

BOVINE TUBERCULOSIS IN HUMANS.

A Subject of very Great Importance to Everybody.

Hoard's Dairyman, published at Fort Atkinson, Wis., one of the best, and perhaps the most widely circulated periodicals devoted to dairying, contained in its issue of April 10, a very lengthy article under the above caption. As it would require about four columns of space in the Record, we find it impossible to comply with the request of County Agent Walther, for its publication, but give below what we consider the essentially important paragraphs. The article as a whole is a strong defense of the tuberculin test for cattle.

"From every part of the world requests have come to us within the past few months for facts concerning the danger of milk from tuberculous cattle. In some places hearings are being held on the protests of milk producers or milk distributors against the laws passed for the protection of human health; and from the large number of points from which requests for information have come one might be led to suspect that some propaganda was being carried on to lower the bars against tuberculous milk cows, in spite of the fact that even from the economic standpoint tuberculous cattle is a scourge to our stock raisers, irrespective of its influence on human health."

(Here follows a detailed statement of results from tests in thousands of cases, showing tuberculous in human beings to represent a large percentage of bovine tuberculous, or the bovine (animal) type. The following is a specimen paragraph.)

"Dr. A. Stanley Griffith, of London, has in a recent series of tests tabulated 1,068 cases of tuberculous, finding 20.7 percent showing bacilli of the bovine type. He found the percentage to be much larger among children under ten years of age. Of 221 children less than five years old examined, 37.55 percent showed the animal germs. Of 312 children between five and ten years old examined, 29.45 percent showed animal rather than human germs. Of the total of 1,068 tubercular children examined, 216 showed purely bovine tubercle bacilli, 847 showed purely human tubercle bacilli, and the remainder showed bacilli of both sorts."

"There is still some difference of opinion as to the actual danger—that is, the proportion of children who are actually infected by the bovine germ—but that it does occur is doubted by no one. It is not too much to say that there is no scientific man of any standing in any part of the world today who questions the transmissibility of bovine tuberculous to human beings. Bovine tuberculous is undoubtedly responsible for a large percentage of non-pulmonary tuberculous of childhood, which means that it is also responsible for a large percentage of tuberculous cripples, and it may so materially affect the health of the children that they will be seriously handicapped throughout life."

"The best method of eradicating tuberculous from a herd is by the tuberculin test. Of course, it isn't 100 percent efficient. One test will not spot every tubercular cow and as long as there is a cow present in a herd that has been in contact with a cow that was tubercular there is a possibility of that cow reacting on the next test and there is a possibility of that cow spreading infection. Eradication of tuberculous from a herd is not a simple or easy matter, but that doesn't dispute the fact that tuberculin testing is the best method of eradicating tuberculous from a herd; or excuse us for neglecting to use the procedure."

Fruit Prospects Good.

Reports for a fruit crop this year, are excellent, or about a normal average. In some sections both apples and peaches have been frost-killed to some extent, especially in the low ground orchards, but the crop will apparently be just about right in order to bring fair prices, and no over supply as was the case last year. Big yields of fruit of nearly all kinds stands for no profit to the orchardist.

Adams Farmer Hangs Himself.

Ira Adams, a farmer living in upper Adams Co., Pa., committed suicide by hanging, on Thursday. He was 63 years of age, and was in poor health for number of years. He was a well known farmer and fruit grower. His body was found hanging in the barn, by his wife, who had become suspicious because of his absence.

HOSPITALS AND OPERATIONS

An Addition to the Present Day Expense Budget.

Years ago, one thought of doctor's and drug store bills, but very rarely of hospital cases, operations and trained nurses; and even the doctor's and drug bills were hardly as much items of cost to be provided for, as now, and one seemed to meet them without much inconvenience.

We do not know what has brought about the apparent greatly increased need for hospitals and operations. Perhaps some folks died from "cramp colic" who had appendicitis or gall stones; and children perhaps had bad tonsils and adenoids and got along the best they could with them. It may be, too, that more people died then, before or during middle age, than now; or we may be having a lot of new complaints now. We do not pretend to account for the change.

But, it is a present condition that there are many more hospitals than in the past, and most of them are full of patients. There are also three or four, or more times, as many nurses as fifty years ago, and they are in demand at from $25.00 to $40.00 per week.

And incidentally it may be noted that there are now a great many less doctors—in the country sections. Twenty-five years ago every village had one, and the towns had twice as many as now; and to some extent, this fact may account for the larger number of cases that go to hospitals now.

Without attempting to explain the why of it, the fact is plainly in evidence that hospital bills require a "laying by" of money for such emergencies, that years ago did not exist. They now represent a more or less common demand for large sums of money, and in some cases a load of debt; and however we may have been planning our economics heretofore, hospital probabilities must now be taken into consideration, if we are provident and wise.

Information for Farmers.

Every lot or field in which hogs are kept should be supplied with running water, or a system should be installed whereby water is available whenever they want it. Many hogs get their supply from a dirty trough filled once or twice a day. This is inadequate and insanitary.

The greatest source of bacterial contamination of milk in both summer and winter is improperly washed and sterilized utensils. The dairyman who is desirous of producing clean milk, or milk with a low bacterial count, should see that all equipment with which milk comes in contact is washed with clean water and washing powder (not soap), rinsed with clean water, and then scalded with boiling water or steamed.

Cows normally lose flesh for three or four weeks after calving because they can not consume sufficient feed to provide adequately for both the milk flow and maintenance of body weight. It is important that the cow carry considerable flesh at time of calving to prevent undue thinness afterward. Cows in good condition at birth of calf will start off the lactation period at a higher level of production than thin cows. This results in a larger yield of milk for the year. There is no economy in having a cow thin at calving time.

Practically every farm pest has its enemies. For example, one serious agricultural pest freely eaten by birds is the wheat aphid, or green bug. On a 200-acre farm in North Carolina, where wheat, rye, and oats were severely attacked by green bugs, it was found that birds were very effective in destroying the pests. The outbreak was at its height during the migration season of such birds as the goldfinch and the vesper and chipping sparrows, which other species on the farm numbered more than 3,000 individuals. It was estimated that these birds were destroying green bugs at the rate of nearly a million a day, and on days when additional flocks of migrants were present this destruction was increased correspondingly. During the season so many birds flocked to the grainfields that the aphid infestation was reduced by an incalculable number.

The horse that has a good temperament has big, mild, bright eyes. His head's wide between the ears. He obeys commands readily, and has an alert, graceful carriage when he's moving.

Littlestown P. O. Promoted.

Postmaster E. B. Collins, Littlestown, Pa., has been advised that the Littlestown postoffice will be advanced to the grade of second class July 1, and due to this advancement all clerks will be placed under classified Civil Service. An examination for clerk for this office will be held at Littlestown on May 21st. The examination is open to males and females between the age of 18 and 45 years. Application can be secured from the postmaster at Littlestown. Receipt of application will close May 11th., 1927.

A marked increase in lynching is reported by the Federal Council of Churches, New York City. Thirty persons were lynched in 1926, which is 13 more than in 1925, and 14 more than in 1924, according to this report. It also stated, "The total number of states free of lynching in 1926 was 38, which was the same total as in 1925 and in 1924, and one less than the total number without any lynchings in 1923."

PREDICTS ADVANCE IN PRICES OF FOOD.

Decrease in Farm Population will Increase Prices.

Secretary of Agriculture Jardine says all indications point to better prices for farm produce, due largely to the scarcity of farm help. He thinks the turn is about to take place, when the exodus of workers from the farms to the cities and manufacturing towns will be felt in reduced crops and higher prices.

This change may not be so pronounced this year, but is sure to follow present conditions as a natural consequence of economic laws. The serious depopulation of agricultural sections has already gone too far, and now no turn is likely to be made back to normal that can prevent the production of smaller crops, at less expense, and higher prices.

