Our government produces game and fish for stocking purposes, but organized public sentiment is necessary if a community desires to receive fish and game for stocking purposes; be-cause, it is supposed, that an organi-zation will take better care of what is received. The sports of a community are a very vital part of it. Give the rising generation clean sports and they will be less interested in debasing sports. The Carroll County Fair in Operation.

The Same General Features as of other years.

The 38th. annual Fair got under way on Tuesday, for the remainder of the week. The opening day, as usual, was slimly attended, the main feature of the day being the horse and pony show, with pony races and features connected with such attractions. The general features of the Fair were much the same as those of other years with less exhibits in some departments, but those shown were excellent

One of the best exhibits at the Fair was that of Household Arts, and many ladies were liberally rewarded in the prize list. The display of canned fruits and preserves was also exceedingly fine.

The free performances before the grandstand were exceptionally good, and exhibits of cattle were generally conceded to be unusually fine. The Westminster Boy Scouts were on hand as usual, and rendered helpful service throughout the week.

The extreme heat of the week operated decidedly against the attendance, except at night when the grandstand was usually well filled for the enjoyment of the free attractions and the fire works.

The public wedding held on Wednesday night was that of Miss Gernesday night was that of Miss Geraldine Young and Mr. George Adams Snyder, Baltimore, formerly of New Windsor. Also, on Wednesday night, Charles E. Lambert and wife, New Windsor, received prize of $10.00 for having been married for the longest period—over 59 years.

Honorable mention in this feature was won by Mr. and Mrs. John L. Zimmerman, Taneytown, who were married 54 years and 9 months. There were numerous couples on the ground were numerous couples on the ground in the golden wedding class, or close The racing numbers attracted the usual interest of those who like the sport, but it is said that the entries were not as numerous as some former Mayor Howard Jackson, of Balti-more, was present on Wednesday and delivered a brief address. The Mayor is prominently mentioned as a Democratic candidate for Governor. Thursday, usually the big day, attracted a considerably larger attendance than on Wednesday, but was not up to the old-time crowds, partly due, no doubt, to the fact that Friday is now a regular Fair day, and Saturday has scheduled attractions.

The heavy gust that occurred between 4 and 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon, chased hundred toward home long before they intended to go, and must have kept other hundreds away later in the corings, but these who at later in the evening; but those who attended saw the performances and fireworks in comparative comfort, as the rainfall was not sufficient to cause muddy grounds.

"FREEDOM OF CONSCIENCE."

We invite all who are interested in this topic, or "religious tolerance," to read Part I of Judge F. Neal Parke's address at St. Mary's City, in May. The second instalment will appear on the same page (editorial) next week. The subject is not only an interesting one, but a statement of facts concerning the early history of Maryland. It is well worth reading and preserving.

Governor Nice, will pitch the first ball. Walter R. Rudy, State Motor Vehicle Commissioner, will catch. Senator J. David Baile will be the first batter; and former Senator Geo. P. B. Englar, will umpire.

There will be a real game of ball, as the first innings are not expected to stand the exertion and excitement very long, and the umpire may "bench" the lot. A greased pig race is also on the program.

DOG OWNERS FINED FOR NOT BUYING DOG LICENSES.

Arthur Will, Woodbine, found it to be more profitable to purchase a dog license without an argument, following the law forcing the purchase of dog license for all dogs in Carroll Co. He was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Francis Crawford for refusing to purchase a dog license and had a hearing before Police Justice Sherman E. Flanagan in Westminster where he was fined $5 and costs. In addition he was fined $25 and costs and charged with contempt of court. He paid both fines and costs and then purchased a dog license. Dog licenses are one dollar for a male and two dollars for a female dog.

Edgar Kyle, near Woodbine, was arrested on a charge of failing to comply with the law and purchase a dog license. After appearing before Judge Flanagan and paying the cost of the case he was dismissed and then purchased a dog license.—Frederick Post.

MD. SENATORS CAUCUS Senator Baile Indorsed for Bank Examiner.

A meeting of Republican Senators of Maryland was held at Ocean City, on Saturday and Sunday last. Eight on Saturday and Sunday last. Eight of the eleven were present, as follows: Robert Kimble, Allegany; J. David Baile, Carroll; Harry LeGore, Frederick; Clifford L. Friend, Garrett; Wilmer F. Davis, Caroline; Harry T. Phoebus, Somerset; Ernest W. Miller, Washington and O. Straughn Lloyd,

Saturday's meeting extended until 1:00 o'clock Sunday morning, and was devoted partly to a criticism of some of the Governor's appointments. The meeting had been called by Senator Lloyd, of Wicomico, and was in part at least to emphasize the importance of the Senate in party affairs, and in the making of appointments, rather than to severely criticise the Govern-

When the meeting assembled Saturday night the Senators found that the Governor was represented by William P. Lawson, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, and Robert Irvin, the Governor's exand Robert Irvin, the Governor's executive secretary, who found time to interview most of the Senators, singly, and attempted to point out that it had not been possible, within six months, to meet all demands for offices, and that the present administration could be depended on to event ually meet all fair expectations. The three absent members were, Fine,, of Baltimore; Latimer, of Calvert, and Cooksey, of Charles County.

At a Sunday night's session eight of the eleven Senators signed a resolution to appoint J. David Baile, of Carroll to the office of Bank Commissioner, now held by John J. Ghingher, a hold-over from the Ritchie administration. As Senator Baile was the minority floor leader during the recent session of the legislature, is well acquainted with banking, and is popular, his appointment was urged as a strong one.

A copy of the resolution indorsing
Senator Baile was sent to the Governor, along with a letter containing the sentiments of the body as against the gross sales tax, as well as against any further tax on real property. resolution indorsing Senator Baile specifically stated that the purpose of the meeting was to "get together" for good government through harmoniz-ing the party ranks.

After the meeting Governor Nice announced his plans for having all the State Senators, Democratic Republican, as his guests on the State steamer Du Pont next week, and it was indicated, that those who do not agree with his policy for making appointments hope to straighten that matter out with him then.

WHEAT ACREAGE MAY BE IN-CREASED.

In an unexpected move, the AAA, on Wednesday, lessened the wheat production restrictions and started production upgrade. It is said that low that will boost crops.

This last order returns 3,300,000 acres of wheat land to productive land, which means that farmers may plant 95% of their base acreage, instead of 85%.

It is believed that the same ruling will soon be issued on the production of corn and hogs, but it appears that these reductions may require the approval of Congress, and that hearings may be held at which both producer and consumer may be heard.

To some extent these proposed reductions may reflect the wide-spread criticism of the cost of food products to workers, who are not closely connected with benefits for farmers.

Pork Processing Tax Unconstitutional.

Case Likely to be Carried to The Supreme Court.

Federal Judge Calvin W. Chestnut, Baltimore, in the case of John A. Gib-lein, Inc., Baltimore meat packers vs. Lewis M. Milbourne, acting Collector of Internal Revenue, handed down a decision, on Tuesday, holding that the processing tax on hogs, as levied by the Secretary of the Treasury under the AAA, was unconstitutional. The decision was a lengthy one, and gave two reasons for the decision. First, that the AAA constitutes a regulation of agricultural production in the several states, for which purpose Congress has no power to levy a spec-

Second, that Congress delegated unwarranted power to the Secretary of Agriculture in granting to the Secretary the authority to impose the tax The substance of his decision is contained in the following paragraphs: "Coming now to the first important constitutional question we find that it may be stated thus: Is it within the power of Congress to levy an excise tax on pork packers, the proceeds of which are to be paid to farmers for reduction of production for the purpose of raising the price of agricul-tural products and thus, if possible, to restore the normal balance of purchasing power of agricultural commodities in relation to other commodities," the opinion continues.

Judge Chestnut then discusses at length the tax from the point of view as to whether it was for the general welfare or a tax of one class for the benefit of another.

"In form, the tax is not objectionable, as it is an excise uniform throughout the nation and the proceeds are paid into the general treas-

"But in substance the whole amount of the tax is ear-marked for a particular purpose. The primary objective of the act is to increase the farmer's income. The plan of the act is to accomplish this by (1) making voluntary agreements with farmers to reduce their production of certain basic agricultural commodities, including hogs, (2) in consideration of which they are to receive certain rental or benefit payments, (3) the funds for which are to be realized principally from the processing taxes. Stripped of all circumlocution, what is accomplished is to collect a tax from one particular class and pay it over to another particular class, to accomplish a certain particular objective. The pork packer pays and the farmer receives."

CLOVER SEED OUTLOOK.

Throughout a large section of Northern Carroll and Baltimore counties, there are hundreds of acres of bright pink clover fields, indicating that many hundreds of bushels of clover seed will be harvested. This display this year is unusually fine, having the appearance of vast flower

The price for seed may be low, but what of it? A variety of crops, all at least fair is yield, or above it, are far better than short crops no matter what the market price of the grain. Business men of all kinds are in the same situation. Big business same situation. Big business and big profits rarely travel together. The main thing, is to have a worthwhile business to follow.

TRUCK LICENSES REVOKED.

