

ARRESTED IN STULLER DEATH CASE

Howard F. Baer, near Littlestown Charged with Manslaughter.

The Hanover Record-Herald, of Wednesday, contains the following news article concerning the recent killing of Summerfield Stuller, formerly a resident of Taneytown district. "Harvey E. Baer, 68 years, residing near Littlestown, was today charged with manslaughter in the death of Summerfield Stuller, Mt. Pleasant, who was mortally injured when struck by an auto on September 27, last, while walking on the Hanover-Littlestown highway. At an inquest held last night in the office of Justice of Peace L. D. Sell, Baer denied hitting the man but admitted that he had a few drinks on the evening of accident and was at the scene shortly after it happened. Baer was arrested on a charge of driving a vehicle while under the influence of liquor and was released upon the posting of $500 bail.

The coroners jury empaneled by Dr. L. U. Zech, of York, found that "on the 27th day of September, 1928, at the Hanover General Hospital, Summerfield Stuller came to his death from injuries sustained by being hit by an automobile driven by Harvey F. Baer, Littlestown, R. D. 2, while under the influence of liquor or some narcotic drugs."

Baer was taken into custody again and was taken to Gettysburg where he will face the manslaughter charge in the Adams County Court since the crime was committed in Adams county. It is possible that the man will be given another hearing before a Gettysburg attorney or he may be held under higher bail for the action of the County Court."

Howard Baer who had been arrested on a charge of operating a motor vehicle while drunk, on Monday, by Corporal Boate was represented at the inquest by Attorney William Hersh, of Gettysburg. H. C. Corbin, race horse driver who was at Hazletown with his string of horses positively identified Baer as the man who offered to pay Corbin and his party to take Stuller to Hanover when they stopped at the scene of the accident. Mr. Corbin and a party of five including two reinmen, one from Mineola, Long Island, and the other from Washington, and his wife and Miss Myrna Sheaffer, of Hanover, were enroute to Taneytown for a luncheon at Sauble's Inn at the time."

Home-makers' Activities.

During the past year many of the Home-makers' have asked for a hooked rug demonstration. In order that all of the women in the county may avail themselves of the opportunity to learn to make hooked rugs, we are planning to have an office demonstration on Tuesday, October 30, Hutzler Brothers, Baltimore, have kindly consented to give this demonstration. The demonstration will be held from 10:00 A. M. to 4:30 P. M., and we hope that as many as possible can attend this demonstration. Don't forget the date and time, Tuesday, Oct. 30, from 10:00 to 4:30.

Twenty Home-makers' representing the Berrett, Hillsdale, Keymar, Hampstead, Manchester, Mt. Airy, New Windsor, Taneytown, Union Bridge, Westminster, and Winfield Clubs, met at the Extension Service office on Monday, Sept. 24 to make plans for the Educational exhibit to be held in connection with the corn show, on Dec. 11, 12 and 13. The Home management project for this year was taken as the basis for the exhibit, and will include a model kitchen, Home-makers helps, and other management features.

It was decided that the Home-makers' Clubs would serve tea during the three afternoons of the Corn Show. Each Club will be asked to contribute small cakes and cookies for this. A small sum will be charged for the tea and cakes and the proceeds will be used to help defray the expenses of the exhibit. Mrs. J. Edgar Myers, Westminster, was appointed chairman of the tea.

Poster committees were appointed to help with the posters for the exhibit. Committees to help arrange and take down exhibits will later be appointed. Clubs will be notified as to time and place of committee meetings.

Republican Tour of County.

A Republican tour of the county will be held next Wednesday, beginning at Taneytown at 12 o'clock. (See advertisement in this issue). This tour had at first been scheduled to start at Hampstead, but later had to be changed on account of Mr. Goldsborough being in Cumberland at that time in the week, making it more convenient to start at Taneytown. Republicans from all parts of the county are asked to gather at Taneytown and join in the tour, ending at Westminster at night.

Poling, Fosdick, Cadman.

Dr. Daniel A. Poling, Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick and Dr. S. Parker Cadman will again begin broadcasting next Sunday, representing the N. Y. Federation of Churches; Dr. Poling from WJZ at 3 o'clock, Dr. Cadman over WEAF at 4 o'clock, and Dr. Fosdick over WJZ at 5:30, each Sunday afternoon. All of these men are very able and popular speakers, and each has his special congregation of listeners. It costs many thousands of dollars to carry on this ministry, and the unseen audience will be asked and expected to contribute.

TANEYTOWN AS IT IS

In Every Way a Desirable Town for Present and Future.

The growth and improvement of Taneytown have been very marked within the past ten years. Those who left the town a dozen or more years ago, and have not kept in close touch with it since, who come back now on a visit "hardly know" the place and express their surprise at the changes that are not so apparent to those who have lived here and seen the improvement come about gradually. And, the town is not by any means finished.

While the growth has not been on the "boom" order it has been decided, and of the healthy permanent order. Better streets, better homes, and general attractiveness has been the rule, and without any great additions in the way of "manufacturing," a feature that is esteemed as of so great a value in any place; and yet, the very fact that a town is not a "manufacturing town" has its advantages in the desirable home life and the absence of the more or less uncertain character of the population that manufacturing enterprises so often attract.

Taneytown has plenty of business as the centre of one of the best agricultural sections of the state. It is a safe town, both for business such as it supports and for property investments. It does not depend on any one or more big concerns closing down and causing "hard times," but its properties are in healthy demand, and its houses always filled.

Perhaps there is a little too much of a self-satisfied feeling on the part of its long-time residents, and not enough of that usually goes by the name of "enterprise," but with all that, it is a good place in which to live modestly and to transact business in a healthy way; and even though riches do not come rapidly, and there is nothing very exciting connected with the town in any way, it is none the less very much on the map when one considers that the mere making of money is not necessarily a sure road to happiness.

It possibly always will be largely a town of homes and modest business enterprises, and has plenty of room for more. It invites them with its fine location, its wide streets, the excellence of its public water supply, its high school, churches, banks, stores and everything that stands for the best kind of home life; and, should manufacturing be a future possibility, it has plenty of room for that too.

Rebekahs Enjoy Hot Luncheon.

(For the Record).

The Sisters and Brothers of the Rebekah Lodge, Taneytown, met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Galt, at Keymar, on Tuesday evening, Miss Anna E. Hawk, being a member of the Lodge, it gave her an evening of pleasure, which was appreciated very much. The evening was spent in playing games, music and conversation, and all had a good time. Hot lunch was served, which was enjoyed by all.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Sell, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hiltner, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Garber, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fair, Mr. and Mrs. Birnie Babylon, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Crebs, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Dairy Specialist Leaves Carroll for Wisconsin.

The Dairy farmers of Carroll county deeply regret that Mr. John F. Randag must leave the county. Mr. Randag leaves many friends in Carroll County and his work has been immeasurable in dollars and cents. He is a native of Holland where dairying is the leading industry. Having grown up in the dairy business Mr. Randag is well equipped for the work he has been doing in Carroll County as well as for the work he is to do with the Pet Milk people. His new field of work as dairy specialist offers him many opportunities to be of service to the dairymen of Wisconsin, where he will be located.

The Dairy Herd Improvement work carried on by Mr. Randag here in the county, is well established and it will be difficult to secure a man to take his place. County Agent Burns states today that he has a man in view now that he feels will be able to take over the work.

The County Registration.

There has been a heavy new registration in this county, but it will be impossible to state exactly the net increase in the vote, or its party division, until after next Tuesday, when the Registrars sit for the purpose of correcting the lists by striking off deaths and removals. Without counting the strike-offs, the Republicans claim to have gained over 300 votes.

BOARD OF EDUCATION MONTHLY MEETING.

Applications Made for Various Needed Improvements.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Education was called to order at 10:30 A. M., on Wednesday, Oct. 3, 1928, in the office of the Board. Vice-president Koons called the meeting to order in the absence of President Wantz. President Wantz reported present at 11:00.

The minutes of the previous meeting were approved as read. All the bills were approved as presented to the Board with the exception of the bill for $25.00 from Burgess Bell for decorating the Union St. Colored School building. Due to his death, the Board directed that this bill could not be paid until after administration papers had been filed.

The Treasurer reported the receipt of a conscience reimbursement of $1.00 mailed from Hanover.

Requests for contributions to local funds raised for purposes indicated were presented to the Board which contributed $10.00 to the amount already raised in each case and in the cases of Mechanicsville School, West End School, and Grace Land School, according to the general rule, it granted the contribution 10% of the amounts raised which amount to $55.90, $11.80, and $15.88, respectively.

Mechanicsville, raised $559.03 for equipment; West End, $117.00; Grace Land, $158.88; Hooper, $10.50; Union Bridge, $49.30.

The application of Everett Haines to be reinstated in his scholarship to Western Maryland College was considered on the basis of the reasons given by him, and the Board ordered him to be re-appointed to his scholarship from Franklin District.

Robert Etzler, from Mt. Airy District was awarded the vacant tuition scholarship from Mt. Airy District to Western Maryland College.

J. Walton Howdew reported to fill the vacant tuition scholarship to St. John's College. He has refused to accept it and the vacancy, therefore, still exists.

The following trustees were appointed: Union Bridge, Mrs. D. C. Bankert, Ebbvale, Geo. A. Sullivan.

The auditors' report for the accounts of the past fiscal year was noted and authorized to be placed on file and a condensed form of the report authorized to be published.

A proposal to give consideration to a Night School, in Westminster, was given favorable consideration and the Superintendent was authorized to take such steps as might be necessary to bring it about if there seemed to be sufficient demands for it.

The Superintendent reported the extreme congestion existing in all of the Westminster Schools, in Sykesville, and in Manchester.

