar, were taken with the stills.

Chicken Bone Kills Man.

Henry H. Eastman, secretary and treasurer of the Hercules Powder Co., of Wilmington, Del., died in the Delaware hospital, last Friday, from complications caused by swallowing a small chicken bone at a luncheon on the Wednesday previous. The surgeons could not locate the bone by X-rays, or any other means.

United Lutheran Convention.

The United Lutheran Church, the largest general body of Lutherans in the United States, is holding its 50th. biennial convention in Richmond, Va., this week. This body has gained 38,167 members during the year, and now has a membership of 1,417,999. There are 34 district Synods in the body, 43 theological seminaries and colleges, and a total valuation in church properties of $114,366,118.

Senator Weller is "Wet."

Senator Weller, in a public statement made in the Baltimore Sun, last Saturday, says he stands on a "wet" platform. He is for "beer and light wines" and considers that "the Volstead act contains provisions which are unreasonable, drastic and intemperate."

So, there you are. Both candidates for Senator are wet. There being no choice, each voter might as well vote for his party's candidate.

Does Abnormal Money Spending Interest You?

Here are some startling facts. What do they mean to you? Do they, in your opinion, have anything to do with prosperity, business, taxes, high costs of labor, public morals, or what we call "the times?"

The Dempsey-Tunney prize fight resulted in total gate receipts of some thing like $2,000,000.

The World's series baseball games, just finished, gave total receipts of $1,207,864. In addition, vast sums were spent in travelling expenses from New York to St. Louis, and some of the individual favorites on both teams received valuable gifts, ranging from a $5000. automobile down to gold watches.

Babe Ruth, the home-run expert, has signed a contract for a salary of $72,000 for six months play in 1927.

"Ty" Cobb, outfielder for Detroit, gets a salary of $60,000 this year.

Suzanne Lenglen, tennis champion, has signed a contract for $150,000 next year to give a series of public tennis exhibitions.

Dozens of baseball players draw salaries in excess of any public official in the United States, except the president.

We used to be horrified that Presidents of railroads, or of big corporations, received as much as $50,000 a year, and called it "robbery" of the public. Now, any leading "movie" star gets four times that much.

Football, racing, swimming are turning out "wonders" to whom $50,000 is merely a good-sized tip.

The recent beauty show at Atlantic City named a "Miss America" who can, if she wants to, capitalize the honor up into the hundreds of thousands.

We need not confine the subject to professional athletics, nor to "joy" spending, for even a not very careful reading of any big city daily for a few days, with the object of noting extravagant costs, will show the money-spending craze. It has simply reached the point of being a "necessary of life," a claimed legitimate "cost of living"—fast living, and necessarily fast spending. Is it all "their" fault?

What do these facts mean? Simply that "the people" of this country are spending wildly every year for all sorts of physical stunts and exhibitions—for pleasures, notoriety and often disgusting indulgences—more money in the aggregate than it costs to run our government, or to support all the efforts put forth in the name of Christianity.

Where do they get it? Naturally, through wages and profits, and sometimes through robbery and gambling.

And who pays the wages and profits? Everybody, nearly so. The source of this immense income squandered for indulgences must be from those who feed the small streams that make up the larger streams that make wholesale extravagance possible.

What is the remedy? Just one year of sensible economy by everybody. Just one year of buying only the necessities of plain comfortable living. Just one year of cutting out luxuries, and indulgences, and foolish money spending. As soon as the small streams dry up, the larger ones will stop running.

The money squandering habit must have something—somebody—to feed on. Things exist because there is a demand for them. There is no profit in keeping a stock for sale that nobody buys. How much of the "easy money" are you supplying that goes into big figure spending?

The trouble is, we have gotten away from the reasonable healthy, and into the unreasonable and unhealthy. No normal person wants a world without any amusement or luxuries, or frivolity in it. Life would not be worth the living if based always on the use of the barest of necessities. What we want to do is get back to normal, and stop helping to pay for the outrageously abnormal. How can we help? Think it over!

Why do so Many People fail to Vote?

This question has been agitating the minds of students of popular government very greatly, especially in recent years; and rightly so, for it we are to have true majority rule, we naturally wonder why it so frequently happens that so many people who make up the majority fail to function on election day.

Numerous answers have been given, all more or less guess work, and unsatisfying. Not so many years ago, a lot of men waited to be paid to come to the election, and when the pay was not forthcoming they staid at home. Many use the day as a holiday, and go hunting or pleasuring. A common answer is, "lack of interest." Sometimes large bodies of voters simply become disgruntled because they failed to "get" something they wanted in the way of candidates or legislation.

None of these answers are fully satisfying, but the "lack of interest" reasons comes nearest, and this makes it interesting to know the cause of it, for mere local disappointments do not cover the field widely enough to make the answer go far. An article in the Dearborn Independent offers something like the cause, by saying that the voters want to vote for "measures" and not so much for just "men," and that they comparatively seldom have the chance to do this. Here are some paragraphs from the article referred to;

"The remedy for our growing lack of interest in voting is to give us an opportunity to vote for measures as well as for men. Representative government should not be dispensed with. We cannot settle every little thing by ballot. But we can settle the big things. We know enough now to do that. We have gone a long way since our government was established. The political clothes that fitted us then are too small now. We have ideas that we want to express. We can express them if given a chance. We haven't much chance as long as we are compelled to vote for men.

Here is one of a thousand illustrations that might be given. The writer knows a United States Senator who is a member of a certain religious denomination. Church people vote for him because he is a church man. As a church man they assumed, when they voted for him, that he was also a prohibitionist. He never drinks a drop and furthermore, all of his church training tended to put him on the side of the drys. But he votes as wet as the wettest. He has so many large cities in his state that he feels he has to vote wet to be re-elected.

What are his church constituents to do when he comes up for re-election? They can vote against him, on the prohibition issue, of course, but what will that do to the rest of their political beliefs? As to some other measures, this Senator really represents them. He believes as they do about the League of Nations, the World Court and foreign debts. Or, rather, he believes as some of them do, because they themselves do not all hold the same views. If they put him out, on the prohibition issue, they also put him out with regard to some things concerning which they agree with him.

The remedy for lack of interest in the ballot is to make the ballot of more interest to us. Give us a chance to use the ballot more effectively. Instead of compelling us to vote only for men, as we usually have to do if we vote at all, let us vote for measures as well as men. Lawful ways could be provided to bring the principal issues before the voters. What an election we should have this fall if the people were permitted to vote for the things in which they are really interested.

Nothing but big questions should be submitted. Nobody wants to vote on the little things. Let our representatives attend to them. But we do want to vote on the big things. Every vote would then be a bull's-eye. No voter would be misrepresented about anything. And when we had finished, we should definitely know where we stood."

"A Paramount Issue"—for the Democrats.

Senator Edwards, Democrat, of New Jersey, predicts prohibition will be the "paramount issue in 1928." It may or it may not, but within the Democratic party it is certain to be a fighting issue during the next two years.

Senator Edwards speaks for the wet Eastern and Northern wing of his party. That segment of Democracy now follows the leadership of Governor Smith, of New York. Its strength and that of its leaders is in the East and in the industrial centers of the North and the Middle West.

William Gibbs McAdoo is the spokesman for the dry wing of Democracy whose strongholds are in the South and the West. Like Senator Edwards, Mr. McAdoo wishes to make prohibition the "paramount issue" two years hence.

The Californian is acting upon the belief that this can be done. He has no hopes of winning over the East, where Democracy is joined to its wet idols. In the South, however, and in the West he is digging deep trenches and stringing prohibition barbed wire over all the Democratic landscape.

