ROBBERS CAUGHT

Two Baltimoreans Arrested in St.

Louis Confess.

According to a special from St. Louis to the Baltimore Sun, two men, Rawlings Whittemore and Robert Minners were arrested in St. Louis

Tuesday night, and after questioning by the police are said to have con-fessed to the robbery of the Farmers and Mechanics Bank, Westminster, more admitted was purchased with part of the stolen money. Both men said to have been recovered, along with several revolvers and some their innocence and explained the money found by saying that they had won it in a crap game in Boston, but afterwards confessed to the robbery.

Their statement, condensed, is as and some that wasn't into a waste basket, quietly walked out of the bank where a third man waited in the car for them, drove out of town a short distance and divided the money, and in some way not clearly stated made their way to Pittsburg and took a bus for St. Louis. Evi-dently, a considerable amount of in-teresting detail is missing from the confession. The unofficial confession is said to include the information that a third robber, John Miller, had part in the robbery, but as he had ambitions to-ward being a movie actor, he left his two pals in St. Louis, and continued on to Hollywood, Cal. While the two have confessed it is said that they hope to dicker with the authorities in order to have their sentence to be not

Sheriff Fowble, accompanied by sev-

Banditry Prevalent in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia is rivaling Chicago in the matter of open lawlessness, in which gunmen openly shoot down their victims, engage in hold-ups and other violent crimes, the last of which occurred on Wednesday when three gunmen shot down and killed a rival gangster, a proprietor of a bottling establishment. Two of the men were identified by the victim before he died

Police Director Schofield has ordered the police to kill bandits and gangsters caught in the act of crime, and to round-up every known crim-inal and send him to the City Hall for questioning. The Director frank-ly acknowledged the gravity of the situation in the city and called upon the police to aid him in bringing it to an end. "We must do everything in our power and throw into the fight every facility at our command to combat banditry," he said. "This is a fight. CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY BANK Report of Contributions from Taneytown District.

Several articles have been published, previously, in The Record telling of the formation of the Carroll Co. Branch of the Maryland Children's Aid Society, its need in the county, and the nature and scope of its work. In order for it to function, funds are needed, and last month a number of letters were sent out appealing for contributions.

Some of these letters were answered, and the contributions were most gratefully received, but many of the letters were not heeded. There were not needed. There were not enough letters to send to everyone in the district, and whether you received a letter or not, won't you show a feeling of responsibility by sending your contribution as soon as possible to Mrs. Wm. A Gettysburg Joint Raided.

With the arrest of Steve Bordley, lored propi Race Horse alley, on charge of violating the dry laws, state and local police said that they had mopped up one of the principal sources by which alleged moonshine liquor was being distributed in Gettysburg. The authorities propose to take steps to wipe out, completely, Jere Plank's notorious "joint" in Race Horse alley. Steve and four other persons were arrested Saturday evening in a raid on the colored barber's apartment in the Jere Plank "black-eye" fire trap in Race Horse alley, after Trooper J. M. Cavanaugh is alleged to purchased two pints of liquor at the place for $2 per pint. Steve is being held in $3,000 bail on charges of the illegal sale and possession of liquor. How Steve conducted the alleged illicit business of purveying liquor and how he was able to inspect prospective customers before admitting them to the alleged improvised barroom to see that they were friends was told in testimony offered at the hearing by Trooper J. M. Cavanaugh, of the local state police sub-station, who rushed his way into the colored man's room.-Gettysburg Compiler.

Care of the School Kiddies.

Health forces throughout the State are being mobilized for the early ex-amination of the children who will reach school age this year, in order that they may be as free as possible from preventable physical handicaps when they start on the road to the three R-s. The examinations are being arranged under the joint auspices of the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health, the Deputy State Health officers, the State Department of Education, and the Parent-Tageher Associations the Parent-Teacher Associations. Special attention will be given by the physicians who make the examinations to weight, posture, heart, lungs, the throat, nose, teeth, vision, and hearing, because of their important bearing upon the general health of the children and their freedom, or their susceptibility to disease. Conditions that need correction will be pointed out and the parents will be urged to take the children to their family doctors for the necessary care. Just how important this checking up of the health assets and liabilities of each child before he is enrolled in school, is to the individual child—parschool, is to the individual child—par-ticularly when the parents have the necessary medical or dental care given to the children—may be gath-ered from the reports prepared by the State Department of Health.

for price-fixing of farm products. The trouble is in the western states, as it has always been; and the farmer sentiment there, as it has always been, is still divided on the question of the form of relief.

A half-dozen or more Senators headed by Brookhart, of Iowa, and a number of members from the South, are apt to put through the Senate a bill that will not meet the approval of the President or of the House. Senator Brookhart, on Wednesday, openly charged the President with failure to keep his campaign pledges, and that his present attitude is en-tirely different from that manifested during the campaign. The fight now is for what is call-ed a "debenture plan" which in its result is practically the same as the former "equalization fee" plan, both of which would force higher prices for farm products and encourage greater production at the same time. In the House the administration bill was debated all week, with but little ill feeling, and was finally passed on Thursday by the vote of 367 to 34 which shows the vast difference between the Senate and House on the subject. The export-debenture subsidy was kicked out before the final vote, just as the old equalization fee was eliminated Wed-nesday, and the result was said to be a measure meeting executive approval in every major particular. The House legislation now goes to a rebellious Senate whose Agricul-tural Committee has framed its own agricultural measure and that writ-ten into it, over the vigorous protest of President Hoover, the export de-benture feature. The upper branch has put in two-days' debate on the farm question, but has made little headway, and is not expected to get down to a vote until sometime next week.

the boulevard law passed by the last session of the Legislature, the State Roads Commission announced it had designated ten highways as "boulevards" and will soon mark them as such.

Many other State roads will be so designated after completion of a survey now being made by the commission

The new boulevards are:

The National pike, the York road, the Philadelphia road, the Belair road the Annapolis Boulevard, the Crain Highway, the Washington Boulevard, the Defense Highway, the Liberty road and the Reisterstown road.

Under the provisions of the boulevard law, after markers have been placed at the intersections of the boulevards and paved or improved roads, all vehicular traffic on the intersecting thoroughfares must stop and yield right of way to all traffic before entering or crossing the "boulevards.

