CARROLL COUNTY'S FINANCIAL STATUS.

Radically differing views given by Two County Attorneys.

The publication in last Friday's Evening Sun, of Hanover, of an interview with Attorney Guy W. Steele by the Westminster representative of The Sun, which was headed, "Carroll County Financial Situation Cause for Alarm" naturally caused some concern on the part of many of the taxpayers of the county, as well as of various interests depending on the county for funds. Mr. Steele's deductions were gathered from the publication in the county papers, last week, of a "Balance Sheet" issued by the retiring Board of Commissioners.

Mr. Steele figured that there appeared to be a shortage of $38,647.13, "with more bills to come in for work being done." He said "It is apparent that there is not available enough money to properly operate the county. Current expenses must be met; our schools cannot be closed, and the question naturally faces you, how is the situation to be dealt with? There is but two ways for you to get money one is by borrowing, and another is by collecting what is due the county."

Following much more along the same line, he expressed the conclusion that "The only practical way to meet the situation is to have a special act of the legislature passed promptly authorizing the county to sell its securities, which should bear a low rate of interest," etc., etc.

A lengthy reply to this "interview" has been made—also published in The Hanover Sun—by Attorney Jas. E. Boylan, counsel for the present Board of Commissioners, that is quite reassuring; that the county is not facing any very alarming financial situation, giving an array of figures and deductions with which to show that Carroll County is, in fact, quite able to meet its obligations without a "bond issue" and by the use of the figures of the "Balance Sheet" reaches very different conclusions from those of Mr. Steele. Mr. Boylan says: "Instead of there being a shortage of $38,647.13 there is an excess of $20,992.14. It must, however, be borne in mind that in Mr. Steele's statement he deals with estimates instead of actual figures."

"The situation is not alarming. Our county has an assessable basis of more than $35,000,000 and when our county is compared with other counties of our state, the indebtedness pales into insignificance."

"In order to arrive at the estimate made by Mr. Steele there would be a shrinkage in taxes of $72,721.16. Every one knows that with taxes being preferred liens, such an estimate is ridiculous. The next surprising fact is that he considers uncollectable all taxes except for the current year."

Tea, coffee, and spices hold their flavor best in air-tight containers. Baking powder also should be kept in an air-tight tin to maintain its leavening powers.

A closet shower for the bride-to-be is a good idea. Everyone brings something to make the closet more convenient. Shoe trees or racks, hat stands, shoe bags, laundry bags, clothes hangers, nested boxes, stocking boxes, dress bags, and a clothes brush are among the possible items to choose from. One girl received a hammer and some boxes of tacks and small brass hooks among other things.

FEEDING CANARIES.

The food requirements of canaries are simple. Canary seed to which have been added rape seed and a little hemp is a staple diet. This mixture may be bought ready prepared, but much of the rape in prepared seed is so pungent and bitter that the birds do not like it. They do like the mild taste of true summer rape. Give the canary lettuce or a bit of apple frequently. Bread moistened in scalded milk, fed cold, is beneficial. Don't make soft foods too wet. Keep cuttle bone in the cage. Canary does not seem to thrive, crack open a few seeds to see that the husks are not empty. Don't give too much hemp, as it is fattening and may make the bird lethargic.

SECOND CONG. DIST. GROWS.

The Second Congressional District of Maryland is the largest in the state. It includes part of Baltimore City, Baltimore, Harford and Carroll counties, and has a population of 461,419 an increase of 150,006 within ten years. The population of the other districts is as follows:

|-----------------------------|---------|
| 1st. Eastern Shore | 193,658 |
| 3rd. Part of Baltimore | 203,929 |
| 4th. Part of Baltimore | 250,467 |
| 5th. Part of Balto & So. Md | 244,519 |
| 6th. Western Maryland | 268,534 |

The First District is the only one to show a decrease, but only of 910. The state neither wins nor loses in the number of members.

BE EARLY, NEXT WEEK.

Next week, on account of Christmas coming on Thursday correspondents and others should time their communications to The Record A DAY EARLIER so as to reach our office by Wednesday, as it will be impossible to handle our regular Thursday's mail on Friday morning. The Record will be issued on Friday as usual.

"It is the nature of human disposition to hate him whom you have injured."

The Christmas Spirit.

By this time, most of the Christmas gifts have been hand-made or bought, and hid away for their distribution on Christmas morning. Some have already been given, or at least are no longer a secret, for we are gradually becoming more sensible and practical by making the "gift" of more importance than the "surprise"—giving the wanted things rather than those that may represent disappointment, but are accepted with the best grace possible.

Even to the young folks, and the kiddies "Santa Claus" is becoming more and more a myth, and that is an improvement too; but the spirit of "Santa" should continue as a survival of a name, thought it closely approaches the days of heathenism, when Diana, Circe, Apollo, Argus, June, Hercules and a lot more fictitious characters played their part in the family of Gods and Goddesses before the Christian era.

And this Christian era calls for our exercise of the spirit of Christ in our Christmas observance; that we will give with love and actual desire to cultivate happiness, without aiming to parade our mere ability to give costly gifts; but to take upon ourselves our rightful share of helping to bring at least a little of the joy and peace of the season, not alone to our families and close friends, but to the deserving needy and unfortunate within our reach.

And while the spirit of "Peace on Earth, Good will toward Men" is with us, may we resolve to make it perpetual, by exercising in each day of the coming year, more of neighborliness, more of brotherly kindness, more of "charity toward all, and malice toward None." WHY NOT TRY?

THE COMMUNITY TREE

A Christmas Tree for Taneytown on December 23rd.

The Chamber of Commerce will again sponsor a Community Christmas Tree. On Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 23rd., at 2:30 o'clock a community service will be held at the tree. In case of rain, these services will be held on the next day, Wednesday.

The Band will meet and conduct Santa Claus to the tree. The school children will sing Christmas Carols. Prayer will be offered by Rev. Bready. A short address given by the Rev. Redding. A selection by the Band. Santa will then distribute treats to the school children. The program will be in charge of the President of the Chamber of Commerce, M. C. Fuss.

The tree was lighted for the first time on Tuesday evening, and certainly looks quite Christmashish, as well as reflects credit on those having charge of its erection and illumination.

A CHRISTMAS APPEAL FOR THE POOR.

The long drought combined with economic conditions has thrown so many people out of employment that undoubtedly an unusual number of calls for help will be made this winter.

The canning industry with fourteen plants in our county, because of crop failures has operated on scarcely a ten percent basis. The cement plant at Union Bridge is about to shut down due to lack of orders. Congoleum is operating on very short time. In addition there are the crop shortages everywhere, and there was little need for help on the farm.

To meet this situation there has been set up an agency known as the Carroll County Emergency Relief. It will co-operate closely with the Children's Aid Society and the Red Cross. Their resources will be pooled and there will be no overlapping of effort. The Red Cross is too well known to need comment. The work of the Children's Aid, a permanent organization, is largely constructive and educational. That of the Emergency Relief, as the name implies, is temporary and to meet an extraordinary condition. For the present the three will act as one.

But by pursuing the method planned it is hoped that the responsibility for the present critical situation will rest on the Emergency Relief, leaving the Children's Aid and Red Cross when normal times return, to carry on their own permanent programs, unembarrassed. An attempt will be made to furnish food and fuel where necessary. While each community is urged to take care of its own needs as fully as possible, the Emergency Relief will act as a clearing house. It will receive funds and distribute supplies, with the help of the Children's Aid, over as wide an area as may be possible.

By using the Emergency Relief duplication will be avoided, every case will be carefully investigated, and if the need justifies, supplies can be purchased in quantities, guaranteeing every economy.

It is not thought wise to make a city or county-wide personal canvass at this time, but individuals, churches, Sunday Schools, societies, clubs, lodges and organizations of every sort are asked to make a Christmas gift to the poor. You are urged to act at once as the need is urgent.

Send contributions to the treasurer as named below.

TWO LORD'S DAY MEETINGS

Held in Westminster and Taneytown, Last Sunday.

The Lord's Day Alliance union meetings, held in Westminster and Taneytown, on Sunday were very largely attended. The former in the afternoon in Centenary M. E. Church, with Rev. J. Walter Englar, of New Windsor, presiding. Following our opening service, Dr. W. W. Davis, Secretary of the Alliance in Maryland, spoke hopefully of the coming session of the legislature, predicting that no laws are likely to be passed legalizing Sunday sports or the opening of moving picture shows on that day.

Following his statement a motion was passed requesting the Senator and Members of the House from Carroll County to stand loyally by all laws promoting the observance of the Lord's Day, and former Senator Geo. P. B. Englar was requested to pass this action on to the members-elect.

Congressman Lankford, of Georgia, spoke on "The Lord's Day and the Child," making the plea that the influences surrounding the child, that impress themselves on the miniature mind, are the influences likely to guide it in after life, hence the importance of safe-guarding the Sabbath Day in every way possible by precept and example. His address was lengthy but not tiresome, as both his delivery and the many illustrations made, were interesting and attractive.

A set of resolutions prepared by Dr. E. E. Bixler, of New Windsor, strongly commending the Alliance and urging its financial and moral support, were adopted. The resolutions strongly advocated greater co-operation with the Alliance by the churches and their allied organizations.