Mr. McAdoo has made the Democratic platform in California as dry as the Mohave Desert. A wet candidate for Governor slipped by him, but the dry plank in the platform is as dry as the desert sands.

The McAdoo-shaped platform calls enforcement the duty of patriots. It demands an emphatic "No" on the California proposition to repeal the State dry law. The prohibition act is described as "the supreme law of the land." In one of his speeches Mr. McAdoo denounces the State of New York for repealing its dry law as "plain nullification" and as "rebellion against the United States.

This is the McAdoo and the dry answer to the challenge of Governor Smith, of Governor Ritchie, of Maryland; of Senator Edwards and the wet Democrats of the East and North. Mr. McAdoo has not only held his own State but he is now in a position to carry the war across the country to the East.

The drys can count upon the South and most of the West. In their round-up of delegates for 1928 they are reasonably sure of not less than thirty States, unless all the political landmarks are swept away between now and January, 1928.

They may and probably will capture several others. Some of the States now claimed by the wet Democracy are debatable. It does not at present seem possible for the wet wing to gather up enough delegates for a majority in the next convention.

The Democrats in 1928 promise to be just as badly divided as in 1924. The McAdoo activities in California and such statements as these of Senator Edwards are pushing the two wings further apart. The East and a part of the North are lined up against the West and the South in exactly the same positions they were two years ago.—Phila. Ledger.

Farm Isolation Vanishing.

As long as there have been cities there have been paved streets, and asphalt, which we think of usually as a modern product, was used in ancient Babylon by Nabopolassar who was the first to use it for street construction.

His son, Nebuchadnezzar, followed his example, and upon one street of which he was particularly proud, caused to be placed a tablet calling upon his people to "traverse this street in joy" and wish him "eternal age and well-being."

Pompeii built sidewalks of asphalt, and was the first to raise the center of her asphalt streets in order to drain off the water.

Modern highways are transforming farm life in many states, relieving it of its loneliness and placing it in ready contact with all that is going on in the world.

Good roads present more than merely tourists zipping along the highway, or trucks moving from town to town. The finer picture is that of rural homes linked together, with the men, women and children of the farms brought nearer one another.

Social life in the farming sections is possible today, because of the constantly increasing web of hard-surfaced roads, and such life is becoming the envy of city folk.

Only a few years ago, there was little or no state highway construction that is now proving an aid to consolidation of rural schools.—The Manufacturer.

Potato Rich in Vitamins

The potato is an important source of vitamin B—the anti-neuritic vitamin, whose lack causes the disease known as beriberi. According to F. J. Lyman and Inez Blystone of the laboratory of applied chemistry at Ohio university, this essential element is distributed uniformly throughout the potato, and is stable both during cooking and storage. Meager in calories, the white potato supplies about 12 per cent of the American dietary. Mr. Lyman and Miss Blystone have conducted a series of experiments in which they have found that rats thrive and grew at a normal rate on a diet containing as much as 80 per cent potatoes. When put on a diet of only 40 per cent potatoes from which other foods containing vitamin B were excluded the rats showed a rapid decline in condition, which disappeared as soon as a sufficient quantity of vitamin B was again supplied.

New Death-Dealing Device

A "death-noise," instead of a "death-ray" has been discussed before the National Academy of Sciences. The "death-noise" would have been inaudible to human ears, but it consisted of sound waves just the same, and it killed small fishes and other aquatic animals in vessels of water in less than a minute. By means of an electrical apparatus, high frequency sound waves have been generated at a rate of from 100,000 to 400,000 to the second; the upper limit of audibility to human ears is between 20,000 and 30,000. If a beam of these sound waves is directed toward the surface of the water, the surface is heaped up in a mound. The vibrations heat the water, a rise of nearly six degrees centigrade in one minute having been recorded.

Japs Urged to Drink Milk

Milk is to be introduced in Japan as a means of enlarging the stature of the people of Nippon. As the result of an investigation conducted by health authorities, it has been found that the lack in the diet of the bone and teeth building minerals, calcium, phosphorus and lime, is a primary contributing cause for the smallness in stature of the Japanese. Milk users, the officials reported, have been those peoples who are large, strong and vigorous, and who have reduced their infant mortality rate. In no other food, they said, was there as plentiful supply of the necessary bone-building materials.

Looking Far Into Future

Dwight L. Rogers of Providence, R. I.; Dr. James D. Gold of Bridgeport, Conn., and J. Benjamin Sedgwick of Pittsfield were a committee of three in charge of the centennial celebration of the North Cornwall (Conn.) Congregational church. The three were appointed to the committee just fifty years ago. The sesquicentennial committee, which will have charge of the exercises 50 years hence, comprises the following boys and girls: James Rogers, Benjamin Gold, Oliver M. Hart and Alberta Hurlbut.

Green Feed for Layers Needed During Winter

Green feed for hens in the winter will make them lay better, besides being one of the cheapest foods for the poultryman to use.

If possible, get some mangel beets. Cut them into pieces and put on a stick which is driven in the ground, or set up on the floor of the poultry house. This will give the chickens a chance to pick off the beet. One or two mangels, depending on the size, should be allowed every 25 birds. Mangels can be stored easily, so that they will keep throughout the entire winter. Sprouted oats also supply green food which is very satisfactory. The one thing to remember is not to let the oats sprout too long. Best results have been found with young sprouts that are green and tender. Care must be taken not to let it become moldy, as this poisons chickens. If mold persists it can be overcome by sprinkling with the sprouting water ten drops of formaldehyde. Formaldehyde is not injurious to the chickens in this quantity.

Soaked oats will help out if the trouble of sprouting is too great. Alfalfa leaves which have been dried and then covered with boiling water to "green" them, are also good and palatable.

The use of these succulent feeds will increase the egg production and will reduce the feeding costs.

Sour Skim Milk Given as Cause of High Production

Some time ago the Missouri College of Agriculture through the department of poultry husbandry started an experiment to determine the cause of the high production secured from laying hens that were given an abundance of sour skim milk. A study of the analysis of sour skim milk showed it to contain 90.77 per cent water, 0.10 per cent fat, 3.93 per cent milk sugar (lactose), 0.56 per cent lactic acid, 3.65 per cent protein and 0.79 per cent milk ash or salts. It was assumed that water alone was not the stimulating factor. The fat content seemed too low, and the distribution of carbohydrates did not point to milk sugar as a possible source of the problem. A comparison was made of rations containing lactic acid, milk salts, protein-free sour skim milk and sour skim milk. The results showed conclusively that lactic acid in the same solution as in sour skim milk is valueless for egg production. Besides both milk salts and ash entirely failed to stimulate increased egg production. The results all seem to indicate that it is the proteins or milk curd that is the valuable part of sour skim milk. For two years the protein-free sour skim milk has not given as satisfactory production as the sour skim milk.

Guinea Quite Valuable Fowl to Have on Farm

So far, guineas occupy a back place in the poultry industry. Yet they are a valuable fowl.

When they are known they will come into their own with honor.

They are among the very best "bug rustlers" we have, living almost entirely on insects, doing very little damage to growing crops.

As for eating purposes, the guineas are claimed by some people to surpass the chicken in flavor and juiciness. Although having dark flesh, the young fowls are tender. The meat of the grown fowls is not as dry, when baked, as that of chicken or turkey.

The guinea hens are always known by their plaintive "potrack, potrack, potrack," while the rooster, when disturbed by a hawk or strange dog, lets forth such a shrill chatter that it puts one's nerves on edge.

