

ANOTHER INTERESTING DETROIT LETTER

The City's Labor Situation Discussed at Length.

I have received several inquiries, from different parts of the country, concerning the labor condition in Detroit, and asking about the chances for an outsider to get a job. With the consent of the Editor, I will try and tell all interested, the situation, as I see it.

In the first place, it seems that it is a common belief that all you have to do is to pack up your non-employment troubles in your "old kit bag," and come to Detroit, where a delegation of manufacturers will meet you with a band and bid for your services, at wages that are higher than you ever dreamed of.

Well, I want to tell all that only during the war, was it possible to land a job without much trouble. The fellow who came here then, and went to work for a good firm, and made good, is surely in luck now. It does not matter if he was employed by the same firm all these years, but that helps.

During the past 8 years, Detroit has never once been over-crowded with jobs. I know that certain parties, who are more interested in getting the few dollars a man brings with him, are continually sending out circulars, advising men—skilled or unskilled—to "come to Detroit—jobs are plentiful." But just try it once. You may all remember a few weeks ago Ford announced that he would put on 30,000, new men, in order to bring up production to a six-day basis, on a five day week for the workmen. He coupled with this announcement a statement that men from Detroit, which of course, includes all the surrounding towns and cities, would be given the preference. In spite of this announcement I have no doubt that double this number have come here from all over the country. The consequence is that there are just that many more men out of work. They are turned down, and then write bitter letters to the daily papers, denouncing the city, because they did not think what they were doing, before leaving home.

There are always thousands out of work here, all big cities have this to contend with. And it has gotten so that when a man gets a good job, he hangs on to it, so that men are with certain firms for years. After working on a job for so many years, and learning all the fine points about it; it is not to the advantage of the firm or the workman, to make a change, and so if you have been with a firm as long as I have—over 11 years—you will see faces that are just as much at home, in this particular shop as I am.

I have repeatedly stated that before coming to Detroit, a man ought to consider the matter carefully, from all points. First, he should be sure of a job. I know of quite a number who landed jobs at once, but they were acquainted with some one, who had the authority to hire them, and had the job waiting for them. Then in the matter of wages—don't forget that it takes twice as much, or more, money to live in a city like this than it does in a small town. If you are employed at living wages, take my advice, and don't make a change. And just now, I am sure that no matter what kind of a job you have, you will be taking a great chance, with all the prospects of failure, if you decide to try for a job here.

I want to make myself clear in this matter. I would certainly like to see more of my friends in Detroit, and would do all I could to help them get jobs, but I will certainly not say anything to mislead any one in this matter. I leave this to the Real Estate men. They are experts in this line. The whole thing sums up that there are at present no jobs awaiting outsiders, although a good experienced man might land one. Every one here realizes that Detroit has its hands full in taking care of those who are now residents of the city.

After a comparatively mild, though wet fall, we have been having winter weather with a vengeance. Usually, our periods of cold weather, are not long, but this one, with the exception of one or two days which were comparatively mild, lasted quite a long time, with the thermometer pretty close to zero. This cold weather ought to have checked the Flu, which is sweeping the city, although it is in a mild form, compared with the epidemic of 1918. I have seen it stated that half the people in the city have had, or are having, this disease, either in a severe or mild form.

I learn, by looking over the columns of the Record, that Taneytown is not free from this scourge, and that evidently, I know from experience just how uncomfortable it makes one feel, and all the sick from it around Taneytown, have my sympathy.

Almost every week, we read of the death of some one we knew, and every now and then a death occurs that shocks and grieves us greatly. Such an event was the death of "Bob" Bankert. Our friendship which dates back many years, was greatly strengthened by our association in the old Taneytown Band around 1909 to 1916, when he as conductor and myself with the rest of the Band were striving to give the town a good musical organization, sometimes with little encouragement. "Bob" was a loyal friend and a good musician, and I take this method of paying a little tribute to his memory.

THE ALIEN AMERICAN

Half-million in Washington Deprived of Voting.

Written for The Record:

On the Fourth of March thousands of lusty voices will cheer President Herbert Hoover, the new Chief Executive of the United States, as he rides westward on Pennsylvania Ave. after taking his oath of office at the Capitol. But there will be a half-million residents of the Nation's Capital who will feel a little more keenly than ever the fact that they were deprived of the right to have any voice in the selection of their country's highest official.

This great multitude of American tax-paying citizens of the United States will know that "taxation without representation" is just as much a tyranny in 1929 as it was in the days of the American Revolution. For it should be understood clearly that 500,000 persons out of a total population of 550,000 residing in the District of Columbia are deprived of any voice in the selection of the President and of the members of Congress. As a matter of fact the choice of members of the Senate and House is of more moment to the people of the District than it is to the people of the states since all the affairs of the District are controlled exclusively by the legislative branches of the National Government.

According to the population of the States in 1920 the District of Columbia was the fourteenth in numbers. Since that census was taken the District has increased by more than 112,000. Using the figures of the same census it is found that even at that time the District of Columbia was more populous than the States of Vermont, Delaware, Idaho, Wyoming, New Mexico, Arizona or Nevada. The District was surpassed with only a small margin by the States of New Hampshire and Utah. Out of a total population of 550,000 persons there are slightly more than 50,000 persons holding their legal residence in their home states, although they are employed and reside in the District. This small group comprises the favored ones in the Capital City permitted by law to vote.

In 1788 and 1789 the required territory for the seat of government was offered to Congress by the States of Maryland and Virginia. This area then contained approximately 100 sq. miles. But in 1846 that portion of the District derived from the State of Virginia was re-ceded to that State. The District now covers an area of 69 sq. miles.

No Federal activity is so little understood by the American people as is the administration of the affairs of the District of Columbia. The right to vote in the District for President was exercised only once; in the presidential election of November 1800. That was the first and last time residents of the District were allowed any part in a national election. For a number of years these American citizens were permitted a voice in their municipal affairs. But even that privilege was taken from them in June 1874. From that time on, the District of Columbia has been governed by three commissioners—two of them civilians, and the other an officer of the Engineer Corps of the United States Army. These officials are selected and appointed by the President of the United States.

The impression has gained a strong foothold throughout the entire country that the inhabitants of the District are exempt from all taxes. Last year the budget of the District amounted to $40,357,308. Of this amount the Federal government paid $9,000,000, and the people of the District paid the balance. At one time the Federal government paid 50 percent of the cost of administering the National Capital; this was cut to 40 percent, and today it pays approximately 24 percent, the balance being raised by increasing the taxes carried by the citizens of that community. In 1929 the budget amounts to $40,357,000. The Federal Government will pay $9,000,000 or only $88,000, more than it paid in 1921, whereas the people of Washington will be required to raise $31,000,000, or an increase of $18,000,000.

Official figures show that the cost to the Federal Government of operating the National Capital is little greater now than it was in 1921. The increase in cost, due to the growth and development of Washington is being borne by the citizens of that city despite the fact that 40 percent of Washington's area is non-taxable owing to Government ownership.

In addition to the tax burden, the local citizens contribute large sums to the National Government through the payment of Federal taxes. Payment of these taxes last year exceeded the amount paid by twenty-three states and was greater than the combined amount paid by nine of the smaller states. In addition to approximately $31,000,000 raised for local taxes, Washington paid to the United States Government $18,227,000 in Federal taxes last year.

Election Day in the District of Columbia is fittingly known as the "Day of Humiliation," for the residents of the City at the head of the Potomac River observe the balance of their countrymen electing a President to rule them and a Congress to make their laws, while they themselves are forced to remain voteless and silent.

Theodore W. Noyes, chairman of the Citizens Joint Committee on District of Columbia Representation said recently: "President Coolidge denounced and chronic stay-at-homes as abdicating their sovereignty. The inconsistency in denouncing one set of people for failing to vote and at the same time preventing another group from voting springs naturally from a gross basic inconsistency between American practice in the District of

TUBERCULOSIS WORK IN CARROLL

Large Sum Spent for Clinics, Preventorium, Nursing.

The sum of $1276.54 was spent in Carroll County last year by the Maryland Tuberculosis Association for tuberculosis work, according to information sent to this paper by the Tuberculosis Association. Mr. W. B. Matthews, Managing Director of the State Association stated that the sum spent was divided among the county clinics, preventorium care of Carroll children at the Miracle House, and for nursing service and health supplies.

Itemized, the expenditures are as follows: Free Chest Clinics, $270.00; Preventorium care, $130.54; Health Supplies, $126.00; Nursing Service, $750.00. In 1927 the total amount of money raised from the annual sale of Tuberculosis Christmas Seals was $894.24 showing that expenditures made for tuberculosis work in the county was more than was raised.

Every effort is now being made by workers to have those who have not made their returns for 1928 Christmas Seals to do so at once, so that the county health work might continue.

Carroll County Society of Baltimore.

The Carroll County Society of Baltimore celebrated the 92nd. birthday of the County at its 10th. annual dinner on Friday evening, January 18th, 1929, at the Hotel Rennett. Hon. T. Scott Offutt, chief Judge of the 3rd. Judicial Circuit, and member of the Maryland Court of Appeals, addressed the Society, he called attention to the wonderful change that has taken place in everything since Carroll County was erected. He also brought out clearly that our Governmental system from the highest place to the lowest was becoming very bureaucratic, and stated that in the old days where questions of State were argued around the stove in a country store that we had a more representative type of government than we have today. The Judge's talk was enjoyed very much by all of those attending the dinner.

Short talks were made by Rev. N. A. Ward, President of Western Maryland College and Mr. Jesse Englar, and the former Presidents of the society.

After the dinner and speaking was over dancing followed, with music by Walter S. Rouson's orchestra. The annual meeting of the Society takes place on April 10th. next.

Civil War Veterans Dying.

The ranks of the veterans of the Civil War are being rapidly depleted, according to statistics issued by the Department of the Interior. The pension roll had fallen to 68,788 at the end of 1928. This is more than 6,000 lower than the same roll was six months earlier, thus indicating that these venerable former soldiers are dying at the rate of more than 1,000 a month. The present figure is strongly in contrast to that of thirty years ago when Civil War pensions reached their high tide of 745,000.

The latest figures show, also, that the number of widows of Civil War soldiers who draw pensions is on the decrease though still nearly three times as great as the number of soldiers. There are now 191,000 such widows on the rolls, a decrease of 5,000 in the past six months.

Woolen Mill Owner Dead.

John C. Melville, senior member of the Melville Woolen Company, Oakland, Md., died suddenly at his home at Oakland Mills at 7 o'clock Thursday morning. Mr. Melville who was 70 years of age had been in declining health for several months.

Mr. Melville had been conducting the woolen mills for many years. Associated with him in the business were his three sons. His father, John Melville, had at one time sold the business to Nicholas Steele, but the son renounced the mills.