The meeting held in the evening in Grace Reformed Church, Taneytown, was equally well attended, and the program was of the same import as that held at Westminster, and the addresses covered the same ground. Dr. Davis is well known in Taneytown for his energy and efficiency in his work; while Mr. Lankford, who made his first appearance in the town, captivated his audience and made many telling points to be remembered.

RELIEF PLAN ANNOUNCED.

Mr. H. D. Weeks, resident sales manager of Southern Dairies in Frederick, Md., announces a plan of his company to help unemployment relief. Mr. Weeks explained that for the next two months Southern Dairies will donate five percent of the retail price on each Pint Package and ten percent of the retail price of all fancy ice cream, from orders such as special individual ice cream molds, ice cream cakes and the like. All of this money will be turned over to a local agency for the relief of the unemployed.

Southern Dairies requested Mayor M. C. Duttera, of Taneytown, to name the organization in Taneytown which will receive the donations for unemployment relief. He named the Carroll County Children's Aid Society, of Taneytown, and heartily approves of the plan of the Southern Dairies, which he says should be commended for their generous spirit.

THE CHRISTMAS OF '76

154th. Anniversary of Washington Crossing the Delaware.

In one of the greatest and most spectacular exploits of his military career, General George Washington, on Christmas night, 1776, wrested a victory from the forces of Great Britain and in a few short hours lifted the spirits of his countrymen from the despair into which they had been plunged by a series of defeats and reverses. With a sure swiftness that inspired terror in the hearts of his enemies, the American Commander-in-Chief, at the head of a small force of 2400 Continentals, crossed the dangerous, ice-filled Delaware River, and, in a fury of desperation, fell upon the Hessian troops commanded by Colonel Rahl at Trenton. The net result of Washington's action was a thousand prisoners of war and a most convincing triumph for the Americans.

On the occasion of the 154th. anniversary of this great achievement the Division of Information and Publication of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission calls attention to the event in a statement issued this week. The incidents leading up to and connected with the Battle of Trenton are recounted in a story of the maneuvers by which George Washington saved the cause of the Colonies at a time when all hope seemed to be lost. It was this movement which restored the confidence of the Americans and gave them the courage to continue the struggle for liberty in the face of all odds.

The attack on Trenton had been planned by Washington as a means of bolstering the rapidly declining hopes of his countrymen. The enlistment term of his most valuable and experienced soldiers would expire at the end of the year, and he knew that but few could be prevailed upon to reenlist under the unpromising conditions which then prevailed. It was not only imperative that these troops be reenlisted, but it was just as essential that the morale of the entire population be improved. The whole country needed the tonic of an inspiring victory.

Washington formed his plans with all possible secrecy and Christmas was selected as the day for the attack on Trenton because it was believed that the Germans would be wholly unprepared to resist an assault at that time. These positions proved to be correct, for the boisterous celebration of the Yuletide was at its height when the Americans stormed the town in the dawn of that cold December morning.

The battle did not last long. Colonel Rahl had underestimated the mettle of his opponent and had failed to erect fortifications or otherwise to prepare for an attack. This mistake cost him his life and lost to Great Britain the services of a thousand and hirelings. The Hessian commander bravely tried to form his men and resist the attack, but it was made so suddenly and so courageously that his tardy efforts were of no avail.

FARMERS APPEAL FOR LOWER TAXES

Shrinkage in Values are Charged by the State Grange.

A movement commenced in Montgomery County—where farm organizations are strong and ably managed making a plea for reduced taxes on farm property, is apt to extend and be heard from at the coming session of the legislature. Considering not only present conditions, but those prevailing for a number of years in the farm industry, the resolutions adopted by the State Grange contain a great deal of fairness and sound argument. The following from the Frederick News, gives the action in detail:

"Seven suggestions set forth in the report on farm taxation submitted at the annual meeting of the State Grange recently held at Silver Spring, Montgomery county, were adopted at the quarterly meeting and biennial election of officers of Pomona Grange at Peagaville. The report which dealt with the farm tax problem in Maryland was made by D. G. Harry and Dr. Devault, of the University of Maryland, after a comprehensive study of the agricultural situation in the State.

The report emphasized the fact that the bulk of taxation is realized from real estate owned principally by farmers. The present system of taxation, it was pointed out, was inaugurated when most of the income was derived from real property but the sources of wealth and income today are vastly different from those when the general property tax laws were written into the state statutes, and ownership of property is no longer a measure of the ability to pay taxes, the report said.

After submitting figures showing that the bulk of taxation falls upon real estate owned by farmers, the report made the following suggestions which were adopted at the state meeting and also adopted at the Pomona meeting of which Austin P. Renn, near Adamstown, is master:

"First—That the assessment on farm property in Maryland be lowered, owing to the shrinkage in value of farm property, the apparent decrease in farm income and the lessened demand for the purchase of farms.

"Second—That all farm machinery and equipment, including livestock, be exempt from state and county assessments, unless all other industries are assessed for their machinery and equipment.

"Third—That all mortgages be included in the securities taxed in Maryland, except those exempted by the Federal government.

"Fourth—That due consideration and more study be given to the possibility of eliminating the state tax on general property and substituting a state income tax and a modified sale tax as a fair and equitable basis of taxation in Maryland.

"Fifth—That in those counties where uniform assessment on woodland exists more consideration be given to a better classification and assessment of woodland on the basis of age and condition.

"Sixth—That careful consideration be given to the assessing of farm real estate as a unit rather than the land and buildings separately.

"Seventh—That means of economy in the expenditure of tax revenues as a possibility of lessening the tax burden, be given careful thought and study."

THE RELIEF BILLS.

The wrangle over appropriations for various relief measures approved by President Hoover, continued during this week, in both branches of Congress. Anything like a non-partisan agreement has so far been impossible, notwithstanding the efforts of Senator Robinson, Democratic leader in the Senate. Some of the contention is over the number of millions to be appropriated, while some of it is over the channels through which the expenditures are to be made, especially over the proposition to let the President the right to use the money as he sees fit.

Senator Watson, Republican leader, introduced evidence from Red Cross and Unemployment Commission officials declaring the Hoover policies adequate to meet the situation, while Senator La Follette and others read telegrams from labor officials and others, that the appropriations would not be sufficient.

By a vote of 42 to 39 the Senate, on Wednesday decided to permit the President to make distribution of the unemployment relief funds now amounting to $118,000,000. The vote represented a break in party lines. Seven Democrats voting for, and ten Republicans against, the proposition. The House refused to increase the amount for drought relief from $30,000,000 to $60,000,000.

Relief legislation was given a boost on Thursday, when the Conference Committee of Senate and House agreed on $45,000,000 for drought relief. The amount as originally asked by the President was $25,000,000, which the House raised to $30,000,000, and the Senate to $60,000,000. The $45,000,000 represents a compromise between the two bodies.

The House also passed a bill carrying $150,000,000 for the use of the Farm Relief Board.

Chicago is to have a new Postoffice which will be the largest public building in the world. What is a "public building?"

A TIME TO SHARE OUR BLESSINGS

This is not the time for us to indulge in self-congratulation because our business is fair, or that we have plenty of work and that our income is satisfactory. So doing is boasting that we are "not as other men are," or that by superior judgment, or better individual management, or by better financing, we by our own efforts have placed ourselves in our present prosperous condition.

Maybe we have exercised good business ability and have managed well; but, that is only part of the cause for our financially comfortable condition. We may have escaped illness, hospital bills and accidents; we may have had no disease among our cattle, or our buildings may not have burned—in fact, what we term "good luck," but which is hardly that, but is more the mercy of God if we admit the truth—has been with us, and knowing this, why be vain or boastful about it?

Certainly we have not much right in most cases, to blame others for their misfortunes. Some are to blame, it is true, but who made us their judge?

Idleness, improvidence, intemperance, all bring their natural results; but in by far the most cases those about us who have not succeeded so well in life, have had handicaps and burdens not of their own making, and it is our part as neighbors and brothers in the best sense to withhold the unjust sentences that we are so apt to hand out.

AN OLD, OLD STORY.

The tempest in the Senate over the matter of how much the U. S. Government should spend for Farm Relief, for unemployment and the loss due to the drought, is a very old story. We have had it, for many years in one form or another, in connection with pension payments. It is always in evidence when any very large and organized class of voters is to be satisfied, quieted and kept in a grateful humor.

Whenever the fortissimo and tremolo can be used separately and with effect at any time, or better still, when both can be used in one great noise, they are invariably so used, and not always in connection with a fine desire to help the unfortunate, nor to uplift the oppressed.

If the latter was always the cause of noisy legislative outbreaks of generosity, only the sincerest indorsement could be properly accorded it. The "good Samaritan" is much too little in evidence these days, as is the spirit of unselfish recognition of the needs of those in dire need and real distress; and there is too much of the spirit in evidence of trying to impute to others a money and hard-heartedness that often does not exist.