Guineas begin laying the first of May and lay all through the summer, the eggs selling on the market for as much as hen eggs.

POULTRY NOTES

Do not feed the goslings until 48 hours old, but give them tender, finely cut grass and water.

Turkeys for breeding should be in good breeding condition; if fat the eggs are largely infertile.

Some geese will hatch two broods of goslings in a season if well managed. Goose eggs require 28 to 31 days to hatch.

The young are chicks until their sex can be distinguished or possibly even a little longer. A brood is a collection of chicks cared for by one hen or in a single brooder.

A stewing chicken weighs about three pounds and a roaster four pounds or more.

A constitutionally strong bird, one that passes through the molt quickly and easily, is a better layer than one that develops all kinds of ailments during this period.

Individual hens with pale-colored shanks, in such breeds as the Rock, Wyandottes, Reds and Leghorns, are considered better layers than those with bright-yellow shanks.

From Scrubs to Profitable Cows

Scrawny Animals From Arkansas Made Good Producers at Iowa Station.

The efficacy of the "corn-crib cross" has again been demonstrated. The same experiment has demonstrated also the worth of the pure-bred cross. Here is the story: Over in the state of Iowa the experiment station officials decided to go across to the neighboring state of Arkansas, into a section where feed was scarce and what cows they had were poor indeed, and buy a few of them, bring them home, feed them well and breed them to pure-bred bulls. Such an experiment, they reasoned, would demonstrate the value of good feeding to men who had herds of similarly poor cattle and it would show how such herds could be improved from generation to generation. Seven cows, four yearling heifers and two heifer calves were purchased. They were small and undernourished.

Got Same Food.

When they reached their new home, however, they got the same feed and care as the cows in the station herd. Instead of hay in winter and pasture in summer, they were given alfalfa, silage and a well-balanced meal ration. Instead of indifferent housing and hit-and-miss care, they had a good stable and chores were done by the clock. The first year, under this kind of attention, two four-year-olds in the lot produced 3,084.6 lbs. milk and 149.24 lbs. fat. This production they steadily increased until, at seven years of age, they produced an average of 4,907.7 lbs. milk and 229.91 lbs. fat, an increase of 59 per cent in milk and 54 per cent in fat. Allowing for the natural increase due to greater maturity, the increase due to the cumulative effect of good feed and care was 49 per cent in milk and 48 per cent in fat. It was also shown that the younger an animal comes under good feed and management the greater will be its response. Comparing the records of the two four-year-olds with those of the older cows in the lot, they increased 14 per cent in milk and 8 per cent in fat as compared with the mature cows. Those coming as heifers produced 27 per cent more milk and 24 per cent more fat than did those started at maturity. There is a lesson here for the most of us. It is just possible that too much has been said about the importance of good breeding as compared with the emphasis that has been placed on good feeding. We have been in sections where pure-bred bulls have been used for generations, but where the average production of the herds was very low. It was a case of poor feeding. When we consider that these Arkansas cows were as poor as could be found, we must conclude that there would be very few 3,000-pound cows, if all cows were given a real chance.

Control Tomato Blight by Spraying or Dusting

Tomatoes are very largely injured by leaf spot or blight, which by injuring the leaves prevents the maturity and development of the fruit. They also are likely to be sun scalded because of no protection by the leaves.

This trouble can be controlled to a considerable extent by spraying or dusting with bordeaux, which is profitable on rich soils, but may not be profitable on poor soils. The effects of the trouble can largely be avoided by setting out only stocky, well-hardened plants early in the spring.

The disease lives over in weeds, grass and rubbish of the garden, and therefore, much can be done in the way of prevention by keeping the garden clean. Bulletin No. 1288 of the United States Department of Agriculture gives full details about this disease.

Field Feeding of Corn

Field feeding of corn is most successful when the weather is dry. It is not wise to keep pigs in the field after heavy rains, for they then waste corn and may injure the land. Unless very early varieties of corn are used, which are usually not heavy yielders, the new corn crop will not be ready early enough in the fall to furnish much feed for pigs which are to be finished for market in September or October, before the usual slump in prices occurs.

Cockleburrs Are Fatal

According to A. A. Hansen, weed specialist at Purdue, cockleburs are sometimes fatal to hogs and also to young cattle. It is not known definitely whether the injury is due to poison in the plants or to the mechanical effect of the burs in the digestive system. If the burs are well developed take the hogs from the field but if the plants are not large and the burs soft and just starting to form there is no danger in leaving the hogs where they are.

Air for Tomatoes

Give seedling tomatoes air whenever it is possible to make them stocky. No plant goes spindling faster than the tomato. Open the window a little way on any day when the temperature is above freezing but do not expose to cold winds. Fresh air whenever possible goes a long way toward making fine, strong tomato plants in the seed boxes and frames.

Rose Bush's Odd Growth

A remarkable freak of plant life is to be found at the home of Mrs. Eugene Briggs, Lebanon, N. H. A rose bush growing just outside the door and beneath the living-room window, has sent out shoots in several directions, some of which have pushed their way into the cellar. From there they forced their way through the floors until they grew up through a tiny knothole in the corner of the living room and continued to grow, pushing toward a window, where the branches leaved out into a beautiful climbing rose, growing all over the window, filling the window with blossoms and the room with fragrance.

Worth Thinking About.

And think not that the business would decline,
And fail if you should suddenly resign;
Ten thousand men would like to have your job;
A score, perhaps, are waiting down the line.

Definitions Don't Count

A certain Indianapolis girl who permitted attentions by a very affable young man whom she suspected of imbibing too freely at times, had been told that persons who had "one drink too many" were unable to pronounce resonant sounding words distinctly.

On this particular evening she decided to make the test, and when her friend called asked him to pronounce "sesquicentennial."

The young man, ignorant of the purpose, but willing to oblige, moved his lips silently in a struggle to form the word and then quietly said:

"One hundred fifty."

The girl is still wondering whether the test was satisfactory.

Remarkable Resemblance

Feature for feature, inch for inch and ounce for ounce, Kazuo Kaneko and Tsuguo Kaneko, twins, in Tokyo, are so much alike that even their parents were unable to distinguish between them. In voice, manner, likes and dislikes they are duplicates. Called to the colors recently, the examining officers could find no identifying marks so were forced to affix marks to their ear lobes so that commanding officers might know to which one they were giving orders.

MARRIED

DAVIS—MOORE.
GARDNER—HEARNE.

A double wedding of unusual charm and beauty, marked for its simplicity, was solemnized at nine o'clock, Saturday morning, October 9th., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Davis, at Pittsville, Wicomico Co., Md. Miss Maria Bishop Davis, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Davis became the bride of Mr. William Sheldon Moore, of Fruitland, Md., while Miss Margaret Cover Gardner was wedded to Mr. Robert Wilmer Hearne, of New York. Miss Gardner is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Gardner, of Blue Ridge Summit, Penna., and a grand-daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Cover, of Keymar, Md.

The two brides were classmates at Western Maryland College, graduates of the class of 1924, and members of the R. O. D. B.'s of that class, most of whom witnessed the ceremony. Mr. Moore is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, class of 1924, and a son of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Moore; Mr. Hearne is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Hearne, of Delmar, Md.

Dr. A. Norman Ward, Ph. D., LL. D., president of Western Maryland College, Westminster, performed the ceremony, the ring service being used. Only the immediate families, and closest personal friends witnessed the ceremony. The parlors of the Davis home were tastefully decorated with potted ferns and great bowls of yellow roses, over which yellow shaded candles cast their mellow glow. Preceding the ceremony, Miss Agnes Atkinson, of Cumberland, Md., a classmate of the brides, sang "I Love You Truly," with piano accompaniment by Mrs. J. Willis Parker, after which the bridal parties entered to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march. Both parties were attired in going-away gowns.