He leaves his wife, who before marriage was Miss Elsie Horner, and three sons and daughter: Graham, George, Thomas and Edith. Two brothers and two sisters also survive: Charles W. Melville, a member of the board of Carroll County Commissioners; William M. Melville, postmaster at Sykesville; Mrs. Elizabeth Wood and Mrs. Mollie Harden, also of Sykesville. The funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

Columbia and American fundamental principles.

"So far as the half million Americans of the District are concerned the American government is not a government of all the people by all the people. It is a government of all the people by a part of the people. The half million District residents are among the people who are governed, but not among the people who govern."

Mr. Noyes further emphasized the point that the District sent more soldiers and sailors to the World War than did seven of the states. He said also: "In representation in the legislative branch by the executive branch of the National Government residents of the District are on the same footing as aliens. Before the judicial branch of the National Government they are, according to the United States Supreme Court, less than aliens in the right to sue and be sued."

FRAUDULENT CURES

Influenza Prevention and Cures Fraudulent Under Drug Act.

"It is the intention of the Food, Drug and Insecticide Administration to take immediate action under the food and drugs act against all preparations represented by label, or by circular accompanying the packages as preventives or treatments of influenza, la grippe, pneumonia, and related diseases," W. G. Campbell, Director of Regulatory work of the United States Department of Agriculture, says.

"There is a widespread and probably a fully justified public apprehension about influenza and some manufacturers have not hesitated to take advantage of this situation by advertising their preparations in every available quarter as preventives or cures for the disease. Unfortunately, the food and drugs act does not reach false advertising statements appearing in the press, or in any advertising medium not included with the package of the preparation itself. The food and drug enforcing authorities are therefore powerless to check such misleading advertising, serious as the consequences may be in the case of those who are led to depend on such ineffective products, and neglect the hygienic precautions recommended by public health authorities such as isolation, rest, sleep, diet and proper ventilation.

"It is a fact generally accepted by medical authorities, based on worldwide medical experience," added Mr. Campbell, "that there is no known drug or combination of drugs which will prevent or cure influenza. Products labeled as effective for this purpose will unhesitatingly be classed as misbranded within the meaning of the food and drugs act and treated accordingly."

"It may not be amiss to add," said Mr. Campbell, "that manufacturers are usually cautious putting unwarranted claims upon the labels of their products, knowing that they render themselves liable under the food and drugs act, and those who are inclined to take advertising claims at face value will frequently find that the labels themselves, or the circulars accompanying the packages of the drugs, do not repeat these claims."

Flu Decrease General.

A state-wide decrease in Flu cases is reported by state authorities to be general in both cities and counties, and also a like decrease in pneumonia cases. The situation apparently means that there will be no further epidemic of this character during this year.

Much of what was formerly called sin is now either vulgarity or cleverness, depending on the wealth, social position, beauty or good taste of the person involved. The care with which the paint is applied on the next feminine face that you meet, will prove this statement.

GAME WARDEN MAKES BIRD LIFE APPEAL

Feed Furnished Free by District Game Warden.

Losses of birds,—game, song and insectivorous—and game animals in winter can be prevented by systematic feeding and we appeal to the public of Maryland to contribute their part in saving the remnants of wild life at this time. While it is now mid-winter it is not too late to check up on the bird and game life of your section and to intensify and extend facilities for feeding and caring for birds and game animals. It very often happens that some of the most destructive snow and sleet storms which cause tremendous mortality of birds and game animals, occur at this season of the year.

Feeding stations should be established wherever birds can be located, in exposed places which the winds will sweep free of snow or in well-sheltered places where snow will cover and hide the feed. These stations should be built in such a manner as to insure the birds opportunity to escape from natural enemies and should be surrounded by openings where ground enemies will not have an opportunity to hide. Bundles of unthrashed grain supply food in ideal form as they can be tied to bushes or trees or placed in sheltered places. Brush heaps furnish excellent feeding stations for birds.

Bob-white quail, ruffed grouse and ring-necked pheasants, properly fed, will survive the winter and furnish brood stock to our covers for the coming season. They will eat and enjoy practically all kinds of grain and will come near farm buildings to secure it. Wheat, barley, millet, corn, oats and chick grain will furnish excellent diet for these birds.

Food should not be placed in large quantities, but should be furnished in small quantities at frequent intervals. If food is placed in certain localities, the birds will soon learn to come to that section to feed at the dinner table. Careful watch should be kept for vermin near all feeding stations, especially for weasels, cats, owls and hawks and they should be killed.

Again we appeal to the public of Maryland to assist in carrying over our brood stock for the coming season.

To those who are not able to furnish feed and will apply to the District Game Warden of their county, feed will be furnished gratis by this department. E. LEE LECOMPT, State Game Warden.

Library for Gettysburg College.

Work is progressing on the Mrs. Emma Weber memorial library on the campus of Gettysburg College. The erection is being made through the generosity of Rev. Dr. H. H. Weber, of York, General Secretary of the Board of Home Missions and Church extension of the United Lutheran Church, who is making the gift as a memorial to his wife. It will cost approximately $75,000.00.

The building will add very materially to the beauty of the College Campus, as well as to the equipment of the College that has been growing so creditably in recent years.

The library will be built of Gettysburg brick, with granite base and cast stone trim, and will be fireproof construction throughout.

WALKED 44 MILES

In 10 Hours, 2 Minutes and Won Purse of $117.70.

To win a purse of $117.70 for the man who could walk from Dillsburg to Gettysburg and return, a distance of 44 miles, in 12 hours or less, Harrison Hursh, 40, of Franklintown, covered the distance in 10 hours and two minutes. The money was posted by residents of Dillsburg and Franklintown, in which discussion ran high as to a man's ability to walk a certain distance in given time.

Hursh started from the borough limits of Dillsburg at 5:52 o'clock, Monday morning, returning at 3:54 o'clock, Monday afternoon, an elapsed time of 10 hours and two minutes.

Mr. Hursh was followed by his son, Roy, and Richard Baish, of Dillsburg, each in an automobile, whose work was to see that the "hiker" traveled a-foot all the way, and to give aid if necessary.

The news of the famous walk seemed to have been broadcast over the countryside, along the route, as many times along the way large crowds congregated to see Hursh. At York Springs, a large crowd gathered and cheered the "hiker" as he passed through the town.

Another large audience greeted him when he reached Dillsburg on his return. Amid cheers and with great ceremony, Auctioneer Grant Westhafer, of Dillsburg, with an American flag in one hand and the purse in the other, presented Hursh with the $117.70. However, being very much fatigued, he was taken to the residence of Earl Ditmer and upon reaching there he remarked, "Well, I did the job. If any one else wants to do it, let them go to it. I'm glad I'm through."—Gettysburg Compiler.

Rev. M. W. Schweitzer Receives Appointment.

The following article, condensed, is taken from the Review, Ephrata, Pa., and will be of interest to the many friends of Rev. Mr. Schweitzer, in this locality:

"Rev. Dr. Martin W. Schweitzer, of Ephrata, was honored and given State-wide prominence this week when he was appointed Chaplain of the House of Representatives, which went into session early this week. With the prominence and recognition which goes to Rev. Dr. Schweitzer, as a result of this appointment, Ephrata, his home town, is also receiving a share of State-wide publicity.

"Rev. Dr. Schweitzer was notified of his appointment early this week, and was sworn into office on Tuesday morning at the State Capitol at Harrisburg. He succeeds as Chaplain of the House of Representatives, the Rev. Dr. George P. Donehue, a former State Librarian, of Harrisburg.

"Rev. Dr. Schweitzer is a native of this vicinity, a son of the late Rev. and Mrs. Stephen Schweitzer, and succeeded his father as pastor of the First Reformed, (Ephrata), Zion (Lincoln), Muddy Creek and Swamp congregations of the Muddy Creek Reformed Church, having been installed into that pastorate on November 22, 1914. He was in the Christian ministry however, since 1897. His first charge was in Lycoming county, this state, and for a period of nine years, prior to returning to Ephrata to succeed his deceased father, he served for a period of 9 years as pastor of the Union Bridge, Md., Reformed church, during which service he was responsible for the building of a new church edifice in the parish, and the repairing and remodeling of two others."

"Inside" Information for Women.

January freezes often mean trouble with water pipes. To thaw out a frozen pipe, apply heat gently at first, working toward the supply, never from the middle of the pipe. Open a faucet to show when the flow starts. When thawing a waste or sewer pipe, work upward from the lower end to permit the water to drain away. Apply boiling water or hot cloths at first. If there is no danger of fire a torch or burning newspaper may be tried.

Make some orange turn-over biscuits the next time you have company for tea. Use your favorite recipe for the biscuit dough, and roll it out about 1/4 inch thick. Cut out with a small biscuit cutter, and fold each one over like a pocketbook roll. Dip quickly into melted butter, drain and put in a baking pan. Meantime have ready several tablespoons of grated orange rind mixed with an equal amount of sugar. With the tip of a knife, place a small quantity of the mixture between the folds of the biscuits and spread a little over the top. Bake in a medium hot oven until lightly browned. Serve at once.

When buying sheets, be careful to get them the right size for your beds. Sheets that are too short or too narrow do not make for the comfort of the sleeper. Many people like to allow at least fourteen inches on each side for turning under and roll it out about eighteen inches on each end to tuck up at the foot and fold down over the blankets or comforters to keep them clean. Consequently such sheets would be at least twenty-eight inches wider than the mattress and from twenty-eight to thirty-six inches longer. It is now possible to buy sheets with the same width hems, top and bottom. This insures longer wear since the sheets can be reversed. Choose sheets that are torn before hemming, rather than cut, if possible, so that the hems will run straight.

One in every 23 American men and boys is named William, and one among each 29 of the country's feminine population answers to Mary. There are 2,500,000 Williams in the United States and 2,000,000 Marys.

Mr. Vare Loses Again.

Apparently, Senator Vare, of Pennsylvania, has had for quite a long while an excellent opportunity to resign from the game of politics. Of course, no man likes to withdraw from anything, in order to avoid prosecution, or to run when an enemy is in pursuit. But, Mr. Vare should consider his great state from which he has received, already, almost a lifetime of honors—or at least office-holding—and which should not be expected to have but a single Senator to look after its affairs.

If Mr. Vare's illness is genuine—and there is hardly the slightest doubt on that score—his feeling for a state that has done so much for him, should be that he has already been amply repaid for all of his services, and he no longer wants to merely have his own way about further office-holding—and he a sick man, Mr. Vare could now retire, not as a man defeated by his enemies, but due to physical handicaps, as many a conscientious man has felt compelled to do before him.