Orders were issued on Monday by the Public Service Commission to revoke the license tags of trucks used by Merle Keilholtz to haul milk from Carroll County to Baltimore, on the grounds that he did not have authority to operate such a milk route. The action was taken after a hearing on a complaint by Otto Beall, that Keilholtz was hauling milk from Beall's territory.

SUMMER READING.

Naturally, pressing out-door work, and seasonable indoor occupations during the mid-sum-mer months, prevent our spending the usual amount of time in reading. There is a certain amount of physical discomfort connected with the season, that slows up our mental activities, and we read less and this is a handicap that we should overcome, rather than lazily submit

However, it is unwise to accept too easily the idea that we "do not have the time to read," for reading is a continuous schooling and lessons are never ceasing in their appearance. So, if we want to have "good marks" in keeping up with our big class, we must also keep up a certain amount of

EASTERN SHORE POLITICS, AS IT IS PLAYED.

Partisan politics is a dish especially relished on the Eastern Shore by both Democrats and Republicansalong with oysters and crabs on the side—the one perhaps being good for the soul of man, and the other for his body; and when the crop of one or the other of these necessaries of life is short, happiness does not reign supreme until substitutes are found.

Something like this is the situation now, and Gov. Nice and Senator Vesey (Dem.) Worcester County, are the targets. The Governor offended the faithful by continuing the Senator in a position on the State Roads Commission that he held before he was elected Senator, as well as before Governor Nice was elected. Senator Vesey was given a furlough for the session of the legislature, and at the end of this furlough resumed the position to which he had been apppointed by Gov. Ritchie.

the natural result that follow a spree of any sort. It has reached the "day after" stage, and is trying to avoid the disagreeable sobering up pains connected with paying for its spending spree. So, it would avoid, if possible, the levying of more taxes in the "lower brackets."

Borrowing money was easy for a while; picking it up here and there where it was not so hard to find, and "soaking the rich," were pleasurable enough procedures, but their limit has about been wrecked. And now, as those who had been helped so lavishly want the process to continue indefinitely, the ways and means of doing so are not so easily found.

Of course, Congressmen like to play Santa Claus and continue the spending spree, but want to go easy on those in the "lower brackets"—which means those not in the "rich" class-because they are the class that make, or unmake, Congressmen, and have this while our M. C.'s were gleefully handing out the prize packages within their districts, as though the supply would last forever, but they are now feeling that "forever" for a good many of them may end soon after November 1, 1936.

And so, some of them are begining to be wise to the fact that it would have been better not to have indulged in such a long spree of spending, and are now willing to take the pledge not to do it again; but, this does not cure the headache of "the day after."

What is happening to Congress on a big scale, is exactly what happens to intemperance in any degree, everywhere and under all circumstances, when attempts are made to improve on, or radically interfere with the operation of natural laws, as they have that he not only wrote, but lived. come down to us from the bginning of time and events.

99 FARM ELECTRIFICATION.

Creation of the Federal Rural Electrification Administration has focused public attention on the job of bringing power to the farm. But, as Hudson W. Reed of the United Gas Improvement Company, recently pointed out, a real understanding of rural electrification's possibilities and limitations is essential to sound planning toward that end.

The electric industry has already made great strides in electrifying farms-and Mr. Reed says that it is ready and eager to co-operate to the fullest possible extent with the government in making additional progress, but that in doing that it wishes to know how far it can proceed along normal business lines.

The problem of developing rural electrification has three phases: First, to determine those areas where farm density is great enough to make construction of new lines feasible, even though not immediately profitable; second, to locate such owners as are able to finance the wiring of buildings and the purchase of necessary appliances; and, third, to develop means of selling power in competition with farm machinery, automobiles and other desirable commodities or services.

Contrary to the belief of some, the predominant part of farm labor-excepting certain highly specialized are not as thick as cantaloupes on the kinds of farms, comprising but a small percentage of the total farmscannot be performed electrically. The main body of the letter is personal, but we are Congress is just now undergoing publishing the non-personal paragraphs, at our request, as we consider them an intelligent synopsis of the situation in general, as reflected by wide-spread public sentiment; and as coming from the far South, seems especially interesting.

FREEDOM OF CONSCIENCE.

(Address at St. Mary's City, May 18th., 1935 made by Judge Francis Neal Parke on the presentation by the counties of the State of Maryland of the Statue erected to Freedom of Conscience.)

PART I. We come to-day from the far flung plains, hills and mountains of a fair and bounteous State to celebrate the great principle of religious toleration which was here first established; and

and

We are of a populous State where, in peace, contentment and harmony religious liberty, live an industrious, prosperous and enterprising people who are engaged in the arts, science, industry, commerce and agri-culture. In the midst of our ease and security, may it ever be remembered the perils of sea encountered, the weariness and fatigue endured, the courage and constancy displayed before our fathers found this refuge in a lonely wilderness, inhabited by savable spot, we possess the beauty of the scene, without the shadow of a fear, and are left free to picture the bejeweled and mirrored Bay; the clear waters of the lovely river quickly emptying from the Bay into the great Potomac which flowed quiet between its wide banks, and so astonished the settlers that they wrote: "The Thames compared with it can scarcely be considered a rivulet. It is not rendered impure by marshes, but on each bank of solid earth ries beautiful groves of trees, not checked up with an undergrowth of brambles and bushes, but as if laid out by hand, in a manner so open that you might easily drive a four horse chariot in the midst of the trees." In imagination, we may live their lives, share their sentiments, sympathize in their privations and sufferings, participate in their dangers, exult in their dauntless determination and rejoice in their successes and triumphs; and animated by their example, become more resolute in the purpose to transmit to posterity our inheritance of religious toleration as the most just and the most wise of all principles. The Christian world, however, was slow in accepting the principle of religious toleration. The first part of the 17th. century was a period ferment and foreboding among the people of England. Their ancient rights to trial by jury and to the writ of habeas corpus were question-The power to levy taxes without the vote of parliament was asserted In my humble opinion, the South is being treated like a guinea pig in a prisoned the religious recusant in denial of every fundamental right of exercise thereof within this province the subject. 'vail, and be assured by habeas corpus, by trial by jury, by an immunity against search and seizure in the home, and by a guaranty that no levy of taxes, nor grants of aids or subsidies, nor appropriations of private property would be made save by the lawful representatives of the people in general assembly.

The charter of Avalon for a settlement in Newfoundland was the one first granted to Lord Baltimore for his purpose, but the rigor of the climate caused him to abandon this situation, and to seek a more suitable one to the south. After he had obtained his grant of the pleasant country of the Chesapeake Bay, he had his chapter prepared but died before it had pass-ed the Great Sea, and on June 20, 1632, it was issud to his eldest son, Cecilius Calvert, the second Lord Baltimore. The charter was similar in substance to that of Avalon, and guaranteed to the freemen all the rights, franchises and privileges of an Englishman. While the charters of Elizabeth, of James I and of Charles I for other colonies in America secured to those colonists the immunities and rights of an Englishman, the charters of Avalon and of Maryland were the first to provide for the right of representative assemblies. The terms of their charters attested the fixed design of the first Lord Baltimore and of his son to assure the in-estimable blessings of civil and religious liberty to the colonists.

The Charter of Maryland declared that "nothing should be done contrary to God's Holy Religion," and the Proprietary promised, in his original proclamation inviting adventurers to the Province, freedom of religion "to all Christian men" He subsequently asked the Puritans of Massachusetts to emigrate to Maryland and offered them lands and privileges and "free libertie of Religion." By a proclama-tion issued after the first settlement he had forbidden "all unreasonable disputations in point of religion tending to the disturbance of the public peace and quiet of the colony, and the opening of faction in religion." terms of the Charter, the proclama-tions, engagements and official con-duct of the Proprietary demonstrate that, from the beginning, the fundamental principle of the constitution of the colony was liberty of conscience. The affairs of the Province did not develop in harmony with the design of its Proprietary. There were religious controversies, internal dissensions and conflict of factions. In a final effort to bring peace and order, contentment and prosperity to the distracted Province, the second Lord Baltimore determined in 1648 to reorganize the government, and pre-pare a code of laws. The measures adopted were commissions, official oaths, conditions of plantation and a code of sixteen laws, which when adopted and enforced by the freemen of the Province would protect them in the ancient rights, liberties and guarantees of Englishmen. The commis sion to the governor prohibited him from giving his assent to any laws that might in anywise concern religion, without special and farther war-rant of the Proprietary. The oath of office exacted of the governor and the five members of the council was that "any person whatsoever, in the said Province, professing to believe in Jesus Christ should not be troubled, molested or discountenanced in respect of his religion nor his free exercise thereof within the Province." In addition, the oath of the Governor contained a distinct paragraph which solemnly bound him, as the Proprietary's Lieutenant in the Province, not to "make any difference of persons in conferring offices, rewards or favors * * * for or in respect of their said religion respectively" and to apply the power and authority of the office of governor to relieve and protect the individual and to punish the persecutor should any other officer or person whatsoever molest or disturb, merely for or in respect of his religion, any one who professed to believe in Jesus Christ. The prescribed oath of fidelity to the Pro-prietary, which was to be taken by every inhabitant of the Province, and any who should later come, was will never deny, but will ever defend, and maintain his Lordship's rights under his charter, not in any ways understood to infringe or prejudic libertie of Conscience in point of Re-ligion to himself and all other per-

A component part of these provis-ions was the Act concerning Religion. It was the first Act passed, and was enacted by the General Assembly on April 21st., 1649. The Secretary, Thomas Hatton, recorded the Act, and in the margin was the notation that it was confirmed by Lord Baltimore on August 26th., 1650, and the certificate was signed by Philip Calvert.