Immediately after congratulations the wedding party drove to the Wicomico Hotel, Salisbury, Md., where a wedding breakfast was served to about thirty-five guests. Amid showers of confetti and best wishes the happy pairs set forth, by automobile. Mr. and Mrs. Moore for an extended trip through New England and Canada, and Mr. and Mrs. Hearne for Asheville, N. C., and points in the South.

Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Hearne will make their home in New York where Mr. Hearne holds a responsible position with the Phoenix Indemnity Company. Mr. and Mrs. Moore will reside in Salisbury, where Mr. Moore is local manager for the Southern Dairies interests.

Tides Cause Volcanoes?

An interesting solution of the mystery of volcanic eruptions has just been offered by William Bowie of the United States coast and geodetic survey. He advances the theory, says Popular Science Monthly, that volcanic outbursts may be due directly to the pressure of the tides, which twist and wring the earth. The tides, he adds, may also have an influence in building mountains.

Lord's Day Resolutions.

Adopted at the Lord's Day Alliance dinner, Tuesday, Sept. 28th., 1926, at Emerson Hotel, Baltimore;

Whereas, the Churches and those in alliance with them are finding increasing difficulties in the observance of the Lord's Day, we feel drawn to give expression to the following resolutions:

(1) That we reaffirm our conviction that the holding sacred of the Lord's Day, as a day of rest and worship, is essential to the welfare of the nation, and we pledge anew our determination to maintain its sanctity both of ourselves and all others as well.

(2) That we emphasize with grave iteration, the heavy responsibility that rests upon the Church to give frequent utterance to the need of keeping sacred this day as a time of worship; and that we urge upon all parents to conduct their homes in the spirit of reverent observance of the Christian Sabbath, and in constant and consistent attendance of themselves and their children upon worship in their Churches, and finally that as Christian citizens we demand the enforcement by all in authority of the laws which protect the day.

(3) That we express our appreciation of the fine initiative of those good citizens who make possible such occasions as this, and who give their time, their influence and their money to keep the Lord's Day holy. They give untold comfort to those who bear the brunt of the battle.

(4) Nor can the resolutions omit to commend the faithful pastors and godly laymen of the rural Churches in the counties of our State, who have held the Lord's Day as a sacred trust. Their faithfulness, unrewarded and unnoticed deserves our grateful appreciation.

(5) That we commend to the Churches of Maryland the work of the Lord's Day Alliance as their agency in this great task. We especially commend its educational program which aims to train the children to love and honor the day which witnesses to the resurrection of our Lord. Only by the slow but sure method of teaching the children can we hope to make the future secure.

World Without Trees

Merely Deceit Waste

Trees protect health by helping to purify the air.

The foliage of trees exudes moisture in rainless periods, preventing extreme hot weather.

The forest floor absorbs most of the water from rain and melting snows, releasing it evenly and regularly into the streams, so that there will not be floods and the fertility of farm lands will not be destroyed by erosion.

Trees restore the fertility of waste lands by causing the accumulation of vegetation that forms a top-soil and contributes elements essential to plant life.

Trees shade streams from the sun, preventing evaporation and complete drying up of small streams.

Forests break the force of the wind, protecting homes, orchards and crops.

Trees shelter the birds which destroy insects that prey upon human and plant life.

Forests furnish refuge for game, giving mankind food, furs and hunting.

Trees provide health through opportunity for recreation and through the pure air, water, herbs, oil and drugs they give man.

Trees furnish paper for newspapers, magazines and books and are important in advancing education.

Trees furnish nuts, berries, maple sirup, honey, flavoring extracts, many fruits and other foods.

Trees furnish lumber for the building of homes and the making of thousands of articles in daily use.

Trees are an important factor in transportation by rail or water; they provide also for telephone communication.

Forests are important in protecting water-power resources from which are obtained power and light to make homes comfortable and turn the wheels of industry.

Few Aristocratic Beauties

An effort has recently been made in Paris to decide once for all what type of face is truly aristocratic.

In order to accomplish this, 70 women of the old aristocracy were photographed. To qualify for this distinction one must be able to prove that not for two centuries has there been an admixture of nonaristocratic or foreign blood. Those with an English or a German or an Italian ancestor or two need not apply, even though those forbears were dukes or princes.

Having secured the gallery of ladies of untainted stock, generalizations as to features were then made. It then became apparent that the true French aristocrat was not necessarily beautiful. Her nose was long and thin and her eyes were well shaped, though a trifle prominent.

Soviet Claims Resented

A curious controversy has arisen with regard to a fund which was bequeathed by a Dutchman in 1914 to the Russian Academy of Sciences and which never was paid. It is claimed now by the present managing committee of the academy. As the Soviet government, however, has declared that it is not bound by the treaties concluded by Russian Imperial governments with other powers, it is doubted whether the academy has any right to proclaim itself the legal successor of the former academy.

There is no jurisprudence in the country providing for such cases, but Dutch public opinion strongly disapproves the assurance of the Russians to put in a claim while owing 1,200,000 guilders (about $480,000) to Dutch investors.

Building Infirmities A chic young sheik was showing his Uncle Alex the town, dragging him about in his hand-decorated "can."

"What's that building, James?" asked the uncle, looking curiously at a dilapidated brick building back among scrub pines.

"That? Oh that," chuckled James, "is the county infirmary."

"You mean infirmity, I presume," corrected uncle, who hadn't been a college professor ten years for nothing. "Oh, the county infirmary, eh?"

"Some might call it that, too, sir, but I mean infirmity, for that it is, so old and wabily it can't stand much longer."—Indianapolis News

"Time and Tide"

The word "tide" in this phrase is merely a synonym for time. It does not refer to the tides of the ocean, as commonly supposed. "Tid" is the Anglo-Saxon word for time. The old form is retained in such compounds as Christmas-tide and Whitson-tide. "Time and tide wait for no man" means exactly the same, no more and no less, as "time waits for no man."—Exchange.

WAITED FOR NINE YEARS

By H. M. EGBERT

(© by W. G. Chapman.)

"SEE the late James Minton has left all his millions to his English son-in-law, Lord Wedgewater," remarked the cynic at the club. "That's a nice little windfall, isn't it? Enough to sweeten the match, I should say."

"Yes," said the old lawyer dryly. "I happened to know Minton pretty intimately, you know."

"Wasn't there some story about Miss Minton having been married before?"

"There was," answered the old lawyer. "Moreover, Mr. Minton instructed me to tell all the circumstances whenever that old story was revived. You know, she married a chauffeur."

"Well, let us hear it," the cynic answered.

The old lawyer flicked the ash from his cigar. "You remember when James Minton moved to New York from the West with about seventy millions and bought that big house on the avenue?" he asked. "Yes, that was some nine years ago. His wife was that western type that we all know; very kind-hearted, very 'temperamental,' very anxious to push herself and her only daughter, Miss Elizabeth, into society. They had about five automobiles and an imported chauffeur, an Englishman named Jones, who claimed to have been a university man."

"Jones used to drive Miss Elizabeth when she went shopping. Jones was only a sort of human animal in the parents' eyes. He was a fine-looking young fellow, with a sort of aristocratic manner about him. But a chauffeur was not likely to endanger Miss Elizabeth's happiness. Nobody thought it strange that Miss Elizabeth developed an unaccountable love for driving in the park, along the avenue and into the country for hours together."

