MARYLAND FARMERS DELAYED BY RAIN.

Heavy Losses seem sure to all Summer Crops.

Farmers throughout the central and western part of the state are facing the probability of heavy losses to crops, especially to corn, very little of which has yet been planted. This loss will be all the more severely felt because many failed to sow their usual acreage of wheat last fall, due to the wet season, expecting to increase the corn acreage this Spring.

Farmers are back in plowing and planting three to four weeks, and the ground is now so completely soaked that some of it will not dry out, even with favorable weather from now on, sufficiently to mature a late planted

Many farmers are still hoping for a let-up in the daily rain program, that will be likely to produce good crops on well drained land, but there is great danger even then that the soil will be worked too wet, the effect of which would be felt for a year or two afterwards.

County agents are advising the use of spike-tooth harrows because of the lateness of the season, in order that heavy soils may be the better broken up and the better help to destroy the growth of grass and weeds that have kept on growing throughout the rainy season. What effect the rains have had on the wheat, yet remains to be seen, but it is feared that much of it is too rank in the straw and may lodge and be poorly filled. The next two weeks will have a great effect on the season's

Miss Arnold Enters Convent.

Miss Helen A. Arnold, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. Arnold, Taney-town was received at the Carmelite Monastery, Baltimore, Tuesday morning, May 17th. The Solemn High Mass was sung by Father Quinn. Father Little was deacon, and Father Schmidt, sub-deacon. Right Rev. Monsignor B. J. Bradley, President of Mt. St. Mary's College, and a number of priests from Baltimore were in the Sanctuary.

The reception ceremonies were conducted by Monsignor Stickney, of the Cathedral. Miss Josephine Gallery, a cousin, was "maid of honor" and little Catherine Arnold flower girl. A number of relatives and friends were present from Taneytown, York, Lit-tlestown, McSherrystown, Washington and Baltimore. Miss Arnold will be known as "Sister Celine."

Here is a Funny One.

Roscoe Nunn, state weather forecaster, says we have had almost a "dry" Spring, by comparison of actual depth of rainfall with other years. He says it hasn't rained much yet backing up his verdicts he gives these figures. March had only 1.47 inches; April had 5.48 inches, or a total of March had only 1.47 inches; 8.43 inches, of rain, whereas the normal rainfall for these months ought to reach 9.15 inches.

In May it hasn't rained much-it only seems so. He says, "Ten of the past eighteeen days have been rainy ones, but only 1.48 inches of rain, a deficient amount, has fallen." Baltimore seems to be trying to make out that it isn't very "wet"; but Baltimore isn't Carroll county, and Mr. Nunn's rain report will hardly be believed here.

The Drunken Driver Menace.

The drunken driver is still abroad in the land. Men get drunk, and really if they enjoy it, it should not be any great concern to any one else if the inebriate keeps to himself and merely gets drunk. But when a man gets drunk and drives a car, he becomes an engine of destruction. His power is multiplied several hundred times, and he is armed with death-dealing metal, offensive weapons. Just think of such a monster bearing down on youflickering human intelligence at the wheel, but with reason dethroned by

It is no wonder that thoughtful legislators made it a felony to drive a car while intoxicated. And the safety, even the life of the public, depends on the enforcement of that law. We are of the opinion that the constitution of the United States accords any citizen the right to get drunk if he so desires; but for goodness sake let him go off into the bushes and stay until he gets sober. Then no one but his own folks will care anything about it-Ellicott City Times.

It is advisable to have horses, teeth examined by a competent veterinarian at least once a year. Generally all that will be required is to file off the long, sharp corners which are due to uneven wearing. This roughness first causes sore tongues or cheeks, followed by a lack of proper mastication together with digestive troubles. The size of the back-yard flock which can be most efficiently kept, will depend upon the space available and the amount of table scraps or other waste available for feed. It is a mistake to overstock the available space. For a flock of 20 to 25 hens' a yard space of not less than 25 by 30 feet will be required. Where less space is available the size of the flock should reduced, allowing on the average 20 to 30 square feet per bird.

PROCEEDINGS OF COURT AND GRAND JURY.

County Buildings are Creatly in Need of Repairs.

The detailed report of the Grand Jury, with reference to the condition of the county buildings in Westmin-ster, reads like a "hard times" story. The Court House, the County Home and Jail, are all out of repair, and must have been, for some time. The report does not recommend new buildings, but it is sweeping enough to show that a general rehabilitation is needed; not only for mere looks, but for the health, comfort and safety of those who live and work in the build-

Our anxiety to build schools and roads-objects that take three-fourths of our taxes—and the increased insistent demand for them, should not overshadow good business sense and good housekeeping concerning our county's business plant. We have no doubt that the report of the Grand Jury has not overestimated, but has rather under-estimated these needs, and the repairs should be made. The report follows;

The Grand Jurors of the State of Maryland for the body of Carroll Co., empanelled for the May Term nineteen hundred and twenty-seven, beg leave respectfully to report to your

That they have been in session five days and in that time have examined 126 witnesses and have found 43 presentments and true bills. Your Grand Jurors have found a great number of cases of larceny and burglary reported to them in which they have been unable to determine the guilty parties, and they have had evidence of an illegal traffic in intoxicating liquors in which they have been unable to secure sufficient evidence to return present-

Your Grand Jury, through a committee, inspected the County Home and we wish to make the following recommendations with respect to the County Home; in the main building we find the walls very rough, with cracks in the walls of the hallways and on the first floor in the Chapel, dining room and kitchen. The sitting room of the inmates needs attention as to the plumbing and walls. The premises are generally in clean condition. In the men's department conditions are fair. The barnyard gate should be renewed and the hog pens are in bad condition, but we have no recommendation to make in respect to the same. Many of the buildings need repainting. We find the interior of the buildings well kept. We feel that the management of the County Home under Mr. Bowers, its steward, is satisfactory.