The Act imposed penalties for denying the Trinity, using reproach-ful words concerning the mother of the Saviour, the Apostles or Evangelist, or with respect to designated religions and religious matters and for Sabbath breaking. It then made this memorable declaration and enactment:

"And whereas, the inforcing of the conscience in matters of religion, hath frequently fallen out to be of dangerous consequences in those common wealths where it hath been practised, and for the more quiet and peaceable government of this province, and the better to preserve mutuall love and

unity amongst the inhabitants heere, Bee it therefore also by the lord proprietary with the advice and as-sent of this assembly ordained and enacted, except as in this present act is before declared and set forth, that no person or persons whatsoever with-in this province, or the islands, ports, harbours, creeks or havens thereunto belongink, professing to believe Jesus Christ, shall from henceforth be any waies troubled, molested or discountenanced, for or in respect to his, or her religion, nor in the free or exercise of any other religion against his or her consent, so that they be not unfaithful unto the lord proprietary, or molest or conspire against the civil government, estab-

The penalty for a violation of the statute was the payment of threefold lamages to the party so wronged or molested, and a fine of 20 shillings for the use of the Proprietary and his heirs and of the party injured, in equal parts. If the offender refuse or be unable to recompense the party wronged or to satisfy the fine, he was wronged or to satisfy the line, he was to be "severely punished by publicate whipping and imprisonment during the pleasure of the Lord Proprietary or his lieutenant or Chief Governor of this province for the time being without bail or maniprize.'

By this act the pledge of liberty of conscience for the colonists is at once fulfilled by the Proprietary, and ratified and confirmed by the freemen of the Province in General Assembly convened. It is true that the Statute of Toleration confined its protection to those who professed the Christian religion, but from the foundation of Maryland in 1634 until 1689, no man was ever molested because of his religious convictions, with the exceptions of the brief intervals during the occupation by Ingle in 1644-46, the period of the Protector's Commissioners, in 1654-58, and the usurpation of Fendall in 1659-1660, but no one was ever put to death in Maryland on account of his religion. No record is found of the persecution of a Jew for his faith. There is, however, evidence of the grant to one of full citizenship and of the privilege to trade; and of his service as a jury. The and of his service as a juror. The founder of Maryland maintained and fortified the right to liberty of person and security of property, but, with a statesman's vision and grasp, he comprehended that man regarded these priceless rights lightly in com-parison with the right to worship God according to the dictates of his con-science. The pages of English history reflected the truth that without freedom of worship both life and property were at the mercy of intolerance. first Proprietary and the second Lord Baltimore had been harrowed by knowledge of successive religious persecutions which had but proved anew that the blood of its martys was the seed of the persecuted church. They perceived that faith is an act of the will, which is untrollable by law, and that if men be forced to profess what they do not believe they become un-happy traitors of their souls, and their false allegiance is not a secure foundation for the state.

CLEANLINESS BEST FOR CHICKEN YARD

Five-Point Program Is Outlined by an Expert.

By W. C. Monahan, Extension Poultryman, Massachusetts State College.—WNU Service. A five-point program of cleanliness followed by successful poultrymen include clean chicks, clean brooders, clean land, clean feeding and watering, and clean management.

"Clean" chicks are chicks which are free from pullorum disease and are hatched from healthy, vigorous, well

Brooder houses should be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected before chicks are ever put in them, and they should be kept clean by frequent changes of litter on the floor.

Summer range for growing birds should be land which has not been used for this purpose for at least two years. The range should not be overcrowded with birds.

Feeding the birds from hoppers is more sanitary and also more economical than any other method of feeding. On the range, hoppers and watering places should be moved frequently, to keep any one spot from becoming contaminated.

Eliminating runty, unthrifty chickens is helpful in preventing the spread, of disease. Keeping chicks away from old stock also is advisable. Preventing visitors walking through the houses and over the range is another precaution taken by most men, as a means of keeping out possible infection.

New Breed of Hens Lay

Eggs That Mark Chicks Canada has contributed materially to the making of what is claimed as a new hen which has been evolved by agricultural scientists at Cambridge university, England. The bird, at the moment, is the object of considerable attention in the old country; concerning it the Spectator says:

Few successes of greater interest and practical possibilities have been won in the field of agricultural biology than the making of the new Cambridge hen, Her chicks declare their sex at birth, because the males and the females are differently marked. This is a great advantage to the poultry industry, since chicks travel safely and well only during the first two days of their life. The new breed, known as a "Cambar," was developed at Cambridge, England, by the application of Men-delian principles. By the use of the Canadian Bared Rock, supplied by the University of British Columbia to Cambridge university, both silver and golden Cambars have been evolved. They are prolific layers of large colored eggs, whilst still possessing the virtue of sex-linked chicks. These chicks mark an epoch in the scientific breeding of poultry.

Bronze Birds Need Greens

More vitamin A is required by the bronze variety of turkeys than by White Leghorn chickens, studies conducted at the University of California disclose. It has been shown that turkeys require an 8 per cent level of the entire ration of high quality alfalfa leaf meal to promote normal growth to 30 weeks of age and to prevent symptoms of A-vitaminosis, a vitamin A deficiency disease. White Leghorn chickens grow normally and show no symptoms of the disease on a 4 per cent level of the alfalfa meal, according to experiments made at the university.-Montreal Herald.

Ducks Grow Rapidly

Poultrymen who raise ducks have noted one thing-that they eat lots of feed and grow rapidly. Generally speaking there is profit in feeding good breeds of ducks for market so long as they are growing. Where the profit disappears is after they have reached maturity and keep on eating voraciously. To come out on the right side of the ledger with ducks it is, therefore, necessary to market them as soon as they are full grown and this points out the advisability of hatching them late if one plans to sell them on the holiday markets.

Meat Spots in Eggs

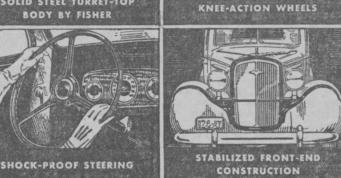

Meat spots in eggs which later may develop into rots, are something over which the poultryman has little, if any, control. It is simply the rupture of a blood vessel somewhere from the time the egg leaves the ovary until it comes down the oviduct. It does not necessarily mean that the hen which laid them will repeat the laying of eggs with meat, or blood spots, and the only method of controlling the output is to have eggs candled before sending them to market.

Telling Sex of Goslings

This is one of the difficult problems for the inexperienced goose raiser. Ganders have longer necks, coarser heads and slightly higher pitched voices. However there is but one absolute test, not so easy to make. This is in examination of the vent which will disclose the sexual organs-a little experience will teach this art which ene may master with patience. Goslings are now sexed at a day old same as chicks, observes a writer in the Rural New-Yorker.

Earth Is Not Finished

Like Sculptor's Model The earth is not "finished," in the sense that a sculptor would apply the word to a statue of his, asserts a writer in the New York Times. The forces that began to shape the earth when it was but a liquid ball are still at work, although they are not as violent now as they were then. It is as normal for the earth to shake as it is for clouds to sweep across the sky.

The process of faulting, which means the redistribution of the earth's materials in an effort to establish equilibrium, is not likely to end for many million years. And when it does the earth will be "finished" in the slang sense of the term. It will be a mere cinder drifting in space around the sun, with no heaving oceans, no green trees, no life. When stability comes man will be extinct.

To a seismologist earthquakes reveal the internal structure of the earth. They are somewhat like X-rays that make the bones stand out on a photograph of the chest. The records reveal the character of the waves that course through the trembling earth plainly enough. They are highly complex-these earthquake waves. They move up and down like waves in the ocean, crosswise like those in a fluttering flag, back and forth like sound

Ikon Painting Russian Art

Ikon painting is one of the few original Russian arts. Before the revolution every household, no matter how poor, had at least one religious picture before which an oil lamp constantly burned. The most famous center of ikon painting was Palekh. A'remote little colony, 30 kilometers from the nearest railroad line, produced works of rare art. These paintings found their way all over Russia, into the palaces of czars and princes, as well as the homes of common people.

Gulfs Not Salt Water Bodies

Contrary to general belief, the varicus gulfs of the Baltic sea are not salt water bodies. Through contact with the Atlantic the water is brackish, but the discharge of the numerous rivers into the gulfs keeps it sufficiently fresh to freeze as readily, or nearly so, as the Great Lakes, according to a writer in the Chicago Tribune. Again, the weather is much colder and ice floes or packs 20 to 30 feet in thickness are not uncommon. At Riga the prevailing northwest storms frequently force the cakes of ice one on top of the other until the harbor floor, 25 feet below, is reached. Yet, this harbor formerly had a closed season as long as that of the Great Lakes.