The Attorney-General, in a ruling, said all motorists who now enter or cross an improved road from an unimproved one, or from private rights of way, without coming to a full stop, are violating the new law. It is not necessary for warning markers to be placed at such intersections before the law becomes effective, the Attorney-General ruled .- Frederick News.

Barn Raised by Taneytown Contractor.

Mrs. Amanda Leister. Bethel Heights, raised her new barn Saturday to replace the one which was destroyed by fire recently. The barn which is being erected is 100 feet long and 40 feet wide. This barn when completed will be an up-to-date dairy barn. Another barn will be erected later to hold the horses. Mrs. Leister operates a large farm and has 52 head of cattle and is also in the chicken business.

The contractor Allen Feeser, Taneytown, is to be commended on the efficient manner in which the barn was raised. Everybody worked and helped as one man and everything went off like clock work. There were 140 people present. Mrs. Leister served a sumptuous dinner consisting of chicken, gravy, lettuce, cold slaw, mashed potatoes, peas, baked beans, potato salad, peaches, cold sliced ham, fresh rolls and coffee.

A New H. S. Course.

For a long time a potent criticism of the High School Curriculum has been heard, to the effect that pupils do not receive sufficient training in the fundamentals in High School, and that frequently pupils are graduated who are not able to solve simple problems in Arithmetic, especially those requiring reasoning thought, or as we say in school, "reading problems.

In order to correct, as far as possible, any deficiencies along this line, the State Board of Education has introduced an eight weeks' course in Arithmetic for all High School Seniors. It is hoped thereby to benefit our graduating classes somewhat.—The Flame, Taneytown High School High School.

Allow the cornstarch mixture to cook in the double boiler for 10 minutes, remove from the fire, add 1 teaspoon butter, ¼ teaspoon salt, 2 egg yolks, beaten, and 1/2 teaspoon vanilla. Fill the crust, which should have been pre-baked, with the chocolate mixture and cover the top with a meringue made of 2 egg whites beaten stiffly and 2 tablespoons of sugar, 1/4 teaspoon vanilla and a pinch of salt. The "Jack of all Trades."

There was a time when "A Jack of all trades" was a term indicating human form. shiftlessness-hardly even a compliment except in a very trivial way. But, times have changed, and the man unable to change his occupation rather easily, is handicapped. Both labor and capital are on the move. New business is crowding out old occupations. The cross-roads blacksmiths and wagon-makers, the tailors and shoemakers, and to a large extent the small tradesmen, are being chased off the map. And, the end has not yet been reached.

What is to be done about it? The only answer is that muscle and skill, body and mind, must be turned into other directions. This is no time to stand still and try to buck the big movements, much as we feel like doing so, and may actually have some grounds of justification. It isn't right that automobiles should hog the roads and endanger the bodies and lives of pedestrians; but it is poor satisfaction to assert our rights-and get bumped off.

We have no fault to find with the "samples," nor with those who engage in this business. The only thing to criticise is the intimation, or the fact, that there are editors who fall for the proposition and thereby put over on their readers a distinct subterfuge. This country, spanning twenty-five degrees of latitude, is as diverse as Europe. No one thinks of securing a solution to Italy's problems that would be equally applicable to Norwav's ills.

That, of course, is what Congress years. Its failure has been monumental.

Both the producing and consuming worlds are changing. Artificial silk has hurt the Cotton Belt worse than the boll weevil ever hurt it. If the country turns en masse to apple-eating, the orange growers suffer. As Dr. Russell said:

"I wonder if we really appreciate how food habits are changing? "Slenderizing," so fashionable in certain circles, is materially reducing per capita use of food with a large group of the population. The streamline waist is bad for the American

But Congress and the farmer can do nothing about it. Agricultural food is piling up faster than ever before. In the last four years the total food supply produced was fourteen percent greater than in the 1917-1921 four-year period. But the population increase was only nine per cent. Food production was out-racing the the population growth by fifty percent, and yet there were 13,-000,000 fewer acres cultivated in 1925 than in 1919.

What, then, is the answer? Is it better marketing? Is it a higher tariff? Or control of production? Or is it more credit, or waterways, or 'co-ops"?-Phila. Ledger.

Faith of Childhood

Who, if he is honest towards himself, could say that the religion of his manhood was the same as that of his childhood, or the religion of his old ige the same as the religion of his enlood? It is easy to deceive ourelves and to say that the most perfect faith is a childlike faith. Nothing can be truer, and the older we grow the more we learn to understand the wisdom of a childlike faith. But before we can learn that, we have first to learn another lesson, namely, to put away childish things. There is the same glow about the setting sun as there is about the rising sun; but there lies between the two a whole world. a journey through the whole sky and

Necessary Imports

The question of the dependability of the United States upon the resources of other countries is a debatable one. Some authorities claim that the United States could support itself for an almost unlimited time; others that the manufactures of the country would be seriously imperiled in the case of a complete blockade. The United States obtains from abroad manufacturing material and tropical foodstuffs. Practically all the coffee, tea and cocoa come from foreign countries and about one-half the sugar. Important materials on which the United States relies in manufactures are wool, silk fibers, rubber, hides, wood pulp, tin, gums and nitrates.

Success Means Work

One of the commonest mistakes and one of the costliest is thinking that success is due to some genius, some magic-something or other which we do not possess. Success is generally due to holding on, and failure to letting go. You decide to learn a language, study music, take a course of reading, train yourself physically. Will it be a success or failure? It depends upon how much pluck and perseverance that word "decide" contains. The decision that nothing can overrule, the grip that nothing can detach, will bring success. Remember the Chinese proverb, "With time and patience, the mulberry leaf becomes satin."-Exchange.

Russian Turkestan

Interesting stories are told of Russian Turkestan by Doctor Skoeed of Lund university, Stockholm.

The Tadshik tribes lead a most primitive nomadic life, speaking ten or more Iranic languages, . and do not know the use of matches or other European technical implements.

No roads or bridges are to be found there, except a few remnants from the time of Alexander the Great, who crossed these rock mountains 300 B. C., but the Swedish explorer had to ride on horseback on narrow paths on precipitous brinks, where a single step aside meant death in the rocky valley 3.000 feet below. Here he was told that many Russian soldiers had fallen and been killed.

RAISING CHICKS REQUIRES CARE

Success Depends Largely on Attention Given Them.

What success New Jerseymen have with raising chicks will depend largely upon the attention they give to maintaining cleanliness, plenty of room, and proper feeding equipment. In other words, these are the cardinal factors in successful brooding of chicks, says J. C. Taylor, assistant poultry extension specialist, New Jersey state college of agriculture, Rutgers university.