As to the Court House your Grand Jury feels that the walls in the Lobby should be repainted and also the Commissioners' room. We recommend repainting the Judges' room, new winlow shades and a new hardwood floor. We find the office of the Board of Education in need of repainting and the ceiling in the back room of the Board of Education needs replastering We recommend the installation of an electric light in the ladies toilet. We recommend supports under the stairway leading to the main Court room in order to make the same absolutely safe. The walls in the Register of Wills office need renovating, and the men's toilet should be white washed or repainted. The work of the janitor of the Court House appears as satis-

We visited the Jail and make the following recommendations; the conductor pipe on the north side of the building we found disconnected and should be rejoined, the radiator pipes in the front rooms are leaking badly and should be repaired. The woodwork at the jail needs repainting and a new coal shed is needed, meat house needs a new roof and the barn needs repainting. We found the range in the kitchen in bad repair and should be repaired or a new one provided, and the walls in the sitting room and dining room should be repainted or repapered. The conductor pipe on the South corner of the jail needs a new elbow in order to connect it with the drain pipe. The grounds at the jail are neat and clean and kept in good condition. In order to assist in the proper administration of the law, we recom-mend that there be appointed in each district of the county, at least one constable or deputy sheriff.

And now having finished all matters brought to our attention, we pray to be discharged, subject to the further call of your Honorable Court

NEW ROAD WANTED.

Four Miles Between Union Bridge and Johnsville.

The largest delegation to appear before the Board of County Commissioners for the purpose of petitioning road improvements was that heard Monday morning when approximately 125 persons from Johnsville and vicinity asked that four miles between Union Bridge and Johnsville be made state road. Speakers pointed out that one-half mile between Union Bridge and Johnsville was now being built and asked that the remaining four miles also be constructed. They stated that they desired state road as soon as possible, but should that be impossible, they asked that the county build the four miles. The Commis-sioners indicated that they would present the matter to the State Roads Commission and consider it.

The request was offered the Road Commission by the petitioners recently, with the result that the commission fold it could be at the commission fold it could be at the commission fold its could be at the commission fold. mission felt it could do nothing at that time. The Commissioners will again confer with the State Commission, and should there be no result, the county will likely build at least a portion of the desired four miles. Land owners have indicated that they will give the state right of way on their properties if the road is improved. Among those who spoke were: Dr. T. H. Legg, Messrs Metz, Devilbiss, Grossnickle and Stitely.

There were about 125 signers to the petition.

Gammer Gurton's Needle.

Those who remember the dramatization of "Esther" and the plays presented before the Woman's Club of Westminster will be interested to know that another drama, of unusual interest, is being prepared by the College players.

This time it is "Gammer Gurton's Needle" a play supposed to have been written by John Still about the year 1575. It is a rollicking comedy, homely and hearty. It should be especially interesting and instructive to those wishing to inform themselves regarding literature, and also to those looking for wholesome entertain-ment. Although it portrays the simple folk of centuries ago we are persuaded that human nature then, as now, was mirth loving.

"Manikin & Minikin", a bisque oneact play, by Alfred Kreymborg will add another pleasing feature to the program.

These plays will be staged in Alumni Hall, Friday, May 27, at 8:00 P. M. Admission 50c.

THE GREAT FLOOD IS STILL RAGING.

New Sections Continually Being Placed in Danger.

The Mississippi flood situation continues very much the same, in a general way. It is now estimated that the total loss may be something like $500,000,000, but that present needs are fairly well taken care of by the Red Cross organization in connection with the funds available from the general government without special

Secretary Hoover in his report to the President says that immediate flood needs include the rescue of families and livestock, equipment of relief camps, maintenance of needy in camps or flooded homes with food, clothing, medical supplies and transportation of sufferers and animals home again. The emergency measures of reconstruction include seed, temporary food supplies, farm implements for planting purposes, necessary live stock and household furniture.

Another group of partly emergency and partly long-view measures of reconstruction, Mr. Hoover reports, includes reconstruction of business, benevolent and other institutions, buildings and schools, reconstruction of roads and bridges, municipal property and of levees.

Largely from anti-administration sources, many appeals have been made for a special session of Congress to deal with measures for the rehabilitation of the stricken area. This would likely mean that the Senate and House would remain in session all summer, and that its activities could not be restricted to the object of its call, but the temptation would be strong to manufacture campaign material for 1928.

The President is paying close attention to the situation, but as yet seems to be of the opinion that the various departments of the government are competent to handle the sit-uation, and at the same time gather the information that Congress would need before it could take any action. He believes that it may be necessary for Congress to convene in special session early in the fall, to appraise and consider damages, but that doing so now would be fruitless.

As the flood advances, new towns and sections are being abandoned, and new breaks are being daily reported. The general situation has not improved, and the prospects are that it may yet become a great deal worse, before it gets better. The peak of the flood is still 130 to 150 miles north of New

PRIZE ESSAY CONTEST.

Prevention of Highway Grade Crossing Accidents.

Concerned over the increase that took place in 1926 compared with 1925 in the number of highway grade crossing accidents and believing that more care should be exercised by all those crossing railroad tracks, the American Railway Association has announced plans for a nation-wide essay contest among school and college students with three cash prizes of $250. each, to be awarded the authors of essays containing an outstanding, readily available suggestion for preventing such accidents.

One prize of $250 will be awarded by the American Railway Association for the best essay by a grammar stu-dent, a similar prize for the best es-say by a high school student and a like amount for the best essay by a Crossings Cautiously," and each essay is to be limited to 250 words.

The essays must be terse, logical and constructive and must stress the need for greater care in approaching and passing over railroad crossings.

The essays are to be sent to J. C.
Caviston, Secretary of the Safety Section of the American Railway Association, at 30 Vesey Street, New York City, by not later than June 1. Three persons of national reputation to be selected later will act as judges.

Under the plan, class teachers in both grammar and high schools will select the best essays from their classes and transmit them to their principal who will then select the best one from that school and send it to the Superintendent of Schools for the county or an equivalent officer. The county Superintendent will then select the best essay written by a grammar student and the best one written by a high school student in his county and will transmit them to the American Railway Association. Colleges may follow the same procedure, except that each college or university, through its proper officer, may select one essay and transmit direct to the American Railway Association. In 1926 there were 5,921 highway grade crossings accidents in which 2,492 persons were killed and 6,991 injured. In 1925 there were 5,479 accidents in which 2,206 persons were killed and 6,555 injured. Owing to the increase that is constantly taking place in the number of automobiles in use, the hazard from such accidents is annually becoming greater. Only through the co-operation of the public and the railroads can a reduction in such accidents be brought about, in view of the fact the complete elimination of highway crossings is impossible, not only because of the time that would be involved, but also because of the prohibitive cost which ultimately falls on the public.

Expenses of Red Cross Work.