Back in the days of Noah the flood sufferers presented no governmental problem, for the most obvious of reasons; and later on, Joseph appears to have had complete command of the situation in Egypt during the famine, with nobody to criticize his stewardship; but since that time—with possible exceptions not remembered—the critics have with more or less regularity plied their profession—and likely always will, as long as so doing promises satisfactory returns to them.

ELECTION EXPENSES.

The recent election in Frederick county cost the tax-payers of the county over $21,000, including the primary which alone cost $8,467.61. The salary and over-time for the registration and election officials cost $9,929.77. Considering the total expenditures as a job of work, the cost seems too high, and especially the total for the primary.

There is at least one good feature concerning the cost of our elections, and that is that the division of the cost, when paid, benefits so many people, widely distributed over a county—it places money in circulation and the pay per person is not excessive for the character of service rendered.

Our dislike of the primary system, and its cost, ought to be well known to many, as we have frequently stated it in detail, but as it is largely the plan throughout the country it is likely to stay for a long while, though many states are thoroughly dissatisfied with it.

Our form of ballot is also an expense maker, and as a help toward intelligent voting is a downright farce; but it too is unlikely to be remedied in Maryland, because doing so would be an admission of failure on the part of those responsible for it. So, we are apt to continue letting the tax-payers foot the bills, for the excellent reason that they are not in a position to register an effective protest, sufficient to revise the election laws.

TOO MUCH "SHORTENING."

The following paragraphs clipped from "The Manufacturer" contains in few words a lot of good sound business sense.

"Too much 'shortening' will spoil a cake and spoil a country. With competitor countries prepared to flood our markets with products produced at low cost—such as wheat, wool, meats, lumber, silver and copper—our efforts should be for increased production without increased cost."

"The public will sympathize with any sound plan which labor may propose to stimulate employment and maintain living standards, but it would seem that shorter work-days and shorter trains under present conditions would mean increased cost of production for all industries."

BANKS AND FARMERS.

When Mr. Alexander Legge, chairman of the Farm Board, told a group of bankers at South Bend, Ind., that one way of helping the farmer was in the exercise of intelligent supervision by the bankers, he was tackling a problem with as many sides as farm relief itself. For while the small banker in the farming districts undoubtedly can help the farmer plan his planting to get the best financial results, unless that banker gets co-operation from larger bankers he soon reaches the end of his rope. The small banker in a position to give this help has limited funds, and if he cannot dispose of his farm "paper" to the bigger banks, his hands are soon tied.

Most rural bankers know farming as well as banking. Many of them are retired farmers. In dairying districts those bankers have been leaders in the movement for blooded sires. They have shown the farmers that better livestock is the best investment they can make. In corn districts they have been leaders in the movement for better seed. In wheat districts they can, with proper backing, help intelligent movements for diversified farming.

But the difficulties of Mr. Legge's plan can best be understood by recalling small-town banking experience of eight and nine years ago, particularly in the livestock districts. The stockmen had borrowed heavily on their herds. Then beef prices and mutton prices dropped. The rural bankers backing them knew that the paper still was good, that the low prices were temporary. But meanwhile their assets were frozen; the bigger banks would not take the stockmen's notes and mortgages. The small banks were forced to close their doors. Yet within two years most of that livestock credit was redeemed. The small bankers had been right, but because the district bankers could not see it that way, every one suffered.—Phila. Ledger.

THE COUNTRY WEEKLY MUST BE CLEAN.

In my discussion of the weekly newspaper field, I want to assert at the beginning that, to attain success, the weekly newspaper must be clean, constructive and comprehensive. In fact, we may call these the "Three C's" in the successful editing of a country newspaper.

The country newspaper is close to the heart of the people; it is the paper of the hearthside; the paper all the family reads, and which is no small power in shaping the sentiment of a nation.

The personal touch is maintained in the country newspaper, while it is of necessity lost in the larger city dailies. The personal responsibility of the editor is thus comparatively greater.

To be clean, a newspaper must be accurate, truthful, and in no sense sensational.

Accuracy is stressed as of paramount importance in our office. Mistakes cause much unfavorable comment on Main street.

Sensationalism has absolutely no place in the publishing of a weekly newspaper. We believe sensational journalism is on the wane. Thoughtful people are more and more seeking to know what is going on in national and international affairs.

To succeed, we feel that a country newspaper must avoid coloring the facts in its articles; must avoid exaggeration, and must be accurate in the smallest detail. The residents of a small town react more unfavorably to sensational articles than do their city brothers and sisters who are living under a higher nervous tension. They are more friendly to the newspaper if it meets with their approval, but, withal, more critical. They are not so prone to accept without question whatever the editor chooses to give them. But, when convinced that the newspaper is doing its best to serve them in a fair and representative manner, they are very loyal.—Extracts from an article by Neil R. Murray, in El Monte, Col. Herald.

MATTERS OF LIFE AND DEATH.

Every newcomer in a certain state is required by law to have his or her arrival duly registered, by a designated section of the state government within four days after being welcomed into his new abode. In the same way, departure into the great unknown must be registered also, but only twenty-four hours are expected to elapse before this event is recorded. The "certain state" is the Maryland Free State and the law under which these requirements are met—known as the Registration Law makes the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the State Department of Health the custodian of such records, and holds that Bureau responsible for their collection.

Similar laws are in force in every state in the United States, and their combined records as reported by the United States Bureau of the Census give a complete tally sheet of the gains and losses that occur throughout the country.

What is known as the Registration Area for deaths was established by the Bureau of the Census in 1880, and only those states whose records met certain rigid requirements of promptness and completeness of registration were admitted to it. At the start, the area included only Massachusetts and New Jersey, with certain cities in other states, but year by year the number has increased until now forty-six of the forty-eight states, the District of Columbia and nine cities in non-registration states—the total comprising 95.7 percent of the population of the United States—are included in the Registration area for deaths. Maryland has been included in this area since 1906.

In 1915, thirty-five years after the formation of the Registration area for deaths, the Registration area for births was established as a means of obtaining more complete and prompt reporting of births. Maryland has been included in this area since 1916.

Outlining the registration system in Maryland, Dr. John Collinson, Chief of the State Bureau of Vital Statistics, said: "The Maryland Registration Law provides for the division of the twenty-three counties into Registration Districts, and for the appointment of a local registrar for each district. The local registrar is responsible for the registration of all births and deaths occurring in that district and for forwarding these records promptly to the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the State Department of Health. The law requires the attendant at a birth to report the birth to the local or Deputy Registrar within four days of its occurrence. A death must be reported to the registrar within twenty-four hours."

"The registration of births and deaths is frequently referred to as the 'bookkeeping of humanity.' In that sense, it is like the bookkeeping that is done by every carefully conducted business concern. It records and checks up the income and outgo, of the most precious resources of the state, its human capital—its citizens. It is consequently one of the most important functions of the State Department of Health, and its effectiveness depends upon the accuracy, completeness and promptness with which the information is forwarded to, and recorded by, those to whom that duty is entrusted."—State Dept. of Health.

"CHRISTMAS TIME IS COME."

Let the man think of his childhood Christmas seasons. What is it that stands out in his memory—Christmas day itself or the planning, the anticipation, the glory of dreams that preceded Christmas?

No, it is not Christmas days alone that he remembers, but "Christmas Times." He remembers standing at the old built-in kitchen dresser watching his mother make Christmas cookies and pack them in deep crocks or in old sugar sacks and smelling the fragrance of fruit cakes baking; he remembers mysterious trips to town and odd-shaped bundles that came back and were stowed away on top shelves or closets; he remembers the letters he wrote night after night to old Kris Kringle; he remembers the annual Sunday School cantata with old Santa himself presiding afterward at the candy distribution (hard candy in gay boxes that always popped open before he reached home); he remembers the arrival of the big turkey and the hanging up of wreaths and mistletoe in preparation of big sister's Christmas party; he remembers putting up a Christmas tree so that old Santa need lose no time trimming it; and, finally, he can never forget Christmas morning with the children peeping over the stairway bannister to get the first glimpse of their toys before mother and father were dressed.

No one should be left out of the joys of Christmas time. Old folks, young folks, get into the swing of the season with the rest of the children.—Towson Union News.

FOR THE STOCKING.

A letter to Santa Claus received by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch brings the request for a machine gun and some real bullets from a boy 6 years old, "and good." Whether this is a unique Christmas wish or whether many little boys now want machine guns and truly, truly ammunition we cannot say, and we should not know where to look for information. It is, however, fairly significant.

Perhaps anyone endowed with foresight and the gift for discovering important general trends from trivia would have expected it. It began with the notion that children's toys should be things which not only entertain them but provide them with some preparation for an introduction into the real world. (It is one of the arrogant illogicalities of adults to suppose that theirs is in a way a real world and the child's is not.) So there began the emphasis on toys that work and go toys that would teach what "life was like," toys that were miniatures and models of all the dreary, or at least drearily used, machinery of the earth of the grown-ups. Naturally the children like them. They made very pretty and complicated toys and the child after all can amuse himself with almost anything.