The Handbook of American Indians says that not all of the tribes of Indians were accustomed to using salt, whether from difficulty of procuring it, the absence of the habit, a repugnance for the mineral, or for religious reasons, it is not always possible to say. Salt exists in enormous quanti-

RADIUM, JEKYLL AND HYDE AMONG METALS

Capable of Curing Disease and of Causing It.

Washington .- Radium, most precious of metals, an ounce of which is worth nearly as much as a ton of gold, recently has been brought to the fore again through new advances in its use in the treatment of disease.

"This silvery-white substance, which few people ever have seen, is a sort of Doctor Jekyll and Mr. Hyde among the metals," says the National Geographic society. "While its principal use is in the treatment of dreaded cancer, in many cases of which it is a saver of life, radium also is capable of causing cancers and a fatal form of anemia when not properly handled.

"Recently the largest 'radium pack' for treating cancer ever used in the United States was put to work at Bellevue hospital, New York city," continues the bulletin. "It contains five grams of radium and is expected to be particularly useful in treating deepseated cancers.

"It is estimated that there are about 250 grams of radium in the United States at present, nearly half of the total of 600 grams or approximately one and one-quarter pounds that has been produced in the world.

Worth Million an Ounce.

"Radium first was produced from pitchblende ores of Bohemia after its discovery in 1898. Since then prospectors have found radium-bearing deposits in many parts of the world. The most recent important 'radium strike' was in the Great Bear lake district in the wilderness of northern Canada, farther north than the Yukon gold fields.

"So valuable is the ore that it is profitable to fly out loads of it by airplane to civilization for refining. Today the world's principal sources of radium are the Great Bear lake deposits and mines in the Belgian Congo, Africa. There also are radium deposits in the United States, in Colorado and Utah. They are not rich enough to be worth working at present prices, but form a sort of radium reserve available in case other supplies are cut off. "The value of radium is fabulous. It is worth about $1,000,000 per ounce at present prices. Gold is now valued at $35 per ounce in the United States, and platinum approximately the same. In small amounts radium may at times command a price of as much as $75 per milligram, the thousandth part of a gram. In past years its price has been much higher than now, reaching $125,000 per gram during the World war.

Used in Luminous Paint.

"Aside from the treatment of cancer, the chief use of radium is in luminous paint, used on watch and clock dials, for electric switches and keyholes, and in wartime, for gun sights and compass cards for use where lights would betray presence of troops.

"The radiations which make radium both useful in treating disease and dangerous when handled without protection, are caused by the explosion of atoms in the radium. Slowly radium is dissipating itself away by these explosions, though it takes from 1,690 to 2,500 years for half of a piece of radium to dissipate itself.

"The exploding atoms send out three different kinds of radiations or raysalpha particles, positively charged, traveling up to 12,000 miles per second; beta rays, negatively charged electrons traveling with almost the speed of light; and gamma rays, electro-magnetic waves which also travel nearly as fast as light.

'In treating diseases, an emanation or by-product of radium usually is used instead of the radium itself, because it is far more radioactive than radium. One of the most frequently used is radon, a gas which can be released from radium by heating or dissolving it. A very small quantity of radon is as radioactive as a large amount of radium. Radon can be produced without the original radium being scattered or lost."

Inscribed Terra Cotta Cones Back Up Testament

Washington.-New proof of the accuracy of the Old Testament as a historical record has been obtained by the Smithsonian institution.

The findings—three inscribed terra cotta cones found in a temple wall at Ur of the Chaldees-were memorial tablets buried to perpetuate the name of the king, Libit-Ishtar, fifth ruler of the Isin dynasty who reigned about 2075

Included in the cuneiform inscriptions were references to several early cities, mentioned before in the Book of Genesis. The Smithsonian said their existence based on the Biblical reference was never considered conclusive, however.

The four-teenth chapter of Genesis gives Ur as the birthplace of Abraham, presumably in the reign of Rim-Sin or of Hammurabi, 2000 to 1900 B. C.

THE FARM BUDGET

By DAN H. OTIS. Agricultural Director, American Bankers Association

Inventories aid in the formation of a farm budget. Some banks, as well as the Farm Credit Administration, lining in advance the method of using production loans. Under this plan provision is made for monthly expenditures and funds are granted to the borrower in accordance with the budget plan. The budget helps to show how loans can be repaid.

recommend out

With the accumulated data from previous inventories and budgets, budget making becomes easier and more accurate and valuable. As one branch of the farming plant requires more expenditure, such as for new machinery, fencing, livestock, etc., it may be necessary to limit other branches in order to meet these pressing requirements. The budget helps to formulate a financial program. It is of special importance in arranging to meet special or large expenditures. If the income and expenditures are carefully budgeted it prevents the spending of money needed for interest and taxes before the time of their payment arrives. It helps to provide a reserve. The Agricultural Commission of the American Bankers Association feels that this type of work is so important that special emphasis has been placed upon the field of farm inventories. hudgets and credit statements as one of its national projects for farm aid.

BRITISH EMPIRE'S SCHEME IS UPSET BY DIVORCE SUIT

Plan to Put Head of 100 Million Moslems on Throne Is Balked.

London.—The divorce suit instituted by Hon. Loel Guinness against his lovely wife has thrown a monkeywrench into British diplomatic dealings with the spiritual head of 100,-000,000 Moslems and placed the government in an awkward position.

For months a way has been sought to realize the desire of the Aga Khan, powerful No. 1 Mehammedan of the world, to either become the temporal head of a state or have his son installed on a throne. Britain has not been blind to the advantages of an arrangement which would place the spiritual head of all Moslems under its protection, and the list of eastern principalities under the British flag has been gone over endlessly for an opening.

Now, in naming the Aga Khan's son, Prince Ali, as co-respondent in a divorce suit, Hon. Loel has made it difficult for the government to continue its maneuverings in behalf of Prince Ali without outraging British moralists. Also, Moslems themselves are in a state of indignation over the way the prince's name is being dragged through the mire of a British divorce scandal. Mayfair Scandalized.

To the half-American M. P. and heir to the Guinness brewing millions, the prince was just another home-wrecker. and he said as much when he brought suit against his wife, the former Joan Barbara Yarde-Buller, eldest sister of Baron Churston. No defense has been offered by Prince Ali, man-about-town and gentleman-jockey, whose horse Bahram recently won the Derby.

The divorce has scandalized Mayfair as violently as Guinness' marriage in 1927 titillated it. Before the war Guinness, the son of the fabulously wealthy Benjamin Guinness, lived in New York and took a prominent part in the artistic life of Greenwich Village. During the war he served in the Irish Guards. His marriage to Lady Yarde-Buller was celebrated in Westminster Abbey in circumstances usually enjoyed only by royalty and members of high nobility. A son was born, and for seven years the couple were generally thought to be ideally happy. Then Lady Yarde-Buller met the handsome young Indian and, according to her husband's charges, succumbed to his oriental love-making.

The prince is blessed with fabulous wealth and no official duties, for his father is a Khan (king) without a

Wed to European.

Although he is worshiped as a god in India the Aga Khan has neither visited India in many years nor upheld its traditions. His first wife and the prince's mother was a European, an Italian noblewoman, Signore Theresa Magliano. She died a few years after the marriage. In 1930 the Aga Khan, with disregard for snobbish standards, bestowed his title upon the daughter of a French innkeeper, Mlle. Marcelle Carron.

Prolonged absence from his own country has been no privation to the Aga Khan. He has taken to occidental life with relish and is today no different save in the darkness of his complexion than any other European sportsman and millionaire. But no Moslem visitor to the West dares upproach him with anything but the deepest reverence. This exalted position will pass to his erring son unless the divorce scandal finally affects the dynasty.

Was First a Boy, Then Girl, Now a Boy Again

San Francisco.—Science made a mistake in determining the sex of an orphanage child and then corrected itself through an operation to make the child a boy, it was revealed at the convention of the American Urological association here.

The account of the error and its correction formed part of the exhibit of Dr. Hugh Hampton Young, of Baltimore

Until the age of seven the child was reared as a boy in a boys' orphanage. Then it was decided the child was a girl and she was placed in an institution for girls. Later an operation subposedly eliminated male characteria

As the child grew older she increasingly expressed male tendencies. Her main delight was baseball. She also liked to climb trees. Orphanage attendants marked her as a tomboy.

When she reached the height of six feet and developed a beard and had muscles it was decided to perform another operation.

Now the subject at eighteen is definitely masculine. He wears male at-

Court Withdrawal

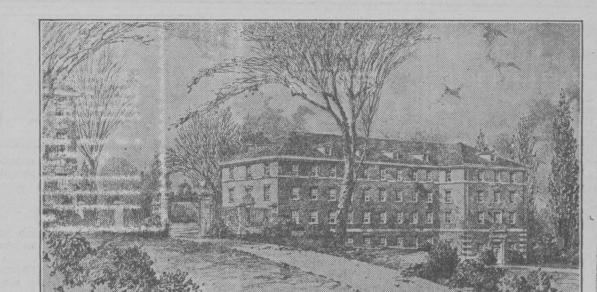

"You complain that you have had to support your wife's family?" the court questioned the man seeking a divorce.

"Yes, your honor." "How much of a family has she?" "Four children, your honor."