The Westminster Times has set at rest any fear on the part of contribu-tors to Red Cross work that any large portion of the contributions go to the payment of salaries. As the Editor of The Times is chairman of the Car-roll County Chapter, he speaks authoritatively on the subject. In substance, the statement is that there are no salaries paid to any county or district official for their services, not even for travelling or other expenses. In the large cities, and in actual field work, it is of course necessary to pay fair wages for work, such as secretaries, nurses, etc.; but everywhere along the line between contributor and beneficiary, economy in expense is the rule.

Publishing Contributions of Money.

We are aware that there are some objections to publishing the names and amounts of individual gifts to calls for aid for various worthy objects. No doubt there is some "parade" effect about it, and it may be more creditable to give without making any demonstration, and certainly not for the purpose of just "showing off"; but on the whole we can not see that there are any very substantial objections to published giving.

The main object to consider in any effort to raise money in a community for some public purpose, is the object itself: and if the knowledge of how much others give, helps some to give more liberally, then in such cases we believe that the end justifies the means, and the plan at least need not interfere with the liberal giving of anybody through some other channel.

Everybody ought to respond voluntarily and liberally to appeals like the Flood Relief; but what they "ought" to do, and what they actually do, are very different in their results. If this were not true then all gifts might be credited to "cash" and no more publicity about it. There would then be no need for "quotas," nor publicity of any sort.

The Record has gathered in a great deal of money for various needs, during the past thirty-three years, and has always given credit, individually, except when contributors requested that their names be not used. We believe that the donors gave in the proper spirit, and that they, with The Record, desired to help the causes, rather than parade their gifts.

And, we mean to keep up the plan. When folks give us money to be turned in for any object, each sum received will be published, as an ac- had said this thing a thousand times, is the principal ingredient in his counting on our part; and because we believe the plan has more good than objectionable features. Those who prefer to give directly, or through some other channel, always have the privilege of doing so; and we incline to the belief that because some use one plan, and some another, is no proof that either is wrong. The main thing, is to-give.

A Parental S O S

In the 'agony column' of the London Times appears the following: 'A parent would appreciate advice from any with successful experience in correcting naughty boys.' What a confession of helplessness! Speaking directly the only way to correct naughty boys is to correct them. 'But how?' asks the helpless one. To use a Gilbertian phrase in its general sense, it would appear that the best way would be 'to make the punishment fit the crime.' If the naughtiness is only of a trifling nature, a word of warning and advice may be sufficient, but if it is of a serious character, more drastic measures would have to be adopt-

Boys are created neither angels nor devils; they are a sort of a blend of the two. To wring the evil brew out of them requires some strenuous laundering occasionally, but in place of putting them on the ironing board the modern tendency is to whitewash them. At a later stage the whitewash won't hold and the ugly spots begin to show underneath.

'The wisest man the world e'er saw said something about sparing the rod and spoiling the child. He probably knew what he was talking about. Rehoboam, his son, must have given him more trouble than enough, and Solomon himself was not a shining example of what a well-trained young man should be. He spoke out of the wealth of his experience.

A good many years ago there appeared in a popular magazine an article on 'The Training of Parents.' Perhaps the lack of training in parents is the root cause of the predicament in which this English parent finds himself.—Dearborn Independent.

"Prohibition Don't Prohibit."

In Portland, Oregon, not long ago, I saw a crowd gathered at the street curb. I make it a point to attend every fire, and every fight, and always to investigate when I think 'something is doing.' When I pushed my way through the crowd, I found the center of interest to be a Ford automobile, covered with mud. A prohibition officer had just taken from the pocket of the driver, a half-pint of whiskey. Two additional quarts were found in a suit case, in the rear of the car. The officers were proceeding to arrest the man, and take car around for eventual confis-

Indian Hunters Made

Good Use of Blow-Gun

The blow-gun was a curious weapon used for bird-hunting among certain tribes of North American Indians. It was usually made of cane, some 11 feet in length, with a bore of around half an inch. The darts were about 2 feet in length, made of hardwood and "feathered" with some kind of vegetable fiber.

As far as we know the use of the blow-gun within the boundaries of what is now the United States was confined to such tribes as the Cherokee, Choctaw, Yuchi, Huma and other Muskhogean tribes dwelling in the southern states. The Iroquois also used it, their guns being made of alder stems 4 and 6 feet in length, the arrows being slender slivers of pointed wood from 6 inches to 2 feet in length and "feathered" with the down or floss of the thistle. These tubes were used solely for bird-shooting, and were never poisoned or used against human adversaries.

A magical formula was recited by the Cherokee bird-hunter as he stood before his fire—which he addressed as "Ancient White"-rubbing his hands together as he repeated the prayer. Before starting on the hunt seven blow-gun arrows were first prepared in order that he might have them in readiness for the work at hand.

One of the seven was a short one, a magical arrow which he shot away at random, making no attempt to follow its flight, giving it to the powers that be as sort of a propitiatory gift. Then the hunter uttered a peculiar hissing sound which was supposed to draw the birds to him. The favorite hunting method was to climb into a gum tree, haunted by the smaller birds for its berries, and there ensconce himself and pick off the birds as they feasted. When all of his darts were used up he dropped to the ground, drew the shafts from the bodies of the slain birds and repeated the performance.-Mr. Woodward in Adventure Maga-

Paper Bricks for Houses

Houses of paper may be possible with the development of a new process recently perfected by Yovan inventor. He claims that the bricks are waterproof, that the material cannot be damaged by nailing and that it is especially suitable for buildings one and two stories in height. Pessuccess of the idea is shown by the fact that paper fire buckets and paper car wheels have been in use for many years, say those interested in its de-

"Electric Home" in Paris

The American "electric home," which was presented, complete to the last shingle and lamp, to the French nation two years ago by American manufacturers, has finally found a location in the Paris Latin quarter, where the government made room for it. The Buenvenete Française, which is a society to encourage good will between France and the world, uses the electric home as its headquarters, and will there entertain visitors from everywhere. The home, in crates and boxes, has been in France for a long time awaiting a site. It is equipped with the latest things in switches and toasters and lights for the travelers of the world to enjoy.

in Evening of Life

The life of individual man is of a mixed nature. In part he submits to the free-will impulses of himself and others, in part he is under the inexorable dominion of law. He insensibly changes his estimate of the relative power of each of these influences as he passes through successive stages. In the confidence of youth he imagines that very much is under his control, in the disappointment of old age very little. As time wears on, and the delusions of early imagination wear away, he learns to correct his sanguine views, and prescribes a narrower boundary for the things he expects to obtain. The realities of life undeceive him at last, and there steals over the evening of his days an unwelcome conviction of the vanity of human hopes. The things he has secured are not the things he has expected. He sees that a Supreme Power has been using him for unknown ends, that he was brought into the world without his own knowledge, and is departing from it against his will. -J. W. Draper.