The machine gun request is a reasonable development out of this idea. The machine gun has come to stand for one of the more successful devices and exciting occupations of American civilization. It is a strange symbol of mechanical culture, a thing that works and has immediate effects and is highly respected by adults and makes the individual possessing it at once the superior of a great many other people. Imagine a world of children all armed with machine guns; able to command their smallest and most capricious whim; able to dominate their parents; able to spray indiscriminately whatever set their tempers blazing, almost precisely as their rational, responsible elders did in 1914-18. It is not a pleasant prospect, but it is or should be understandable.

Naturally Santa Claus won't bring the little boy the machine gun. And a good thing for the little boy and Santa Claus and the spirit of Christmas. Maybe there will even be a reaction against the utilitarian idea of toys.—Baltimore Sun.

Many Eagerly Awaiting Advent of Fool's Birth

In the train coming back from the English Derby a race course tipster commenced talking to John Corlett, famous editor of the Pink 'Un, and the old man listened for a while with interest, chuckles J. B. Booth in "Master and Man."

"But," he broke in finally, "how long have you been at the business?" "Very nearly twenty years, guv'nor!" "Then," granted Corlett, "if there be any truth in what Thomas Carlyle tells us, that the population consists of so many millions, mostly fools, how is it that you have not made your fortune and retired long ago?"

The tipster snorted contemptuously. "I don't know 'oo this 'ere Carlyle is," he rasped, "but you can tell your friend Tom this for me. Tell 'im Cheerful Charley says that for one fool as is born into this world, there's ten lookin' for 'im."—Kansas City Times.

Humming Birds Kept Busy

Taking advantage of an opportunity to keep a single humming bird in view for a period of 25 minutes, Associate Professor Tracy I. Storer of the University of California department of zoology, found that even these supposedly carefree, feather folk have their troubles, and spend as much as 18 per cent of their time chasing other humming birds from their forage grounds.

He found that during a total of 1,471 seconds, or approximately 25 minutes, one humming bird spent 782 seconds, or more than 50 per cent of the time, in perching, 420 seconds in feeding, and 239 seconds in chasing invaders from its particular forage ground on a fuchsia bush.

THE ROAD TO CHRISTMASTIME

Down the road to Christmastime
We gaily roll along;
In our hearts is merriment
And on our lips a song.
Down the road to Christmastime—
And all along the way
We greet our friends and wish for them
A jolly Christmas Day.

Down the road to Christmastime—
The old, old road of cheer,
Where every neighbor is a friend
And every friend is dear;
Where joy is found on every hand
And brightens every mile;
Where kindness calls in every voice
And glows in every smile.

Down the road to Christmastime—
Oh, what a pleasant ride
With friends and strangers greeting us
And loved ones at our side!
Our hearts are filled with happiness
And all the world is gay,
As down the road to Christmastime
We find our merry way.

BIGGER AND BETTER

THE GREAT AMERICAN VALUE

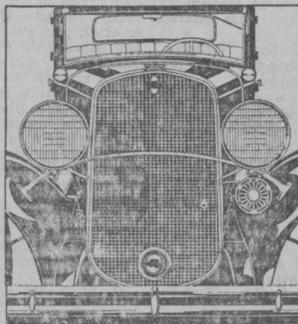

Fine-car distinction and quality in the new Chevrolet Six

Again, Chevrolet and General Motors have utilized their combined resources to establish a new and higher standard of value for the American motor car.

The new Chevrolet represents a type of economical transportation that America has long anticipated—a low-priced six styled with such striking talent and good taste, so smartly beautiful and complete in its perfection of detail, so advanced and refined mechanically that you will immediately recognize it as the Great American Value.

This great value is the outcome of four basic Chevrolet advantages: (1) The savings of volume production in nineteen immense, modern plants. (2) The economies which result from great purchasing power. (3) The benefits of continuous research in General Motors laboratories and on the General Motors Proving Ground. And (4) the close association with the Fisher Body Corporation who, this year, have surpassed all their previous achievements in developing bodies of outstanding quality, refinement and value.

These basic advantages have made it possible to build a finer car at lower cost. They have enabled Chevrolet to offer a car with a longer wheel-base—greater roominess and comfort—strikingly smarter style—impressive new luxury—more thoroughly satisfactory performance—greater dependability. And to pass on these savings of efficient manufacturing to the buyer in the form of lower prices!

Ole Almost Deserved to Get Away With It

One night, just before closing up time, Ole Olsen came running into the general store, hatless, coatless and breathless, and dropping on his knees yelled: "Yon, Yon, hide me, hide me! Ye sheriff's after me!"

"I've no place to hide ye here, Ole," Yon Yonson, the proprietor, said. "You moost, you moost," screamed Ole.

"Crawl into that gunny-sack, then," said Yon.

He had no sooner gotten hid than in ran the sheriff. "Seen Ole?" he asked.

"Don't see 'im here," said Yon, without lying.

Then the sheriff went nosing around and pretty soon he spotted the gunny-sack over in the corner. "What's in here?" he asked.

"Oh, Joost some old harness and dinglehells," said Yon.

With that the sheriff gave the sack an awful boot.

"Yingle, yingle, yingle!" moaned Ole.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Lures for Collectors

The objects of the modern collector's quest are often, to the layman, inexplicably curious. An item which was sold at auction only recently, and found a ready purchaser at $850, was the traveling organ which James II used for his chapel when encamped on Hounslow Heath. Among the objects lately sold at Sotheby's were such unusual treasures as a sixteenth century German woodman's hatchet, complete with maker's marks, and what might, to the uninitiate, appear to be a blunt steel rapier with the half-length figure of a girl as handle. It is actually, however, that great rarity, an official measure of the king's almanac, an ancient functionary whose duties were to inspect and measure cloth. His office was abolished in the reign of William III.—London Mail.

Kentucky's Famous

As we were getting ready to pull out of Lexington the other day, a traffic cop, who was grinning from ear to ear, stopped to tell us what it was all about. He said a car bearing a Michigan license pulled up to the curb and the woman driver hailed him. She wanted to know about all the historic and interesting spots around the Blue Grass city. He told her where they were and how to reach them, and then she said: "Now where is the old home of Nancy Hanks? She was a very famous woman down in these parts, wasn't she?"

"No, madam," replied the cop, "she was a trotting horse."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Were all the membranous-capsules and all the memory-branial-biographies that make multi-individualisms, or Maya, of a once Holophilic Universe (any awareness of which is a Felt-ness) dissolved and erased, the Universe would again be a place of Holophilic-Sentient-Intercourse and a period of Holophilic-Optional-Estimation, or a Sum-Omnial-Awareness-Felt-ness, that it was before such experiment of sectional partitionment was aspiratively introduced by one of its basic functions—"The Herodian Me," by Henry Davidge Thayer.

Hallowed Memories

The old homestead in Cummington, Mass., where William Cullen Bryant was born and to which he returned at the age of seventy-two to spend the last dozen summers of his life, has been acquired for the use and enjoyment of the public. There in the farming quiet of the Hampshire hills the small boy first began to observe the wonders of nature; there the retiring youth wrote "Thanatopsis"; there the serene old man finished his translation of the Iliad and the Odyssey.

Harvest Moon

The harvest moon is the full moon which occurs nearest to the autumnal equinox. At that season the path of the moon passes quite closely above and below the horizon at the time of the full moon, causing it to rise nearly at sunset for several nights in succession, prolonging the natural twilight. It is so called from the assistance its illumination gives to harvesters.

If the moon is full after September 23, it is called the hunter's moon.

BLACK CAT CAUSE OF ROAD TRAGEDY

Spot Where Girl Died Is Kept Green by Farmer.

Chariton, Iowa.—A tragedy of the highway in which a young woman lost her life is kept ever green in the memory of E. O. Millen, aged farmer, who lives near here, for every morning since September 14 he has placed a bouquet on the spot where Miss Agnes Smillie, of Williamson, died from injuries suffered in an automobile accident.

In the early hours of September 11, Miss Smillie, together with John Fuller, Lena Stewart and David McNeish, were returning home from a dance the Chariton Gun club. In front of Mr. Millen's home a black cat dashed in front of the car driven by McNeish. Rather than run down the omen of bad luck, McNeish swerved the car and it tumbled over into the ditch. Millen heard screams, clothed himself and rushed to the roadside to give aid. He found Miss Smillie in the ditch fatally injured. He picked her up with the intention of carrying her into his home to give her aid, but she died in his arms.

On September 14 the funeral cortege bearing Miss Smillie's body passed the Millen residence on its way to Albia for burial. Mr. Millen went to his flower garden, prepared a large bouquet and placed it on the spot beside the road where the girl was injured. Every morning since he has paid the same tribute to her memory.

Rest on, dear Husband, thy labors o'er. Thy willing hands will toil no more. A faithful husband, true and kind, A truer husband you could not find.

The month of December once more is here To us the saddest of the year Because it took from us away Our father one year ago today.

Sleep on, dear Grandfather and take your rest. God called you home; He thought it best. He saw your suffering here was great And opened wide the Golden Gate.

BY HIS GRAND-CHILDREN.

WHEN toes are tingling, bells are ringing and cheeks are rosy red, you have a host of jolly visions before you go to bed. A nice big juicy Christmas cake appears before your eyes, and snow and ice and ringing sleigh bells, and candy, fruits and pies, and mistletoe and fust and holly together with the best of luck and happy times and laughter before you go to rest.