Keep the house clean at all times. After the fourth week, the brooder house should be cleaned every five days. Remove the litter, sweep the floor, and put in clean litter. Chick boxes, feed bags, pails, coal, and other equipment should not be in the brooder house

Crowding is common to many poultry farms. It is safe to say that 90 per cent of the poultrymen crowd their chicks. Allow two chicks to one square foot of floor space until they are four to six weeks old. After this allow one chick for each square foot of floor space. Where chicks are raised in confinement allow one chick to each two square feet of floor space after the brood is six weeks old. Following these rules eliminates crowding and thus gives all chicks a chance to grow.

Adequate feeding equipment is essential. More chicks die of starvation than from a number of other causes. One inch of hopper space is recommended for each small chick. A hopper three feet long feeding from both sides will accommodate 75 chicks. Keep feed in the hoppers. Water fountains of the two-quart size are good for small chicks, followed by the gallon size when the chicks are older. The important point to keep in mind is to have enough fountains so there will always be water for the chicks to drink.

Treating Chickens for Severe Colds and Roup When the eyes of chickens water and then swell, it is usually due to colds which are developing into a roupy condition. The nostrils are usually packed with mucous, making breathing difficult and matter due to inflammation gathers in the face and finally becomes packed in a hard, leathery lump.

When colds first appear, squeeze the nostrils with wads of tissue paper to remove the mucous and then inject commercial disinfectant or roup cure or potassium permanganate with a medicine dropper. The commercial roup cures often include a small syringe useful to inject the solution into the nostrils of the bird.

If the head is bulging with hard matter and has the strong odor of roup, it is best to kill the bird, espe-

GIANT REDWOODS TO BE PRESERVED

New Shoots Will Replace Stock Taken in Logging.

Portland, Ore .- Next year, it is estimated, the area stocked with young trees each year in the West Coast redwood belt will equal the area logged over annually. Timber men say that this means there will be perpetual commercial forests in this country. The picture is at once esthetic and practical. It answers the sentiment for preservation of the "great woods" and at the same time protects the lumber supply. Already one of the largest lumber companies in the Pacific Northwest is cutting timber from land that was restocked 40 years ago.

In the redwood region, from southern Oregon to lower central California, private companies are setting out annually more than three million trees. For each mature redwood cut ten baby trees are planted. In from 40 to 60 years they will be ready for harvest. Long-range culture has been extended to other forest trees. Fir, spruce and cedar forests are being replaced in a far-sighted policy that looks to the time when virgin growth will be exhausted. Vast areas denuded by logging operations have been made to yield new crops of sturdy trees.

Many of the large companies, whose timber holdings cover small-sized empires, have undertaken systematic reforestation of cut-over areas. They say that long before their original stand of timber is exhausted a new forest will be ready. One paper company, to perpetuate its supply of pulp wood, has established a nursery, from which 1,500,000 young trees will be transplanted this year.

New Digestant Found

in Sap of the Papaya

Miami, Fla.-Dr. J. Peterson, wellknown Miami horticulturist, who has been experimenting with tropical plants for the last 15 years, contemporary with other scientists of tropical research, has just disclosed a vast store of knowledge on the papaya as a remedy for stomach troubles.

Through experimentation it has been found that papain, the white milky sap of the papaya, has the same effect upon the stomach as does pepsin, but with greater efficiency and quicker results. Tests have revealed that a drop of dry papain will dissolve a square inch piece of steak in two minutes.

The discovery of papaya was synonymous with the discovery of Central America, its native soil, hundreds of years ago. Coast pirates used it for food, but upon the annihilation of the pirates the papaya was forgotten.

Forty years ago it was rediscovered and during the last few years has made great strides in the health food markets. Today its demand is so great in local sections that little of it has been shipped North. It can be prepared in so many ways that each preparation will have a distinct taste like cherry, peach, apple, plum or rhubarb pie. Likewise it is made into jellies, candy, salads, fruit cocktails, and preserves.

Poultry Notes

A great many people seem to forget that a baby chick is a baby. * * *

By hatching early the chick gets a good start and is less susceptible when exposed. * * *

Every farm should include in its equipment a portable brooder house for raising young chicks.

A portable brooder house should not be over 8 by 12 feet if it is to be moved with a team.

Feed clean feed in clean containers. Don't use zinc containers for sour milk nor to feed mash in.

Avoid turning out young turkeys until dew is off the grass and weeds. A little care at first will repay you big. Don't change feed too quickly, but gradually work into another feed.

There are a number of gas burners available for brooding chicks. A satisfactory way to use gas is in a coal stove. Several manufacturers provide gas burners for their coal stoves.

The modern poultry house is well lighted, well ventilated, dry, free from drafts, and moderate in cost.

Sunlight is an essential in the poultry house; not only through glass, but more especially, direct sunlight is required. . . .

Farm brooding is probably best done with the portable, colony brooder house as the first essential piece of equipment. This type of house possesses many desirable features with economy.

Ice Man Finds Rival

in Carbonic "Dry Ice" New York .- The ice man, who has been dealing with the hard cold fact of competition from mechanical sources, has a new rival-"dry ice." Whereas the electrical manufacturing business gave the ice man his first battle for a place in the refrigerator, the new source of trouble comes from the carbonic gas field, one pound of that gas being compressed and reduced to great density to produce a pound of "dry ice" having a temperature of around 114 degrees below zero.

Efforts are now being made to reduce "dry ice" production costs and to develop containers requiring smaller quantities of the refrigerant.

An Age-old Question.

My boy and girl and two neighborhood children, all close to twelve years of age, were engaged in a hot argument on this subject: Are men more important than women?

They were excited and spoke loud. The words drifted through to their mother and me.

"Men are soldiers; they fight for their country," said the boys. "They are firemen, policemen, miners, inventors,' "Women are Red Cross nurses," yelled the girls.

"Yes," retorted the boys, "but the doctors are men, What can a woman do that a man can't do better?"

When our children were called inside, they appealed to us to settle the argument.

We explained that this question had been argued since the beginning of time, and that it could never be settled. The boy, who died hardest, admitted that women were all right except that they were not as brave as men.

Women, he maintained, could never be firemen. He also thought that men worked harder than women.

We searched our minds for a glowing example of woman's labor, and hit upon Mary, who occasionally works for us.