In a published statement on the general situation this week, he says in part:

"Although the population of the country has increased steadily, the demand for some commodities has decreased sharply. The substitution of automobiles and tractors for horses has resulted in the loss of a market for 13,000,000,000 pounds of grain, and this loss is being added to each year. Other conditions have eliminated another 11,000,000,000 pounds from use.

"With an overabundance of farms and a falling market the country could not escape going through some form of readjustment. This has expressed itself in a natural deflation of which the migration of farmers back to the cities is the most visible expression. Now, however, the parade has gone about far enough.

"The farmers have been plunged into a situation through this readjustment where they cannot meet their crops immediately. As a result, they have to sell at a loss. This, in turn, is driving more farmers to the city than the needs of the country will be able to stand very soon."

Secretary Jardine does not believe there is any possibility of preventing food prices from rising sharply. The country is headed that way "full tilt" and it won't stop until it gets there. Once under-production becomes a fact he declared, it will take years to recover. Farms cannot be made anew and turned into productive enterprises in a few days. That takes years. The Secretary of Agriculture declared one of the biggest jobs before the Government today is to keep the farmers on the farms from now on.

"Inside" Information for Women.

Tin grows dark with use. This tarnish protects the tin and should not be secured off just for the sake of making the tin bright.

Serve hot foods hot and on hot plates. Serve cold foods cold—not lukewarm. It is astonishing how many homemakers ignore this simple and obvious detail of an attractive meal.

Always grease an iron with lard or vaseline before putting it away for a long time, or it will rust. To remove rust on an iron, scour it with scouring powder, and rub well with a flannel cloth.

Neufchatel and cream cheese are valuable for the protein, fat, phosphorus and calcium they contain. The American diet is said to be low in calcium. It is well, therefore, to remember that all cheeses supply calcium.

No meal should have an over-proportion of liquid, "mushy," or hard foods. With stews, serve crisp breads, or crackers; with a dish such as macaroni, use browned bread crumbs on top; with soft breads, serve a crisp salad.

A bread pudding will be "soggy and sad" if you use too large a proportion of bread to eggs. Or it may come from cooking at too high a temperature. It is much better to cook any custard-like pudding in a pan of water in the oven. The water keeps the eggs from being over-cooked.

Leather furniture coverings look better and last longer if they're rubbed occasionally with castor oil. This restores to the leather the oil that gradually dries out. The oil should be well rubbed in and any excess wiped off the surface, or it will collect and hold dirt which will darken the leather, and soil whatever touches it.

To keep oxalic acid on hand for cleaning purposes, buy an ounce of the crystals, put them in a half-pint bottle of water, and pour off the top of the solution to dilute as needed. All of the crystals will not dissolve, but this method insures a strong solution. Label the bottle poison, of course, and keep it away from the children.

Another Terrific Tornado.

A violent tornado that started in northern Mississippi extended north into central Illinois, and spreading into Oklahoma and Texas, occurred on Tuesday afternoon and night. The greatest damage was in Illinois, where 40 were killed and 200 injured and hundreds of buildings were demolished. The loss was greatest in Green, Logan and Calhoun counties.

Eleven are reported killed in Oklahoma, and one killed and a dozen injured in Texas.

A SHOOTING AFFRAY.

Carroll-countains the Principals in Baltimore.

Last Friday, William E. Mitten, formerly of Westminster, shot Chas. Fogle, of New Windsor, on Fremont Street in Baltimore. Fogle had been separated from his wife, for some time, and on seeing Mitten and his wife together in an automobile, attempted to stop them and climbed on the running board of the car, where after an altercation with the two, was shot in the abdomen by Mitten.

Mrs. Fogle at first claimed that she did the shooting, but this was denied by Mitten, who on Saturday confessed that he did it, claiming to have done so after Fogle had threatened to kill him. The affair was the outgrowth of troubles that led to the separation of Mr. and Mrs. Fogle, the latter going to Baltimore where she had secured employment.

Mrs. Fogle told a story of domestic unhappiness which began soon after marriage ten years ago. She says her husband failed to provide for her and her children, and she left him. At the time of the shooting she was employed in a five and ten cent store, and Mitten was taking her to her work. Mitten is also said to be married, but not living with his wife.

Fogle, on being shot, was rushed to the Maryland University Hospital, where he made statements charging Mitten with the shooting. Several operations were performed, and he is in a most critical condition.

Cow Testing Report for March.

There were 73 cows in the Carroll County Cow Testing Association to make better than 45% of butter fat for the month of March. None of these cows were milked more than twice a day. The average yield of the herds were considerably higher, average 7.20 lbs. milk 28 lbs. fat for all the cows in the Association. The average production for the cows in milk was 858 lbs. of milk, 335 lbs. of fat. Both the returns for one hundred dollars spent for feed, and the average feed costs have showed decided improvement.

Since the Association was formed in December the members have been studying their records closely and feeding according to known production. It is interesting to note that Mr. A. D. Alexander, of Taneytown, whose Guernsey herd leads the Association this month, had the third lowest feed costs per one hundred pounds of milk, and the second lowest feed costs per pound of fat in the Association.

The five highest herds were those of A. D. Alexander, Luther Devilliss, Paradise Farm, H. Paul Hull and Fenby Bros.

The ten high cows were owned by Frank Alexander, A. D. Alexander, Wm. Stonesifer, Fenby Bros. and Paradise Farm.

A Seed Corn Grader.

Many farmers in the county are making use of the electric driven mechanical corn grader that has been installed in the office of the County Agent, Times Building, Westminster for the free use of the corn growers in the county. This grader, not only separates the small kernels, broken grains, the tip and butt kernels; but also sizes the corn of uniform thickness into three grades, if such are wanted.

Seed corn is scarce and some farmers may hesitate to grade their corn, but it is a proven fact that if corn is graded and each grade planted separately, there will be a more uniform stand and maturity. The larger, heavier kernels will come up first and mature first, which is a decided advantage in the Fall.

DIRECTOR MARKETING ON EASTERN SHORE.

Dr. Bomberger takes up work that May be Extended.

College Park, April 22.—Dr. F. B. Bomberger, assistant director of the University of Maryland Extension Service and chief of the State Department of Markets, has been granted a leave of absence by Dr. R. A. Pearson president of the University of Maryland at the suggestion of Dr. T. B. Symons, director of the Extension Service, and will become director of the marketing activities of the Del-Mar-Va Eastern Shore Association with headquarters in Salisbury.

Dr. Bomberger will assume his new duties about May 1, following a three-weeks' first-hand investigation of co-operative farm organizations in the United States that will take him to the Pacific Coast.

The new work in which Dr. Bomberger will engage will be similar to that which he has directed for the past ten years as marketing specialist for the University of Maryland Extension Service and more recently as chief of the State Department of Markets. Improvement in the production and marketing of the many and varied agricultural products of Delaware and the Eastern Shore of Maryland and Virginia is part of the Del-Mar-Va Eastern Shore Association's plan for developing the potential resources of the section, it is explained.

According to the announcement made here by Dr. Thomas B. Symons, director of the University of Maryland Extension Service, the transfer of Dr. Bomberger's services to the Del-Mar-Va Association will have the effect of broadening materially the field of marketing activity in the State. Owing to the fact that the Eastern Shore of Maryland is now producing perishable agricultural commodities in large quantities and will likely further develop this particular phase of farming, it offers one of the best fields for constructive work in marketing in the opinion of Dr. Symons.

"There will be no official connection between the State Department of Markets and the Del-Mar-Va Association but there will undoubtedly be many opportunities for close and effective co-operation between the two agencies," says Dr. Symons. "The fact that the people of the Del-Mar-Va territory are so keenly interested in the farm marketing problem and are attacking it in such a practical manner promises well for the future of the section."

A Little Talk on Thrift.

While there is no substitute for work, it does not follow that those who work the hardest accomplish the most.