The fact that the Vare organization in Philadelphia, last week, lost its control over the Municipal Court of the city, means much, politically. It means loss of patronage, and patronage means power. And this is but one of several recent setbacks that means the same thing—the downfall of the Vare machine.

In fact, for any credit to be attached to withdrawal from the race—if it can be called that—for the Senatorship, it has already been too long delayed.

Why One, and Not the Other?

"Prohibition can not be enforced" is the cry of the wets, connected with the argument that it would "cost too much money" to fully police the country in order to catch all law-breakers. And all of this may be true; but why not play the same tune with reference to enforcing the motor laws of the state?

The state police force is notoriously too weak to anything like enforce the road laws. In fact, these laws are regularly violated in every town and community to a much greater extent than are prohibition laws. Why play lack of prohibition enforcement, and keep quiet as to the greater lack of enforcement of motor vehicle laws?

Perhaps it would "cost too much" to adequately police the roads, and perhaps these laws can not be enforced. If so, why not admit it? And, why not "repeal," or "modify" the motor vehicle laws? Such an argument would be equally as fair in one case as in the other.

Over a large portion of the state there is no attempt made to see that motorists comply with the laws. A lot more state police, and competent police courts, are needed. Perhaps it is not all the fault of the state, or the laws, but partly the fault of incorporated towns, that the laws are valueless. No matter where the fault rests, the two lots of laws—liquor and motor—deserve the same kind of consideration; for both are for the protection of life, property—and for what many commonly lose sight of—the morals, of the public.

To Report on Farm Outlook.

A report which will help farmers to organize their business on the basis of the probable domestic and foreign demand for farm products during the ensuing year will be prepared by agricultural economists meeting in Washington, D. C., the week of January 21st.

Representatives of forty-five State agricultural colleges and extension services will meet with economists of the United States Department of Agriculture, following which the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the department will issue on January 28 its annual agricultural outlook report covering each of the major agricultural products. The State colleges will then prepare State and regional reports for their respective areas, the object of which is to help farmers to plan to balance production with the probable demand at harvest time.

"One of the difficulties with agriculture," according to Nils A. Olsen, chief, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, "has been the tendency to make plans on the basis of current market prices for farm products, instead of on the basis of the probable demand at harvest time. A worldwide system for gathering economic information pertaining to our agricultural products has been set up by the bureau, and a staff of foremost agricultural economists employed to interpret the facts for the benefit of American producers and consumers."

The Right Kind of Editor.

The late Champ Clark, who spent his life in the public service and had unusual opportunities to pronounce judgment, paid the following tribute to the editor of the best type: "The right sort of an editor is one of the most useful citizens of the republic."

There are three classes of editors. One class abuse everything and everybody they are not paid to let alone. The second class possess a great, benevolent, humanitarian point of view, and try to make the world better and wiser. The men in this class are deserving of all praise and are a credit to their profession. A third class merely record facts as they appear; and these cannot properly be classed as journalists.

It takes more courage, more common sense, more information, more system and more general intelligence to conduct a good newspaper than any other business a man can get into in this life."—Selma (Ala.) Times-Journal.

The Blue and the Gray.

Sixty-four years ago there ended a struggle which had threatened the very existence of our nation. A struggle in which two sections of our country had arrayed themselves against each other and fought for four years with bitter hatred. At that time it seemed to many impossible that the wound would ever heal, that enmities could be forgotten. Today, so complete has been the reunion of the two factions that it seems even more impossible that such a tragic affair could have occurred.

There remain but a few of the Blue and of the Gray who fought so valiantly and stubbornly for what each believed to be the right. With the passage of years they have forgiven and forgotten. Since the time of that futile conflict their descendants have fought side by side and with equal valor for the glory of the Stars and Stripes. It could not be said those of the North are more patriotic than those of the South.

These remaining few are fast succumbing to the ravages of time. While there are yet some of those two great hosts for whom taps have not been sounded, it is planned that there be held, in the city of Washington in the year 1929, a grand reunion.

To this end Congressman Edgar Howard, of Nebraska, has introduced a bill to provide for an appropriation to bear the expense of such a reunion and the appointment of a commission to carry out the plans. The commission, as provided in the bill, would consist of the General of the United States Army, the commander of the Spanish-American War Veterans, the commander of the American Legion, the commander of Veterans of Foreign Wars, and such other persons as the President of the United States may appoint.

Such a reunion, symbolizing the complete unity of our nation, following the historic assemblies of the Blue and the Gray at Gettysburg, Vicksburg and Stony Mountain, and the return of captured battle flags, would be an event of national significance and serve as an inspirational object lesson to our people for generations to come.

"Old Grouch" on the Roads Investigation.

Last week's issue of The Observer, Baltimore, concluded "Old Grouch's" weekly letter as follows:

"What do you think will be the outcome of all the State Roads investigations?" asked the reporter.

"I reckon the main outcome will add to the income of all the lawyers they be threatening to enlist," replied O. G. "You know lawyers as is got a good regular trade don't work for no promises. They got a living to make."

"Do you think the investigators will find anything new?" inquired the reporter.

"That's something like a case in court," O. G. replied. "It depends on the witnesses. But you can take it from me that that new Commission will think it over a long time before they put campaign buttons on their engineers for a fourth term. A good lesson is at last been learnt. Good day."

Enormous Power of Resistance in Barrel

Nobody knows who invented the barrel. It has been used since time immemorial.

Barrels are used for all manner of articles, solid and liquid. There are barrels for holding sugar, salt, apples, potatoes and so on; for all sorts of oils, from the heaviest lubricants to the most volatile products of petroleum; for all sorts of beverages. It is contended that the barrel is the strongest structure of its size that can be made from an equal amount of wood. Its contents are frequently the strongest that can be made from liquids.

The barrel possesses tremendous power of resistance to pressure from within and from without. A barrel set on end will, it is claimed, support half the weight of a railway car while the truck is taken from beneath for repairs. Yet the primitive barrel is put together without nails, screws, bolts or pins; it is entirely self-fastened.

The barrel is smaller at its ends than it is in the middle, so that the wooden hoops, self-locking, may be driven on, tightening the staves and pressing the heads into the chimes. Although not casked, barrels are water tight. A small barrel is a keg, a big barrel is a cask, and a still bigger barrel is a hogshead.

"Rebel's" Good Reason for Self-Accusation

Just after the assassination of President-Elect Oregon of Mexico, people were seeing rebels in every stranger, but there was real surprise at police headquarters in Mexico City when a man with battered rifle and full cartridge belt presented himself and told Senor Robelo that he was a rebel.

They took him at his word and locked him up, but the chief, in the meantime, sent out detectives to get a line on the man. A week later, having reported that they could find nothing concerning him, the chief brought the self-sentenced prisoner before him. He was the picture of misery and squalor.

"Where did you fight, as a rebel?" asked the assistant chief of public safety.

"Nowhere, senor," was the surprising reply.

"What? Then why give yourself up as a rebel?"

"Because," sighed the wretch, "I would rather be shot than go back to my wife."

Singer's "Parlor Car"

Although it seems reasonable that a woman should have a finger in anything connected with a parlor, yet it is perhaps not generally known that Jenny Lind, the famous singer, was in a large degree responsible for the modern "parlor car." When she came to America with P. T. Barnum, the engagements of her tour obliged her to spend much of her time traveling from place to place on the wretched railroads of the period. To ease the discomforts of the trip, she had the seats removed from an ordinary car and replaced with chairs, tables, couches and such pieces of furniture as might be found in an ordinary parlor. She called it jokingly her "parlor car," and out of her idea grew the present Pullman chair car.

What Would You Do?

"I have only been married four months and sure got an ideal husband. We have an acre of land and are real happy, except that my husband makes me so nervous by walking in his sleep and he tries to get out of the window. Last night he carried all the clothes on the front porch. I can't understand this. It seems to be a dream. Is there any way to overcome this awful thing? He does this I can hardly breathe. Please tell me what to do," a young wife inquires.—Los Angeles Express.

Liberia

The population of Liberia is entirely of the African race; about 100,000 of the dwellers along the coast may be considered civilized. The number of American negroes is estimated at 20,000. Liberia was founded in 1822, when a settlement was made at Monrovia by negro freedmen from the United States with the assistance of American colonization societies. It was declared a free and independent republic on July 26, 1847. Its constitution is modeled on that of the United States. Electors must be of negro blood and owners of land.

Yale's Football Song

It is a Yale tradition that "Boola-Boola," the football song of that university, was introduced to the class of 1901 by Albert Hunt Marckwald after he had heard it sung in the South Sea Islands. As a native ditty it had been sung there for centuries, and Marckwald started the class singing it simply as a folksong. Another student, Allan Mortimer Hirsch, took it up as a group song, then as a football air, finally having it set to music as a popular song.—Detroit News.

Loyalty Supreme Test

Loyalty is one of the finest virtues a man can acquire. It is a hallmark of character. Loyalty to yourself, to your friends, to your job stamps you as one who is faithful in one of the greatest tests that can come to man.—Grit.

Thin Film of Metal New Scientific Wonder

Films of metal so thin that they are utterly invisible to the human eye have not only been produced, but also measured in the Bell laboratories in New York city. In experiments to improve the design of photo-electric cells for television, layers of light-sensitive metal known as rubidium, of various thicknesses, were deposited inside glass tubes. When best results were obtained with one particular film, says Popular Science Monthly, the task remained to measure it.

Ordinary methods were out of the question, for the metal particles were beyond the range of the most powerful microscopes. An entirely new method was devised. Polarized light, which is ordinary light shot through a grating that changes a "round" beam into a flat one, like toothpaste issuing from a tube, is twisted in passing through the metal rubidium; and the amount of twist depends upon the metal's thickness. By using polarized light the experimenters found the thickness of their best metal film to be just one atom, or about 1-500,000-000 of an inch.

Find Many Mementoes of Past Civilizations

Ruins of Butrinto, scene of incidents in Virgil's Aeneid, have been dug into by the Italian archaeological mission to Albania with striking results. Butrinto is on the west coast of the Greek peninsula, opposite the heel of Italy. In the Aeneid, Tellemus, son of Priam, and his wife, Andromache, became rulers of this part of the country and built a town at this site, patterned after the famous Troy.

Dr. Luigi Ugolini, head of the mission, has reported recent discoveries of five beautiful statues of Greek origin at Butrinto, one statue possibly being the work of the great Praxiteles. Remains of the different civilizations that occupied the site were found; bone knives of the prehistoric Stone age, buckles from the Bronze age; ruins of the Greek and Roman towns and a Byzantine baptistry of the fifth century A. D.—Exchange.