Tit for Tat

Down dropped the policeman's arm and immediately the traffic stream was in motion, one car shooting out in front of the other vehicles.

At that moment a pretty girl made an indiscreet dash for an island in the center of the roadway.

She would have been knocked down by the swiftly moving car had not the driver jammed on his brakes.

"Women and donkeys are always in the way!" he shrieked furiously at the girl.

"Glad to see you've the manners to put yourself last!" retorted the girl coolly.

A small child who much disliked milk pudding had been made to finish it before leaving the table. When she had at last eaten it she asked if she might get down.

Cretans Were Liberal in Decorative Ideas

The Cretan decorators did not scruple to depart from a literal interpretation of nature if by so doing they secured desirable decorative effects.

If a monkey with a blue head suited their purpose better than a realistic monkey they showed no hesitance in altering it. This is the decorator's privilege, a sort of artistic license that has been taken by artists from those ancient times to the present.

Do not think that curious drawings and distortions are the product of amateurish hands. The Cretan decorators did not alter the apparent forms because they could not draw them correctly. It was done deliberately, to suit their scheme of decoration. Sometimes a naturalistic treatment of flowers and ferns was used.

When they liked they could give realistic interpretation and at other times conventionalize their subjects. When it suited their purpose they put in colors that nature never used in such places. These Cretan decorators were great craftsmen and artists. Their designs are studied by artists in Depicting Lenclos Two stubborn mistakes are often made concerning a famous French lady, Ninon de Lenclos: First, that she was a wanton by nature, second, that she made of love an actual business. Both errors are cruel, both false to the fame this remarkable and glamorous lady won from her admirers, the many gallant, wise, great men who loved her in her youth, adored her to

To understand the celebrated Lenclos you must understand her times. Truly to know her you must know her lovers. Her century she personified, fairly glorified. Her lovers she inspired and enriched. One of the most devoted of them has testified to the degree of true ladyship she attained and how in the salons she held in the last years of her life she was treated to the honors of a princely court. The Yukon territory was set up as such in 1898 by an act of the Canadian parliament and provision made for its local government by a legislative council composed of a commissioner and six others. This territory has an area of about 207,000 square miles. "I do," replied the girl.

"Doesn't it strike you as strange that he should have managed to kiss you as you were unwilling?" added counsel. "Look at my client, and then consider your own height. Why, you must be nearly a foot taller than he is."

Chasing Woodchucks

The wise farmers, when bothered by woodchucks, resort to one of three methods in thinning them out. They insert either calcium cyanide or carbon disulphide in the chuck's burrow and seal it over. The fumes in a short time will penetrate every part of the burrow and Mr. Woodchuck is gassed to death. Another method is that of attaching a hose to the exhaust of a tractor engine or automobile and inserting down into the burrow, sealing the entrance and racing the engine. Carbon monoxide does the rest. Hunting chucks with firearms is a long drawn out job and has never been satisfactory.

STATE OF MARYLAND WM.S. GORDY, JR. OFFICE OF COMPTROLLER ANNAPOLIS

April 11th., 1929.

MR. EDWIN M. MELLOR, JR., Clerk of the Circuit Court, Westminster, Md. Dear Mr. Mellor:

Your attention is called to the provisions of Senate Bill No. 63, which has recently been passed by the General Assembly of 1929, under which there is imposed on persons who fail to take out licenses, in the month of May a penalty of 10% per month on the cbst of the license. In other words, licensees may take out licenses at any time during the month of May without having to pay a penalty, but on and after June 1st. anyone applying for a license, who was in business in the month of the May preceding, is required to pay, in addition to the cost of the license, a penalty of 10% per month or fraction of a month. In the case of persons starting in business during the license year, they are only required to take out a license for the remaining part of the year, but they must take out their license in the month in which they begin business.

In order that you might avoid controversies and explanations to persons who find they neglected to take out their license in the month of May and are subject to the penalty, we suggest that you run an ad. in your local papers calling attention to the fact that if licenses are not taken out in the month of May the 10% penalty will apply. This is not merely a 10% flat penalty but 10% per month or fraction of a month, and because of our experience in the past in coming up with persons who are delinquent to the extent of five or six months, it would mean that in the future cases of this kind would result in the delinquents having to pay as much as fifty or sixty percent of the cost of the license as penalty for their tardiness in taking out their license. You might have your ad. show that you have no discretion in the matter and will be held accountable for the penalty by the State when your books are examined. The cost of the ad. in your local papers is a proper charge to the expenses of your office and will be allowed in your annual report.

There has also been passed at this session of the Legislature a bill requiring a separate license for each place of business. It has been the ruling of this office in the past, supported by an opinion of the Attorney General, that a separate license is required for each place of business, but because of some question raised by concerns having more than one place of business in the County, the Legislature passed an Act setting forth in very clear language that a separate license is required for each place of business. Please be governed accordingly and do not entertain an application for a license where the amount of stock involved in the case of a trader's license is supposed to cover the aggregate amount carried in several places of business. but require a separate application for each place of business.

> Very truly yours, (Signed) WM. S. GORDY, JR., Comptroller.

called grapefruit, and he add-ed: "It's the best 'eye-opener' that can be taken before breakfast." The reason for this physician's enthusiastic commendation of this fruit is that grapefruit is a "stomach sweetener" for the reason that, in combination with the juices of the stomach, the chemical reaction is alkaline, thus neutralizing the acidity of an acid stomach. And for years past now grapefruit has been obtainable everywhere in cans.

At this time when influenza is so prevalent, the consumption of citrous fruits has another distinct advantage. One of the most effec-tive remedies for this is grapefruit juice, and its use to balance the diet and insure proper alkaline reactions is also important. Physicians rec-ommend drinking several glasses daily of orange, lemon and grape-reserve.