Waste of energy is often more disastrous than waste of money because it interferes with progress and infrequently prohibits success.

"The fellow with one idea generally grows rich while he who calls him a fool dies a fool!" This is an old saying but the truth it conveys will never become obsolete or antiquated.

Theodore Roosevelt attributed his success in life to no special gift or ability, excepting his capacity for much hard and intensive work along lines that were most essential. Owing to his somewhat abrupt methods of speech he was often accused of taking snap judgment, although he reached his decisions deliberately and carefully.

To a remarkable degree he was the exemplification of a man personally well organized. He excelled not only in statesmanship but in scientific research and literature.

The principles of thrift can well be applied to our personal work. It is well to learn the value of thoroughness in whatever we do and of making sure that we do the things that will mean the most for our rightful success. Wasted efforts are as much to be criticised as idleness.

What we do today can never be done again. If we are not doing things the right way we are wasting our days.

No matter what may be your practices of thrift otherwise, make sure you are investing your priceless time and your invaluable energies in ways that will bring adequate returns.—Am. Society for Thrift.

Schools for Eskimo Children.

The Bureau of Education of the United States is shipping to Alaska on the Steamer "Boxer" from Seattle three complete rural school-houses with living quarters for the teachers. The buildings are ready to set up immediately on arrival in our big north-western territory.

They are destined for use of the Government schools for the Eskimo children. The shipment includes complete furnishings and blackboards and crayons so that nothing will be lacking to open typical American schools for the wards in that territory.

Engineers at work on the new roof of the White House found the old roof in a precarious condition. The huge trusses which held the main burden of the heavy roof had sunk out of place and were actually resting on the fragile partition walls of the third floor, which might have caused a carvayn at the slightest provocation.

Greatest Flood on Record.

The greatest flood on record, and perhaps the heaviest ever experienced in the Mississippi river valley and its tributaries, reached its height the first of this week; 25,000 persons were driven from their homes in seven states, at least twelve lives were lost, and the property damage runs into the millions of dollars.

The heaviest damage was in Missouri, Arkansas and Mississippi; while Illinois, Tennessee, Kentucky and Louisiana had lesser losses. Strange to say, while the damage done was chiefly by too much water, one of the greatest necessities of the survivors is water fit to drink.

Hundreds of farms were entirely covered with water, while small towns were completely flooded and ruined. Heroic work was done by men strengthening the river banks, and relief workers and supplies have been rushed to the flooded area, both by the states and the U. S. Government.

The flood situation, instead of getting better has become more serious within the past few days. The waters are still rising and spreading, and disease is now prevalent due to the cold and wet weather. There are now 50,000 estimated to be homeless, many of them in temporary shelters and tents.

Church Repair Fund.

A prominent and beautiful house of worship in a little Western city has a permanent income of $600 a year for maintenance of repairs. Storms frequently cause injuries to church buildings, and progressive organizations are establishing a repair fund.

This fund is provided for in advance, and when flood or fire damage occurs there is a fund in existence immediately available for making any needed repairs. This sounds like good business and will strengthen the credit of any religious body at the bank.—The Manufacturer.

The Michigan House of Representatives has passed a bill authorizing the whipping post for bank robbers, in addition to a prison sentence. The bill provides that from ten to twenty lashes on "the bare back, and well laid on" may be administered for every six months of imprisonment. A maximum of 300 lashes is also set.

Many "Accidents" are Really Criminal Neglect.

The opening of Spring weather, making autoing more pleasurable, has brought with it an increase of deaths and smash-ups. These fatalities and wrecks may be expected to be more numerous this year than heretofore, due to the increasing number of motor vehicles on the roads; and these facts ought to produce increasing care on the part of drivers—but likely will not.

More autos also means more that have seen their best service, and this is apt to add to the dangers of the situation. A number of the fatalities have been due to the passing of cars, at a too rapid speed and to lack of care in giving half of the road—and in most cases to actual recklessness on the part of one or the other of the drivers.

When there is a third party to a mishap, and he is killed, his evidence is lost. It is therefore quite easy for a driver to put in a plausible defense, and because it can not be reported by the victim, that tiresomely frequent verdict—"unavoidable accident," is given.

To our mind, it is almost impossible that there should be many "unavoidable" accidents. There is every evidence to show that an accident "was not" avoided, but that it "could not" have been is another and very serious matter.

The word "accident" is too frequently misused. Anything that causes a mishap, that could have been avoided by greater care, is not an "accident," but the result of carelessness or pure recklessness, and deserves proper punishment, because carelessness that causes injury is criminal.

Daily Political Hash.

Have you ever noticed that there are correspondents for some of our big newspapers who, like the comic strips, overwork a single line of thought? Actually, we become sympathetic, sometimes, and wish the "higher up" for their particular papers would give them a new assignment; for playing continuously on one string becomes mighty monotonous, not only for the correspondent but for readers as well.

We have in mind one particularly clever writer who for the past few months has apparently been assigned to write a daily article on the chances of candidates for the nomination for the Presidency in 1928. Naturally, we have been getting largely a play with words—hash, then more hash; speculation, imagination, misinformation and insinuation.

The daily "candidates" column, represents his "daily dozen" and when it is the same "dozen" all of the time, a helpful exercise degenerates into a hard task, monotonous to the participant as well as to the reader.

Of course, the radio has taught us how easy it is to "tune out" from dance music, soprano solos, or whatever becomes tiresome; but, we pay for a newspaper, while we get our radio programs "out of the air," and this makes a difference.

Politics ought to be a seasonal topic, and the seasons short. While Congress is in session, and during a six months period before important elections, ought to be, and is, long enough for the average person to be expected to be interested in it.

Free Advertising, Again.

The other day, a gentleman with entire innocence and without any intention of "putting over" a free advertisement on the editor, called at our office and suggested that it would be a good item of news if we would give a write-up of the appointment of an agent for a certain company. True, the agent appointed represented our visitor's particular company, and he was naturally pleased that he had secured this representative.

It so happened in this case that neither the Company, nor the agent, were in any way patrons of our office, and there were no indications that either were likely to be. But, it appeared to our friend that here was a genuine "news" item.

We had to give him a little insight into the newspaper business—with which he was not familiar—and after we had unloaded for a while, he concluded that our objection to such "news" items was perfectly well founded, and left us with some new ideas on the "other fellow's" side of the question.

As every weekly newspaper editor knows, he could fill every inch of the available space in his paper, every week, with just this character of "news"—the free advertising of somebody's business—new models, new plans, new agents, or new something or other, that is "news" in a little way, but "advertising" in a larger way; and no matter how willing an editor might be to publish such items, it is simply out of the question if he wants to publish the kind of news, or article, that subscribers to the paper pay for, and have a right to expect.

A lot of this free advertising, does get by; but it is the one big object in the average publishers daily task, to keep it at the minimum, and not give offense.

It Had to Come.

The inevitable is about to happen in England. Women are going to be permitted to vote at the same time of life as men. To let the men vote at 21 and force the women to wait until they are 30 is a system that simply could not last.

Even at that, there was a sort of justice in it. Why should the women, even though they happened to exist in larger numbers—not through their own fault, of course, or intention—have a greater say in Government than the men? But there was also a practical reason. In all but a handful of constituencies, the women outnumber the men.

If in these constituencies they should "get together," they could elect probably 500 out of the 600 members of Parliament. Even if they do not get together, it is certain that their wishes will be deferred to by the politicians—and your traditional Englishman quails before the idea of a country run upon women's ideas. In practice, the change may make little essential difference in the way England is managed. Anyhow, the change had to come.—Phila. Ledger.

Sickness and Poverty.

If you would ask the officials who dispense public charity in almost any city, what is the principal cause why people get into financial straits, it seems likely that they would name sicknesses and accidents. It is happening over and over again that some family is just barely able to rub along when things go all right. Then if someone is sick or gets hurt, or must have an operation, the costs of this misfortune often submerge them, and they find it impossible for a long time to get their heads above water again.