Electric Hares Advocated

The proposed mechanical hare as a quarry for greyhound coursing has aroused considerable controversy in England. Two years ago Lady Astor supported a bill to abolish the use of the live hare. She contends that coursing a live hare with greyhounds is cruel, and in this belief is backed up by George Bernard Shaw, Galsworthy and other British humanitarians. The new electrical device has won many enthusiasts; but the committee of the Greyhound Racing association asserts that coursing an artificially controlled hare is "not a sport.'

Advocates of the dummy hare maintain that it provides better sport. since its speed can be regulated, thus assuring a dependable test for the speed and endurance of the "long

Beware of Poor Minds

When you are driving look out for the man with the poor mind rather than the one with the poor eyesight. Dr. Harold D. Judd of Detroit has recently made a study of 100 serious automobile casualties in co-operation with the Detroit police department, and has come to the conclusion that poor minds, rather than poor eyes, are the cause of most of the accidents. "A man with only 50 per cent visual efficiency and 100 per cent mentality," Doctor Judd is quoted as saying, "would make a more perfect driver than the man with perfect eyes and half mentality. Observation has shown that the man with perfect eyes and full intelligence is liable to be more careless than the man who knows his eyesight is bad, but who is mentally normal."

Bluestone Used for Sheep-Worm Control

Government Demonstration Attracts Many Sheepmen.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A demonstration of the bluestone or copper-sulphate treatment of sheep for the riddance of stomach worms attracted over 70 sheepmen in Wapello county, Iowa, according to a recent report to the United States Department of Agriculture.

Experimental work in the practical control of stomach worms is being carried on by the department at Queen City, Mo., where about 2,000 sheep on a dozen farms have been made available by the owners for the use of the specialist in charge of the investigations. The problem of stomach-worm control has been under investigation the last eight years at Vienna, Va., and the copper-sulphate treatment is the most satisfactory means of preventing losses from stomach worms yet discovered.

After two years of experimenting at Queen City, Mo., Dr. E. M. Nighbert states that almost complete control of the stomach worms of sheep in the Middle West can be secured by the copper-sulphate treatment, and that at slight expense profits in the production of mutton, wool, and breeding stock can be greatly increased by the treat-

Sprouting Oats in Bags

Is Most Practical Plan This time of year when green food is dry and fibrous, sprouted oats is almost a necessity for laying stock.

Two quarts of dry seed oats is sufficient for 100 hens. Place this in a Lace thin muslin bag, made pillow-slip fashion and soak all night in a pail of water, tepid preferred. In the morning hang up behind kitchen range with drip pan below.

Each evening for five days, place a bag of the required amount of oats soaking; once daily dip in tepid water, shake and stir thoroughly to prevent heating. On the fifth day the first bag is ready to feed.

One good-sized pinch per hen is plenty. Sprouted or germinated oats should be fed in troughs or on clean boards as they are damp and collect dirt if fed in litter. Wash the bags in hot soapsuds and use over and over.

Sprouted oats is one of the finest of green feeds if fed sweet and clean. Never feed if moldy, sour or smutty. Do not overfeed; feed regularly each day. They help keep the birds in good condition and make hatching eggs more fertile and hatchable. Commence feeding to chicks when they are one month old, feeding a tiny bit at first and increasing each day.

Protein Feed Lacking

Few farmers who are raising poultry on a comparatively large scale have enough buttermilk or skim milk so that they can supply the protein needed in a ration made up of farmraised grains by feeding these products in the way mentioned. They must, therefore, have access to protein in other forms if they would secure during the early fall and winter

Thinning Sweet Corn

Three stalks to the hill is a good average number of stalks when growing sweet corn. Some varieties will grow from three or four grains as many as a dozen stalks. The weaker ones should be pulled cut. Otherwise the yield will be reduced to small ears, or none at all. Three healthy stalks to the hill should average two to three ears to the stalk.

Sod in Orchards

Where the orchard has been in sod for several years the plowing should be shallow, so as not to tear up the small feeding roots which always come to the surface in sod orchards Two years of clean cultivation will send the roots downward and there will be no danger of disturbing them. Afterwards the orchard should be kept in some kind of cover crop and in clean cultivation.

There is no short-cut to ease in farming; but there are ways of making farming easier.

Lava From Mauna Loa

Kilauea, on the island of Hawaii, as high as Vesuvius and twice as wide, lies 30 miles from the sea in a mountain range wherein are three dead volcanoes and one partially alive. This last, Mauna Loa, sends, from time to time, streams of lava down its slopes. Some years ago three streams burst forth from the sides of this three-fourths of a mile from Hilo, the chief city of the island. There have been several outbreaks of Kilauea in the last century. In 1840 there was a brilliant eruption of lava, the light of which, it was reported, could be seen a hundred miles away.

Where the lava flowed through the forest it left curious relics in the shape of lava arches, bridges and great vases. These vases were formed by the lava piling itself about some lofty tree trunk, burning away the wood within and killing the upper part of the tree. In the course of time seeds were deposited in the open top filled with decaying bark, until now there is a gigantic lava vase holding ferns and flowers and vines.

News

"News" is commonly believed to be formed from the initial letters of the four directions, north, east, west, and south, but it is authoritatively claimed that the interesting sameness is merely coincidence. There are synomous foreign words "nova" and "nouvelles," which employ various letters to mean the same thing. In our own language the word was formerly spelled "newes." It is likely that the German word "das neue" is the origin of ours since their phrase, "Was giebt neues?" means the same as our, "What's the news?"

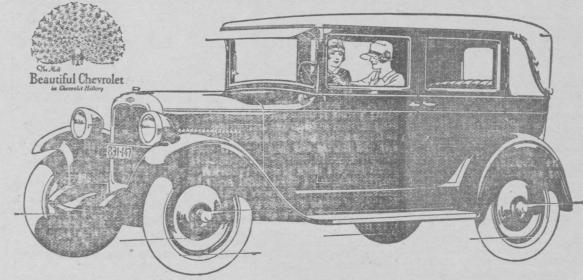

The Crisis

It is a common saying that men and women hate to pass forty and put on glasses.

There is a greater trial ahead of them; to have all their teeth out and buy a set of the kind that never looks natural.

False teeth are as easily detected as a wig; but people are rather more charitable for false teeth-somehow, they expect a man to boldly face bald ness.-E. W. Howe's Monthly.