Ahead of Euclid

Wise men of Egypt knew Euclid's mathematical methods 15 centuries before the famous Greek organized the subject and set his material down in such perfect form that college boys still study "Euclid." Proof is available through the translation of the "Mathematical Papyrus" which lies in the collection at the Hermitage museum, and has long challenged the best efforts of Egyptologists. A report from Leningrad states that this papyrus has finally been deciphered. It dates back to the Eighteenth century before Christ. "Mathematical methods applied in the papyrus are almost 1,500 years ahead of Euclid, corresponding entirely to the present time," the dispatch asserts.

Pattern for a Dress

Little Fatsy is a youngster of delicate sensibilities when it comes to matters artistic. After an exquisite symphony at the theater, she breathed a sigh of joy and murmured:

"Mamma, I wish I had a dress just like that music."

The boys' and girls' glee clubs, of New Windsor High School present "In Arcady" an operetta in two-acts on Monday evening, Jan. 28. It is a Birchard production with music by Arthur Bergh and libretto by David Stevens.

"In Arcady" is above the average in high school operettas. The music is full of colorful harmonies and tuneful melodies. The choruses are quite "peppy" and have plenty of good ensemble singing and dancing.

The cast is well chosen. The high school is very fortunate in having Mr. Nevin Fisher, well-known tenor take the leading part as Jack Hunter. Arlene Guyton, soprano, is his leading lady and takes the part of Virginia, daughter of Congressman Woodbine. Others in the cast of characters are Jeanette Bittner, Julia Roop, Elizabeth Buckley, Paul Lambert, Irvin Smelser, George Smith and James Lantz.

The plot of the story is interesting and intricate throughout. Many laughs await you and a good wholesome entertainment.

Why Science Says
"Keep Your Summer Tan"

And How You Can Get Real
"Indoor Tan" After The Vacation Is Over

IN the light of recent scientific research a coat of tan has definitely become the mark of the physically fit. You are never healthier than when you come back from your vacation, browned and invigorated. And science advises you, "Don't lose it; keep that ruddy and glowing look!"

Heliotherapy, or sun-treatment, although long considered beneficial to a certain extent, came into especial favor during the World War, when surgeons found that exposure to sunlight hastened the healing of wounds and that treatment by sunlight was an aid to convalescence. In recent years sunbaths have become an accepted practice. Once women felt it necessary to protect themselves from sunshine. Last season saw a rush of debutantes to the beach, however, to acquire a fashionable coat of tan.

Tanning is a good thing during vacation, but it shouldn't end there. Medical authorities advise. Get all the sun you can, all the year 'round, on all parts of your anatomy, is their counsel. But don't overdo it at first. Take it gradually.

Analyzing Light

A ray of light is a very complex affair. When passed through a glass prism it will present the orderly arrangement of colors called a "spectrum," the visible colors of which are shown by that other phenomenon of nature, the rainbow. Each color represents a different wave length. These visible rays, however, constitute only a small portion of the entire ray. It is the combination of all these rays that we call light and it is a combination of these visible and invisible rays, in the proportionate quantities and qualities which make up natural sunlight, that produces this energizing force.

In the lower layers of our atmosphere these rays are cut off or absorbed by dust, smoke or fog. Hence they are least present in the places where they are most needed, the thickly populated cities and industrial regions. They also are cut off by clothing and window glass. Thus persons living the normal city life are largely deprived of these health-giving rays, if only on account of the high and closely placed buildings and the smoke pollution

Broadway actresses have learned how to make up their "sunlight deficiency" with the carbon arc sunshine lamp.

Above, many successful children's hospitals are making the "sunlight parade" a routine event for their little patients.

the combination of rays in natural sunlight the great problem has been to simulate the light of the sun. It has been recognized that once this is accomplished mankind will at last have found the real "Foundation of Health and Youth."

The government through the United States Bureau of Standards has taken an active interest in this work, and as a result this bureau announced recently that of all artificial sources the carbon arc is found to provide the closest approach to natural sunlight.

Following this finding by the Government Bureau, the carbon arc industry came forward with its co-operation and put this discovery in practical form for everyday home use. These sunshine machines give off the vital rays in approximately their natural form merely by plugging into an ordinary electrical outlet and it is the users of them who are boasting this unaccountable winter tan!

Carbon Arc Secret

Although few are aware of the fact, the same question—put, of course, in much more technical language—is what a number of the world's leading scientists have been asking for some time past. Various ones among them have been able to solve the problem of how to manufacture synthetic reproductions of a small part of the composition known as sunlight, but since man for many thousands of years has responded to

in American History

Boston's famous Beacon hill acquired that name in 1634 when King Charles commanded the Massachusetts colony to surrender its charter and annulled all land titles. The whole of New England suddenly found itself partitioned among a favored few in the mother country, and the thumb of a royal governor general bore down hard. At the head of a commission holding the powers of life and death over the colonists was an archbishop who had acquired considerable reputation as an heresy hunter. The colony was only four years old, but in no uncertain spirit it rebelled and soon after John Endicott's sword had slashed the red cross from the royal ensign at Salem a fort was erected at Castle Island in Boston harbor. Citizens drilled earnestly on the common and in the small towns around. As a means of quick communication a beacon was erected on the highest eminence of the capital—and that hill was named, for as long, probably, as America endures.—Detroit News.

Printer Also Had a
Proposition to Make

It seems that a printer somewhere down in Texas got slightly peeved at a letter from a doctor who wanted bids on several thousand letterheads and statements, different sizes, different grades of paper and printed in various colors; with the request that the forms be kept standing for possible reprint orders.

So Mr. Printer diagnosed the case carefully and answered something in this manner:

"Am in the market for bids on one operation for appendicitis—one, two, and five-inch incision, with and without nurse. If appendix is found to be sound, want quotations to include putting same back and canceling order. If removed, successful bidder is expected to hold incision open for about sixty days, as I expect to be in the market for an operation for gallstones at that time and want to save the cost of cutting."—Forbes Magazine.

Navaho Blankets

The Smithsonian Institution says: "The Yebechai are nature gods of the Navaho whose chief function is healing the sick. The so-called Yebechai 'dance' is a ceremony for this purpose. Up to some years ago representations of the gods were painted in colored sands at the ceremony and wiped out at the close. Later, the Navaho began to weave the Yebechai figures in rugs for sale. These rugs are usually made on a hand loom. This may easily be told if the designs are alike on both sides as to form and color. Such specimens were never common."

L'Enfant Planned Open
Space in Washington

"Mall" was originally the name of the mall used in playing pall-mall, a game in which a ball was driven with a mallet. In time "mall" was applied to the game itself, and by extension to the place where the game was played. Thus Pall-Mall (pronounced pell-mell), a famous street in London, received its name from the fact that the site was formerly a pall-mall alley. In the United States "The Mall" is applied specifically to a strip of land lying between the capitol and the Washington monument. It is bounded on the east by the capitol grounds, on the south by Maryland avenue and B Street Southwest, on the north by Pennsylvania avenue and B Street Northwest, and on the west by Seventeenth street. It includes the botanic garden, East Seaton park, West Seaton park, Henry park, Smithsonian grounds, agricultural grounds and the monument grounds. In the original plans prepared by the French engineer, L'Enfant, and approved by Washington, the Mall was to be 1,600 feet wide and was to present an unobstructed vista from the monument to the capitol. This plan was departed from, and there are now a number of buildings on the Mall. L'Enfant did not use the name "Mall" on his maps of Washington. On the original L'Enfant map, as well as on the maps of 1792 and 1822, this area is designated "Appropriation No. 2." After those dates the name "Mall" appears regularly in connection with the area in question.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Bank Account Belied
Old Man's Appearance

A woman who does much free-lance charity work was accosted on Walnut street by a bent-over old man selling lead pencils.

Upon having a handful of the stock-in-trade thrust under her nose she opened her handbag and offered the old fellow a dime, remarking: "Keep the pencil. I do not need it."

Upon further inspection of the old peddler's rags and his feeble frame her huge heart outswelled its bounds. "Suppose," she said, "I take you into that bank and start a small savings account for you. You are getting old and will not be able to sell pencils much longer?"

"I have a bank account there, thank you," was the old man's rejoinder.

"Well, then," she persisted, "allow me at least to add a few dollars to it."

The old man agreed and they walked together a half block to the bank.

"Now let me have your book," said the woman as they entered the bank building.

As she approached the receiving teller's cage she casually opened the book. The page she turned totaled $4,362.50.

"Safety First" Idea

The bureau of mines says that the phrase "Safety first" became a national slogan in the year 1911, when the bureau of mines gave a national safety first demonstration at Pittsburgh, Pa. Previous to this, the phrase "Safety Is the First Consideration" was used on the stationery and among the employees of the H. C. Frick Coke and Steel company of Pittsburgh and the Illinois Steel company of Chicago. But since the national demonstration these firms and a great many others dealing with safety appliances have adopted this phrase.

Logical "Arithmetic"

The children were playing school and naturally the oldest sister was teacher. She was putting the "class" through the intricacies of arithmetic.

"Put down the 6 and carry the 4; put down the 8 and carry the 1," she taught. Finally she turned to little sister, who had been listening quietly and attentively.

"Now, Edith," she said, "you're only a little girl, so I'll give you an easy question. Add 1 and 2."

"Well," answered Edith slowly, "I think I'll carry the 1 and let the 2 walk, 'cause the 2's bigger than the 1."—Exchange.

Parrot Loved a Puppy

An uncommon story of a parrot's supreme love for a puppy comes from Charleston. A month ago the owner of the parrot adopted a puppy a few days old, which had lost its mother.

The helpless state of the dog seemed to have been understood by the parrot, which at once made its home beside it in its basket, kept it warm with its outstretched wings, and permitted no one to approach its protegee except its master at feeding time.

Unfortunately the puppy died. The parrot was inconsolable, refused to eat or drink, and has also died.

Colorful Javanese People

The natives of western Java are generally considered the most intelligent and agreeable of all the millions in the close populated island. The varied and radiant hues of their raiment, the adornment of finger and ankle and wrist, the true artistry of an occasional batik "sarong" lend them a picturesqueness unknown to the simpler-garbed Tahitian. Along the wayside everywhere they are grouped in a colorful multitude, for this is Sunday morning, and the Dutch see to it that Sunday is, as far as possible, a day of rest in Java.

Fight for "Women's Rights"

As early as 1848 agitation for women's rights was commenced at Seneca Falls, N. Y., by Lucretia Mott and Elizabeth Cady Stanton. Prior to this, under some colonial governors, women voted, and at the time of the American Revolution demanded to be included in the government. Susan B. Anthony became a leader in 1848, but it was not until 1872 that she made the test by voting at the polls. She was arrested and fined, but was not jailed for refusing to pay her fine, which she did. In 1875 the first woman suffrage amendment was drafted and introduced in 1878 by Senator Sargent of Colorado. Several other measures were introduced later, and an amendment to the Constitution was passed by the house January 10, 1918, and by the senate, 1919, and was ratified by the necessary number of states in 1920.