As far as fruit cake fills your wishes, it's easy to obtain, for you can get it made already (to save you stress and strain) in boxes bright with pretty pictures all lacquered on the tin, or if you want to make a pudding, put these ingredients in:

Noel Pudding To one cup dry bread crumbs add one and one-half cups flour sifted with two and one-fourth teaspoons baking powder, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon nutmeg and one-half teaspoon cinnamon. Mix two-thirds cup brown sugar, two-thirds cup chopped suet, one-half cup chopped walnuts and one-fourth cup chopped dates, and add to the first mixture. Add two well-beaten eggs and one cup milk mixed with one-half teaspoon soda. Add the contents of a 1-pound can of figs, well drained and cut fine. Fill a greased mold two-thirds full, cover tightly with the mold cover or with a waxed paper and then a wet cheesecloth into which some flour has been rubbed. Steam two hours, and serve with Noel Sauce.

To make this sauce boil the syrup from the can of figs and three tablespoons sugar to 238 degrees, or till it spins a thread. Beat two egg yolks well, pour syrup over slowly, and beat constantly. Add one-half teaspoon vanilla. Just before serving add one cup stiffly-beaten heavy cream and beat together.

This is a large pudding and will serve from sixteen to twenty people, as it is rich and the serving must not be too large, or your dreams Christmas night will not be as pleasant as your visions on Christmas Eve.

THE CHILD'S ALLOWANCE.

Child specialists believe that a pocket allowance works best when it is in no way dependent on work done to help in the house, but is given in order to train the child in the use of money. Help in simple tasks should be expected as a matter of course, and an allowance of some sort given also as a matter of course. Do not use the allowance as a means of discipline. Find other ways of teaching obedience or other necessary lessons.

Very unusual tasks may be paid for if the child would otherwise have a continual sense of drudgery connected with everything around the home. For example, dishwashing is something everyone should help with. Everyone makes dishes dirty. Window washing, painting, mowing the lawn, cleaning the cellar, and similar occasion tasks, often a little heavy for a child, may be rewarded by definite pay, just as one might pay an outsider to do them.

Where the ready cash in a family is too small to permit any pay, the spirit of teamwork can be so strongly developed that no work need seem like drudgery, unfairly imposed on unwilling shoulders.—U. S. Dep't. Agriculture.

Messina Rightly Claims

Most Wonderful Clock

Messina, one of the most important towns in Sicily, is regaining the glories it lost in the appalling earthquake some 22 years ago. One of the most striking of its new buildings is a tower which contains the most wonderful clock in the world.

The tower is surmounted by a bronze lion holding the city flag in its front paws. At midday the lion lashes its tail, waves the flag, and roars. A bronze cock placed below the lion crows a greeting to sunrise, noon, and sunset. Two arched recesses contain the bells upon which the hours are struck by figures of Diana and Clarence, the heroines who save the city from being sacked by the French after the Sicilian Vespers in 1282.

On each of the four sides of the tower is a luminous dial eight feet in diameter upon which are displayed the phases of the moon, a perpetual calendar, and the movements of the planets round the sun.

Below the clock face is a stage upon which mechanical figures enact scenes appropriate to the great feasts of the church.—London Tit-Bits.

Airplanes Fight Frost

and Plant New Forests

In several parts of the world where delicate fruit crops are grown frost is a deadly enemy. It has been discovered that ground frosts are unlikely in cloudy weather, since the clouds act like blankets and prevent the soil from giving up its heat. On clear nights it has long been customary to protect orange, lemon, and other citrus fruit trees by lighting smoke fires.

The heat of the fires is trifling, but their smoke clouds provide the necessary counterpanes. Recent experiments have shown that airplanes can be used for tucking up fruit trees for the night. The plane flies to and fro over the orchard, emitting a dense cloud of smoke, and the trees are kept warm.

Sometimes forest fires destroy thousands upon thousands of acres of timber. To replant these in the ordinary way would be almost impossible, but wonderful results have been obtained by using airplanes to distribute tree seeds over the burnt-out lands.

How Lorraine Helps Thier

Newark, N. J.—Edgar Kille was getting the best of a burglar with whom he was struggling in the dark until Mrs. Kille arrived on the scene to help him. Swinging a potato masher with great might, she brought it, by mistake, squarely down upon the head of her husband. The burglar escaped.

Wreath From Pets

Epsom, England.—A wreath inscribed "To our beloved master, from all his pets," was included among those at the funeral of Charles Richard, tin master, here.

WIFE, SWEETIE GET LIFE TERMS

Convicted in a California Court of Killing the Woman's Husband.

Redwood City, Calif.—In a tensely quiet Redwood City courtroom, packed to its uttermost inch with breathless spectators, a man and a woman leaned forward recently to hear a jury's verdict.

"We, the jury, find Will Woodring guilty of first degree murder and recommend life imprisonment," read Foreman Ross Cox.

Will Woodring, convicted of the murder of Frank Roderick, his employer, at La Honda, last May, gripped the arms of his chair and turned white.

Woman Hears Sentence.

At his side, Mrs. Minnie Roderick, widow of the slain man, and charged jointly with the murder, licked dry lips and crouched in her chair, waiting for her half of the verdict.

"... Minnie Roderick, guilty of first degree murder and recommend life imprisonment."

The voice of the foreman stopped. Minnie Roderick sank back in her seat, her lips moving.

"Oh, God—" she began to weep.

Mrs. Roderick's mother, Mrs. Antone Fayal, staggered from a seat inside the courtroom railing and put an arm around her daughter. Miss Mary Fayal, a sister, also came forward. All three women were sobbing. The jail matron, Dolly Grainger, was also crying. A murmur went over the courtroom.

It was the Superior court's final setting of the murder trial of two, declared by the state to have murdered Frank Roderick, La Honda rancher, and hurled his body into an abandoned well.

Mrs. Roderick left the courtroom with Woodring, guarded by deputy sheriffs, her face white and set. Her mother collapsed in hysterics, her screams audible on Redwood City streets. The sister fainted dead away. Woodring turned to his counsel.

Man Denies Guilt.

"I tell you again, I did not kill Frank Roderick," he said—and followed the deputy out.

The dramatic climax marked the end of one of the county's most sensational murder trials. Each of the defendants accused the other of the murder. It was believed that this was one circumstance which swayed the jury of five women and seven men to a belief in the guilt of both.

Mrs. Roderick, sat unmoved when District Attorney Franklin Swart, in his final argument, pictured her amours with Woodring.

The case against the two—the widow and the hired man—was built entirely upon circumstantial evidence. Rumors from the jury room were that conviction of both was obtained on a second ballot, there being only one dissenting jurymen when the first ballot was cast.

In the closing hours of the case defense attorneys did not agree. Gilbert Ferrell, attorney for Woodring, announced that Mrs. Roderick had told many conflicting stories, while Woodring told but one.

"The jury cannot believe both," he said.

Cattle Rustling Worse

Than in Wild West Days

Slim Buttes, S. D.—Cattle rustling in the Slim Buttes country is worse today than it was in the old wild west days. Abe Jones, pioneer rancher, declares.

"In the old days we used to lose an occasional cow or half a dozen calves to rustlers, but the modern rustlers are much worse. Using trucks, they can carry away many calves at a time and be hundreds of miles away before we miss them," Jones said.

Jones has been in the Slim Buttes country since 1836, when he took up a claim after coming west to prospect for gold in the Black Hills.

Women and Hats

The subject of women and their hats is one that apparently never will be cleared up to mere man. "My wife," said a well-dressed attorney, "must have a hat complex. She calls me at the office and exclaims over a hat. 'It's gorgeous. I want it so much. You don't care if I get it, do you?' She asks, and weakening, I give in. That night right when I expect to see her in fine spirits because of the gorgeous hat, she is depressed. Inquiry reveals that on the way home she decided it wasn't the hat for her. She won't take it back and she won't wear it. I'll bet there are 25 hats of hers in our house this minute, and to hear her talk she hasn't a hat to her name. I can't understand it."—Detroit News.

To Preserve Old Prints

Since old prints of flowers, birds and personages are now so popular for framing, it is also worth while to take suitable modern pictures or prints, perhaps from magazines, and antique them with a light coating of liquid wax. This treatment will give them a mellow, old tone and will preserve them. The pictures should be pinned firmly to a flat surface before the wax is applied. Simply framed, they will look charming on the walls of a room.

"City of Spires"

There are so many fine spires and towers on the churches and palaces in Copenhagen that it has been described as the "City of Spires." Although it is an ancient city, Copenhagen is now modern in appearance. The earlier houses built of wood were destroyed by fire in the eighteenth century and have been replaced with brick and stone buildings. Copenhagen is noted for its beautiful parks and gardens, among which the most famous are the Tivoli gardens, laid out in 1843. At night they are lighted with thousands of fairy lights and the theaters, restaurants, concert and dance halls in it offer countless attractions. Indeed, one could easily call it "Denmark's Fairyland."