Application was made by the Parent-Teacher Association of Charles Carroll for funds to improve the frontage at this school. The Board was unable to undertake this work for this year, but the amount necessary will be placed in the budget in the spring to be paid next year.

The application of the Winfield community for a light service to be installed in the school, and a well and pump, was considered. The importance of these items, especially the well, was not questioned in the least by the Board, and the work of digging the well and installing of the pump was authorized to be done with the understanding that the Winfield community would pay one-half of the cost but the installation of the lights was disapproved, so far as cost was concerned, on the part of the Board of Education.

The application of the Taneytown School for the installation of an electric machine saw, to cost about $250, was considered. The Board directed that if the community would pay one-half of the cost, the Board would agree to put it in next year's budget and take over the payment of the cost.

A delegation representing certain parents in and around Taylorsville made application for the reconsideration of the transportation of the children in that community. The Board gave a hearing and notified them that the situation would not be changed. The meeting adjourned at 12:30.

The Players Shares.

The players' pool of the World Series baseball games amounts to $332,309.52. Of this sum $293,315.62 goes to the players of the world series contenders, the winning New York Yankees, and the losing St. Louis Cardinals; and the remaining $125,920.98 goes to the other six first division clubs in the two leagues.

The division among the players includes coaches, club managers and a few part-time players, and will result about as follows: the New York Yankees will get about $5532, each; the St. Louis Cardinals about $4197, each; the Athletics and N. Y. Giants, the second-standing teams, about $1250, each; the third-standing teams, the Chicago Cubs and St. Louis Browns about $1000, each; and the fourth standing teams, Washington and Pittsburgh, about $400, each.

The total receipts, of course, were greatly more than the $332,309.52 which was the sum remaining after the expenses and the winning club's percentage, came out.

The total receipts were $777,290. Out of this was paid the government tax, the expenses, each League's share etc. The paid attendance at the four games was about $200,000.

FOR MODERN ELECTION LAWS

Non-partisan Committee Suggested to Study the Question.

The suggestion of Willis R. Jones, Assistant Attorney General, that a non-partisan committee be appointed to study the election laws of Maryland, with a view to making them less cumbersome and less expensive, as well as more popular, has been widely approved throughout the state. The proposition is to amend the registration laws as well as those applying to elections.

This is not a new proposition, but rather only the latest one, and it comes at a time when years of trial of the laws as they are demonstrate their antiquated and slow-moving provisions.

Comments on Mr. Jones' suggestion by many prominent men in the state, all show the same view—that the laws should be revised and simplified, and that voting, instead of being a difficult act should be an easy one, yet at the same time be properly safeguarded.

Hunting Laws Interpreted.

With the closing of the Squirrel and Dove season, state-wide in effect September 30, there will be no open season on any species of upland game in this State until November 10th, at which time, the season will open on squirrels, doves, woodcock, English or Mongolian pheasant, ruffed grouse, rabbit, wild turkey and quail, and remain open until December 31st, following. (However, there is a closed season on wild turkey in Garrett county until November 10, 1930.)

We have received reports to the effect that some misunderstanding has been created relative to the hunting of doves in Maryland. The State law provides an open season, September 1 to September 30, for doves in all counties, except Garrett, Allegany, Washington, Howard and Baltimore. The law provides an open season in the five counties on Doves, November 10th, to December 31st. The Federal regulation provides an open season for Doves, September 1st, to December 15th. Federal regulations on game supersede State laws unless said State law further protects. In this case the State further protects doves by closing the season October 1st, to November 9th, therefore, supersedes the Federal regulations. Nov. State law provides an open season on doves November 10th, to December 31st. The Federal regulation will supersede this and the open season for doves is November 10th, and closes December 15th.

The Game Division of the Conservation Department of Maryland has placed additional Deputies throughout the State to take care of the situation this hunting season and persons found afield with dog or gun between October 1st, and November 10th, must account and give a good reason otherwise our Wardens are liable to apprehend them and prosecute for violation of the game laws by hunting during closed season. The open season for hunting wildfowl, including wild geese, ducks and brant is Nov. 1st, to January 31st, inclusive. Wildfowl has been arriving in Maryland waters since the last week in August, numbers increasing weekly and we anticipate a wonderful hunting season for the wildfowl hunters.—E. Lee Le Compte, State Game Warden.

The First National Bank, Westminster, Remodeled.

The First National Bank, at Westminster, now has the most handsome equipped bank building in the county, and was open to public inspection, on Monday. The most of the work of remodeling is on the interior, which is practically entirely new and up-to-date in every respect.

The lobby floor and wainscoting are of marble, while the furnishings are of marble and bronze. An alcove has been fitted up specially for lady customers, and two bronze desks are provided for men, all fully equipped with necessary conveniences; while the furniture and equipment for the working force has also been provided to harmonize with the rest of the building.

The equipment and accommodations for the vaults; and rooms for the transaction of business privately, are in harmony with the rest of the remodeling; in fact, it would be difficult to suggest any additional improvements on the interior generally.

In the directors' room are portraits of the following presidents, in oil: Alfred Troxell, Augustus Shriver, Granville S. Haines and John L. Reifsrider. The pictures of Dr. Jacob J. Weaver, and the present president, Dr. Lewis K. Shriver, are not yet in place. Since the organization of the bank 64 years ago the bank has had two cashiers, Wm. A. Cunningham 1865 to 1875, and George R. Gehr 1875 to the present time.

Electoral Vote Cards.

As the election draws nearer, more interest is being taken in marking our electoral vote cards, and we expect quite a lot of them to be returned. Those who do not have a card, can be supplied at our office. As has been previously stated, we will publish the names and totals of the ten who come nearest to foretelling the result.

We will be especially glad to supply voters at a distance with the cards if they will send for them. The card shows the electoral vote of 1924, and space is left for marking the predicted vote of 1928.

Ye who are inclined to preach, listen to me! If you would try to make virtue as attractive as you have succeeded in making wickedness, you'd be surprised at the results.

IMMENSE GAINS IN NEW VOTES THIS YEAR

This is the Report from all States, Especially in the South

There is an immense gain in the registration all over the country that is puzzling the political managers, and a great portion of this gain is in women voters. The gain is especially large in the southern states, figured on a percentage basis, the gain in Virginia, for instance, being over 150,000.

Without doubt, whichever party has gotten out the greatest portion of this new vote, will have its chances very materially increased; and along with this new vote, a million or more votes that usually do not come out—the stay-at-homes—are sure to be out this year, and that makes another addition to the other many problems connected with the campaign.

Any forecasts based on the figures must of necessity be little more than mere guess-work. The probability is that in Democratic states the increase is Democratic, and Republican in Republican states; and as there is a pronounced shift this year from one party to the other, it may be that the shift will also attach to the new votes. Anyway, it tells the story that there is unusual interest in the election, and that for once the majority will actually express itself at the polls.

Lunches for School Children.

With the coming of the cooler days, mothers of young children who have to carry their lunch to school, will welcome the suggestions that are made in bulletins obtainable from the U. S. Bureau of Education in Washington, and the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the Maryland State Department of Health. In calling attention to these publications, Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health, said "One of the best ways of strengthening the growing child's power of resistance against disease, is by providing him or her with well-balanced, nourishing meals. Children as a rule, eat a hasty breakfast before rushing off to school, and for a child who leaves home early in the morning and spends the day in school, a warm meal in the middle of the day, is a necessity."

"A simple arrangement that has been tried out in a number of the rural schools, makes it possible for food prepared at home to be warmed before it is eaten at school. The food to be heated is carried in wide-mouthed glass jars, and the children are encouraged to bring cream soups, meat and vegetable stews, combinations of cooked vegetables—things that are both nourishing and palatable."

"The equipment for heating consists of the wash boiler fitted with a double row of wire racks, for holding the food, the lower rack elevated about two inches from the bottom of the boiler, to prevent the jars from touching the water which just fills the bottom. On reaching school in the morning, each child places his jar in the rack—each jar being marked in such a way that the child can identify his own property."

"During the early morning recess, or shortly before the regular lunch hour, the teacher, or one of the older boys or girls, moves the boiler forward on the stove and after a half hour steaming, the food is ready to be eaten."

"A number of teachers take advantage of the opportunity offered in connection with the lunch hour, to preface the serving of the food, with a handwashing drill, which serves the double purpose of cleanliness and of getting rid of some of the germs that have passed from hand to hand during the morning in the customary exchange of school equipment."

"Under the title of 'Diet for the Young Child' the State Department of Health has published a pamphlet, prepared by the Bureau of Child Hygiene, which contains suggestions for the diet of the children who are just entering school and who need all the health and strength they can muster to stand the strain, physically and mentally of the change to school life. A copy of the pamphlet may be obtained by writing to the State Department of Health, 2411 North Charles St., Baltimore. A bulletin on school lunches for the older children may be obtained by writing to the U. S. Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C."

Special Meeting Md. Classis of the Reformed Church.

Ministers and delegates elders from all the Churches will be in attendance. Other interested members of the congregations in the Classis are also invited to attend. The meeting begins at 10 o'clock in the morning.

POLITICS THIS WEEK

Condensed Clippings from Around the Political Horizon.

It is quite probable that the whole country is as near ready for the great event on Nov. 6, as it is going to be, and that the three weeks yet intervening will represent largely unnecessary excitement and expense. The radio is largely the cause of the extent of the education of the voters. At any rate, the platforms, and more especially the individuality and personal opinions of candidates, are well known, and the voters are more apt to be mixed-up than enlightened, in the remainder of the campaign.

While the fact will hardly have any effect whatever on the general result of the coming election, the present tear-up in Philadelphia is most remarkable, because ordinarily it would have been considered playing good politics for Mayor Mackey to have withheld his "drying-up" drive in the city until after the big day on Nov. 6. At any rate, he is doing a most courageous thing that should have been done long ago.