When unsanitary conditions exist, and when serious contagious diseases are prevalent and when accidents are frequent, then many families get into financial difficulties.

There are many families who find themselves in a bad financial hole, who bitterly regret the extravagance with which they used money when things were going well, and they had all that they wanted. The money that went for foolish purposes then, would tide them over their troubles now if they only had it. People who are well and strong, and have regular jobs, make a serious mistake if they do not regularly set aside something as a reserve against misfortune.

Any community saves its people a great deal of distress, and it avoids interruption of work for its industries, if it is strict in its sanitary measures, and abolishes conditions dangerous to health. But no amount of assistance from outside can keep people well, if they keep on doing reckless and ignorant things.

If they waste their strength on dissipating vices, if they do not know how to live and cook and eat properly, if they fail to obey the plain simple rules of health, they are bound to fall sick some day. Then if they have no reserve ahead, the bitter pangs of poverty are theirs.—Frederick News.

The Flirt on the Phone

"Hello! Peggy speaking—who is this?"
"It's Frank, sweetheart."
"I can't understand you."
"Listen—F for Ferdie, R for Robert, A for Arthur, N for Nat and K for Kenneth."
"But dearest, which one of the five are you?"

No Record Exists of World Without Wheat

While the public revels in the marvels of Tut-Ankh-Amen's tomb the Egyptologists have dropped back another couple of millenniums and are earnestly discussing the diet of the predynastic Egyptians. Careful study of their mummified stomachs reveals traces of barley husks, but not of wheat. Therefore, argues Elliot Smith, that remote people lived in a prewheat civilization. Professor Percival disagrees, insisting that the Egyptians would have removed its husks before eating it, leaving nothing tough enough to resist decay.

Time may bring new data, but for the present Elliot Smith seems to have the better of the argument. All prior guesses as to the kitchen habits of 5,000 or 6,000 years ago are a bit uncertain. But if the Egyptologists have already discovered a prewheat civilization they have dived deep into the past. For wheat grains are found back through the numbered dynasties of Egypt, in the ruins of the first neolithic settlement which underlies the site of Homer's Troy and in the prehistoric dwellings of the Swiss lake dwellers. Wheat, too, was one of the five plants solemnly sown each year by the emperor of China, according to rites which seem to go back to 2800 B. C.

Where wheat originated no man knows. Efforts have been made to trace it to its ancestral plant, but they have never been certainly successful. As soon as a botanist discovers a wild plant closely akin to it some other scientist suggests that the "wild" plant is a degenerate escaped from cultivation. The Swiss lake dwellers had two distinct species, one of which is quite different from anything found in the ancient Egyptian tombs. The earliest Persian writings note wheat as an old-established plant, but the usual guess is that it originated in Mesopotamia. Some day, doubtless, the sands of Mesopotamia will be as carefully raked as those of Egypt and yield as rich additions to man's knowledge of his origins; today it is safe to attribute the origin of almost anything to Mesopotamia, because we know so little about it.

Bridge Easily Operated

An entire bridge weighing 8,000,000 pounds is folded up like a jack-knife or unfolded in 45 seconds by eight 80-horse-power electric motors in Brooklyn, N. Y. It is a new bascule bridge over Flushing creek—the largest lift bridge in the world—which is now nearing completion for electric train and vehicular traffic. The bridge is composed of two leaves 152 feet long, each weighing 4,000,000 pounds, and each counterweighted so delicately that a small amount of electric power will handle it. The bridge has to be raised periodically to permit the passage of vessels in the river. The speed of the motors in opening and closing the "knife blades" will cut down traffic delays.

Got Desired Notoriety

"That gent strutting along on the other side of the street is Anson Inchways, the most extravagant man in the hull of New England!" said the landlord of the tavern at Oxoboxo. "Actually and truly he lit a cigar with a brand-new dollar bill! They arrested him; thought he was crazy—but they found out after a spell that he was doing it just for the notoriety. He got it, too, for there ain't anything that will make a man famous quicker here than being a spendthrift."—Kansas City Star.

Won Out on His Point

In checking up on the time cars were parked at Redlands, Calif., the police found a horse and buggy that had been there more than the allotted time. A ticket was placed on the whip socket ordering the owner to appear in court. And in a short time F. G. Chevalier did appear and said, "Judge, that ordinance applies only to motor vehicles and you can't book me." The judge got the ordinance and found that Chevalier was right.

Thread Quickly Prepared

The process of treating flax for the purpose of making linen is a prolonged one, the same was made use of 4,000 years ago. The flax is treated to a bath in running water for several days and then the stalks are beaten to remove the undesirable part, leaving only the lengths of fiber. A recent announcement is to the effect that a mechanical treatment has been devised by which the operation is accomplished in a few hours.

From the Heights

Roger Wolfe Kahn, Otto Kahn's musical genius of a son, praised, at a dinner at Pierre's, a new novel. "It's already in its eighteenth edition," said Mr. Kahn. "The poor devil who wrote it was on his last legs—starving and freezing in an attic, in fact, when success came to him. Well, nothing surprising about that."
Mr. Kahn smiled and added: "It's from our attics that we get our sellers."

Oil Production a Gamble

The average life of an oil well is quite variable. The rate of development is very important. Rapid drilling and rapid production will lessen the life, while gradual drilling and gradual production will lengthen the life. New methods of recovery and other things enter into it. Oil wells in the United States now in operation seem to produce between 10 and 25 years, according to location.

Surely Some Occasions

When Lie Is Justified

The deepest recesses of the heart grow warm toward the bishop of Southwell. This British ecclesiastic justifies a lie which is uttered under certain circumstances. There are few human beings but do condone, in themselves, certain untruths. And to have public approval of this bishop, expressed in an address to Nottingham (Eng.) teachers, is comforting to a degree.

The bishop of Southwell, however, does not go far enough, according to the quoted text of his remarks, in his justification of a lie. From the cabled quotation the bishop, seemingly would be prepared only "to exonerate a person who tells a lie to save an innocent life, if I thought it was reasonably sure that not to lie would mean the loss of such a life."

We believe the moral code of many normal human beings, laymen or men of the cloth, permits a wider latitude than this. But, to the credit of the bishop, there are not so many who will admit any such feeling to the public, even to the extent "of saving life." What harm is possible in telling an innocent child that its father is ill, when one knows he is suffering from overstimulation? That certainly is a lie, unless we would quibble with words, and no life is involved. But the faith of a child may be at stake.

The bishop of Southwell probably would not be willing to condone such a lie, as he "deprecates, for instance, such untruth as 'the doctor has brought us a new baby,' according to the news cable. Doesn't the bishop believe very young children may know too much at too early an age for their own good? And, believing this, would he not approve the harmless employment of harmless fiction? Where truth results in a disservice and no harm is done by expressing a lie, why tell the truth?

This distinguished English divine said he did not believe in telling children legends about Santa Claus "in such a way as to make them believe that the stories were true." Why not repeat the legends surrounding Santa Claus, when we all know they are true, and when a great many of us have ourselves seen the merry old soul?

Herself—John, I've noticed that you've only smoked one of those cigars I gave you at Christmas. Didn't you like them?
Himself—They were fine, my dear, but when the New Year came in I made up my mind that you were right about my smoking too much and I've decided to taper off a bit.
Herself—I think that's perfectly lovely in you, and if you don't mind I'll give the cigars to father.—Portland Evening Express.

How Gilbert Stuart Saved the Situation

Gilbert Stuart almost had his head turned by his success in England, and on his return to America when Hull called to have his portrait painted the artist began telling him stories of his experiences with Lord So-and-So, the marquis of This and the Baroness That, stories meant to show Hull how elegant was the society to which he had been accustomed.