"Who is their father?" "I am, your honor."

OLD CRIME SOLVED BY SCRAP OF PAPER

Confession Forced by Prison Warden's Find.

Paris .- "Don't forget that you were not in Paris on September 16, 1932." These words, scribbled on a scrap of paper which was detected by a warden as it was being passed by one prisoner to another in the prison at St. Julien-en-Genevoise, France, led to the definite solution of a murder mystery which for three years had nonplused the keenest detectives of the Surete and caused a great sensation when the crime was committed.

Another consequence was the sending of three men to Devil's island, in French Guiana, for 20 years. They were Rene Anchisi, an Italian; Pierre Guilleminot and Serge Sauvageot, both Swiss.

The victim was Donald Ross, the fifty-six-year-old representative on the continent of a Glasgow firm who lived at Maisons-Laffitte, near Paris. Mr. Ross was also a member of the British Intelligence service, and this fact it was that surrounded the investigation into his death with an atmosphere of peculiar mystery and drama. The men now convicted had been arrested on charges of burglary and efforts had been made to connect them with the Ross murder. There was nothing to go upon, and their efforts, the detectives admitted, probably would have proved abortive but for the telltale scrap of paper. This forced the men to confess. They said they met Mr. Ross at the Gare St. Lazare in Paris. He was intoxicated, and railway employees asked them to see that he alighted at Maisone Laffitte station. They had taken the last train with the object of carrying out a burglary at Mantes, but, considering Mr. Ross an easy victim, changed their plans and accompanied

There Mr. Ross imprudently invited them to take refreshments. When he was still more inebriated, they demanded money, and when he refused fell upon him. After a desperate struggle they bound him with wire from the wireless, stuffed a gag in his mouth and left. When his son came home next day Mr. Ross had died of asphyxia.

Prisoner Jams Lock and Police Do Jail Break

Reading, Pa.-Police were forced to do a little "jail breaking" to give one of their own prisoners a hearing. Turnkey Robert Munz tried in vain to open a cell door. The fact that the prisoner could not be released did not prevent his hearing. Officers gave him his hearing through the bars. The prisoner was found guilty and in default of fine was sentenced to jail for ten days. Before he could be taken to the Berks county prison a locksmith was called in. The lock was jammed with a piece of wood.

Heavy Newsprint Demand

Depletes U. S. Reserves Newsprint is largely finely ground wood with enough of the fibrous pulp added to make it hold together. In addition it contains clay, to give it body, and sizing material, to keep it from soaking up and blurring ink the way blotting paper does.

Unfortunately, writes Thomas M. Beck in the Chicago Tribune, paper made from wood pulp is inferior in certain respects to that made from linen. For one thing, it deteriorates with age much more rapidly. For this reason, paper that is to be used for permanent records still is made from rags.

The phenomenal growth since the World war of the industrial application of synthetic cellulose derivatives, such as rayon, lackers, plastics, and cellophane, opened up a new field for the use of wood pulp. Originally about half of the rayon on the market was wood. Since the pulp used for this purpose must be of exceptionally pure quality to compete with the other source of cellulose, cotton linters, however, it is hardly likely that this use ever will consume an amount of wood pulp comparable to that required by the paper industry.

Not all types of wood make good paper. Virtually all of the pulp used comes from spruce. The millions of tons of newsprint required annually by American newspapers have seriously depleted this country's reserves of this timber, with the result that since about 1900 there has been a steady shift of the paper industry to Canada.

Mexican Hairless Dogs

Wear Many Odd Designs The dog known as the Mexican hairless was brought to the shores of Mexico from the West Indies by the Conquistadors in the Fifteenth century, and is closely related to hairless dogs found in such other southern localities as Africa, Spain, South America, India, Manila and Indo-China, says the Kennel Gazette. Many superstitions and fables surround the Mexican hairless, and many of these have their focal point in the peculiarly speckled skin of the breed. The speckles and spots sometimes develop into the most fantastic designs, such as sunbursts, circles and squares, stripes and often pictures.

Even letters, as varied and numerous as those of our government, appear on their skins. It was an ancient belief that the prophets who could read these designs and letters could foretell the fates of entire Aztec

Another belief, and one held by many Americans when the Mexican hairless first became popular in the United States many years ago, was to the effect that the dog was a panacea for human ills-that it could cure whomever it slept with.

The Busy Chinch Bug The chinch bug belongs to the group of insects possessing piercing, sucking beaks instead of chewing mouths. It is this little beak that does the damage, and once an army attacks a plant stock it is a matter of only a few minutes before it wilts and dies. The adult bug winters in the shelter of farm s and field stubble. In spring it produces its first offspring and these remain in the fields until about hav harvesting time, when they start their food migrations to green cornfields, traveling along the ground like an invading army.

"When in Rome," Etc.

The expression "When in Rome do as the Romans do" is not to be found in the Bible. It is attributed to St. Ambrose, bishop of Milan, in the Fourth century. In a letter of advice to St. Augustin he wrote: "When I am here (at Milan) I do not fast on a Saturday; when I am at Rome, I fast on a Saturday." As quoted by Jeremy Taylor, his advice was: "When you are in Rome, live in the Roman style; when you are elsewhere, live as they live there." St. Augustine also refers to this in his own writ-

Build Fences of Fire

All towns and villages near the great tropical jungles of Africa start forest fires at a certain time each yearwhen the wind is right-to keep the surrounding plant world and its animals, reptiles and insects, from encroaching upon them. These fires, although well under control, sometimes develop into vast sheets of flame more than two miles in width.-Collier's

A SPOT FOR TWO

By M. B. TOMSON © McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

TASTILY the girl attached herself to his arm just as he was sauntering through a doorway.

"Darling, you've got to rescue me," she said gaily.

For a moment there was a trace of amused surprise on her face as she saw his puzzled glance.

"My error," she laughed. "Sorry." I thought you were some one else. But you'll do. I've only got to be rescued from some one who's had designs on my toes most of the evening, and I simply can't afford to lose them this early in the season."

There was about her the poised confidence of the attractive female whose garb and face are impeccably right and who knows it.

"Come and talk to me while I give the outraged toes a rest," she invited, leading him to an unoccupied corner.

She seated herself in a deeply upholstered chair, tossed a ravishingly beaded bag on the tiny table in front of her and glanced across to where he had seated himself.

"Anyway," she said, "I've seen you before somewhere."

"Somewhere, I know," he prevaricated charmingly. "Let me see." She was thoughtful.

"At the Brayton's last week, perhaps?" "I was there," he acknowledged. "I, too, but I left before the excitement. Were you still there when Dora's jewels were discovered miss-"Unfortunately, no," he shook his head ruefully. "I always miss out on the excitement'

"So do I," she sighed. "Anyway, that's probably where I saw you. And now that we're out of that beastly jam, tell me about yourself." "Nothing much to tell," he said promptly. "I really don't belong to all this."

He glanced in the vicinity of palms, orchids, gardenias, orchestras and gala evening ensembles. "I'm Harry Gordon, just a chap from the wide-open western plains. I came East to take some post-graduate work at Cornell and somehow or other my name was placed on the list they use for the stag lines at these brawls. That's how I blossomed into higher social circles where I dance to pay for my supper."

She appraised him thoughtfully. Darned good looking, he was. And his dress suit fitted him faultlessly. "You might tell me who you are,"

he suggested. "Cynthia Baden," she smiled. Baden, he thought quickly. Yes, there was a Baden somewhere in the back of his mind. Rather on the fringe they were, if he remembered rightly and he probably did. Money? Yes, he was sure of that.

"It was my good fortune that it turned out to be me to whom you ran for rescue instead of the person you thought I was," he sighed contentedly.

"The evening I rescued a very beautiful lady will be one of the memories I'll cherish when I go out West again." "You're not going West too soon, are you?" she smiled at him provocatively. "Any time I'd go would be too soon

. . now," he assured her gallantly. "There, I knew you were a kindred spirit," she said approvingly, placing a white hand on her throat. "It was just fate that . . ." she paused suddenly and fingered her throat

Her eyes were suddenly apprehen-

"My . . . my pearls," she gasped; "they're gone!" Thank God his facial muscles never betrayed him.

"Your pearls?" he repeated with exactly the right intonation to meet the circumstance, while his face bore the exactly required touch of surprise and solicitude. "Oh, I say, are you sure?" But his brain worked nimbly and coolly as always.

Something queer about this, he reviewed swiftly. Danny had placed the pearls in the agreed jardiniere, where he had recovease of long practice, deposited the pearls in less time than it takes to tell about it.

'They're not here," she turned to him and he was sure there was suspicion in her gaze.

"Certain you wore them tonight?" he asked solicitously.

"Yes," she hesitated; "Yes, I am." "Suppose you call up home first and check up," he suggested briskly. "Mistakes do happen. If they're not there, we'll report it immediately." He was sparring for time.