Living Things Thrive Under Canopy of Ice

Life proceeds calmly enough within every pond and stream roofed over with its glassy canopy like a natural hothouse. Peer down through the clear ice and you will see the plants are green, though small, and that there are fishes gliding about. Their scales, however, show that they grow but little now. There is enough to eat, but their appetite is poor.

The land snails spin storm doors athwart the opening of the shell, and, creeping into some secure crevice, become dormant; but the pond snails move about as usual, but build no new shells.

The small aquatic creatures still creep lazily over the fermenting mud or ensconce themselves in its depths. The water spider is wrapped in a glistening bubble of the air he took down with him.

All these tiny creatures of nature's underworld are at ease. There is no need now for activity, little necessity for hunting or fleeing. Hunger is stilled, no energy need be expended in producing eggs or in the distress of molting; and so, like the plants, the animals lie still, recuperate from the waste of one summer and gather strength for the next.

Skelligs List Survival of Old Irish Custom

The Skelligs list is at once the dread and the joy of unmarried Irish youths and maidens in Valencia, Ireland, westernmost point of Europe.

The list, the Kansas City Star informs us, is nothing more than a succession of names of such young men and women, but it is supposed to bring them a wife or a husband within a year if their name is upon it.

The Skelligs list is the survival of an ancient custom founded on the Skelligs rocks, two huge rocks, 850 feet high, which protrude from the ocean 14 miles from the coast. When young men and women, so ran the legend, refused to marry, they were taken to the rocks and left there for a week. At the end of the week they were forced to marry other obstinate young eligibles.

The great Skellig rock was once the site of a religious foundation dedicated to the archangel, St. Michael. The remains of the cells and chapel of the monastery are still well preserved. They are mostly of conical shape, and are built of uncemented stones.

Earliest "God's Houses"

It is curious to find a clergyman putting forward the view that the title, "The Lord's House," applied to churches, was originally given to them because lords of the manor held courts there. This appears in a book about a remote Kent parish. All Hallows, Hoo. It is certainly true, as the author contends, that churches in pre-Reformation days were more like village halls. Plays were acted in them and inquiries of any kind held; sometimes valuable were stored there. But they were to the people God's houses even more than they are now.

Highway Trees

The plan advanced in some quarters of planting fruit trees along state highways, to blossom in spring and bear fruit in season, is a beautiful thought, but who will prune, spray and cultivate all such trees? If they are not scientifically treated they will become breeding places for insect pests which will then turn their attention to nearby orchards. The proposal to organize a voluntary association to plant shade trees and flowering shrubs is much more sensible.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Call for "City Beautiful"

People are drawn to a community by other lures than those of a commercial character, since they seek, not only a place to carry on business, but a home, and so they are greatly interested in living conditions. This side of the city's life cannot be overlooked or neglected without serious effect on its growth. The handsomeness that all should strive for need not be costly. It will pay dividends of all sorts, both commercial and esthetic. There is always the demand for "the city beautiful."

Some Lusting Dents

Don't use inferior paint. It costs less a gallon but more a square foot. Don't rush your painter. Let him do a good job. Don't paint in snowy or rainy weather. "Washing" of the paint will result. Don't delay priming new wood. It will weather if neglected. Don't paint before the lumber is dry. The surface will become blistered. Don't skimp on paint. Three coats cost less in the long run than two.

Community Building

Fence Great Adjunct to Exterior of Home

Many a rear lawn and even some of the front yards are now hemmed in with fences, but they are not merely installed as something useful, without regard to the ornamental side, not these modern fences.

The home owner picks his fence as carefully as he does his light fixtures and wall decorations. He calls in an experienced fence "architect" to build the proper type. "Custom built" fences are now a commodity that are called for frequently. There seems to be as many styles in fences as in frocks nowadays, for various fashions in gardens must be matched in fencing. Gardens are no longer simple or nondescript, however, but demand many accessories aside from fences, pergolas, trellises, birdhouses that must match the fence, if there be one.

A popular type fence is of ornamental woven wire, with red cedar posts. A chain link lawn fence also is in demand, for certain type yards or gardens, with the attractive and ornamental wooden fences painted white in trellis effect, or in quaint picket fashion, with graceful gates or archways that gleam enticingly through vines and tall shrubbery, when gardens are luxuriant in the summer.

The old-fashioned type of ornamental miniature wire fence inclosures for flower beds also are back in fashion again, and the formal garden takes on an added "antique" note, with fenced-in flower pots.

Principle That Pays in City Improvement

The beauty of many European cities is due to the fact that long ago they adopted the principle of excess condemnation, and were thus enabled not only to save money on the cost of the work, but to insure that its surroundings be in harmony with the plan after they had passed back into private hands. One of the most noted examples of the practice of excess condemnation is the thoroughfare in London called Kingsway, which was cut through the heart of a slum quarter, and now is lined by some of the very finest buildings in the world. At its foot is situated the Bush building, built by American capital, but nevertheless a structure in which all London takes pride. If a similar opportunity were given American cities they too could create similar improvements with assurance that the taxpayers' money would not be spent in vain. —Detroit News.

Hailed as Town Benefactor.

To Exeter in 1823 came a man from some Western state to visit a sister. He had gone West long years before. Exeter had up to that time given little thought to shade trees, in fact, cutting down great trees had been a frequent occurrence. The visitor from the West was a man of means and shortly after his arrival he gave out that he would pay a certain sum in cash to every person who planted a shade tree. Many accepted the proposal and the planting of young trees all around town was quite general, although the generous visitor was regarded as crazy. Those who had been cutting down trees laughed at the new idea, but the work went on. The visitor stressed the value of the elm and the maple and these were the trees generally planted. When the Westerner concluded his visit to his sister and returned home Exeter's streets were lined with thrifty young trees. And to this unnamed benefactor Exeter owes most of its now beautiful shade trees and it is a pity that his name did not come down with the fruits of his vision. —Exeter (Ore.) News-Letter.

Proper School Lighting.

Because of eyestrain in schools due to improper lighting the Illuminating Engineering society in the United States has framed a lighting code for schools which authorities consider adequate. The only state whose schools are reported to conform to this code are New York, Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin. Other states and territories are studying the code with the idea of applying it.

Slate Used as Flagging.

For many generations slate has been recognized as an ideal flagging for terraces and walks. The slate is quarried and cut in the color tones and sizes required for each contract. It is practically everlasting and admirably adapted for garden walks and flooring—inside and out.

Architectural Co-operation.

Collaboration between architect and craftsman is being recognized today as the most essential element in the development of a more refined American architecture.

Grudges and Happiness.

If you want to be happy in a small town, says the small town philosopher, bear no grudges. —American Magazine.

Art of Interest.

Good neighbors early learn the art of being interested without being inquisitive. —American Magazine.

Queen of Song

Attempted Too Much

The failure of many artists who remain unknown comes from the fact that they do not know in what direction their power lies. The failures of great artists nearly always come from their lack of knowledge of their own limitations. Few can, indeed, go on for long years with a record like that of Madame Adelina Patti, of whom it is said that she had but one real failure in her artistic life. She was over fifty years old and had been a leading opera singer for over thirty years when, attracted by the opportunities which the role of Carmen gives, she undertook to sing it at Covent Garden, London. With her voice still beautiful, her stage technique at its strongest and her immense popularity, even she could not adapt herself to a role that was conceived for a different type of voice and a different type of person. She, the greatest singer of the century, failed to do what scores of lesser artists were doing well, and what had proved the inspiration of some of those who were nearest to her in greatness.

"Break" Too Apparent Even for Englishman

This has been held back for obvious reasons but it's too good to keep. It seems that one of an English party who were recent visitors in Los Angeles, was quite taken with a movie girl, who pretended to be a star but wasn't. Nevertheless, she was very pretty, too pretty, in fact, for a devoted admirer to question.

She had him hooked, too, and then made one of those dumb slips which even an Englishman gets.

"Are you sure you love me?" she demanded, after they had held hands all through a talkie.

"My dear, you can bank on it," was the answer.

"Oh, goodie! Which bank, dearest?" she cried and it was all over but the regrets.

World's Finest Opals

What is claimed to be the finest specimen of Australia's own particular gem, the opal, has just been discovered near Walgett, New South Wales. It is a wonderful stone, and when roughly dressed measured six and one-half inches by two inches, and weighed 790 carats.

Some of the world's most magnificent opals have come from the fields of New South Wales, and of all dressed stones perhaps the choicest is the "Flame Queen" which measures more than two inches by nearly two and one-half inches and weighs 253 carats.

Red, green, orange, blue, gold, and every known color are blended in the newly discovered gem, which is valued at more than $10,000. —Vancouver Province.

Home of Heroine Sold

Kingsbury, the home of Flora MacDonald, rescuer of Bonnie Prince Charlie, was recently sold, the mansion house and grounds bringing only $7,800. Boswell, in his immortal journal, tells of the visit which he and Dr. Samuel Johnson paid on September 13, 1773, to the then famous house at Flogdary, Scotland. Doctor Johnson, in describing the visit, wrote: "We were entertained with the usual hospitality of Mr. MacDonald and his lady, Flora MacDonald, a name that will be mentioned in history, and if courage and fidelity be virtues, mentioned with honor." Doctor Johnson slept in the bed which Prince Charlie had occupied on the flight.

Hemaris Diffinis

The adults of this genus of humming-bird moths have wings from which part of the scales rub off so early that they are almost never seen and those portions of the wings are therefore described as transparent. These adults have the unorthodox habit of flying in the bright sunlight and when hovering at flowers, they closely resemble hummingbirds. When flying it suggests a bumble bee. The larvae feed on relatives of the honeysuckle such as snowberry and viburnum. They usually pupate in fallen leaves and generally make a queer sort of cocoon.

"Caracul" Fur

A dictionary of fur names says: "Caracul—also known as astrakhan. Sheep family. Habitat: Tashkent, and some of the provinces of southern Russia which are also called 'Russian Caracul.' The Tashkent caraculs have the highest luster and the finest moire markings. Russian caraculs vary in color as brown, black, brown and black, or brown and white, and occasionally white. Caraculs are bred to some extent in the United States and Canada. They are also found in China and Mongolia. These are generally white, are heavier and have a looser curl."

Truly Hospitable

A former college president was invited to lunch at the home of one of his alumni. The five-year-old daughter of the house was delighted to show the distinguished guest up to wash his hands. Opening the door of the bathroom, which was duly fitted out with the best embroidered linens in honor of the occasion, Kelly said:

"Just make yourself at home, and—with a royal gesture—"you may use one of the towels." —Indianapolis News.