Unfortunately in the midst of this ostentatious chatter, Mrs. Stuart, not knowing there was a sitter, came in from the kitchen with an apron and her head bound round with a kerchief. "Do you want that leg of mutton boiled or roasted?" she loudly inquired.

Stuart was nonplussed—but only for a second. "Ask your mistress," he commanded sharply.—Boston Transcript.

BACON'S PLACE IN REALM OF THOUGHT

Scholar's Standing Soon to Be Determined.

Among the scholars produced by the Thirteenth century in Europe, Roger Bacon occupies a high rank. During his lifetime, it is true, his achievement was somewhat obscured. But in the century immediately following, the first rays of the Renaissance began to break upon European thought. The Dark ages were coming to an end. And in the light of the new dawning the Franciscan friar's peculiar merits as a forerunner of the new era were discovered.

In later times, the popularity of Bacon's writings spread rapidly among the learned. Enthusiasm occasionally grew to such proportions that the "Doctor Mirabilis" was rated above more modern and truly enlightened figures. Aside from such exaggerations, however, Roger retains a deserved place in history as one of the first Europeans to challenge the authority of the medieval schoolmen, and to insist on the necessity of experimental science in the furtherance of human knowledge.

His own intellectual emancipation was not complete. Though a keen, systematic thinker in many fields, with a remarkable knack for mechanical invention (there is a theory that he made and used the first telescope), he was, nevertheless, a believer in astrology, in the philosopher's stone, and in the squaring of the circle. When at the height of his fame, at Oxford, he was gravely suspected of dabbling with the black arts. Yet this same man pondered on the physical properties of gunpowder and had much to do with the invention of spectacles.

It was in the field of scientific research and philosophy that he ran counter to established tradition most conspicuously. In his books, written in Latin, he sought to explore the whole field of knowledge as it existed in his day. At every turn he found shortcomings, due to the methods employed until then in the searching out of truth. In his Opus Majus we have the results of his wide ranging, together with the remedies that he proposed as a means of putting knowledge on a sounder basis.

In his crude way, Roger Bacon thus stands out as a precursor of the Newtons and Darwins, of the Auguste Comtes and Herbert Spencers.

It should be interesting to see at first hand how close or remote the relationship is. This will be less difficult to English-reading people now that the Opus Majus has, for the first time, been done into English by Dr. Robert Belle Burke of the University of Pennsylvania.—Detroit Free Press.

Babel Skyscraper

So high "that at last a hodcarrier took a whole year to ascend to the top with his hod. If he fell down and broke his neck, nobody minded for the man, but everybody wept for the brick, because it would take a whole year to replace it on top of the tower." Babel still stands in the plain of Shinar, dark against the southern sky.

An expedition under Prof. C. L. Woolley of the University of Pennsylvania has at last cleared away the slime, mud and rubbish of the centuries and is examining the tower to learn the truth of its beginning.

Did those ancient people really think to scrape the sky with their brick making? Would they pull God from his heaven? And did He save Himself by confounding their tongues?—Professor Woolley hopes soon to find out.

In the Smuggling Business

Finding herself with a neat little surplus from her weekly allowance for household expenses, a fond grandmother bought for each of her little granddaughters a pair of white canvas shoes.

"Where did you get the money to buy our shoes?" asked one of them.

"Oh, I just smuggled it," was the answer.

On the first occasion that the children had to wear the shoes, they found that they had no white stockings to match them. They said: "Grandma, won't you smuggle some more money and buy us some socks?"

Poachers Spoil Fox Hunts

Society Hunts in the famous Melton Mowbray district of Ireland, known for generations as one of the world's greatest hunting centers, is being spoiled by poachers, and as a result many fashionable functions are being called off. The favorite game is foxes, and these are being killed, evidently by the unemployed, for the skins. Although many strong, healthy cubs have been reared, the Cottismore Hounds, an exclusive hunting club, recently spent a fruitless day in trying to find the lair of even a single fox.

Father to the Man

The attitude toward the head of the house varies in different homes. A child's opinion of a parent can generally be accepted at face value.

One evening a guest in a home wished to induce the somewhat timid three-year-old daughter to say a few words. Several attempts to carry on a conversation had failed. Finally the guest, pointing to the child's father, asked: "Who is that man over there?"

"My father isn't a man," said the child. "He is just a great big boy."

Skin Game

Johnnie had been scolded for playing with a little colored boy of his acquaintance. One day while watching his mother pare potatoes, he said: "Mother, I like Arthur so much. Can't we peel him so I can play with him?"

This is the latest picture of Dorothy Mackaill, the charming motion picture player, appearing in "The Stolen Bride." Miss Mackaill has a hobby on shoes, and she always wears appropriate shoes for each occasion of the day. Miss Mackaill was born in Hull, England, about twenty-three years ago. Among some of her late pictures are "Subway Sadie," "Just Another Blonde" and "The Song of the Dragon."

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE

BY JOSEPH KAYE

At 21—Lloyd George found no thrill in being admitted to the bar.

AT THE age of twenty-one I went to Chancery Lane (for admission as a solicitor) and got admitted in regular humdrum fashion. The ceremony disappointed me. The master of the rolls, so far from having anything to do with it, was actually listening to Q. C. (Queen's Counsel) at the time and some fellow of a clerk swore to a lawyerly demeanor in our profession at the back of the court and off we shambled to the office to sign the rolls.—David Lloyd George.

TODAY—Lloyd George is Great Britain's most famous statesman, somewhat out of the limelight at the moment, but still retaining all the glamor that was his when he was the war premier.

The leader in English politics first gained the attention of the public when he was twenty-five. He was a practicing attorney then and in the little Welsh village of Snowden something happened that aroused his sympathy. An old Nonconformist quarryman had died. He had asked, as his last wish, that he be buried next to the grave of his daughter, who was interred in a Church of England cemetery. The minister of the latter institution, when he heard of this, refused permission for the Nonconformist rites to be performed in the cemetery proper, where the daughter lay, saying that the body of the father, if he was to be buried in Church of England ground, must go to the part restricted for suicides and unknowns.

The Nonconformists of Snowden were incensed at this clerical injustice and appealed to Lloyd George for help. He advised that they could break down the cemetery gates, if that were necessary, to bury the dead man near his daughter. This was done, and the burial made as the old man had wished. The result was a lawsuit against the villagers by the Church of England authorities.

The case was tried before a jury, Lloyd George defending, and at the conclusion of the arguments the jury awarded the verdict to Lloyd George. The judge, however, said that the former was in error on a point of the law and ruled against him.

In behalf of the villagers, Lloyd George appealed the case to the Lord Chief Justice in London, who reversed the first decision and awarded the verdict to the villagers, thus proving Lloyd George knew more of the law than the judge who had ruled against him.

Due to the nature of the case the young lawyer received plenty of notice from both public and the law profession.

LADY BOUNTIFUL

Mother's Cook Book

Why should we be in such desperate haste to succeed and in such desperate enterprises? If a man does not keep pace with his companions, perhaps it is because he hears a different drummer. Let him step to the music which he hears, however measured or far away. It is not important that he should mature as soon as the apple tree or the oak.—Henry David Thoreau.

SOME SANDWICHES

A GROUP of good sandwiches will always be popular for reference in any home.

May-Time Sandwiches.

Work two Neufchatel cheeses with a little thick cream until smooth, add a few drops of green vegetable coloring, mixing until the cheese is a vivid pea-green tint; add one cupful of finely chopped blanched almonds, season with salt and cayenne. Spread thin slices of sandwich bread with mayonnaise dressing, sprinkle with finely minced chives and an equal number of slices with the cheese mixture. Put together in pairs, press edges together, trim and cut into three narrow strips, sprinkle the top side of the sandwiches with paprika. Serve with coffee.

Picnic Sandwiches.