The Smith regulars and the anti-Smith forces are contesting for a number of southern states for the first time in history that the Democratic party has split in the South. The states chiefly affected are Tennessee, Virginia, North Carolina, Florida, Alabama and Texas.

Herbert Hoover spoke at Elizabeth-Town, Tenn., last Saturday afternoon to over 40,000 persons. Part of his address was historical, much of it covered the farm question, while the tariff, immigration and the 18th Amendment were briefly considered from his standpoint and that of his party. No personalities were indulged in, and fairness in the campaign was stressed.

Senator Curtis, republican candidate for vice-president, who has been campaigning more strenuously than any of the principals, carries his hand in a sling as the result of an accident, and has almost lost his voice from much speaking.

The Republican State Campaign Committee will hold a mass meeting in the Armory, Westminster, on Wednesday night, the 17th. Phillips Lee Goldsborough, candidate for U. S. Senate, Linwood L. Clarke, candidate for Congress, and others, will be the speakers.

Chairman Raskob has contributed $50,000, to the Democratic campaign fund, and he now estimates that $5,000,000 will be required. Something over $1,500,000 has been paid in. The Republican fund, at last report, was about $1,750,000.

The Hoover campaign in Florida may be helped by the fact that the names of all six of his electors commence with the letter A as follows: Abbott, Acker, Aldrick, Ames, Anderson and Ausherman. In that state it is necessary to mark in the square on the ballot for each elector.

The Democratic candidate for Senator, in Wisconsin, has withdrawn in favor of Le Follette, Progressive Republican, saying "La Follette is just as much in favor of the Governor Smith program as I am," which is a bid for Progressive votes for Smith in the state.

Gov. Smith started on his second campaign tour, on Wednesday, for a speech at Louisville, Ky., Saturday night. His train made stops at Richmond, Raleigh, Chattanooga, Nashville and other places, where he held informal receptions and made short addresses.

The distribution among the creditors of Frank L. Miller, deceased, was ratified by the Court.

According to Thomas Wolfe, division traffic manager for the National Air Transport Company, August showed a 60 percent increase in air mail tonnage over July. Rates coming down has evidently resulted in more mail going up.

It is all right for a young man in the United States to go West and grow up with the country; but he can never go wet and grow up with it.

The Hearst Papers Polls.

In response to our inquiry to the Baltimore News as to whether the Hearst paper polls represented a fair portion of the Negro vote, and the vote usually classed as "foreign," or merely the vote of representative readers of the Hearst papers, the following reply was received from The News.

"Appreciating the point made in your letter of Oct. 1—the importance of having all classes represented in the polls—the Hearst papers have endeavored to obtain a fair representation from every element of the population, notwithstanding the difficulties presented.

In general, the method has been to use voting registration lists where these are obtainable, and automobile registration lists otherwise, post card ballots being sent out according to lists. In some circumstances, the house-to-house canvass has been employed.

Naturally, any comprehensive census will include a large number of Hearst readers, but that fact has nothing to do with their being asked to participate in the poll."

We give the letter for what our readers may consider it to be worth as a reply to our very important question, which has direct bearing on the value of these polls as they represent all classes of voters.

We have no doubt that both the Hearst and Literary Digest polls are being fairly taken as they represent the classes reached; but, voting is a very general privilege and fact, and unless the polls also fairly include the classes we have designated, they are not to be depended on as indicating actual results on Nov. 6th.

Attitudes that Don't Pay.

Every man (or woman) owes it to life's opportunities to make the best of them. We have a new lot each day, and the same ones do not come twice—they come in like kind, but not just the same. Like it is said of the little bee that "improves each shining hour," and like the old saying "Make hay while the Sun shines," we should of course look out for money-making and money-saving—not as a sole object in life, nor even as a main object, but as properly met with opportunities.

It may have been noted by those who read The Record closely that for several months we have been publishing numerous articles on "Thrift" by S. W. Straus; and they are little gems, full of healthy bits of thought. Undoubtedly we should all practice healthy, justifiable, kindly "thrift" which of course does not mean pinching every penny we get, nor driving sordid bargains at every opportunity.

At best, we can plan and scheme and "play for keeps" only so far. We can cut down our contributions to the church to the barest respectability, deny all contributions to worthy charity, charge the highest possible amount for our service, cut expenses to the minimum; and suddenly, in a day, or an hour, all our selfish planning is upset by some unexpected happening, and we are made feel our own weakness, and the very littleness, of our planning.

So, in the final analysis of things, many of our plans don't pay. We take the chance of making ourselves unpopular, even care but little whether we are respected or not, and cut the lines of good-fellowship and generosity as closely as we dare, and then wonder why people say mean things about us, and why we are not looked up to as a citizen.

No, it doesn't pay to be too strenuous in our plans for self. Actually we get the best out of life by being liberal, and not watching for direct prompt pay from every dollar we give away. We earn only by suffering of the Divine Ruler; and surely this earning is not meant wholly for us, but that we should invest it wisely, not only for our own good but for the good of those less favored than we with opportunities.

Mere popularity is not always a valuable possession. It alights frequently in improper places, and sometimes costs more than it is worth. The more important thing is public respect, and when this is accompanied with neighborhood popularity, we have reached about the height of at least the world's estimate of us; and when we have neither, it is a pretty sure sign that our neighborhood knows us better than we know ourselves, or that we have been sized up about right.

Opposes Frills in Education.

Dr. Robinson C. Jones, superintendent of Cleveland schools, who recently visited the schools in Baltimore, left it to be known very clearly that he favors what he termed a return to "ham and eggs" in teaching before decorations are added, and opposed mere "mental gymnastics" and "frills" in education.

He stated that the time had come to have tests, to get down to fundamentals, and he is conducting them in Cleveland. He also declared in favor of forming a line for the fast moving student who can complete the course when 16 years old, and would cut out higher geometry and such occupations as basket weaving in schools.

It is reassuring when school officials of this class interest themselves in the sound fundamentals of an education. For instance, he stated that recently a 19-year-old student asked him the proper use of the words "there" and "their." He did not know which to use, never having had the difference explained.

If Superintendent Jones will go further and examine into the high cost of schools, he will perform an actual service to burdened tax-payers; but, perhaps if a lot of the "gymnastics" and "frills" are removed, the cost will drop.

The Question of Sincerity.

Attempting to establish the fact that a man is insincere in his advocacy of prohibition because he may occasionally "take a drink," is mighty poor argument. The fact is, there are but few persons who always practice all of their good profession in every detail, yet the general professions and practices of such individuals, in their sum total, make the world as good as it is.

In the matter of partaking of liquor in moderation, some can perhaps do it safely, while the most can not; and a man of the former class, who would personally like to indulge occasionally, yet who is willing to forego his own liberty in this direction for the sake of the greater good to the greater number, is to be commended rather than condemned.

Also, it is often brought up that a man who was once a drinker, but who is now an abstainer, has no right to pose as a strict anti-liquorite; but this sort of argument denies the existence of genuine repentance of wrongdoing, contrary to the teachings of God's word, and shows that the one using the argument is himself an unregenerate.

If all would strictly avoid even the slightest appearance of evil in all of their conduct, the whole world would be absolutely free from sin; but this is one of the impossible things; so, the best that anyone can do is stand for the right as nearly as it is humanly possible to do; and the worst thing that anyone can do is to malign those who are openly on the side of right, even though not perfect.

And, even taking it as an absolute wrong not to always set the best example to those about us, there is still a difference attaching to the kind of man who does it. The public official who votes right on moral questions, when that vote means the making of good laws, is of decidedly more importance than the man who is merely one of the governed and has no power to legislate. How a man openly uses his political power, is of vastly more importance than how that man may exercise his own personal habits.

Home Owners, or Farm Hands?

Prominent among the remedies suggested for unfavorable conditions in the agricultural industry of the United States is the proposal put forward by some city students of the farm relief problem that the system of individual farm holdings should be abandoned, and that farming enterprises should be carried on by great corporations owning large areas of land. The proposition is based upon the assumed advantages of mass production, as illustrated in certain manufacturing industries, and instances are cited where conditions of capital operating on a large scale have been successful in growing wheat, fruit, and some other crops. Data in support of the plan are said to be found in the results of experiments by Henry Ford on his Dearborn farm, but as figures of net earnings, taking into consideration cost of land, equipment, taxes, etc., have not been furnished by Mr. Ford, the validity of his enterprise as a proof of corporation farming can hardly be granted.

Neither can it be admitted that the success of such great combinations of iron and steel-making plans as the United States Steel Corporation proves anything more than that consolidation makes larger profits possible. It is not claimed that the prices of iron and steel, in the many forms in which they reach the consumer, have been reduced by reason of more efficient production. In the field of retail merchandising the great department bazaars have not found it possible to reduce the cost of selling, despite vast increases in their volume of business.

Aside from the question as to whether corporations engaged in farming might make more money for their stockholders than is now made by the individual farmers, there is another aspect of the problem that is much more important than the matter of profits. The 6,000,000 farms of the United States, chiefly owned by the men who live and work upon them, although farm tenancy has shown a deplorable increasing tendency, are not merely factories for producing wheat, corn and meat. They are homes, with all that the word connotes, and it is difficult to understand how anyone familiar with conditions in practically all the rural regions of the United States, could contemplate changing these proprietors of their own industry into wandering farm hands earning wages for a few months each year.—Christian Science Monitor.

Vacation in Mexico.

Why on earth do you go to Mexico? And in Summer! It wouldn't take you much longer to go to Europe! This was the comment, spoken or implied, of nearly everyone to whom I announced my intention of accepting Dr. Hubert Herring's invitation to join his study group in Mexico City which is now part of the historic University of Mexico.