When she reported her loss officially, it would be a simple matter to suggest almost into thin air that her bag be inspected and the suggestion would be carried along. Nobody would remember where it originated but under the circumstances, everyone would take credit unto themselves for their perspicacity. "Tell you what," she said, collecting herself; "here, give me a piece of paper and a pencil. You call up my house for me, like a lamb," she said, writing busily. "Ask for Suzanne. She's my maid. If she isn't there, ask for Lumpkins, the butler. Ask him to look around my dresser. "There's the number and all the information," she handed the paper to him hurriedly. "While you attend to that, I'll have somebody check up on anyone who may have left suddenly. See you later." On his way towards the hall, Dandy Jim concentrated on what was the wisest move for him now. He had evidently allayed her suspicions.

The Dandy had nerve. He'd telephone and then return and make his report. He would be free from all suspicion and because the pearls were in the possession of their owner and would be found practically immediately, he wouldn't have the police to cope with.

"Where's the telephone?" he asked of a liveried attendant. He walked into the telephone closet and glanced at the piece of paper he had carried carefully crushed in his Momentarily his control over his facial muscles relaxed and he cursed silently but fervently as he absorbed the message. "Thanks for the pearls, Dandy. The person they really belong to hasn't discovered her loss yet, and I'm on my way before she does!'

Save Fur Life in Canada;

Hope to Aid the Eskimos The increasing demand for fur and the consequent high fur prices prevailing up to the end of the last decade saw the establishment of a string of trading posts along Canada's Arctic coast. The coming of the trading posts brought about a decided change in the normal life of the Eskimo. From a nomad following the sea, the walrus, the spawning fish and the migrating caribou for his humble necessities, he devoted more and more time to the hunting and trapping of fur bearers, with gradually lessened time for his own natural pursuits. To the game supply of the country the introduction of modern high-powered firearms and unlimited supplies of ammunition proved serious. Tremendous inroads were made into the ranks of the fur bearers, while the migratorial routes of the caribou, one of the mainstays in the domestic economy of the natives, changed with consequent distress to the Eskimos. The Dominion government has watched these changes with growing concern lest the natives, confined to one line of hunting, might be seriously affected by the periodic fluctuations in the number of fur bearers and by changes in the fur market. With the object of broadening the basis of subsistence of the natives, especially in view of the rapid advance of mining in the northwest territories, the department of the interior has taken steps not only for the conservation of the wild life by the establishment of native preserves and the strengthening of game laws, but by the experiment of introducing semidomesticated reindeer into the Canadian north.

A study of the reindeer industry in Alaska and a survey of possible reindeer grazing areas in Canada's far north was undertaken in 1926, and this was followed in 1929 by the purchase of 3,000 picked deer from herds in the Kotzebue sound area of western Alaska.

King of Beasts

In accord with the popular idea the lion is called the king of beasts. Yet, King Leo has a master among the animals, says Pathfinder Magazine. Those familiar with African big game say the buffalo has no quarrel with the smaller and weaker animals but he will attack the flesh-eaters such as the lion, leopard, hyena, etc., on sight. He also regards the white man as an enemy but pays little attention to the natives, since they leave him strictly alone most of the time. The lion appears to realize that here is a greater power and unless cornered gives the buffalo a wide berth. Like most animals, however, the buffalo has one great fear. He is scared of fire.

Shadows Every one of us easts a shadow.

There hangs about us a sort of penumbra-a strange indefinable something -which we call personal influence, which has its effect on every other life on which it falls. It goes with us wherever we go. It is not something we can have when we want to have it, and then lay aside at will, as we lay aside a garment. It is something that always pours out from our life, like Experiments Give Promise, Director Vidal Says.

Detroit.-Eugene Vidal, federal director of air commerce, reviewed the progress made here to date in the nine most promising projects concerned with the development of a light and inexpensive airplane sufficiently safe for any automobile driver to fly.

Despite the apparent inability of the aircraft industry to believe in the possibility of turning out a $700 airplane as indicated by the machines on exhibit at this 1935 all-American aircraft show, Vidal asserted there is every hope that such a machine will be on the market within a short time. He said several builders whose experimental designs were ordered built by the bureau have turned out machines which seemingly meet all these demands.

"At least three of our projects are very promising indeed," he said. "The ships can be flown absolutely safely by novice pilots. They do not spin, they land themselves hands off or with the stick all the way back from 200 feet. They are, what we think, safe airplanes.'

Ships Are Safe.

"Don't mistake me to say that these ships are unsafe," and he waved out the window where several transport air liners were drawn up before the Detroit City Terminal building, dozens of smaller planes were "hopping passengers" and Vidal's own cabin monoplane he had flown down from Washington with Frederick R. Neely, chief of the information section of the bu-

"Properly flown they are safe, but the planes we are building can be flown with only a couple hours' instruction almost by anyone at all." The plane nearest completion is the tailless Waterman high wing monoplane. The enclosed cabin seats two and has a 95 horse power motor turning a pusher propeller at the rear. The rudders are at the wing tips with ailerons and elevators in the trailing edge of the wing.

"We are ready to give this machine an approved type certificate (the ultimate stamp of Department of Commerce approval) and it is to be flown east this week by a novice pilot. It passed all its tests with flying colors, having a top speed slightly over 110 miles an hour, and can be landed with wheel brakes locked. We tried for two weeks to spin it, but couldn't." Another machine is the Weick high wing monoplane with pusher motor. Its tail is at the rear, on the end of an outrigger boom. Fred Weick of the Langley field, Va., N. A. C. A. laboratories was the original designer, but it now is being completed by Fairchild. It has "flown beautifully," Vidal said. Speed Over 110 Miles.

The "roadable autogiro" is entirely different sort of machine, Neely stated. When finally delivered to the bureau in October it is expected to be a sensation. Direct lift, meaning that no forward run will be necessary for it to get into the air perpendicular decent, cruising speed over 110 miles an hour on a 90 horse power motor, and gearing to allow it to be driven at 20 miles an hour over highways, the pilot's "garage" and a clear field, are the unusual characteristics. There are three attempts under way to convert inexpensive production type automobile engines for airplane use. One is a Hudson Terraplane engine with a'belt and pulley reduction gear, another is a Ford V8 engine, and the third is a Plymouth motor. Dean Hamond, youthful designer of the Hammond Y safety plane which in its' original version has failed to meet the speed requirements of the Department of Commerce contract under which it was built, appeared at the show and he said he is building a new machine which will incorporate all the safety features of the first one, but with top speeds considerably above the 110 minimum demand.

Take Movies of Interior of Body to Help Science Paris.-Motion pictures of the interior of the human anatomy are being shown here as the result of a device developed by the noted radiologist, Dr. George Djian.

It consists of an extremely strong series of lenses transmitting light onto an extremely sensitive film.

No claims are made for it by the thirty-five-year-old inventor beyond the fact that it does take motion pictures of the interior of the human body. Enthusiasts feel that it has opened an unlimited field of study. Heretofore examination of the human interior has been limited to radioscopic and radiographique examinations. The first permits casting a shadow of the interior on a fluorescent screen. The secondfamiliarly known as X-raying-permits a photograph. Both have their faults.

Ukranian Youth Builds Smallest Working Motor

Kiev, Ukraine.—A miniature electric motor, said to be the smallest working model in the world, has been made here by Victor Nikitashenko, sixteen years old. It weighs just under one-sixteenth of an ounce.

The Institute of Physics of the All-Ukrainian Academy of Sciences has examined Victor's motor and passed it as being a genuine working model. It is brought into action by a two-volt battery. The armature is only five millimeters in diameter, although upon it rests 405 twists of thin wire.

Naming of "America" Is

Not Believed in Doubt There is little reason for doubting that this continent was named after Amerigo Vespucci, the Florentine contractors' clerk who aided in the fitting up of Columbus' expedition, says a writer in the Detroit News. Vespucci was born in 1452 and died in 1512. His letters describing his four voyages to America, in 1497, 1499, 1501 and 1503, were published in Florence in the following years. He did not claim the honor of naming the new land for himself. This was done by a schoolmaster and geographer of St. Die in Alsace, Martin Waldseemuller, in 1507, the passage in which he made the suggestion being as follows:

"And the fourth part of the world having been discovered by Americus, it may be called Amerige, that is, the land of Americus, or America. Now truly since these regions are more widely explored and another fourth part is discovered by Americus Vespucius, I do not see why anyone may justly forbid it to be named Amerige, that is, Americ's Land, from Americus the discoverer, or America, since both Europe and Asia derived their names from women." This name first appeared on a map published at Frankfort in 1520.

There are other theories of the name's origin, including the story to the effect that John Cabot on his return to England in 1498, after discovering the mainland of North America, was met by Richard Ameryk, sheriff of Bristol. This official handed him the king's reward for his discovery and it is suggested that the new land was given his name.

Mina Is Claimed to Be Champion Talking Bird

When talking birds are mentioned, every one usually thinks of the parrot. For the hook-billed bird has always "spoken for himself." No sea story, for instance, was complete without its grizzled sailor, who carried on his shoulder a parrot that uttered "Shiver my timbers," or other expressions just as nautical but less printable, and many homes boasted a parlor pet who raucously declared that "Polly wants a cracker!" But the fact of the matter is that the championship among the bird-talkers belongs to the mina, or mynah, a small, shiny-black, orange-striped creature who hails from India, says a writer in the Washington Post. Far less publicized than the parrot in these climates, the mina is a familiar household pet in his own country, prized for his amazing ability to mimic faithfully the human voice. Every word uttered by the mina is as clear as a bell-it is in this respect that he is superior to the parrot, who often makes it necessary for the listener to exert a little effort to distinguish between his words. As a whistler, too, the Indian bird is without peer.