"That was where Mrs. Minton made her mistake. You know human nature is pretty much the same everywhere, and when two young persons are thrown a good deal into each other's company artificial barriers are apt to fall away. A good many of our young women of the wealthy class are not dying to catch a titled husband. Miss Elizabeth, fresh home from school, found society distinctly a bore. She had that discontent which leads some girls to enter upon mission and church work, others to travel, others to do dangerous things."

"One morning they went out quietly, without the car, and were married over in Jersey City. The chauffeur took his wife back to a little apartment which he had furnished, and rang up Minton. He gave him his address and calmly told him what had occurred. Ten minutes later Minton and his wife arrived post haste, to find their daughter and son-in-law seated at the wedding supper."

"The girl sprang to her feet and threw her arms around her father's neck."

"Forgive us," she pleaded. "We have loved each other so long. He can support me; we don't want any money, only your blessing on the match."

"There was a terrible scene in the little four-room flat; the mother pleading, the father threatening; the disgrace nearly overwhelmed them."

"One million dollars for you, sir, when this marriage has been annulled," shouted Minton to the husband. "Otherwise not a cent of my money will go to my daughter." He turned to the girl: "Elizabeth, if you will come home with us tonight," he said, "I pledge you my word that you may return to your husband tomorrow morning without reproach from either myself or your mother. You owe us that duty, at least."

"Dearest, can you spare me for tonight?" she said to the chauffeur. "I will win him over," she whispered. And he let her go."

"You see, the man had effected a Napoleonic coup, but he had not the ability to drive home his conception. Minton simply snatched the girl away from him. And he had not made his seventy millions without some knowledge of men—and women, too, for when morning came and the girl awoke the recollection of the day before seemed like a dream to her. Now she was in a cooler state of mind, and her father was still unconvinced."

"Finally a compromise was effected. Minton promised that he would recognize the son-in-law if he would stay away six months. At the end of that period, if his daughter was of the same mind, the marriage should be celebrated again, at St. George's and the chauffeur would be taken into the Minton business. But if absence changed Elizabeth Minton's love, then an annulment was to be secured without resistance."

"You can wait six months, dearest," sobbed the girl, in Jones' arms. The parents looked on grimly. It was the mother's tragedy, but, to the father, one more such game as he had often played with his fellow men."

"Long before the six months had elapsed the suit was begun. Miss Elizabeth had known nothing of the world when she came home from school and fell a victim to Jones. Now began for her a series of parties and dances, at all of which she was presented, according to the agreement, under her maiden name. The cold worldliness of her social set at first appalled, then amused, then fascinated her. She shuddered at the recollection of that four-room flat."

"It was just at the end of the sixth month that Jones received the news of the annulment. He went to Minton's office in Wall street. The chauffeur pushed past the office boys and junior clerks straight into the old man's room. Minton flung out his arm for his revolver, but Jones only laughed."

"It's all right; you win—now," he said. "But let me tell you that I will win her again; I will go through hell fire to win her."

"This was Minton's turn to laugh. He had heard that sort of language before. 'In the meantime,' he said, 'suppose you let me give you that check for a million.'

"I shall accept it to buy my wife a necklace when we are married again," said the chauffeur, and then both laughed."

"The check was cashed. As he put it away among his papers when it came back from the bank, James Minton sighed with relief. He knew the episode was closed. His daughter bore her maiden name once more by right of law. From that day forward the old people devoted their efforts to making her more worldly than before. They took her to Europe and made the grand tour of the different countries. She was wooed by numerous admirers, but the requisite combination of family and position had not yet occurred. So the years passed."

"Elizabeth Minton was seven and twenty. She had been paraded in every capital of Europe ineffectually. The young men whom she attracted became repelled by her heartlessness, the cool commercial valuation placed upon her by her parents. There did not seem to be a spark of ingenuousness left in those artificial embers of vivacity and studied coquetry."

"But, thank God, no woman but retains, somewhere, the original sweetness of her nature, however it may be suppressed. Seven and twenty is a dangerous age for an unmarried woman. The triumphs of life have palled, the charm of youth, with its surprises, has been replaced by the bored weariness of the world which every woman longs to shake off by some desperate plunge. At that time the girl was in much the same condition of mind as when she made that amazingly rash marriage in New York."

"It was then that she met Wedgewater. It was at a big English country house. The mother had died, but the girl was still paraded by people who had taken her up—for a cash consideration—in England. Wedgewater had returned to his native land after years of absence abroad. He had been a younger son, without expectations, and something of a black sheep. But he had made a fortune in the Canadian Northwest, and on his brother's death, had returned to assume his inheritance."

"They were standing outside in the coolness of one of those delicious nights that June only can give. Their speech had grown more intimate. The girl felt a sudden loathing for the role which she played. A resolution, of slow growth, suddenly became white-hot in her mind. She knew that she could never again lend herself to that hateful title-hunting which she had so fruitlessly engaged in all those years. There was something about the young man who stood beside her that brought vividly to her mind the memory of those foolish, delicious days in New York. He had been speaking to her of his own life; they had touched upon many youthful follies that are common to men and women; both seemed disgusted with the world in which they moved."

"I am going back to Canada," he said to her. "I have had enough of this life. He bent toward her. 'Come with me,' he pleaded."

"He was very like her first and only lover. The tears rushed into her eyes. Before she realized it she was telling him the story of that folly, pouring out her heart to him as she had never opened it before. When she had ended he took her by the hands."

"Tell me one thing," he said. 'Do you regret that yielding to your parents' wish, or are you glad?'

He read the answer in her eyes. He drew her closer toward him. "Elizabeth, I have loved you for nine years," he said."

"And before she could answer he had snapped the million-dollar necklace round her throat."

Arab Audience Takes the Movies Seriously

The natives of Tiencen are great movie fans, but they make such a noise that the orchestra and the white audience have to sit upstairs.

As few of the Arabs can read, the title of the film when flashed on the screen is received in silence, but as soon as the first picture is shown there is a yell. All the Arabs in the audience talk at once and keep up a continuous comment on what they see.

The antics of Europeans in the comic films meet with a hilarious success unheard of elsewhere. In the tragic films the villain is reviled with loud imprecations, and when at the end of the film the villain is rewarded, yells of delight mark the appreciation of the Arab audience.

THE GARDEN FLOWERS

THE flowers from the garden had been sent in a box to the city. Some one in the city who was very fond of this particular garden had received the box.

And after one box had come, many others followed along, for the first box was sent when the first flowers came out in the spring, and they followed one right after the other after that.

And oh, how the flowers from the garden did enjoy their reception when they arrived.

They were greeted so delightfully. "You dear pale lavender tulips," the lady said as she received the flowers

"You Dear, Pale Lavender Tulips," the Lady Said.

from the garden, "how beautiful you are. You are just the color of orchids."

"And here are the lovely pink and red and yellow tulips—and here is an orange-colored one!"

"Here are the dear white lilacs and their pretty soft green leaves, and, dear me, dear me, how even the very twigs smell so sweetly of the garden."

And then the lady saw some ferns in the bottom of the box, and as she saw that the ferns were so new that they had scarcely uncurled themselves, she almost cried.

"Why, ferns," she said, "I grew you when I was a little girl. And your sweet fern fragrance is so like that dark, cool corner of the garden where I put you that it almost makes me cry. Happiness often makes one want to cry, ferns," she said.

And the ferns thought it was lovely of her to weep a tear or two or three, as she did, and, too, she was homesick then, just a little, for that garden spot where it was so cool and where she had planted the ferns.

Of course the plants in the house said they weren't thought so much of now as during the winter time when there were no flowers at all.