JENED

It took the rescuers half an hour to clear away the mass of stones from the unfortunate man on whom the wall had fallen, and they had no expectation of finding him other than crushed flat.

To their amazement, he rose to his feet and asked for a clothes brush.

"Aren't you crushed?" asked one onlooker.

"Not likely," said he, with a smile. "I go through worse every evening. I teach dancing at a night club."

No Light in Darkness.

The night was as black as pitch when the two negro blacksmiths dressed in mourning rode through the streets of Blackburn.

"Wonder why Black was blackballed at the lodge tonight," said one.

"I don't know. I'm just as much in the dark about it as you are."

WOULD NEVER MARRY

"I won't marry any man unless I know all about him."

"And you probably won't marry any man if you do."

Up-to-Date Bug.

I envy you, little firefly. You worry not a bit. For when you see a traffic cop You know your tail-light's lit.

Could Testify to That

Bill—That Jane you've got with you tonight looks like a September morn—almost.

Jack—Well, I've just paid our dinner check, and, while she may not have much on the outside, I'll tell the world she's got plenty on the inside.

Silk Stockings.

They were discussing silk stockings. "They were invented in Queen Elizabeth's time," said the man who knows everything.

"Yes," commented another, "but they weren't discovered till the Twentieth century."

No Cause for Worry.

Business Man (reading telegram)—Good heavens! My wife has gone off with my chauffeur.

Acquaintance—Don't worry! My mother is giving up her car and her chauffeur wants a job!

POOR MEMORY

Wife—Dear, will you meet mother with the car at the station and show her the way home?

Hubby—Betcha life! Where does she live?

No Darning.

The legs of hoseless flappers may, of course, Get freckled by the sun, But bare legs have 'least one advantage—they never run.

No Change.

"Has Meyer changed much in the years he has been away?"

"No, but he thinks he has."

"How so?"

"Why, he is always talking about what a fool he used to be."

Cause of Howl.

Passenger on a Branch Line Railroad (to conductor)—Why does the engine always let out such a piteous howl when we pass this spot?

"Because it was here the engineer first met his wife."

As Seen by the Mother.

Mr. Goodfote—Can any child here tell me what is meant by original sin?

Ah, yes, you James.

Little Jimmie—My ma says it's the cussedness a kid inherits from his pa.

Between Girls.

"Would you marry a man who had spent his money in riotous living?"

"No, but I might join up with a man who was just starting out."

Pronounced Wrong.

"There is one word that is always pronounced wrong."

"What word is that?"

"Wrong, of course."

Preserving Music of Pacific Coast Indians

Every day the halls of the anthropology department of the University of California ring out with the low, plaintive music of the Indian tribes of the Pacific coast. One unacquainted with the proceedings might be led to think that a war dance was in progress, but the fact is that for many years the university management has been engaged in collecting phonographic records on which are preserved the old-time songs and dance music and dances of the Indians of the Pacific slope. They have succeeded in recording some gems. For instance, it has heretofore been impossible to get the Indians to render the "Cry Dance" song, which is one sung by professional mourners at funerals, and those who are familiar with it regard it as unlucky to sing a death song when there is no death. The Lost Bear Club's Lament is a bad ballad in a minor key which tells the tale of a bewildered little bear stumbling through the woods searching for its mother. These records are gone over daily by one of the faculty who is endeavoring to fathom the system which was made use of in the composition.

Wood Cups and Bowls Once Highly Prized

Wooden trenchers, commonly called "treen" were in common use during the Middle Ages in Great Britain. "Masers" or cups and bowls were frequently mentioned in wills and inventories. The finer specimens belonged to the richer abbots—thus, there was the Great maser at York, the Judas cup at Durham, and at St. Saviour's, Southwark, there was "a maser with a border and knob of sylvester and gilt which was given to the church wardens to drink when they met." These valuable wooden cups were sometimes ornamented by a rim of silver, but otherwise they were seldom decorated by more than a few low moldings or incised lines. Their value and beauty lay in the graining of the wood, generally maple, and the old turners chose the part of the trunk where it divided off into branches so as to obtain the speckled bird's eye graining. By Tudor times pewter began to take the place of tree, though poorer folk continued to use these wooden trenchers and bowls till much later, especially in the north of England and in Scotland.

Weather Prophets

Certain creatures anticipate changes in the weather and indicate their foreknowledge by strange actions. They seem to feel uneasy, and then take necessary precautions. When they foresee bad weather, bees go out very early in the morning, keep near their hives, return suddenly with partial loads of nectar and become easily irritated, attacking those who approach. The garden spider turns its head toward the interior of its hole and strengthens its web with numerous extra threads.

Ducks raise themselves on their toes, make a great outcry and seem to be excited. Roosters crow at evening, or at other unaccustomed times. Oxen raise their muzzles into the air, as if to sniff the wind, and then huddle together. The mule appears sad, the marmot whistles, and the fox and the jackal whine. Ants stop work and retire to their underground galleries. Swallows skim close to the ground and snails come from their holes.

Mouse Fed to Welsh Boy

Peculiar folk medicines and treatments still exist in Wales, and there is a fantastic employment of drugs of animal origin in that country, declared Dr. E. R. Williams at a meeting of the British Medical association at Cardiff, Wales. Goose grease, he said, was still held to for wheezing chests and sore throats, spiders' webs still had some vogue for cuts, and salt bacon is quite a favorite for boils and whitlows. Doctor Williams added that he was credibly informed that about a year ago, on the advice of a "wise woman," a mouse was roasted alive and the pulverized ashes administered in porridge to a small boy who suffered from a childish ailment.

The Sahara

The true Sahara is a great desert that stretches, a bare and dead world of its own, all across Africa. A strange world it is, for it has mountains, valleys and plains like the living world, save that nothing grows to cover the bare ribs of the earth, and nothing moves but the great winds, and now and then the wandering Arabs.

The desert is of four sorts, the rock desert, the desert of dry salt lake beds, the desert of flat sand tied down by sage and cactus, and the desert of the moving dunes of sand.—Eunice Tietjens, in Child Life Magazine.

Twain No Plagiarist

Mark Twain's famous "Jumping Frog" story caused much discussion. Twain related the story as having happened in Calaveras county, Calif., in 1849. Professor Van Dyke of Princeton pointed to the fact that the story is told in ancient Greek as having happened 2,000 years ago. Clemens felt that the California story could not have been based upon the Greek one, since the man who told the story as a fact was a simple, ignorant fellow with no contact with literature. Clemens decided that the similarity of the two tales should be laid to coincidence.

Lesson for January 27

THE HOLY SPIRIT

LESSON TEXT—John, 16:7-11; Romans 8:12-17, 26, 27.

GOLDEN TEXT—For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, these are sons of God.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Our Unseen Helper.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Our Unseen Helper. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How the Holy Spirit Helps Us. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Work of the Holy Spirit.

I. The Personality of the Spirit (John 16:7, 8).

Personality is here implied by the use of the personal pronoun. In the original Scriptures personal pronouns are used uniformly in speaking of the Spirit. Then, too, He is called the Comforter. The word "comforter" literally means one called to stand by the side of another as a helper, counsellor and guide. While Jesus sojournd in the world He was such to His disciples. He assured them that upon His withdrawal the Holy Spirit would take His place as friend, helper and counsellor. The personality of the Spirit is also proved by the fact that He performs acts only possible to persons. In John 14:26 He performs the function of a teacher. He not only teaches, but He speaks as a person, giving direction to the disciples as in Acts 8:29 and 13:2. His personality is again proved by the fact that men act toward Him as they could act only toward a person. In Isaiah 63:10 the prophet declared that men vexed the Holy Spirit. It would be manifestly improper to speak of vexing an influence; only a person can be vexed. In Matthew 12:31 Jesus speaks of men blaspheming against the Holy Spirit. It would be impossible to blaspheme against an influence. In Ephesians 4:30 Paul speaks of grieving the Spirit. Again, it would be manifestly improper to speak of grieving an influence. Further, in 1 Corinthians 12:31 Paul speaks of the Holy Spirit exercising the function of will. One of the essential characteristics of personality is that of volition. The Holy Spirit is represented as divine. He has the attributes of deity. In Psalm 139:7-10 He is declared to be omnipresent; in 1 Corinthians 2:9-11 omniscient. He also performs the works of God. He is the creator and renewer (1's 104:30). He is called God in Acts 5:3-4, and 11 Corinthians 3:18.

II. How Believers are Related to the Holy Spirit. They are regenerated by Him (John 3:5-8); they are in dwell by Him (1 Cor. 6:19 Gal. 4:6). He also fills (Eph. 5:18 and Acts 4:31). To be filled with the Holy Spirit is the duty of every believer. No one has the right to perform any work for Christ without this filling (Luke 24:48-49; Acts 1:8). Even the temporalities of the church should be in the hands of Spirit-filled men (Acts 6:1-3).

III. What the Holy Spirit Does (John 16:8-11).

1. Convicts the world of sin (v. 8). The one awful sin of the world is unbelief. The Holy Spirit convicts the people of the world of their error concerning sin and shows their guilt before God.

2. He convicts the world of righteousness (v. 10).

The resurrection and ascension of Christ prove that He is the Righteous One, and that righteousness is only possible as He is accepted as Savior.

3. He convinces the world of judgment.

To be convinced of the reality of judgment is the crying need of the world today. Sin unatoned for shall be punished. The sinner who refuses the righteousness which God provided in Jesus Christ also shall be judged.

4. The Spirit mortifies the deeds of the flesh (Rom. 8:12, 13).

The only way to get the victory over our carnal natures is to give the place of rulership to the Holy Spirit.

5. He leads the believer (v. 14). The Spirit-filled believer lives the life of the Son of God.

6. He gives assurance to the believer (Rom. 8:15-17).

The Holy Spirit witnesses together with the human spirit to the reality of the new birth.

7. He enables the believer to pray according to the will of God (Rom. 8:26, 27).

While the believer does not know how to pray as he ought, the Holy Spirit helpeth his infirmity. All prayer which the Holy Spirit indites the Heavenly Father answers.

A Ruined Day

The whole day may be ruined by an impatient word, a prejudiced judgment, a hasty decision, a fit of ungoverned temper.—J. C. Massee.

All Prayers Not Answered

Battle Won by Prayer

Why talk so much? The battle is won by prayer.—J. W. Lee.