Clean and remove the intestinal veins from fresh or canned shrimp. Chop fine and take one cupful, packed solidly. Marinate with two tablespoonfuls of French dressing and let stand two hours. Now add one-half cupful each of shredded lettuce, water cress, and one-fourth of a cupful of chopped green onions. Add the sifted yolks of three hard-cooked eggs and the finely chopped whites; moisten with mayonnaise and use as a filling on buttered bread.

Sautéed Cheese Sandwiches.

Cut white bread into thin slices, remove the crusts and cut into rectangular pieces. Spread thinly with mustard butter. Cut mild cheese into one-eighth-inch slices the same size as the bread; sprinkle with salt, paprika and cayenne. Place a slice of cheese between two slices of the bread and fry in a little hot butter until brown on both sides. Serve hot with a green salad.

Sorority Sandwiches.

Mix thoroughly one-half cupful of finely minced Canton ginger, one-half cupful of stoned and chopped dates, and one-half cupful of chopped pecan meats. Season with salt and moisten with some of the ginger sirup to the consistency for spreading. Spread on buttered brown bread or saltines. Serve with hot cocoa or chocolate.

THEIR PHOPHECY CAME TRUE

By KIRT BRADY

(Copyright, by W. G. Chapman.)

JIM BENNETT and Arthur Royce were described as the two boys in the village who least resembled each other. Bennett was selling newspapers when he was seven and planning a monopoly among village magazine subscribers. Arthur Royce at that age was described as the best pupil in the Sunday school. Naturally, Jim was the favorite among the townspeople, who admired his good deal more than they admired sanctity. However, Arthur was not sanctimonious. He was just a hard-working, docile sort of chap. At fifteen he was clerking in a store to support his widowed mother, and turning in his eight dollars a week to eke out her Civil war pension. At the same age Jim Bennett was expelled from school as incorrigible, and being laughed at and petted by his adoring parents, who were already planning his college career. Thomas Bennett was president of two banks and reputed to be rolling in money.

At the same age Millicent Patterson was publicly telling Arthur that she preferred Jim anyhow, because he wasn't a milkop, and besides, Jim was rich and she meant to marry a wealthy man when she grew up.

"I'm going to be wealthy," answered Arthur, setting his teeth, "and you're going to marry me."

Millicent was secretly impressed, but she made short work of Arthur's pretensions. "I wouldn't marry you in a million years," she said. "The man I marry must go to college."

Arthur planned to work his way through college, but his mother lived through a long period of invalidism, and that put an end to his ambitious plans. What happened was that Bennett, senior, took the boy into his bank, where at twenty-two he was earning twenty dollars a week. Soon afterward Bennett senior died, leaving the bank to Jim, and Jim came home from college with the expressed intention of making things hum.

Millicent and Arthur were on speaking acquaintance, but the young fellow had never got much further with her. When Jim came home there was not much doubt whom she preferred. She did not take much pains to hide it from Arthur, either.

Arthur went to work for Jim, who considerably raised his salary to thirty dollars. He told him, with a grin, that he would be able to get married on it, if he lived frugally.

By this time Jim Bennett and Millicent Patterson were as good as engaged, in the opinion of the townspeople. Jim Bennett operated a car—two cars, for the matter of that, and the two were to be seen together everywhere. People went so far as to say that if they were not engaged they ought to be.

They were engaged, but what determined Millicent to have it announced was the behavior of Arthur Royce. He was calling on her by this time, and one evening he seemed somewhat different from what he usually was. Millicent said to herself, with a laugh, that he was falling in love with her. But she was not prepared for his sudden proposal, nor for the tragic way in which he took her refusal.

"I always told you I'd marry a rich man and a college man, and you are neither, Arthur," said Millicent.

"And I told you I would marry you, and I will," answered the boy.

"Maybe you will," replied the girl, "but I'm going to marry Mr. Bennett first, anyway." She stretched out a slim, white hand. "This is my engagement ring," she said. "Isn't it pretty?"

Arthur ran from the house. A week later the engagement was announced. Somehow there lurked the rudiments of a heart in Millicent. She was sorry for Arthur, and she said nothing about his proposal to Jim.

But that was what was at the back of her request that the announcement should be made. Nobody was greatly surprised, and everyone said that she was a lucky girl, and maybe Jim Bennett would steady down a bit with her hand on the checkrein.

They were married in the community church, and the wedding was the event of the week. There were columns about it in the papers. Arthur read them in his hall bedroom. His grip lay packed on the bed. He had resolved to run away, anywhere, without notice, but when he had finished reading them he suddenly sat up and squared his shoulders.

"I'll stay," he said. "And I'll get her. Somehow—in heaven if not on earth."

Which expression, though far-fetched, might be pardonable in a young fellow of twenty-three.

Jim Bennett had made things hum when he returned from college, as he had said he would, and he kept up the process after his return from the honeymoon. During the next two years Jim Bennett and his wife made the money fly. They inhabited the finest house in the town, and life was for them a succession of entertainments and pleasures. Arthur Royce was now getting forty a week. Bennett never saw him and seemed to have forgotten him. But Millicent bowed. There is something about a rejected lover that makes a woman feel tender toward him.

Two years passed and Bennett became a financial leader in the place. A few who watched knew that his affairs were unstable. Arthur was among these. And for Millicent's sake he dreaded the crash that must come. But Bennett plunged more wildly, until the banks were tottering upon the verge of the precipice, while Bennett juggled with his millions and refused to look facts in the face.

He treated his wife badly, too, everyone knew. There were reports of his infatuation for several women successively. Arthur saw Millicent rarely, but he noticed the progressive look of unhappiness upon her face.

Bennett began to notice Royce again. He raised him to fifty, chiefly because another bank, an old, conservative institution, wanted to get hold of him. Arthur would hardly have left, but he had an instinct against leaving his present bank when it was in difficulties.

One day the truth came out. Arthur had been sent to Bennett's house on an important errand. He found Bennett out, but as he was about to leave Millicent came in.

"What did he send you for?" she cried hysterically.

"The manager sent me, Mrs. Bennett. It was about a private matter."

"A banking matter?"

"Yes."

She burst into tears. "I thought he sent you to taunt me," she cried. "He has told me I ought to have married you. O, I am so wretched."

She cried on his shoulder. During that interval the young man learned many things—of Bennett's infidelity, of his dishonor. He had made her life a misery from the day they were married.

Presently she grew calm. "I should not have spoken in this way," she said. "But sometimes I think of the old days—do you ever remember them, Arthur?"

Somehow the boy tore himself away. Remember them? When they lay upon his mind forever?

Somehow he managed to leave. His last memory of Millicent was of a pale-faced woman who watched him at the door pathetically, as if nothing in life was worth living for.

Faster and faster Bennett's banks careened toward disaster. The coming crash was clear to everybody now. Bennett himself went about with an anxious face and glum expression. It was at first a matter of months, then one of weeks—then people just waited.

Arthur Royce waited. He was thinking all the time of Millicent and wondering what she would do.

One afternoon Bennett sent for Arthur to come to his house. Arthur had not been there since that last interview with Millicent. He did not like the task; but he went, because it was part of his duty.

"Mr. Bennett is in his library, sir," said the butler. "He said you were to go right in when you came."

Arthur went in. He saw Bennett seated at his desk. Bennett did not look up, and when Arthur approached he saw that he was quite dead, with a bullet hole through his head. Upon the desk was a letter addressed to him. Arthur opened it.

"Take her. She loves you," was all that it contained.

Arthur never quite remembered the details of the following hour—his hasty summons of a doctor, the terrified servants; lastly Millicent, whom he had vainly tried to keep out of the room, standing before her husband's body. And she wrung her hands, and all she could say was:

"I meant to leave him tomorrow."

"It was six months before Arthur saw Millicent Bennett again. She had been traveling. When she came back she went to her old home. She announced that she was going to open a school. All the heartlessness seemed to have died when Bennett died.