But still they couldn't complain, for on all the windy days they were still put out of the window and could drink the lovely refreshing rain water.

And Creeping Charlie grew more and more all the time, for he was so anxious to have a look at everything that he spread himself this way and that way.

The garden flowers were very much pleased, for when they first arrived they were afraid it was going to be too hot for them in the city home where there seemed to be so much heat, as in the city people still thought it was too cool.

But the garden flowers noticed the windows were quickly opened after they arrived and that the heat was turned off, which was surely an honor to the garden flowers.

It let them know how much they were thought of by the lady who received them.

"Oh, garden flowers," she said to them, "how well I remember the garden parade of flowers, beginning in the spring and lasting all through the summer into the fall."

"And how we used to cover up the flowers in the fall with newspapers, and so the newspapers would not blow away we fastened them down at the corners with pebbles from the garden gravel path."

"Yes, the pebbles even used to work for the garden."

"We all loved the garden, and we always will love the garden."

"And even if I cannot see the garden now all the time, I can see it once in a while, and the flowers will be sent to me when I can't go to them."

"You travel so beautifully, dear flowers, too, you keep so fresh, and yet your journey is a long one."

And the flowers whispered in their sweet flower way:

"We would not fade for anything, for the one who sends us loves us, and the one who receives us loves us, and we want her to see us as we are!"

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

CURE FOR COUGHING

WHEN a person is taken with a fit of coughing and strangling—such, for instance as when a piece of food "goes down the wrong way"—he or she can be at once relieved by putting a pair of scissors down inside the clothing next to the skin. This piece of emergency folk-medicine is practiced both in this country and Europe and the prescription is one of double potency, for it is compounded of two ingredients, magic and spiritism. In the first place a pair of scissors being made of steel—which is the same thing as iron—are sure to scare away the evil spirit which is trying to strangle or choke the patient. Witches and other evil spirits abhor iron—there is nothing the evil spirits fear more. They have abhorred it and feared it since iron was first worked from the ore. That is the spiritism part of the prescription. The magic part is contained in the fact that scissors cut. They cut actually and so can cut sympathetically.

As Told by Irvin S. Cobb

THE PREDICTION

AT A luncheon in New York of the Catholic Actors' guild Rev. John Talbot Smith told a story which had an especial appeal to his audience, most of whom were communicants of the same faith of which he is a distinguished clergyman. Father Smith said that a young woman in the confessional confided that she was afraid she had been spending some of her money foolishly.

"Spending your money foolishly calls for penance," said the priest sternly. "How have you been spending yours?"

"Well, father, I went to a fortune teller," admitted the penitent.

"Oh, ho, so you went to a fortune teller, eh? Well, that's wrong to begin with. In the first place, professional fortune tellers are most of them frauds, and, in the second place, they pretend to deal with the supernatural. And what did you do for this fortune teller?"

"I gave him two dollars, father." "Worse and worse—wasting your hard-earned wages on a faker. And, in exchange for your two dollars what did he do for you?"

"He told me a pack of lies, father, about my past and my future." "What did he say about your past?"

"Only a pack of lies, as I was just after tellin' you."

"And what did he tell you about your future?"

"He said, father, I would shortly be goin' on a long, hard journey."

"Well," said the priest reflectively, "he may have lied to you about your past, but when he predicted that you would be going on a long, hard journey in the near future he was not far wrong, after all. You'll do the stations of the cross twelve times!"

Lesson for October 17

MOSES HONORED IN HIS DEATH

LESSON TEXT—Deut. 34:1-12.
GOLDEN TEXT—Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Moses Sees the Promised Land.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Death of Moses.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Lessons from the Life of Moses.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What the World Owes Moses.

I. Moses Views the Promised Land From Mount Pisgah (vv. 1-4).

At the Lord's bidding Moses ascended the mountain from which he got a view of the promised land. He obeyed, though he knew that he was to die there (Deut. 32:50). He greatly desired to go into the land (Deut. 3:25), but graciously submitted to the will of the Lord. Though he was not permitted to enter the land, God gave him a view in its full dimensions of the land which was to be the inheritance of the people which he had delivered and led for forty years. The reason given by the Lord for refusing an entrance into the land was Moses' failure to sanctify the Lord at Meribah (Deut. 32:51, cf. Num. 20:1-13). This was too glaring a sin for the Lord to pass over, though Moses had served Him faithfully for many years.

II. The Death and Burial of Moses (vv. 5-9).

1. His death (v. 5).
Though he died in the vigor of manhood, his work was done. He did not die before his time. God put him into the world for a purpose, and as soon as that work was done He called him home. Though Moses was a great man he was not exempt from death.

2. The burial of Moses (v. 6).
God buried him. Most likely this service was performed by the angels. Likely this is the time and circumstance when the devil contended with Michael, the archangel, over the body of Moses (Jude 9).

3. The time of mourning for Moses (v. 8).

They mourned for thirty days. It is not wrong to lay away earthly friends even with tears, but as Christians we should not mourn as those who have no hope. Indeed, it is much better to express our appreciation and love for our friends by showing the proper courtesy and respect while they are alive, than to mourn over them when they are dead.

III. The Successor of Moses (v. 9).

Joshua, who had been the minister of Moses during all the years of the wilderness journey, now became the military leader of the Israelites. That Joshua was a fit man as a leader of the Israelites is seen.

1. By the fact that he was full of the spirit of wisdom.

While the Lord is not dependent upon human wisdom, He does select as His representatives men whom He has endowed with the proper wisdom.

2. He was divinely ordained for the work at the hand of Moses, "for Moses had laid his hands upon him."

This he had done at the command of God (Num. 27:18-21).

3. The people owned him as their leader. "The children of Israel hearkened unto him, and did as the Lord commanded Moses."

In order for successful leadership a ruler must have the individual affection and allegiance of the people.

IV. Encomium Upon Moses (vv. 10-12).

In this eulogy Moses is given a place at the head of the Old Testament prophets. With the exception of the Greater Prophet (Deut. 18:15-18), of whom Moses was a type, he stands as the greatest prophet of Israel.

1. He was great because of his intimacy with God (v. 10), "whom the Lord knew face to face."

2. He was great in that he gave to the world a code of laws unequalled in the world's history.

3. He was great as a general in that he liberated the Israelitish nation from the oppression of the greatest nation of the earth.

4. He was great because he led two or three million Israelites through the desert for forty years.

5. He was great because he gave to us in the book of Deuteronomy three orations which, according to the judgment of competent critics, stand at the head of the world's literature.

Faith

What a wonderful ship is faith. She discovers worlds beyond anything found by Columbus. What a freight she carries. Riches beyond the treasures of Solomon's ships of gold. To what a glorious realm she transports.—W. L. Watkinson.

Looking Into the Future

When we look into the long avenue of the future and see the good there is for each one of us to do, we realize after all what a beautiful thing it is to work, and to live to be happy.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Shining and Singing

You may sing, "O for the wings of a dove!" but it is better to shine in the ways of God. Shining is the best kind of singing, and makes the singer sing to purpose.—Prophetic News.

What Ideals are Found in the Constitution of the United States.
Romans 13:1-8

The supremacy of law, the blessings of peace, the wisdom of co-operation, and the benefits of liberty are among the ideals found in our constitution. The first mentioned of these is the most important for the stability of national government. It so happens that this ideal is at present in danger of losing its supremacy in our national life. We have been busy passing many laws, but not so diligent in making them effective. We have laws enough, if enforced, to produce an ideal condition for law-abiding citizens, but the failure to enforce the laws, has developed a paradise for the criminal. This is the conclusion reached by a recent magazine editorial, based on a survey of crime in the state of Missouri.

"That state has anticipated its neighbors in arriving at the conclusion that before talking intelligently about crime one might do well to find out something about it. One of the things it has definitely found out is that crime, at least in Missouri, is not a hazardous occupation. In St. Louis in the course of a single year there were 149 cases of homicide and 25 punishments; 2,701 burglaries and 107 punishments; 2,075 robberies and 85 punishments. The chances of escaping the penalty for murder were five in six in St. Louis and ten in eleven in Kansas City; for robbery, twenty-four in twenty-five in St. Louis and twenty-seven in twenty-eight in Kansas City; for burglary, twenty-four in twenty-five in St. Louis, and ninety-nine in one hundred in Kansas City. 'Punishment' here means sentence. But sentence itself is subject to a very handsome discount. In more than one thousand serious cases an average penal term of more than fifty months worked out actually at less than twelve months. A ninety-nine year sentence resolves itself into 11.19 years. A life sentence works out less than eleven years.

"Before losing one's self in a study of the cause of crime and its cure, it is obviously in order to experiment with the simple device of catching the criminal and applying the laws that exist. If in St. Louis only eighty-five persons received punishment in 2,075 cases of robbery, the courts were not entirely at fault. The total number of arrests was only 379. Nearly nine chances in five of being convicted after committing robbery, and only one chance in five of being convicted after being caught—this is a condition of affairs that should greatly simplify the task of the many agencies now engaged in studying the subject."

Highest Duty of Man, to "Serve the World"

Life is an endless quest, and its meaning is determined by what we are looking for. It is not necessary that we shall find what we seek, arrive at a predestined goal and be able to assure ourselves and the world triumphantly that the thing we have attained is exactly what we always wanted. What matters greatly is that we shall continue to strive and move onward. It has been wisely said that it is better to travel hopefully than to arrive. And "a man sits as many risks as he runs."

But a mere restlessness does not make a lifetime noble and fruitful. Curiosity, though limitless and unappeased, of itself produces nothing. We have too much with us those who wish to be electrified continually by the tingling shock of fresh thrills and sensations, though the reaction leaves them spent. They seem to believe the world was made to amuse them; they are onlookers at a play, strollers through a museum, perpetual guests at a feast of bounty and of beauty, whoever remains outside and uninvited.

They need a vision; and it is forever true that "where there is no vision the people perish." They need to see that the world, though made for each of us, as Browning said, was made that we might serve it and not merely use it; might give to it and not simply take therefrom, and might add by the contribution of our toiling lives and thinking minds to the sum total of the truth and goodness that we found when we came here. Of little avail is the quest if the outcome is but treasure-trove that we put by for ourselves; and we are bound by the fact of our humanity as well as by our inheritance of the divine to remember always that "the best things any mortal hath are those that every mortal shares."—Philadelphia Ledger.

An Oversight

An irate customer entered the butcher's shop, threw down a piece of meat on the counter, and exclaimed, indignantly: "What do you call that sir?"

The butcher examined it and replied: "It looks like a piece of brass." "Piece of brass—of course it is! And do you know where I got it? Why, in one of your sausages."

The butcher rubbed his double chin, and then said he thought he could explain it.

"Yes, and explain it you will before I leave this shop!"

"Well," drawled the butcher, "I forgot to take the collar off."

Wary Hawks Trapped by Ingenious Farmer

C. C. Conger, Jr., a Virginia farmer and chicken raiser, has established a state record by trapping 1,200 hawks in the last 20 years, says Farm and Fireside. The hawks made his chicken business unprofitable.

"I erected poles and placed traps on them. I found half the hawks too sly to light upon them and climbing up and down poles to take care of traps was very troublesome," writes Mr. Conger. "I then decided to try setting traps on top of wire-fence posts over the farm. A dozen steel traps covered mighty little territory on a farm of 230 acres, yet I began catching hawks. It occurred to me that if I could devise some way to make a few traps cover a large territory, I would have solved the hawk problem. I hit upon the plan of placing a trap on about every tenth fence post and driving a spike in top of posts not bearing a trap. I knew a hawk could not light on a post with an obstruction like a spike sticking up in its way."

"It worked fine from the very start, and I have not since lost two dozen chickens by hawks. Later I learned to save my spikes by using a piece of old No. 10 fencing wire. By cutting wire in pieces about 10 inches long, then taking a good grip on end of wire about an inch back with pliers, I found it easy to drive into end of post by striking pliers a tap with hammer."

"I keep my traps in position on posts by driving a few 6-penny nails around frame of the trap. This prevents wind from blowing the trap off the post."

"During the last 20 years two dozen traps, arranged on fence posts over the farm, have given me a yield of hawks running well over 1,200. I catch hawks of every species inhabiting the eastern part of the United States. I look at my hawk traps once or twice a week, never failing to bring in from one to a dozen dead hawks. My neighbors for miles around have got relief from the chicken hawk as well as myself. Quail and other birds have increased wonderfully."

Before the Day of Forks

The comments of Mr. Justice McCardie upon the "social affliction" of demanding two forks to manipulate fish seem to the Manchester (Eng.) Guardian to have been based upon his torical knowledge. Forks were not introduced into England until 1608, and it is a notable fact that whilst we get Knifesmith and Spooner amongst our occupational surnames we find no Forker or Forksmith. Even the "Carver" had to use his fingers. In the "Boke of Kervynge" we find it set down, "Set never on fryshe, flesche, beest ne fowl, more than two fyngers and a thombe." The guest was lucky if he got a plate. Usually he was supplied with a round of bread, known as a trencher, upon which the meat was placed. It will be easy to understand why this was followed by the necessary service of the "Ewer" with a basin of cleansing water, and the "Napier," who proffered the towel or napkin.

Radio Chess in Far East

The first chess contest ever staged by radio in the Far East came to a successful conclusion when Shanghai chess enthusiasts defeated the Manila Chess club. Three players took part at both ends of the air waves and play waxed hot and furious until a misunderstanding over a lowly pawn threatened to break up the game. Rather than sacrifice a chance to win, Shanghai gallantly conceded the pawn and continued with the game, but not until some delay had been occasioned in unraveling Manila's instructions from the static and the greetings and news being exchanged by battleships in the harbor. It was 3 a. m. when the pieces were put away and Shanghai had won.

Rats Four Feet Long

Judging from specimens of Kenya rats just received at the London zoological gardens it is doubtful if the Pied Piper of Hamelin would ever have had the courage of tooting his tune if he had lived in Africa instead of Germany.

The Kenya rats are between three and four feet in length, with a row of teeth like a fox terrier. They are the titans of the rat world. To add to their ferocious appearance they have cheek pouches which they can fill up with nuts, fruits and grain until their heads bulge out to twice their normal size.

Prefers Father's Talent

One small girl in Indianapolis is blessed with an aunt who has quite a reputation as a pianist and a mother who is soprano soloist in a church. The other day a kindly visitor said to the youngster:

"Well, honey, are you going to take after your mother and be a singer or after your Aunt Grace and play the piano?"

The child looked thoughtful for a minute, then beamed as she said: "I'm just like my daddy, so I'm gonna play the phonograph."

"Bargains" at Sale

Two $2.50 gold pieces were sold for five cents, while an old whisky bottle brought $5 at a sale held at Sunbury, Pa. The gold pieces were found in a woman's old-fashioned pocketbook, for which five cents was paid. Upon opening the pocketbook and discovering the money, the purchaser was so astonished that the gold was handed back to the auctioneer, who sold the pieces to another bidder for $5.30. The bottle was a rare old type.

TANEYTOWN LOCALS

Items of news from town, or vicinity are always wanted for this column. Especially accidents, sales of real estate, fires, important happenings, visits to or from the community social events, and all matters of general interest to those at home, and away from home.

Mrs. Nettie S. Angell, spent a few days visiting at the home of her aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Groft, in York, Pa.

Somewhere near 1000 bushels of peaches were sold in Taneytown, this season, by our local dealers and street peddlers.

George Mong, of Franklin Grove, Ill., and sister, Mrs. Smuker, of Rochelle, Ill., spent several days last week, with Mrs. Ida Landis.

Raymond J. Ohler is digging the foundation for his new home on the former school lot—one of the most desirable locations in the town.

Amos Snyder, wife and children, of Harrisburg, spent Monday with Mrs. Snyder's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Morelock and family.

Elder J. M. Rodkey and Rev. S. R. Kresge will leave on Monday, October 18th., for Baltimore to attend the meeting of Potomac Synod of the Reformed Church in the United States.

Mrs. Guy P. Bready, Mrs. Samuel C. Ott, Miss Victoria Weybright, Misses Virginia and Betty Ott were the guests on Wednesday evening, of Mrs. Fannie M. Eyster, of Emmitsburg.

Our old friend, Jesse W. Fuss, of near Union Bridge, was an appreciated caller at our office, on Monday. He brought his daughter, Miss Pauline, a teacher in Union Bridge High, to the teachers' conference.

Adams County, Pa., has the largest apple crop for years, and the market is very slow. The same is true in Maryland and other Eastern apple states, and there will be no high prices this year, though scarcity of help may cut some figure.

Mr. and Mrs. U. A. Lough, of Frederick, well known to some of our subscribers, were taken suddenly ill last Friday night. Mrs. Lough with a severe heart attack, and Mr. Lough with a slight stroke of paralysis. Both are recovering.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Keith, of Bluefield, W. Va., and daughter, Mrs. H. F. Bannell, of Bristol, Va., who have been visiting relatives in Maryland and Pennsylvania, were entertained at dinner, on Friday, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Hiltner.

The following were entertained to supper at Anamary Whimert's, on Sunday; Mr. and Mrs. George Knox, Emmitsburg; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clark, daughters, Eve and Janet, son Chas. Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Mason Johnson, all of Baltimore.

Those who spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Byron Stull, were: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morelock, of Hanover; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Sell and son, Raymond, of Harrisburg; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Kuhn and two children, Dorothy and Richard, of McSherrystown.

Mr. and Mrs. Roland R. Reaver, entertained, on Sunday: Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Smith, Mrs. Wm. T. Smith, Miss Anna R. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Preston Smith and daughters, Velma, Grace and Gladys, of Bridgeport; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hawk and son, Kenneth, of near Keymar.

The radios in town worked extra time, last week getting the World's series games, and incidentally had a hard time of it getting past the local interference—whatever it may be. The town needs an expert "going over," in order to find out just what, and where, the trouble is.

There were really some signs this week that an election, is due to arrive on Tuesday, Nov. 2, as a lot of strangers were looking over the town this week, holding numerous little caucuses, hand-shaking exhibitions, handing out little cards, and giving other indications of the important day coming.

George and Paul Baumgardner and Edwin Hahn, two weeks ago last Saturday, started on a motorcycle tour of the country, with California as the objective. They propose to make a camping experience of it, and see the country. They have been heard from several times, and are getting along all right.

The death of "Miss May" Forrest-Fouke, in Baltimore, on Tuesday, is noted elsewhere. As a teacher of children for many years, both in the public school and in the Lutheran church, she was very widely known among now grown-ups scattered far and wide throughout the country. She was also a choir singer with a remarkably fine voice, some twenty or more years ago.

Mrs. W. O. Bach, of Salona, Pa., is visiting her daughter, Mrs. George Harner.

Mr. and Mrs. John Aulhouse are spending the week-end in York, visiting relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. George Newcomer and Miss Helen Shank, were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Newcomer, near Westminster, last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Holtzapfel and son, of Hagerstown, was entertained at dinner, on Sunday, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Stover.

The chicken supper held on Saturday evening in the Firemen's building by the Aid Society of Grace Reformed Church, was a grand success.

Misses Hazel Hess and Dorothy Kephart represented the Lutheran C. E. Society at the State Convention, at Havre de Grace, from the 7th. to the 10th.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Breneman, Miss Roenna Breneman and Miss Maude Schuler, all of Lancaster, spent several days with Mrs. Guy P. Bready, this week.

Harry A. Allison was brought home from the Baltimore Hospital, last Saturday afternoon, without an operation. His condition appears to remain about the same.

Work on grading the lawn at the High School building is under way, preparatory to setting it in grass for another year. The opportunity is there to make a very fine front.

Jere D. Overholtzer has sold his property near town, to Lloyd Lambert, on private terms. Mr. Overholtzer is going to have sale of his household goods, and expects to visit in the future relatives in Kansas, Oregon and California, also other Western States.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Strawsburg entertained the following guests on Sunday: Mr. and Mrs. Alvia Miller and son, Buddy, of York; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Miller and daughter, Evelyn, of near Union Bridge, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Feeser, of near town.

The Republican tour arrived according to schedule, this Friday forenoon, and for nearly an hour had quite a gathering especially around the square. As it was our "busy day" reportorial work in detail was out of the question; but it really looked as though by the time the procession reaches Westminster tonight, there will be quite an event there, and some "whooping up" done.

Farm fire losses in the United States in 1925 totaled $150,000,000, an increase of 65 percent over 1920.

France is considering the payment of a dowry to marriageable girls at the age of twenty-one to induce them to stay in the country. The influx to the towns has assumed serious proportions.

All Need Advice.

Every day we need information from somebody. We have minds of our own, and we claim to be able to manage our own affairs, and we want to be free to do as we think we ought or as "we please," but just the same our minds and thoughts are very much limited by our actual intelligence.

We need doctors and lawyers, because they know important things that we do not know. We need mechanics, because they can do things we can not do. We need help, because it is quite impossible for us always to help ourselves. We are very dependent creatures, to make the best of us.

From childhood to old age, all along the way, we need teachers and advisers. We boast of our independence, and of our rights, but both are extremely limited. We can not even take complete care of ourselves, for a day, nor can we manage our business without help and the taking of a tremendous amount of uncertainty into consideration.

Necessarily, while we boast of freedom and self-government, we actually have neither, without many limits. We vote and elect our public officials, but we do not know them, nor what they will do. We know our candidates for President, Senator, Governor—and largely our county candidates—only through what we hear about them through somebody else.

If we are wise, we will get all the best information we can, and the best advice we can, before we vote. Also, before we make an investment we will take the time to inquire, as fully as we can, into the genuineness of the proposition and the outlook for it, and we will get this information from intelligent disinterested persons.

Simply stated, the man is a fool who thinks he knows it all and will not listen to advice. Of course, there is lots of wrong advice, and one must sift all we get—and then perhaps take a big chance.

WE STAND ON THE RULE

that "a laborer is worthy of his hire," but it doesn't always work out that way. Jack Dempsey received $750,000 for a recent 39-minute "cauliflower Carnival" with Gene Tunney. MILTON RECEIVED $70 FOR WRITING "PARADISE LOST." That's the difference in money-making power these days.

There's also a difference in the oysters you buy here and those you get elsewhere. Ours are the finest select oysters, each one plumb full of health and nutritive value. We sell them in the bulk, or serve them fried or stewed. They'll please your taste.