A Good Grapefruit Recipe

But perhaps you're more interested in the how than in the why, so here is a way to use canned grap fruit which will surely help to make you a popular hostess:

Prune and Grabefruit Cocktail: Cut prunes from their pits, leaving in as large pieces as possible, and make one cup of stewed prune pulp. Add one number 2 can of grapefruit hearts, and cup of orange pulp and juice made by removing the orange sections and carefully freeing them from white and fibre. Add four tablespoons confectioner's sugar if necessary, divide between eight cocktail glasses, and garnish with sprigs of fresh mint. This recipe will serve eight people.

mill, George Pendleton aspired to JOR a bookkeeper in the Meryvale "class." He wore ready-mades and longed for tailored stuff; he lived in a rented room and yearned for a bachelor apartment, and when he married Bonnie May and brought her to live in a gray plaster bungalow on Park street, his soul panted for a pink stucco house on Periscope heights. At any rate, he had decided that as a householder he would own a wire-haired terrier, such as he saw "heeling" after the few young bloods the little city of Meryvale afforded. And then Bonnie May brought Nick with her from Carp Center-a ribby little fox terrier, so old that white hairs dotted his black spots! George had graduated from the Carp Center high school and gone to the Meryvale business college in order to make a home for Bonnie May. She was an orphan, and while she waited she lived-rather precariously for one who is filling a hope chestby clerking in the general store at Carp Center. When George was ready, she came with an ancient trunk and suitcase, and Nick's basket, two hundred miles to Meryvale, George and the plaster bungalow. At sight of the calm blue depths of her eyes, George's love renewed itself. He had lived in a whirl of adjustment since his Carp Center days, and here was Bonnie May, sweet and changeless. His joy was complete until, after a visit to the minister, they landed in the little home, and he found out about Nick.

"Darling! Why did you bring him?" he asked, ruefully. "Fox terriers are all out of style. I had hoped to get you a wire-haired terrier. They have so much class and would give the place an air."

Some brides, whose judgment had been questioned by a husband of an hour, would have dissolved in tears, Bonnie May's glance bent on him sweetly, maternally.

"Nick was all the family I had. He will be company for me, as a strange dog never could. Besides, he would have pined away without mewouldn't you, Nick?"

At the questioning note in her voice. Nick sat up and said: "Yap! Yap!" and his mistress patted his head.

In the joy of being together in their little home-which Bonnie May adored to the utter exclusion of pink stucco and Periscope heights-George kept his feelings in regard to Nick a secret. But the dog missed his old trails in Carp Center with a misery that even his beloved mistress could not dispel. He hated the leash which kept him in his own yard. He hated George, partly because he sensed the man's dislike, partly because of Bonnie May's interest in him. So he moped and snarled, and his usually active ears drooped limply.

"Why does that dog growl when I came near him?" George asked, rather fiercely for a newlywed.

supper. There were cream for the pie, and the kitchen coffee-pot, smoking hot.

The old man had just bestowed a crumb of gingerbread on' Nick, who politely shook hands with the donor. Nick! The old man! The kitchen! The white cotton tablecloth with checked gingham binding to match the curtains! Gingerbread, apple pie and coffee-and Bonnie May smiling unconcernedly! George felt the flush of shame on his face. What would the old man think of such an afternoon tea?

Perigo looked up and saw his host. "Take the other side of the table, Pendleton. I brought your wife's dog -recognized him by the description in the paper. I didn't know that anyone had sense enough to appreciate a fox terrier any more. Mary and I used to have them, and one is worth all the police dogs and airedales in Meryvale. Wish I could make my children have one, in place of that wire-haired abomination of theirs.

"When I got here and found that you belonged to the mill I smelled gingerbread-the first time since Mary used to bake it for me-and your wife offered me a piece. Also this deep-dish apple pie that I thought was obsolete. And coffee! Not much like an eggshell of pale tea, and a few chips of whetstone for food, that folks serve nowadays!"

George was dumb before the wreck of his theories for getting ahead, and could only stammer a reply, but Bonnie May was as gay and unconcerned as though their guest was old Eben Barker, the school teacher of Carp Center, instead of Perigo Scott, the richest man in Meryvale.

Under the influence of buttered gingerbread, apple pie and coffee, their guest became loquacious.

"I get fed up with the youngsters at the mill," he confessed. "They're always posing to make me notice them instead of having their minds on their jobs, and it makes me cross. Now, you are sensible people-gosh but your wife can cook, Pendleton! Live within your means, and don't try to run after fads. I'm going to remember you, and slate you for a promo-tion. And as for your wife-would you let a lonely old man like me come and have a cup of coffee in your kitchen now and then to remind me of the days when Mary and I started out just this way?"

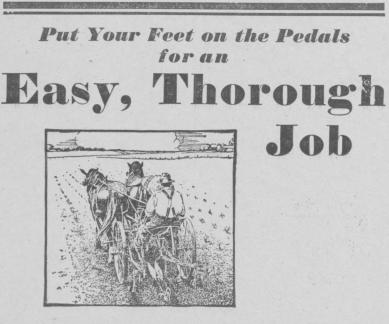

There were tears in Bonnie May's eyes when she answered. "Yap! Yap!" said Nick, offering a hospitable paw.

Nick is reconciled to Meryvale these days. His leash is a thing of the past, and almost daily he strolls in a lordly manner into Perigo Scott's private office and reposes in a leather and mahogany chair.

Sometimes the old man takes Nick and George-who is head bookkeeper now-in his readster and speeds toward Park street, where Bonnie May awaits them with gingerbread or hot molasses cookies, or an old-fashioned short-cake, and where Nick is always a fourth at the kitchen table.

"Where did he get his pull?" the other men ask enviously.

Nick cocks a knowing ear, but George vouchsafes no information. But fox terriers promise to come back into style in Meryvale.

Bonnie May, stooping to take a pan of cookies from the oven, laughed.

"He heard what you said the day he came," she joked.

"Well, I want you to be contented, and it is all right," he explained. "But the old man up at the mill has a wirehaired terrier, and I had planned to get one, too. It would have been a pull. Little things like that count, you know, and I am anxious to get ahead."

"Now, honey," Bonnie May smiled disarmingly. "Owning the same kind of dog your employer has doesn't help you. It's what you do with your job."

"You are mistaken, Doll. Ask any of the fellows at the mill. They are always doing things to call the old man's attention to them."

"Tell him he speaks piffle, Nick!" she challenged gayly. But the dog merely growled without opening his 一些主要引起1至7%至13%用地站下

One day George found Bonnie May in tears; Nick had chewed through the hated leash and was gone.

"He'll probably find his way back to Carp Center," comforted George. "We'll wait for word from there."

"We will not wait!" declared Bonnie May. "I'll have a notice in the evening paper about him, offering a reward.'

Three or four days passed without any word, and Bonnie May grieved so much that George had not the heart to say anything about the dog he was visualizing as Nick's successor.

Coming home one afternoon, he found a powerful roadster in front of his house. It belonged to the old man, otherwise, Perigo Scott, his employer. He hastened his steps.

Once Perigo's daughter, Josephine, had served him afternoon tea. He should have told Bonnie May about the tiny sandwiches, the wee cakes, the bits of candied fruits. Carp Center could not teach her that.

The living room was vacant, but he heard voices and followed them. At the painted table beneath the casement in the shining kitchen, sat Bonnie May, facing grizzled Perigo Scott. On a chair between them was grizzled Nick, ears erect, tail quivering. He was enjoying life again.

Alas for the tiny sandwiches and cakes and shell-like cups of tea! Before Perigo Scott was a section of the deep-dish apple pie Bonnie May had baked for dinner. Between them was a plate heaped with hot, spicy squares of the gingerbread she had baked for | ways, too?"-Tit-Bits.

Arrogant Major Taught Lesson by British Hero

His full colonelcy Lawrence applied for just after the capture of Damascus. He got his way. He only once used the privileges of his rank for other than traveling.

Once at a rest camp he stopped to watch a bullying officer bawling at two wretched privates, battle-wearied men, who were passing on the far side of the barrack square.

"Come here, you two loungers! Take your hands out of your pockets! Why the h-ll didn't you salute me? Don't you know I'm a major?" The poor fellows mumbled some-

They obeyed and were walking off hurriedly when the major recalled them.

"Now come back and do it again properly." They did it again.

"One moment, major," said a voice behind him: "there is something you have forgotten."

The major wheeled round and saw a rather haggard looking bareheaded boy in a tunic starred and crowned, on the shoulders, with badges of rank: Lawrence. The major saluted in confusion; the soldiers, happier now, were shuffling off, but Lawrence beckoned them to stop.

"The thing that you have forgotten. major," Lawrence went on gently, "is that in this army the salute is paid not to the man, but to the rank, and the officer saluted is ordered by the king, whom he represents, to return the salute. But, of course, you know that."

The major was speechless.

"You will therefore salute those men," said Lawrence, "whose salutes just now you failed to return."

The major saluted, choking with rage. But the merciless Lawrence continued: "Major, those private soldiers saluted you twice. You will, therefore, return their salutes a second time." And the major had to obey.-Robert Graves in World's Work.

Goa, a settlement on the West coast of Maia, has for centuries been the property of the Portuguese, says an article in London Tit-Bits. Shortly after their occupation, the Jesuits appeared and set up a monastery, and it was there that a special sort of 'jewel" was made. The Jesuits made these stones, which have come to be known as Goa stones, from various solidified drugs, but we today are totally "in the dark" as to what drugs they were composed of and how they were made.

Each stone was mounted in a silver fligree case and represented fine examples of old workmanship.

When the owner of the stone was troubled with indigestion he had only to scrape off a small portion of his stone, and drink it in a glass of water, and he was quite all right in a few moments.

Goa stones today, however, are rare and are only to be found in valuable collections of antiques.

On the Safe Side

There are so many "unsafe" things around a home. If a mother will think of such things, serious injury is spared the baby at its investigating age. She can teach the older children to co-operate with her in keeping sharp objects, such as pencils, scissors and knives from the baby's grasp. Medicines and matches may be kept on a high shelf, and while cooking, the handles of pans should not be left in such a position that baby can grab at them and spill the hot liquid. Eternal watchfulness is the price of safety!

First English Bible

John Wycliffe, first man to translate the Bible into English, was sixty years old when he finished his task. The work belongs to the final period of his life, that time during which he was greatly persecuted by both the church and state. The Wycliffe version was addressed to the entire English people, high and low, rich and poor. This is proved by the character of the copies that have survived. About thirty of these remain and some are large folio volumes, handsomely written and illustrated in the best style of the period. Others are plain copies of ordinary size for private persons or monastic libraries .--Detroit News.

THE SUFFERING SERVANT OF JEHOVAH

LESSON TEXT-lsa. 52:13-53:12 GOLDEN TEXT-With his stripes we are healed.

PRIMARY TOPIC-Jesus' Love for Us. JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus' Love for Us. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC-What Our Salvation Cost. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC-The Suffering Savior.

This prophecy is the grand center of the Old Testament. The bond servant, of Jehovah with great wisdom gloriously executes the divine purpose at the cost of great suffering.

I. The Servant's Triumph (52:13-15). By the servant here is meant the coming Messiah (42:1). 1. His wisdom (v. 13).

"He will deal prudently," for his name is "Counsellor" (9:6). He was filled with the spirit of wisdom and understanding (11:2).

He shall be exalted (v. 13).

He was to be extolled and magnified because he was the "Mighty God (9:6), even Immanuel" Because of Christ's devotion to His task of redemption, God has highly exalted Him and given Him a name which is above every name (Phil. 2:9):

3. The appearance of the Servan. (v. 14).

Because of His marred "visage," He wholly disappointed the expectation of the carnal minds who looked for outward signs of royalty and worldy greatness. Jesus, as Jehovah's servant, was tortured and beaten by men as He went about doing the business committed to him.

4. The issue of His ministry (v. 15). "He shall sprinkle many nations." This reveals Him as the great High Priest sprinkling the nations with His blood, cleansing them from their sins. Just as the people were astonished with the silence of Jesus in the midst of His shameful treatment, so shall the kings and great men of the earth be dumb before Him when the suffering Servant shall be exalted. II. The Servant Despised and Rejected (53:1-3)

1. The unbelief of the Jews (v. 1). (1) They disbelieved the words of the prophets.

(2) They did not recognize the hand of the Lord in the miracles and wonders which He wrought.

2. The origin of the Servant (v. 2). He sprang out of the stump of Judaism. The sad condition of the people at that time is expressed by "dry corn."

3. The Man of Sorrows (v. 3).

He was afflicted and rejected. III. The Vicarious Suffering of the Servant (53:4-6).

1. His griefs and sorrows were ours (v. 4). This awful suffering was looked upon by the world as occasioned by sin-"we did esteem Him

From English Mansion A Fifteenth century window of stained and painted glass from the beautiful chapel of Hampton court, an ancient English mansion house, is at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

Hampton court was built by Sir Roland Lenthal about the year 1435, a little more than a half-century before Columbus voyaged to America. Sir Roland, who built the mansion under the auspices of Henry VI, had become wealthy partly through the victory of Agincourt, where he had acquired a number of prisoners.

As was customary in those days, a chapel was a component part of the dwelling. It is thought that the glass was made by John de la Chambre pere, who painted much of the fine ecclesiastical glass of the period, notably the great St. Cuthbert window at York minster. It is interesting to note in this Fifteenth century work that there is much plain glass inserted and then painted, although stained glass was widely used at the time. In this example, the hair and beards of the apostles are painted on. Above eight apostles-Peter, Andrew, James, John, Bartholomew, Matthew, James the lesser, and Simon-set in niches under painted canopies are figures of St. Francis and St. John the Baptist.

Excavators Work to Restore Ancient City

Excavators have done excellent work in restoring the wonders and beauties of ancient Herculaneum. Thus the missing portions of a frescoed wall are no longer considered as irrevocably lost. No trace of destruction or ruin is left after the discovery of a building, and, as far as possible, no blank spaces are to be found in any mosaic or fresco uncovered. Wooden doors, windows, stairs and furniture are reconstructed or reproduced from the original surviving fragments, generally consisting of charred or carbonized pieces of wood.

Trees, plants and flowering shrubs originally adorning gardens are identified from their surviving roots and replaced by new ones.

Several houses have been unearthed, and most of them have been practically rebuilt. The carbonized remains of wooden beds and chests found in three cubicles rendered possible the reconstruction of the original furniture.

A swimming pool faced with marble, a water tank covered by an iron grating, a ladder leading to a slave's bedoom in an attic, shutters meant to keep the glare of the sun from cool marble halls, have all been reconstructed.

Flower Cultivation

It is not possible to answer definitely as to when wild flowers were domesticated. The ancient Egyptians. Greeks, Assyrians, Romans and Chinese cultivated flowers for use and pleasure and propagated many plants. One of the most ancient examples of cultivated plants is a drawing representing figs found in the Pyramid of Gizh in Egypt. Authors have assigned a date varying between 1,500 and 4,200 years before the Christian

HOW=

WORDS HAVE UNDERGONE CHANGES IN MEANING.— The word "chapel" now applied to a place of worship, comes from the French word "chapelle" meaning a cape or cloak. A chapel was originally a sanctuary which housed the cappella, or sacred cloak of St. Martin. When the kings of France went to war they carried St. Martin's cape with them as a standard, and it was preserved very carefully in particular tents, called for this reason "chapels."

The word "cathedral" passed from the Greek into the Latin language, and came into ours without going through the Anglo-Saxon stage. "Kata" means "down" and "hedra" something to sit on-a seat. But the reference is not to pews or seats -the word "cathedra" means a chair, and so the seat of a bishop; seat in the widest sense. A cathedral, originally, was different from what it is now; the Christians until the time of Constantine—over three hundred years after the birth of Christ -had no liberty to build any temple. When they spoke of churches or cathedrals, it was not of buildings, but of assemblies, and the cathedral was a spiritual court of which the bishop was chairman. The same idea of an assembly is in the word "synagogue," from the Greek "sun," "with" and "ago"-a place of withdrawing or gathering together. Synagogues, by the way, were not heard of until just before the time of Christ.

How Human Speech Was

First Brought About Sir Richard Paget described, in a lecture at the Royal Institution of Great Britain, how human speech first came into being.

"Primitive man's rudimentary ideas and intentions were expressed by simple pantomime, mostly by his hands, but with the co-operation of his body," he said. "But all this time man was also developing his arts and crafts. His hands became more and more occupied, and he found it increasingly difficult to talk with his hands full.

"Quite unconsciously he began to use his tongue and lips instead of his hands. In Europe the more southern races, leading easier lives with more hand-leisure, have retained many of their hand gestures. The northern races, living under more rigorous conditions, have had their hands too full. The northerners, therefore, were led to gesticulate almost entirely with their tongues and lips."

How Machine Tests Hearing

An audiometer, a machine for the quantitative testing of the acuity of hearing, has been developed at St. Louis University Medical school by Dr. A. G. Pohlman, professor of anat-

WHY= Music Is Pleasing to the Human Ear

An explanation why music is pleasing to the ear has been found, as far as possibly it can be discovered, by Dr. Harvey Fletcher, member of the technical staff of Bell Telephone laboratories.

This is in the manner that the ear sorts out vibrations after they pass into its interior for delivery to the auditory nerves. The ear does not translate the sound vibrations exactly as received, but registers them in accord with a system of its own. Most music, transmitted as received, probably would not be as pleasing as it is under this arrangement.

Tracing these sounds into the ear Doctor Fletcher found that there is a modulating effect in the middle ear, which transmits to the inner ear stimulations quite different from those impressed upon the outer ear.

The inner ear, receiving part of the vibrations that are harmonics of a given pitch, vibrates at all or at most of the points which vibrate if it received the full tone.

These inner ear vibrations pass to the auditory nerves as sound. So the sound heard is determined by the manner of vibration of this inner ear, and a sound which sets harmonic points in the inner ear vibrating is heard as the sound of that pitch, even when some of the essential vibrations belonging to the pitch are missing at the sound's point af origin.

Why Time on Shipboard Is Denoted by Bells

The custom of striking bells to denote time on bord ship is very ancient, according to Egyptian scribes. The first bells were struck on the river Nile. It seems that the barges which plied the Nile were eight-oared affairs, with four rowers on each side. To the rowers were assigned numbers, one to eight. As there were usually only two or three supernumerary oarsmen, only one relief was provided at a time. When it came time to relieve No. 1 oar, one bell was sounded, and a super took No. 1 oar. A few hundred strokes later, two bells were struck and No. 2 oarsman was relieved. So on, until all eight had taken a rest, then the cycle began over. These inland sailors gauged the passing of time by the number of bells struck. Modern times prescribe the striking of the bell on board United States men-of-war every half hour, beginning with one bell at 12:30 and increasing to eight, beginning the cycle anew every four hours.

Why Geysers "Spout"

222222222222 A true geyser has an underground 222222222 passage communicating with a source of water supply. By seepage from the surface the geyser tube is filled with a column of water, which at a considerable depth receives heat from buried lava flows or other volcanic sources. When the temperature in the lower part of the tube is raised to such a point that the water boils in spite of the superincumbent column, a portion of the water is changed into steam omy. The machine makes it possible and by expansion causes an overflow for the first time, to measure ac- at the surface. Thus relieved of pressure, a large quantity of water flashes into steam and ejects the whole column violently into the air. If the circulation of the waters be impeded by throwing stones into the geyser tube, the eruption can often be hastened. Geysers in many cases were originally hot springs, from which they have gradually developed by building and extending their tubes.

stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted."

2. He was beaten for us (v. 5). That which was our due was meted out to Him. Observe the words, "wounded," "bruised," "despised," "stripes"-how awful they picture His treatment, and yet "our" shows that His suffering was vicarious.

The reason for (v. 6).

All humanity, Jews and Gentiles, had gone astray. God laid upon Him the iniquity of us all.

IV. The Death of the Servant (53:7-9).

1. The strange silence (v. 7). He opened not His mouth. He went as a lamb to the slaughter. "He answered them never a word, insomuch that the governor marveled greatly" (Matt. 27:14).

2. Unconcern of multitude (v. 8). They failed to discern the fact that He suffered in their stead.

3. Buried with the wicked and the rich (v. 9).

The prophecy was fulfilled in His crucifixion between two thieves and burial in Joseph's tomb.

V. The Servant's Ultimate Victory (vv. 10-12).

1. His sufferings expressed the divine will (v. 10).

The Lord Himself laid this burden upon Him, and through His sufferings the law was vindicated and redemption was accomplished.

2. A spiritual progeny resulted from His death. (v. 10).

The fundamental law of the universe, which is life out of death. found supreme expression in His death on the cross (John 12:24). 3. Through death shall come to realization His fondest hope (v. 11) He shall see the travail of His soul and shall be satisfied. 4. The divine reward (v. 12). The divine Conqueror shall share the spoils of victory.

He Bares Our Sicknesses

When the even was come, they brought unto Him many that were possessed with devils; and He cast out the spirits with His word, and healed all that were sick; that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses.—Mat.hew 8:16, 17.

Possible With God

The things which are impossible with men are possible with God.

The first notions concerning era. gardening were introduced into Japan by the Koreans in 604 A. D. In China. 2700 years B. C., Emperor Chennung instituted a ceremony in which every year five species of useful plants were sown.

Materialistic

Mrs. J. had become weary of the noise that accompanied the play of her two young sons, especially since there seemed to be indications that a slight quarrel was developing.

"Boys," she cried in desperation, for she had been troubled with a head ache all day, "if you do not stop quareling, mother may get sick and die. and then what will you do?"

The boys stopped suddenly to consider the effects of such a tragedy. "I know what I should do," volunteered Jim. "I should go to Aunt Jane's, because she has such good peach preserves."

"I shouldn't," disagreed Charles. "I should go to Aunt Helen's, for I like strawberry jam better."

Tell Age by Scars

In the Botanic gardens, Regent's park, London, is a remarkable tree known as the "Kaffir Bread" plant. More than 1,000 years old, it is not, however, a native of Great Britain, having been imported from South Africa a few years ago. Nor is it very big. At its widest point the trunk is only 15 inches in girth, and the tree is barely ten feet high, yet it is known by the formidable name of Encephalartos Altensteinii.

How can its age be told? This is done by comparing the number of leaf scars which cover the trunk with the number of fronds produced each year.

Presents of Mind

The small son of the house had just informed his parents that he had been dreaming during the night. "Well, and what did you dream about?" asked his father.

"I dreamt that you gave me a ped aling motor car, daddy," began the small boy, "and mother gave me a box of soldiers."

"But you know. dear, that dreams always mean the opposite."

"Oh; yes!" The youngster was un dismayed. "But, then, I shall get the soldiers from you, an' mummie'll give me the motor."

curately the keenness of hearing of an individual. In the laboratory at the university, which is one of the best equipped research departments in the world on problems of deafness, Doctor Pohlman has set up his machine. To the layman it looks like half a dozen radios, phonographs and telephones weirdly jumbled together with their multiple batteries, microphones, receivers and records.

How to Keep Paint Fluid

Paint, putty, furnace cement, and similar materials can be kept in open cans without hardening on the surface or deteriorating, by protecting them from the air with a layer of paraflin wax.

In the case of ordinary paint, place the can or bucket on a piece of newspaper, mark round it with a pencil, and cut out a circle of paper, which is then placed on top of the paint. Then pour in melted wax to form a layer 1/4-inch thick. Paste, white lead, putty, and cement require no paper; the wax is poured directly on top of them.

How Long Elephants Live

According to Maj. W. A. Smith, the age cycle of an elephant's life is very similar to that of human beings. "A youngster," writes Major Smith in a recent number of the Atlantic Monthly, "is put to light work at sixteen and gains his full development at twenty-five, and, though females may carry calves at eighteen, this is young. The animals are getting past work, at sixty-five, and although there are, I believe, instances of great life in elephants, our experience is that they seldom live beyond seventy-five."

How Putty Should Be Used

Ever have trouble with putty crumbling after it has been applied to the window sash? One way of preventing this is to paint the sash with a coat of oil before applying the putty to the window sash. This prevents the oil from being drawn from the putty into the wood before the putty has had time to set.

Europe Still Is Wild

A forest keeper of Sandricourt, near Meru, has shot down an eagle measuring more than seven feet across. Meru is about 30 miles from Paris. It was also reported recently that a wolf had been shot near Hadrian's villa, at the very gates of Rome .- Grit.

Why Formal Salutation Since knighthood was in flower fighting men have saluted one another. In the old days when knights met, each would raise his visor to show the other who he was. This is the origin of our modern salute, which is therefore much older than most of our present-day customs. Just as fraternities have the handclasp and lodges have a secret greeting, just so do fighting men have their salute, which is their byword. An American man-of-warsman saluting a French officer is giving him an international greeting as a brother-in-arms. Although the junior saluted first, the senior always answers and therefore recognizes the junior as a comrade in his profession.

Why Water Colors Vary

Pure ocean water has a clear blue color because salt water does not absorb the blue rays of sunlight as it does the red rays. The blueness of the water depends largely upon its saltiness. The Arctic and Antarctic, which are cold and not very salt, are row Wilson. This is in gratitude for his assistance in uniting Transylvanians and other Rumanians to the fatherland. The cornerstone will probably be laid in May.

"Shot" silk is so called because thread of one color in the web is shuttled, or shot, through warp of another color. This gives the effect of different colors being visible from different angles.

Why Trees Change in Size Trees are larger in diameter in summer than in winter. They also vary in this respect from day to day. being larger from noon to twilight than from twilight to noon.