Daring Climbers Risk Lives "Bagging" Birds

The sea cliffs of Faroe islands. which rise, terrace on terrace, from one to two thousand feet in height, are the roosting places of thousands of gulls, guillemots, puffins and auks. From the top to the bottom of the cliff the birds may be seen sitting in serried rows, each species having its own terrace, and jammed so close together that a shot would kill scores of them. The islanders bag them wholesale, for salted puffins, dried guillemots and auks, with rashers of smoked whale, supply them with food. . The fowling is a dangerous business. One method

Two men agree to ascend a cliff. One climbs up the first terrace, being pushed up from behind by the pole of his comrade below. When he is safely planted on the shelf he pulls up the other, who is attached to him by a rope fastened to his girdle. In this way they climb shelf after shelf, until they reach the one on which are situated the best birds. Should one lose his balance and fall from the terrace, his comrade would go with him. For they are partners in life—and in death.

Another method is resorted to when the nature of the cliff prevents climbing. A man is let down by a long rope from the top of the cliff. Down he goes, several hundred feet, holding onto a string, by which he signals the watcher on the cliff. When he arrives opposite a shelf on which the birds are sitting he oscillates till he swings into the alcove.

Then, disengaging himself from the rope, he uses a long pole, to which a net is attached, to bag the birds, which he catches sitting, or while they are flying close to the cliffs. The spoil is either thrown into a boat below or is hauled up by the string.

Firestone Dealers The Variety

Have Purchased 100% More

[This Year Compared With Same Period Last Year]

THE demand from car owners for Gum-Dipped Tires has given Firestone Dealers a large increase in volume enabling them to sell these tires to you at the lowest prices in history.

On the cars of motorists everywhere, these wonderful tires are delivering unheard-of long mileage with greater safety and comfort.

The Firestone Balloon Tread, scientifically designed three years ago, and unchanged today, follows the contour of the tire carcass with no excess rubber at the edges to cause "shoulder breaks". Narrow rider strips permit the tread to yield to depressions and cling to the road, preventing skidding. This tough, pliable tread has the wear-resisting qualities for thousands of extra miles. Such a tread must be placed on a carcass with the qualifications to withstand the terrific flexing that this design permits. The Firestone carcass is made of cords dipped in a rubber solution which not only saturates and insulates every fiber of every cord, but unifies sidewalls with carcass, avoiding separation under the extreme flexing. ManyFirestone Dealers are prepared to offer you a liberal allowance for your old tires, on a new set of Gum-Dipped Tires to start the motoring season.

To meet a demand for a low price tire and tube, Firestone designed and manufactures, for Firestone Dealers only, Oldfield Tires and Tubes, which carry the Standard Manufacturers' Guarantee.

Everyone congratulated Billy Goat upon his song which was a quite original one. The words, everyone said, were a little better than the music, but it was all good, all good, they said.

And Billy Goat was delighted with the praise. In fact so delighted was he that he said he had another he'd sing, though he'd have to think a little about it.

While he was thinking, though, he was talking about it.

"You see," he said, "I heard one of the young ladies talking the other day, and it seemed she had gone to town dressed in all her old clothes because it had been a rainy day when she had started. "Yes, she had on an old hat, and old shoes and rubbers, and an old skirt and coat. And no sooner had she reached town than the sun came out and there was she on this most beautiful day feeling so like an old rainy day. So this is the song I'm making up about that:

There's nothing sadder in this world Than to have the sun come out When you're dressed in all your old

Because you were in doubt.

"Of course," said Billy Goat, "she had been in doubt as to whether she'd wear her good ones because she had seen a little blue sky in one corner of the sky but she had been afraid that It would rain."

"We see, we see; a fine verse, Billy Goat. We shall have to name you the Poet of the Barnyard. Truly that would be an honor and one that you deserve," the other animals said.

So when the creatures all came to the Barnyard Reunion Billy Goat or Sir William Goat, the Gentleman, was also called "The Barnyard Poet."

Yes, everyone was on hand, or perhaps one should say on foot, for the reunion. Porky Pig and Mrs. Duck helped to entertain.

The song sparrows came and the owl sent word he was sleeping or he'd come. (They hadn't asked him so they were just as glad he couldn't come.) The Dog who had become so brave came along, so did Sharpy Squirrel, Running Rabbit, Mrs. Blue Jay, and all of the ducks and pigeons and hens and roosters and pigs and geese and turkeys.

In fact it was a splendid reunion and there was excellent food, though of course the Pig family forgot about entertaining any but themselves when the food came along!

But there was enough to go around. The Geese weren't quite as polite as they should have been, of course, but taking it all in all it was a splendid barnvard reunion

American History in War Department Files

The attention of historians has been invited by the War department at Washington to the fact that its old records are a gold mine of historical research, including the muster rolls of every war from the Revolution, the original account and orderly books, letters and narrative records of the Revolutionary war, the records of the Indian campaigns and the Confederate state papers.

President Lincoln's personal telegrams of 1864-65, more of them written in his own handwriting; President Johnson's telegrams, the telegrams of Generals Grant, Meade, Hooker, Pope and Burnside; the papers of General McClellan and General Halleck and the original notes in pencil of Grant and Lee in arranging for the surrender at Appomattox and the amnesty papers of the Civil war, are still in the files.

The original oath of office taken by Washington and his officers at Valley Forge in 1778, including those of Lafayette and DeKalb and other foreigners who volunteered, and the facsimile of the seal of the Confederate states, as well as of the Confederate states war department, are there. The original of the seals never came into the possession of the United States

Among other relics are the captured records of the British brigade of footguards, the Revolutionary war commissions signed by John Hancock, the original returns of the quartermaster corps in the Revolution, the draft records of the Civil war and many original letters to the secretary of war from prominent Americans-Lafavette Journal and Courier.

Quite So, Quite So

One Sunday morning, a young man attended church in a Kentucky town. Immediately after the services he hurried out and began untying his horse, preparatory to leaving. The minister, desirous of making the visitor's acquaintance, quickly followed. As the boy was adjusting the bridle rein, his horse made a sudden movement of the head, catching his fingers firmly between the rein and the hame, causing severe pain. Ignorant of the minister's presence, he instantly muttered an oath.

"Tut, tut, my boy," exclaimed the clergyman with disgust. "How shameful. You should think before you speak."

"I did," said the other, wheeling around quickly. "I always think before I speak, and I spoke just what I thought."-Indianapolis News.