English Bull Terrier Is

Good Pal and Protector The bull terrier was started about 1800, being bred from the English bulldog and the black-and-tan terrier, the whole idea being to produce a dog un-Ruth Mansfield in the Washington Post. In 1870, a few men got together and decided the dog was too good for a fighting beast. They decided that he had a wonderful disposition, qualities making for a good watchdog and faithfulness in every way. As a result of this, the English bull terrier is now a pal and protector. The bull terrier is the gladiator of the canine race, strongly built, muscular, active, symmetrical, with a keen, determined expression. His head is oval, fairly long and with tapering muzzle, small almond-shaped black eyes, black nose; even, regular teeth, thin ears on the top of the skull, moderately long neck, strong shoulders and broad chest. The coat is short, flat, rather harsh to the touch and with a fine gloss, being pure white. The bull terrier may weigh from 12 pounds for the toy to 60 pounds.

Vicious Trees

One of nature's oddest growths is the electricity tree of Central India. Its leaves are so full of electricity that if you touch one you receive an electric shock. They will influence a magnetic needle 70 feet away. The electrical strength is strongest at midday, and weakest at midnight. In wet weather its powers disappear. Birds and insects keep away. The "Saymal," or "Cotton tree" of Nepal, will eat other trees. Its seeds are dropped by birds in the forks of its victims, where they germinate and drop a sort of root which starts a cotton tree branch. This spreads and drops other roots until a large stem of the victim tree is seized. Then the cannibal spreads round the main trunk. After its meal, a fine cotton tree appears on the scene of the repast:-Tit-Bits Magazine.

Hardest Artificial Substance Boron carbid, material made by combining the rare metal boron and ordinary carbon in the electric furnace, is the hardest known synthetic substance, and readily cuts practically anything but diamond. Power Plant Engineering reported that boron carbid is unaffected by the strongest acids and alkalies, is able to withstand compression of 50 tons to the square inch, expands only two-thirds as much as steel under the influence of temperature, is little affected by heat up to 1,000 degrees Centigrade (at which diamonds burn up completely), and is lighter than aluminum.-Literary Digest.

Lesson for August 18 MARTHA

LESSON TEXT-Luke 10:38-42; John 11:17-28.
GOLDEN TEXT—Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus.-John

PRIMARY TOPIC-A Home Jesus Loved.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Home Jesus Vis-

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC—How Can I Help at Home? YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC—A Home That Attracts Jesus.

The lesson committee designated Martha as a home-maker. That she was a home-maker is to be conceded. but to view this lesson only in that light is to miss its vital point, for Christ's teachings here are equally appropriate to male and female, in the home, office, shop, schoolroom, farm,

I. Jesus Revealing to Martha Her Supreme Need (Luke 10:38-42).

1. Jesus welcomed into her home (v. 38). Though Jesus had no home of his own, he could come into this home at any time and throw off the restraints incident to public ministry. What a blessed thing it would be if all homes were open to receive Jesus.

2. Mary sitting at Jesus' feet (v. 39). While this was Martha's home, Mary seemed to have lived with her. Mary had a peculiar spiritual insight which prompted her to sit at Jesus' feet and listen to his words. The real place to hear Jesus' words is "at his feet." Let no one imagine that Mary did not render any service, for the little word "also" indicates that she had been serving with Martha.

3. Martha's complaint (v. 40). She was so bent on providing a good meal for Jesus that she was on the verge of distraction. Her many assumed duties had so got on her nerves that she not only found fault with Mary, but even censured Jesus for allowing Mary to sit at his feet while dinner was being finished. She even assumed the authority to command Jesus to send Mary back to help her. The sure way to serve without distraction is to first sit at Jesus' feet and listen to his words.

4. Jesus' reply (vv. 41, 42).

a. He rebuked Martha (v. 41). This rebuke he administered most tenderly, for he knew that Martha loved him sincerely. Those who are supremely occupied with Jesus are anxious for nothing (Phil. 4:6).

b. He defended Mary (v. 42). In this defense he declared that there was but one thing needful and that Mary had chosen that good part which could not be taken from her. Those who choose this good part cannot be robbed of it by friends, foes, or circumstances. II. A Revelation of Christ's Love (John 11:1-36).

1. The sickness of Lazarus (vv. 1, 2). Even those who are in close fellowship with the Lord are not immune the homes where Jesus is loved. 2. Martha and Mary send for Jesus (v. 3). Because they had come to know Jesus as more than a mere man they instinctively turned to him when this shadow fell across their home.

3. Jesus' strange delay (vv. 4-6). They sent for Jesus because he loved Lazarus. They said, "He whom thou lovest is sick." Jesus abode in the same place because he loved Lazarus and his sisters (v. 5). This mystery is to be explained by the fact that Jesus was divine and knew all things.

4. Jesus goes to the Bethany home (vv. 7-17). His mission in going into this home was twofold; to minister to the sisters and brother and to strengthen the faith of the disciples (vv. 11-15).

5. Jesus teaching Martha (vv. 18-27). As he was nearing the village, Martha met him with a complaint because of his delay. He ignored her complaint and taught her concerning the resurrection and the life.

a. "Thy brother shall rise again" (v. 23). He is saying these words to every sorrowing sister, brother, wife, husband, child, and parent.

b. "I am the resurrection, and the life" (vv. 25, 26). He is the source of life, and all who are joined to him by a living faith are in such vital fellowship as to be unaffected by bodily change.

6. Jesus weeping with Mary (vv. 28-35). In response to the Master's call Mary fell at his feet, uttering the same words used by Martha, but, no doubt, in a different tone of voice and attitude. Her words were responded to with tears. "Jesus wept."

III. Jesus Raising Lazarus (vv. 38-

His great sympathy now expressed itself in supernatural power. Sympathy would be valueless without this connection with divine power.

Music

Music, like a true coin, rings best on the domestic hearthstone. The essence of it no more belongs to the concert room than-reverently let it be said-does religion to the church. It must needs be an everyday matter, entering the hearts and homes of the people, otherwise its true functions remain unfulfilled.

Science of Health

By Dr. Thos. S. Englar

115 SOCIAL DISEASE What is the difference between tuberculosis and syphilis?

A question, worded in just this way, will never be seen in a medical examination. It seems to us, however, a fair question to put before laymen and women, and a profitable one to discuss for them.

Dr. Chas. F. Bolduan, director of the Bureau of Health Education of New York City, classes the two diseases together when in an article published professionally, he declared:

"....Tuberculosis and syphilis,both preventable infectious diseases, still rank among the major causes of death." Dr. Bolduan, knowing very well that tuberculosis and syphilis are not in the least alike, in their causation, in their symptoms and course, in their treatment, mentions them together only as lavish contributors to the human death rate. Both, grim captains (or majors) of the men of death

Consider, momentarily, what the doctor calls the prognosis of the two diseases. Prognosis is defined as the prospect for improvement or cure. Both tuberculosis and syphilis are amenable to treatment, and subject to "cure"-if taken early. In the individual case, either of tuberculosis or syphilis, the prognosis is matter for wise, experienced, medical judg-

Since a health column should (in our opinion) attempt neither diagnosis nor prognosis in individual cases, let us examine the "prognosis" of these two widely prevalent diseases from the public health standpoint. That is to say, what is the outlooknot for the masculine or feminine body to be healed of its "lung trouble" or "blood disease"-but for the body politic, the national body, to be healed of these two diseases, which together lay such a heavy toll of economic loss, domestic unhappines, suffering and death. This, obviously, is proper material for our column.

At this point there becomes apparent to the student of public health affairs, a cleavage, a real statistical difference between the two scourges, tuberculosis and syphilis. In the hope to ensnare interest of the lay reader, let this difference be bluntly stated, and its causes and implications

Tuberculosis, considered over the long term, is gradually coming under control. Prevention is increasingly effective; early diagnosis and segregation are reducing the number of new infections; enlightened treatment is stemming the tide of tubercular deaths. The community "prognosis", in short, is good.

Are these statements true of syphilis? They are not. Against this plague of mankind, we are barely holding our own, according to the best figures available, those assembled by the U.S. Public Health Service in co-operation with large syphilis clinics and private practitioners in different parts of the coun-

There is as much syphilis-perhaps more—as there was five years ago. Why is this the case? Is it because syphilis is more difficult to treat successfully than tuberculosis? No; the reason for the poor showing is not inherent in the medical problem.

For the answer, look to the difference in the attitude of the public toward the two diseases. Tuberculosis has been brought out into the light; it is discussed freely, and faced frankly. Syphilis still skulks in the shadows; it "isn't talked about"-not even, as it should be, between parents and their adolescent sons and daughters. The parents mean well, but they, themselves, are not informed on the subject. This is above all, a matter for plain words-but plain words are not used where they should be! Young people, mostly, are left to find out for themselves in the coarse argot of the gutter; to get crude misinformation and false reassurance from persons not qualified in any way to give such instruction. Too often, when youth does get the facts, sympathetically imparted by someone who merits respect, it is tragically too late. Thus it is that four out of every hundred males acquire syphilis between the ages of 16 and 20.