Once in Height "Lucky" for Comedian

According to the Kansas City Star Andrew Carnegie once gave Harry Lauder a stock market tip which the comedian acted on and cleaned up a small fortune. Carnegie visited Lauder in his dressing room in New York one evening. The steel man was astonished and delighted to find that Harry was a smaller man than himself. Lauder denied the soft impeachment. An argument ensued. It was decided to settle the question then and there by measuring against the dressing room door.

Andy told Lauder that if it turned out that he (Carnegie) was right in his contention and proved to be the taller of the two, he would give the comedian "a good tip on the stock exchange."

The measurer—Lauder's brother-in-law—overhearing this "decision," I think (says Harry), that the steel magnate would win.

"In any case," chuckles Lauder, "he gave the verdict in favor of Mr. Carnegie by a tenth of an inch."

"Buy United States Steel Common," whispered the millionaire on saying good-night.

It clicked.

Makes Fine Imitation of Artificial Flower

The artificial flower trade, in which thousands of persons are engaged, has within the last few years been completely revolutionized, both here and abroad. For a long time the petals were made of muslin, silk, satin and even of velvet, colored after nature and successfully manipulated into the semblance of blossoms.

Of late years, however, there has been employed a substance that puts the most delicate textile materials ever manufactured completely in the background. It consists of the thinnest of thin shavings from the inner pith of an oriental palm that grows in Formosa, and can be compared to nothing so well as the almost transparent petals of a white poppy or a delicate tea rose. A lily petal is heavy in comparison with this substance, which has all the sheen and translucence and even the slightly frosted appearance seen in some white flowers. It can be tinted far better than silk or muslin and is virtually indestructible. In wet weather it gives and becomes a little limp, just as real flowers do, but when the sun comes out it crisps, reasserts itself and takes on a new lease of life and beauty.

Gr-r-r!

Here is one of the situations for which there is no adequate language available:

On a South Shore golf course there is a short hole with the green entirely surrounded by yawning sand pits. A threesome comes to it. The first player drops his tee shot on the green and feels pretty good over it. The second man puts his into one of the traps.

Then the third man got off one of those one-in-a-hundred pars miracles—a hole in one. The second niblick shot out of the bunker rolls into the cup.

And the first man takes two putts. Such is golf.—Boston Globe.

Films and Farmyards

An English investigator is responsible for the statement that if it were not for the fact that cows like mustard there would be no moving picture shows. The explanation is that the sensitive film is coated with a gelatin emulsion containing silver bromide, but the silver bromide would not record the image if the gelatin were pure. Analysis has shown that the little specks of impurities in the gelatin are sulphur, the source of which is found in the cattle hides from which the gelatin is made. The skins of animals contain sulphur because they eat wild mustard.

Looked Well in Print

A coster and his best girl were discussing the recent marriage of two of their acquaintances.

'Arry—Did you read the list of presents Ann Smith had for her wedding? 'Arriet—Yes, I did. The hidea for sich as them 'aving the weddin' put in the paper! They might be haris-tocrats.

'Arry—Fancy her mother giving such a 'andsome present as a 'orse and trap.

'Arriet—Garn! It was a clothes 'orse and mouse trap; that's their bloomin' pride!—Weekly Scotsman.

Think Fish Do Feel Pain

A German judge stated that fish have no feelings and, therefore, cannot suffer pain. English fishermen disagree. According to J. R. Norman of the Natural History museum, South Kensington, London, fish have highly organized sensory systems and can suffer pain. The fact that fish dance about after being caught certainly seems to suggest pain, he believes. He also declares that a sick fish goes pale, and its eyes become blurred.

Then the Fireworks

In an auction room a fur wrap was being sold. A man near the auctioneer was bent on possessing it; so also was a woman standing on the outskirts of the crowd.

There were no other bidders, and they continued to bid against each other till at last the woman gave up. The auctioneer's name was called. He was the woman's husband!

Community Building

Builders Now Insist on Proved Materials

According to the index number compiled by a large New York trust company, American homes are costing more each year. While the average cost for apartment houses is only a little over the 1921 mark, the index number for private houses shows an average rise from 100 in 1921 to 121.6 in 1927.

Part of this increase at least is due to education in materials, which has convinced many house builders that a low first cost does not prove that cheap stuff is not more expensive in the end. An architect, writing anonymously, protested recently in an advertising magazine that his labors were made more difficult because men and women who sought his services were already sold on specified brands of lumber, paints, varnishes, shingles, sash, wallboard, plumbing, plaster, screens, hardware and all the fixtures to be used in their houses.

"No longer," he complained, "is the architect the final arbiter. Practically everything which enters into the building of a house is advertised to the consumer, and he is accepting the invitation to look things over."

In many cases, this architect found, the client or his wife was sold on a product which meant additional expense, but so thoroughly had advertising done its work that no substitute was acceptable.

Fortunately few architects have this feeling, as the large majority welcome clients who have some knowledge of materials. They know such knowledge gives protection and makes it easier for them to give clients better houses.

Property Values Held by Unity of Purpose

Every growing city has witnessed the gradual and seemingly irresistible decline of once high-class neighborhoods, sometimes because of the advance gains for property holders, but often with no such developments or prospects, and lapse of a purely residential section from a once high estate is due to the attractiveness of newer additions with more modern houses and better planning. To some extent such recession will continue.

But if, through a neighborhood policy, consistent remodeling and modernization could be followed to keep measurable pace with newer districts, values might be conserved, if not advanced. There would be no sense in modernizing a single dwelling in a declining district; the policy would have to be general. Hence the need of organization and direction.

Consider Home Location.

There is nothing more important in the selection of a new home than its location. This is proved in the fact that expensive houses are generally constructed in choice locations, while lower-priced dwellings grace lots that are less costly. Of course, there are exceptions to this rule.

Location, however, must enter into consideration when the choice of a house has been made and there are no hard and fast rules to lay down for the choosing of the right spot. Each family has an individual problem—one that must be surveyed carefully and minutely from every angle—and only the family can decide definitely whether the house is located properly for it to secure the maximum amount of comfort and convenience from it.

Colored Telephone Poles.

Telephone poles in all the latest shades—mauve, cerise and orchid if necessary—are early possibilities of this, as has sometimes been said, colorful age.

Engineers believe a color scheme in telephone and telegraph poles is in prospect. Poles at some early date, they say, may be golden yellow where they skirt a corn field, a deep green as they stand in single file against a verdant forest, or a rich blue as they outline themselves atop a hill against the sky.

One telephone company, it is said, has perfected a wood preservative which not only trebles the life of the pole, but which can be harmonized in color to suit the artistic inclinations of the community.

Citizen Duty.

How are you keeping Atlanta on the pay roll?

"Faith without works availeth nothing."

All the boosting and all the advertising in the world will not make a state or section without citizen cooperation. The possibilities as advertised should be developed and demonstrated by those who actually live in the advertised zone. Unless this is done, any advertising campaign reminds one of a little boy who whistles to keep up his courage.—Atlanta Constitution.

Guard Against Fire.

Fire never sleeps. The only effective way of fighting it is to build it out of your home; cover the roof with fireproof shingles; build the walls to resist and eliminate the dangers of internal fires by fireproofing the floors. The cost is negligible compared to the total saving.

CAP AND BELLS

TEST OF THE EDUCATED MAN

"The educated man," says Dean Inge of England, "is a man with certain subtle spiritual qualities which make him calm in adversity, happy when alone, just in his dealings, and rational and sane in all the affairs of life."

But how, we would query of the good dean, does he act when company calls along about bedtime?

Just a Neighbor.

Art Student (boastfully)—I've studied under Gildo, the famous painter, for years.

Friend—But he doesn't seem to recognize you.

"Perhaps, but I still have the apartment below him!"

Synonymous Terms.

The Porter—Lady in No. 4 wants me to tell her when she reaches her "desolation." I reckon she means destination.

The Conductor—Her ticket reads to Torpor City, where I used to live. It's all the same.

A Fair Offer.

The Yegg—No noise, lady. I want your money and jewels. Turn 'em up, quick.

Mrs. Muddleton—I'll split fifty-fifty with you on all you can find. I just moved in here today and can't find anything myself.

GOOD IN ANY ROLL

"That actor does pretty well in that role."

"A ham actor ought to do pretty well in any roll."

A Full Record.

"Though many things she's left undone Since we've been wed," said he, "she's left A thing unsaid."

The Why of It.

Mr. Hardfax—I'm told that the Girl Scouts are pledged to wear no short skirts, openwork stockings, peekaboo waists or rouge.

Miss Make-up—Then they'll have to scout. Nobody'll come to 'em.

A Less Discouraging Job?

"She's getting to dress and act so mannish."

"Yes, she tried to make a man of her husband and failed, and evidently she's now trying to make one of herself."

Explanation.

Wife (at top of stairs)—Explain yourself. Where have you been till this hour?

Husband—My dear—er—stop me if you've heard this one.

Something Wrong.

"You are false and here is your ring back."

"In all fairness, girlie, I must tell you that this is a better ring than I gave you."

A HUNG JURY

Hubby—Well, the great murder case ended in a hung jury.

Wife—Great heavens, did they hang the jury and let the murderer go free?

Inventor's Triumph.

I eat my peas with honey, I have done it all my life; They do taste kind of funny, But it keeps them on the knife.

The Paradox of Pessimism.

Andy—Besides is a hypochondriac. Mae—What's a hypochondriac?

Andy—A person who feels better when he feels worse.

Safety, silence and simplicity are features of the new Ford six-brake system

ONE of the first things you will notice when you drive the new Ford is the quick, effective, silent action of its six-brake system.

This system gives you the highest degree of safety and reliability because the four-wheel service brakes and the separate emergency or parking brakes are all of the mechanical, internal expanding type, with braking surfaces fully enclosed for protection against mud, water, sand, etc.

The many advantages of this type of braking system have long been recognized. They are brought to you in the new Ford through a series of mechanical improvements embodying much that is new in design and manufacture. A particularly unique feature is the simple way by which a special drum has been constructed to permit the use of two sets of internal brakes on the rear wheels.

A further improvement in braking performance is effected by the self-centering feature of the four-wheel brakes—an exclusive Ford development. Through this construction, the entire surface of the shoe is brought in steady, uniform contact with the drum the instant you press your foot on the brake pedal. This prevents screeching and howling and makes the Ford brakes unusually silent in operation.

Another feature of the Ford brakes is the ease of adjustment.

The four-wheel brakes are adjusted by turning a screw conveniently located on the outside of each brake plate. This screw is so notched that all four brakes can be set alike simply by listening to the "clicks."

The emergency or parking brakes on the new Ford require little attention. However, should they need adjustment at any time, consult your Ford dealer for prompt, courteous, and economical service. He works under close factory supervision and he has been specially trained and equipped to help you get the greatest possible use from your car over the longest period of time at a minimum of trouble and expense.