Jazz Important Musically

"I am convinced," wrote John Alden Carpenter, the Chicago composer whose work is played by symphony orchestras and appears in the great opera houses of the world, "that our contemporary popular music-please note that I avoid labeling it 'jazz'is by far the most spontaneous, the most personal, the most characteristic and, by virtue of these qualities, the most important musical expression that America has achieved."

And for the despised ragtime to which in 1914 hardly a serious composer or critic gave a thought, the same authority adds: "I am strongly inclined to believe that the musical historian of the year 2000 A. D. will find the birthday of American music and that of Irving Berlin to be the same."-Gilbert Seldes in the Saturday Evening Post.

Bear Buried Mate

The intelligence of the black bear is attested by the story the settlers near McMillan, Mich., tell of two hunters' experience.

As related, one of them had shot a bear one evening. Finding it too heavy to hang up, he left it on the ground and returned to camp. Next morning with his companions he returned to find the bear gone. Around the scene was the tracks of another

Following these tracks they came to a brush pile. Digging in they found their dead bear. It was evident the bear's mate had come during the night, carried away his dead comrade and attempted to hide his body away from those who would despoil it.

Bargained With Bandit

It is better to have bargained and lost than never to have bargained at

That is the motto of Abraham Rosenstein, who conducts a Baltimore tailoring establishment. When a bandit entered his shop recently he held out $2, at the man's demand for $3, and then offered to split "fifty-fifty" with the robber.

The man refused to split, but Mr. Rosenstein claimed a "moral victory." 'For," he told detectives after it had happened, "he wanted $3, I had only $2-a moral victory. He didn't get what he was after."-Baltimore

Self-Righteous Bolsheviks

Guthrie Beaumont, the brilliant Pittsburgh radical, said on his return from Russia:

"Out of Russia's 3,900 families of nobles, 3,500 have been exiled and dispossessed of all their property by the Bolsheviks. The Bolshevik leader, Krasin, a poor man before the revolution, died recently worth $15,000,000. The other leaders are probably worth make me think of the old saw: "'They who say that money will do anything will do anything for money'."

GAYETY AND COLOR IN EARLY ENGLAND

Solemnity Not a Feature of Medieval Times.

The closer we look at medieval England, the more we shall feel inclined to picture it as young and hardy and Joyous. To begin with, the country was full of color. The churches glowed with stained glass and painted walls; the dresses of the wealthy, men as well as women, were gorgeous and brilliant, and if the peasantry wore more serviceable russets and browns and blues, they usually managed to introduce a splash of red or other bright color in their hoods or kerchiefs.

And the country was full of song. Though the English were not so devoted to music as the Welsh or the Irish, and though the men of the south country were, even in the Twelfth century, less tuneful than the northerners, yet they were a musical race; and with the singing went dancing, and nowhere did the country dance flourish more than in England. Fitzstephen, who wrote a description of London at the end of the Twelfth century, tells of the dancing in the fields which brought to a close a holi-

Medieval London was a gay, busy, prosperous city, with ships of all nations loading and unloading at the riverside, tradesmen calling their wares and crowds buying and bargaining at the stalls and open shop windows. On occasion, too, business would be suspended and the streets thronged with people to watch the king ride by in state, going to be crowned at Westminster abbey or returning from the wars. At such times the houses would be hung with silks and brightly colored cloths, in the open spaces would be built-up stages, covered with decoration, on which were fair women in beautiful dresses, representing virtues, sciences or other allegorical figures, who would recite Latin verses for the king's benefit. In the king's procession would ride his nobles, gorgeous in silk and velvet, their very horses covered with cloth of gold, the mayor and aldermen in scarlet, and four or five hundred citizens, all wearing the same

Though such a pageant as a coronation occurred but rarely, there was every year the excitement of "the marching watch" on the night of Midsummer eve, when the constables and police patrols assembled fully armed and marched through the principal streets, headed by the mayor and aldermen and attended by torch-bearers, each with a straw hat bearing the badge of his company or ward; archers, drums and fifes, and morris dancers; bonfires blazed in the streets and the houses were gay with garlands and bright with lamps.-From "English Life in the Middle Ages," by L. F. Salzman.

Infant Prodigy Is Fifty

American music lovers who can turn their memories to the time when Josef Hofmann was billed as the "infant prodigy," will find it rather difficult to realize that the then youthful pianist is today celebrating his fiftieth birthday anniversar on this date in 1877 that Hofmann first saw the light, in the city of Cracow. His father was a musician and composer of some note and it was from him that the future renowned pianist received his first musical lessons in infancy. His progress was so rapid that at the age of seven he attracted the favorable attention of the great Rubenstein. At ten he made his first visit to the United States, but was compelled to abandon his concert tour because of interference by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. At a later age Hofmann returned to America, and has since been heard in cities throughout the country.—Kansas City Times.

Will Measure Volcano

The United States coast and geodetic survey of the Commerce department is co-operating with the geological survey to determine, by the most accurate survey methods, the exact elevation of Mauna Loa, in Hawall, reputed to be the highest active volcano in the world. The height has been given as 13,675 feet, but this figure may have to be revised somewhat, since the original survey was not made with a high degree of accuracy. The most important point in the survey, from a scientific standpoint, is the question of whether the whole volcanic cone is rising or sinking. This can only be determined by additional accurate surveys at intervals of five to ten years and will eventually furnish scientists with additional information as the "why" of volcanoes.

Misprints

George Doran, the New York pub-Heher, was talking about misprints. "The funniest misprint on record," he said, "was of course the one where the shipping editor's caption was placed over the obituary column by mistake, and a long list of obituaries appeared under the headline, 'Passed Through Hell Gate.'

"But almost as good a misprint was the one about the accident case that

"'The surgeon felt the patient's purse and said there was no hope.' "Another amusing misprint occurred in the financial column of a morning newspaper. The financial editor was discussing a new gold mine company, and the compositor made him say:

"The company is about to offer the public 1,000,000 saares."

Peter and John were on their way to the house of worship. This man had been placed at the entrance of the place of worship where he might receive the sympathetic attention of worshipers.

2. The man (v. 2).

This beggar was infirm from his birth. He was now more than forty years old (4:22) and had brought his ailment with him into the world. When he saw Peter and John he asked alms.

3. The method (vv. 3-8). (1) The man's attention gained

(v. 4). Peter and John commanded him to look on them.

(2) Peter commanded him in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth to rise and walk (v. 6).