At present, the comments of my acquaintances are characteristic of our general American ignorance about Mexico. Travel means to them going to Europe. Mexico is in their minds, a land of heat, of bandits, and of oil wells. Naturally we didn't feel that way about it or my husband and I should not have gone but we did have several surprises.

First, the scenery. As the train traveled over the desert with its primitive valleys, its giant cacti, its picturesque people, and climbed up and up among its cubistic mountains, I kept saying "Why haven't I ever heard about this? Why don't artists flock here instead of to Brittany or Switzerland or Italy?"

Second, the people. I had expected them to be antagonistic, fiery, a little wild or uncontrolled. I was ready with all my most ingratiating manners and retiring graces. Instead I found the people of all social classes kindly, gentle, responsive, hospitable and with a sense of humor. When our car broke down, when we were caught in the rain, when the bus had to be pushed up hill, when the train was over-crowded, when some one was hurt, they came to the rescue in a friendly, helpful way. Always they answered our innumerable questions cheerfully.

The women and children wrapped in their somber "rebosos" (the Indians loved bright colors but were forbidden by the Spaniards to wear them) carrying their water jugs or their baskets of fruit suggest the Holy Land.

In general the people seem unbelievably poor. They live in one-room mud floored houses often without furniture other than tiny stools and straw mats. A light is kept burning constantly before a sacred picture cross in one corner. Cooking is done out of doors in small metal or pottery tripods. Food is highly seasoned and monotonous. In fact, insufficient food is supposed to be the cause of the wide spread drinking.

A third thing that surprised me was the consciousness of antiquity that flavors the country. Mexico is part of the new world yet it seems as old as Egypt without its pyramids, its relics of ancient art and customs, its layers of different civilizations and races its longings and its ruins, its palaces, its cathedrals. It makes us seem garishly new and crude.

Of course, no opinions based on so short a sojourn in a foreign country are worth taking seriously but I got the feeling that the country is also very young and alive—young with the youth of new Turkey, young India, Nationalist China. In education and art they are bounding ahead marvelously. In almost every field there is a realization of their problems and a zeal for solving them that is infectious. Here is a country in making! What a joy to take some small part in helping it forward!—Mildred Scott Olmstead, Friends' Peace Committee.

5c IS ENOUGH FOR A GOOD SMOKE

It Buys a Dandy Cigar—If You're a Good Picker

No doubt you've done your share of hunting for "a good five-cent smoke." And finally decided "there ain't no such thing." Wait—here's the liveliest tip ever handed you: Havana Ribbon. Try that cigar, sir, and you'll be playing five-cent limit till the cows come home.

Havana Ribbon is as different from ordinary five-centers as a home run is different from a pop fly. That's because we've landed squarely on the secret of what makes a cigar good: Ripe tobacco. Unlike the average nickel cigar, Havana Ribbon contains no bitter under-ripe nor flat-tasting over-ripe leaves. No "scraps" or cuttings discarded in the making of higher priced cigars. But only long-filler, fully-ripe leaves from the mid-section of choice tobacco plants. "Sounds reasonable," you say. Why, man, it's nothing short of amazing! Sold everywhere. Also Practical Pocket Packages of five cigars.

Ancients Found Many Uses for the Ostrich

Several ancient nations found the ostrich a useful as well as a weird bird, a writer in the Detroit News relates. In Mesopotamia, 5,000 years ago, artisans fashioned drinking cups from ostrich eggs. The top was sliced off, the edges were smoothed and a pottery lid overlaid with bitumen was fitted. The pious Spartans are said to have used an ostrich egg to perpetrate a religious fraud, they having placed on exhibition the "actual" egg laid by Leda after Zeus had visited her in the form of a swan, and from which Castor and Pollux were hatched. Egyptians found ostrich feathers useful for ornament and the princesses had ostrich feather fans. Both the feathers and eggs were highly prized tributes from tribes to the south. In China, Chang K'ien, on his return from Persia in 200 B. C., brought something almost as strange as China's first grapes; it was a tale of a bird he had seen whose "eggs were as large as pottery jars." The Chinese were skeptical of such a story, but fortunately for Chang the emperor of Parthia later sent some ostrich eggs as a tribute to the Chinese court. In 101 A. D. some live ostriches reached China and they were at once dubbed "camel-sparrows."

Spirit of Conciseness in Army Man's Report

Army men have always been noted for graphic speech, and a soldier stationed at Fort McArthur upheld tradition early one morning when his home base was being threatened by a fire nearby. The fire took place about two o'clock and that meant the morning paper men had to hurry to get the news, so that it could be read at the breakfast table.

Reporters from the Times were dispatched to the scene in taxicabs, but an "inside man" also called the arsenal by phone to see what he could learn in advance. "How close is the fire to you?" the rewrite man asked the soldier.

"I can split it," was the army man's ready reply.—Los Angeles Times

Make Them Pretty

Do your summer menus look tempting? The appeal to the eye is an important appetite appeal, especially on hot, jaded days.

One sure way of gaining inviting variety in your menus is to serve your vegetables and fruits in attractive molds. When the thermometer soars, try the following recipes:

Delicious Molded Salads

Jellied Asparagus and Pepper Salad: To the juice from one can asparagus tips add enough water to make one cup of liquid. Add one bay leaf and one sprig of celery tops, and boil three minutes. Strain and add one tablespoon gelatin softened in a little cold water, and stir until dissolved. Add one and one-half green peppers, finely diced, one diced boiled carrot, and one-fourth teaspoon salt. Arrange asparagus tips, tip end down, around the edge of a fluted mold, so that when it is unmolded, the tips will be up. Pour gelatin mixture in the center and chill. Unmold on lettuce and serve with mayonnaise.

Molded Cream Cheese and Fruit Salad: Soak one-half teaspoon gelatin in one tablespoon cold water, and then dissolve in two tablespoons hot milk. Add two cream cheeses, mashed and seasoned with one-half teaspoon salt and one-eighth teaspoon paprika. Fold in one cup of heavy cream, whipped. Pour into a ring mold and chill. Drain one can of Fruits for Salads and chill. When ready to serve, unmold the cheese ring on a large serving plate. Fill the center cavity with the fruit and pour over it French dressing. Garnish the edges with small lettuce leaves, each holding a spoonful of mint jelly.

His Nights of Jollity While Wife Was Away

We ran into him on Pennsylvania avenue. He looked like something the cat dragged in. "My wife's gone to the country," he said.

"Ah, ha," we ventured. "Stepping out, eh? Hurray! Hurray!"

"She's been gone seven days and four hours," he murmured.

"And I suppose you are out every night ringing doorbells, seeing people, and doing things," said we.

"To tell you the truth, I thought I was," he replied sadly, "but the wildest thing I've done so far is go to a moving picture show. The first night she was away, I called up several of the old gang and they were all engaged for the evening. The second night, I had dinner with a married couple, and we sat up until ten o'clock, playing bridge. The third night I worked at the office. The fourth night I went to the movies. The fifth night I called up one of the boys and he had to stay home with the kids while the missus was out. The sixth night I went to the club, but nobody was there except the hired help.

"Before I was married I always had somewhere to go and something to do, but now I'm like a stranger in a foreign land. I even look married. When I was a bachelor I took care of all my laundry, but now I have a pile of soiled clothes at home, and I swear I don't know what to do."—Washington Star.

Vagaries Not to Be Classed as Madness

Maxim Gorky wrote in his diary, "When I watch how a man behaves when he is alone by himself I always come to the conclusion that he is mad." He relates how he saw Chekhov, sitting in his garden, try to catch a sunbeam in his hat and place both on his head and become fritable when he failed; how he watched an English clown, thinking himself unobserved in the deserted passage of a circus, take off his top hat and bow respectfully to his own reflection; how he overheard Tolstoy ask a lizard, in a low whisper, "Are you happy?" and, after peering cautiously around, confide to the lizard, "As to me—I am not"; and once he observed a priest stand his boot in front of himself and say, "Well, walk!" and, after an interval, add with dignity, "You see!" But it is taking life too seriously to find madness in these and other such vagaries.—Montreal Family Herald.

Using Library Wisely

It is one thing to own a library; it is quite another to use it wisely. I have often been astonished how little care people devote to selection of what they read. Books, we know, are almost innumerable; our hours of reading are, alas, very few. And yet many people read almost by hazard. They will take any book they chance to find in a room at a friend's house; they will buy a novel at a railway stall if it has an attractive title. Indeed, I believe in some cases even the binding affects their choice. The selection is, no doubt, far from easy.—Sir John Lubbock.

New Haven Sinner

In 1647 William Blagden, a resident of New Haven, had the misfortune to fall into the water late one Saturday night. He could light no fire on Sunday, according to his interpretation of the blue laws, so while his suit and undergarments were drying in the air, William lay in bed to keep warm and did not go to church. They kept close watch in those days on delinquent worshippers, so this offender was called upon to explain. In spite of what would seem a very good excuse, Blagden was adjudged guilty of "slothfulness" and sentenced to be "publicly whipped."

Our Past

Our past is our secret, promulgated by the voice of years; it is the most mysterious image of our being, over which time keeps watch. The image is not dead; a mere nothing degrades or adorns it; it can still grow bright or somber, can still smile or weep, express love or hatred; and yet it remains recognizable forever in the midst of the myriad images that surround it. It stands for what we once were, as our aspirations and hopes stand for what we shall be; and the two faces blend, that they may teach us what we are.—Maeterlinck.

Envy or No?