Canned Pumpkin Pie

WINTER time is pie time, and of all the pies that tickle our palates agreeably, pumpkin is one of the most popular. But how many of my readers know of the convenience of using canned pumpkin for this delectable dish? This saves you all the preliminary trouble of scraping out the pumpkin and boiling and mashing it. Here is the recipe:

Mix two cups of canned pumpkin with one and one-eighth cups of sugar, one teaspoon salt, one and one-half teaspoons ginger and one teaspoon cinnamon. Beat three egg-whites stiffly and fold in. Turn into a pie plate lined with pastry and bake in a moderate oven, but be sure to have enough heat at first to set the crust. The pie is done when an inserted knife comes out clean. It takes fifteen minutes to bake at 450° and about thirty minutes, or until set, at 325°. This recipe makes one large pie.

Or Try These Tarts

Here is another recipe for Harvest Pumpkin Tarts:

Mix one cup of brown sugar, a few grains of salt, two teaspoons cinnamon, one-half teaspoon nutmeg and one-half teaspoon ginger with one cup of canned pumpkin. Add two beaten eggs and two cups evaporated milk, and pour into tart tins lined with pastry. Bake like any custard pie, having oven hot at first, then moderate. This recipe will make from fifteen to twenty tarts.

The next time you yearn for pumpkin pie or tarts buy a gold enamel lined can of pumpkin and try one of these recipes.

The electric light line went on a rampage, at the east end of Baltimore St., near Robert Shriner's residence, last Friday about mid-night. The sky was light up similar to a large fire. Citizens in that locality were greatly excited. The Electric Light Co., at Union Bridge, was notified by telephone, and workmen were soon on the job and had the current traveling over the proper route.

Allenby on Peace.

Peace, its value to mankind and means for promoting it, has been the subject of a good deal of discussion of late, particularly since the signing of the Kellogg war outlawry treaty—the Pact of Paris, to give it its official title—last August.

This latter document came up, for example, for comment in the speech by Field Marshal Viscount Allenby at the convention of the American Legion in San Antonio, Texas, on October 9. No remarks about Lord Allenby's ability to wage war are needed, after the extraordinary successes he achieved as the commander of the British forces in Palestine during the world war.

His record in this and other undertakings makes particularly significant his remark, in that speech, that the Kellogg treaty "was the finest achievement of modern times." Not that he thought the signing of the treaty in itself was enough to insure permanent peace. He did not.

"The wedge has not split the log," he said, "but peace will in time result."

There's an apt metaphor for you—that about the wedge and the log, with the pact of Paris as the wedge; and war (or the old mutual distrust and antagonism which breed war, if you prefer) as the log that so very much needs splitting.

Lord Allenby made another striking statement. He was horrified, he said—and remember that he is a professional soldier, and one of the most effective of them all—when people remarked that "a little blood letting is a good thing." Blood letting means devastation, ruin, misery and death, he declared.

"Blood letting has been abandoned by the surgeons. Let it be abandoned by the nations. Don't let's talk about blood letting." That was his comment.

And, when you stop to think about it, aren't we much more likely actually to get ahead with this job of making the world fit to live in if we start with the injunction "don't let's talk about blood letting" than if we indulge in a lot of pessimistic phrases about the inherent wickedness of human nature and the necessity for thinking first of all of defense.

We certainly would make faster progress if we spent more time and money waging peace and less preparing to wage war.—Grover Clark, in Peking Leader.

Considering The Source.

In every community there are people who talk about others in a very careless sort of way, without either provocation or justification, and very rarely get into serious trouble because of their talking. On the other hand, there is the other class that does very little of this sort talking—and then not maliciously—but who pretty generally get into trouble whenever they do indulge.

So generally is this differing result between the two classes of people manifested, that there must be a real cause for it. Some are perpetual "talkers" and get away with it. Others make one slip of the same sort, and are quickly brought to account. It must be that the source of the talk is considered. Many of the yarns that the one class string out, are not repeated, because they are not considered worth repeating. The other kind, coming from a mere responsible source, are passed seriously along, and trouble results.

Individual reputation does the trick. Either that, or a lot of folks are just lucky in picking the outlet of their broadcasting. Some folks are more prolific repeaters than others; and the cautious sort may not care to get "mixed up" in a story, and keep it to themselves; which, in a pretty general way is very wise policy.

So, we have here an example of the estimated value of what one says, or considers of importance to repeat. If Jones says it, it is important; but if Brown says it—well, Brown doesn't stand for much in his community anyway, and not much importance is attached to what he says. But, it is rather discouraging to the Jones family to have their good reputation get them into trouble.

Frederick Will Erect Thomas Johnson Memorial.

Frederick, Jan. 22.—At a meeting of the Thomas Johnson Memorial Association, Tuesday, a bronze bust of Johnson, the first Governor of Maryland, costing about $1,500, was accepted. Permission was requested from the County Commissioners to erect it in Court Square.

It was decided to unveil the memorial July 4, with ceremonies to which President Hoover, Governor Ritchie and other State officials will be invited. Joseph Urner, son of Chief Judge Hammond Urner, modeled the bust. Funds for its payment were secured through public subscription.—Balt. Sun.

Report on County Ambulance.

A report made by the Westminster Fire Department shows the need for a county ambulance. In the six months since it was delivered 43 calls have been answered and over 1000 miles travelled.

The financial statement of the ambulance fund showed that the voluntary contributions for maintenance from those who use the ambulance, unless they become more liberal, will not be sufficient to pay the drivers and other expenses of operation, and it may be necessary at the end of the year to adopt a scale of fixed charges for the service.

Maryland Manual.

The Record is indebted to Senator George P. B. Englar for a 1928 copy of The Maryland Manual. We find considerable use for this publication throughout the year, as it contains a great deal of public information.

Villages Jo'n Move to Rule Out "Uglies"

The Nassau Daily Review of Rockville Centre, L. I., has for the last six months led an active campaign against the billboards. Every day for a month the Review printed a two-column editorial discussing and attacking billboards and associated evils from every conceivable angle. Their slogan, "The South Shore Must Clean Up," was made the keynote of the drive.

Soon letters of commendation began to pour in from individuals and from organizations. Then action began. One village after another adopted ordinances to restrict the billboards. Today seven villages stand on the honor roll—Valley Stream, Lynbrook, Malverne, Rockville Centre, East Rockaway, Hempstead and Freeport.—Kansas City Star.

Keep Structure Painted

Paint is not an expensive product. The majority of houses in and about Philadelphia are of brick. As a result there is little that need be painted, but a lack of that decoration places the house at a tremendous disadvantage. Porches, window and door frames needing a coat of paint not only detract from the appeal of the dwelling itself, but have an adverse effect on the neighboring houses. With so little surface to be painted on the average home, the owner should have no difficulty in doing the work himself.

Another requirement for a neat-appearing home is proper upkeep. Stairs and porches often become cracked or have portions broken off entirely. In many cases the repairs do not require the attention of a skilled craftsman.—Philadelphia Record.

Proof That Forests Have Hygienic Value

We hear much of the importance of the conservation of forests from an economic standpoint, but little is said of the hygienic value of forests.

Forests contribute to the general health by breaking the force of steadily blowing winds. They mitigate the heat of summer by the vast amount of evaporation from their leaves that occurs by day. They also promote rainfalls. Thus they check the tendency of the earth to desiccate, which is almost as injurious to health as it is to vegetation.

Cholera often passes a wooded district and revels in a treeless one. A certain road in India leads for 60 miles through a dense forest. Farther on it runs for 90 miles through a barren plain. Hundreds of persons travel the entire road daily. Now, in the first or wooded section cases of cholera seldom occur, while within the latter it has been of frequent occurrence. One year cholera raged in Allahabad. Soldiers whose barracks were on a hill suffered the most from the epidemic; those in barracks surrounded by four rows of trees much less; but not a single case was reported among the soldiers whose barracks were in a thicket. It was the same the next year.

Various Ideas as to Spots on Moon's Face

There exist in various parts of the world curious ideas regarding the dark spots in the moon's disk. In the eastern part of Asia the spots are believed to be a rabbit or a hare. The Chinese, in particular, regard them as a hare sitting up and pounding rice in a mortar. Slaves take the same view. Others see in the moon a man and woman working in a field.

Curiously, the North American Indians have almost the same superstition as the Chinese. On old monuments in Central America the moon appears as a jug or vessel, out of which an animal like a rabbit is jumping. South American Indians, on the other hand, believe that a girl, who had fallen in love with the moon, sprang toward it, was caught and kept by it, and that it is her figure which is seen on the moon's face.

Samoa islanders regard the spots as representing a woman carrying a child. Other Southern peoples have similar beliefs, the woman and child sometimes being altered into an old woman bearing a burden on her back.

Arthur's "Round Table"

The table which is now called "The Round Table of King Arthur" is to be seen in the Great hall at Winchester, England, part of the old castle there. At the west end of this hall, above the remains of the royal dais, hangs this table, 17 feet in diameter. It is known to have existed in the Thirteenth century and is possibly older, and was repainted in the reign of Henry VIII. Of course there is no way of tracing any connection of King Arthur and his knights with this table. This table is divided off into places for the king and 24 of his knights. According to one version of the King Arthur legends, there were 13 seats around the table, while according to another there were 30 seats, and the total number of knights of King Arthur was 140.

Why?

Four-year-old Richard and his sister were both very fond of James Whitcomb Riley's poems for children and could say the "Raggedy Man" and "Little Orphant Annie," and "Way Out to Old Aunt Mary's," word for word.

One day Richard was looking through the book of poems again. He seemed quite thoughtful for a moment, then he said:

"Daddy, if this Mr. Riley liked little boys and girls so well, why do people call him James Whiphthem Riley?"

The Reason

A clergyman was congratulating himself on a convert from a rival place of worship.

"Why," he asked the good lady, "have you decided to forsake your chapel for my church? Is it that you find my sermons of greater comfort to you?"

"No," was the reply. "It's not exactly that. The fact is they have cindered the pathway up to the chapel and I find it that uncomfortable for the feet that I had to change."—Weekly Scotsman.

Acquainted

Virginia Anne, age three years, was just getting a good start in the primary department of a suburban Sunday school. The young teacher was telling the story of the shepherds and wishing to give especial attention to the babies of the class, asked:

"Virginia Anne, do you know anything about the shepherds?"

"Sure," replied Virginia Anne, confidently, "I know all about 'em. They live right next door to us."

Business Progress

The heir to the business had sauntered in from his two and a half hours among the ash trays, had looked over his mail, and at 3:30 had gone for the day.

"Do you remember," asked the silver-haired bookkeeper of the cashier, "how his father used to scheme to get away once a year to attend the opening baseball game?"