Old Massachusetts Church

Hingham, Mass., possesses an extraordinary number of old buildings, but the Old Ship Church is by far the most interesting of them all, says an article in the Boston Post. It is not an exaggeration to say that it ranks, without any qualifications, among the few most interesting historic buildings in the country. It was built in 1681, the second church in the town. It has been enlarged twice, but the original building is still there. Competent authorities say that it is "the oldest house for public worship in the United States which stands upon its original site and continues to be used for the purpose for which it was erected."

Hefty Newspapers

"Newspapers" in the form of large stone tablets have been discovered during excavations at Ostia, in Italy. One is said to record the death of Pompey in 49 B. C., and the will of Julius Caesar with his bequests to the people of Rome. Because of his dispatches from the war in Gaul, Caesar is often called the father of journalism, but it seems that Cicero, born in 106 B. C., has a greater claim to this distinction. Cicero used to post in the galleries of his villa at Tusculum a record or journal of the passing events of note, with a list of births, deaths, and marriages. From a letter of Cicero's it is known that he used a system of abbreviated writing.

"Joint Tariff"

If a tariff quotes a through rate in which two or more railroads are involved, it is known as a joint tariff and is filed with the interstate commerce commission—that is, if the commodity starts with one carrier and terminates with another a joint tariff is necessary.

MILLIONAIRE FOUR TIMES, DIES POOR

German Knew Finance, Also He Knew Prisons.

Berlin.—A millionaire four times in his life, Armand Schwob died penniless in a Berlin hospital recently at the age of seventy-three. At the height of his enterprising and versatile career he was worth millions of dollars, had a racing stable of 80 thoroughbreds, and was the declared favorite of the Russian czar. He also made the acquaintance of many prisoners in the course of his adventurous life, including Sing Sing in New York.

Smart in Business.

As a small boy Schwob displayed remarkable business talents in his uncle's watch business in Paris. At the age of seventeen young Schwob founded a watch making plant in Moscow and in the course of two years he had made a million dollars. Although he had received marked favors from the court, he turned his back on Russia and opened a watch factory in Paris. Profits were high and Schwob lived in regal splendor.

All went well till his restless spirit drove Schwob to open a branch office in Buenos Aires which he conducted himself. It failed. The crash involved a loss of 15,000,000 francs. He fled to Holland and was arrested on a charge of fraud. Acquitted, he turned to gambling. He conducted a flourishing gambling club in Paris which netted him a large fortune.

A gold mine in Wales was Schwob's next business enterprise. Before the shareholders realized that they had invested their money in a bubble Schwob had disappeared. A jeweler's shop which he conducted in Vienna was just on the verge of failing when Schwob inherited $40,000. He went to America.

Sentenced in United States.

In New York Schwob forged checks to increase his rapidly dwindling revenues. He was convicted and lodged in Sing Sing. After 18 months in jail he disappeared. For years nothing was heard of him.

He reappeared in Paris. As a war profiteer he again amassed a large fortune. As easily as it was earned it was spent. In 1922 he was forced to flee from Paris.

Germany was his next field of activity. He reverted to check forging. In Berlin alone he netted $200,000. Before the police could get hold of him he had fled from the country. In 1926 he was arrested in Fiume, but made his escape. Nothing was heard of him till he was found sick in a small Berlin home and taken to the hospital.

What the restless adventurer has done in the last years and what induced him to come to the German capital nobody knows.

Alaskan Dog Teams Are Giving Way to Planes

Nome, Alaska.—Modern transportation by air is threatening the future of the malamute, hero of many an Alaskan tale of danger and hardship on the snow-packed trails of America's frontier.

Despite the present high cost of airplane travel, mail and other articles may be sent by air cheaper than by dog team, statistics have revealed. The cost of the average dog team, including the driver, amounts to $25 per day, or 65 cents per passenger mile, and the team has an average speed of 30 to 40 miles per day.

In comparison with the time and cost, airplane transportation has become popular in this land of poor communication facilities. The airplane has reduced dog team mail time between Nome and Nenana from 29 days to four hours. Gold dust and furs are transported from Nome to Fairbanks, 540 miles across a snowbound wilderness, in five hours, instead of the month required by a fast dog team.

The malamute is slowly losing his place as provider of transportation over long distances. Even law enforcers, who used to whip their dog teams onto the trail of criminals, spending weeks or months in the pursuit, have taken to the air.

With the development of airways and construction of landing fields, airplanes are expected to solve the communication problem in the territory.

Cold Handshake Made Warm by Losing Nerve!

Kansas City.—Cold and clammy hands may be made capable of warm handshakes, the Southwest clinical conference was told by Dr. L. G. Rowntree of Rochester, Minn.

The change, he said, is effected by cutting two little nerves that lie along the spine.

Persons with arthritis or bone fever also may be benefited by the operation, which increases the blood supply in the afflicted regions.

Des Moines Woman Is Driving Coal Truck

Des Moines.—Mrs. Edith Murray grew tired of sitting at home most of the day. She wanted a good job, a heavy one, she said. She got it. Now she drives a coal truck on the streets of Des Moines, rivaling the men by her strength with the coal shovel.

A Christmas Spirit

by Clara Agee Hays

LAURA BRADON halted in almost superstitious amazement.

"Bertha!" she gasped. "Come here! It's happened—again!"

Bertha dropped the letters she was sorting and hurried to the door.

"Laura!" her tone expressed awed unbelief. "Are you sure—?"

"Perfectly. Aren't you?"

Bertha's eyes narrowed reflectively. "Yes!"

For a moment the two stared at each other in tight-lipped silence.

"Did you see anyone when you came to work?"

Bertha shook her head. "Not a soul. The building was locked."

"If it weren't so near Christmas and the whole force working overtime, it would be easier to imagine."

From her brown curls and sparkling eyes to her slim ankles Laura was beautiful and genuine. Because she never posed she wasn't self-conscious. That may have been her charm, and why—in spite of her youth—Culver had elected her postmistress.

"Imagine a young girl running a post office!" some said. But immediately they added, "Laura can do it if anybody can!"

And Laura had been doing it. She had to. Aunt Juley had left her only a small annuity and the use of the old residence for five years, at which time it went to some charity. That was all.

No, it wasn't quite all. And strangely this task, this legacy to another, was apparently causing all the trouble. Even the office mystery had begun at about the time of the disappearance of the grandfather clock. Laura loved that clock. It recalled childhood associations. Maybe that was why per-verse old Aunt Juley, dying, had made her promise to repair it for an Ernest Hamilton, the son of Aunt Juley's girlhood chum.

"The boy was always good to me when I visited his mother," Aunt Juley explained.

Restoring it would cost unbelievably. Aunt Juley hadn't provided for that, and Laura was saving every penny toward it.

But by Christmas she'd have enough to send to Ernest Hamilton, a total stranger, the most expensive present she had ever bought.

"With my first of December check I'm going to send it to the clock-makers," she told Bertha and Bob, her two best friends.

But one morning just before that Laura had missed the old clock! It was an awful feeling. She couldn't believe it. Neither could Mrs. Adams, the caretaker's wife.

"It's spirits, Miss Bradon!" Mrs. Adams gasped. "Your dead ain't gonna see that clock leave the family! Past week I've had a feelin'—"

"It's Spirits, Miss Bradon!" Mrs. Adams Gasped.

Laura didn't listen to Mrs. Adams' sincere but terrifying theories.

It must have been stolen. But, by whom? A stranger couldn't slip unnoticed into Culver where everybody knows everybody else.

"And," Bob reasoned as he and Laura talked it over the next day, "Culver people don't go in for antiques."

"Then, too," Laura added, "there wasn't a sign of breaking in. In the winter Mrs. Adams locks everything. And everything was still locked this morning."

Bob whistled. "Looks like inside work."

But Laura had known the Adamses too long not to be certain they were guiltless.

Bob's eyes held more concern for the slim wonderful girl than for the clock. "Don't you worry," he admonished. "I'm going to trace this. Please," he pleaded, "don't worry."

Because Laura didn't want Bob to think her foolish, she hadn't spoken about the mystery in the office. But for days she'd had a feeling that strange hands had arranged things at her desk. She wasn't positive at first. There was something so strange about it that Laura's nerves tightened. "I'm going to find out about this," she determined.

When Bob waited as he always did to stroll the seven blocks to her corner, he exclaimed: "Laura, you're pale! You ought to get more help during Christmas week. I'd help free of charge—"

"It's 'a'gin the law," Bob. Thanks anyway." Laura smiled into his serious eyes.

Bob was tall and straight and good looking. He'd been practicing law in

"So, Robert Howard! You! . . . A Common Thief!"

Culver for almost a year and Culver people were saying, "At last there's a fellow good enough for Laura—only it's funny he'd settle here. All our boys with any git, go to the city."

"A lawyer's got to start in a small place," Bob explained to Laura.

But Bob never intimated that she was more to him than a very good friend. And Laura tried to make herself regard him in as calm a light.

Three nights, without telling either Bob or Bertha, Laura had hidden in her office.

Then it had happened. The light burning over the safe had thrown everything into grotesque shadow. Great heaps of Christmas packages became vague ghosts. Into that silence, a sound! Laura drew back. The door had opened!