But Arthur had other plans for her. "Do you remember, dear," he said to her one day, "how I used to tell you you would marry me, and your own prophecy? Yours has come true. Now make mine true. I am going to take over the management of the Fifth National next month, and—dearest, I have loved you so long."

And Arthur thus came into his own.

The Record

Alexander Simpson, the prosecutor in the Hall case, told a story at a dinner in Trenton.

"Talking about bribery and corruption," he said, "I heard of a remarkable case the other day. For sheer brazen audacity it would be hard to beat.

"As a court crier came out of court for his luncheon one day the plaintiff in a damage suit stepped up to him and said:

"I beg your pardon, but you know the judge, don't you?"

"Oh, yes," said the crier.

"The plaintiff took out a two-dollar bill.

"Please give him this with my compliments," he said, "and tell him there are plenty more where it came from."

Women's Fire Brigade

The first women's fire brigade in Germany has been formed in the village of Oberjoch, situated high up in the Allegaue Alps. It came into being because the housewives of the town, solicitous for the safety of their homes, were not satisfied that the existing fire brigade, comprising virtually all the brawny males in the hamlet, afforded sufficient means of protection should a big fire break out in their absence at work in the forests. The women fire-fighters, however, are for the most part not less husky than the men.

"Cherub" Had Own Idea of Grandpa's Thoughts

A young mother paid a visit to the cemetery to lay a small floral offering upon the grave of her father-in-law. She took with her on this occasion her four-year-old son, who is angelic of countenance but never misses a trick, and registers everything he hears, including swear words.

Passing another family plot where the resting place of a leading citizen was entirely covered with fresh blossoms, the four-year-old demanded to know who it was.

"Why, that is Jack's grandpa," answered the mother.

The small boy waited a moment and then asked: "Do you know what my grandpa would say if he came back?"

"Why, yes," was the cautious response of the young mother, but inwardly quaking. "He would say, 'How is my little grandson today?'"

The golden-haired cherub looking his mother in the eye, replied: "No, mother, grandpa would say, 'Where in — are all MY flowers?'"—Los Angeles Times.

"Nordic Theory" Based on Race Superiority

The word "Nordic" is derived from "nord," Scandinavian for north. It was applied by Joseph Deniker, the French anthropologist, to a race of tall, blond people who once inhabited Scandinavia, Scotland and northern England. The ancient Goths, for instance, were Nordics. They are supposed to have been the most highly developed branch of the white race and differed more from the yellow, brown, red and black races than did any other branch of the white race. Some scholars believe that traces of the original Nordic language survive in such English words as "wife" and "house," which are not found in Indo-European languages outside the Germanic group. Popularly the word "Nordic" has been extended to all the Germanic or Teutonic peoples. According to the so-called Nordic theory, people of Nordic descent are superior biologically to all other races.—Pathfinder Magazine

Queen of Flowers

If asked to name the queen of flowers, the average person would probably vote for the rose. The botanist, however, would do no such thing.

To the botanist the stamens and pistils are the real flower. The petals are only the flower's clothes, and the make-up of the rose and all her family shows an early stage in flower development.

The real queen of the flowers is the daisy. In the daisy the botanist finds the stages of development of all the other flowers in the seedman's catalogue. There are about 250 flowers in or florets on each daisy. Even the white or pink-tipped rays are not petals but whole flowers, and the yellow boss of the shield consists of many other perfect little flowers, each making seed.

Coin Designers Honored

The custom of placing the signature of the engraver upon a coin die dates from remote antiquity. Many Greek coins, especially the splendid creations produced by the cities of Sicily and Magna Graecia, are signed with the initials of the artist, and in some cases with his full name. The same practice has prevailed generally in European countries. On the coins of the United States but few signatures occur. There was none until the double eagle appeared in 1849, when the signature of Longacre, J. B. L., was placed on the truncation of the bust.

Starved Bears Troublesome

Because of the pangs of hunger, the bears of Alaska have become so bold this winter that signal corps men operating the extensive telegraph and radio system at isolated stations in the Arctic region have found it necessary to maintain special guards to protect their food supplies from the attacks of these half-starved animals. They are reported to be very numerous this season and so regular in their travels in search of food that they have made regular trails between military stations, similar to those in the Far West in the days of the pioneers.

Movable Dining Rooms

The dining room is modern. It would seem impossible nowadays to get along without a dining room in our apartments or homes, where every room has quite a definite designation. The dining room, as we know it nowadays, became the fashion only during the Seventeenth and more generally during the Eighteenth century. Before, people put up a table in a bedroom when no guests came or, on a festival day, in the parlor, or, for the noblemen, in the big hall of the castle. Many people of the lower classes used to eat always in the kitchen.

"Stone of Scone"

Scone is a village in Perthshire, Scotland. The stone is the stone on which the kings of Scotland were crowned. According to tradition, it is the same as "Jacob's Pillow." Edward I of England carried the stone from Scotland to England, where it was placed in Westminster abbey.

Decoration Pays

No matter what the type of building may be, whether residence, apartment house, office building, hospital, church, etc., properly decorated walls will enhance its beauty, to say nothing of reducing maintenance cost.

PAY YOURSELF

IT'S great to "spend" money when you pay it over to yourself: There's a thrill about it—a peculiar satisfaction—a feeling of security. Hundreds of our depositors enjoy this sense of security as they make regular deposits in their accounts. They know they are just taking it from themselves now, in small sums, to be used later for a home, a farm or a business or for investment. To what they save we add 4% compound interest and this makes their balance grow.

PETER AT THE TRANSFIGURATION

LESSON TEXT—II Peter 1:16-18; Mark 9:2-3

GOLDEN TEXT—And a voice came out of the clouds saying, This is my beloved Son, hear ye Him.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Shows Peter His Glory.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Beauty and Glory of Christ.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Peter Saw and Heard in the Mount.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Majesty and Glory of Christ.

I. The Meaning of the Transfiguration (II Peter 1:16-18).

These verses are an inspired interpretation by one who was present and knew all that transpired. The hope of the disciples was crushed. When Christ announced His death which was to take place on the cross, they were unable to see how victory could issue from death. Jesus took with Him, Peter, James and John, and they went into the mountain by themselves. Before going into the mountain He declared that there were some standing in His presence who would not taste of death till they had seen the kingdom of God come with power.

Two men from the upper world were sent to converse with Jesus about His approaching death at Jerusalem—the very thing about which the disciples refused to talk. Then, too, God's own voice was heard in words of approval of Christ's course, directing them to hear the Master.

II. Jesus Christ Glorified on the Mountain (v. 2, 3).

He took the disciples "by themselves" and was "transfigured before them." This shows that the purpose of the transfiguration terminated upon the disciples and not on Christ. Christ's rebuke of Peter for his unwillingness to hear concerning His death apparently for a time estranged the disciples from Him. His appearance on the mountain typifies His visible appearance on the Mount of Olives (Zech. 14:4, 9).

III. Peter, James and John Represent Israel in the Flesh in Connection With the Kingdom (v. 2).

Christ is peculiarly the King of Israel. According to Ezekiel 37:21-27, the Israelites are to be the central people in the kingdom. This people shall be gathered from among the nations and united as one in that kingdom, in their own country.

IV. Moses and Elijah Appeared in Glory With Jesus (vv. 4-13).

These men in the glorified state are typical of the saints in glory. Moses who was once denied an entrance into Palestine appears now in glory representing the redeemed of the Lord who shall pass through death into the kingdom. Elijah represents the redeemed who shall pass into the kingdom through translation. Some shall be living upon the earth when the Lord shall come and they without dying shall be changed and thus pass into the kingdom (I Cor. 15:50-53; I Thess. 4:14-18).

1. Peter's proposal (vv. 5, 6).

So definitely was the method of the kingdom unfolded before Peter that he proposed to erect tabernacles for Christ, Moses and Elijah. It is true that the unveiling of the majestic person of Christ and the panoramic display of the kingdom somewhat disconcerted Peter, yet he grasped its central meaning and proposed to celebrate the advent of the kingdom which had been prefigured in a tangible way.

2. The divine voice out of the cloud (vv. 7, 8).

God declared Jesus to be His Beloved Son in whom He was well pleased. If one would know what is pleasing to God, let him study Jesus Christ who perfectly did His Father's will.

3. Jesus' charge (vv. 9-13).

He charged them that they should tell no man concerning the things which they had seen until He had risen from the dead.

V. A Demonstration of the Purpose of the Establishment of the Kingdom (vv. 14-29).

When they descended from the mountain of transfiguration they witnessed a great multitude in a state of perplexity. The immediate cause of this state was the grievous condition of a young man possessed with a demon (v. 18). This young man's state is representative of the nations who are oppressed by the devil. Just as this young man was grievously oppressed, causing him to cast himself into the fire and into the waters, so the nations today in their great perplexity are doing the things which will result in their own destruction.

HAWAIIAN PINEAPPLE IN PIES AND TARTS

EVERY mother of boys is aware that pie must appear on the table "every so often". If she thinks too much of the regular kind of pie is not good for her family, she still pleases them by providing pie, but uses occasionally just the bottom crust, or substitutes a cake crust.

It is amazing how, during the last few years, pineapple pie has supplanted in favor many of the old-time favorites. It won enthusiastic acceptance with pie-fanciers at the first taste, and has steadily increased in popularity.

This delicious fruit lends itself particularly well for use in uncovered pies, which are both more wholesome than the covered and may be made more decorative. Topped with a golden meringue, or in tart form, the fruit showing a glacé surface, pineapple pies are decidedly appetizing. Three well-tested recipes follow.

PINEAPPLE MERINGUE PIE: Mix ½ cup each hot water and syrup drained from crushed Hawaiian pineapple. Bring to the boiling point and add slowly 3 tablespoons cornstarch and ¼ cup sugar which have been well mixed together. Boil for 3 minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from fire and add 1 teaspoon butter, 3 tablespoons lemon juice, ¼ cup drained crushed Hawaiian pineapple, and 2 beaten egg yolks. Pour into a pastry-lined pie-dish and bake until pastry is well browned. Remove from the oven, cool slightly and cover with a meringue made from 2 stiffly beaten egg whites and 2 tablespoons powdered sugar. Brown the meringue in the oven.

RICH PINEAPPLE TARTS: Add ½ cup sugar and 1 tablespoon butter to 1 can crushed Hawaiian pineapple which has been carefully drained. Cook slowly for 8 or 10 minutes, stirring frequently. Pour into small pastry shells that have been baked but not allowed to brown. Bake until a film forms over the fruit, or about 10 minutes. Serve cold. These tarts look prettier if red cherries are mixed with the pineapple.

COVERED PINEAPPLE PIE: Heat 1½ cups of syrup drained from crushed Hawaiian pineapple, and into it pour the following mixture: ½ cup sugar, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon cinnamon. Stir constantly and boil 5 minutes. Add 1 tablespoon lemon juice, ¼ cup seedless raisins, and ¼ cup well-drained, crushed Hawaiian pineapple. Pour into pastry-lined pie pan, cover with top layer of pastry and put into a hot oven. After 10 minutes reduce the heat. Bake altogether ¼ hour.

ANYWHERE TO ANYWHERE—BY TELEPHONE

Are YOU One of These?

—one of the people who still believe that long distance calls are expensive? For, although it's 1927, there are still some of them left.

Now, long distance calling is not expensive. For instance, on a station-to-station call of 150 miles, the day rate for three minutes is only 95c., and think how much you can say in three minutes. Then, too, the rates are lower during the evening and night hours. The same call of 150 miles between 7 and 8.30 p. m. is but 70c., while between 8.30 p. m. and 4.30 a. m., it is only 50c. Pretty cheap round trip!

Remember, it isn't necessary to wait until midnight to get these discounted rates.

Out-of-town station-to-station rates are lowest after 8.30 p. m.

No Written Records of the Celtic Race

That the Celts, at the time of the invasion by Julius Caesar of what is now England and Wales, had any written records there is great reason to doubt, although there are inscriptions on certain rude stone monuments in parts of Wales, as in the southeastern counties of Munster, Ireland, consisting of long and short lines, known as Ogam characters, the antiquity of which is not well determined.

As far as deciphered these inscriptions throw no direct light on the origin of the Celtic race. Their spoken language, reduced to writing after the introduction of Christianity, is the only key of any importance to their origin. This plainly marks them as an early offshoot of the Aryan family, the common Asiatic stock from which all the western races of Europe have descended.

The descriptions left by the Romans of the aborigines of Britain at the time of the Roman conquest represent them as fierce, cruel barbarians. Neither Caesar's commentaries nor the writings of Tacitus and other historians of the period of the Roman domination convey evidence that the Britons had any knowledge of letters until the Roman and Greek characters were taught them. Neither do these historians preserve any oral traditions of the British bards or druids which might shed light on the early history of the Celtic race.

Community Spirit, is a Reputation.

We have taken numerous occasions to refer to "community spirit"—and we trust that it has always been understood that we meant high-class spirit—as a most desirable reputation for any community to have. Every community does have a spirit, and this spirit, though it may not be recognized by those who make it, is recognized by those who have a good chance to look us over, and make comparisons with other communities. "Community spirit" always represents the intellectual and moral status of the folks who comprise the community. If enough individuals are mean, dishonest, narrow-minded, or not in the habit of meeting their obligations of honor, then the community takes on the reputation of such individuals, and it gets abroad.

The difficulty in propagating the best sort of "community spirit," rests in the fact that the low-grade spirit thrives on ignorance; it is not the kind of spirit that is uplifted by preaching and teaching, for the reason that its founders do not listen to preaching and teaching, except such as may be had from among their own kind; and a very few apostles of this sort may easily nullify the best efforts of teachers worth listening to and following.

There are communities everywhere that are positively suffering now, and showing the effects of the higher-class young men having left their home community for a better chance in life. One man—a young man—is not as good as another, except in counting population; and just in the proportion that communities lose their best young men, in that proportion those who remain are apt to be the culls, or left-overs, that in the course of time establish "community spirit"; and naturally, the grade of the "spirit" makes a reputation.

And this places the burden of responsibility for a community's reputation on the folks who are in it. Think it over, and consider what part you have been playing.

Some Good Short Ones.

"That's a new one on me," said the monkey as he scratched his back.

Tillie: "What would you call a man who hid behind a woman's skirts?"
Willie: "A magician."

"Undoubtedly personal liberty is a good thing, but we don't like to ride with a driver who is full of it."

Heshe: "Did you hear about the wooden wedding?"
Shehe: "I'll bite."
Heshe: "Two Poles were married."

Brown: "I hear Jones is letting the rest of the world go by."
Greene: "Retired, eh?"
Brown: "No, bought a used car."

Customer: "Can I change these pants at this counter?"
Clerk: "Well, I'll tell you, mister, we have quite a few women shoppers, so maybe you'd better go to the dressing room in the rear."

OVERDUE SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Recently, we have been letting up a little in dropping subscriptions at or near time of expiration, thinking renewals would be made promptly after notice. We now have an accumulation of such overdue accounts, dating from last Fall, and later, which we will be glad to have paid at once.

If not, then we will very unwillingly be compelled to discontinue them without further notice. Please note the label on your paper—it shows the date to which your subscription is paid.

Great Man's Influence

We cannot look, however imperfectly, upon a great man without gaining something by him. He is the living life-fountain, which is good and pleasant to be near; the light which enlightens, which has enlightened the darkness of the world; and this not as a kindly lamp only, but rather as a natural luminary, shining by the gift of Heaven; a flowing light-fountain, as I say, of native, original insight, of manhood and heroic nobleness, in whose radiance all souls feel that it is well with them.—Carlyle.