What a pity that this percentage seems so small to the layman! It does but only because the layman is unable to visualize how these four youths can, and do, act in spreading this dread, cryptic infection; transmitting it, not infrequently, through such unsuspected agencies as the kiss and the common drinking-glass; handing it down to children yet un-

What should be done about all this? What can be done, to achieve more widespread and rapid results than the earnest efforts of Federal and State health authorities, social hygiene specialists and organization, have been able to secure?

"DREAM BABY" HEIR TO BRITISH TITLE

jumped out and ran away.

Him Lord Ampthill.

London.—A thirteen-year-old "dream baby." whose birthright was established after a sensational four-year battle costing $200,000, became heir to the barony of Ampthill.

The death of his grandfather, Lord Ampthill, former viceroy of India, of pneumonia, put the boy, Geoffrey Russell, next in line for the title.

The new Lord Ampthill, John Hugh Russell, whose efforts to divorce Mrs. Christabel Russell were frustrated by the house of lords, now faces divorce action brought by Lady Ampthill. The case is scheduled for hearing this term, and Lord Ampthill is not defending it.

Geoffrey won the title of "dream baby" because Russell, in his divorce action, insisted that he had never had marital relations with his wife.

His counsel told the court that Mrs. Russell had been informed by a fortune teller that she was going to become a mother. "It must be a miracle." she was quoted as saving.

In her defense Mrs. Russell testified she "had conceived the child in a dream," and the house of lords supported the mother's version, and denied Russell's plea.

Then followed four years of trials and legal moves. Suddenly the house of lords called a halt to the proceedings, reputedly at the behest of King George, who in turn was rumored to have been persuaded in the move by Queen Mary.

The late Lord Ampthill was sixty-six years old. His widow is lady-in-waiting to Queen Mary.

London.-Ruins of the palace of Rameses, where Moses spent most of his early life with the daughter of Pharaoh, who found him in the rushes. have been discovered by Egyptologists. Machpelah, the cave in which Sarah, the wife of Abraham was buried, has also been located.

The first discovery was made by E. H. Winlock of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York.

"El Kantara," it was announced here, "which has just been located by excavators, is, in all probability, the city of Rameses, one of the two Death of Grandfather Makes treasure cities built by the Pharaohs after the death of Joseph, the son of Jacob, when the Israelites were held in bondage. Winlock says: "A study of the decorated tiles in the palace ruins, which have been uncovered, gives ample reason to believe that they came from the walls in which, traditionally, the scenes of Moses' early life were enacted." News of the second discovery is given in a cable from Rev. W. F. Bade. director of the Tell-en-Nasbeh Expedition of the Pacific School of Religion.

He said: "When the cave was revealed in the necropolis of the ancient city of Mizpah, seven miles north of Jerusalem, evidence of at least 60 burials was

EXECUTIONER OF FELONS WILL NOT SPEAK OF TASKS

R. G. Elliott Shuns Publicity, Looks on Work as Just Another Job.

Charleston, Mass.-A knotted, powerful hand, encased in a rubber glove, reached up to drive home the blades of a giant switch in the prison here. Three times the hand reached and each time a man died. The hand was that of Robert G. Elliott, official executioner for the states of Massachusetts, Delaware, New York, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey.

The hand took the lives of Murton and Irving Millen and Abraham Faber. All three men had been convicted of murdering a policeman while engaged in a bank holdup. Elliott's hand threw the switch which caused their electrocution.

Once before Elliott carried out a triple execution in Boston. Those electrocuted then were the two cer barn bandits, Nicolo Sacco, and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, anarchists convicted of murdering a paymaster and his guard, and Celestino Medeiros, who died for the murder of a bank cashier.

Ten years ago Elliott branched out from his electrical supply business into the position of official executioner when his predecessor, John Hilbert, committed suicide.

Just Another Job.

His job does not bother the sixtyone-year-old Elliott. The only time his nerve has been shaken was the time he threw the current through the body of Mrs. Ruth Snyder for her complicity in the window weight murder of her husband who was killed by Judd Gray, her corset salesman lover.

He looks upon it as just another job. By his philosophy some one is guilty of murder and when the law discovers that some one he deserves to die. "It's the law and some one must do it," is his way of looking at things.

Elliott shuns publicity. He lives quietly and modestly in a cottage house at Richmond Hills, N. Y., with his wife, a son, and a daughter. His only absences from home are occasioned by his frequent trips to the prisons of his own or nearby states to carry on his grim task.

There is good reason for his reluctance to appear in the public eye. Every effort was made to keep his identity and his address a secret but gangsters found where he lived a few years ago and bombed his home. The bombing occurred shortly after the electrocution of Sacco and Vanzetti and it was thought that their friends were attempting to seek revenge on the executioner. The case has never been solved. Elliott's home was wrecked but he and his family escaped without injury.

$150 Per Death.

There is nothing about the grim visaged, sunken cheeked and spare framed executioner's demeanor or appearance to mark him as the man who has sent the current of death through an uncounted number of convicted criminals. He refuses to reveal how many he has executed, though there is little doubt that the figure is well over one hundred.

For each person that dies by his hand he receives $150, plus his traveling expenses. His routine varies little from prison to prison. In some states he throws a switch, in others he spins a wheel.

Arrived in the town in which the execution is to be held, he registers at a hotel, unpacks his bag, lays out his "working clothes," to be ready for the might's grim task.

When the execution is over he dons his coat, goes back to his hotel, and after a steaming hot bath goes to bed and sleeps soundly until it comes morning and he goes back to his home or to some other prison where his services are required.

Wag Uses Legs of Dummy to Scare Street Crowd

Lights of New York by L. L. STEVENSON

At Westbury, L. L., many persons believed that the big, old-fashioned mansion that for years has stood hard by the Meadow Brook Hunt club, was haunted. Known as Phoenix Lodge, it was once the home of the eccentric multimillionaire, Jacques Lebaudy, son of the "sugar king" of France. Back in 1908, Lebaudy, who styled himself "Emperor of the Sahara," led an expedition into Africa to claim 3,500,000 acres of desert together with what he called, "the most valuable mines in the world." The adventure lasted just seven months. Then Lebaudy and his "empress" came to America and took up their abode in Phoenix Lodge. In the 50 rooms he installed costly furniture and tapestry, and had the 250acre estate laid out in such beautiful formal gardens that it became the show place of Long Island. Incidentally, the French government had to send a cruiser to bring back Lebaudy's "subjects."

. . . Ten years passed. Then came the happening that laid the foundation for the ghost story which caused the timid to whistle and hurry when they passed Phoenix Lodge at night. Though she had unlimited wealth and was living in a mansion finer than many a famed palace of old, Mrs. Lebaudy evidently wasn't happy. The proof lies in the fact that one night, she shot the "Emperor of the Sahara." She alleged that he had beaten her and some time later, she was acquitted by a jury on her plea of self-defense. Then she went back to France and Phoenix Lodge fell not only into disrepair but also into disrepute. Weeds choked the gardens; the tapestries rotted-and there were stories of mysterious lights and noises.

Eventually, government agents-G men are not superstitious, it seemsdecided it might be well to look into these tales. So they kept watch on the decadent mansion for some time. Then they made a raid and captured, not a sheeted wraith, but a still, capable of turning out 1,000 gallons of alcohol a day and so modern that it required merely a single attendant. And now Phoenix Lodge is merely an old house where there was a shooting.

Maybe you've heard of Harold Pfleger, who, since last November, has had 14 blood transfusions. That fourteenyear-old's fight for life has been grim business indeed. But he has refused to take it that way. So the doctors and nurses of New York hospital are strong for the cheerful, game youngster-so strong indeed that they desired to do something more for him than called for in the daily routine. Questioning developed the fact that the one thing in all the world he wanted was a dog. As a matter of fact, he had even picked out a name, Terry, for the dog he hoped some day to own.

In a short time, Harold's wish reached the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. It came at just the right moment, too, because there was waiting at the animal hospital at Avenue A and Twenty-third street, a dog that needed a boy-a stray wire-haired whiskers. The dog wasn't transferred to Harold-that couldn't be done because of hospital rules—so his brother acted as his representative. Then with Terry, the brother went up to New York hospital.

Harold was waiting. His bed is five floors above the street, but those doctors and nurses pushed it close to the window and he could see his brother and his dog walking slowly up and down on the sidewalk below. Every afternoon, there is that same parade. Maybe it was that last transfusion and maybe it was the dog. At any rate, a telephone message to the hospital reveals the fact that in a very short time now Harold will be well enough

TANEYTOWN 6-MANCHESTER 4.

Manchester assembled a strong team to bring to Taneytown last Sat-urday, and the contest was a "nip and urday, and the contest was a "nip and tuck" one throughout. The visitors had the best of it in hits and strikeouts, while Taneytown profited most by fast base running. A few errors on both sides were costly. Keffer pitched for Taneytown. Both pitchers were sparing with passes to first, each giving but one. The score by innings follows:
