TRAIN AND MAIL SITUA. TION DISCUSSED.

Committee Appeals to the State Roads Commission.

At the mass meeting held in Shriner's theatre, last Firady night, the discontinuance of two trains on the Fred. Div. P. R. R., was earnestly discussed. Chas. E. H. Shriner, president of the Key Automobile Club, opened the meeting with an address, in which he asserted that the only way to secure adequate mail facilities for to secure adequate mail facilities for Littlestown and Hanover, was to do it through the County Commissioners who, with a committee to be appointed by the present meeting, should again call on the State Roads Commission. That the 1% miles of uncompleted road to the Pennsylvania line, should be completed this year, but there must be no delay.

William S. Mason, secretary of the Hanover, Pa., Chamber of Commerce, addressed the meeting, stressing the immense disadvantage Hanover would suffer from the discontinuance of the trains, and that Littlestown also would be a heavy loser. He too explained that the Star Route Service to Taneytown could not be continued further, due to the uncompleted stretch of road.

J. W. Neuman, vice-president of the Littlestown Chamber of Com-merce, spoke in like terms of the situation, caused by the P. R. R. hastily discontinuing trains without giving business interests ample notice.

Rev. Guy P. Bready spoke in the interests of the mail service, transportation of children from Keymar to Taneytown to school, and to traffic on the uncompleted road. He also stressed the need for prompt action, with the hope that the piece of road might yet be built before the severity of winter sets in. He presented a res-olution and preamble that everybody voted for; the substance of which was that the only solution to the present transportation hardship was the immediate construction of the 1% miles of road needed to complete the highway in to Pennsylvania, and that the President of the Automobile Club should appoint a committee to lay the matter before the State Roads Commission, and that the Board of County Commissioners, and candidates of both political parties, be invited to accompany the committee.

Chas. W. Melville, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, agreed as to the seriousness of the situation, and that he was ready to back all of the statements he had previously made in favor of completing the road, and that he would go along with the committee on Monday, be-with the committee on Monday, before the State Roads Commission.

In line with the resolutions, the following committee was appointed; Merle S. Baumgardner, Edward S. Harner, William E. Burke, Harold S. Mehring, D. J. Hesson, Chas. E. H. Shriner and Rev. Guy P. Bready. This committee, supplemented by Chas. W. Melville, County Commissioner, and Howard H. Wine, C. Scott Bollinger and John E. Null, candidates for Commissioner, appeared be-fore the State Roads Commission on Monday afternoon, urging the completion of the section of road this Fall.
Mr. Shriner, President of the Club, outlined the problem and showed that the present condition constitutes an emergency which must be met promptly, in order that the community may ot suffer greatly.

Rev. Guy P. Bready spoke in detail of the intolerable condition resulting from the removal of the two trains which passed through Taneytown, one in the morning and the other in the afternoon. He pointed out the almost absolute dependence of Taneytown and the other towns situated along the line of the Pennsylvania Railroad upon the service offered by the railroad, in so far as mail, express and passengers are concerned. He showed the delay and inconvenience that must result from the removal of The substitute service of fered by the Postoffice Department although helping to remedy the difficulty, is not complete, in that it does not care for through mail and parcel post matter north from Taneytown, or south of Littlestown.

It is useless to expect the trains to be restored. The only solution in sight is to complete the unimproved stretch of road, one and seven-tenths miles, to the Pennsylvania State Line The Postoffice Department had pointed out that complete through mail service could not be given, on account of the condition of that portion of the

The committee was received very cordially by the Road Commissioners, and whilst they called attention to the lateness of the season, and perhaps unfavorable weather, that might come before the road could be completed, they promised to consider the matter very carefully, and if possible, do what ought to be done to remedy the situ-

The two passenger trains between Frederick and York went off, on Monday, as expected; and also as expected the new Star Route service between Frederick and Taneytown, came on-arrived here at 10:00 A. M., and left on the return trip at 4:00 P. And so entered a new chapter in mail and passenger transportationdue to the increase in auto, bus and truck traffic.

So far as Taneytown, Walkersville, and other points between Taneytown and Frederick, are concerned, the mail service has been restored as good as was before the trains were taken off, but the remainder of the line, north of Taneytown to York, has not been provided for, as stated above.

URGES MORE BREAD USED Would Help to Relieve Serious Agri-cultural Situation.

Another prominent man urges that the consumption of bread should be-come more fashionable. He is Bruce Barton, of New York, a prominent advertising man, who appeared before Saturday, with his plea, that has good sound sense back of it. "We have 130,000,000 people in the United States," said Mr. Barton, "and 130,000,000 too many bushels of wheat The Government proved in the war that its influence was sufficient to cut down the consumption of wheat. THE COMMERCIAL CLUB.

On Monday evening, September 29, 1930, the members of the freshman, sophomore, junior and senior commercial classes, met in the assembly hall of the school for the purpose of organizing a commercial club. Mrs. Loy made a speech giving the purposes and aims of such a club. The purpose is to be four-fold:

First: To supply better equipment, such as a mimeograph, new rhythm records, adding machine, simple filing cabinet, etc., for use in the commercial department.

Second: To supply reference books.
Third: To supply magazines such as "The Gregg Writer," "The Commercial Outlook," "Spotlight," etc., in order to keep commercial students in touch with the latest developments in

A COLD WINTER PREDICTED.

Mr. Weeks, Maryland's official weather expert, is now predicting an unusually cold winter, on the ground that weather records of 113 years appear to justify such a conclusion. That the law of property requirements it. the law of averages requires it. says that the past summer had thirty-four days, to be exact, with a temperature of 90° or more; that is, June, July and August had them, and September had nine more, but they do not figure in his calculation.

He qualifies his statement, very wisely, that a winter following a hot summer may have any kind of weather—only, the chances are against it. As Mr. Weeks has been a very much grinned-at weather forecaster, during the summer, it is quite wise for him to leave a hole open for him to get out, in his winter predic-

Anyway, he has figured out that the odds are about 4 to 1 for December, January and February to have an unusual number of freezing days—and what is worse, may we add, they may be fearfully dry ones.

DANGERS IN THE HOME LIFE.

The average home, according to records of accidents is far from being a safe place, as many think. Little accidents which happen unexpectedly, cause a large percentage of injuries and deaths. People fall down stairs, and slip on polished floors or in bath An instance is told of an aviator who came through the World War safely, only to fall a few feet from a step-ladder with fatal result. The danger in using gasoline and kerosene is large; and then, there are cuts and burns to be considered.

It is not commonly so estimated, but what we call "farm work" in all of its many branches, is among the most dangerous of occupations. Working with, and being about, horses and cattle, causes many deaths and serious injuries every year. All power ma-chinery is extremely dangerous, often when properly handled. The victims of feed-cutters, saws, threshing machines, belts and pulleys, are numbered up among the thousands each

Falling from trees, ladders, wagons, and in or from buildings, are of common occurrence. Hands and fingers are lost in working with machinery. Indeed, the unexpected may happen at any time in the many duties that the average home worker and farmer

The last day for the Registration of Voters, this year, will be Tuesday, October 14, from 9:0 A. M., to 9:00 P. M. All persons who will become 21 years of age before Nov. 4, are entitled to register. Tuesday, October 7, will be "revision" day only. No one can register on that day.

HIGHER PAY AMEND-MENT RULED OUT.

Not Passed in the Senate by Constitutional Vote.

The proposed Constitutional amendmen to increase pay of the general assembly will not go on the November ballots.

Thomas H. Robinson, Attorney General, has ruled that the amend ment authorizing an increase of from $5 to $15 a day for members of the Legislature was not passed by the Senate in accord with Constitutional requirements and Thursday he so notified David C. Winebrenner 3rd., Secretary of State.

The ruling was forwarded to Mr. Winebrenner in reply to his inquiry as to whether he should certify the amendment to the various boards of election supervisors for submission to the voters at the approaching elec-

Mr. Robinson based his decision on the fact that during the legislative maze through which the amendment and its amendment found its way at the last session, the required threefifths majority in favor of the plan failed to materialize in the Senate.

The bill was introduced in the House and passed by a vote of 89 to 20. At that time it provided for an increase of from $5 to $15 daily for members and an addition $10 a day for the presiding officers of both

Then the measure was sent to the Senate, where it was adopted after being amended to make the new rate of pay to $10. At the final vote it was passed, 26 to 1.

Then the bill went back to the House, where a motion was made that the members refuse to concur in the Senate amendment, and send it to a conference committee. The committee recommended that the Senate alteration be withdrawn.

The Senate voted 17 to 12 in favor of the conference report, but the At-torney-General points out this vote was less than three-fifths of the membership required under the Constitu-tion.—Baltimore Sun.

ROBBERY SUSPECT CAUGHT IN HAMPSTEAD.

A man giving his name as George Henry Green was captured in Hamp-stead early last Friday morning by Lieut. John Zang, detective of the W. M. R. R., and Captain Palmer, detective of the P. R. R., and lodged in jail in Westminster by Sheriff George Fowble.

Green and two others had visited the Hampstead Milling Co, and after examining the Mill one of the men (Green) tried to effect entrance, but was captured. The other two escap-

He refused to give any information, but a search of his person revealed $282.26 in money, an automatic pistol, and flashlight. The 141st. annual United Brethren Conference met in the fine new U. B. Church at Red Lion, Pa., on Tuesday. The conference has a membership of more than 31,000, has 155 churches and 123 ministers, 95 Christian En-deavor Societies, 27 Intermediate Societies, 54 Junior Societies, 77 Wo-men's Missionary Societies, 56 Otter-bein Guild Chapters, 145 Sunday Schools. On Wednesday, a report on Sabbath observance was given by Rev. Carl N. Mundis, stating that "little improvement is noticed anywhere." Rev. J. Lower Grimm in an address stated that the mob spirit has grown until it is a question "whether shall be by law or by a mob, and that public spirit must settle the question of future government." He advocated placing in public office men who are in sympathy with the laws which they may be called upon to enforce. In one state, he said, twenty percent of the enforcement officers have criminal records. "What can you expect from them but crookedness?" he

On National prohibition he said, "it did not come as a result of an effort to make men moral by law, it came only when public opinion became convinced that the legalized liquor traffic was hopelessly corrupt and corrupting, and when it became an economic burden which no nation could

ARSON JURY DISAGREES Case Will be Tried Again at December Term of Court.

After deliberating over eight hours, the jury in the case of the state against Robert Ecker, charged with burning the barn of J. W. LeGore of the LeGore Lime Co., at LeGore, on May 11, disagreed and was dismissed late Monday night. It is understood that the jury stood eleven for con-viction and one of acquittal.

Seven witnesses testified for the state, while Ecker appeared in his own behalf. The case will now be up for retrial at the December term of Court.

The first witness was Walter C.
LeGore who told of Ecker's discharge as a stable assistant, and of threats of revenge that later came to his ears purporting to have came from Ecker. That when he ran to the barn, which suddenly broke into flames, Ecker was there among the first on the spot, making a pretense of helping.

Marvin LeGore, son of Walter C.,
who rushed to the fire, said the first who rushed to the fire, said the first man he saw was Ecker. Other witnesses testified to the quickness of the blaze. John W. Davis, colored, testified that he had been drinking with Ecker the night before, said that Ecker before leaving for home asked for a match and took a lot of them from a box, and spoke of "getting even with Walter LeGore." Other testimony of a circumstantial character seemed to implicate Ecker.

ter seemed to implicate Ecker.
Ecker, in his testimony, denied "hard feelings" against the LeGore family, and said Davis, the negro, called him out of bed to a drinking affair and was too intoxicated when Ecker left Davis' shack at midnight to know what had happened. He said Robert Carty was also there drinking, but that he (Ecker) was not intoxicated. He said that after retiring he was awakened by a noise like that of a truck or automobile, and then saw the fire. He denied know-ing anything about its source.

WAYNESBORO NEEDS WATER.

"The mountain reservoir is practically empty due to the low level of Antietam creek," Mr. Fitz said. "This condition," he continued, "will exist until we get a heavy rain of several inches. The Burgess has ordered policemen to warn all offenders against this order, and if they do not comply arrests will be made or water service discontinued.

It is also said that he had been treated, for years for a complaint bordering on insanity; and it is also said that two persons who saw him early Sunday morning, asserted that he had either been drinking or was then insane. No evidence of liquor was found.

The police have used every effort to find some other possible solution than that Creecy first attacked his wife and then killed himself, but no other solution seems possible.

A clerk in one of the large hardware stores in Washington, gave the information that on Saturday Col. Creecy had bought a hatchet and a Creecy had bought a hatchet and pistol, and a box of 50 cartridges, saying he wanted to take the pistol along with him to the tropics. He and his wife had engaged reservations to sail to Haiti, on Sunday where he was to resume his post as second in command of the Haytien constabulary. Railroad reservations to New York were found in the room after the tragedy as well as a considerable amount of money and jewels. None of the cartridges have been found except the five in the pistol.

There appears to have been no incentive to the crime, other than the theory stated, as Col. Creecy had an income of about $20,000 a year, while Mrs. Creecy was well-to-do in her own right; nor does there appear to have been the slightest report of marital differences.

For purposes of identification, the names of the parents, place, data of high sex color, and the first date of birth, sex, color, and the first name of the child must be entered up-on the record that is forwarded to the Department. The Westminster Fire Department was called about 10 o'clock and about a half-hour after their arrival, the Reisterstown Fire Company also responded. The regular crops of threshed wheat and hay and a number of farm implements were burned with the barn. The fire is supposed to have started in the wagonshed adjoining the barn. The blaze could be seen from Mt. Airy, Hampstead and other places and attracted a large crowd of sight-seers.

AUTO FATALITIES GREATER THAN THOSE OF WAR.

About 6,000 soldiers were killed in the armies of Meade and Lee at Gettysburg.

During the past thirteen years automobiles have killed in the United States 218,000 persons. That is equivalent to thirty-six battles of Gettysburg, or nearly three auto Gettysburgs every year.

Science has reduced fatalities from certain diseases which were once considered human plagues to one person in 100,000 in a year.

But 100,000 autos claim 125 deaths a year and yet the auto is held up as a joy-riding vehicle.

SOME NEWSPAPERS.

There are still a few partisan newspapers of the virulent class. Still a few who "stick to party," regardless of individual "smelliness." There are still a few nasty-stuff editorial writers, who never say a decent word about a public man in the opposite party—until after he is dead. Still a prominent few whose vocabulary is limited in political discussions to mean insinuations and garbled statements, unfair and unmanly.

There are not so many, any more, who practice stirring up mud, and make it when there is none. Most of this stripe went out of the political game along with the dead roosters and other like works of art, kept on hand in country nemspaper offices used from year to year when "things went All articles on this page are either original or properly credited. In the cities, where stimulation is needed in order that attention may be attracted; where common honesty and morality in politics-especially-goes as "old stuff" without thrills; where "editing" is done on the news pages, and where headlines give articles a false conclusion.

Of course, we mean some cities, some newspapers, some writers, all catering to some classes of readers; and we also mean that the "some" are fortunately few-but too many, and sometimes we are hardly able to avoid patronizing them.

Those who consider the Republican base their conclusion on this paragraph;

WHY GOUGE THE PUBLIC?

Postmaster General Brown may be feeling the pulse of the people with his proposal to add a half cent to the first-class mail rate, which is the rate for personal correspondence. If it is merely a feeler, the proposal will be withdrawn with celerity.

Two rates the government may not tamper with,, except to reduce them, are the first-class and newspaper postal rates. Increases here strike home to every home and every American able to read and write or have someone do it for him.

To increase letter postage is to tax family life, social life and business life throughout their many ramifications. Having had the two-cent stamp in peace times for 50 years, the business and social life of the nation is to a large extent based upon it.

A referendum would give an overwhelming vote in favor of tolerating platform a "straddle" on prohibition, the $85,000,000 postoffice department deficit rather than removing it at the cost of an increase in the postal rate for personal correspondence. But the one does not depend upon the other. Nature Both Kind and Unkind to Great Poet

Alexander Pope, the author of "The Rape of the Lock" and "An Essay on Man," was the son of a London tradesman, and was born in 1688. Sickly only by the greatest care that life was kept in his frail body.

When he reached manhood, he was withered and small, being but four feet tall; he was a remarkable scholar. surpassing, perhaps, anyone of his time. His greatest works were those mentioned above; also his translations of the "Iliad" and "Odyssey" have been held in high esteem.

His poetry was roughly handled by the London critics. But, for all his insignificant appearance, he was a bitter fighter, and lashed out with tongue and pen in a way that caused all but the most hardy to shun him .- From Popular Biography.

Hope for Drug Victim

Recent observations and investigations of drug addicts indicate that the morphine victim is not wholly hopeless, as is generally supposed. The addiction to morphine is not characterized by physical deterioration or impariment of physical fitness aside from the addiction per se. This may seem highly surprising. Yet detailed clinical examinations of many patients gave no evidence of change in the circulatory, hepatic, renal or endrocine functions. When it is considered that the persons under observation had been addicted for at least five years, some of them as long as twenty years, which three colored candidates backed these negative observations are highly significant. Thus there are substantial grounds for the belief that, were it possible to relieve the addict of his addiction, complete rehabilitation might be expected.—Washington Star.

Gauls and Romans First to Find Value of Soap Very early in Biblical history it was found that the ashes from fires, which were then always of wood, were useful in removing grease from the hands. Ashes were thus the earliest form of soap, and they remained so for a long time.

The first of the more civilized peoples to discover how to make real soap were the Romans. They learned the secret from the Gauls, who used a preparation made from wood ashes and goat's tallow for washing their hair and beards, thus making them a fiery red-a color they considered becoming. The Romans developed the new discovery considerably, but it was many years before improved methods of soap making were introduced.

In some parts of the world soap making is even now carried out in much the same way as in Roman

An old cask with holes bored in one end is filled with alternate layers of straw, lime and wood ashes. The cask is then placed on a raised, slanting grooved board, and from time to time water is poured on the contents, until there emerges a brownish liquid, which is collected in an iron pot and boiled over a fire with the fat and grease until the soap maker deems it

The fire is then allowed to go out and the contents of the pot is left to chill to a solid mass, after which it is cut into bars.

Wage Constant Warfare

on Dreaded Tsetse Fly The insect most feared in Africa is the dreaded tsetse fly. This creature sucks the blood of cattle and infects them with the germ of sleeping sickness. It will at times attack humans. It is a sight-hunter instead of a smellhunter. This was proved when thousands of them were caught in nets and marked with small spots of paint so that they could be identified. As these paint-marked flies were caught days later in the nets of the fly-hunters, their distribution proved how widely the flies range for their food. Some of them were painted either over their eyes or over their antennae. which are believed to be the organs of smell. Thus groups of artificially blinded flies and of flies deprived of the sense of smell were turned loose and watched. The insects without smell went about their evil work just the same; found cattle to bite and sucked the blood of these animals like normal insects. The blinded flies, on the other hand, seemed unable to find cattle or to feed. This proved that they were guided only by sight,

Africans Heavy Tea Drinkers

South Africa probably consumes more tea per head of population than any other country in the world. The Englishman's 4 o'clock tea is an insignificant habit compared with the constant demand for tea that obtains there. Most everybody has a cup of tea before rising, and this is followed very shortly by tea at breakfast. In every office and shop, and even in most factories, all the employees knock off for a few minutes at 10:30 for tea and again at 3:30, and in between these times there is a cup of tea with lunch. Returning home from work in the evening one is greeted by a cup of tea, and after dinner has been digested the kettle is again singing on the cooker for more tea. Besides this routine, fresh tea is brewed for every visitor to almost every house and also for customers in most offices.

Perfection in Acoustics

An even more delicate test than the dropping of a pin has been made on acoustic properties. When engineers were trying out the audibility of the sound reflector on the stage of the Hollywood bowl they dropped one No. 10 bird shot (weighing slightly more than one-thousandth of an ounce) 8 inches on a kettledrum. The sound was heard throughout the bowl. When dropped only one-quarter inch listeners in three-quarters of the bowl heard the shot fall. The reflector is the half shell of a huge cone, 45 feet at the front of the stage and 18 feet high at the rear. It is made of 36 tons of structural steel, padded inside and out with asbestos sheets. No electrical amplifiers are necessary.

Good Form to Smack Lips

Smacking the lips when eating, a mannerism distinctly bad form in many countries, is not so considered in Hawaii, writes Fred Lockley in his column in the Portland, (Ore.) Journal, in giving the viewpoint of a native of the islands.

"With us," Lockley was told, "if a man makes no noise in eating we think he does not want others to know he is eating, so he will not have to share his food with them. We consider it very impolite not to smack your lips and make a noise when you eat, for by doing so you show you enjoy what you are eating."

Afton Water

Burns' melodious verses, classified as one of his songs, known as "Afton Water," seem to refer to a living Mary, as will be seen by an examination of passages in the fourth and fifth verses. The last line of the fourth verse states that "The sweetscented birk (the birch) shades my Mary and me." Here Mary and the poet are pictured sitting together in the shade of the birch. The next verse speaks of "the cot where my Mary resides," and goes on to tell of her gathering flowers in the waters.

WATCH AMOUNT OF FEED PULLETS EAT

Drop in Mash and Grain Used May Bring Slump.

A coming slump in egg laying of early hatched pullets can be detected by watching the amount of feed consumed, warns the poultry department at Cornell university.

A flock of 100 leghorn pullets laying 50 per cent must eat from 24 to 25 pounds of grain and mash daily. A decline of only two pounds of feed from the necessary amount that should be eaten by one hundred birds is enough to cause a falling off of egg production.

The feeder's problem is to have the flock eat the required amount daily. For various reasons, some difficult to determine, the birds may refuse to eat what they should. At the same time they become increasingly inactive. If the slump continues, a partial molt may result. Such conditions may start as the result of changes in feeds and feeding and general management, outbreaks of disease, poor ventilation, or poor breeding, but probably most frequently from violent changes in the weather.

It is best to try to check the slump before it has progressed far. If, however, the birds have dropped off in production, the next best thing is to bring them out of it as quickly as possible. In either case there are several practices that may prove helpful at this season.

Increase the hours of artificial illumination, if necessary, so that the birds have a 14-hour day. Feed cod liver oil, mixing a pint in each 100 pounds of dry mash or 1 ounce daily in the scratch grain or in the wet mash for 50 hens. Feed a wet mash composed of the regular dry mash moistened with skim milk or water, preferably just before the night feeding of grain. Continue to keep the dry mash before the birds. Liquid skim milk is advised even though there is powdered milk in the mash. The revised Cornell mash formula calls for 50 pounds of dried skimmed milk or buttermilk in every 500 pounds of the mixture.

Breeding Peafowl for Ornament and Profit

On a farm peafowl may be kept without much trouble. They are very ornamental birds, and always arrest attention. It is perhaps expensive to start off with a pen of these birds, which would require to consist of four hens and one cock, but doubtless they would return a profit in hatching eggs and in young birds for sale.

When birds are first installed it is necessary to watch that they do not wander too far away, which they might be inclined to do, before they get settled down to a new place, which they will do in two or three weeks' time. The owner should endeavor to encourage them to roost in an openfronted shed. Like the turkey the peahen likes to select a hedge to hatch out her young. As a rule she will sit when she has laid from 8 to 10 eggs. The incubation period is one of 28 days, and the youngsters are, as a rule, very active and bright. The mother hen broods them for a long

to Avoid Coccidiosis Rotate chick ranges as you would crops. They should not be allowed to range on the same ground oftener than once in three years. Rotating the range will avoid coccidiosis and intestinal parasites that live on the ground for several years after the chicks have been taken off. Any range with plenty of grass is desirable for sanitation and economy. A green range is more sanitary than one with only bare ground. The growing grass hides and utilizes most of the organic waste.

Feed bills are cut materially if ample range with good grass is available. It will supply a tender, juicy feed, along with all the necessary minerals and vitamins.

Time to Fight Mite

Summer is the time when lice and mites do their most deadly work in the poultry flock. Lice live on the birds, while the mites hide in cracks and crevices in the nests, roosts and dropping boards in the day time and get on the birds at night and suck the blood. Both of these pests sap the birds' vitality and lower egg production. The birds should be treated for lice and the houses cleaned and disinfected, the droppings boards, roosts and nests being painted.

Fattening Turkeys

Begin on the first of October by gradually increasing the feeds morning and evening. If the birds are fed enough they will not move about very much. There is no advantage in shutting them up. The more milk fed the better the bird; so feed as much buttermilk as possible during this time.

Keep all hoppers and troughs clean at all times. Provide the birds with deep wooden troughs for wet mash, made from 10-inch or 12-inch boards Perfect Safeguard

Topic:- "How May We help Folks in Our Community." Jas. 1:27.

Written by—Rev. Franklin B. Bailey, Smallwood, Md.

This is a very practical topic. It deals with matters nearer to us than Foreign Missions. It deals with matters nearer than Home Missions. It concerns itself with our relationship Services at the Church of God, in to those across the street from us and next door to us. How may we help folks in our community? I would first bid you think of the Great Example of all mankind, Jesus the Son of God. What did He do. The life of Jesus is very nicely summed up in one sentence, "He went about doing good." In a general way that is how we may help folks in our community, by going about doing good, by extending a helping hand where help is needed, by speaking a word of comfort where comfort needed, by speaking a word of en-couragement to the discouraged, by having a kind word for all.

We very severely criticize the Priest and Levite in the story of the Good Samaritan and rightly so. Yet how often do we pass by on the other side of those who need our help. Perhaps we do not mean to do so, yet when we think of the things we might have done, when we think of the things we have left undone we must admit that we too have been guilty of passing by on the other side. An honest confession is good for the soul. One day the writer was riding over to a near by town. He passed another car that had stopped along the road. Apparently the driver of the car was trying to fix a tire. I should have stopped and offered my assistance but instead I excused myself by thinking the following things. I am in a big hurry. The weather is so cold. I probably could not help him. I don't know him any way. So I passed by on the other side so fast that I did not recognize the man and only learned a few days later that he was connected with the church of which I was pastor and all he needed was some tube patching which by the way I had right in my car. Just another case of passing by on the other side—the Golden Rule once more unkept. If we would help the folks in our community let us prove ourselves neighborly. us keep the Golden Rule. Let us low the example of our Master. Let us fol-

The first verse of the 27th. Chapter of James tells us that pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their afflictions. True religion is not just to say something, religion is not just to say something, it is to do something. Actions speak louder than words. Are there any fatherless in our community? Are there any widows? Are there any invalids? If so there is our opportunity to help folks. Are there any warmen of the source of unsaved in our community? They are the ones who most need helping. may not succeed in winning them but we have not done our duty until we have tried to do so. The society may try as a whole by trying to get active members or we may try as individuals by personal contact, by precept and example, to cause folks to see and accept the better way of living. Thus we will be giving the very best kind of help to folks who most

Perhaps we would do well to have ple live. a Community Welfare Committee in our Society whose business it would be to study the conditions of the combusiness meeting as to how the Society might help the community. The society should have a very definite part in improving conditions and making the community a better place in which to live. By doing this type of work we would either directly or indirectly be helping folks in our community.

Apparition in Northern

Sky Seen by Motorists Winnipeg, Man.-Appearing out of a clear sky and traveling at a rate estimated from 120 to 180 miles per hour, an apparition came to the view of a

Regina (Sask.) motor party recently. When driving home from Holdfast with six others in the automobile, A. G. McKennon, K. C., and party were in the vicinity of Bethune, Sask., about 1:00 a. m. when a greenish blue light was seen, apparently 150 to 200 feet above the ground. At first it was believed that it was the air mail plane from the north, flying low, but on a closer view it was seen that it was something similar to a meteor. The body turned at times from a greenish blue to a coppery red, and as it drew even with the motor party and passed ahead it seemed to be disintegrating, with portions dropping to earth at intervals of about a second, until the main body disappeared. The body was viewed by the party for fully a minute. The light seemed to be traveling almost parallel to the surface of the earth.

NUPTIAL PACT IS FOUND IRON-CLAD

Binds Wife Never to Claim Husband's Money.

Norfolk, Va.-A marriage contract so binding upon the wife that she agrees never to claim a dollar of her husband's money and never to run up a bill of any kind without his written consent caused possibly the widest domestic discussions in Virginia history. "It emphasizes the true love of that union," the Rev. Thomas A. Smoot, pastor of Epworth Methodist church, who performed the wedding ceremony. told the United press in discussing the marriage of Mary Louise Baker, twenty-nine-year-old school teacher, and Carl Moore Jordan, fifty-year-old wealthy lumberman. Who originated the contract, which was signed a month before the wedding, Rev. Smoot could not say. It's more than 2,000 words, however, stripped the marriage of every suspicion of mercenary motive and in effect reduced the wife to the status of a daughter of Jordan's eighty-fouryear-old mother, with whom the cou-

Even the widely-known words-"And with all my worldly goods I thee endow"-were pruned out of the munity and bring suggestions to the Methodist marriage ritual by mutual consent. Miss Baker, who met Jordan four years ago, solemnly agreed to "surrender her youth to meet the requirements of a man of fifty years of age." In turn, Jordan made clear that he undertook only "to assume the responsibilities and requirements of a man of fifty years of age" under the circumstances.

Bravest Hearts Stirred

When Lions Give Voice No more appalling sound is known on our living earth, says American Forest, than the roaring chant of a troop of lions. It reaches camp as our "black boys" are feasting by the fire, singing or babbling like children under the blazing stars. Camp gaiety ceases as though a meteor had fallen, and terror takes the place of mirth. There are lions abroad tonight, ruthless as death; frigid in purpose, daring and strong. Another high-pitched boom-raucous and shattering as from some epic brazen trumpet, dwindling to a series of hoarse, detonating grunts. Perhaps a dozen full-grown lions are on their way down to drink after a colossal kill and all-night gorging of meat. Suddenly one will halt to breathe out an awesome roar that rolls and throbs for miles over the silent wilderness. As the lion draws in another great breath to repeat, a second lion takes up the challenge. Then a third, a fourth and so on, until the very firmament seems to vibrate and tremble as with shattering contact with physical powers. There is nothing like it to strike awe and fear into the bravest heart; it is the authentic voice of a true king of beasts.

Colonial "Babies"

"Some baby" may sound modern but its use goes way back to pre-Revolution times according to Fortune Magazine. However, when a man said "babies" in those days, he was referring not to young Colonial dames but to the latest dress importations. They were always in miniature on dolls which were known as babies. Before 1776 these came mainly from London, but during the Revolution none but Tories would ape the British, and French "babies" began to be shown. Importations of actual gowns, says Fortune Magazine, discussing the garment industry, did not begin extensively until well into the Nineteenth

Ancient Beast's Bones

Discovered in South Richmond, Va.—The teeth and jaw bones and particles of other bones of some prehistoric monster which either swam in the ocean off Wilmington, N. C., or roamed the forest, were found by dredging officials in a section of the intracoastal waterway between Carolina Beach and Myrtle Grove Sound.

The teeth, several of which were dug out of the earth, were approximately nine inches long and about three and a half inches in diameter. They weighed several pounds each, one of the jaw teeth had a spread of about 12 inches, was eight inches long and had a thickness of about four inches.

Particles of the bone found were of a massive nature and indicated that the beast was extremely powerful and capable of accomplishing much destruction with its iron jaws and vice-

Andrews Finds Vast Sea Hidden in Gobi Desert

Peiping.-Discovery of a huge inland sea in which rich fossil deposits abound has just been disclosed by Dr. Roy Chapman Andrews, of the American Museum of Natural History, New Doctor Andrews returned to Peiping on a hurried visit to purchase supplies for the expedition into the Gobi desert which he is leading this summer. He said a storm struck the expedition in the shifting desert sands of the Gobi and destroyed the major part of their supplies on the 500-mile trek.

The fossil beds and the sea, or great lake, hitherto uncharted, may contain evidences of the earliest man, he said. It was to locate this sea or lake, surrounded by sand dunes and defying detection until now, that the expedition started a few weeks ago for the

Arrested as Fraud, He Wins His Acquittal.

Leitmeritz, Czechoslovakia.—The extraordinary course of staging a seance for the purpose of testing the capacity of a clairvoyant was adopted by the Leitmeritz court in the course of a trial which has aroused enormous in-

The accused, Erik Jan Hanussen, was charged with obtaining money by false pretenses. The case was begun last year, but owing to the large number of witnesses, some of them from abroad, it was adjourned last December until recently.

Hanussen, whose services as a clairvoyant were in great demand, was arrested in Teplitz on a charge of fraud, and though witnesses alleged that they had been deceived by him, an equal number spoke as to the man's extraordinary gifts.

Tell of Feats.

Prof. Dr. Albert Kroener of Berlin declared that Hanussen was a "phenomenon and the best clairvoyant known." A letter was read in court from a Berlin carpet dealer, who stated that he was conversing in a restaurant concerning a theft of carpets. Suddenly a man sitting at the next table—it was Hanussen—bent over and said, "The two men are on the race course at Marienbad." The dealer went at once to Marienbad, recognized the thieves, and had them arrested.

Another witness who had attended one of the accused's seances told how a woman had handed Hanussen a slip of paper on which was written the date of a murder which took place in the year 1906. Hanussen gave a detailed description of the crime and of the murdered man.

The court decided-following these stories-to subject the defendant to a test under rigorous conditions. All persons who had come into contact with Hanussen during the trail were placed under police guard. The court held was also strictly guarded by police, and the neighboring rooms were carefully searched in case an accomplice might be concealed there. All entrances were guarded by gendarmes.

Proves His Powers. Hanussen was set the following tasks:

To find a concealed object. To give the characteristics of three persons from specimens of their writ-

To do the same with two specimens of writing in the possession of the court.

Two clairvoyant tests with notes, and to describe the fate of a man on the strength of an object associated with him. As soon as the object was hidden, Hanussen ran out of the room and returned within one minute with a key which had been concealed. The clairvoyant next gave a brilliant description of three well-known Leitmeritz personalities when their writing was submitted to him, and he succeeded equally well with the pieces of writing provided by the court.

The strict clairvoyant tests also were triumphantly accomplished. In one of these he described a motor accident and in another the scene of a Hanussen was acquitted. He was given a great ovation as he returned to his hotel. His Job to Help Eels Over Cenarth Falls

Newcastle-Emlyn, England.-To the many strange jobs in the world, add one of J. Morgan Rees, a fisherman. He helps young eels over a waterfall at Cenarth. Here is where Rees' job begins and ends. He weaves ropes of long grasses and reeds and hangs them over the and reeds and hangs them over the projecting rocks near the bank. The elvers swarm up the ropes and enter the calm waters and Rees' job is done.

Unfair

For centuries men have had all the breaks. Now it is the women who get them. Apparently the struggle for equality gave the wheel of life such a turn that it actually reversed itself. Ireland, a short time ago, an angler Prof. John Hanna evidently had this got the surprise of his life. He saw in mind when he said:

"Equality before the law is a resounding slogan for the seal of a great commonwealth but it has no particular application to breach-ofpromise cases. A man's broken heart is worth nothing."

PRINCESS AND THE ROMANTIC RING ((a) by D. J. Walsh.)

USIE stared in at the squares of thickly-iced cakes and heaps of scarlet strawberries. She had decided against dinner for financial reasons and crude yearnings beset her. The cobwebby stockings she had recklessly purchased and worn to the engagement with Bill would cramp her spending style for days and the expense had been a waste, for he had failed to keep the date.

"Men are all alike," she told herself forlornly. "Bill told Etta he was nearly engaged to a girl with money. I sure wish she'd told me before. Me standing waiting for him and being late to the office—gee, he's the limit."

Bill hadn't exactly rocked her heart, but Susie hadn't expected him to throw her down. Bill was an operator in a beauty shop and he had told her that she was the only skirt in his young life. "Just a plain lie," decided Susie, moving along with the crowd and coming to a stop before a window displaying a Chippendale bookcase. The antique was worth over $2,000, but it was the lilac-tinted panes of glass that intrigued her. She failed to notice the eagle crowning the center pediment. What her young eyes saw were imaginary rows of teacups of rose and gay little pitchers and plates to match. Susie cared nothing for books or first editions, but she was a born homemaker, and in the few moments of inspection she planned a kinnette done in lavenders and rose and saw herself in a pink frock with a bunch of violets on her shoulder.

"Gotta date, honey?" came a low whisper.

Susie jerked away from the gloved hand that had dropped on the shoulder of her best suit and sped on with the home-going crowds. She was hungry, but there were limits.

"Jerry said the seventh doorway from Spruce and James."

The girl had leaped forward with the red light at the crossing and she caught the curt announcement just as a horn sounded.

The men talking had missed the chance to move on so she could not see what they were like, but the phrase caught her fancy. Perhaps romance lurked in that seventh doorway, perhaps the man she had dreamed of when she came to the city to work would be waiting there, in some miraculous way. Susie had the cool, commercial manner of the modern worker, but beneath her composure rioted the dreams of a mid-Victorian maiden and love seemed to her very worth while, but-unattainable. Bill was no romantic hero, and she suspected his hair-it smacked of a permanent.

She decided to saunter past that doorway, and began to count. A palm fate by a strange chance.

Came, a yelp of terror, followed by a foreign curse and a small dog shot out in front of Susie. The varnished boot that had speeded the animal withdrew into a doorway and a torrent of invectives in an alien tongue spat out into the wind.

She saw a muddy and stained dog at her feet. As the amber eyes met hers the dog sensed a friend and leaped up, his paws scratching violently the gunmetal hose that had made dinner im-

Susie sucked in her breath, bending to examine a large hole. Then the flapping forenaw caught at her heart and she swiftly unfolded her evening paper and, jerking it about the muddy body, lifted it into her arms just as a crowd surged past, nearly downing

The paw was broken, she decided, and the dog was trembling with pain and fear.

. . At the door of her rooming house she paused, holding the paper bundle carefully. Her landlady held no affection for animals and didn't care much about girl roomers. Therefore, prudence was necessary, and Susie, watching her chance, slipped upstairs silently when she found the hallway empty. After hiding her find in her closet she got warm water from the bathroom and proceeded to wash and bind the drooping paw. The draggled hair emerged gleaming from the bath and the rich tawny brown was beautiful, and Susie realized that she had found a pet that had been well caned for. She broke a cracker into some water and fed the puppy, and then, cramming a cracker into her own mouth, went on with the bath, untangling the curly hair gently. Once the dog barked faintly at a step outside. Came an imperative tap and Susie sat motionless. She couldn't move until her next pay day.

"Sounded like a dog," rasped a voice outside.

Susie grinned as the footsteps passed on and resumed her washing. The paper was splashed with mud and presently her supple fingers found a knot in the long, soft fur. "Gum," she muttered. "Poor pup, I expect that hurts." She reached for scissors and cut away the sticky lump. But as she was about to toss it down she felt a hard substance within, something like a pebble.

The gas jet in the hall bedroom had been expertly packed with cotton so that the flame flickered inadequately, but even that feeble light caught and centered upon the object Susie held. As her forefinger scraped excitedly at the gum a flow of color flashed and sparkled and the girl twisted a platinum circle about her muddy finger. "Gee. It's a diamond. A diamond ring in a wad of gum that was pressed into that kike's hair." Susie sat back on her heels, watching the puppy's halfhearted tastes of the watered crackers. "That dog is a pet and used to ceramed chicken," she told herself, hungrily, advancing her mouth to the cracker box and expertly nibbling up a biscuit without touching her hands to it. "I wonder-"

Pulling out the advertisement sheet from beneath the layers of papers she found the section of "Lost and Found."

"Lost-A small golden-brown puppy. Answers to the name Princess. Liberal reward and no questions asked. Telephone or call in person-"

The paper dropped to the floor. Susie twisted the ring that flashed and sparkled on her finger. That was the dog. She felt certain. "Princess," she whispered.

The dog's tail waved and Princess hobbled toward her, grateful eyes glowing.

"How I'd love to wear this ring to the office tomorrow. Wouldn't the girls stare. Oooooh-this is the real thing. No one would know," Susie slowly flushed. For a moment she wished she had not looked in the lost and found. That ring would mark her as an engaged girl. It would be next to having a lover. Her heart thumped. How she longed for love and romance. Drearily she observed her ruined stockings. They typified her prosaic life. She had hoped for a peep at a smart world of rich people lunching, and instead Bill had left her standing waiting. Absently she bent her head and nipped another cracker. Princess pushed her silky head into her left hand and waited confidently. Susie sighed. She couldn't throw the pup down and refuse to return her to the owner. She couldn't keep her and love her, for she had no place. Princess and the romantic ring must go back.

Hiding Princess again in the closet Susie went down to the telephone. "It was a man's voice," she told Princess five minutes later, "and he's coming right over to get you. He has a nice voice and I guess I'll powder.

Then we'll go and sit on the steps." A small car sped up and paused before the old house and a man dashed up the shabby steps. "Miss Susie Green?" he asked, his eyes upon the silky head of Princess. Susie nodded, reddening beneath the steady gaze of the blue eyes looking down at her. "Here's the ring, too," she babbled, wondering if she were dreaming, or if she had found romance

"Oh, that," negligently he glanced at the diamond, "I-" he paused, "I rushed over about that, but now, now -say, Miss Susie, come down with me and sit in the car while we talk. I have a lot to say."

Princess was now in his arms, her pink tongue darting out excitedly. Susie hesitated.

"Come on. My mother was held up and she slipped off her engagement ring and hid it in some gum. She didn't care so much about her watch, but the ring she valued on account of dad. Princess fell out of the car and was lost."

"Do you live at that hotel?" demanded Susie. If he did she knew that her dreams were futile, for she had sense. He would be above a file clerk.

He grinned. "I live there in a way. I'm secretary to Colonel Waters. Mother, though, lives in a kitchenette flat on a side street and I'm hoping-" again his speech grew tangled, but, as though jerked by an invisible string. Susie arose and accompanied him. The ring of romance had led her into a maze of joyous reality. Maybe she'd own that pretty case with the lav- that the village is growing in numeriender panes of glass now.

Peasants of Moravia

Excel in Wicker Work In Czechoslovakia the weaving of baskets and other wicker goods has long been a cottage industry. In certain sections of Bohemia and Moravia, now provinces of the Czechoslovak republic, formerly crown lands of the Austrian empire, baskets have been made in peasant homes for 200 years. While there are at present approximately thirty firms engaged in the manufacture of wicker goods in these two provinces, says United States commerce reports, the finest wares are still produced in the cottages, especially in Moravia, where the artisan workers are organized. A large number of basket makers are generally grouped about one or two firms in a district. Baskets and cheap wicker goods are also made in the prisons of the country, and in the Klarov Institution for the Blind at Prague.

The production of wicker goods in Czechoslovakia is centralized in a few large firms. The center of the wicker goods industry in Moravia is at Morkovice, and in Bohemia at Melnik.

The principal reason for the unfavorable development of new enterprises in Bohemia is that in the last few years the government's regulation of the Vitava (Moldau) and Labe (Elbe) rivers has necessitated the sacrifice which the principal raw material for the native industry was derived. Willow trees have since been planted a year, and of this amount one-third by the government's reforestation commission in Moravia and Slovakia, but as yet the osier twigs derived from these plantings are insufficient to cover

Proper Conception of Duty Man Owes to City John H. Harrison, editor of the Danville Commercial-News, has given to his home city a public park consisting of 233.47 acres of choice land, including 64 acres now incorporated in the Danville Country club. In explaining the gift, which he says has been a "family secret" for a dozen years, Mr. Harrison explains his philosophy of the relation of the citizen toward the community. "It has always been my idea," something back into his home town. I have held the theory that if a city furnishes a man his opportunity to make a living and to develop his business affairs, he is under obligation to that city to do something more than just live in it. If a man cannot contribute materially to the public welfare, he can contribute of his effort in working for civic matters."

It is a wholesome idea worth cultivating. How vastly it differs from the too-readily adopted theory that "the world owes me a living," the watchword of those looking for soft snaps. Every community in every generation has a number of men able to contribute to civic improvements in some form or other. The others can devote themselves to the no less important work of striving for clean government, for the best possible administration of public affairs, the securing of which lies entirely in their hands.—Chicago Post.

Right Now Good Time for Home Modernizing

The following resolution on maintenance, repair and equipment of homes and other buildings was adopted at a conference in Philadelphia, called by Mayor Harry A. Mackay.

"This conference recommends that every organization in Philadelphia be asked to suggest to its entire membership that there be done at once, wherever possible, all necessary or desirable maintenance, repair and equipment work with respect to existing homes and other buildings; and that such a modernization problem be undertaken in the interest, not alone of immediate employment of a large number of people, but in the interest of health and the improvement and conservation of property. "This conference further expresses the hope that all organizations, individuals and the press and publications of this city will co-operate in making effective this procedure as a highly desirable immediate step in the prosperity program initiated by the President of the United States."

Make Chimney Attractive

About the chimney of stone there is always the appeal of things which are a direct product of nature. In such material, the chimney will blend with the color and texture of almost anything else. As evidence of this, we see stone chimneys used on house of stucco, brick and wood.

Like all other chimneys, that of stone requires an adequate footing of concrete, placed on firm, tamped ground or stable stone. This should extend well below the frost line. Good cement mortar should be used for all the joints, and the flues should all be lined with fireclay lining, preferably in round shape to insure proper draught. All framing woodwork should be insulated from the chimney by asbestos or metal.

Village Growth Significant What the future role of the village in our national drama will be is a matter of speculation, but it is certain cal and social importance. In the past 20 years villages have increased from five to nine times as fast as the open country population, and considerably more than the nation's population as a whole. In three out of eight regions villages have grown faster even than the cities. Since village mothers have fewer children than those on the farm, these facts emphasize the exodus from the open country districts, but raise the question whether the trek does not city.

Indiana's state highway department is to try to induce the legislature to limit the weight and length of motor vehicles, as "our permanent highways | are survivals of this custom." were not designed for the tremendous tonnage that is now placed on them." The latter portion of the statement is as true of New Jersey as of Indiana. It is doubtful whether any state roads have as heavy traffic as ours, which carry that of the great cities of New York and Philadelphia. There should be restriction of the weight of the load, and of the length of the train of trucks .- Trenton Times.

Big Rural Fire Losses

More than 3,500 lives a year are part of the annual toll collected by fire in the rural and small-town communities of the United States. It is estimated that the average loss to flames amounts to about $450,000,000 occurs on farms and in small towns of 2,500 or less population. The figures are indicative of the need for better fire prevention and fire protec- he answered, "seven forward and five tion in the rural sections.

ORIGIN OF TARIFF SYSTEMS NOT KNOWN

Greece Had Both Import and Export Duties.

Washington.—Australia has recently enacted a new tariff law which has unique features. It raises duties on many products shipped from the United States, and it prohibits the importation of numerous articles except by written consent. The objects of the new legislation are stated to be reduction of unemployment, stimulation of manufacture in Australia by branch factories under foreign ownership, and stabilization of the exchange rates.

"Australia's new tariff law, coming at the time of a revision of tariffs at he says, "that every man should put home, arouses interest in the origin of tariff systems and their development in various countries," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

"No one knows when or where the first tariff was imposed or the first customs duties collected. The collection of a toll or duty from goods brought into a city or a country became important with the development of trade to a considerable volume. Although Babylon, one of the earliest civilizations of which we have a record, had a highly organized social system with a minute code of laws relating to deeds, leases, mortgages, taxation, and the like, it is not known what part customs played in the affairs of the government. A country's revenue in those days was chiefly from a tithe of the live stock and crops of its citizens.

Greece Exacted Duties.

"When Greece held the most important place in the world, duties on commodities moving in trade had come to be an accepted tax. Export prohibitions had also come into use, chiefly as defense measures in time of war or as protective means to prepare against war.

"Rome had little commerce in its early days and allowed commodities to come and go freely. When expansion set in and trade grew, the government began to mold economic currents, often by direct methods. Some commercial rivals, such as Carthage and Corinth were destroyed. Other conquered countries were divided into districts and customs houses were set up at the dividing lines. Both exports and imports were taxed.

"Rome's tariff system was probably closer to those in use today than any previous ones. The types of duties were the same that enter into current tariff discussions: specific and ad valorem. A specific duty is a charge per unit, as 20 cents for each yard, or pound, or dozen of the commodity taxed. An ad valorem duty is a percentage of the value of the commodity. In the early days of the Roman empire the most common ad valorem rate was 5 per cent. Later it was raised to 12½ per cent. "Venice, the great trading republic of the Middle ages, carried on the Roman tariff theories and went further. Her object was to obtain a monopoly in the handling of eastern goods and to regulate by duties the trade with the West and North.

Changed Trade Route.

"The Mameluke rulers of Egypt held a strategic position in regard to eastern trade during the Middle ages, and put on as heavy duties as the traffic would bear. As a result of the tolls imposed by them and by tribal chiefs in Arabia, Indian goods increased 300 per cent in price between India and Europe. In the end the Mamelukes defeated their purpose. The Mongols, who gained control of an overland route farther north, charged lesser duties, and the trade flowed over the new route. After Vasco da Gama found the ocean path to the East, both the Egyptian and the overland route gave way to the cheaper; duty-free water route.

"About this time Marco Polo, traveling in China, found that duties were charged there in the realm of the Great Khan. He found duties collected at city boundaries as well as at provincial frontiers. These duties ranged from 3 1-3 to 10 per cent.

"In medieval Europe, tariffs became a nightmare to struggling traders. Every petty prince and feudal lord set up his toll gates and custom houses and took a share of the merchant's wares. After the feudal kings took over the barons' privileges there was a movement away from the collection of duties in every small area; but progress was slow, and in some countries, such as France and Germany, provincial customs continued to be levied. Even cities took toll from entering goods. The local taxes of Paris

Onion Is Fastidious

The lowly onion, popular as a food even back to the days when the pyramids were built, may be common, but it is, nevertheless, a highly particular vegetable, so far as growing conditions are concerned.

It requires especially good soil of high fertility and well drained. It will not grow if weeds be present, and it needs cold, moist soil while growing, and warm, dry conditions at maturity.

New York.—The life and manners of a primitive Melanesian tribe on the island of New Ireland, near New Guinea, in the Pacific ocean, were described recently at the American Museum of Natural History by Dr. Hortense Powdermaker, young American anthropologist, who has just returned after a ten months' stay with the na-

Doctor Powdermaker is the first white woman ever to visit the island and the first to make a careful study of its people. Her work was done under the auspices of the Australian National Research council, and she is now completing her report under a fellowship of the National Research council of the United States.

"The tribe I studied," said Doctor Powdermaker, "is a branch of the Melanesian race. They are black and have kinky hair, but their features are not negro. Until a short time ago they were cannibalistic. They used to have wars with neighboring tribes and eat the enemies they killed or captured. The practice was stopped a few years ago by the German government, which had made the island part of its colonial possessions. Since the war it has been part of the mandate territory under Australia.

Women and Pigs Cause Wars.

"The causes for these wars generally were women and pigs. If a neighboring tribe would steal a woman or a pig there would be war. The older natives still remember those times and refer to them as the 'good old days.' They smack their lips when they talk about it.

"The tribe has no religion of any kind, no gods nor goddesses, no temples, no heaven, hell or after life, no worship of anything. They have two totems, the eagle and the hawk, and each member of the tribe belong to one of these, technically known as 'moieties,' the totem being inherited through the mother.

"Instead of religion they have many taboos and magic. It is, for instance, a heinous offense to be in the same room with your mother-inlaw or to talk to her or even look at her. You cannot talk to your sister except on business. A descendant of the hawk moiety can only marry a descendant of the eagle moiety and vice versa.

May Have Several Wives.

"A man can have several wives and sometimes a woman may have several husbands, but polygamy and polyandry cannot both occur in the same family. On the other hand, it is an accepted social custom that a woman may have lovers and a man mistresses. There is nothing clandestine about it. Some wives or husbands are jealous, while others are not, but nothing much is ever done about it. By temperament they are people. You cannot talk to them in terms of abstraction.

"Their food consists of pigs, fish, roots known as 'taro,' 'yam,' a sort of sweet potato, a fruit called pawpaw, sugar cane, pineapples, bananas and coconuts. There is tobacco on the island, and children smoke at the age of three. There are no alcoholic beverages of any kind, the only drinks being water and coconut milk.

"Births, marriages and deaths are outstanding events and are made the occasion of great rituals and feasts, lasting sometimes for months. The burial ceremonies especially are very impressive.

"Men and women share the work between them. Their occupations are chiefly agricultural."

Safeguard Against Poison

Bottles of poison may be made less dangerous for householders by having pins stuck into their corks as a warning device, suggests the national safety council in Chicago. Although many druggists now sell poisonous substances in bottles distinguishable either by peculiar shape or sharp points, nevertheless the average home has various deadly chemical compounds such as rat poisons and disinfectants which are kept unmarked in the pantry or bathroom, says Popular Science Monthly. Many cases of fatal poisoning occur each year, the council states, because of carelessness in handling drugs in the home.

If the corks of all poison bottles were studded with good-sized pins they probably would make the user examine the bottle before sampling the contents.

The ship was purchased, fitted out and sent to England as a gift to her majesty Queen Victoria, by the President and people of the United States, as a token of good will and friendship.

Cougar, Hunted Without

Mercy, Almost Extinct The western "cougar," termed variously according to local practice in different parts of North America as "panther," "mountain lion," "catamount," etc., is our largest member of the cat family. It is considered a predatory animal and as such has been hunted so peristently that it is almost extinct in the United States except in a few remote districts of our western mountains.

Consederably smaller than the cougar, the true lynx is still quite a bit larger than the common bobcat or bay lynx. The real lynx is a very shy animal and rarely thrives where the land has been ranched or farmed to any extent. The bobcat, more like the coyote, often lives right under the nose of some harassed farmer, being especially adept at stealing chickens or other farmyard birds.

Of the three felines mentioned, the bobcat can be said as having the most tractable disposition, as neither the lynx nor the cougar submit readily tohuman training. The cougar somewhat resembles the female African lion in appearance, yet it is rarely used as a show animal, chiefly because it is a most unruly subject for training, sullen and treacherous to the end.

Reed Made Substitute for Absent Bridegroom

The strange ancient custom of marrying a bride to a reed was revived in a Sind village a few miles from Hyderabad, India, recently when, for some unknown reason, the bridegroom failed to put in an appearance for the wedding ceremony. The wedding was between the son of a Bania merchant and a Bania merchant's daughter from another village. The bridegroom went with his relatives in the marriage procession to the bride's village, where the round of preliminary ceremonies and preparations for the forthcoming wedding were duly observed. When the hour arrived for the bridegroom to go to the bride's home for the wedding it was discovered that he was missing. After a fruitless search the waiting procession left for the bride's house. A reed was substituted to represent the missing bridegroom and the bride was then "married" to the reed and brought Philip Spencer, a midshipman in the American navy, was hanged at sea while his father, John C. Spencer of New York, was secretary of war in the cabinet of President Tyler. Young Spencer was convicted of attempting to organize a mutiny on the U.S.S. Somers with a view of converting her into a pirate ship. On December 1, 1842, Spencer, the boatswain's mate and a seaman were hanged at the yardarm of the brig-of-war while she was on her way from Liberia to New York via St. Thomas in the Virgin islands. The execution took place about 525 miles out from St. Thomas and the Somers arrived at the Brooklyn navy yard thirteen days later. A naval court inquiry and a court-martial decided that the commander of the vessel, Alexander Sidell Mackenzie, had simply performed his duty.-Pathfinder Magazine.

Find Structure Erected by Babylonian Monarch

A temple built by Nebuchadnezzar in approximately 600 B. C. has been discovered in Ur of the Chaldees by excavation of what appeared to be an insignificant mound. C. Leonard Woolley, director of the joint archeological expedition maintained at Ur by the University of Pennsylvania and the British museum, reported that the temple is in the best state of presevation of any ever found in Mesopotamia. The structure, which was added to and restored by Nabonidus, 50 years after it was built, lies in the inner corner of the northern harbor at Ur and was concealed by a mound whose excavation the expedition undertook "for topographical reasons." "What makes the building in every way remarkable is its condition," Woolley declared. "The walls stand without exception to a height of nearly 20 feet and even the whitewash on them remains in good condition. In all Iraq there is no other temple so well preserved. We have not attempted to clear the outside of the temple, but once inside one obtains an astonishing effect of completeness. This is the only place in Iraq where one can stand in a Babylonian temple and forget for a moment that it is a ruin."

Algerian Native Today Mixture of Many Races

The first impression of Algerian natives comes to the tourist when sailors and boatmen swarm up to his steamer at the time of landing. They are certainly a piratical and cutthroatlooking gang, decidedly picturesque, and anything but clean. Although they are descendants of pirates, they are considered awkward and stupid at managing a boat. In the streets of the towns are many oriental typesthe Moors of mixed Spanish and Arabian blood have degenerated physically and mentally from the builders of the Alhambra, being now mostly beggars and petty laborers. The Arabs or Bedouins, "stolid and squalid," also look like a conquered race. Most of the shops are kept by Jews, but the Kabeles form the largest part of the population. These men are of a pure mountain race showing traces of Greek and Roman ancestry in their complexion and even in their laws.

ZACHARIAS AND ELISABETH: LIFE IN A PIOUS JEWISH HOME

LESSON TEXT—Luke 1:5-80.

IC-What I Owe to My Home.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC-What Makes a Home Christian?

I. A Godly Husband and Wife (Luke 1:5-7).

The name Zacharias means "Jehovah hath remembered," and the name Elisabeth means "A covenant maker." 1. When they lived (v. 5).

"In the days of Herod the king." They lived in a day when godlessness was rife. The priesthood was corrupt, and the ruling classes most wicked. 2. Their character (v. 6).

Both were righteous before God. Many appear to be righteous before man who are not righteous before God. They were so mated that they walked in the commandments of the Lord blameless. The highest in wedded life can be attained only when both husband and wife are united in Jesus Christ. Their practical living was manifested in obedience to God's commandments.

2. They were childless (v. 7). Though this godly couple were well mated and possessed the joy of the Lord in their souls, there was a real lack in their home. No home is quite Ideal into which no child has come.

II. A Son Promised (Luke 1:8-23). 1. By whom (vv. 11, 19)?

Gabriel, a special messenger of God, appeared and made known the good news to Zacharias.

2. When (vv. 8-14)?

While officiating as priest this good news came to him. From verse 13 the implication is that Zacharias had been praying definitely about this matter. While he burned incense, which is typical of prayer, the multitudes without were praying.

3. Characteristics of the child (vv. 15-17).

(1) Shall be great in the sight of the Lord (v. 15).

Though the people did not greatly esteem him, he was highly esteemed by the Lord.

(2) Shall drink neither wine nor strong drink (v. 15). He was to be a Nazarite, separating himself from sensuous things and dedicating himself unto the Lord (Numbers 6:1-6).

(3) Shall be filled with the Holy Ghost (v. 15).

The energy of the divine Spirit was needed to enable him to lead the people to repentance (v. 16).

(4) Shall go in the spirit and power of Elijah (v. 17). In this power he was to prepare the people for the coming of the Savior, and the salvation which he was to bring.

4. Zacharias asking for a sign (vv. 18-23).

Although the aged priest was earnestly praying for the salvation of Israel, the gracious promise of the angel which was the beginning of that salvation staggered his faith. The angel gave him a sign. Because he refused to praise God in faith for this gracious promise, God caused his tongue to be silent until the promise was fulfilled. God wants us to believe his promises no matter how contrary to reason they may seem.

III. The Promise Fulfilled (Luke 1:57-64). 1. Neighbors and kinfolk rejoicing with Elisabeth (vv. 57, 58).

2. The child circumcised and named (vv. 59-63).

On the eighth day they circumcised the child and named him "John" (v. 13). By means of writing Zacharias made known the name which he would have by divine instruction.

3. Zacharias praises God (v. 64). At this time God opened the mouth of Zacharias, and he offered up praise to God.

IV. Zacharias Prophesying (Luke 1:67-80).

1. Praising God for fulfillment of the promise of salvation (vv. 67-75). This was according to covenant promise. 2. John to be called "The Prophet of the Highest" (vv. 76-79). He was to go before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways. The growth of John (v. 80). He grew and waxed strong in the Spirit, and was in the deserts till the day of his showing unto Israel.

SMALLEST TOWN TO HAVE WORLD'S LARGEST AIRPORT

Picketwire, Colo., Lays Out Huge Landing Field After Two Planes Arrive.

Picketwire, Colo.—This little city, known as the smallest town in America, has what is probably the largest airport in the world. For Picketwire, a town of twelve houses, and with a population estimated at about thirty people, "including the kids and saddle horses," is laying out a landing field with boundaries embracing 30,000 acres of perfectly level territory.

All that was necessary to convert the area into the largest and flattest airport in the world was to clear away a few cactus plants, lay out a circle and put up a wind sock.

Picketwire, on the Purgatory river, in the heart of the Colorado cattle country, is forty-seven miles east of Trinidad. It is directly on the Denver to Pueblo to Amarillo air passenger route of Midcontinent Air Express, which follows the Denver-Amarillo natural gas pipe line. A private telephone system runs along the gas line with a telephone every twenty miles, and this forms the only connecting link between the outside world and Picketwire, which is located thirty miles from the nearest railroad, and thirty-seven miles from the residence of a doctor. When Pilot Leo McGehee landed at Picketwire recently with a Midcontinent Air Express ship loaded with passengers, it was the first time an airplane had ever landed in the vicinity. A few days later, when Pilot Hadley Hershey landed with another Midcontinent plane, the inhabitants decided they needed an airport.

The entire population immediately turned out, cleared away the cactus, laid out a circle and erected a wind sock. Pilots report that they can land a ship anywhere on the 30,000 acres and taxi right into town.

Find Pneumonia Cure in Electric Treatment

Washington,-A revolutionary medical discovery was made known here recently when authorities at St. Elizabeth's hospital announced an electrical treatment for lobar and bronchial pneumonia, so overwhelmingly positive in 200 tests that it is "virtually a specific."

Medical authorities expressed the opinion that the discovery ranks with that of smallpox vaccination and pointed out that thousands of lives can be saved annually by its use.

In lobar pneumonia cases discovered within twelve hours after infection a cure was effected in virtually every case. In cases discovered after twelve hours the percentage was slightly lower, but still very high.

The treatment, worked out by scientists at the famous government hospital for the insane here, consists in passing through the chest a very high frequency current of about 1,500,000 alternations a second, using as electrodes two tinfoil plates, one on the chest and the other on the back.

Human Ostrich Is Given Six Months in Prison

London.-William Richard Jones has the unusual distinction of having received a six months' jail sentence for swallowing necktie pins, washers, buttons, and so on.

He swallowed a safety-pin and was taken to the Kettering hospital, where a surgeon extracted it from his stomach. Before he was discharged he swallowed a necktie pin. He was again operated on.

Immediately afterwards he swallowed another necktie pin, two pieces of glass, a safety-pin, a button, two pennies, a toothbrush, and six nails. After the third operation he was condemned to Stafford prison for six months.

Stretch Food Dollar by Efficient Buying

Chicago.—American families are as well fed in the present depression period as they ever were in the boom days of 1929, due to efficient buying of food essentials by the nation's housewives, according to a bulletin issued here by the American Research foundation "Stretching the food dollar is the problem of millions of American mothers at the present time," the bulletin sets forth. "They are solving the problem by buying with an eye to the real values in the foods which go on the table three times a day."

Making Plants Luminous

It is stated that a German gardener has discovered a plan for injecting phosphorous into plants, thus making them luminous at night. The experiment was demonstrated at the Berlin flower show, when a large number of cacti, of all shapes and sizes were inoculated, and that, as the luminous quality concentrates in the spines, they appeared to be dotted with brilliant points of light that radiate in the darkness like glow worms.

FINISH SURVEYS OF 13 STREAMS

Army Engineers Also Report Field Work on Fifty Others.

Washington .- The army corps of engineers has announced that it has completed surveys of the waterpower resources, navigation possibilities and best flood control methods on 13 American rivers. Meanwhile, extensive field work has been done on between 40 and 50 others.

Work completed thus far is only a fractional part of the gigantic assignment given the army engineers by congress in the river and harbor act of 1925. In that legislation they were directed to survey the potentialities of 183 rivers, including all the major streams of the country except the Colorado. This river was exempted because the bureau of reclamation already has surveyed it in preparation for construction of Boulder

When this thoroughgoing inventory of the nation's water highways and hydroelectric power sources is finished, the engineer corps said, the federal government will have a complete chart by which to steer future developments. It is estimated that the national survey will be completed within three years.

Study Flood Plans.

Among the larger streams for which surveys now are filed away are the Tennessee, St. Francis, Iowa and Wisconsin rivers. Although the national survey was ordered in 1925, it was not begun until 1927 when congress gave it impetus by appropriating $7,322,400 for it.

Soon national attention was focused on the need of comprehensive flood control plans by the disastrous Mississippi flood of May, 1927. This catastrophe moved congress to provide $5,000,000 more for exclusive use in developing a plan to check rampages on the "father of waters."

Studies of the Mississippi problem indicated reservoirs might be a salient factor in flood control. Now some 50 army engineers are investigating the advantages of these artificial lakes, not only for restricting high water depredations, but also for impounding irrigation water.

Exercise Great Care. These studies, the engineer corps explained, begin with an examination of the particular places on rivers where floods occur most frequently, and the possible location of reservoirs to impound them. Data gained through these preliminary studies indicate to engineers where additional surveys are necessary. After they are made engineers draw up plans for the various flood control projects and estimate their Great care, it was said, has been exercised by the army engineers to avoid duplication of effort. Co-operation from state and municipal authoridies is sought and much data are obtained from local sources. The federal survey, ar explained, is designed to point the way to the "ultimate economical development of each river." Some of the streams encompassed by it will not be fully improved for many genera-

The engineers believe it is important, however, to have a broad comprehensive plan by which "each development can become part of a final mosaic" of navigable rivers, well controlled, and furnishing power to turn the wheels of industry.

Fair Beauties

For centuries the ideal of feminine loveliness was the blond. The angels in the Christian calendar, as well as the goddesses of Roman and Greek mythology, were all depicted as blueeved and light-haired. So a beautiful woman was known as a "fair" woman. We find repeatedly in old books such expressions as "dark and ugly," "fairhaired and beautiful," and "plain in spite of her light complexion," showing quite clearly that once upon a time it was rather difficult for a brunette to be rated as of first-class beauty.

Times have changed. To be beautiful women no longer need be fair.

Extreme Degrees of Cold

Air can be liquefied by cooling to a temperature of 140 degrees below zero centigrade or 222 degrees below zero Fahrenheit, and by compressing it to about 39 atmospheres pressure. Absolute zero, which is theoretically the lowest possible temperature that can be reached, is equivalent to 273.1 degrees below zero centrigrade or 459.6 degrees below zero Fahrenheit. According to the Encyclopedia Britannica, the lowest temperature attained is-272.3 degrees C.

OIL FORTUNES FAIL TO SPOIL TEXANS

Old Cattlemen Build Up Ranches, Live Simply.

Odessa, Texas.—Production of oll has brought millions of dollars to land owners of Texas. In every oil field there is a fund of human interest stories on the effect which the unexpected acquirement of riches has had upon various landholders.

Although there are in Texas a number of multi-millionaires who were in poor circumstances until the black gold began flowing from wells upon their land, none of them has attempted a spectacular role, such as was credited to "Coal Oil Johnny" of Pennsylvania pioneer days, or to Governor A. W. Tabor of Colorado, silver king, or to the mysterious "Scotty," of Death valley fame.

Ira W Yates, who owns the land upon which the famous Yates field in Pecos county is situated, during the last four years has piled up a fortune of more than $8,000,000 from oil royalties. Mr. Yates now makes his home in San Antonio, more than 400 miles from the scene of his 40 years of ranch labors.

Yates Interested in Cattle.

His primary interest since his wealth the pit that is bottomless." came to him has been to buy ranches and stock them with high-grade whiteface cattle. He now has several ranches in southwest Texas to which he devotes his time. He was on the verge of going bankrupt in the cattle business at the time the discovery of oil was made upon his Pecos county ranch.

Tom Hendrick, of Odessa, is another outstanding producer who has not let money turn his head. Mr. Hendrick, like Mr. Yates, has been ranching in West Texas for more than 40 years. The deflation of the cattle business following the close of the World war brought disaster, and his ranch in Winkler county became loaded with debt. Then came the oil strike. In a short time he had piled up a fortune of more than $6,000,000. The Hendrick oil field is second in importance to the Yates field.

Travel and large cities have no lure for Mr. and Mrs. Hendrick In his ranching days Odessa was his trading place, and it was to this town that he moved when fortune smiled upon him. He built a small home here. He has one outstanding hobby. It is that of creating a wild game preserve.

"Valentine Scrip"

The Land Office says that a number of years ago Thomas B. Valentine was given title to some land, which for one reason or another he did not take up. The government then issued to him scrip, which was to be used for land in some other section in the country, and this came to be known as "Valentine scrip." Each certificate was for a 40 acre tract of land, and the scrip was assignable by Valentine. This was perhaps the only scrip which may be used on unsurveyed land, and for that reason was very desirable.

Tobacco Once Banned

by Church and State The infatuation of the first European tobacco smokers for the outlandish weed was regarded as a mania, if not something worse, says a writer in Good Health Magazine. It is on record that the relatives of Catharine de Medici ascribed her fondness for the fumes of the transatlantic weed to a penchant for magic and poisonmongery. Sultan Amurah IV refused the terms of a speculator who offered an enormous sum for the privilege of selling tobacco in the harbors of Asia Minor, and for half a century the Turkish officers enforced the law which sentenced a smoker to having his pipe thrust crosswise through his nose, probably as an emblematic punishment for his sins in offending the noses of his fellow men. In Novgorod, Russia, as late as 1623, a party of smokers were caught in flagranti, and by order of the magistrate were forced to swallow a bagful of the weed, after having their pipes broken over their heads. Pope Innocent XI refused to sanction the promotion of any priest who had acquired the filthy habit, which King James I, in his "Counterblast to Tobacco," describes as "a custom loathsome to the eye, hateful to the nose, harmful to the brain,

Timber in Commerce

Not so many hundreds of years age each nation had to depend largely on its own timber to satisfy the ordinary needs of its population. Today, modern transportation permits timber to be marketed at greater distances from its source, says Forests and Mankind. China obtains large amounts of timber from North America, and South Africa gets much of hers from northern Europe. But in the long run it is best economy for a nation to grow timber on its own soil and to put to use those rough, less fertile sections where for one reason or another agriculture is either impossible or unprofitable.