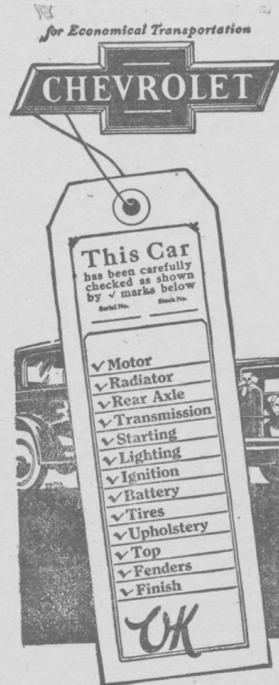

Billy's father often had trouble in getting Billy to eat the food that was best for him. One of these foods was oatmeal, which Billy detested. One morning for breakfast the food was served, much to Billy's displeasure. Billy's father, on seeing that the oatmeal had not been touched, said, "Son, you ought to be ashamed of yourself. Many boys and girls would be happy to get as little as half of that oatmeal."

"Me, too," replied Billy.

Immune to Snake Venom

A remarkable immunity for venom is shown by the hedgehog and certain other mammals, such as rats and mice. The hedgehog, for instance, attacks and kills vipers, appearing to be immune in a certain measure to their venom. Another mammal employed in India for ridding premises of snakes is the mongoose. This same resistance to venom is displayed by a number of birds, including the raven; also the ordinary duck.

Wrong Beliefs About

Exercise and Heart

The old belief that the heart increased in size according to the increased amount of work it is called upon to perform is a myth, Dr. Matthias J. Selfert, Chicago, says in a study of the effect of exercise upon the heart, prepared for the Gorgas Memorial Institute at Kansas City.

If an athlete's heart increases in size it is not because of the exercise he has performed, but because there was something fundamentally wrong with it to begin with Doctor Selfert declares.

"It is now found," he says, "that the predisposition of the heart to enlargement is the result of infectious diseases, such as scarlet fever, pneumonia, rheumatism and too strenuous exercise in youth, as well as to physical traumas.

"Exercise for pleasure causes no enlargement of the heart, but on the contrary produces a strengthening of the whole body and, normally, even a smaller heart."

Cubans Cling to Old Instrument of Death

The one machine that the Spaniards are credited with having imported into Cuba 134 years ago is still in use. It is the "garrote," instrument of death, which greatly resembles an old picture of an Inquisition machine of torture. For many years the garrote served the Spaniards, dealing death to Cuban rebels. Since the expulsion of the Old world rulers it has been used at the Havana penitentiary as the official instrument of execution.

No place but in Cuba is the garrote used officially in executions. A prisoner operates the beheading device and gets money and a time decrease in compensation for his services.

The Havana garrote is said to have taken 134 lives since it has been in Cuban use. Before that it was used in executing Spaniards accused of high treason.—Kansas City Star.

On Molding Character

Now, it is better than nothing for a bad man to have one virtuous impulse; it is better than nothing for a man in a rocky field to find one place where there is soil and where a handful of corn will grow and wave like the trees of Lebanon; it is a glorious thing for a man to know that there is something in the world besides himself, and that he is not omnipotent, omniscient, or omnipresent; it is a good thing for a man once in his life to feel little, and to know himself as he is; but how much better it would be if he could fix the vision and turn it into character!—Henry Ward Beecher.

Red Flood Lighting

That effective flood lighting of buildings need not be necessarily of white or light color, and that the use of lights is not restricted to white lights has been demonstrated by the use of red lights exclusively on a large manufacturing plant located on the principal railroad between Philadelphia and New York. This building is of brick and built on simple lines. When the white lights were tried the lines of mortar between the bricks seemed to be offensively accentuated. The white were replaced by red lamps and the effect was more than satisfactory. The structure seemed to stand out from the surrounding properties and its impressive size was made apparent without unduly revealing the homely lines.

Saskatchewan River

Saskatchewan is an Indian name meaning "swift-flowing" or "rapid," and although it is the name now borne by the great river which rises in Alberta and flows through Saskatchewan and Manitoba into Lake Winnipeg, it was not its original name. Saskatchewan was given by the Indians to more than one stream. For example, it was an early appellation of the present Minnesota river, in Manitoba, while Saskatchewan is the name of a tributary to Severn river, Ontario.

New Breed

Dorothy had always wanted a dog, and at last a kind and sympathetic uncle gave her one.

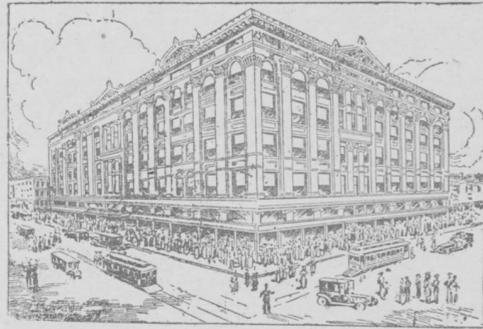

There was a certain amount of discussion among the family with regard to the animal's breed. The uncle declared the dog was an airedale.

Meeting a friend of her father one evening while taking her pet for a walk, Dorothy had an anxious moment.

"Whatever is it?" the other had asked. "A pup, Dorothy? What kind, my dear?"

The little girl tried hard to remember what her uncle had said.

"He's a ne'er-do-well," she replied, after a long pause.

The SANDMAN STORY

HIS BEAUTIFUL DAY

"I've always wanted to tell of a beautiful day I had in the late summer," said Peter Gnome.

There were many times when I meant to tell of this day and then something came up, as they say, and I didn't get around to it—another speech which you hear made.

"I've talked enough since then but it has just happened I have never told of this beautiful day, and I should so like to have you hear of my adventures on that occasion."

And the little gnomes gathered around Peter and he began:

"It was a beautifully sunny day and the first creature I met was a lovely big spangled butterfly.

"The butterfly was very big and wore a brown suit with brown spots and silver trimmings and silver touches in the lining or underneath part of the suit.

"I am going to visit a little city girl," the butterfly told me. "She is not able to get out as she has been ill and I am going to show her a bit of the summer time, for I think I'm quite correct in speaking of myself as a bit of the summer time.

"I Am Going to Visit a Little City Girl!"

"I went to see her yesterday and went right in the open window into her bedroom. There was a big vase there filled with goldenrods and while she ate her lunch I had mine, too.

"She seemed to be so happy seeing me that I'm going again, for as soon as she is much better she is going to make a visit to the country and she is looking forward to it so much."

"I've always meant to tell you about this butterfly and the happiness he gave the little girl," Peter Gnome said.

For Meditation

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

"SAFETY FIRST"

THE National Industrial conference, meeting recently in New York, was advised by Charles H. Herty, adviser to the Chemical foundation, that the annual loss in the United States through sickness, accidents and deaths is $15,000,000,000.

How much of this vast sum is attributable to loss caused by death may be a matter of conjecture, but it is not fair to assume that the most of it is due to avoidable accidents and sickness?

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. It seems easier to believe this than to practice it. A person at fifty faces an imperative operation. It doubtless could have been avoided had preventive measures been adopted. An annual physical examination, even more thorough than for a life insurance policy, is a wise precaution. Why not pay physicians for keeping us well instead of waiting until it is too late before we summon their services.

"Safety First," a pungent American slogan, is applicable to health as well as to accidents. The best form of automobile insurance can be acquired by the owner himself. It is safety first. The majority of accidents could have been avoided if the slogan had actually been put into practice.

If "Safety First" was universally adopted and applied as a working principle, the annual economic loss due to sickness, accidents and deaths would be much less than $15,000,000,000.

Economic loss is not so serious as the loss of enthusiasm and ambition. Nothing succeeds like success. "Safety First" is a sort of warning signal—to go just so far and no further. There is no short cut to the realization of any goal.

Play safe and we shall the sooner arrive holding in our hand the shining prize—the realization of our dreams.

Peculiar Almanac

A clog almanac is a form of rude calendar, said to be of Danish origin, consisting of a square stick notched for months and days and showing the saints' days, moon's phases and other features of the almanac. Specimens are to be seen in the British museum and other collections.

"I went with him that day and saw the little girl greet him.

"I had on my invisible robe of course—the one I wear so that no one can see me—and I saw the butterfly flitting about among the goldenrods and I saw her smiling and talking about her own beautiful butterfly.

"When the butterfly left she called out a cheery thank you and good-by and just a little later, when the doctor came in he said she was so much better than she could go on her country visit in two more days.

"I heard her say, just as I was leaving:

"I know my beautiful butterfly made me well and the gold rods which my sister brought me."

"Then I wandered away from the city and just as I was leaving I saw a little girl named Ada.

"She had chopped up some of the meat which she had not finished finishing and was taking it around in a paper bag to the poor cats in the neighborhood. She used to take them all sorts of scraps.

"And whenever people saw her they looked at her as though she were quite strange, but all the cats came rushing up to greet her, smiling at the paper bag.

"Then, when I got out into the country I met the dearest little lamb you have ever seen!

"He was white but his nose was black and his feet were black and he had black stripes around his legs.

"He came to me when I called him and he let me pet him. Later I saw him kissing a little girl's hand. She was patting him and calling him her 'dear lamb.'

"But I was so happy that the lamb had been friendly with me. Sometimes gnomes are thought to be dreadful creatures and anyone who really knows us, knows that we aren't dreadful at all.

"We love children and we do what we can to help them—never to harm them.

"And I was glad the little lamb seemed to feel at once that I was a friend.

"Oh, it was a beautiful day with the butterfly making a little girl well and Ada feeding the half-starved left-alone summer cats, and the little lamb who paid me such a compliment.

"Yes, it was one of my nicest days. There was no great excitement, no single thing that stood out above all the others, it was just a whole beautiful day that made one so happy just being alive.

"I love days like that," Peter Gnome ended.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

PALL-MALL

PALL-MALL, the great club and mansion lined street in London, is famous the world over. It is one of the first "sights" the traveler to London wants to see.

And delving into the mystery of its origin reveals the fact that the famous and magnificent promenade had its beginning and its name from an old English game. For Pall-Mall was originally plain Pall-Mall alley, pall-mall being the ball and mallet game which became so popular during the reign of Charles I that space was set aside in various parts of London where it could be played. This space was called a pall-mall alley. And it was on the site of such an "alley," whose name it bears, that one finds the now famous London promenade, "Pall-Mall."

In its early days, Pall-Mall was a suburban promenade, but during the close of the Seventeenth century it became a London street. Many important historical literary personages have lived along its borders, and today most of the famous clubs in London and several palaces line its sides.

For Good Telephone Service

* on the management rests an unusual obligation to the public to see to it that the service shall at all times be adequate, dependable and satisfactory to the user—

WALTER S. GIFFORD,
President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company
(Bell System)

Q There are two requirements for good telephone service.

Q First, the organization. An army of men and women, highly trained and efficient, with a high sense of duty and a thorough understanding, not only of their own jobs, but of the relationship of their jobs to those of the others. This teamwork is essential in a service so highly personal in its nature as telephone service.

Q Second, the plant. Buildings and machinery, poles, conduit, cables, wires, switchboards and instruments—all these go to make up a telephone plant. Much of the equipment used is delicate and intricate. Any faulty adjustment or break, though these do not occur often, may cause annoyance and inconvenience to the user. Thus, constant inspection and testing—continuous watchfulness over every detail of operation is needed to keep the service working at the highest efficiency.

Q To provide the two essentials for good service—organization and plant—this company spares no effort. We are striving always, not only to improve the technical features of the service, but to encourage a sympathetic understanding between those who use the service and those who furnish it.

Q Such sympathetic understanding is most important because, from its very nature, the telephone projects the personality of the user and may reflect the irritation of the moment which, in many cases, may have nothing to do with the quality of the service furnished.

Q While much of the work of giving service must be done by routine methods and mechanical devices, it is our aim in so far as is possible to eliminate all sources of annoyance and to give individual and personal attention to each user. Success in this effort cannot fail to reflect itself in improved service.

Plants Forced by Light

An experiment conducted with irises is given as an example of the effect of light rationing on plants. Two lots of irises were sown in late October; the first were given 18 hours of light per day, whilst the others (kept in the same temperature) received only the light provided by nature. The first lot reached normal size very quickly, and actually bloomed on Christmas day, but the others were dormant as late as the following February.

Making Opportunity

Each step we take in life should be one of progress, made possible by diligence and earnest effort. Accept each task that comes as an opportunity, not as a makeshift to hold until something better comes along.—Grit.

Finding a Niche

Happiness is a question of finding one's niche, whether it is in the great world where cares are many and the struggle precarious, or in some smaller world where cares may be fewer and human relationships all the more precious.—American Magazine.

Too Rough

She didn't understand football. "Why did they knock that man down as soon as he touched the ball?" she asked.

"Because he was trying to get a goal," her brother explained. "But isn't the object of the game to get goals?"

"Yes; but he was—you see, he's on the other side. He was going the wrong way—that is, toward the wrong goal."

"Well, I don't see why they should knock him down to tell him that. Everybody makes mistakes."—Montreal Star.

Rejecting a Compliment

A well-known member of the stock exchange, who is now giving up the close of a strenuous life to philanthropic efforts, was in his hey-day a tremendous gambler in stocks, and, incidentally, he and his partner were rather expert in the gentle art of making enemies. One of these accosted him with the pleasant remark: "Look here, you are the biggest thief on the stock exchange." "Ah," was the answer, "it is evident you do not know my partner."—London Tit-Bits.

Kinks With Korn

THE first dish of succotash was a mistake. A cook accidentally poured lima beans and corn into the same serving dish. By that error succotash became famous.

Corn also combines deliciously with tomatoes, green peppers and pimientos. Mexican corn, corn and salmon pudding, and corn soufflé are three popular corn dishes.

Three Popular Corn Combinations

Mexican Corn: Sauté one medium onion, chopped, in two tablespoons melted butter. When brown, add one tablespoon flour and stir smooth. Add two cups canned tomatoes, two cups canned corn, and two cans pimientos, diced, and season with one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon sage and one-eighth teaspoon pepper. Pour into a buttered baking dish, cover thickly with buttered crumbs and brown in a hot oven. Serves eight.

Corn and Salmon Pudding: To one No. 2 can corn, add one tablespoon melted butter, one-half teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, one small can salmon, flaked, but not too finely, and one tablespoon heavy cream, or evaporated milk. Mix lightly and bake in a buttered baking dish in a moderate oven 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Serves eight.

Corn Soufflé: Add two tablespoons flour to one tablespoon melted butter, blend and pour on gradually one cup milk. Bring to boiling point, and add one can corn, one and one-fourth teaspoons salt and a little pepper. Beat two egg yolks well, add to the corn mixture, and then add the egg whites, beaten-until stiff and dry. Turn into buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate oven, from twenty-five to thirty minutes. Serve at once. Serves eight.

SHARES GOLD HILL WTH HONEST MAN

Prospector Kept Find Secret for 24 Years.

Summitville, Colo.—For 24 years Jack Pickens kept secret the location of a "peak of gold" in the San Juan mountains until he could find a financial backer whom he would trust to help him open the treasure vault locked by nature.

Today Pickens and Judge Jesse C. Wiley, the honest man whom the prospector found after a search of a quarter of a century, are sharing equally the fortune Pickens discovered.

While prospecting over the hills about the Little Annie mine in 1904 Pickens stumbled on a protruding boulder. He tapped the rock with his hammer. A piece broke off, revealing a layer of almost solid gold. Another blow dislodged more gold-lined slabs.

Beneath the surface of that boulder, the prospector concluded, lay a peak of gold. Determining to keep the discovery a secret, Pickens also resolved to stay near his potential fortune. He obtained a job with a small force of miners at the Little Annie and then began his quiet hunt for an honest man with enough money to exploit the "strike."

Several times the owners of the Little Annie mine started tunnels toward the golden peak, and Pickens held his breath. He was greatly relieved as each of these projects was abandoned, one within eighty feet of his hidden treasure.

Finally the prospector met the man whom he could trust. He and Judge Wiley formed a partnership, obtained long-time leases on 40 mining claims, including the golden peak, and within six weeks realized $114,000 from the ore taken off only that part of the boulder showing above the grass.

Since then half a million dollars has been hauled away and yellow metal worth many times that amount still is in sight.

Pickens has a wife and thirteen children with whom to share the fortune.

Borax Found Deadly

to Mosquito Larvae

Ithaca, N. Y.—Borax has had another use added to the long list of things it is good for by Prof. Robert Matheson and E. H. Hinman of Cornell university. They have discovered that a concentration of one and one-half parts in a thousand of water is very quickly fatal to the larvae, or "wigglers," of mosquitoes that breed in rainwater barrels, cisterns and other exposed reservoirs. The borax seems to hold its larva-killing properties for a long time; one experiment ran from July 25 to September 7 of last year without any signs of weakening at the end.

The two entomologists add, however, that borax should be used only where its possible effects on other animals and on plant life will be of no consequence. They are of the opinion that a cheap form of the chemical can be successfully marketed for mosquito-fighting purposes.

In the course of their experiments they raised large numbers of mosquito larvae, which had to be fed artificially. They state that they found common compressed yeast, such as goes into the collegiate "double malted," very good wiggler food.

Sore-Throat Epidemic

Teaches Pasteurization

Washington.—The epidemic of septic sore throat which raged in a small Massachusetts town, where over an eighth of the entire population suffered from the disease, is one more good argument in favor of pasteurization, according to the United States public health service. The infection has been traced to a single cow that had mastitis, a disease of the udders. As soon as the milk was pasteurized, no more cases were reported. Pasteurization would have prevented the entire outbreak.

Nearly every community, large or small, that has provided for pasteurization of its milk supply has been driven to this measure by just such epidemics of milk-borne diseases. Apparently communities, like human beings, refuse to profit by each other's experiences.

Dies in Coffin

Budapest.—For years Victor Kasau, actor, slept in a coffin, fearing death was approaching. He has just been found dead in it.

Ex-Kaiser Nears End of Wood-Chopping Job

Doorn, Holland.—Former Emperor William II of Germany has practically completed his woodman's task on his own estate. The Imperial wood chopper must go elsewhere if he wants to take his favorite exercise of felling, sawing or chopping wood.

In his labors on the Hohenzollern estate, now covering a period of about eight years, the ex-kaiser was careful to remove only dead trees or such as hampered others in their growth or destroyed the symmetry of his park. It takes half an hour at a brisk pace to walk around the whole estate, which is enclosed by a high wire fence surmounted by barbed wire.

WHY Pouring of Oil on Water Has Calming Effect

It has long been known that oil poured upon the surface of stormy water has a wonderful effect in calming it and many vessels have probably been saved from destruction by this simple process.

The reason of this curious effect of oil upon water is superficially apparent. It depends upon the viscosity, or adhesiveness, of the oil, which causes it to act somewhat like a skin drawn over the more unstable surface of the water, so that the tendency of the latter to break into spray as it is driven by the wind is restrained. The danger to ships from a high-running sea arises from this breaking of the waves. As long as the surface of the waves is smooth and unbroken the ship rides easily upon them.

But while the principle upon which the oil acts is thus evident enough, the real method of its action is not so apparent. This has been subjected to a mathematical investigation by a distinguished scientist.

It is shown that the viscosity of oil is so much greater than that of water, being in the case of olive oil more than 230 times as great, that the water may be regarded as a frictionless liquid in comparison with the oil. The surface tension between the oil and the air is also shown to be considerably greater than that between the oil and the water. With these data it is found that there will be no breaking of the waves unless the latter vary in length between two fractions of a centimeter—namely, nine-elevenths and five-sixths.

Why Children Laugh, Is Told by Educator

Dr. C. W. Kimmins, chief inspector of the educational department of the London county council, set for himself the task of ascertaining why children laugh and he has embodied the results of his investigation in a book. One of his methods, says the London correspondent of the Baltimore Sun, was to ask British and American school children to write accounts of the funniest stories they had ever heard or the funniest things they had ever seen. From data thus obtained the conclusion is drawn that the misfortune of others is one of the greatest amusements to small children.

A little boy, five years old, wrote: "I saw a fat man running for a bus. He jumped on but couldn't hold on and he fell into the mud. Oh! I did laugh." The little girls were inclined to moralize along with their fun. One wrote about a boy chasing "a poor cat," and continued: "As he was running he fell and burst the seat of his trousers and so instead of hurting the cat he'll get hurt himself when he sees his mother."

As children grow older their sense of humor grows more subtle. They are also inclined to take the part of the under-dog. Those of us grown-ups who have not made much of a success in the world may find the explanation perhaps in this observation of Doctor Kimmins: "Periods of great naughtiness should be welcomed on occasions. The child who has never been really naughty has missed something which is essential to free natural development, and will probably suffer from this important omission in later life."

Why Bear Is Called "Bruin" "Bruin" as applied to a bear originated in "Reynard the Fox," a famous beast-epic prose-poem written in the Fourteenth century and intended as a satire on the state of Germany in the Middle Ages. In the epic the bear is called "Bruin," because of his color. It is a Dutch word meaning brown. Since then any bear is often called "Bruin," especially in animal stories.

Why It Is a Penknife

The name "penknife" is a holdover from the days when steel pens were unknown. A penknife was originally a small knife carried in the pocket for the purpose of making and mending quill pens. It was once customary for each person to cut his own pens as he needed them. Now almost any kind of small pocketknife is called a penknife.—Pathfinder Magazine.

How Long Monkeys Live

From twelve to fifteen years is old age for a monkey. Of course longevity depends to some extent on the species. Occasionally a monkey will live to more than twenty years of age. A Moor monkey recently died in the National Zoological park at the age of twenty-one years.

How to Battle Moths

Moths can be kept away by sprinkling liquid camphor under the carpets, turpentine in the corners of the wardrobe, says Nature Magazine. Tobacco dust, such as used by florists, is also good for moths, or split cedar cigar boxes packed with clothes will keep them away.

Why He Is a "Middy"

The term "midshipman" for cadets originated in the British navy about 200 years ago. The men who were going through a course in training to become officers were assigned quarters midships on the lower deck. Hence the name.

Why Hog Laughs at Snake

The thick skin and heavy layer of fat on hogs act as a protection against the venom of snakebites. When injected into this layer of fat it is usually absorbed slowly.

Lesson for October 14

SPIRITUAL GIFTS

LESSON TEXT—1 Cor. 12:3-7:31

GOLDEN TEXT—Now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Love Is the Best of All.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Greatest Thing in the World.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Greatest of All Gifts.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Spiritual Gifts.

Joel predicted a remarkable effusion of the spirit in Messianic times (Joel 2:28, 29; cf. Acts 2:17, 18).

Before the crucifixion, Jesus promised to send the Holy Spirit to be the helper and guide of His people. This was historically fulfilled on the day of Pentecost. The gifts of the Spirit were extended to all classes. Not only were these endowments marked by great profusion, but by great diversity. In the exercise of these gifts confusion would surely arise. Divine life, suddenly poured into human nature, stirred it to unusual power. In view of the abuses and confusion which are likely to arise from such a condition, it is highly important that certain principles be set forth for guidance and regulation.

1. The Infallible Criterion (1 Cor. 12:3).

The infallible test which determines whether gifts are spurious or genuine is one's conception of and attitude toward Jesus Christ. Only those who recognize Him as God manifest in the flesh, His vicarious atonement on the cross, and submit to Him as their Lord, can be recognized as possessing the gift of the Holy Spirit. Christ said before leaving the earth that when the Spirit came His supreme business would be to testify of Him, to take the things of Christ and show them unto the people. The soundness of the faith of a man is the sign of this commission from God.

II. The Diversity of Spiritual Gifts (1 Cor. 12:4-11).

In the church there are to be found those possessing the gift of wisdom, knowledge, faith, healing, miracles, prophecy, discernment of spirits, divers kinds of tongues and the interpretation of tongues.

III. The Unity of the Spirit's Gifts (1 Cor. 12:12-30).

Christian unity is only possible when effected by the one Holy Spirit. This unity amidst diversity is represented under the figure of the human body.

1. The human body has many members, each performing distinct functions for the good of the body (v. 12).

2. The members are mutually related and independent (vv. 13-17).

3. The place of each member is determined by the choice of God (v. 18).

4. The members which are least attractive and least conspicuous are most important (vv. 21-23).

IV. Love, the Spirit's Best Gift (1 Cor. 12:31-13).

1. The pre-eminence of love (vv. 1-3).

It transcends.

(1) Speaking with tongues.

(2) The gift of prophecy.

(3) Faith of the most vigorous kind.

(4) Philanthropy of the most generous sort.

(5) Heroic devotion leading to martyrdom.

2. The attributes of love (vv. 4-7).

(1) Long-suffering and kind.

(2) Free from envy.

(3) Freedom from boasting.

(4) Decorous and well behaved.

(5) Unselfish.

(6) Does not give way to passion; is not quick tempered.

(7) Thinks no evil; does not impute evil motives to others; is not suspicious.

(8) Delights not in evil.

(9) Bearerth all things.

(10) Is trustful, hopeful and firm.

3. The permanence of love (vv. 8-13).

Prophecy as prediction will be fulfilled. Prophecy as teaching will be brought to an end in the day when teaching is not needed. Tongues shall cease, for as the languages of earth were caused by God's judgment for sin, so shall Christ's redemption bring the nations back to one tongue. Knowledge shall be done away with the coming of a wider and nobler intelligence. The twilight will be lost in day, childhood, in maturity. Love will always abide, for God is love.

5. The comparative value of prophecy and tongues (14:1-25).

Prophecy is given the highest place because it is to declare God's message to men. Its primary meaning is to fortify. To speak with tongues means to speak in other languages for the purpose of showing the presence of God.

One Who Never Forgets

Others may forget us in their prayers; there is One in heaven who never does forget. Others may fail us when their lamp burns low; He ever liveth. We are engirdled by the prayers of One who loves us and has the ear of God and therefore is able to survive to the uttermost.—George H. Morrison.

MAN'S STRUGGLES FOR FIRE TRACED

Progress Shown in Smithsonian Collection.

Washington, D. C.—The convenience of the modern match tends to conceal the millenniums of primitive man's struggle to make fire. How difficult and important an achievement this control was is brought out by Dr. Walter Hough's study of the fire-making apparatus in the National Museum, published by the Smithsonian Institution. This is a revision and modernization of a work first published 40 years ago and which has long been unavailable to collectors.

"The origin of fire making," writes Doctor Hough, "need not be put very far back in time." For ages before men knew how to make it, he continues, they preserved fire after lightning and volcano had brought it on. Illustrating the extraordinary ability developed by primitive peoples in the preservation of fire he instances the Cherokee Indians of North Carolina who kept fire buried in the mounds upon which the council houses were built, so that if the house were destroyed by enemies the fire would remain there for a year or more.

Fireless Period in History

Doctor Hough questions the theory that fire is indispensable to all humankind under all conditions, pointing out that very many fire myths possessed by primitive peoples recount a stage of firelessness and a wresting of fire from those having it.

Doctor Hough believes that the various methods of producing fire by friction of wood on wood probably preceded the methods involving the use of minerals. He suggests a means by which man may have developed the friction method, after a long preliminary period "during which man gained a growing acquaintance with the properties of various substances."

Friction is a common experience and handling wood or working in wood might give to keen perceptions an odor, a vapor of smoke, suggesting that there was fire present, which could be brought out by friction.

That the primitive fire tool should take the nature of a drill is explained by the ancient character of the drill for piercing holes in all kinds of substances by abrasion.

In the early explorations of America, the Indian, almost without exception, used the friction apparatus consisting of two sticks of wood.

Primitive methods of fire making aid in determining racial relationships. Thus about all Eskimo tribes use a four-piece fire drill, consisting of a mouthpiece, a drill, a core for turning the drill, and a hearth and other races have their own particular methods. The use of the mouth drill is almost more than the white man's teeth will stand.

Nature Demonstrates Way.

In the Malay archipelago nature seems to have shown the way to make fire. It appears that many fires are started in the jungle by bamboo rubbing together in a high windstorm. Thus the natives use two specially cut pieces of bamboo which when sawed one against the other produce fire.

In view of the history of fire, its importance to man, its power, and the mystery of it, there need be no surprise at the existence in many parts of the primitive world of fire-worship. Even in our day something of this attitude toward fire can be found among certain African tribes.

Doctor Hough quotes H. B. Johnston to the effect that among the Wataveita fire making is the exclusive privilege of the men, and the secret is handed down from father to son and never under any condition revealed to women. A man was asked the reason for this. "Oh," said he "if women knew how to make fire they would become our masters."

Among some Africans who are masters in metal work the anomalous custom obtains of using wooden drills to light the fire which melts their iron.

Two pieces of pyrites or a flint and pyrites appear to have been the first agencies used for producing a spark by percussion. In North America the percussion method is found in use among the northerly ranging Indians and the Eskimo of some parts.

Doctor Hough's study is based on the National museum collection of fire-making apparatus, which has been gathered from all over the world by Smithsonian explorers, consuls, military and naval men and friends of the institution. It is an unsurpassed collection.

Sweden Leads World in Radio Fans Per Capita

Stockholm.—Sweden now leads the world in the number of radio licenses issued in proportion to population or 57.8 for every 1,000 inhabitants. Recently the broadcasting bureau of the Swedish telegraph board asked the registered radio listeners to suggest improvements in the broadcasting programs. As a result 140,000 radio fans expressed their views, which are now being carefully sorted.

A. T. & T. Is Largest

HOW LIGHT MAY BE THROWN ON PLEISTOCENE DAYS.

In an attempt to throw further light on the debated question of whether the human race existed on the American continent in Pleistocene time (the period in which the glaciers swept the continent), the Smithsonian Institution is sending a paleontological expedition to Florida. Dr. J. W. Gidley, assistant curator of vertebrate paleontology in the National museum, is in charge.

The expedition will concentrate its activities in the neighborhood of Vero and Melbourne on the east coast, where were found skeletal remains of man in what appeared to be Pleistocene strata.

There are three principal geological strata in the area in question, designated as Nos. 1, 2 and 3, reading upwards. In both the places where human bones were found, earlier investigations by Smithsonian expeditions under Doctor Gidley have shown the presence in layer No. 2 of fossil animal bones definitely of Pleistocene age. Many of the animal bones found in the lower part of layer No. 3 were also definitely of this age, but they were often mixed with bones of more modern species.

Layer No. 3 throughout contained numerous evidences of man, bones and artifacts, though apparently of no great antiquity, while no remains of this character were found in the lower portion at least of No. 2.

Many paleontologists and anthropologists have accepted these facts as evidence that man actually existed in North America in the Pleistocene. Others have questioned this conclusion and prefer to explain the Melbourne finds as the result of hurricanes or other catastrophic natural causes, burying later man in Pleistocene strata.

How Difference in Bibles Came About

There are about sixty-six books in the regular Protestant Bible. The Catholic Bible contains the sixty-six books of the Protestant Bible and seven books in addition. The seven extra books in the Catholic Bible are: Tobias, Judith, Wisdom (or Wisdom of Solomon), Ecclesiasticus, Baruch, I Maccabees, and II Maccabees. The Old Testament of the Catholic Bible also contains chapters and parts of chapters which are not in the Jewish editions or in the Protestant Bible.

Since different translations are used there are naturally many minor differences in the texts of the two Bibles. The Catholic Bible is the result of selections made by the Council of Trent (1545-63) which enumerated the books which should be considered as "sacred and canonical" by the Catholic church. Seven of the books enumerated by that council are omitted from the Protestant Bible because Luther, Calvin and other Protestant leaders rejected them.—Kansas City Times.

How Camels Defy Thirst

There are several reasons, according to scientists, why camels can go longer without water than most other animals. As a rule a camel will not begin to suffer from thirst until about the fifth day. This power to endure thirst is partly due to the peculiar structure of the camel's stomach. Water is stored up in small pouches attached to the walls. Camel drivers often tie up the heads of their animals and force water down their throats before starting on a long journey over the desert. The camel's capacity for traveling long distances without food or water is also partly due to the flesh and fat which is stored up in the humps. This stored-up fat is reabsorbed when the camel is overtaken by famine. The humps materially increase or diminish in size according to the physical condition of the animals. They become small and flaccid after hard work and poor diet.—Pathfinder Magazine.

How to Remove Spots

Among cleaning agents, carbon tetrachloride is one of the most generally used. It has the advantage of being nonflammable, but it has a tendency to leave a ring on fabrics unless it is thoroughly evaporated by friction while being applied. In the dry cleaning trade it is customary to use solvents that do not "wet" the material, and among these is a product known as xylene or naphtha solvent. It will remove almost any kind of a spot—grease, tar, paint and other substances which do not actually stain the goods.—Popular Science Monthly.

How Rice Is Polished

The polishing of rice occurs while it is being hulled, milled between stones and screened. The flourlike material rubbed from the surface of the grains is called polish or rice polish. It is a valuable cattle food.

How Fish Feed

Fish swallow their food without chewing it. This they do because they are obliged constantly to open and close their jaws in breathing through their gills.

Wonderful Tales Told of Monster Serpents

From time immemorial the sea serpent has figured in story and legend. Pliny, the Roman naturalist (23-79 A. D.) tells of enormous water and land serpents, some so large that whole armies were sent against them. The hardy Norse fishermen gave thrilling stories of sea monsters. Olaf Magnus, a Swedish bishop, wrote of "a very large serpent of length upward of 200 feet and 20 feet in diameter, with a row of hairs 2 feet in length hanging from the neck, sharp scales of dark color, and brilliant, flaming eyes. It attacks boats and snatches away the men by raising itself high out of the water, and devours them." Hans Eggede, a Norwegian missionary to Greenland, tells of encountering, on July 6, 1734, "a very terrible sea animal, which raised itself so high above the water that its head reached above our maintop. It had a long, sharp snout, and blew like a whale." The oarfish, with a body from 25 to 30 feet long, and almost as thin as a ribbon, is believed by some naturalists to be the creature which gave rise to many remarkable yarns, told from ancient days until now, of "sea serpents." The silvery body, crossed with dusky stripes, the grotesque head and face, with enlarged fins tipped with red, waving above like a horse's mane, might well give foundation, it is said, to almost any story. Still no one can definitely say that the sea serpent does not exist.

Humming Bird Small but Famed as Fighter

A man's bravery can never be judged by his size. Frequently the midget has the spirit of a raging lion while the big, hulking 200-pounder has the timorous heart of a rabbit. The same law of nature applies to birds, Kendrick Kimball writes, in the Detroit News.

The humming bird, sometimes called the "jewel of the air" because of his flashing luster, is only three inches in length, but his courage knows no boundaries. Humming birds are fearless. They will attack a hawk, a crow or an eagle, and against such a nimble adversary the bigger bird would have no chance.

With his rapier bill, which he thrusts into flowers for their nectar, the humming bird is capable of dealing an adversary a sharp prick which would discourage further aggressiveness. Among themselves, the humming birds fight frequently. Like skilled fencers, they thrust at one another with their long, needle-like bills, ducking and darting so fast that the eye can hardly follow them as they maneuver for openings.

Here Endeth the Lesson

A thrifty Scotch farmer started off each day by reading a chapter from the Bible to his field hands. One morning during the harvesting season, he struck the sixth chapter of Chronicles, which consists of 81 verses of genealogical names. He droned on until he came to:

"And Shallum begat Hilkiah, and Hilkiah begat Azariah, and Azariah begat Seraiah, and Seraiah begat Johozadak."

Then he paused and looked over the leaf.

"Weel, my friends," he said, "they begat one another right down to the end of the page and a lang way ower on the ither side, so we'll jist leave them to it. Off wi' ye to yer work."—Boston Transcript.

Nature Always Fair

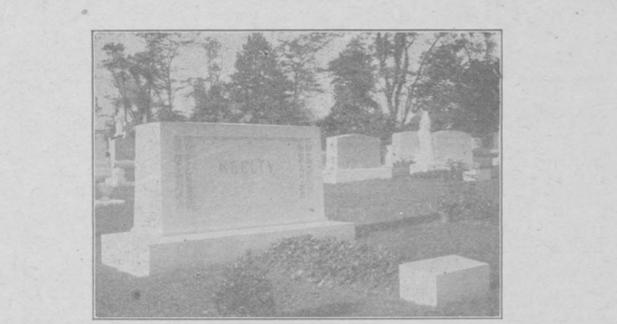

How just is Nature in distributing her gifts. As a tribute for the gossamer skin she doles to the true blondes and the Titian blondes, she is greedy in the coloring pigment, for eyelashes and eyebrows. With the stirring, vivacious beauty of the Black-eyed-Susan type, she mingled a nice brownish skin, none too delicate perhaps, but which is far more resistant to sun and wind than that of the fairlike blondes. To the face that is not perfect in any sense, she adds the body silhouette of a beautiful dryad. In each case, there is sure to be one feature, fact or figure that is nearly beautiful.—The Dance Magazine.

First Maple Sirup

Maple sugar making is an ancient art entirely confined to the North American continent. Before the advent of the white man, the Indian had learned to extract and concentrate the sap of the maple tree. On the approach of spring the trees were gashed with the tomahawk, and a wooden chip or spout inserted to direct the fluid drop by drop into a receptacle on the ground. The sap was caught in a birch bark dish and boiled in earthen kettles. The small quantity of dark, thick sirup thus made was the only sugar available to the Indians and is stated by early writers to have been highly prized.

Few Left-Handed People

From the meager information accessible on the subject it appears that primitive peoples are as predominantly right handed as civilized peoples. Any theory which seeks to explain the origin of right handedness must go back farther than civilization. According to the bureau of American ethnology, there are very few cases of left handedness among the present-day Indians. It is supposed by that authority that the Indians were predominantly right handed before their contact with Europeans.

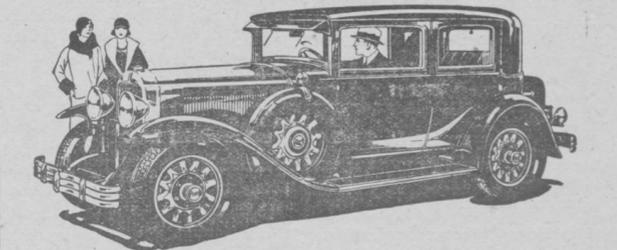

TRULY an artistic memorial is the Keely tribute. Its simple grace and contour plus its talented craftsmanship gives it an air of distinctive refinement. The splendid execution of its symbolic ornamentation is worthy of appreciation.