(3) Peter took him by the right hand (v. 7),

This was meant to give impetus to his faith—not strength to his ankles. 4. The man's response (v. 8).

Strength came to his feet and anklebones at once. He stood, he walked, he leaped and shouted praises to God. 5. The effect (vv. 9-11).

The people were so filled with wonder and amazement that they ran together to behold this wonderful thing.

(1) This helpless beggar had to be carried to the temple gate. Men and women out of Christ are so helpless that they need to be brought where the light of God can be applied to

(2) Peter taking the man by the hand shows the manner of helping the lost.

11. Peter Witnessing Before the Multitude (2:12-26).

Though this miracle directed the attention of the people to Peter and John, Peter immediately turned their attention from himself to Christ. He told them that it was faith in Jesus Christ whom God had glorified and whom they had deliberately betrayed and crucified that had healed this

III. Peter in Prison for Christ's Sake

It was his fidelity to Christ that brought him this persecution. Observe:

1. The leaders-priests and Sadducees—in this persecution (vv. 1, 2). The priests were intolerant because these new teachers were encroaching upon their functions. 2. The result (vv. 3, 4).

Though they were held in bondage by chains, Christ continued to work. The number of believers had greatly

IV. Peter Witnessing Before the Sanhedrin (4:5-21).

1. The inquiry (vv. 5-7).

This inquiry admitted the reality of the miracle. They wanted to know what it signified.

2. Peter's answer (vv. 8-12). Being filled with the Holy Spirit, Peter calmly and graciously answered. He showed them that they were not on trial as evildoers but for doing good to the helpless and needy man. Since they could not deny the miracle he boldly declared that it had been done in the name of Jesus Christ whom they had crucified and God had raised from the dead.

3. The impression upon the Sanhedrin (vv. 13-22).

(1) They marveled (vv. 1-13). They saw that Peter's behavior and words were as unusual as the miracle. (2) They took knowledge that Peter and John had been with Jesus (v. 13). (3) They forbade them to speak in Christ's name (v. 18). (4) Peter and John's reply (vv.

They expressed their determination to obey God rather than men.

(5) Their release (v. 21). Seeing the people were on their side, there was no way to punish them.

V. The Church at Prayer (vv. 23-31). As soon as Peter and John were set free, they hastened away to their fellow disciples and told them their experience. They praised God for deliverance and prayed for boldness to speak the Word of God.

Many Kinds of Bark

in Use as Medicine The United States Pharmacopoeia lists 17 kinds of bark used in medicine. There are, however, no less than 35 kinds of bark altogether grown in America which are more or less widely used for preparing simple, homemade remedies, although only 17 are classed as "officinals." Some are valued, for example, as febrifuges, chief of which, of course, is the Peruvian bark or cinchona, to which the world owes the priceless boon of quinine.

A second class includes those which exert a cathartic or laxative effect, and of these the most highly prized is the bark of the graceful little buckthorn tree found in California, and known by its Spanish name of cascara sagrada (sacred bark).

A third class includes those which stimulate the flow of one or another of the secretions of the body, such as the saliva, gastric juice, perspiration, mucus, etc. Others are soothing in nature, such as an infusion of slippery elm, and many may be used for preparing soothing drafts in cases of sore throats, etc. Still others are said somewhat vaguely to possess "tonic" properties.

Odd Inspiration Ideas

of Masters of Music

Haydn, when he sat down to compose, always dressed himself with the greatest care, had his hair nicely powdered and put on his best suit. Frederick II had given him a diamond ring, and Haydn declared that, if he happened to begin without it, he could not summon a single idea. He could write only on the finest paper, and was as particular in forming his notes as if he had been engraving them on

Gluck, when he felt inspired to compose, had his piano carried into a beautiful meadow and, with a bottle of champagne on either side of him, composed divinely. Paesillo composed his "Barbiere di Siviglia" and "La Molinara" in bed.

Sachini declared that he never had a moment of inspiration, unless his two favorite cats were sitting one on each shoulder.-Market for Exchange.

He Doesn't Call Now

The thrifty young man often called on a certain girl, but had never taken her to a theater, or movie, or even out to tea. The family had noticed and often commented on what they termed his "stinginess," and all before the girl's ten-year-old brother. One chilly night the youngster was in the drawing room when the thrifty young man was present. The caller, who was sitting close to the fire, said suddenly: "Oh, how I love to sit before your fire and think, think-' Like a flash came an interruption from the ten-year-old: "Think-think of how you are saving money by sitting here."

Monkeys Sing in Chorus

Colobus monkeys indulge in comnunity singing. Very early in the morning and at intervals during the day these denizens of the jungle start their song fests and as soon as the whole troop gets going good, other troops in different parts of the forest join in and the green rafters ring with the remarkable sounds they make, according to Delia J. Akeley, a naturalist. There is a leader of each troop who directs the nature of the emotional expression by raising or lowering the pitch. Some of them sing in a different pitch, much like the bass and contralto of human singing organizations.

Joseph Conrad's Baby

Joseph Conrad, the famous writer of sea tales, wrote a letter to a cousin January 21, 1898, three days after the birth of a son. The letter is included in a group of Conrad's letters published by World's Work. "The doctor says it is a magnificent boy," he wrote. "He has dark hair, huge eyes, and he resembles a monkey. What pains me is that my wife pretends that he also resembles me. Enfin! Do not draw too hasty conclusions from this astonishing concurrence of circumstances. My wife is certainly mistaken."

Not to the Manner Born

Brown was going South to visit his son and wife for several weeks and was being drilled by Mrs. Brown in preparation for the visit. Table manners was one subject in the curriculum and one on which both pupil and instructor worked hard. One day at dinner as Brown poured the contents of his coffee cup into a saucer, he remarked comfortably: "Well, I'll drink you out of the saucer now, but," with a dismal shake of the head, "when I get down South, I'll drink you out of the cup."-Indianapolis News.

English Sparrows

The first English sparrows were brought to America in 1850. They were imported by Nicholas Pike and the other directors of the Brooklyn institute to protect the shade trees from damage by caterpillars. Eight pairs were released the next spring, but none of them survived. In 1853 another shipment was made. During the next twenty years fifteen shipments of English sparrows to the United States took place. -Pathfinder Magazine.

NATURE LAUGHS AT MAN'S PUNY MIGHT

Nothing He Builds Can Withstand Avalanche.

The power of the avalanche is colossal and immeasurable. A small stone breaking loose from the higher mountain levels, gathers and grows; increases in rapidity of motion; bounds from crag to crag, breaking off boulders and pinnacles; tearing up trees and growing, ever growing, until no man-made structure is capable of withstanding its advance. One Good Friday, in the little city of Trail in the Kootenays, a small avalanche, which only slid a few hundred feet, resulting in two houses being spitted together by a pine tree, which was driven through the walls of the two houses, fastening them together as two pieces of paper may be spitted by a pin. The houses, still fastened together, were then dumped over a 50-foot embankment to the road below, to the consternation of the occupants, who fortunately escaped bruises.

All through the Canadian Rockies broken strips of trees, like a big cut roadway, indicate the one-time course of an avalanche.

The colossal Dent du Midi avalanche, which has driven the Rhone from its bed for half a mile, carried away a railway bridge, and swept into a morass of mud and boulders a considerable stretch of the line between Montreux and the Simplon tunnel, is a reminder of the puny impotence of man to control many of the great forces of nature. Nothing can be done to curb the earthquake and the tidal wave, the hurricane and the volcano, the lightning-and the mountain that slides.

Considerable loss of life was only just averted in this case by a railway man who had seen the bridge swept away and rushed back, waving a red flag, to stop a crowded express that was thundering down from the Simplon, along the brink of the Rhone.

Old Lady Got Even

A little old lady was taking her first ride on a railway train. She noticed that at every station the conductor descended from the train, and, after the passengers had debarked, raised his arm and waved his hand in a peculiar manner. Finally she stopped him when he passed through the car and said "Who are you waving at in every town where we stop?"

The train was late, the conductor was grouchy, and he snapped: "I don't know as it's any of your business, but that's what we call the 'highball.' It's my way of telling the engineer to get to h-l out of here." A little later he remembered how gruff he had been to the old lady and his conscience smote him. He went back and said to her: "I'm sorry I spoke to you as I did. Everything has gone wrong today and I felt cross or I would have been more

"Oh! that's all right," said the old lady demurely, and raising her arm she gave the conductor the "highball." -Southern Agriculturist.

Practice Injures Cotton

The Department of Agriculture says that "snapping" as a method of harvesting cotton lowers the grade. The decreased cost in harvesting cotton by the "snap" method may be much more than offset by the expense of passing it through boll extractors and by the loss of value resulting from the lower grades. According to tests made by the department, snapping cotton in 1925 resulted in a loss to the grower of $7.29 a bale as compared with picking. When greater discounts were assessed against the cotton because it was snapped, and when it was sold in the seed, the loss was from approximately $14 to $27 a bale.

Overcame Handicap

Old-fashioned long skirts interfered with Miss Jess Gray Davison learning to play an organ as a girl, but this has not prevented Miss Davison from becoming managing director of an organ manufacturing concern in England. The business has been a family concern since 1750, and Miss Davison took charge on account of the illness of two brothers. Her grandmother regarded it as "unladylike" for Miss Davison to play the organ as a girl because "the long skirts worn in those days might get mixed up with the pedals."

Good Business Woman

Mrs. Graydon Stanus, a collector of Irish glass, started a factory in Peckham, on the outskirts of London, and has made it a paying concern. Mrs. Stanus discovered that delicately tinted glass was scarce, and decided to revive the hand-made glass. She obtained an old bottle factory, engaged a chemist and designed and discovered some artists in hand-made glass who had not made anything by hand for years.-Indianapolis News.

GOD'S MOTHERS

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

VOU can't believe in mother much And not believe in God. For there is something in her touch, Yes, even of her rod, That makes a mother seem to me An agent of Divinity.

So much a mother can forgive, So often has the need, So much like God she has to live She seems a living creed.

Though man may preach some creed Her creed she lives, her creed she is.

Men preach forgiveness, yet they hate,

But mothers day by day Leave open every door and gate, Inviting feet that stray To come returning-first to greet, And last your sinning to repeat.

> THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS By H. IRVING KING

PARSLEY

IN SOME sections of the country it is considered most unlucky to replant old parsley in the garden-that is to set out a parsley root which you have had growing in a box in the house all winter-as it endangers the life of the head of the family. Always sow fresh seed. This superstition we inherit, along with parsley itself, from the days when Greece and the gods were young together. Parsley was an indigenous plant in Greece, growing wild and with special profusion in Argolis, where was the vale of Nemea, in which stood the temple of Nemean Zeus, and where Hercules killed the Nemean lion.

Parsley-possibly from its availability in making wreaths and garlands for his shrine-appears to have come to be regarded in the valley as the specially favored plant of Nemean Zeus, and so when, some five hundred years before the Christian era, the Nemean games were instituted in memory of a local young hero, Archemorus, who died from the bite of a serpent as the expedition of "The Seven Against Thebes" was passing through the place—a crown of wild parsley was the reward of the victor. Now wild parsley being dedicated to such purposes was naturally protected: probably the penalty for the profanation of rooting it up was death. And here we get the modern superstition that the planting of an old parsley root in the garden is likely to cause the death of the head of the family. Only three columns of the temple of Nemean Zeus remain standing; yet many a man today hesitates to plant an old parsley root in his garden, and you will find in many of the modern books of "Dreams and Omens"

a warning against doing so. (© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Two Kinds of "Going Away."

The number of businesses and professions that seem to be actually wanted locally, as demonstrated by liberal local patronage, is decreasing. Small towns are losing their assortment of small tradesmen and mechanics, and many of their stores; not so much because those who are fitted for many classes of work want to go to the larger places, as because the folks in the small places are sending them

Enlarging the range of shopping has brought about a shortage at home of certain industries that, at times, we would be glad to make use of. In short, we can't keep on discouraging certain things at most times, and still expect them to be present with us the few times that we would be glad to have them; so the "going away" buying has some drawbacks.

There are frequently heard expressions that the local business places are "behind the times"; they "never have what I want," or "the prices are too high," and others of like kind; and there may be some truth in them, but the more likely truth is that some folks actually do not want to buy at home no matter how large the selection, or how low the price.

This is not meant to be a "buy at home" sermon. There are often perfectly sound reasons why such a rule can not be worked in all instances. But, we do mean to make it clear that we can not consistently use our influence to drive business ventures away from a town, and still expect them to remain because we may some time—when we can't do any better—need

After all, our very selfishness may ometimes return to inconvenience us. Just expecting a certain lot of business people to stay at a place, to pay rents and taxes, and to be patronized occasionally does not always work out as expected. The "going away" habit can work both ways.