Slowly a circle of light advanced. Behind it a shadow. It reached her desk. Laura suppressed a scream. She switched on a light.

In horror and amazement, the two faced each other—speechless. He dropped his flashlight.

Laura's lips trembled from a sudden deep hurt.

"So, Robert Howard! You! . . . A common thief!"

"Laura—!"

"Tell me, now, about my clock. You're the only person—"

"All right." The man before her tightened his jaw.

"How did you get in?"

"That night you left your purse in my car. I had keys copied after yours. . . . I—I'm really Earnest Hamilton."

Laura gasped. "Then why steal it—?"

"After you'd told me how you were saving, and I saw how determined you were to keep your promise, I thought I'd get it restored, pay the bill, and return it without your ever knowing who'd done it. I couldn't bear to have you spend your money that way. . . ."

"But—!"

"You said, once, the old description of the clock was in your desk. It's all done now, but one detail. I was trying to find it for the man."

Unbelief and relieved hope played over Laura's face. "If you're Ernest Hamilton, why come to Culver as—"

Resolutely the young man reached into his pocket. "You never saw your aunt's will."

"No. The lawyer said she asked that it be shown to no one for a year or—"

He nodded. "Here's why—a copy of it. She said you were stubborn."

Laura read. . . . If Ernest Hamilton will marry my niece before the year is out, my entire estate will go to them instead of to charities."

"I wanted to see you. And after I had, and knew you for yourself, I couldn't," tenderness moved in his eyes. "I couldn't even ask you until that year was up. I wanted you to know that I didn't—"

Again Laura's heart sang. The radiance which returns to youth so easily reflected in her eyes.

"Bob!" her heart spoke the name.

"I'll be busy Christmas, but what plans have you for the Sunday before New Year's?"

"Why, none. . . . I—"

She threw back her head and smiled a happy eager smile. "Neither have I!"

Ernest Hamilton stood bewildered for a moment. Then over his serious, handsome face moved the comprehension of a great happiness. He opened his arms. "Laura! Laura, dear!"

And it was his heart, too, which spoke. (© 1930 Western Newspaper Union.)

LIGHTS of NEW YORK

By WALTER TRUMBULL

If it is true that chickens come home to roost, it also is true that bread cast upon the waters returns after many days.

A young chap went wrong, was caught and sent to the penitentiary. He declared that he had been "framed," but the fact remained that he had been wild and become an associate of bad companions. For a while he was bitter, but apparently he thought things over. At any rate, when his time was up he came to an officer in the New York detective force and said:

"I made a mistake but I still am young enough to have a lot of life ahead of me. I want to go straight. Will you help me?"

The detective believed him; got his citizenship restored; finally got him a good job with a big manufacturing concern. The man did well; in time became head of a department. One day he caught a boy stealing. He took him into his office. The boy had never done anything wrong before. He was frightened; pleaded; wept.

"What is your name?" said the man.

The boy told him.

"Is your father's first name John?"

said the man, and the boy answered that it was.

"I thought so," said the man. "I know him. I am not going to have you arrested; but there is a condition. You must tell your father all that has happened. Tell him my name. Say that I sent you home to him."

So the man paid a debt and, as for the boy, he is now a man, too, and mayor of the small city where he lives.

It took the fires of war to burn another boy clean. He was caught in a holdup and convicted, but he was a member of a National Guard regiment, and its colonel, who thought there was good in the youngster, pleaded for him so eloquently that the judge took advantage of conditions to suspend sentence. The young man went to France, transferred to another outfit, became a sergeant and did so well he was sent to officer's school and commissioned a second lieutenant. He was a fine soldier. Before he was shipped back to the United States he had pinned on his chest a Distinguished Service Cross and a Croix de Guerre with two palms. But he wasn't happy. He met the chaplain of a regiment who knew his story and said to him:

"You know I am still under suspended sentence. I have no citizenship. I don't belong here. I don't belong anywhere."

The chaplain bought the man a little D. S. C. button and put it in his lapel.

"You won that for courage," he said. "Live up to it." Later he quietly managed to get the man a pardon. He is working at his trade; looking the world in the eye; doing very well.

I asked Bert Balchen, the other day, where he really got the greatest thrill out of flying; whether it was over the ocean or the South plateau.

"Well," said Balchen, "you know you really haven't much time for thrills; you are too busy flying."

When you come to think of it there is a lot of sense in that as there is in anything Balchen says. When engaged in a hazardous undertaking, the good man just goes ahead and does his stuff as part of the day's work.

A Brooklyn man sent a suit to a tailor to be pressed. In the pocket he left a little memorandum book. The honest tailor sent the book back, and thereby lost a customer. The man was out when the book was returned and it was received by his wife. In it she found thirty names and telephone numbers. They were not names of men. The wife is suing for divorce.

Lord Castlerosse, the English Journalist now in New York, tells a story of a lively party at Cannes, which included among the guests a woman gossip once connected with a famous murder in the United States. The following evening Castlerosse dined with a lady of title who said to him that she understood he had been at a party with a murderess the night before. Castlerosse said the woman never had killed anybody and that the story was nonsense.

"Oh, never tell the host that," said the lady of quality. "He thought he was entertaining a murderess and, if he discovers that she was not, he will be broken hearted."

There is a fellow who should have known Lucretia Borgia.

Hornets Put Out Light

The old simile, "thick as hornets," apparently has some basis in fact, for two cases have been cited in which hornets were so thick they put out a light.

Off the coast, from three to five miles, two gas and whistling buoys were reported extinguished and out of business. An inspection by the lighthouse service revealed the fact that the buoys were so full of hornets that the lights could not continue to burn. The hornets apparently took their tip from horseflies who made similar trouble a few years ago.

POULTRY

CULL EVERY TWO WEEKS UNTIL FALL

Get Rid of Nonproducers for Poultry Success.

The success or failure of a poultry enterprise may depend on proper culling, according to the poultry department of the New York State College of Agriculture. Poultrymen should cull regularly every two weeks, from June to September 15, but if only one culling is to be made, wait until September 1.

A first-class culler can tell three things about each hen he handles: whether she is laying; how long she has, or has not, been laying; and what is the rate of egg laying. No hens should be kept longer than three years. Close culling limits the number of old hens and raises the average egg production of the flock.

The easiest and most satisfactory way to catch hens is to pen off a corner of the house with a piece of chicken wire fencing about 20 feet long and 5 feet wide. Attach the end of the wire to the side wall about 2 feet from a corner and unroll the wire toward the center of the room. This acts as a barrier to drive the hens into the corner. The end of the wire can then be brought around to the side wall, rolled up and fastened, leaving enough space for the hens. One person remains on the inside to catch and hand the birds to the inspector on the outside. Another good way is to build a catching crate with a sliding end and an opening on the top. The end of this crate is placed against a runway hole outside of the building, or in an opening between pens on the inside. Scatter grain on the floor of the crate, drive a few hens quickly into it, and close the sliding door. Each hen is then easily caught and removed.

Germ Responsible for Blackhead in Turkeys

It has been recently learned that if the chicken has been infected with a certain roundworm, the worm may carry the germ responsible for blackhead in turkeys. By using the semi-confinement plan, which consists of placing turkeys on virgin soil, preferably sown to alfalfa and not inhabited by chickens for at least two years, the possibility of infection from chickens will be eliminated and turkeys can be raised without the danger of blackhead from this source.

The name blackhead is a very poor one for the disease for which there are many diseases in turkeys in which the head of the diseased bird turns dark blue or a dark color just before death.

Use Infertile Turkey Eggs for Shell Pattern

To break a fresh turkey egg for the pattern of the shell would be vandalism, but if an infertile egg is left in the nest, marked with the hen's number, it is well to blow it out, string it and keep for a guide, since the turkey hen may steal her nest in a different place next time.

No two turkeys lay eggs that are exactly alike. The early clutch is said to be invariably of a darker tint than the one laid later, but the spots are the same. One enthusiastic turkey woman used to cut cardboard eggs and stipple them as nearly as possible like the model as a sort of trapnesting for her small flock.

Men May Have Blue Mondays, Not Women

Bristol, England.—Prof. Sargent Florence, in a paper read at the economic session of the British association meeting in conference here, claims that women are not only more efficient in every walk of life than men but women have no blue Mondays and that, given equal opportunity, they always show higher intelligence.

Lesson for December 21

TIMOTHY: THE INFLUENCE OF HOME TRAINING

LESSON TEXT—Acts 16:1-3; Philippians 2:19-22; II Timothy 1:1-6; 3:14-16.

GOLDEN TEXT—And that from a child thou hast known the holy scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Living for Christ in Our Homes.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Religious Training in the Home.

I. Timothy's Parentage (Acts 16:1).

His father was a Greek and his mother a believing Jewess. On his mother's side, at least, he had a godly ancestry. Frequently the influence of the mother makes the son. A pious mother and a pious grandmother were back of Timothy. How thankful to God ought those to be who have been blessed with a godly ancestry. Christian heredity and training are vital elements which go to make up Christian life.

II. Timothy's Training (I Tim. 1:5; II Tim. 3:14, 15).

His wise and faithful mother and grandmother carefully nurtured him in God's Word. He knew the Scriptures from childhood through their training. The faith which came to him through his grandmother and mother did not come through the laws of heredity, but through careful training and teaching.

Three factors were involved in his training:

1. Godly ancestors. Those who have been blessed with godly ancestors should thank God for them. Those who are to be the parents of the coming generation should see to it that their children are not handicapped by a wrong life and wrong teaching.

2. A Christian home. The young of the human race must remain for the longest period under the influence of their parents. Unending existence and exalted destiny demand long and careful training. The goodness and wisdom of God are vitally reflected in this provision for humanity.

III. Timothy's Call (Acts 16:2, 3).

While on his second missionary journey in company with Silas, Paul found Timothy at Lystra near Derbe. Perhaps he had been converted on Paul's first missionary journey, but hearing a favorable report of him by the brethren, Paul circumcised him so as not to offend the Jews, because his father was a Greek. This was in harmony with the decision of the Jerusalem council. It was a case where conciliation was possible without compromise of truth. From this time to the end of Paul's life, Timothy was his devoted companion.

IV. Timothy's Character.

1. Of a retiring disposition (II Tim. 1:8). He had received a gift from God at the hands of the apostle but it needed to be stirred up; that is, fanned into a flame. Such a temperament would mature in touch with a great personality like Paul. Each Christian has a gift from God's hand. It is highly important that the God-given gift be stirred up.

2. Courageous (II Tim. 2:1-8). Having been stirred up and freed from the spirit of fear, he deliberately identified himself with Paul in his sufferings and trials. Courage is greatly needed in doing the Lord's work.

3. Faithful (Phil. 2:20). Timothy tarried in the difficult field of Ephesus through many years. He was the only man of the proper fidelity to minister to the Philippians. The secret of his faithfulness in such a position was his fidelity to God's word.

V. Timothy's Ministry.

1. As a fellow missionary with Paul (Phil. 2:22). Paul testified that Timothy, as a son with a father, had served with him in the gospel.

2. As pastor of the church at Ephesus (I Tim. 1:3, 4). Here Timothy labored for many years, tactfully meeting the difficulties of that great church. The secret of his ministry, as that of all Christian ministers, was that he had implicit confidence in the Scriptures as God's Word, and that he diligently studied them so as rightly to divide them in meeting the needs of those to whom he ministered. This is the only way to meet the needs which arise in the difficult field of a pastor.

Humility

Humility is not only a virtue in itself, but a vessel to contain other virtues—like embers which keep the fire alive that is hidden under it. It empties itself by a modest estimation of its own worth, that Christ may fill it.—Thomas Adams.

Working With God

If I can put one touch of a rosy sunset into the life of any man or woman, I shall feel that I have worked with God.—George Macdonald.

Many Ways of Keeping Track of Passing Time

In the far-off days there were neither clocks nor watches by which the passing time might be measured. The sundial was the only instrument of service in this respect. It appears in the Bible, and was most likely invented by the Egyptians. The Romans were the means of introducing it to the western nations of Europe. Before the Romans obtained knowledge of the instrument, however, they reckoned time by the dropping of water, much in the same way that we time an egg by a sand glass, and it was the duty of a slave to attend and make a sound at the recurrence of a certain number of drops.

Sundials by day and water droppers by night and in cloudy weather were the only means of measuring time.

It is the monks of the Middle Ages to whom we are indebted for the invention of timekeepers by wheels and other mechanism. The early instruments were very primitive affairs, but invention succeeded invention until we have today the most perfect and delicate instruments for telling time.

Statesman's Tact Won Friendship of Dickens

Charles Dickens, as is well known, had very little use for politicians. Indeed, throughout all his writings this disdain, which amounts frequently to utter disgust, is reflected. It was but natural, therefore, that Premier Disraeli should come under his fire.

Referring to the statesman once in private conversation, he spoke bitterly of "that dog" carrying on in parliament. Within a few months he met Disraeli for the first time. He could hardly wait to write to a friend, "What a delightful fellow he is! What a pity it is that he should ever have abandoned literature for politics!"

The incident is significant from two standpoints. It is another striking illustration of how a man big and broad and sympathetic enough to conceive "Dombey and Son," "Little Dorrit" and "David Copperfield" is happy to correct a hastily formed erroneous impression. And it reveals again the suave dexterity of Benjamin Disraeli. It is evident that the premier talked not of politics that day to Charles Dickens, but of literature. And he made of him a friend. Disraeli was always making friends—just like that.—Omaha World-Herald.

"John Bull," Englishman, Depicted by Scotsman

It was not the English, but a Scot who first fastened on the English people the name of John Bull. The man who achieved this feat was a favored physician in ordinary to good Queen Anne, a personal friend of the queen's chief minister, the familiar associate of Swift and Pope. His name was John Arbuthnot, and he wrote, in 1710, "with exquisite humor and ingenuity," "The History of John Bull."

A mere political tract, whatever its value at the moment, does not usually outlast its little day. Arbuthnot was writing chiefly in earnest support of the Tory policy of peace with France, and an end to the long and costly war of the Spanish succession. The more playful portions of his book had to do with the negotiations leading to the parliamentary union of England and Scotland. In the former he brings out the character of John Bull; in the latter with equal good humor, and perhaps a touch of gentle malice, he delineated the Scottish character.—Vancouver Province.

Proofs of Flood Story

Evidence of a great flood, probably the source of the account in the Book of Genesis, has been found at Kish as well as at Ur of the Chaldees, says Dr. George Duncan, an authority on Biblical archeology. The mound known as Beit-Misrim, which is being excavated by Xenia Theological seminary, probably represents a Canaanite royal city conquered by Joshua and mentioned in the Bible as Kirith-Sopher, in the opinion of Doctor Duncan. Evidence of worship of the sun and worship of the serpent has been found at various cities of Biblical lands now being excavated, he points out.

The Paravene

One of the mechanical marvels of the World War, of which we have heard little, was the paravene. This was a steel fish with a very sharp pair of jaws. A line passing in front of a ship's bow had a paravene at each end. As a ship steamed along, the steel fish swam well out on either side about 20 feet below the surface. If the mooring of an anchored mine touched the fish line, it would slide along this line to the fish's jaw, where it was neatly snapped in two. The mine bobbed to the surface, becoming a floating mine, and fairly easy to avoid.—Capt. D. Pratt Manix in St. Nicholas Magazine.

County's Many Attractions

Essex is a county of England so near to London that no visitor in the city should fail to explore the delights of its countryside. There is Chelmsford, first inhabited by the Romans; Chigwell, the scene of Dickens' "Barnaby Rudge"; Colchester with its fine Roman remains and famous oyster feast; Epping forest, whose glades of gnarled oaks are haunted with old legends; Greenstead's old log church where rested the body of St. Edmund in 1013; Thaxted's "Cathedral of Essex," and Waltham's abbey of Norman days.—Exchange.

Poultry Notes

Early chicks require good brooding accommodations.

Hungry hens usually aren't profitable layers. They need a full feed of grain in the afternoon to last them through the long winter night.

Chicks need exercise. Pieces of potato, mangel, cabbage or meat tied to strings hanging within reach of the chicks will often keep them from picking each other's toes.

During the last thirty years the hen has risen from merely a side issue to become a basic part of our agricultural wealth.

Many men on the farm have taken over the farm poultry business after their wives have demonstrated that it is a paying proposition.

Clean, healthy young stock is the key to success in poultry management. Breeding, for instance, can be purchased, but sanitation must be lived, practiced, and continued.

Cod liver oil is usually fed to adult birds in the proportion of one quart to 100 pounds of mash and for chicks one pint to 100 pounds of mash.

Clean chicks, clean soil, clean feed and clean management work wonders in raising thrifty young birds and insuring their future as laying hens.

When breeding stock or chicks are purchased, be sure that they have been produced by flocks which show outstanding vigor and give evidence of good health.

Seeking a Gas Leak, He Loses Mustache

"We invade a new field with vastly improved cars at the lowest prices in our history"

BY WILLIAM J. McANEENY
President, Hudson Motor Car Company

WE have built these models up to and beyond the 1931 standards of performance and quality in every way, and have never in our history offered so many improvements. Quality is greater down to the last detail. Every phase of performance has been greatly improved, and the luxury we have built into the cars is substantially greater than ever before. Motors are larger and more powerful. An efficient system of oil cooling is introduced. A marked improvement in carburetion increases flexibility and economy. Bodies are longer and wider. These cars possess the finest, easiest riding qualities. For the first time, such comfort is available at these low prices. Only great manufacturing economies and the fact that our large resources permit us to take the fullest possible advantage of reduced commodity prices have enabled us to offer the public the greatest combination of quality and low prices in our entire history.

Owner-Management Permits Exclusive Value Advantages

Owner-management enables Hudson-Essex to give you outstanding advantages in quality and price. The men who are now guiding its destinies have been with the company since its inception twenty-two years ago. Its department heads and principal distributors are its controlling owners. Their independence is backed by unusually large resources in capital and plant facilities. It enables Hudson-Essex to lead in design and engineering quality. It permits economies in manufacture and distribution that bring exceptional quality direct to the public at distinct price advantages.
